§. Sect. 8 | That worl | things cho | the ſeed of | Gods Word.

WEE haue ſhewed what ciuill euils and miſchiefes vſuall accompany theſe worldly things, eſpecially when they are exceſſiuely eſteemed and immoderately loued: Now we are to treate of thoſe ſpirituall euils which they bring with them, the which are either temporall, in this life, or eternall in the life to come. Concerning the former, wee are to know, that if wee ſet our hearts on theſe vanities, the gaine and acceſſe of them will not ſo much adde to our outward eſtate, as they detract from the riches of our ſoules; neither will the carnall good they bring, in any proportion counteruaile the ſpirituall harmes which attend vpon them. For firſt, they choake the ſeede of the Word, and make it vnfruitfull, from which alone the gifts and graces of Gods Spirit ſpring. In which reſpect our Sauiour calleth riches thornes, which filling mens minds with worldly cares (as it were with ſo many prickles and ſharpe points) doe choake this ſeed as ſoone as it ſpringeth vp; and ſuch thornes alſo are honours and worldly pleaſures, when mens affections are ſet vpon them. For thus are they to vs of a thornie qualitie and nature, whileſt they catch and hold vs faſt in worldly imployments, ſo as we cannot frequent the aſſemblies of the Saints to heare the Word of God, but when we are inuited to this heauenly banquet, we are ready to pretend excuſes, like thoſe who were called to the Kings ſupper: or elſe whileſt being come within hearing, they make vs with encombred Martha to neglect the Word, & to embrace the World; and to ſtop our eares againſt all admonitions; as the Lord complaineth of the people of the Iewes. I ſpake (ſaith he) vnto thee when thou waſt in proſperitie, but thou ſaideſt I will not heare, this hath beene thy manner from thy youth, that thou wouldeſt not obey my voyce. So although the Prophet Ezechiel was an eloquent and powerfull teacher of Gods word, ſo that the people had no exceptions to take againſt him, why they ſhould not come to heare him; yet this immoderate loue of riches made their comming altogether vnprofitable. For ſo the Lord telleth him, that the people reſorted vnto him, after the accuſtomed manner, and did ſit before him, and heare his words, but they would not doe them; for with their mouthes they made ieſts, and their heart did goe after their couetouſneſſe. Neither doe they onely diſtract mens minds in hearing, ſo as they cannot attend vnto that which is ſpoken, but if in a deuouter fit they haue receiued any profitable inſtruction, they preſently choake it, and make it to bee quite forgotten before it can be brought to any vſe or practice. Yea if the heart bee ſtrongly infected with the poyſon of worldly couetouſneſſe, it will make men not onely to neglect, but euen to ſcorne thoſe profitable admonitions which are deliuered in the miniſterie of the word, for the reforming of this and other vices: as wee may ſee in the example of the Scribes and Phariſies, who mocked and derided our Sauiour Chriſt, when he perſwaded them to the workes of mercy, and that they ſhould not doe ſeruice to the earthly Mammon.

§. Sect. 2.

That abundance of worldly things impoueriſh vs in Gods ſpirituall graces.

And as they doe choake in vs the ſeede of the Word, and make it vnfruitfull; ſo doe they conſequently rob and ſpoile vs of all the ſanctifying gifts, and ſauing graces, of Gods holy Spirit, if once wee ouerualue and ſet our heart vpon them. As for example, honours ambitiouſly affected and immoderately loued, doe keepe all ſauing graces from entring into our hearts; or if theſe ſeeds be allready ſowen in them, they doe ſo nip them, that they will neuer proſper and flouriſh: for the graſſe of Gods graces cannot grow on the high mountaines of pride; neither will the water of Gods holy Spirit reſt on the loftie hils to make them fruitfull, but deſcends downe into the low valleyes of humble and contrite hearts. And as a veſſell cannnot bee filled with wholeſome oyle or ſweet water, but preſently the ayre is driuen out and giueth place: ſo the heart of man cannot be filled with the precious oyntment of ſanctifying grace, till the wind of vaine glory bee expelled. To which purpoſe one ſaith, that as vaine-glory is the cauſe of many euils, ſo eſpecially of this, that it emptieth the ſoule of all ſpirituall riches, and depriueth vs of the profit which we might take by them. As therefore the immoderate loue of worldly honours doth ſwell the hearts of thoſe that haue them with pride and vaine glorie; ſo theſe dropſie and corrupt humors being once receiued do preſently coole and drowne the vitall heate of Gods Spirit, and ſo diſable both ſoule and body in all liuely and ſpirituall operations, that they cannot performe the workes of godlineſſe. So that fulneſſe of pride argueth emptineſſe of grace; and where there is much vaine-glory, there certainely is litle goodneſſe. For as addle egges flote aloft, when the other which are good ſincke to the bottome: and as the emptieſt veſſell giues the greateſt ſound, and the fruitleſſe eare of corne holdeth its head higheſt: ſo hee is moſt puffed vp, and loftie in his owne conceit, who is moſt emptie of grace, and diſfurniſhed of all ſpirituall goodneſſe. Thus alſo riches too much affected, become (as our Sauiour Chriſt hath taught vs) thornes which will let no graces grow in vs, and come to ripeneſſe; and therefore the Apoſtle Paul telleth vs, that we muſt flie couetouſneſſe, before wee can follow after righteouſneſſe, godlineſſe, faith, loue, patience, and meekeneſſe. So that it is hard to haue worldly gaine, and ſpirituall grace; to bee rich in poſſeſſions, and rich in godlineſſe; to haue cheſts full of earthly treaſures, and hearts well furniſhed with the ſauing graces of Gods holy Spirit. For theſe earthly vanities intangle mens hearts with the birdlime of carnall loue, which being admitted doth quench in vs the loue of God which is the fountaine of grace and true obedience. Now Chryſoſt. in Gen. ſ. Hom. 5.

Luke 8. 14.

1. Tim. 6. 10. 11.

Vbi lucrum, ibi & damnum. Lucrum in arca, damnum in conſcientia. Tulit veſtē, & perdit fidem. Acquirit pecuniā, & perdit iuſtitiam. Auguſt.

what (as one ſaith) will it profit vs, to haue full coffers and emptie conſciences? to haue goods, and not to bee good? For who hath not juſt cauſe of bluſhing and ſhame, though his houſe bee full of goods, if he knoweth that they haue an euill Maſter? The like alſo may bee ſaid of voluptuous pleaſures; for as the heathen man could truely ſay, the tree of vertue cannot grow in the land of pleaſures; becauſe they who are addicted to carnall delights are made ſo purſie and ſhort winded, that they cannot take the paines to aſcend the hill of vertue; neither in truth haue they any deſire; for they iudge all things by ſenſe, and not by reaſon; and eſteeme that beſt, which is ſweeteſt to their appetite. In a word, if wee make our hearts the harborrough of any worldly vanities, they will not ſuffer any ſpirituall graces to lodge and mingle with them. For example, if wee ſet our hearts on honours, they will not admit faith to haue an entrance. For as our Sauiour ſpeaketh, How can yee beleeue which receiue honour one of another, and ſeeke not the honour which commeth of God alone? And the ſame effect hath the immoderate loue of riches; for as the Apoſtle teacheth vs, they who luſted after money erred from the faith, and pierced themſelues through with many ſorrowes. To which purpoſe one ſaith, that if any bee intangled with the ſnares of worldly riches, the medicine of faith cannot profit him. So alſo they quench in vs the flames of Gods loue; for if any man loue the world, the loue of the Father dwelleth not in him: yea this loue of the world is enmitie with God, as the Apoſtle teacheth vs. Now they who loue not God doe not truſt, nor hope in him; neither yet performe any other duty, ſeeing loue is the fountaine of all true obedience. And therefore wee muſt emptie our hearts of this worldly loue, if wee would haue any ſanctifying graces to dwell in them; wee muſt learne to contemne theſe earthly vanities, before wee can eſteeme, or with any deſire ſeeke after faith, affiance, hope, loue, or any other ſauing grace of Gods holy ſpirit; for the oile of Gods graces, and theſe wateriſh vanities will not mixe together.

Quid prodeſt plena bonis arca, manis conſcientia? &c. Auguſtin. de verb. Dom. Serm. 12.
Cato Maior.
Cic. 2. de finib.
Iohn 5.44.
1. Tim. 6.10.
Ambroſ. Tom. 3. Serm. 2.
1. Iohn 2.15.
Iames 4. 4.

§. Sect. 3.
That earthly abundance doth infatuate the vnderſtanding.
Quem fortuna [illegible] fouet, [illegible] facit [illegible] & [illegible] ſapiens.

Secondly, worldly proſperitie and abundance of theſe earthly things, doe, when they are immoderately loued, dimme the eyes of the vnderſtanding, euen in reſpect of ciuill wiſdome, and make them ſtarke blind and very fooles, in diſcerning ſpirituall things. For who ſeeth not, that commonly they are moſt fooliſh, vpon whom the world moſt fawneth? and that it is the lot of very few in this life to be happy and wiſe? For as thoſe who are cockred by their parents, become fooliſh with wantonneſſe; ſo when men grow wanton with ouermuch worldly felicity, they are ſo beſotted with folly, that they neither know themſelues, nor other men. And as thoſe who haue walked in the ſnow, and haue had the bright beames of the Sunne ſhining in their eyes, are made hereby corporally blind; ſo thoſe who haue had theſe bright objects of proſperitie alwayes in their ſight, are blinded ſpiritually in their minds and vnderſtandings; for as though theſe were contrary betweene themſelues, and to vs incompatible, to haue a great eſtate, and a good vnderſtanding; ſo much better ſighted we are in time of aduerſitie, than in proſperitie. But as this confluence of worldly benefits makes men dim-ſighted in ciuill wiſdome, ſo ſtarke blind in the wayes of God. And therefore the Pſalmiſt ioyneth both theſe together, worldly proſperitie, and ignorance of Gods will: his wayes (ſaith he) alwayes proſper, and Gods iudgements are high aboue his ſight. And hence it is, that the Apoſtle affirming that Satan blindeth the eyes of worldlings, doth call him in that place, the God of the world; implying thereby, that he vſeth the World, and worldly vanities, as his inſtruments for the ſmiting of them with this ſpirituall blindneſſe. In whom (ſaith hee) the God of this world hath blinded the minds, that is, of the Infidels, that the light of the glorious Goſpell of Chriſt, which is the image of God, ſhould not ſhine vnto them. For Satan caſteth this duſt of worldly vanities, into the eyes of carnall men, that they may not diſcerne the ſhining beames of Gods truth; but may grope at noone day, and for want of this ſpirituall light to guide them, may erre out of the right way, which leadeth to glory and eternall happineſſe, and goe the broad and plaine way which leadeth to deſtruction. In which reſpect, theſe worldly things may fitly bee compared to pleaſant wines, which being drunke in abundance, ſo intoxicate the braine, that there is for the time, no difference betweene drunkards, and fooles, or madmen: for ſo they who abound in all earthly proſperitie, haue their vnderſtandings infatuated, and their ſenſes beſotted with much drinking of theſe golden cups, ſo as they haue no more wiſdome or judgement to diſcerne of ſpirituall things, than very fooles or franticke perſons. For as mad-men doe not ſee things as they are in truth, but as their lunaſie and diſeaſe doth offer them to their deluded phantaſie; ſo neither do they, who go a madding after worldly vanities, vnderſtand and judge of worldly and ſpirituall things, as they are in their owne nature, and according to their true worth and value, but are wholly led with their diſeaſe, iudging neither according to religion, nor yet well grounded reaſon, but as they are deluded and miſguided with their carnall concupiſcence.

Aduerſ ſecunda Senec. E 94.
Pſalm. 10.
2. Cor. 4.4.
Nn [illegible] hominis [illegible] litate.

ſcence. And that worldlings, are in truth thus mad and fooliſh, and wholly blinded with the things whereupon they haue ſet their hearts, it may clearely appeare, if wee conſider their whole courſe and cariage. For who but fooles and mad-men would lay vp their treaſures there, where they haue no certaintie to continue one houre, and where all their predeceſſours hauing ſtored vp all their riches haue beene robbed of them; not placing any part of them in their owne countrie, where they are to remaine as long as they liue? But thus doe theſe blinded worldlings lay vp their treaſures on earth, where they cannot ſtay, and where they haue ſeene by their owne experience all their anceſtors robbed, if not by men, yet by death, of all their riches; and ſend no part of their wealth before them into our heauenly countrie, where wee ſhall remaine for euer. So who but fooles and mad-men would exchange pure gold for ſhining braſſe, and a faire inheritance, for ſome childiſh trifles? but thus doe worldlings, who are content by wilfull ſinning to loſe Heauen for earth, true glory for falſe vanities, and euerlaſting happineſſe which ſhall neuer end, for baſe delights, and counterfait comforts which are euer ending. Who but fooles and madmen, when the fire ragingly burneth, would, to quench it, caſt on more wood & oile? But thus doe worldlings, who ſeeke to quench the burning heate of their vnſatiable concupiſcence, by multiplying, and heaping vpon the fire, worldly vanities, riches, pleaſures and preferments, which are the fuell of their luſts, by the acceſſe whereof, they are more enraged. Who but fooles and mad-men, being in their pilgrimage, and trauelling through theeuiſh places, would carrie all their iewels and treaſures about them, which not onely ouer-burthen them in their iourney, but are in continuall danger to be taken away by robbers, & alſo endanger their owners to their rage & crueltie? whereas they might ſafely ſend them before them, and follow after with ſecuritie and comfort. But thus doe worldlings, who trauelling in our earthly pilgrimage, carrie all their treaſures with them, openly in their hands in the middeſt of robbers, tyring themſelues with the cariage, and hazarding their liues to bee murthered for their goods; whereas they might by bils of exchange, ſend them ſafely into our heauenly countrie, in the ſafe cuſtody of Gods factors, the poore members of Ieſus Chriſt, and ſo in the pilgrimage of this tranſitorie life, trauell after them with much comfort and contentment. Who but fooles and mad-men would ſet their hearts and affections vpon their Inne, where they are to continue but a night, and fall to building, purchaſing, and planting, as though they were there to end their dayes? But thus worldlings doe place all their loue on the things of this life; and ſettle their affections on the World, purchaſing, planting, and building here on Earth, where they can make no ſtay, but may to day before to morow bee taken away, and leaue all behind them; to bee inioyed ſometimes by ſtrangers, and ſometime alſo by their enemies. Who but fooles and mad-men would continue ſtill perſwaded of that, which is is continually and daily confuted by experience? But thus doe worldlings, who imagine that they ſhall liue long, & attaine vnto old age, yea immortalitie; notwithſtanding they daily ſee both weake and ſtrong, young and old arreſted by death, and twentie for one before they haue trauelled halfe their iourney; either in their childhood or full ſtrength. Who but fooles and mad-men ſpend their whole time in thoſe things, for the doing whereof they can giue no reaſon, nor know any end of all their actions? But thus worldlings liue to old age, not knowing the end wherfore they liue, nor the cauſe why they were ſent into the world: namely, by their faithfull ſeruice to glorifie God in their owne ſaluation; and therefore they vtterly neglect this maine buſineſſe, of which they are ignorant, and ſpend their whole time about worldly vanities, and in performing ſeruice to ſinne and Satan. Who but fooles and mad-men would make ſale of their chiefe iewell, which is of infinite worth and value, for a baſe trifle which is vncertaine alſo in the poſſeſſion? But thus doe worldlings, by lying, ſwearing, deceiuing, and oppreſſing, ſet their ſoules to ſale, which is of infinite more worth, than the whole World, for euery ſmall pittance of worldly vanities, and (as it were) to make Mark 8.36. themſelues kings of a little mole-hill. Who but fooles and mad-men would, becauſe they are acting the part of a great Monarch, contemne their owne Soueraigne, and proudly inſult ouer their fellowes and companions, ſeeing within a few houres, they ſhall bee againe equall with the meaneſt? But this folly doe worldlings fall into, who being for a moment in worldly pompe and proſperitie, deſpiſe the King of Heauen and Earth, and carrie themſelues proudly and diſdainfully to their fellow ſeruants, who, when their part is acted, and the night of death approcheth, ſhall againe become their equals, as they were at their firſt entrance vpon this worldly ſtage. Who but fooles and mad-men would bee carefull of maintaining their credit among their fellow malefactors, and carefully hide their faults from thoſe who are alike guiltie; and neuer at all reſpect the preſence of their judge; but deſperately commit all crimes and outrages before his face? But thus doe worldlings, who ſtanding vpon their reputation, heedfully fully hide their faults from men, who are alike ſinfull to themſelues; and neuer care to commit moſt outragious wickedneſſe in the ſight of God, before whom, one day they muſt appeare to be acquitted or condemned. Finally, who but fooles and mad-men would make delay of diſpatching thoſe things which are of greateſt waight, and deferre their moſt important buſineſſe to their beſt leiſure; and preſently vndertake the obtaining of euery ſlight trifle, which onely bringeth ſome preſent delight, and is of no neceſſarie or profitable vſe? But thus carnall worldlings doe firſt labour after earthly vanities, which are of no value, vaine and momentanie; and deferre their repentance to the end of life, when hauing increaſed the heauie burthen of ſinne, they ſhall bee much more vnable to caſt it off; and neglect the aſſurance of their owne ſaluation, which ſhould bee moſt deare vnto them, as a thing not worth the hauing, or which they may haue at pleaſure; though it bee the free gift of God, which hee ſeldome beſtoweth vpon thoſe, who haue ſo long and often refuſed and contemned it.

§. Sect. 4.
That honours, riches and pleaſures make men blind in finding the way to Heauen.

And thus it appeareth that theſe worldly things doe infatuate the vnderſtanding and euen blinde the eyes of the ſoule, ſo as they cannot ſpiritually diſcerne the way of ſaluation, nor how to eſcape that broad way which leadeth to deſtruction; but as blinde men are ready to ſtumble againſt euery ſtone, to runne their heads againſt the walls and trees, and to fall headlong to their deſtruction into euery pit and ditch: ſo thoſe who haue their ſoules blinded with the immoderate loue of theſe earthly vanities, are ready to ſtumble at euery ſtone of offence, whereby they fall into ſin, and are hindred in the wayes of godlineſſe; and to plunge themſelues headlong into thoſe ditches and pits of vice and wickedneſſe, to their eternall perdition and condemnation, which Satan and the world doe dig for them; ſo oft as they are inticed to goe on theſe in deſperate courſes, with the alluring promiſes of earthly benefits; wilfully falling (as the Apoſtle ſpeaketh) for the loue of earthly abundance, into tentations and ſnares, and into many fooliſh and noyſome luſts, which drowne them in perdition and deſtruction. And thus the immoderate loue of honours and preferments, doe ſo blinde the eyes of ambitious worldlings, that they purſue with headlong haſte glory and aduancement, neuer diſcerning nor greatly caring whether they bee in the way that leadeth to Hell and deſtruction, or in the way that bringeth vnto life and happineſſe. It maketh them fooliſh in reſpect of ſpirituall wiſedome, which guideth vs to euerlaſting glory, and with proud contempt to diſdaine it as childiſh ſimplicitie, eſteeming them onely wiſe who with their Machiauellian policies doe attaine vnto earthly preferments, though this wiſedome bee earthly, carnall, and diuelliſh, leading men as it were hoodwinckt into eternall death. It cauſeth them like fooles or mad-men, when they are hungry, to gape after the winde, and to ſeeke to ſatisfie their emptie ſoules with feeding on the breath of vulgar prayſes; neglecting in the meane time that ſubſtantiall foode, and true nouriſhment of euerlaſting glory and heauenly happineſſe. In reſpect whereof this folly of worldings, is by the Prophet compared to the folly of drunkenneſſe, which maketh men to follow their preſent appetite, and to ſtop their eares againſt all reaſon and well-grounded perſwaſions. And the Prophet Dauid compareth them to the brutiſh creatures, which are onely guided with ſenſe, and haue no vſe of reaſon: Man (ſaith he) in honour, vnderſtandeth not, hee is like to Beaſts that periſh. The which their brutiſh folly and franticke madnes, is ſo much the greater and more vncurable, becauſe they thinke themſelues wiſe, and all other men fooles and idiots in compariſon of them. For ſo the Wiſe man affirmeth, that if a man bee wiſe in his owne conceit, there is more hope of a foole, than of him. For as one ſaith, the longer pride lodgeth in the heart, the more hardly it is diſcerned, and the more wee are infected with this diſeaſe, the leſſe we feele it. For as the ſtormie winds blowing vpon the calme Sea doe turne it vp from the very bottome, and mingle together the waters with the ſands; ſo the windy ſtorme of ambition and vaine-glorie, ruſhing into the heart and minde, doth ouerturne all, and put out the eyes of the ſoule, knowledge and vnderſtanding. The like alſo may be ſaid of riches, which being immoderately loued, doe ſo infatuate the minde of the couetous man, that hee hath wit for nothing, but to gather wealth; and like the blinde moale hee knoweth onely to dig in the Earth, and to hunt after his prey, and is ſtarke blind in the wayes of God, and in diſcerning the bright ſhining light of his truth. Yea when once this cloud of couetouſneſſe hath darkened, and (as it were) caſt a thicke foggy miſt of ignorance, before the eyes of his ſoule, hee is ſo blind that hee can put no difference betweene friend & foe, kinred and ſtranger, good and euill, right and wrong, the ſeruice of God, and the ſeruice of the diuell, but is content to make vſe of all perſons, & of all courſes whatſoeuer, ſo farre forth onely as they may ſerue as his inſtruments, for the gathering or increaſing of his wealth. And as thoſe who are in the darke can put no difference betweene precious ſtones & worthleſſe peebles, copper and gold, the moſt orient colour, and a duskiſh ruſſet: ſo they who

1.*Tim.*6.9.

Iames 3.15.

*Hoſ.*12.1.

*Habac.*2.5.

*Pſal.*49.20.

*Prou.*26.12.

Greg.Moral. lib.24.cap.1

*Chryſoſt.*ho-mil.ad pop
*Tom.*4.

who haue their vnderſtandings darkned with couetouſneſſe, are ready in their blinded iudgements, to preferre the world before God, Earth before Heauen, and things temporarie before things eternall, becauſe they are ſubject to their groſſe ſenſes, and may be palpably felt, and euen groped out in this night of their ignorance. In a word, according to the meaſure of his gaine which hee may make by any thing, ſuch is his knowledge of it, ſuch alſo is the proportion of his loue. Hee knoweth and taketh acquaintance of his friends when they may profit him; but if they are like to bee his hindrance, hee paſſeth by and cannot ſee them, or ſeeing know them. If a ſtranger will aduance his gaine, hee eſteemeth him aboue a Brother or a Father; yea if an enemie will helpe to increaſe his riches, hee ſhall be reputed his deareſt friend. If he can make any profit by religion, hee will take acquaintance of it, and no man in outward ſhew ſhall bee more deuout; but if it will not ſtand with his worldly aduantage, hee will with Demas, forſake it, and with Demetrius perſecute it. Finally, nothing more than voluptuous pleaſures do infatuate the vnderſtanding, and blind the eyes of the ſoule, ſo as they are not able to judge and determine any thing according to reaſon, but meaſure all things by brutiſh ſenſualitie. And as thicke and darke clouds doe hide from our bodily eyes the light of the Sunne; ſo thoſe vapours and fumes which ariſe into the head out of ſtomacks diſtempered with ſurfetting and drunkenneſſe, doe ſo intoxicate the braine, and hide the light of reaſon, and the illumination of Gods ſpirit, from the eye of the ſoule, that it is vtterly vnable to diſcerne of ſpirituall things, or what is fit and requiſite in ciuill wiſdome and diſcretion, but giueth it ſelfe wholy to be guided with voluptuouſneſſe and carnall concupiſcence. To which purpoſe one ſaith, that a fat belly ſeldome produceth any witty inuention: and an other affirmeth, that hee deceiueth himſelfe who thinketh that hee may cram his belly with daintie meates and drinkes, and haue any leaſure to ſtudie wiſdome. Yea euen the heathen man could teach vs, that voluptuqus pleaſure, as an enemie vnto reaſon, doth hinder wiſe counſell, and dazeleth the eyes of the minde, and that it can hold with vertue no acquaintance and correſpondence. And hence it is that the Wiſe man calleth mirth madneſſe; and the Grecians call gluttonie the throte or belly-frenzie; becauſe they who are ſubject vnto it, are moſt ſottiſh and fooliſh in all their courſes, meaſuring all things according to their ſenſuall appetite, and not according to the light of reaſon. But aboue all pleaſures, luſt and vncleannes doth infatuate the vnderſtanding; and quite putting out the eyes of the ſoule, doth lead a man in a headlong courſe into Hell and deſtruction. And therefore the laſciuious wanton, and filthy fornicatour, by a certaine kinde of proprietie or eminencie is called a foole, who is not leade by his owne reaſon, but by the direction and commandement of his Harlot, following her as an oxe that goeth to the ſlaughter; and as a foole to the ſtocks for correction; till a dart ſtricke through his liuer; and as a bird haſteth to the ſnare, not knowing that hee is in danger.

Prou.7.7.22.23

§.Sect.5. That worldly abundance makes men ſo ignorant that they cannot know themſelues.

But as the abundance of theſe worldly things, immoderately loued, doe make men blind and ignorant in the knowledge of all things, ſo eſpecially of themſelues and of their friends; for they who are pampred with proſperitie, forget their humane and fraile condition, whereby they are become miſerable, both in reſpect of ſinne and puniſhment; and are ready in their pride and ſelfe-loue to deifie themſelues, and to imagine that they are creatures diuine and immortall. And this maketh them alſo to diſdaine and contemne their brethren, as though they were not made by the ſame worke-man, of the ſame matter, and in the ſame mould; but creatures (if at leaſt creatures) of purer ſubſtance, and of a farre more excellent nature and condition. And thus the ambitious man being aduanced vnto honours and preferments, can neuer haue a true ſight and knowledge of himſelfe; partly becauſe his owne pride and ſelfe-loue blindeth him, ſo as hee can neuer make a true eſtimate of his owne worth, and partly becauſe hee hath a whole cloud of paraſites and flatterers about him, which dazle his ſight, and with ouer-partiall prayſes extoll his good parts, and magnifie his gifts farre aboue their true value; ſo as he can neuer ſee them as they are in truth, but as theſe falſe glaſſes offer them to his view. Vnto which hee is content to giue more credit, than either to the teſtimonie of his friends, or his owne ſight and judgement, becauſe their vntruths are more pleaſing and delightfull; as if deformed creatures being magnified for their beautie, ſhould voluntarily put out their eyes, becauſe by looking in true glaſſes, they ſhould diſcouer this falſe aud vndeſerued commendations. And thus alſo riches and abundance of worldly pleaſures and delights, doe puffe men vp with pride, whereby they forget their owne frailtie and mortalitie, and are apt to conceiue, that they exceed all others as much in true worth and excellencie, as they are preferred before them in riches and delights. Now what can be more miſerable, than for a man to be ignorant of himſelfe, and to imagine that hee is happie when hee is wretched, excellent when hee is baſe; highly in Gods loue, when he is deeply in his diſpleaſure; and better than a man, when hee is worſe than a Diuell? ſeeing if a man know not his humane frailtie, he will neuer ſeeke after ſpirituall perfection; if he doe not ſee his beggerie, he will neuer labour after true riches; if hee feele not his ſickneſſe, hee will neuer ſeeke to haue it cured; and if hee doe not diſcerne his worldly miſerie, he will neuer hunger after heauenly happineſſe.

§. Sect.6. That worldly abundance makes men ignorant of their friends.

And as this confluence of worldly things doth ſo blind the eyes of thoſe who haue them, that they doe not know themſelues; ſo much more doe they make them ignorant of their friends, bringing with them a kind of impoſſibilitie of diſcerning a true friend who loueth their perſon, from a flatterer, who loueth their eſtate; one who loueth them for their owne ſake, and for their vertues and good parts, from another who loueth them for the vſe which they can make of them, by communicating with them in their worldly happineſſe. It is true that happy men neuer want kindred nor friends; but who among this multitude are friends to them, and who friends for their owne ſake, that they may ſhare with them in their wealth or honours, it can hardly be determined till their proſperitie and they being ſeuered, flatterers leaue them and follow their eſtate, and true friends adhere ſtill vnto them, becauſe their perſon, vertues and good parts doe ſtill remaine. For wheras hee who is faithfull alwayes delights in his friends companie, but then moſt officiouſly reſorts vnto him when his worldly proſperitie hath left him; becauſe then eſpecially hee needs his helpe and comfort, and himſelfe hath beſt opportunitie of approuing his friendſhip to be ſound and ſubſtantiall in this time of triall, becauſe according to the prouerbe, a friend in need, is a friend indeed: and that other vttered by more ſanctified lips; A friend loueth at all times, and a brother is borne for aduerſitie: contrariwiſe, a falſe friend whoſe iron heart is drawne with the loadſtone of profit or delight, laſteth in a ſeeming conſtancie as long as theſe laſt, and leaueth when theſe faile and are taken away. In which reſpect one compareth men vnto ſprings or fountaines of Water, which are reſorted vnto by many whileſt they haue ſtore of Water, but are neglected vtterly when they are become drie. And the holy man Iob likeneth falſe friends to little brookes which haue abundance of Water, ſo as they ouerflow in the time of Winter, when there is no need of them; but are drie in the drought of Summer, deceiuing thoſe who reſort vnto them to quench their thirſt. For as euery one will bee allied vnto him who may helpe to aduance his worldly eſtate; ſo it is hard for the poore to find a kinſman (and much more a faithfull friend) becauſe no man is willing to acknowledge him who ſtandeth in need, fearing leſt taking acquaintance he ſhould craue his helpe. When therefore a man liuing in worldly proſperity is beloued of many, hee is very vncertaine whether they loue himſelfe, or his proſperous eſtate; and it is onely the loſſe of this earthly happineſſe, which can determine this doubt, as being the onely touch-ſtone of vnfained loue; for as proſperity doth not ſhew a friend, ſo neither doth aduerſitie conceale an enemie. For how many haue we knowne vpon whom almoſt euery one hath fawned whileſt the World ſmiled on them; who when it hath afterwards frowned, haue turned their fauours into ſcornes, and their friendſhip into enmitie? and being true louers of their proper object vpon which they haue ſet their hearts, namely the proſperitie of the World, they leaue the perſons, whom it forſaketh, and make choice of others whom it accompanieth; howſoeuer vnworthy they haue thought them, in times paſt, of the leaſt ſparke of loue or ſhew of friendſhip. Of this holy Iob juſtly complaineth. My neighbours haue forſaken me, and my familiars haue forgotten mee: and Dauid alſo in many places; I am become a ſtranger vnto my brethen, and an aliant to my Mothers ſonnes: and againe, My familiar friend whom I truſted, which did eate of my bread, hath lifted vp the heele againſt me. So the Church in time of affliction maketh this lamentation, that among all her louers ſhee hath none to comfort her, and that all her friends deale vnfaithfully with her, and became her enemies.

Τῶν εὐτυχούντων πάντες εἰσὶ συγγενεῖς. Fœlicium omnes ſunt affines. Menander apud Stob.

*Prou.*17.17.

*M.*Greenham.

Iob 6.15.16.17.

Menander in Adelphis apud Stobæum.

Nec proſp amicum ind cat, nec ad ſitas inimi celat Greg Moral lib. Ecclesiaſtic 12.8.

Iob 19.14.

Pſal.31.11. and 69.8. 41.9.

Lament.

And thus it is impoſſible for thoſe who are aduanced vnto honours, to diſcerne true friends, from falſe flatterers; becauſe if many loue their perſons, there are many more that loue their places and preferments: according to that of the Wiſe man, Many reuerence the face of the Prince, and euery one is a friend to him that giueth gifts: all which are ready to forſake them, if they be once diſplaced out of the throne of honour. A notable example whereof wee haue in Ahab, who whileſt hee liued was honoured as a King, and well was hee that could haue the keeping of one of his Children, to ſhew hereby his loue vnto their Father; but no ſooner was he ouerthrowne, and Iehu proclaimed King, but they preſently adore this riſing Sunne, and at his commandement, of guardians to their Maſters children, they become Butchers, and ſend their heads to Iehu for a preſent. So euery one in outward ſhew will be the friend of him who aboundeth with worldly wealth; and as the Wiſe man ſaith, riches gather many friends: but who among this multitude are friends to the rich, and who to riches, it cannot bee diſcerned, §. Sect The riches and pleaſures make men able to diſcerne fr from flatterers.

Prou.19.6.

Pauci ... regum ... plures ... Seneca ... Oeta.

2.King.10.

*Prou.*19.4.

diſcerned, till pouertie as a fanne ſeuer them, parting the chaffe of flatterie, from the good graine of true fidelitie. For many who thinke it a thraldome to bee linked in loue, with ſuch as being deſtitute of all good parts, are void of all deſert; yet are well contented to continue bound and fettered ſtill, becauſe their chaines of bondage are of gold; but no ſooner doe their riches faile, but preſently they faile with them, and plainly ſhew that all this while they were not friends to their perſons, but to their owne profit. And as flies forſake the Kitchin being ſwept and clenſed, and Waſpes the Honey pot when it is empty and cleane waſhed, about which they ſwarmed in great multitudes, whileſt being ful they might ſuck from it any ſweetneſſe: ſo theſe falſe friends haunt and flocke vnto the houſes of the rich, whileſt their ſtore laſteth; but if by any caſualtie they be ſtripped of their wealth, preſently their friendſhip faileth when the cauſe thereof is taken away. Fooliſh therefore is their conceit, who being rich thinke all friends that fawne vpon them; or who imagine that they can buy loue with gifts and benefits, which is only purchaſed with mutuall loue, vertue, good parts, and wel-deſeruing; without which, great gifts are to the receiuers in this reſpect eſteemed injuries, becauſe they binde them to ſuch, vnto whom they hate to be beholding. To which purpoſe one ſaith, that true friendſhip is not venall, and of a ſlauiſh nature; but full of beautie, free and liberall: for it is a vertue, and not a gainfull and illiberall contract, which is not procured and bought with money, but with loue; not with offering great prizes for it, but by mutuall contending who ſhall exceed one another in loue and kindneſſe: in which regard the friendſhip betweene the poore is more faithfull commonly than that which is betweene the rich; who oftentimes want true friends, when the poore abound with them. Neither can that be eſteemed true friendſhip which is mingled and corrupted with falſe flatterie: but ſuch is the ordinary friendſhip towards the rich, who are flattered and ſoothed in all their ſayings in hope of gaine; whereas no man cunningly fawneth vpon the poorer ſort, where no profit is expected; but that friendſhip which is profeſſed towards them is ſimple, true, and without all diſſimulation. The like alſo may bee ſaid of voluptuous pleaſures, with which when a man aboundeth, he can hardly know a true friend, from a wanton play-fellow, or one who keepeth him company for loue of his perſon, from another who is tied for a time in the bond of delight, and familiarly reſorteth vnto him, becauſe they communicate together in the ſame pleaſures, ſports, and recreations. For how many are there who are friends only for good fellowſhip, and are tied to one another (as we ſay) by the teeth, ſpending their time in their mutuall feaſting, drinking, banquetting, and belly cheare; who part friendſhip when they part Neighbour-hood, and continue no longer in their loue and league, than they haue opportunity to entertaine one another with theſe voluptuous pleaſures? How many are there who are friends whileſt they take delight in the ſame ſports and paſtimes, and may game and reuell mutually together, who often become ſtrangers, and ſometimes enemies, when either they take no further delight in their pleaſures and recreations, or by their diſtance of dwelling, cannot joyne together as in former times; or finally doe any way croſſe one another in their games and ſports? For becauſe their friendſhip had only theſe grounds whereupon it was firſt built, and afterwards wholly reſted: therefore when they ſink and faile, this tottring building erected on them muſt needs come to ruine & be vtter ouerthrowne.

§. Sect. 8. That earthly abundance cauſeth ſecuritie.

A third ſpirituall euill which vſually accompanieth worldly proſperity and abundance of earthly things; is, that they commonly lull men aſleepe in carnall ſecuritie, whereby they put farre from them the euill day, as though they were priuiledged and exempted from all Gods judgements, notwithſtanding that they goe on in their ſins, and daily prouoke his wrath againſt them. For becauſe they enjoy worldly proſperitie, and abound in all earthly bleſſings, therefore they preſume that they are highly in Gods loue and fauour; and that hee liketh and approueth them in all their courſes, becauſe he ſo multiplyeth his benefits, and giueth vnto them ſuch liberall wages, as they imagine, for their well deſeruing. And ſo theſe temporary and outward gifts, through the juſt judgement of God, and their groſſe abuſe of his bounteous mercy, doe become vnto them gifts of juſtice and wrath, rather than of mercie and loue; and like vnto Iaels milke bring them into ſuch a deepe ſlumber, or rather dead ſleepe of carnall ſecuritie, that they neuer awake, but are mortally wounded, and made an eaſie prey to their ſpiritual enemies, who doe purſue them for their liues. Thus Dauid ſaith, that becauſe the wicked mans wayes did proſper, therefore Gods iudgements were high aboue his ſight, and hee at defiance with all his enemies; ſaying in his heart, I ſhall neuer be moued, nor be in danger. So the Rulers of Iudah hauing the World at will, and carrying all things according to their owne pleaſure, are ſaid in the ſecurity of their hearts, to haue made a couenant with death, and an agreement with Hell: promiſing vnto themſelues, that though a ſcourge ſhould run ouer and paſſe through, it ſhould not come neere them, becauſe they had made falſhood their refuge, and hid themſelues vnder vanitie.

Pſal.10,6.

Eſay 28.15.

tie. Thus alſo the ſame Prophet bringeth in the Epicures encouraging one another in their ſecuritie: Come, I will bring wine, and we will fill our ſelues with ſtrong drinke, and to morrow ſhall be as this day, and much more abundant. And ſo the Prophet Amos telleth the people, that by their proſperity they were brought into ſecurity, with which when they were poſſeſſed they vtterly neglected the threatnings of Gods judgements. For hauing ſaid, that they had put farre away the euill day, and approached to the ſeate of iniquitie; hee preſently inferreth this as the cauſe thereof, that they did lie vpon beds of Iuory, and ſtretch themſelues vpon their beds, and did eate the Lambes of the flocke, and the Calues out of the ſtall; that they did ſing to the ſound of the Violl, and inuented vnto themſelues inſtruments of Muſique, for their carnall delight, as Dauid did for Gods ſeruice; that they did drinke wine in bowles, and anoint themſelues with the chiefe oyntments, &c. Finally, our Sauiour Chriſt ſaith, that the people of the old World liuing in all proſperitie and eaſe, did ſtop their eares to Noahs preaching, and put off from them all feare of Gods threatned judgments, ſpending their times in eating and drinking, building and planting, buying and ſelling, marrying, and giuing in marriage, vnto the very day that the floud came, and drowned them all. And ſheweth that the like carnall ſecuritie ſhould wholly poſſeſſe men at the end of the World, grounding vpon this premonition an effectuall exhortation. Take heed to your ſelues (ſaith he) leſt at any time your hearts be oppreſſed with ſurfetting and drunkenneſſe, and cares of this life, and leſt that day come vpon you at vnawares; becauſe it ſhall come on the World as a ſnare on the ſilly bird, which taketh her ſuddenly, whileſt ſhe ſecurely feedeth vpon the bait, and feareth no danger. The which is neceſſary for all men to lay it to their hearts, ſeeing not onely carnall Wordlings, but alſo Gods faithfull ſeruants are apt to bee lulled aſleepe with theſe pleaſing ſongs of plenty and proſperitie, as we may ſee in the example of Dauid, who ſaid in his proſperitie hee ſhould neuer be moued, becauſe God of his goodneſſe had made his hill ſo ſtrong. So the ſonne of Syrach giueth warning that in the time of plenty wee be not ouertaken with ſecuritie. Say not (ſaith he) I haue enough and poſſeſſe many things, and what euill can come to mee hereafter? but in thy good eſtate remember aduerſity, and in aduerſitie forget not proſperitie. And not without good cauſe, ſeeing through our heedleſſe negligence, wee are aboue all other perils likely to be catched in this trap. In regard whereof one truly ſaith, that felicitie is more to be feared than miſery, becauſe this out of tribulation bringeth forth good fruit; but worldly happineſſe corrupteth the mind with peruerſe ſecuritie, and maketh way for the Deuils tentations. Beſides which danger this carnall ſecuritie bred in vs by flouriſhing proſperitie, as a bad daughter of a good mother, doth as much as any thing expoſe vs to Gods heauy judgements, which moſt ſuddenly ſurprize all thoſe who neuer ſuſpect them, but careleſly contemne them; as we may plainly ſee, if we will but examine the fore-alleadged examples. And this alſo the Wiſe man teacheth vs: for neither (ſaith hee) doth man know his time; but as the fiſhes which are taken in an euill net, and as the birds that are caught in the ſnare: ſo are the children of men ſnared in the euill time, when it falleth vpon them ſuddenly. From which fearefull plagues if we would be exempted, wee muſt take heed that this worldly proſperitie doe not rock vs aſleepe in the cradle of ſecuritie, and that with greater watchfulneſſe, becauſe wee are eaſily brought into this deepe ſleepe, when wee haue once drunke deeply of theſe ſweet potions.

Eſay 56.12.

Amos 6.3,4,5.

Eſay 47.8.

Luke 17.26,28.

Luke 21.34.

Pſal. 30.6.

Eccluſ. 11. 24,25.

Aug. enarrat. in Pſal. 67. Tom. 8.

Eccleſ. 9.12.

The fourth ſpirituall euill which vſually accompanieth worldly proſperitie, and abundance of earthly things, is, impenitencie and hardnes of heart; for as men in their carnall ſecuritie, put from them the euill day, ſo together with it the day of their repentance, and conuerſion vnto God. And howſoeuer it be not altogether impoſſible for thoſe who flouriſh in worldly proſperitie, to repent of their ſinnes; yet it is a worke of exceeding great difficultie, and quite againſt nature, that worldly joy and godly ſorrow ſhould dwell together. The which will plainly appeare if wee doe but make vſe of our daily experience, and conſider mens common and continuall practice. For howſoeuer when their ſweet ſinnes haue an after taſte of bitter puniſhment, they may by ſenſe of paine be moued to diſlike and loath them; yet when they proſper in their wickedneſſe, and doe not onely take pleaſure in the ſinne it ſelfe, which is moſt delightfull to their carnall appetite, but alſo find the fruits thereof alike ſweet and pleaſant, growing great by their ambition, waxing rich by their fraud and oppreſſion, and enjoying their health the better by the vſe of worldly delights; then are they encouraged to goe on in their wicked courſes, and inſeparably wedded vnto their ſinne, being not only tied vnto it with the ſtrong cord of their corruption, but alſo in the moſt infringeable bond of benefit, which they haue neither will not power to breake. In which reſpect there cannot be a more fearefull judgement of God vpon ſinfull man, than when ſinne hauing gone before, hee ſuffereth proſperitie to follow after, not only becauſe hauing (as they take it) their wickedneſſe richly rewarded, they are ready to thinke (as the Pſalmiſt ſpeaketh) that God is §. Sect. 9.

That wo abundan bringeth in penitenci hardneſſe heart.

Nimis dum ſe tur proſpe cum de tur iniqu difficilius lum corri quod proſ tas etiam ritate f Greg.
lib. 34. ca
Pſal. 50.

is like vnto them; or at leaſt that hee can be content to winke at their wicked courſes, and is not diſpleaſed with their ſinnes; but alſo becauſe thriuing in their vices and euill wayes, they are ready to aſcribe this proſperitie vnto their wickedneſſe, as though it were the cauſe thereof: as wee may ſee in the example of the Iewes, who imagined that all their plentie and proſperitie was the fruit of their Idolatrie, becauſe they left the Lord, and worſhipped the Queene of Heauen. The which maketh them ſo to loue their ſinnes, that it is a matter of great difficultie to perſwade them ſo much as to haue an hard conceit of them, much more to bee willing to leaue and forſake them, ſeeing they haue by them no ſmall aduantage, as Demetrius affirmed. Yea, rather they reioyce and boaſt themſelues in their wicked courſes, glorying that they haue ſuch meanes for the atchieuing of their deſires; and may ſooner be perſwaded to giue thouſands of Rams, and whole riuers of Oyle, yea, their firſt borne which is moſt deare vnto them, than to leaue & forſake their chiefe darling, the ſinne of their ſoule, as the Prophet ſpeaketh. Againe, this worldly proſperitie puffing men vp with pride, doth make them ſo ſwell with diſdaine, that any man ſhould ſo much as tell them of their ſinnes, or admoniſh them of their euill wayes; and how farre are they from amendment, who cannot endure to heare that they are ſicke? Or if they in the publike Miniſterie heare Gods iudgements threatned, and enforced as arguments to moue them to repentance, they either heare the ſound onely, hauing their hearts carried away with worldly diſtractions, or giue no more credit vnto them, than if they heard an old wiues tale; becauſe they haue had no experience of Gods diſpleaſure, but haue proſpered in their wickedneſſe. And this reaſon of Worldlings impenitencie the Wiſe man rendreth; becauſe (ſaith he) ſentence againſt an euill worke is not executed ſpeedily, therefore the heart of the children of men is fully ſet in them to doe euill. An example whereof wee haue in the people of Iſrael, who being called by God in the time of their proſperitie, to weeping and mourning, and to baldneſſe and girding with ſackcloth, did ſpend their time in ioy and gladneſſe, ſlaying Oxen, and killing ſheepe, eating fleſh, and drinking wine, eating and drinking, becauſe on the morrow they ſhould die. The which was a ſinne ſo odious in Gods ſight, that hee proteſteth it ſhould neuer be purged from them to the very death. Yea, when by Gods meſſengers they are called to repentance, they doe not onely turne away their eare, and harden their heart, giuing no credit to their admonitions and threatnings; but they alſo are ready to deride and ſcorne them for their labours, as the Scribes and Phariſees did our Sauiour Chriſt when he ſought to reforme them of their couetouſneſſe. Finally, if their conſciences be conuinced of ſinne in the Miniſtery of the Word; or if in the midſt of their proſperitie, they haue ſome rubs of affliction caſt in their way, and ſo comming to the knowledge that they are ſpiritually diſeaſed, they are troubled and afflicted in their minds, & haue ſome motions to repentance, & ſome deſire to be cured of their ſickneſſes & ſores; yet they are preſently againe carried away with the world, & hindred from going vnto the Phyſician of ſoules, by vnfained repentance and amendment; but in the pride and ſecuritie of their hearts, wholy truſt to their owne remedies, ſeeking to put off theſe qualmes of conſcience, by frequenting of merry company, hearing delightfull muſique, eating and drinking with their boone-companions, and following their ſports & recreations; whereby the deſperateneſſe of their eſtate appeareth, in that they haue no other meanes to giue them eaſe, but by applying one diſeaſe for the cure of another, & by making a medicine of a maladie. And thus it appeareth that the more men flouriſh in proſperitie, the further they are from true repentance; and that when being wedded vnto their ſinnes, they haue alſo receiued the dowry of earthly abundance, there can nothing but death diuorce and ſeparate them: becauſe as they loue their vices and corruptions, ſo they hate and ſcorne all meanes, whereby they may be cured. Which if it be not cleare enough by the reaſons before alleaged, let men but looke into the Courts of Princes, and ſuch places as moſt abound in all proſperitie, where ſinne is graced, and the meanes of repentance deſpiſed, ſo as they will not heare Gods iudgements againſt wickedneſſe at all, that they may lay them to heart, and be reformed; or if they be preſent when they are denounced, cannot heare them without diſdaine or ſcorning: and ſo may they eaſily be confirmed in this truth by their owne experience.

§. Sect. 10.
That the immoderate loue of worldly things, takes away all true loue from our ſoules.

The fifth ſpirituall euill which proſperity, & abundance of earthly things immoderately loued and deſired bringeth, is, that they take away from vs all true loue of our ſoules; for they make thoſe, who are beſotted on them, voluntarily to loſe the libertie of Gods ſeruants, and to inthrall themſelues in the miſerable bondage of ſinne and Satan; to neglect the wages of euerlaſting happineſſe, and to chuſe rather death & condemnation, which is the wages of ſin; to depriue themſelues of the fruition of their eternall inheritance in Gods Kingdome, and to caſt body and ſoule deſperately into Hell, by wilfull running in any wicked courſe, which may giue vnto them the momentany poſſeſſion of theſe earthly vanities, honour, riches, or voluptuous pleaſures. Now what enemy could ſhew a more notable fruit of hatred, than to intice them by alluring perſwaſions to ſeeke the World, and loſe their ſoule, to preferre earthly proſperitie before heauenly glory, and the temporall fruition of theſe tranſitory triſles, before the Kingdome of God and eternall happineſſe. Yea, euen in reſpect of this life, they take away the loue of their better part, and make them, whileſt they loue the Cabinet, to neglect the rich iewell which it containeth; whileſt they dote vpon the body, to ſhew all fruits of hatred to their ſoule. For they are continually ready and willing to ſtarue the ſoule, that they may feed the bodie; to diſrobe it of the glorious garment of righteouſneſſe, and leaue it ſpiritually naked, and vtterly deſtitute of all vertue and goodneſſe, that they may pamper the fleſh, and adorne this earthly carcaſſe; to wound it with ſinne to eternall death, that the outward man may flouriſh in worldly abundance. And yet for all this, in truth their loue towards their bodies, is but falſe and counterfeit; for, for the preſent, they oftentimes weaken it with pampering, and kill it with cockering; or contrariwiſe, when they are carried with worldly loue in more violent courſes, they pine and conſume it with watchings, cares, feares and ſorrowes, weary and tire it with toylſome labours; and continually hazard it to deſperate dangers both by Sea and Land, that they may obtaine theſe earthly things, which they loue better than either body or ſoule. And finally, when by all this care and paines, they haue gotten them into their poſſeſſion, they will rather pinch both backe and belly, than they will ſpend and diminiſh that, which their ſoule ſo dearely loueth. And if wee reſpect the time to come, who can imagine that he who too much loueth the World, doth at all loue either bodie or ſoule? Seeing hee taketh a wilfull courſe of ſinne for the obtayning of his earthly deſires, whereby hee caſteth them both (as it were) head-long into Hell; the one to be tormented in vnquenchable flames, the other to be puniſhed with a heauier puniſhment, the fierce and implacable wrath of God. And therefore it may be truly ſaid, that hee who loueth the World hateth himſelfe; ſeeing if hee haue any loue at all, it is falſe and counterfeit, and he who falſly loueth, truly hateth; becauſe the fruits thereof are no leſſe hurtfull and pernicious than thoſe, which proceed from the cruell malice of an enraged enemy.

Nullo pacto ſimul ſtare poſſunt & argenti & animæ amor. Chryſoſt. in Rom. 8. Ser. 13.

§. Sect. 11.
That earthly abundance aggrauates their ſinnes that haue it.

The ſixth euill which this great proſperitie and abundance of earthly bleſſings bringeth, is, that they doe exceedingly aggrauate their ſinnes, who abuſe them in their fruition, both in the ſight of God and men. For firſt, the Lord according to the greatneſſe of his benefits, doth iuſtly expect a proportionable meaſure of thankfulneſſe and obedience; which when men neglect, and contrariwiſe abuſe his gifts vnto ſinne, and as furtherances in their wicked courſes, this doth much aggrauate their fault, and prouoketh the Lord to more heauie diſpleaſure. Beſides, the more highly they are aduanced in the ſeate of proſperitie, the more their whole cariage and behauiour is obſerued, the more alſo imitated and followed by thoſe who behold and looke vpon it. Whereby the ſinnes of great men are doubled and redoubled, becauſe they are exemplarie and ſcandalous, drawing others, as euill precedents, to the committing of the like wickedneſſe. In regard whereof it is truly ſaid, that in the greateſt proſperitie there is leaſt libertie; becauſe in great Perſonages, apparances of euil are faults, and faults crimes; ſeeing they vngratefully neglect the Lord, vnto whom they are bound in ſo many and extraordinary bonds of loue; and alſo goe not the way of deſtruction alone, but draw on, and intice many others by their euill example to beare them company. So likewiſe this great and proſperous eſtate in the World, doth make men more prone to offend in the ſight of men, as it maketh them more proud, inſolent, and apt to offer wrongs and iniuries, when hauing the Law in their owne hands, they may doe what they will without reſiſtance; and hauing thus offended, it doth both ſhew and aggrauate their faults: for as the rifts and leakes in a veſſell are not eaſily diſcerned whileſt it remayneth emptie, but plainly appeare when it is filled with water; ſo whileſt a man is deſtitute of worldly riches and preferments, his infirmities are not much obſerued; but no ſooner is hee aduanced, and (as it were) filled with theſe large gifts of worldly proſperitie, but his corruptions and ſpirituall leakes are conſpicuous in the ſight of all men. So that if there bee not in great perſons a great and extraordinarie reformation, they doe in climing vp to theſe high places, and continuing ſtill in their vices and ſinnes, but (like Apes on the tops of houſes) draw men the more readily to looke vpon them, and looking to behold their nakedneſſe and filthineſſe. And as the greatneſſe of the Baſe doth make the Image vpon it to ſeeme ſo much the leſſe; ſo the greatneſſe of mens places doth but the more extenuate their worth, and ſhew the great diſproportion, betweene their aduancement and deſert. Neither doe faults alone more clearely appeare in great Perſonages, like ſmall ſpots in the faireſt picture, and little moates in the beames of the Sunne: but being diſcerned, they are more ſharply cenſured and condemned, becauſe they are not only aggrauated by the greatneſſe of their eſtate; but alſo by enuie of thoſe, who cannot attaine to that height. Whereby it commeth to paſſe, that there is no theame or argument more pleaſing to thoſe that ſpeake, nor more plauſible to their hearers, than the ripping vp, diuulging, cenſuring, and condemning of the faults of their Superiours.

The ſeuenth ſpirituall euil accompanying theſe worldly things, is, that they expoſe men vnto all tentations, and make them willing to yeeld to Satans wicked ſuggeſtions, and the Worlds inticements, and to become their readie inſtruments for the committing of any ſinne, ſo they may haue but hope to obtaine any of theſe earthly vanities, whereupon they haue ſet their hearts. In which reſpect, it may be truly ſaid, that as the loue of God is the fountaine of all true obedience, ſo the loue of the World is the chiefe, and almoſt only motiue vnto all ſinne, and conſequently the onely meanes which Satan hath to draw men from God, and to hold them in his miſerable bondage and ſubiection. For who would renounce the ſeruice of God, and ſerue the Deuill, if it were not to receiue this wages of iniquitie? Who in the ſpirituall conflict, would leaue the Standard of the Lord of Hoſts, who being Omnipotent in power, is ſure in the end to haue the victory, and hath promiſed to all his Souldiers no leſſe than Crownes and Kingdomes; were it not that Satan allureth and hireth them to fight on his ſide, with the preſent pay of worldly riches, pleaſures and preferments? Who by ſinning would hazard his ſoule to eternall torments, if hee were not allured with theſe inticing baits of earthly vanities? Who would entertaine ſinne, if it ſhould come alone, and appeare in its owne vgly and monſtrous ſhape, though now they willingly giue it the beſt welcome, and lodge it in their hearts, becauſe it commeth diſguiſed, and (as it were) guilded ouer with this worldly beautie? Who would be at Satans abſolute command to doe his will, without hope of any reward; though now they willingly hearken, when he ſaith, All this will I giue thee if thou wilt do me ſeruice? Would wee therefore know wherein Satans power chiefly conſiſteth, whereby he vanquiſheth ſuch great multitudes, and raigneth and ruleth as the Prince of the World in the hearts of vnbeleeuers? Surely it is not ſo much in his owne ſtrength, as in theſe worldly aides. For his power and malice is ſo limited by God, that he cannot ouercome by force and violence any, who haue but ſo much as a deſire to make reſiſtance; and hee is onely permitted to get the victorie ouer thoſe, who are willing to be ouercome, and to lead them alone into his ſeruitude & ſubiection, whom hee can perſwade to acknowledge him as their Lord and Maſter. And therefore hee ſeldome bringeth his forces againſt vs into the open field, or attempteth to ouercome vs by force and violence; but hee ſeeketh treacherouſly to betray vs, by perſwading vs to a parley, wherein he vſeth theſe worldly vanities, as his eloquent and moſt preuailing Orators, to allure vs to leaue the Lord, and to liſten vnto him, ſeeing he perſwadeth vs to nothing, but that which tendeth to our preſent profit, and which is moſt pleaſing to our naturall appetites. He will make vs beleeue, that the ſinne is but ſmall, and the reward great; and ſay vnto vs, as Berſabe to her ſonne, I haue a ſmall ſuite vnto thee; denie me not. Though if we haue wiſdome to diſcerne it, wee ſhall eaſily perceiue that our harkening vnto it, will coſt vs no leſſe, than the loſſe of Gods Kingdome. He will offer vs Honours, and promiſe that we ſhall be highly aduanced aboue other men; but we muſt firſt by ſinne bow vnto him, and doe him reuerence: he will promiſe vs riches, but vpon the condition that wee bee content to vſe fraude, and deceit, oppreſſion and crueltie, for the compaſſing of them. Hee will tender vnto vs varietie of delights; but if wee will haue them, wee muſt to enjoy them, neglect the ſeruice of God, and vſe them immoderately and in exceſſe. Vnto which perſwaſions, we are too too readie to liſten and yeeld, not ſimply, becauſe Satan requireth it, but becauſe we dote on the loue of theſe worldly things which he offereth vnto vs. Theſe then are that treble cord of vanitie, whereby the Deuill draweth men into all iniquitie; theſe are the ſtythies of this helliſh Vulcan, whereupon he hammereth and forgeth his chaines of tentations, wherewith he draweth men into the pit of perdition, and his mortall darts, with which hee woundeth them to eternall death. Theſe are the nailes wherewith hee faſtneth the hearts of carnall men to the earth, ſo as they can neuer lift them vp in any heauenly meditation. Theſe are the Tempters choiſeſt and beſt approued weapons, wherewith being armed, he preſumed to encounter our Sauiour Chriſt, the eternall Son of God: All this will I giue thee, if thou wilt fall downe and worſhip me. Theſe are his allurements, wherewith hee inticeth vs to ſwallow the deadly hookes of ſinnes, which are ſo vgly and monſtrous in their owne nature, that we would no more eaſily be perſwaded to ſwallow them, than the fiſh the bare hooke, if they were not couered with theſe alluring baits, which are ſo pleaſing to our carnall appetites. Theſe are the woods and buſhes, wherein Satan layeth his ſecret ambuſhments, that hee may ſuddenly aſſault and ouercome vs at vnawares, whom he could not vanquiſh in a pitched battell; and the bootie which he intiseth vs to prey vpon to our deſtruction.

§. Sect. 13. That honours expoſe men to tentations.

Matth.4.3,6,9.

In a word, as theſe worldly things are the Tempters chiefe inducements to perſwade vs vnto ſinne; ſo are they the inſtruments and meanes of wickedneſſe, when wee are inticed to entertaine theſe euill motions. For by the helpe of theſe §. Sect. 14. That riches make way for the tentations of the Deuill. 1.Tim.6.9,10.

Baſil. in tract. de rebus ſecular.

Luke 15,13,30.
1.Sam.25.36.
Luke 16,19.

Prodigals maintain their Harlots, and themſelues alſo in their riotous courſes; by theſe the Glutton and Epicure vphold their proud brauerie and delicious fare, and are inabled to paſſe their time in voluptuous and carnall delights; with theſe are men armed for any villany, and are ſtrengthened and borne out in tyrannie, crueltie, and oppreſſion. All which happeneth not out of the nature of the things themſelues (as before I haue ſhewed) but through the corruption of thoſe who hauing them, doe abuſe them, both as occaſions and meanes, inducements vnto, and helpes and furtherances of their wicked courſes.

§. Sect. 23.
That honours expoſe men to tentations.

But let vs for the better cleering of the former point, more ſpecially conſider of thoſe inſtances, Honours, riches and pleaſures, and ſhew how they ſeuerally are by the malice of Satan and our corruption, prouocations vnto ſinne, and the ordinary wages of impietie and wickedneſſe. And firſt for honours; who ſeeth not, that being immoderately loued and deſired, they lay men open to entertaine the tentations of the Deuill, and make them willing to commit any outrage and wickedneſſe, which ſeemeth to promiſe them any glory or preferment? what fraud and diſſimulation will they ſpare to vſe? whom wil they not ſupplant? what friend will they not betray? what Kinſman, Brother, or Father will they reſpect? yea whoſe ruine will they not plot? and whoſe bloud will they not ſpill, that they may obtaine their ambitious deſires, and aduance themſelues to their affected promotions? What was the cauſe which moued Adam to neglect the voice of his Creatour, and to hearken to the tempter, but his aſpiring ambition which made him to liſten vnto Satan vpon the firſt offer of Honour, when hee promiſed that they ſhould be equall with God? What was the cauſe of Caines murther, Corahs conſpiracie, Abimilech his cruel ſlaughter of his brethren; of Abſalons vnnaturall rebellion againſt his louing Father; of Balaams deſire to haue curſed Iſrael; of Hamans bloudy plot to murther all the Iewes; of Nebuchadnezzars Idolatry, and of Herods arrogancie, whereby hee intitled himſelfe to Gods Royalties? What but vaine glory, and worldly Honours immoderately loued and deſired?

Gen.3.5.

Num.22.17,18.

§. Sect. 24.
That riches make way for the tentations of the Deuill.
1.Tim.6.9,10.

The like alſo may bee ſaid of worldly riches, which being ouer-valued and too much affected, become of Gods bleſſings, Sathans baits, wherewith he inticeth men to fall into tentations and ſnares, and into many fooliſh and noyſome luſts, which drowne men in perdition; for the deſire of money is the root of all euill, as the Apoſtle ſpeaketh. And hence it is that the Lord commandeth the Iſraelites to burne with fire the grauen Images and Idols of the heathen, and not to couet the ſiluer and gold that is on them, nor to take it vnto them, leſt they ſhould be ſnared therewith. To which purpoſe one ſaith, that there is a ſnare in Gold, Birdlime in Siluer, intangling nets and grins in Lands and Lordſhips: and therefore, that if we too greedily couet Gold, we ſhall be ſtrangled and choaked; if we too eagerly ſeeke Siluer, we ſhall be catched in this lime; if we couetouſly ſeaze vpon theſe large Lordſhips, we ſhall be intangled and inſnared. And another exhorteth vs by all meanes to flee the immoderate loue of Gold, as being a flattering Traytour to our ſoules, the parent of ſinne, and the Deuils Deputie to draw vs on into all wickedneſſe. Yea, ſo deceitfull are theſe ſnares that few eſcape them; and ſo ſtrong they are to hold all whom they catch, that few who are once intangled in them, can euer get freedome and deliuerance. And therefore the Sonne of Syrach maketh it one of the wonders of the World, to find a man perfect in this triall: Who (ſaith he) hath beene tried thereby, and found perfect? Let him bee an example of glory, &c. So that Satan, the great enemie of our ſaluation, hath not much adoe to vanquiſh and lead captiue vnto all manner of ſinne, thoſe who ſet their hearts vpon theſe worldly riches, ſeeing to get the prey, they are ready of themſelues without his inſtigation, to runne willingly into theſe ſnares, and with all ſpeed to preuent one another in catching of theſe baits, euen when the hooke of ſinne lying hid in them, is ready to choake them; ſtriuing who ſhall doe moſt diligent ſeruice to the Prince of darkneſſe, when he offereth for their reward the rich wages of worldly wealth. Yea, and when they finde themſelues catched in theſe nets of perdition, by feeding on this pleaſing baite, ſo farre are they from deſiring, and vſing the meanes of their deliuerance, that they rejoyce in their ſnares, and deſire more and more to bee intangled, as though they thought it a thraldome to be ſet at libertie, and the greateſt freedome to be ſo inthralled. For who ſeeth not by daily experience, that couetous men, like fiſh about the baited hooke, ſtriue who ſhall catch the choaking prey, not caring to be taken, ſo they may take it; to loſe themſelues, for worldly gaine; and whileſt they may prey on this baite of wealth, to make their ſoules a prey to that helliſh fiſher, who ſeeketh to catch them on the hooke of perdition? Who ſeeth not that for the getting of wealth they are willing to omit all duties to God and man; to neglect friends & kinred; to lie, diſſemble, defraud, oppreſſe, and what not, that by ſpoiling others, they may increaſe their owne ſtocke? And as Satan now preuaileth by the helpe of this golden baite in catching of innumerable ſoules in the ſnares of ſinne, ſo hath he euer done in former times; for herewith he allured Achan to

Deut.7.25.

Ambroſ. bono cap.5.

Baſil.
Chiloſt.

Eccleſ.31.8.

to theft, Gehezie to take the vntimely bribe, to Gods diſhonour, and his Maſters diſcredit; Achab to murther and oppreſſion; Ananias and Saphira to lie vnto the holy Ghoſt; Demas to embrace the World, and leaue Chriſt; and Iudas to betray his Lord and Maſter, and together with him his owne ſoule. Euen as in our owne dayes by the ſame meanes he allureth Magiſtrates to receiue bribes, and peruert iuſtice; Miniſters to make ſimoniacall contracts, and to multiplie their liuings, taking all the care for the fleece, and nothing for the flocke; Lawyers to plead in bad cauſes, and to oppoſe the good; Officers to play the extortioners; Land-lords to vſe cruelty and oppreſſion; and Citizens to rob their neighbours by fraud and deceit. And that which is moſt lamentable, hee doth inſnare in ſinne with this bait of riches, not worldlings onely, who make a god of gaine, but euen profeſſors of religion, who are ready oftentimes to ſtraine their conſciences, and (as it were) to ſet them vpon the racke, for the inriching of themſelues with this Mammon of iniquitie.

Sect. 15.
pleaſures rately become ſnares.

Finally, worldly pleaſures immoderately loued, become tentations and ſnares to intangle vs in ſinne, and thoſe ſweete potions which with their pleaſing delight allure vs to drinke with them the deadly poyſon of impietie and wickedneſſe. With this inticing baite Satan perſwaded our firſt parents to eate the forbidden fruit, becauſe it was beautifull to the eye: herewith he allured the ſonnes of God to match in marriage with the daughters of men, when they ſaw that they were faire to looke vpon: with it hee inticed Lot to ioyne in neighbourhood with the wicked Sodomites, becauſe their countrey was pleaſant and delightfull, and afterwards to commit thoſe grieuous ſinnes of drunkenneſſe and inceſt: with this bait of pleaſure he drew the people of Sodome and Gomorrah to vnnaturall filthineſſe, & to fall into all manner of abominations: with it he inticed the Iſraelites to commit whoredome with the Midianitiſh women; Dauid to adulterie and murther, and Salomon to fornication both corporall and ſpirituall. And this is that bewitching allurement, whereby the diuell ſo much preuaileth euen in theſe dayes, by cauſing men to fall in this ſpirituall fight into theſe lime pits of carnall pleaſures, and ſo obtaining an eaſie victorie, he leadeth them away captiue into all manner of ſinne, as chambring and wantonneſſe, luſt, vncleanneſſe, ſurfetting and drunkenneſſe, and whatſoeuer other wickedneſſe may further them either in the procuring, or enioying of their carnall delights. With all which the fleſh being fed and pampered, becommeth a ſtrong aſſiſtant vnto Satan in aſſaulting the ſpirituall man, and in leading him captiue vnto ſinne. whereby the folly of worldlings clearely appeareth, in that they willingly nouriſh this ſecret traytor, aud ſtrengthen this enemie againſt themſelues, taking all their care in getting, and their comfort in enioying that, which inthralleth them in the bondage of ſinne, and both furthereth and encreaſeth their fearefull condemnation: as though the wicked fleſh were not a ſoile fertile enough to nouriſh and bring forth the fruits of wickedneſſe, vnleſſe it were made more rancke with this dung of worldly vanities. And thus haue I ſhewed that theſe earthly things, honours, riches & pleaſures being immoderately loued and deſired, doe become the Diuels baits and ſnares to intangle vs in ſinne to our perdition and deſtruction: whereby it appeareth how dangerous and deſperate the eſtate of worldlings is, who are on all ſides beſet with nets, which that deadly fowler Satan doth continually watch, and (as Bildad ſpeaketh) doe walke in the middeſt of ſnares, ſo as they cannot ſtep forward a foot to atchieue their deſires, but they are in danger of catching; yea and haue not onely ſnares vnder their feete, but ouer their heads ready to fall vpon them, and to catch them by the neckes; for ſo the Pſalmiſt ſaith, that God doth raine ſnares vpon the wicked, ſo as they can no more auoid them, than the drops of Water which come downe in a ſtormie ſhower. The which their caſe is ſo much more deſperate, becauſe they are ſo farre from ſhunning theſe nets and ſnares, that they willingly ſeeke them, and wilfully leape into them, not caring to intangle their ſoules in ſinne and death, ſo they may prey for the preſent vpon the worlds alluring baits: like herein to the ſilly flies, which need no call to allure them to the hony-pot, nor force to thruſt them in, ſeeing they are ready to come of their own accord, and to drowne themſelues, without any compulſion of outward violence. But let vs, who haue better hopes auoid their folly, and weane our affections from this worldly dotage, which in the end will bring deſtruction; for why ſhould we be in loue with theſe baits of vanitie, ſeeing vnder them is hid the hooke of ſinne which will mortally choake vs? why ſhould wee with ſuch care ſeeke theſe ſnares, which being found will but intangle vs, and make vs Satans prey? why ſhould wee ſo greedily ſnatch and hold theſe pricking thornes, which when we haue them will pierce and wound vs? and ſo eagerly catch this treble cord of vanitie, as ſoone as Satan doth but caſt it out, that ſo he might draw vs into Hell and deſtruction? Let vs not therefore prey greedily on the fowlers baits, that wee bee not catched in his ſnares; and ſeeing there is 9. 11.

16. 17.

Iob 18. 8.

Pſalme 11. 6.

no ſafetie or ſecuritie vpon the earth, which is full of grins and nets; let vs follow the example of the ſilly bird, which mounteth aloft towards Heauen, when ſhee ſeeth any danger of being catched, thereby making fruſtrate the fowlers hopes; for as the Wiſe man ſpeaketh, in vaine is the net ſpread before all that hath wing, becauſe it is in their power to eſcape by flight: and ſo if we will eſcape the manifold ſnares and nets which Satan and the world haue laid to catch vs, let not our hearts and affections bee ſtill groueling on the earth, but let vs mount aloft with the wings of faith and loue, and haue our conuerſation in Heauen, minding and meditating vpon thoſe ſurpaſſing ioyes, which are there reſerued for vs; and ſo ſhall wee contemne theſe worldly things as baſe vanities, in compariſon of that eternall and vnſpeakeable happineſſe; and be freed from the danger of theſe ſnares: ſo as with the Pſalmiſt wee may ſing to the prayſe of God: our ſoule is eſcaped, euen as a bird out of the ſnare of the fowler, the ſnare is broken and wee are deliuered. For there is no danger of the ſnare if we neglect, or but lightly eſteeme of the baite, neither can Satan that cunning fowler euer catch vs in his nets, vnleſſe we ſtoope when we heare his alluring call, and greedily hunger after that prey, which he hath purpoſely ſet out, that hee may prey vpon vs.

Prou.1.17.

Philip.3.20.
Coloſſ.3.1.

Pſalme 124.7. Non capit laqueus niſi ante te eſca coperit: dum prædam petis laqueo ipſe te nectis. Ambroſ. in Pſal.118. Serm.14.

§. Sect.16.

That worldly things immoderately loued expoſe men to Gods wrath and heauie iudgements.

The laſt ſpirituall euill which theſe worldly things immoderately loued, doe bring to thoſe who ſo affect them, is, that they expoſe them to the heauie wrath of God, and his fearefull plagues and puniſhments, in the day of his viſitation. For when men haue ſet their hearts and affections (which are Gods due, and doe rightly appertaine to him alone) vpon theſe earthly vanities and are by them made the ſeruants of ſinne, and ſlaues of Satan, ready to perpetrate and commit any wickedneſſe, which may helpe forward to the obtaining of theſe things which they ſo much deſire, and yet notwithſtanding paſſe their time in ſecuritie, and reioyce in the fruition of their beloued vanities, bleſſing themſelues in their vaine hopes, as though they needed no other ſupplie of their wants, nor further helpe to be freed out of dangers; then the Lord being zealous of his owne glory, doth cauſe his vengeance to wax hot againſt them, and purſueth them with his iudgements and plagues till he haue vtterly deſtroyed them, euen, when they leaſt ſuſpect any danger of approching euill. So the Lord threatneth worldly men, who tooke all their delight in earthly things, and in the fruition of them paſſed their time in impenitencie and ſecuritie, promiſing vnto themſelues immunitie in time of danger, that hee would ſweepe away their vaine confidence, diſanull their couenant with death and agreement with Hell, and that when the ſcourge paſſed ouer, it ſhould not ouer-paſſe them, but take them away, &c. And the Apoſtle deſcribing the enemies of the croſſe of Chriſt, ioyneth theſe together, that they were ſuch as did mind earthly things, and had damnation for their end. How little therefore are we beholding to the World and worldly things, ſeeing their friendſhip and loue expoſes vs to the wrath and anger of God; and by ſatisfying our deſires in the fruition of ſome ſmall benefits, doe make vs (whileſt we too much dote vpon them) liable to Gods greateſt iudgements, and moſt grieuous puniſhments? But this will yet more plainly appeare, if wee further conſider the ſpeciall inſtances, and firſt theſe worldly honours when they are exceſſiuely loued and ouer-greedily deſired, doe by our wicked getting, and proud keeping them, expoſe vs to Gods wrath and vengeance, in the day of his viſitation. For hard and almoſt impoſſible it is, to the corrupt nature of man to bee aduanced to high places and great dignities, and not to be proud of his preferment; hard it is to be magnified among the people, and not alſo too much to magnifie a mans owne worth, and to ouerweene his gifts and good parts: hard it is for a man to bee great and glorious vpon earth, and to keepe a due remembrance of him from whom hee hath receiued his glorie and greatneſſe. And contrariwiſe, through the ſame corruption of our nature, thoſe who are aduanced to honorable places are apt to bee puffed vp in pride, to forget the Lord who hath preferred them, to rob him of his glory, and to arrogate the prayſe of their preferments, to themſelues, their owne polices, and good parts which is due and peculiar to God alone, by reaſon of which abuſe they commonly make God their enemie, and inflame his wrath againſt them, for their ſacrilegious impietie. And the more gloriouſly they ſhine before men, the more their honour is obſcured in the ſight of God; the more they magnifie and extoll themſelues, the more doth he vilifie and contemne them; yea he doth not onely deſpiſe them in their greateſt pride as abiects, but oppoſeth againſt them as enemies, and as his corriuals in that which is moſt deare vnto him, his honour and glory; as though he ſhould ſay; To me belongeth this combate againſt the proud, with mine own hand muſt mine owne title bee tried, and glory defended; this man encroching vpon my right, challengeth me to the fight, as my ſpecially aduerſarie and enemie, and therefore I will take mine owne cauſe into mine owne hand, and auenge me of my foes who riſe vp and rebell againſt mee. Now what can befall them but confuſion, ſhame and deſtruction, againſt whom God purpoſely op-

Eſay 28.17.18.

Philip.3.19.

O ſecul quam tuos ſe beat di ſci mic Epiſt.

opposeth as a ſharpe & ſeuere enemie, ſeeing he is ſo powerfull that none can ſtand before him in his anger, nor deliuer himſelfe or any other out of his hand; but ſtrong and weake, King and people, are all alike liable to his plagues, when he goeth his circuite of viſitation, and ſitteth in his aſſizes to judge the earth? Of which fearefull vengeance executed vpon proud potentates wee haue many examples, as in Pharaoh drowned in the red Sea, in Corah and his confederates, ſwallowed aliue by the earth, in Abimelech killed by a woman, Abſalon hanged by his owne haire, and Haman on his owne gallowes, Athaliah, Nebuchadnezer, Herode and many others. And thus alſo riches being immoderately loued, doe expoſe thoſe who haue them to Gods wrath, and bring vpon them his feareful iudgments. So Zophar ſpeaking of the couetous worldling, ſaith, that as hee hath deuoured ſubſtance, ſo he ſhall vomit it againe; for God ſhall draw it out of his belly: he ſhall ſucke the gall of aſpes, and the vipers tongue ſhall ſlay him, &c. And the Prophet Eſay denounceth a fearefull woe againſt them, who ioyned houſe to houſe, and field to field, as though they would dwell alone vpon the earth: and the Prophet Habacuk likewiſe, Woe be vnto him (ſaith he) that coueteth an euill couetouſneſſe to his houſe, that he may ſet his neſt on high, to eſcape the power of euill. Thou haſt conſulted ſhame to thine owne houſe, by deſtroying many people, and haſt ſinned againſt thine owne ſoule: for the ſtone ſhall crie out of the wall, and the beame of timber ſhall anſwere it. An example of which fearefull vengeance executed vpon the couetous we haue in Achan, who was deſtroyed with all his familie; in Balaam, who was ſlaine with the Madianites, for affecting the reward of iniquitie. In Gehezi, who together with all his poſteritie was ſmitten with leproſie. In Tyre, who had heaped vp ſiluer as duſt, and gold as the mire in the ſtreets, whom the Lord threatneth to ſpoile of all her wealth, and to conſume her with fire, though ſhee were enuironed with the Sea, and wanted no Water to quench it. The like alſo may be ſaid of voluptuous pleaſures, which make vs liable to Gods wrath and vengeance, when wee ſet our hearts vpon them, and take more care to pleaſe our ſelues, than to pleaſe God. And thus the Lord puniſhed that delight which our firſt parents tooke in eating of the forbidden fruit, with the loſſe of Paradiſe, and that which was worſe, with the loſſe of his fauour; Noahs drunkenneſſe with the ſcorne and contempt of his ſonnes; Lots inceſt with a curſed poſteritie, the Sodomites fulneſſe and filthineſſe; with fire and brimſtone from Heauen. And Lots wife for looking backe, with a deſire to inioy thoſe pleaſures of ſinfull Sodome, was turned into a pillar of ſalt, that ſhe might (as one ſaith) ſeaſon vs with her example, and keepe vs from luſting after theſe worldly vanities. And thus the whole tribe of Beniamin almoſt were vtterly deſtroyed for not puniſhing the abominable vncleanneſſe of ſome few among them. And euen Dauid himſelfe loſt that delight which hee had taken in his vnlawfull luſt, with the ſting of conſcience, apprehenſion of Gods wrath, and by his owne ſonnes ſhamfull abuſing of his concubines in the ſight of the people. Which iudgements and puniſhments if any eſcape in this life (as they ſeldome doe, becauſe voluptuous pleaſures doe almoſt alwayes bring their puniſhment with them) yet they ſhall moſt ſurely be ouertaken with Gods plagues in the life to come: according to that of the wiſe Preacher: Reioyce O young man in thy youth, and let thy heart cheere thee in the dayes of thy youth, and walke in the wayes of thine heart, and in the ſight of thine eyes; but know that for all theſe things God will bring thee to iudgement.

Vxor Lot reſpexit, & vbi reſpexit, ibi remanſit. In ſalem conuerſa eſt, vt prudentes condiret exemplo. Auguſt. Serm. 29. Tom. 10.

Eccleſ. 11.9.

Chap. XXXV.

Of the euerlaſting euils which worldly things immoderately loued, doe bring to thoſe who haue them.

§. Sect. 1. That worldly things immoderately loued hinder vs from attaining the ioyes of Gods Kingdome.

And thus haue I ſhewed the temporall euils both ciuill and ſpiritual, which doe accompanie theſe worldly things, when they are ouerualued aboue their worth, and immoderatly affected and deſired. It now followeth that wee intreate briefly of thoſe which are euerlaſting in the life to come. For well were it with worldlings, if the earthly things which they immoderately loue, were onely hurtfull to their ſoules and bodies whileſt they continue here; for then they might ſet their temporall gaine againſt their temporall loſſe, and haue their hurts counteruailed (at leſt in their opinion) by their profit and benefit. But this maketh their eſtate moſt miſerable, in that their worldly delights and comforts, are but momentanie and of ſhort continuance; and the euils and puniſhments vnto which they haue made themſelues liable, either by their wicked getting or abuſing them, ſhall bee endleſſe and euerlaſting. For as the wounds of the body are ſoone made, and long in curing: ſo theſe ſores of ſinne which attend vpon the euill getting or keeping of earthly vanities, are made in a moment, but when they are made, they are neuer cured, vnleſſe in this life wee applie vnto them the precious balſum of Chriſts blood, and waſh theſe ſpirituall wounds with the teares and water of true repentance. Now theſe euils which they bring in reſpect of the life to come, are either priuatiue or poſitiue. The priuatiue euill which theſe worldly things immoderately loued bring, is that they depriue and hinder thoſe who ſet their hearts vpon them, of the eternall ioyes of Heauen. For the Pſalmiſt, enquiring of the diuine Oracle of truth: who ſhall aſcend into the mountaine of the Lord; and who ſhall ſtand in his holy place; receiueth this anſwere: he that hath innocent hands, and a pure heart, which hath not lift vp his mind vnto vanitie, nor ſworne deceitfully. And the Apoſtle ſpeaking of thoſe who are effectually called to the fruition of theſe ioyes, ſaith, that not many wiſe men after the fleſh, not many mighty, not many noble are called; but God hath choſen the fooliſh things of the World to confound the wiſe, and God hath choſen the weake things of the World, to confound the mighty things; and vile things of the World, and things which are deſpiſed hath God choſen, and things which are not, to bring to nought things that are. And in another place hee telleth vs, that he who ſoweth to the fleſh, ſhall of his fleſh reape corruption; euen as contrariwiſe, hee that ſoweth to the ſpirit, ſhall of the ſpirit reape life euerlaſting. So that commonly thoſe whom the World refuſeth, God chuſeth, whom it diſgraceth, he honoureth; and contrariwiſe, they whom the World magnifieth, thoſe the Lord deſpiſeth, whom it imbraceth, thoſe hee reiecteth. And hard it is and euen impoſſible, that our hearts ſhould bee fixed on the World, and yet our ſoules inherit eternall happineſſe, that we ſhould haue our conuerſation in the World as Citizens of the Earth, and yet hold ſure our inheritance of Gods kingdome. And therefore as ſome thinke, our Sauiour before hee would giue his diſciples ſome ſmall glimps of that heauenly glory in his transfiguration, firſt withdrew them apart vnto mount Thabor, ſeparating and diuiding them (as it were) from the World, to teach vs typically this leſſon, that hee who will euer hope to ſee and enioy eternall glory, muſt firſt draw his affections from the World, and haue his conuerſation in Heauen, ſeeking thoſe things which are aboue, and raiſing his meditations into the mountaine of Gods holineſſe. To this purpoſe one exhorteth vs to weane our affections from the loue of theſe worldly vanities, becauſe if our hearts bee fixed vnto them, they will depriue vs of euerlaſting glory: Learne to contemne (ſaith he) thoſe things whileſt thou art aliue, which thou canſt not haue after thou art dead. For it is hard, yea altogether impoſſible, that a man ſhould with immoderate loue enioy theſe temporall good things, and thoſe that are eternall; that hee ſhould here glut his appetite, and there haue his ſoule ſatisfied with heauenly ioyes, and ſo paſſe from one delight to another, and appeare glorious both in Earth and Heauen, &c. ſeeing the more wee are delighted with earthly vanities, the more are wee ſeparated from eternall glory.

Pſal.24.3.4.

1.*Cor.*1.26.27.

*Gal.*6.8.

*Mark.*9.2.

Bernard.de inter.domo, cap.45.

Now if wee would know the reaſons why both theſe cannot ſtand together, and why wee cannot ſet our hearts vpon the things of the World whileſt wee continue with them, and afterwards inherit heauenly happineſſe; they are eaſily rendred. For firſt, thoſe who too much affect theſe earthly things, they too little regard, or vtterly contemne that eternall glory in the life to come; if they bee in loue with the fleſh pots of Egypt, they will neuer trauell cheerefully towards the land of promiſe; if with Eſau they more eſteeme their pottage than their patrimonie, they will take no great paines to bee aſſured of it, or ſell all their title and intereſt which they haue in it at the baſeſt prizes; if they can be content with the prodigall Son to feed on the huskes of worldly vanities, among the filthy ſwine, ſo long as they can haue plenty of them, they will neuer care to returne vnto their heauenly Father, neither will they giue all they haue to buy this precious pearle of glory, if they more eſteeme their earthly poſſeſſions, and in compariſon of them baſely value thoſe heauenly treaſures. So one ſaith, that holy delight in heauenly happineſſe ſhunneth the heart which is prepoſſeſſed with worldly deſires, neither can there bee any mixture of things truely ſubſtantiall, with emptie vanities; of true things with falſe; eternall with tranſitorie, ſpirituall with corporall, the higheſt with the loweſt, ſo as a man may at the ſame time ſauour of thoſe things which are aboue, and thoſe things which are beneath. For theſe worldly things haue in them a bewitching quality, whereby thoſe who affect them, are blinded that they cannot ſee thoſe heauenly riches, though much greater and better, and ſo being out ſight, they are alſo out of mind, & are either quite forgotten, or vtterly diſregarded. And as he who loueth an harlot doth preſently loath his Wife, taking his whole delight in her companie and wanton dalliance, and eſteeming his owne home a iaile or priſon: ſo they who ſet their hearts vpon this worldly ſtrumpet, doe preſently contemne our husband Ieſus Chriſt, and flee from our heauenly home, as if it were the place of their baniſhment. And this the Apoſtle implieth, where hee ſaith that the outward forme or beautifull appearance of this world doth ſeduce or miſleade men out of their way, like the going Fire which leades thoſe who behold it into hedges and ditches, and ſo blindeth and dazleth them, that they

§. Sect.
The rea why we greatly both ea and hea things.

Bernard.
aſcenſ Domini 6.

τὸ σχῆμα
1.Cor.7.3

cannot find the way to their owne home. In which regard this bewitching World is fitly likened to a kind of Serpent called by the Grecians σκυτάλη, which when ſhee cannot ouertake the fleeing paſſengers, doth with her beautifull colours aſtoniſh (and amaze them, ſo as they haue no power to paſſe away till ſhee haue ſtung them: for ſo doth the counterfait beautie and brauerie of the World inueigle and bewitch thoſe who behold it with ouerpartiall eyes, that they ſtand aſtoniſhed till it haue ſtung them with carnall concupiſcence, and doting loue, ſo as they haue neither will nor power to ſet one foote forward towards their heauenly countrie. But as the Rubenites hauing taken a liking of the countrie which was firſt conquered, becauſe it was fit to feed their Cattell (although it were far from the Temple, where they ſhould receiue the food of their ſoules) and therefore to enioy it renounced all intereſt in the Land of promiſe: ſo theſe worldlings ſet their hearts and affections vpon the earth and earthly vanities, becauſe they are at hand, and fit to feed their ſenſuall and brutiſh appetites, preferring it before the heauenly Canaan, and Temple of Gods holineſſe, where their ſoules might bee ſatisfied with thoſe rauiſhing ioyes, and ſurpaſſing pleaſures which are at Gods right hand for euermore. Or if they doe not hinder them from this heauenly happineſſe, by cauſing them to forget and vtterly neglect it, yet at leaſt by ſlacking their pace, and cauſing them to ſeeke after it negligently and remiſſely. And whereas there is ſuch a zeale in thoſe who attaine vnto the kingdome of Heauen, that as our Sauiour Chriſt ſaith, they ſtriue to enter into the ſtraite gate, and are ready to take poſſeſſion of it by an holy kind of violence and force, ſparing for no paines, nor ſtaying for any danger; theſe men who are wedded to the World, are cold and ſlacke in this purſuit, being altogether vnwilling to take any paines, or to ſuſtaine the leaſt brunt of any danger. Or if at any time they ſhew a little earneſtneſſe more than ordinarie, preſently this zeale is quenched with theſe watriſh and earthly vanities; and the World catching faſt hold of them, maketh them to ſtay, and neuer ceaſeth wreſtling with them till they haue the foile and ouerthrow. In which conflict theſe worldly things are vnto them but as clothes to wraſtlers, whereon their aduerſarie taketh faſter hold to giue them a fall; and (as one ſaith) the world caſteth vpon them this duſt of earthly vanities, that hee may ſeaze on them the ſurer, and keepe them from ſlipping out of his vnkind imbracements; from which dangers they might be freed, either if they were naked and deſtitute of theſe worldly vanities, or at leaſt if they kept them on as looſe garments, which are eaſily pulled off; being not farre in loue with them whileſt they haue them, and ſtanding firmely in their patience, and well contented in their minds, when they are taken away.

§. Sect. 3. That the Lord will not giue the heauenly ioyes to thoſe who more eſteeme earthly trifles.

Finally, as theſe worldly things immoderately loued, doe hinder men from ſeeking after the heauenly ioyes of Gods kingdome, ſo doe they moue the Lord to reſtraine his bountifull hand, from giuing and beſtowing them. For hee onely giueth his beſt gifts to thoſe who beſt eſteeme them, and beſtoweth his benefits vpon them alone who doe ſeeke and ſue for them; ſeeing thoſe onely who feele their owne want, and acknowledge the incomparable worth of theſe rich gifts, will euer be truely thankfull for them. Now who that is wiſe among men would beſtow his greateſt benefits where hee is ſure to receiue the leaſt thankes? Who would giue gifts of value, to thoſe who cannot value them, but preferre euery baſe trifle aboue them, in their fooliſh eſtimation? Who would beſtow a rich diamond on him, who more eſteemeth of a painted glaſſe; or a piece of gold on ſuch an one as more highly valueth a ſhining counter? Who would make him his heire to a goodly inheritance, who preferreth before it, euen in his ripeſt iudgement, a top and ſcourge, or ſome ſuch childiſh vanity? or make him lord of his laſting labours, who taketh more delight in a butterflie, or a brittle ſopie bubble? And doe wee thinke the Lord leſſe wiſe than man, that hee ſhould beſtow theſe eternall treaſures vpon thoſe who contemne them, preferring before them euery childiſh trifle, and worldly vanitie? will he giue his chiefe iewels to thoſe who doe not know how to value them? and make them heires of an eternall kingdome, who more highly eſteeme, and deerely loue, and earneſtly deſire, and painefully ſeeke theſe earthly trifles, which are as contemptible in their worth, as momentanie and vncertaine in their continuance? No no aſſuredly; theſe prophane Eſaus muſt not haue the birthright and bleſſing, who following their carnall appetite doe preferre before it a meſſe of pottage. Theſe carnall Iſraelites who more eſteeme worldly bondage, than the glorious liberty of the Sonnes of God, and the fleſh-pots of Egypt, more than the fruitfull Canaan, ſhall periſh in this earthly wilderneſſe, and neuer enter into the Holy Land. Theſe Sonnes of Adam, who loue an Apple better than their Creatour, and care more for the preſent to pleaſe their licorous palate, and carnall appetite, than for thoſe joyes which are vnſpeakeable and eternall, ſhall neuer (without ſerious repentance) bee thought fit inhabitants for the heauenly paradiſe. They who with the wife of Lot, looke backe to this Sodome of ſinne, which which by Gods determinate ſentence, is deſtinated to fire and brimſtone, delighting more in thoſe pleaſures of vanitie, than in Gods gracious deliuerance, ſhall be made fearefull examples of his heauie iudgements, and pillars or laſting monuments, to giue others warning, that they bee more wiſe in this choice. For as our Sauiour Chriſt hath taught vs; No man that putteth his hand to the plough, and looketh backe, is apt and fit for the Kingdome of God, and they who will not forſake all to follow him, yea, hate Father and Mother, Wife and Children, Brethren and Siſters, and their owne life alſo, when they come in compariſon with the loue of Chriſt, and his Holy Father, hee will neuer thinke them worthy to be his diſciples, to follow him in the Kingdome of grace, and much leſſe as coheires to raigne together with him in the Kingdome of gory.

Luke 17.32.

Luke 9.62.

and 14.26.

§. Sect. 4.
That earthly honors hinder thoſe, who ſet their hearts on them, for attaining heauenly glory.

But let vs deſcend from the generall to the ſpeciall inſtances. And firſt for honours, and the vaine-glory of the World, what greater impediment can there bee than they, to hinder any from attaining the eternall glory of Gods Kingdome, when being inioyed or deſired, they are ouervalued, and too much loued and affected? For (as I haue ſhewed) they make men the ready inſtruments of any ſinne (whereby a preſent forfeiture is made of our heauenly inheritance) for the getting or preſeruing of their honour and aduancement. They willingly neglect the chiefe priuiledges and prerogatiues of the Sonnes of God, and onely plot and take paines in aſpiring to their ambitious ends. They are apt to deſpiſe the exerciſes of religion, and to contemne the meanes of their ſaluation, as publike prayer, and the miniſtery of the Word, as better befitting the vulgar people, than ſuch as they, who are ſo highly aduanced aboue the common ſort. Or if they heare the Word, they will not regard the threatnings of Gods iudgements againſt ſinne, nor ſtoope to take vpon them the yoke of Ieſus Chriſt, ſubmitting themſelues to bee guided and ruled by his ordinance, as being a thing too baſe for their honour and greatneſſe. Finally, they skorne to goe in that onely way, which leadeth to eternall life and happineſſe; but chuſe by-waies of their owne, as though they diſdained to goe to Heauen in vulgar company, or to bee ſaued after a common faſhion. For the Lord hath appointed, that all who deſire to attaine vnto heauenly happineſſe, ſhould take paines, in trauelling the narrow and afflicted way, and in entring the low and ſtrait gate that leadeth to life; but they refuſe this difficult courſe, and chuſe the broad way of eaſe and libertie, if not licentiouſneſſe. Our Sauiour hath told them, that they who will find reſt to their ſoules, muſt ſtoope to take his yoke vpon them, and learne to imitate his example, who was meeke and lowly in heart; whereas they thinke to come to the glory of his Kingdome, by that glorious way, in which ambitious pride hath ſet them, carrying their heads on high, and walking with ſtretched out necks; and that which is worſe, with hearts ſwollen with pride, and full of vaine-glory, and haughtie inſolence. So elſewhere hee teacheth them, that to ſuch as are like vnto little children belongeth the Kingdome of Heauen: and yet more plainly, that except thoſe whoſe who are high minded & ambitious bee conuerted, and become as little children (namely, in meekeneſſe and humilitie) they ſhall neuer enter into the Kingdome of Heauen; and contrariwiſe, whoſoeuer ſhall humble himſelfe as a little child, the ſame is the greateſt in the Kingdome of Heauen. Thus alſo hee ſaith, that hee who exalteth himſelfe ſhall be brought low, and hee that humbleth himſelfe ſhall bee exalted. Fooliſh therefore is ambition, which euer aſpireth to riſe, and alwayes neglecteth the meanes of riſing to the chiefe preferments; but when it mounteth to the clouds, and deſireth moſt to touch the Heauens, euen then it is moſt deiected, one foot ſtill holding poſſeſſion of Hell in the behalfe of the whole body. And vnhappie (as one ſaith) is the the ambitious man, which knoweth not how to compaſſe the greateſt things, but ſeeketh to waxe great by ſmall trifles, and to bee onely little in that which is greateſt, and moſt deſirable. For whereas it is the onely way to true greatneſſe and glory, to be humble and lowly in a mans owne eyes, becauſe (as our Sauiour hath taught vs) euen Publicans and ſinners ſhall enter ſooner into Gods Kingdome, than proud Phariſies, though they bee neuer ſo much magnified amongſt men; they labour to aduance themſelues vnto honours, by pride and ambitious aſpiring, which when they haue them, are ſcarce worth their labour; as if when Kingdomes and true Monarchies were offered, and in dealing to thoſe who would heartily deſire and ſue for them, men ſhould vtterly neglect theſe chiefe preferments, and contend one with another, who for an houre ſhould bee King in a play. But if wee would auoid this folly, and not bee ouertaken with this worldly dotage, let vs labour to attaine thoſe chiefe preferments, and heauenly glory, by going in that way of humilitie which Chriſt hath firſt traced before vs: and as thoſe, who raiſe the higheſt building, doe firſt lay the loweſt and deepeſt foundation, or elſe it will ſoone ſinke, and come to ruine; ſo if wee meane to become ſuch Temples, as are fit for God eternally to dwell in, let vs begin our building on the low foundation of humilitie. For though

Matth.7.13.14.

Matth.11.29.

Matth.18.

Bernard.

Matth.

though our countrie bee high, and ſituate on the mountaine of Gods holineſſe, yet the way that leadeth to it, is low and humble; and therefore let vs not fooliſhly refuſe the way, if we thinke to come to the end of our iourney, nor thinke to leape from the hill of pride, to the hill of glory, which is impoſſible, in reſpect of their great diſtance; but let vs firſt deſcend into the valley of humility, that afterwards we may aſcend into the mountaine of glorie.

Thus alſo riches immoderately loued are notable impediments in our ſpirituall iourney, and a chiefe meanes, and (as it were) a heauie clog to keepe vs from aſcending into thoſe heauenly ioyes. So our Sauiour Chriſt ſaith vnto his Diſciples, Verily I ſay vnto you, that a rich man ſhall hardly enter into the Kingdome of Heauen. Yea and if they truſt and ſet their hearts vpon them, he affirmeth, that it is eaſier for a camell to goe through the eye of a needle, than for a rich man to enter into the Kingdome of God. And the Apoſtle Paul agreeing with his Lord and Maſter, ſaith, that the couetous perſon which is an idolater, hath no inheritance in the Kingdome of Chriſt, and of God. And this commeth to paſſe, firſt, becauſe few of thoſe who abound in riches, are effectually called, either becauſe God paſſeth by them, and preferreth the poore before them; or becauſe when they are called, they refuſe to come, being wholly taken vp in their worldly imployments. Of the former, the Apoſtle Paul ſaith, that God hath not called the mightie in the world, but the weake and helpleſſe. And more plainly the Apoſtle Iames ſaith, that we are not to reſpect the rich more than the poore (vnleſſe alſo they be rich in faith and good works) becauſe God hath choſen the poore of this world, that they ſhould bee rich in faith, and heires of the Kingdome, which he hath promiſed to them that loue him. Whereupon an ancient concludeth, that if riches were abſolutelie good, God would not haue made ſpeciall choice of the poore to ſtand before him in his owne family. And if ſometimes hee make choice of rich men, it is no wonder; for it is not, that they ſhould ſtill hold in their hands their great abundance, but as a wiſe and mercifull Phyſician, hee maketh choice of theſe patients, that he may purge them of their ſuperfluities, and free them from that ſwelling which maketh them altogether vnfit to enter into Gods Kingdome. Of the other wee haue an example in them, who were inuited to the Kings ſupper, who were ſo imployed in their worldly affaires, that they had no leiſure to come. Whereby is ſignified, that they who ſet their hearts vpon the earthly Mammon haue not ſo much as any deſire to vſe the meanes of their owne ſaluation; but when they are by Gods Meſſengers inuited and perſwaded hereunto, they pretend worldly excuſes, and will not hearken vnto them.

As therefore the ſhip which is too heauily laden, is in greateſt hazard, & moſt vnlikely to come ſafely to the deſired Hauen; becauſe it is in danger to be purſued by Pirats, who are ready to ſinke her, and is not ſo fit to brooke the Seas, or indure a tempeſt, vnleſſe ſome of her burthen be caſt ouer-boord, and ſhe lightned of her ſurcharging load: ſo theſe worldly rich men, who are oppreſſed with the cares of this life, and euen ouerburthened with ſuperfluous riches, are in great danger neuer to come ſafely into the Hauen of reſt, becauſe the ſpirituall Pirats are more eager in purſuing them, and they more vnable to indure the tempeſt of tentations, vnleſſe they caſt ſome of their ſtore vpon the face of the waters, as the Wiſe man exhorteth; and beſtow their ſuperfluitie (which is vnto them as a troubleſome burthen) in releeuing the poore members of Ieſus Chriſt. In which reſpect, our Sauiour compareth riches to the bunch on the Camels backe, which maketh thoſe, who ſet their hearts vpon them, altogether vnfit to enter into the narrow and ſtrait gate, that openeth into the ioyes of Heauen. And as the Camell hath not onely a naturall bunch, but alſo an accidentall load, both which hinder him from entring into any ſtrait paſſage: ſo theſe couetous Worldlings haue the naturall bunch of carnall concupiſcence, and the accidentall load, both of worldly riches, and of the ſins which they haue committed in compaſſing or poſſeſſing them; the one whereof they muſt whether they will or no lay aſide in death; the other, vnleſſe they ſhake off their burthen by true repentance, ſhall accompany them to iudgement, and hauing the waight of Gods wrath added vnto them, ſhall as an intolerable load preſſe them into Hell. For as it is impoſſible for a man ouer-burthened to climbe to the top of a ſteepe Mountaine, vnleſſe he lay his loade aſide, or haue ſome aſſiſtants to carrie it with him; ſo is it much more impoſſible, being loaded with riches, and that guilt and ſinne which vſually accompanieth them, to aſcend into the high mountaine of Gods holineſſe, vnleſſe we lay aſide our burthen, or commit it to the poore, as our Porters to carry it with vs; making with Zacheus reſtitution, to thoſe whom we haue wronged, and imparting of that which remaineth a liberall ſhare to charitable vſes. In which reſpect (as one obſerueth) riches in the Latine tongue are fitly called impedimenta, or incumbrances, becauſe nothing more than they vſually hindreth men from going on in the way of grace, nor from attaining vnto the goale of glory, they being commonly to men like burthens to thoſe that runne a race, which keepe them from making any ſpeed, and tire them before they

Eccleſ.11.1.

Sen.Epiſt.87.

can

Chryſoſt. hom. 7. de pœniten.

can come to the end. And as thoſe who haue ſhooes farre too wide for their feet; or garments, which being farre too ſide, traile on the ground, are altogether vnfit to trauell a long journey; ſo thoſe who haue ſuperfluous riches, and much more than is fit for their place and calling, are as much hindred in their journey, which ſhould bring them vnto Heauen. In regard of which impoſſibilitie, for thoſe which haue ſet their hearts vpon riches, to attaine vnto eternall happineſſe, our Sauiour Chriſt pronounceth this fearefull woe againſt them; Woe be vnto you that are rich, for yee haue receiued your conſolation. For in ſuch what greater miſery can befall a man, than to gaine Gold and loſe his God? to haue great poſſeſſions on earth, by making forfeiture of his heauenly patrimony? to abound with theſe temporarie treaſures, which are ſubject to ſo many caſualties, and ſure to be taken away by death, by making ſale of thoſe euerlaſting riches and vnſpeakable ioyes, which Chriſt, by his precious bloudſhed hath purchaſed for vs? And therefore let vs, as our Sauiour exhorteth vs, make vs friends of the riches of iniquitie, that when we ſhall want, they may receiue vs into euerlaſting habitations. Let vs like wiſe Merchants ſailing in this worldly Sea, caſt our goods vpon the face of the waters, being endangered in theſe boiſterous tempeſts, that ſo wee may ſaue our owne liues, and arriue ſafe at the Hauen of happineſſe, leſt the curſe of Simon Magus doe light vpon vs, Thy money periſh with thee. Eſpecially conſidering, that whereas that doth periſh which they caſt away, ours thus beſtowed on charitable vſes, ſhall be reſtored when wee come to our iournies end an hundred fold, as our Sauiour hath promiſed. Let vs lay aſide our golden fetters, and deere-bought clogs, ſeeing wee are to run the ſpirituall race for the crowne of glory; and not ſo much conſider their coſtly prizes, and worldly value, as how much they hinder vs in aſcending into our heauenly Country: & let vs not intangle our ſelues with this lime of ſuperfluities, but onely haue ſo much vſe of theſe earthly things, as is requiſite for our preſent neceſſities. Let vs caſt away theſe ſuperfluous burthens, which being kept, may make vs caſt-awayes, and doe that for the feare of God, which wiſe Merchants doe for feare of the Sea, and be as readie to leaue our vnprofitable load of riches for the ſafeguard of our ſoules, as they are for the preſeruing of their momentany liues. And let vs not goe ſtooping and groaning vnder this vnſupportable waight, and be hindred thereby from finiſhing with ioy our iourney vnto our owne Country; ſeeing we may haue the poore to helpe vs, and eaſe vs of our loads. For if we cannot, being ouerburthened, trauell farre on euen ground; how much more vnable ſhall we be to mount vp therewith vnto the hie mountaine of Gods holineſſe? If we cannot runne an earthly race, being hindred with ſuch clogs; how much leſſe ſhall we be able to runne the ſpirituall race that leadeth to heauen, when our hearts are oppreſſed with this worldly waight?

Luke 6. 24.

Luke 16. 9.

Matth. 19. 29.

Bernard. Ser. in Prou. 3. 13.

Finally, voluptuous pleaſures, and euen thoſe delights which be lawful in themſelues, are, being immoderately loued, notable hindrances of our heauenly happineſſe. For they who ſet their hearts on the vaine pleaſures of the world, haue no affection to the pleaſures which are at Gods right hand for euermore. They who take their felicitie in carnall delights, neglect and contemne the euerlaſting ioyes which are reſerued in Gods kingdome, vſing all wicked and vnlawfull meanes for the compaſſing of their voluptuous pleaſures, though they make hereby a forfeiture of eternall glory; and careleſly, yea ſometime maliciouſly, neglecting all meanes whereby they may be aſſured of the ſaluation of their ſoules, and of the fruition of thoſe heauenly ioyes, becauſe they eſteeme them not in compariſon of their worldly delights. Or if they haue any purpoſe of going in the way which leadeth to happineſſe, they are not able, for being pampered with pleaſures, they are too purſie to trauell in this weariſome pilgrimage. And if by forcible reaſons and perſwaſions, they are moued to ſet forward in this iourney, they are preſently diſcouraged; for being wholly addicted to eaſe and delight, they will neuer indure the ſtrait, rough, and vnpleaſant way which is full of the thornes of afflictions, and briars of tribulations; but will preſently with Lots wife looke back to their delightfull Sodome, with a deſire to enioy againe theſe pleaſures of ſinne, though they laſt but for a ſeaſon. Beſides, the Lord will not giue this chiefe iewell of eternall happineſſe to theſe voluptuous wantons, nor caſt this precious pearle before theſe filthie ſwine, who taking al their delights to wallow in the puddle of iniquity, will not ſticke contemptuouſly to tread it vnder their filthie feete. And therefore what poſſibilitie is there of their ſaluation, ſeeing they are neither willing, nor able, to ſeeke after this eternall happineſſe; nor the Lord willing to giue it without ſeeking, to ſuch idle or ſkornefull ſluggards as doe not think it worth their paines? And thus it appeareth that theſe worldly things immoderately loued, are notable impediments to hinder vs from the attaining of eternall life, and thoſe euerlaſting ioyes of Gods kingdome. The conſideration whereof ſhould weane our harts from theſe worthleſſe, and (through our corruption) harmefull vanities, that we may the better ſeeke them, or the meanes whereby wee may be aſſured of thoſe heauenly excellencies. And ſeeing when they are faſtned, and (as it were) glued vnto vs with carnall loue, they hinder vs from attaining vnto this eternall happineſſe; let vs either hold theſe things with ſuch contempt and careleſſe reſpect, that wee may with eaſe lay them aſide, when wee finde that they hinder vs in our iourney towards our heauenly countrey: or if they offer to take faſter hold, and to intangle vs in the ſnares of ſinne, ſo as wee cannot goe forward in our courſe of godlineſſe; let vs, as the Apoſtle exhorteth vs, caſt away euery thing that preſſeth downe, and the ſinne that hangeth ſo faſt on, and let vs runne with patience the race that is ſet before vs, that ſo we may obtaine the crowne of glorie: for if euery man that prooueth maſteries abſtaineth from all things, which might hinder him; doing all this to obtaine a corruptible crowne; how much more ſhould we follow the like practice, to obtaine that glorious crowne of bleſſedneſſe, which is vncorruptible? And if, as our Sauiour Chriſt hath taught vs, we muſt pluck out our right eye, and cut off our right hand and foote, if they offend vs, and by cauſing vs to fall into ſin, doe hinder vs in that Chriſtian courſe, which would bring vs to eternall happineſſe; becauſe it is better to enter into euerlaſting life halt, or maimed, or with one eye than hauing two hands, two feete, and two eyes, to be caſt into euerlaſting fire; then how much rather ſhould wee part willingly with theſe worldly riches, pleaſures, and preferments, when by vnlawfull getting, or keeping them, they will caſt vs into hell, and for euer depriue vs of the ioyes of heauen? for better it is to enter into theſe neuer ending ioyes, poore, contemptible, afflicted, and full of ſorrowes, than hauing abounded in riches, glorie, and carnal pleaſures, to be afterwards throwne headlong into thoſe helliſh torments, and vnquenchable flames.

Secondly, the more we abound with theſe earthly things in this life, the greater ſhall be our reckoning in the life to come; the greater alſo ſhall be their puniſhment, who are not able to yeeld a iuſt account to our great Lord and Maſter at this laſt audit, if they haue not by faith & repentance whileſt they continued here, gotten a generall acquittance for all that wherein they come ſhort in this their reckoning. For according to the number of thoſe talents which haue beene committed vnto vs by God, the Lord will require a proportionable increaſe; and the more gifts we haue receiued from him, the more glorie hee expecteth from vs; the greater his benefits haue beene which he hath beſtowed vpon vs in this world, the greater loue, thankfulneſſe, and obedience will he require at our hands. So that then it will not ſerue the turne, that wee returne vnto our Lord and Maſter the gaine of one or two talents, if wee haue receiued fiue, or ten; but they who haue receiued fiue, muſt with them gaine other fiue; and they who haue receiued ten, muſt increaſe them to ten more, if euer they meane to heare that ſweete and comfortable ſaying: Well done good and faithfull ſeruant, thou haſt beene faithfull in little, I will make thee ruler ouer much, enter into thy maſters ioy. O then what a terrible day will this be to thoſe who cannot make euen their accounts, nor yeeld an anſwerable increaſe to their great Lord and Maſter, when in the preſence of his Saints and Angels, he ſhall call them before him to giue a reckoning? what a day of trembling and feare will this be to thoſe vnprofitable ſeruants, who haue hid their maſters talent in a napkin, ſo as they cannot returne it with any increaſe? And how much more horrible then will it bee to them, who haue riotouſly waſted, and ſpent their Lords rich talents, in their wicked and worldly courſes, wherby they haue diſhonoured their maſter and hurt their fellow ſeruants? For what ſhame and confuſion of face ſhall they bee poſſeſſed with, who haue receiued liberall wages from the Lord, that they might be the better incouraged and inabled to doe him ſeruice, when their Iudge ſhall tell them, and their owne conſcience ſhall witnes againſt them, that they haue abuſed this rich bountie of God in the ſeruice of ſinne and Satan, and ſpent his rich treaſures vpon their owne luſts? How will they then deſire the Hils to fal vpon and couer them from their wrathfull Iudge, that together with them they may hide their reckoning? What would they then giue that they had imployed their proſperity for the ſetting forth of Gods glorie, and had vſed all his gifts to the honour of the giuer? And becauſe they haue failed hereof, how many Worlds, if they had them, would they part with, that they might haue but one day more to liue, wherein they might ſet ſtraight their reckonings by true repentance, and faith in Ieſus Chriſt? But then alaſſe it will be too late, ſeeing the acceptable time and day of ſaluation is now paſt, and now their teares, groanes, ſorrowes, and lamentations, ſhall be beginnings and parts of their helliſh puniſhments; which if they had beene vſed in time, and improoued to the beſt in this life, would, through Gods gratious and free promiſes, and the precious merits of Ieſus Chriſt, haue procured vnto them certaine aſſurance of the pardon of all their ſinnes, reconciliation with God, and of the eternall inheritance, and neuer ending ioyes of his heauenly kingdome.

Matth. 25. 21.

Qui plurima habet pauper eſt. Quare? quia debet. Quantum inquis? Omnia: niſi forte iudicas intereſſe, vtrum aliquid ab homine, an à Deo mutuum ſumpſerit, Senec. Epiſt. 87.

§. Sect. 8. That honours, riches, & pleaſures doe but increaſe our bils of accounts.

But let vs for the better clearing of this point inſiſt in the ſpeciall examples. And firſt for Honours; the more they are multiplyed vpon men, the greater account they haue to make at the day of iudgement; for they haue receiued honour from God, that they might rereturne honour to him; they are by ſpeciall priuiledge made glorious before men, that they might ſhine before them in an holy example, and glorifie God more than others, whileſt as precedents of godlineſſe and righteouſneſſe, they draw on all their inferiours to a Chriſtian imitation. Finally, they haue beene aduanced by God to power and authoritie, that they might in his place, and as his Deputies, rule their inferiours, euen as the Lord himſelfe would rule, if hee were vpon the earth, countenancing the good, and diſcouraging the euill, rewarding vertue, and puniſhing vice, defending the innocent, and ſuppreſſing thoſe who are vnjuſt and injurious, patronizing and maintayning juſtice, and diſcountenancing vnjuſtice, and ſinne. Of which the further off they haue beene from yeelding any reckoning in this life, the more ſtrait account will the Lord take of them in the life to come. And therefore if they haue not only failed in all theſe duties, but wilfully neglected them, and vſed all their credit and power to quite contrarie purpoſes; as for example, if hauing beene honoured by God, they haue diſhonoured him, contemning his ſeruice themſelues, and hindring others who would haue performed it; if they haue ſcorned Religion, and made but a jeaſt of godlineſſe; if they haue made no conſcience of ſwearing and forſwearing, curſing and blaſpheming; and ſpent all their liues in riotous and voluptuous liuing; if they haue not only themſelues thus offended God, but haue made their faults ſcandalous and their ſins exemplary, drawing on their inferiours to the imitation of their wickedneſſe: If being in the place of God they haue ruled and gouerned, as the Deuill himſelfe would doe if hee were in a humane ſhape, diſcountenancing thoſe who are good, and incouraging thoſe who are euill, puniſhing vertue, and rewarding vice, defending the faultie, and ſupplanting the innocent, and either for fauour, friends, rewards, or reſpect of perſons, vpholding injuſtice and oppreſſion, and ouer-throwing juſtice and right; then ſhall they haue a moſt fearefull reckoning to make at the day of judgement, and wiſh rather that they had liued in reproach and contempt, than that hauing had all theſe Honours and Preferments, they ſhould bee brought to ſuch a dreadfull account. And thus they who haue moſt abounded in riches, ſhal haue alſo their reckoning hereby much increaſed; for the Lord hath beſtowed vpon men theſe talents, not that they ſhould keepe them hid in a napkin, but that they ſhould put them out to profit and aduantage; as when they employ them to the glory of God, in furthering the meanes of his worſhip and ſeruice, in releeuing the poore members of Ieſus Chriſt, and in performing the works of mercie and charitie. And therefore in what a fearefull eſtate ſhall they be at this day, who haue vtterly neglected theſe religious and Chriſtian vſes; and contrariwiſe haue abuſed their riches, by either ſpending them vpon their owne luſts, in belly cheare, and brauery, or imploying them as helpes to hinder Gods worſhip, and to oppreſſe and injure the poore with all crueltie and tyranny? Finally, what a fearefull reckoning haue they to make, who haue ſpent the greateſt part of their liues in voluptuous pleaſures, as though they had quite forgotten the end wherefore they came into the World; as in ſurfeiting and drunkennes, chambring and wantonneſſe, gaming and reuelling, playing and ſporting; not caring to take any wicked courſe for the compaſſing of their pleaſures, nor making conſcience of any delight, whether it bee lawfull or vnlawfull, ſo it may pleaſe their carnall appetite. O what reward can theſe men expect in this day of the Lord, when their owne conſciences ſhall tell them, that they haue ſpent all their liues in the ſeruice of ſin and Satan, and in fulfilling the luſts of their owne fleſh? What account will they then make to their Iudge, when being demanded how they haue ſpent their precious time, their ſtrength, and wealth, which in plentiful manner they had receiued at the hands of God, they ſhall be able to make no other anſwer, but that they haue conſumed them all in voluptuous vanities, and vtterly neglected the ſeruice of their Creator and continuall preſeruer; ſpending all their daies either in idlenes, or luxuriouſnes, and wantonnes, which they ſhould haue beſtowed in glorifying God, and in getting aſſurance of their owne ſaluation; waſting their ſtrength in obeying their fleſhly luſts, which ſhould haue beene imployed in doing ſeruice to their Maker and Redeemer; and beſtowing all their riches in ſuperfluous delights, ſuffering the poore to ſtarue for want of bread to feed them, and of clothes to couer their nakedneſſe.

Laſtly, as the abundance of theſe worldly things, abuſed through immoderate loue, increaſeth the reckoning of thoſe who haue had them, ſo do they alſo increaſe their puniſhments and helliſh condemnation, when as they are altogether vnable to ſet ſtraight their reckoning, being called to giue their account before their Iudge. For it is juſt with God, that thoſe who in this life haue abuſed the greateſt proſperity, ſhould in the life to come endure the greateſt miſerie: that they who are moſt deepely indebted to Gods bountie for his benefits, ſhould haue the ſtraiteſt impriſonment, when hauing riotouſly and vnthankfully ſpent the Lords talents, they haue nothing to pay: that they who haue moſt diſhonored God in his owne gifts, ſhould proportionablie receiue the greateſt

[illegible] Bernard. [illegible]

Luc.16.19,25.

§. Sect. 3.
That honours, riches, & pleaſures doe but increaſe our bils of accounts.

greateſt meaſure of puniſhment: and finally, that they who hauing receiued the moſt liberal wages haue performed worſt ſeruice, ſhould be beaten with moſt ſtripes. So that at this day the abundance of theſe worldly things ſhall be but (as it were) the greater pile of wood, which being ſet on fire with the flame of Gods burning wrath, ſhal eternally conſume them who haue thus vnthankfully abuſed them; and their burning concupiſcence after theſe earthly vanities, ſhall but increaſe the furious heate of thoſe Helliſh flames, which ſhall torment them with tortures that are intolerable, and yet endleſſe and euerlaſting. So the greater Honours men haue had in earth, the greater then ſhall be their ſhame and confuſion, ignominie and reproach, if they haue abuſed them to the diſhonour of God and oppreſſion of his ſeruants; for the mightie ſhall bee mightily tormented: And he who is Lord ouer all will ſpare no perſon, neither ſhall hee feare any greatneſſe; for he hath made the ſmall and great, and careth for all alike; but for the mightie abideth the ſorer triall. To which purpoſe one ſaith, that the higher a wicked man liuing in his ſinnes is exalted, the more fearefully ſhall be ouer-whelmed with grieuous puniſhments; for when that which aduanced him is vaniſhed, that remayneth which is puniſhed. He who is without deſert honoured in the way, ſhalbe damned in the end of his journey; and he who commeth to deſtruction by the proſperitie of this preſent life, paſſeth (as it were) by ſweet Medowes, into the dungeon of darkneſſe, or place of execution. Thus alſo thoſe who haue abounded with abuſed riches, ſhall in the world to come exceed in puniſhment; and therfore our Sauiour pronounceth a woe againſt them, becauſe alreadie in this world they had receiued all their conſolation. And the Apoſtle propheſying of their future miſerie, ſaith; Goe to you rich men; weepe and howle, for your miſeries that ſhall come vpon you: your riches are corrupt, and your garments are moth-eaten: your gold and ſiluer is cankered, and the ruſt of them ſhall be a witneſſe againſt you, and ſhall eat your fleſh as it were fire: you haue heaped vp treaſure for the laſt dayes. Behold the hire of the labourers which haue reaped your fields (which is of you kept backe by fraud) crieth, and the cries of them which haue reaped, are entred into the eares of the Lord of Hoſts; yee haue liued in pleaſure on the earth and in wantonneſſe, yee haue nouriſhed your hearts as in a day of ſlaughter. So that the greater riches, the greater torments, if either they haue beene vniuſtly gotten, or ill kept; in which reſpect wel may they be called thornes, which not only in this life pricke thoſe that hold them, wound them with tentations, and pierce them thorow with many ſorrowes; but alſo in the life to come ſerue as thornes to kindle the fire of Hell, and to make it burne with greater heat and furie. Which that wee may preuent, let vs follow the counſel of the Sonne of Syrach; Loſe (ſaith he) or forgoe thy money, for thy brothers and neighbours ſake, and let it not ruſt vnder a ſtone to thy deſtruction. Finally, thoſe who haue ſpent their liues in vnlawfull pleaſures, or haue abuſed thoſe which are lawfull, through their immoderation and exceſſe, either in their delights, or in their loue, ſhall haue their ſorrowes and torments the more increaſed at the day of Gods appearing to judge the quicke and dead. In which reſpect our Sauiour pronounceth a fearefull woe againſt voluptuous Worldlings; Woe be vnto you (ſaith hee) that are full, for yee ſhall hunger; woe be vnto you that now laugh; for yee ſhall waile and weepe. So the Apoſtle Peter ſaith, that they ſhall receiue the wages of vnrighteouſneſſe, which count it pleaſure to liue deliciouſly for a ſeaſon. And the Apoſtle aſſigneth this as one reaſon, why the wealthy in the World had cauſe to weepe and howle, in regard of the miſeries that ſhould come vpon them, becauſe they had liued in pleaſure on the earth, and in wantonneſſe. To which purpoſe one ſaith, that looke how many carnall and vnlawfull delights worldlings haue had in this life, and ſo many grieuous puniſhments they ſhall indure when God ſhall take deſerued vengeance on them in the life to come; for thence are we puniſhed, whence we are wickedly delighted: and whereas the pleaſure paſſeth as being momentanie, the ſinne and puniſhment remaine as being euerlaſting. An example whereof wee haue in the rich Glutton, vnto whom Abraham ſaith, that becauſe in his life he had receiued his pleaſures, being clothed in purple and fine linnen, and faring deliciouſly euery day, therefore hee was now tormented in Hell torments, and hauing ſinned in ſurfeiting and gluttonie to pleaſe his palate and carnal appetite, he could not now obtaine ſo much as a drop of water to coole his tongue. So likewiſe in the whore of Babylon; vpon whom the Lord paſſeth this dreadfull ſentence, that in as much as ſhe glorified her ſelfe, and liued in pleaſure, ſhee ſhould proportionably haue ſo much torment and ſorrow giuen vnto her. By which examples let vs take warning, carefully auoyding theſe ſweet poyſons, which though they be long before they worke, yet ſhall bee moſt deadly in operation; let vs not thirſt after this pleaſing milke, though it be offered vnto vs in a Lordly diſh; ſeeing in the end it will bring vs into that deepe ſleepe of eternall death: and finally let vs ſtop our eares againſt the bewitching tunes of theſe ſweete ſinging Syrens, which will make vs runne our ſelues on the rockes of deſtruction, and to be ſwallowed vp in a Sea of mi-

Eccleſ.29.10.

Luke 6.25.

2.Pet.2.13.

Quot fuerint oblectamenta mala, tot erunt tormenta dira in pœna: nam inde punimur vnde male delectamur: tranſit voluptas & peccatum remanet, Bernard. meditat.ca.13.

Luk.16.19,25.

Apocal.18.7.

ſery and perdition which is endleſſe and intolerable.

§. Sect. 10. The concluſion diſſwading from the loue of the World; vpon the former conſiderations.

Marke 8.36.

Finally, ſeeing theſe worldly things immoderately loued, and ouer-valued aboue their worth, doe not only in this life bring vpon vs ſo many and great euils, but alſo in the life to come depriue vs of our heauenly ioyes, increaſe the bils of our accounts at the day of iudgement, and plunge vs into eternall death and condemnation; let vs as wee tender the ſaluation of our ſoules, or feare that dreadfull reckoning at the day of iudgement, or would auoid thoſe helliſh and euerlaſting torments, weane our hearts and affections from the immoderate loue of the World and worldly vanities; For what will it profit vs to gaine the whole world, and loſe our owne ſoules? What will it auaile vs that we haue beene honourable vpon earth, and aduanced to the chiefe places and preferments, when as all theſe momentany vanities being paſſed as a ſhadow, wee find our ſelues inglorious in Gods ſight, depriued of the glory of his Kingdome, and couered with endleſſe ſhame and diſgrace? What ioy ſhall we then take to remember, that all men haue crept and crouched vnto vs, when as we ſhall be diſdained as vile perſons, and laughed to ſcorne as fooles, by the pooreſt and ſimpleſt of Gods Saints, yea inſulted ouer, and euen deſpitefully trodden vnder foot by the vgly, curſed & damned Spirits? What delight ſhall we take to thinke, that we haue ſate in the higheſt places, and haue dwelt in ſtately Palaces, and Prince-like houſes, when as being turned out of all, we ſhall be bound hand and foot, and caſt into vtter darkneſſe, and into the dungeon of Hell? What comfort ſhall we take in our heapes of Gold, and great Lands and Lordſhips which wee haue left behind vs; when as wee feele by lamentable experience, that we haue by this momentany riches loſt the euerlaſting treaſures of Gods Kingdome; and haue treaſured vp a fearefull meaſure of Gods wrath and condemnation; which for euer ſhall ſeaze vpon and torment vs? What delight ſhall wee take in our paſſed pleaſures, ſports, and paſtimes; when as now being vaniſhed, nothing remayneth but howling and yelling, weeping and gnaſhing of teeth? What pleaſure ſhall wee haue to thinke of our full Tables, and delicate drinkes; when as now by moſt earneſt entreatie, we cannot obtaine ſo much as a drop of water to coole our thirſt? What will it profit vs to haue for a moment enjoyed ſweet Gardens, pleaſant Orchards, delightfull walkes, and melodious Muſicke, when as now hauing abandoned vs, wee are terrified with Gods wrath, and ſcorched in the vnquenchable flames of Hell? O then let vs remember this in time that wee may preuent it for euer; and whileſt the Lord giueth vs ſpace to make our free choice, let vs preferre in our iudgements, and ſeek after with all our hearts and affections, thoſe heauenly and eternall ioyes, before theſe earthly and momentanie vanities; and ſo weane our hearts and affections from the loue of the World and worldly things, that we doe not vſe any vnlawfull meanes for the getting or keeping them; and ſo hazard the loſſe of our glorious and euerlaſting inheritance, and endanger bodie and ſoule to thoſe intolerable and neuer ending torments: and that the rather because after death there is no repentance, nor hope of recouerie after ſome triall and taſte of theſe miſeries, ſeeing out of Hell there is no redemption, nor Goale-deliuery out of this priſon of vtter darkneſſe.

The end of the ſecond Booke.

THE CHRISTIAN WARFARE.

The ſecond Part.

SHEWING AND PROVING, THAT THOVGH THE WORLD AND WORDLY things, were in themſelues eſteemeable, and worthy loue: yet not in reſpect of vs who are pilgrimes on Earth, and Citizens of Heauen.

The third Booke.

Chap. I.

That we ſhould not ſet our hearts on the world and worldly things, becauſe we are but pilgrimes and ſtrangers, on Earth.

Hauing through the bleſſing of God and his gracious aſſiſtance, handled the firſt generall part of this treatiſe; it now followeth that I proceed to the ſecond: And that as I haue formerly ſhewed, that the World and worldly things are not much to bee eſteemed and affected in themſelues; ſo I now alſo proue, that though in their owne worth, and in reſpect of thoſe who are Citizens of the World they were of ſome value; yet not vnto vs who profeſſe the name of Chriſt; and that in a twofold reſpect; firſt, becauſe wee are but ſtrangers and pilgrimes on Earth; and ſecondly, becauſe we are Citizens of Heauen, and heires of farre better hopes. The former may appeare by the acknowledgement of the Saints and ſeruants of God from time to time. Of whom it is ſaid generally, that they confeſſed that they were ſtrangers and pilgrimes on the earth. So the Apoſtle ſaith in the name of all the Saints, that they had here no continuing City, but that they ſought one to come. And more eſpecially hee ſaith of Abraham the Father of the faithfull, that he abode in the land of promiſe as in a ſtrange countrie, as one that dwelt in tents with Iſaac and Iacob, heires with him of the ſame promiſe.

Thus Iacob both in the behalfe of himſelfe and his anceſtors calleth the dayes of their liues the dayes of their pilgrimage. And holy Dauid in many places confeſſeth the ſame, both of himſelfe, and his Fathers alſo: Wee are (ſaith he) ſtrangers before thee and ſoiourners like all our Fathers, our daies are like the ſhadow vpon the Earth, and there is no abiding. The which as it is manifeſt by the Scriptures, ſo alſo may it be demonſtrated by euident reaſon; for that is to bee eſteemed a mans countrie, where his chiefe friends and kindred remaine, where his liuing and ſubſtance doe lie, where he is to ſpend the moſt part of his life, where hee hath moſt contentment, and beſt entertainment. But the faithfull haue all their kindred in Heauen, ſauing ſome few who are pilgrimes with them on the Earth; for there is not onely their heauenly Father, Chriſt Ieſus their elder Brother, with all their anceſtors who haue formerly liued, but innumerable other Brethren and Siſters, who are together with them Children to the ſame ſpirituall Father; there alſo they haue their chiefe treaſures and patrimonies, euen an inheritance vndefiled, and that fadeth not away, as the Apoſtle ſpeaketh; there they are to ſpend all their liues, ſauing a few dayes in which they are to finiſh their pilgrimage, which though they were equall to the age of Methuſelah yet were they

Gen.47.9.

1.Chron.29.15. Pſal.39.12.& 119.19.

1.Pet.1.4.

not ſo much as a minute in compariſon of eternitie [illegible] certain[illegible] there all teares ſhall bee wiped away from their eyes, and there they ſhall haue manſion houſes, inheritances, crownes of glory, and fulneſſe of ioy for euermore; whereas contrariwiſe the World affoordeth them nothing but vaine and worthleſſe trifles, vncertaine poſſeſſions, and vnprofitable gifts; and that with the mixture of innumerable miſeries, croſſes, loſſes, troubles, diſcontentments, afflictions, and malicious perſecutions. The which is not to be vnderſtood of all men generally; for as for worldlings they haue here their Citie and their paradiſe, but of the faithfull onely, who haue renounced earthly pleaſures, carnall luſts, and worldly concupiſcence. And (as one ſaith) hee is to bee reputed a ſtranger vpon earth, who can truely ſay that his conuerſation is in Heauen, who hath his portion in the Lord, who can inwardly grieue that he liueth but too long in this place of pilgrimage and baniſhment, who is tired with the tediouſneſſe of this life, and is glutted and loatheth the length and prolixity of his earthly habitation, it being contrary to his deſire, and enforcing him often to crie out, woe bee to them that dwell vpon the Earth; who feareth not to bee diſſolued, and if hee be, preſumeth that hee ſhall be with Chriſt. Hee is a Citizen of the Saints who hath laid vp his treaſure in Heauen. For this man departing out of this earthly Egypt, doth not deſire to returne againe, neither doth he feare vnrecouerable old age, or the very confines of death. Hee taketh no care for the building of new barnes, for the ſtoring vp of his corne; ſeeing hee is here to liue the life of a ſtranger, but being onely rich in fruitfull vertues, he gathereth thoſe things together, which neither old age can deſtroy, nor death take away.

Ambroſ.in. Pſa.118, Serm.3. Phil.3.20.

Pſal.120.5. Phil.1.23.

§.Sect.2. That this ſhould weane our hearts from the world, becauſe we liue as ſtrangers in it.

Now this conſideration that wee are not in our owne countrie, but remaine for a while vpon the earth as pilgrims and ſtrangers, ſhould ſerue as an effectuall reaſon to weane our hearts from the loue of the World and worldly vanities, and to place them on Heauen, and on heauenly ioyes, which is our owne countrie and place of reſidence. For, as we know, pilgrimes and ſtrangers being trauelling in a far countrie, doe not ſet their hearts on the things which they ſee by the way, becauſe they are quickly to leaue them; but their minds and meditations doe wholly runne vpon their owne countrie, and their hearts are fixed on thoſe pleaſures, profits and preferments, which after their iourney is finiſhed, they ſhall there enjoy for terme of life. And therefore if wee bee pilgrims on earth, we muſt follow their practice, and not ſet our hearts on the World and earthly things, [illegible] lage, [illegible] wee haue to enjoy them is but very ſhort. For let him who hath enjoyed worldly proſperitie the longeſt time looke backe, and hee ſhall ſee, that all which is paſt is but a dreame or ſhadow, and as the twinckling of an eye in reſpect of eternitie. But all our loue and longing muſt be placed on our heauenly inheritance, where we are for euer to enjoy an eternall weight of glory, and happineſſe without end. Wee muſt vſe this World, not as our countrie, but as our way wherein wee are trauelling towards our heauenly home, and make account to paſſe through it as the Children of Iſrael promiſed to goe through Edom, without making any ſtay, or hauing any commerce or dealing with the inhabitants, more than our preſent neceſſities will inforce vpon vs. For (as one ſaith) this life preſent is a pilgrimage, and he who longeth and ſigheth after his owne countrie, vnto him his place of peregrination is a tedious torment, though vnto others it may ſeeme a paradiſe of delight. The world is vnto vs a dangerous Sea, and our life is allotted vs as a time of paſſage, wherein wee may goe forward in our voyage, and diſcouer the port of happineſſe, that with ioy wee may enter into it: and therefore let vs not deſire to bee alwayes ſailing, and to bee ſtill in danger, not onely of being ſwallowed vp by the ſurging waues of miſery and affliction; but alſo of the ſpirituall pirats, who are ready to rob vs of Gods ſanctifying graces, and to captiue and inthrall vs in the priſon of deſtruction; and of ſplitting our ſoules vpon the rockes of ſinne, being miſlead in our voyage by the worlds falſe fires, and drawne out of the right way by his ſubtill tentations: but let vs rather deſire to arriue at the hauen of reſt, where wee ſhall bee free from all theſe dangers, and for euer enjoy ſecure felicitie. Neither muſt wee make account that the places where wee now abide, are our homes and habitations; but onely our Innes and lodgings by the way, where wee are not to leade our liues, but to reſt for one night, and ſo to bee gone. To which purpoſe one ſaith, that hee is a Chriſtian, who being both in his houſe and countrie, doth neuertheleſſe acknowledge, that he is in them but as a pilgrime or ſtranger, and that Heauen is his countrie, where he ſhall bee an inhabitant for euer, and not a gueſt for a time. For in truth euery one here is a gueſt and a ſtranger in his owne houſe; for if hee were not ſo, why doth he not ſtay in it, but after a ſhort abode paſſeth away? and if any bee neceſſarily to trauell and goe away, he is to be eſteemed a ſtranger; let him not deceiue himſelfe he is a gueſt; whether he will or no, hee is a gueſt. Yes, but he bequeatheth quitteth his houſe when hee departeth to his Children. True, but yet as a gueſt, who departing, leaueth his lodging to other gueſts; euen as it is in the Inne, whereas one commeth, another goeth away. For thus hee doth in his houſe and earthly habitation, ſeeing as his Father gaue place to him, ſo he is to giue place to his ſonnes and poſterity; and as himſelfe flitteth, ſo hee leaueth it to them who are alſo ſtill in flitting. And as wee are to eſteeme the World our way, wherein like pilgrims we trauell towards our heauenly countrie; ſo alſo wee are to account the things of this life as neceſſaries for our iourney, and like that prouiſion which wee find in our way when wee come to our Inne, the which wee cannot carrie with vs, but leaue it where wee found it.

And if wee would thus eſteeme of the World and worldly vanities, then would wee not ouervalue and ſet our hearts vpon them; but (as the Apoſtle ſpeaketh) vſe them as though wee vſed them not: not as places to reſt in, or things wherein wee take our chiefe repoſe, but as a way to trauell in, and as neceſſaries to further vs in our iourney. For what wiſe trauellor would ſit ſtill and loiter in his iourney, becauſe he is in a faire way, and is not rather encouraged thereby to trauell cheerefully to his owne home? Who would ſeat his heart and affections on thoſe delights which hee ſeeth as hee paſſeth by? or though in his trauell hee may take ſome pleaſure in them, as he goeth by them, yet who in his right wits will ſo dote on theſe things, in which he hath not an houres intereſt, as that hee will neglect farre better and permanent delights in his owne countrie? Who vſeth to build when hee commeth to his Inne? or takes his chiefe contentment in thoſe buildings which hee findeth there already, in his ſtately and well furniſhed Chamber, his ſoft lodging, daintie fare, pleaſant walkes, ſweet gardens, and courteous entertainment, ſeeing the next day hee muſt leaue them all, and come to a reckoning for the ſhort time that hee hath inioyed them? As therefore men are wiſe in their generation in the things appertaining to this life, euery one making large prouiſion where hee is long to continue, and louing the place beſt, where hee is beſt prouided, and contrariwiſe contenteth himſelfe with ſmall ſtore where hee is to make but a ſhort ſtay, and loueth lightly that which he cannot long enjoy: ſo let vs lay vp our treaſures in Heauen, and with our treaſures our hearts alſo, where we are to remaine for euer; and not carrie them about vs in the way, where wee ſhall ſurely bee robbed; nor leaue them as heire-loomes in the Inne from whence we muſt depart the next morning. Let vs like trauellers refreſh our ſelues with the things of this life, and ſo againe goe forward on our iourney, and with contented minds leaue that which remaineth in the Inne. For whether wee will or no, wee muſt depart and carrie nothing with vs becauſe wee haue no further intereſt vnto any thing, but for the ſhort time of our reſidence, and that vpon hard conditions. Another trauellor ſhall come after vs and inioy them, but neither ſhall he take them away, but as hee hath found them there being left by vs, ſo muſt he alſo there leaue them to bee found of thoſe that follow after him. Let vs vſe worldly things as wiſe pilgrimes doe their ſtaues, and other neceſſaries conuenient for their iourney; ſo long as they helpe vs forward in our way let vs make vſe of them, and accordingly eſteeme them; but if they become troubleſome hindrances, and cumberſome burthens, let vs leaue them behind vs, or caſt them away; according to the Apoſtles exhortation, Caſt away euery thing that preſſeth downe, and the ſinne that hangeth faſt on, and let vs runne with patience the race which is ſet before vs. Heb.12.1. Neither muſt wee doe this onely when the things we carrie are of ſmall account, but when they are as deare and precious vnto vs as our right eye, hand, or foot, as our Sauiour hath taught vs. Mat.5.29.30. Let vs imitate the Eagle, which ſeldome lighteth on the earth, but when being conſtrained with hunger, ſhee ſtoopeth to her prey; and when ſhee hath fed, mounteth aloft againe aboue the clouds: ſo let not vs ſuffer our hearts and affections any longer to reſt vpon the earth, than we are compelled with our preſent neceſſity, but like the true Eagles of Ieſus Chriſt, let vs reſort thither where the dead carcaſe is, and being fed herewith, let vs mount aloft in diuine contemplation, and haue our conuerſation in Heauen, as the Apoſtle exhorteth vs. Phil.3.20. Finally, as pilgrimes and trauellers when they are in their iourney towards their countrie, caſt away all impediments which might hinder and tire them in their trauell: ſo let vs who like pilgrimes are trauelling towards our heauenly home, auoid all incumbrances, and carefully abandon all things which might any wayes hinder vs from attaining to the end of our iourney, and from the inioying that eternall happineſſe which is reſerued for Gods Saints in his glorious kingdome. Now there is no like impediment to hinder vs in this Chriſtian courſe and paſſage, to the loue of the World and worldly vanities, as I haue already ſhewed. For they who fall in loue with the place of their pilgrimage, will take neither care nor paines in trauelling towards their owne countrie; and they who ſet their hearts vpon theſe earthly trifles, will by them as by Satans baits, be led out of the way, and inſnared with ſinne; ſo as they will want all power and will to hold on the right courſe, but will be content for the enioying of their loue to make ſale of the eternall ioyes of Heauen, for the preſent ſatiſfying of their deſires; and therefore the Apoſtle exhorteth all who deſire to finiſh this iourney, that they would like ſtrangers and pilgrimes, abſtaine from carnall luſts which fight againſt the ſoule. For as enemies lying in ambuſhment doe ſend out booties for the aduerſe partie to prey vpon, which if they ſeeke to ſeaze into their hands, they are preſently intrapped, diſcomfited, and either ſlaine or taken captiue: ſo if wee be ruled by our carnall concupiſcence, and ſuffer theſe worldly luſts of couetouſneſſe, voluptuouſneſſe, and ambition, to beare any ſway in vs, then no ſooner can Satan ſet out the bootie or baite of riches, pleaſures, and preferments, but we ſhall be thruſt on with a greedy deſire to prey vpon them; which wee ſhall no ſooner doe, but preſently wee ſhall fall into Satans ambuſhment, bee led captiue into ſinne, and ſo being chained and fettered in his bonds, we ſhall be hindred from trauelling, or euer attaining vnto our heauenly countrie.

1.Pet.2.11.

§. Sect. 4.

That wee ſhould not not ſeate our heart and affections on the world, becauſe it is the place of our warfare.

But the World is not ſimply a place of pilgrimage alone, where wee might trauell with ſome quietneſſe and ſecuritie to the end of our iourney; but alſo a place of warfare, wherein wee are aſſaulted on all ſides (as it were in a ſtrange and forraine countrie) and by all poſſible meanes hindred in our ſpirituall voiage to the holy land. And therefore, as we haue little cauſe to ſeate our hearts and affections on the World, and the vanities thereof, becauſe wee can ſtay here but a ſhort time, and are euery day flitting from them; ſo much leſſe if wee conſider, that this ſhort time is full of trouble, ſeeing we are on euery ſide beſet with our ſpirituall enemies. So Iacob ſaith, that the dayes of his pilgrimage were not onely few, but euill alſo, in reſpect of his manifold troubles and moleſtations. And Iob affirmeth, that man, who is borne of woman, is but of ſhort continuance, and full of trouble. And the Apoſtle telleth vs, that whileſt wee continue here, we had need to be alwayes in the compleate armour of a Chriſtian, becauſe wee fight not onely againſt fleſh and blood, but againſt principalities, powers, and worldly gouernours, the princes of the darkneſſe of this World, and againſt ſpirituall wickedneſſes, which are in hie places. Now who would build, and ſet vp his maine hopes in the Campe, or place of his warfare? who would being rich carrie about him his whole ſubſtance and treaſures, which will but cumber him in his fight, and put ſpirits and courage into his enemies, to worke his ouerthrow, that they may prey vpon him? So the Apoſtle ſaith, that no man who warreth, intangleth himſelfe with the affaires of this life; becauſe he would pleaſe him, that hath choſen him to be a ſouldier. And if any man ſtriue for a Maſterie, hee is not crowned, except he ſtriue as hee ought to doe. And therefore, as hee were iuſtly to bee eſteemed a foole, who being to runne a race, would take vpon him heauie burthens; or being to wraſtle for a prize, would put on his moſt coſtly and rich apparell, to cope with his antagoniſt and aduerſary, who being naked, and anointed with oile, is ready to ſlip out of his hands: ſo much more fooliſh are wee, if being to wreſtle, not with fleſh and blood, but with principalities and powers, who are prepared and fitted with all aduantages; wee come in all our worldly pompe, hauing faſt tied vnto vs in the bonds of carnall loue, our earthly riches, pleaſures and preferments, ſeeing wee ſhall hereby giue them meanes to faſten vpon vs, and worke our ouerthrow: or being to runne a race, for a garland of no leſſe price, than the crowne of eternall glorie, doe loade and cumber our ſelues with the heauie burthen of worldly cares, or when wee are running to turne out of our way, and bee content to ſit ſtill, that wee may obtaine ſome worldly trifle of ſmall worth, and leſſe continuance. And therefore let vs auoid this folly and worldly dotage; and as the Apoſtle exhorteth vs, ſo runne that wee may obtaine. Let vs being to wreſtle with ſuch mightie enemies, like him that proueth Maſteries, abſtaine from all things which might hinder vs, that wee may obtaine the crowne which is uncorruptible. Let vs come into the field againſt our ſpirituall enemies, not loaded and incumbred with the burthen of worldly traſh, tied faſt vnto vs in the bonds of carnall loue, which will but diſable and betray vs into the hands of theſe foes which ſeeke our ouerthrow; but let vs come armed with Gods ſpirituall graces, and aſſiſted with the power of his might, whereby wee ſhall be enabled to obtaine the victorie; that ſo wee may ſay with the Apoſtle, I haue fought a good fight, finiſhed my courſe, and haue kept the faith; from hence forth is laid vp for mee the crowne of righteouſneſſe, which the Lord, the righteous Iudge ſhall giue me at that day; ſeeing this is promiſed (as he there affirmeth) not to him alone, but to all them, who obtaine the victorie in this ſpirituall warfare, according to that gracious promiſe; To him that ouercommeth, will I grant to ſit with mee in my throne, euen as I ouercame, and ſit with my Father in his throne.

Gen. 47.9.

Iob 14.1.

Epheſ.6.12.13.

1.Cor.9.24.

2.Tim.4.7.

Apoc.3.21.

Chap.

CHAP. II.

That wee ſhould contemne the World, and worldly vanities, in regard that wee are Citizens of Heauen, and heires of better hopes.

THE ſecond reaſon, why wee aboue all other ſhould not much eſteeme, nor immoderately loue the World, and worldly vanities, is, becauſe as we are pilgrimes here, and therefore muſt neceſſarily leaue them in our paſſage; ſo wee are Citizens of the new Ieruſalem, the Kingdome of Heauen. So the Apoſtle ſaith, that, we hauing through Chriſt an entrance vnto the Father by one ſpirit, are now no more ſtrangers and forrenners, but Citizens with the Saints, and of the houſhold of God. And ſpeaking of Abraham, the Father of the faithfull, hee ſaith, that he abode in the land of promiſe, as in a ſtrange country, and as one that dwels in tents, who is alwaies ready to remoue and flit away; becauſe he looked for a Citie, hauing a foundation, whoſe builder and maker is God. Neither was this peculiar to him alone, but generall to all his children, who followed him in the faith; of whom it is ſaid, That they haue here no continuing Citie, but that they ſeeke one to come. And the reaſon is apparant: for we are Citizens and ſubjects of that Kingdome, whereof Chriſt Ieſus is Lord and King; but himſelfe hath plainely told vs, that his Kingdome is not of this World, but that hee raigneth and ruleth in that Kingdome of eternall glory; and therefore, whoſoeuer are ſubjects vnto him, they cannot be free Denizens of the World, but Citizens of Heauen. Vnto which wee might adde, that as our Lord and King made but a ſhort ſtay vpon the Earth, but keepeth his Court and reſidence in the new Ieruſalem which is aboue: ſo wee his people and faithfull ſubjects, who are alſo ſeruants of his familie, yea, members of his glorious body, ſhall make here but a momentanie abode; but after wee are departed hence, ſhall haue in Heauen euerlaſting habitations; in which reſpect alſo, as wee are here ſtrangers and pilgrimes, ſo may wee bee rightly called Citizens of Heauen, and free burgeſſes of the new Ieruſalem. Now what can be a more forcible argument to weane our hearts and affections from the World and worldly vanities, than to conſider, that as wee are here ſtrangers, and haue no abiding or reſting place; ſo wee are ſubjects and Citizens of that glorious Kingdome, whereof the Lord himſelfe, and his Son Chriſt is Ruler and chiefe Soueraigne? For who would not contemne a flitting tent, in compariſon of a goodly manſion and ſtately palace? Who would not ſet light by a poore tenement, which is poſſeſſed at the will and pleaſure of the Landlord, in reſpect of a rich inheritance, and a large Lordſhip, in which he hath aſſurance to himſelfe and his heires for euer? Who would be a ſubject of that Kingdome, where the prince and ſoueraigne is but a ſlaue; whereas he might be an eſteemed member of a great commanding Monarchie? And who would preferre his pedling freedome in a country village for a few daies, before his enfranchizment and priuiledges in the chiefe city of the countrie, which hee may haue for euer? And yet all theſe ſimilitudes are but ſome little ſhadowes and darke reſemblances, to expreſſe the incomparable difference betweene the Earth and Heauen, the momentany trifles of this life, and thoſe vnualuable and eternall excellencies, which are reſerued for the Saints in the life to come. For looke how much a Monarchie is to be preferred before a mole-hill, the brighteneſſe of the Sunne, before the dim ſhining of a glo-worme, and the richeſt treaſures, before the baſeſt pebble ſtone: and ſo, and much more are thoſe euerlaſting ioyes of Heauen, to be preferred before the beſt things the World can brag off, though it were a long and flouriſhing Monarchie ouer all the Kingdomes of the Earth. It is true indeed, that theſe earthly things being neere vnto vs, and ſubject to our ſenſes, doe make a flouriſhing ſhew at the firſt ſight, to thoſe who are ſtill conuerſant among them, and neuer knew any thing better; but if in diuine contemplation, our minds and meditations could mount aloft, and be but a while exerciſed in the view and conſideration of thoſe incomparable ioyes, which God hath prepared for his elect, theſe worldly and tranſitory things below would ſeeme little and little worth. For as hee who is ſeated on an exceeding high mountaine, judgeth euery thing ſmall which hee ſeeth in a low valley; ſo if our minds were placed in Heauen, and our hearts fixed on that diuine and endleſſe glory, wee would thinke the greateſt things on Earth, as ſmall as motes in the Sunne, and as ſmally alſo to be regarded; according to the example of the Apoſtle Paul, who after he had beene rapt vp into the third Heauen, and had a ſight and taſte of thoſe vnſpeakable ioyes, did in regard of them, eſteeme the Worlds chiefeſt excellencies, but as droſſe and dung. Whereas now alas theſe earthly things, though they bee ſmall and contemptible, doe hide thoſe ſuperexceeding ioyes of Gods Kingdome, from the eyes of thoſe men, who are ſtill poring on the Earth, and are neuer rapt vp on hie in ſpirituall meditations, but lie groueling vpon the ground, ſpending all their thoughts vpon their worldly affaires. And as a ſmall diſh being held neere the eyes, hideth from our ſight a great mountaine; taine; and a little hill or cloud, the whole body of the Sunne, though it be farre bigger than the whole Earth: ſo theſe earthly trifles being placed neere our ſight, doe ſo ſhadow and ouercloud theſe great and ſhining excellencies, that we cannot truly behold them nor rightly judge of their greatneſſe and value. And therefore if we would view them aright, and haue ſome true glimpſe at leaſt of this diuine glory, wee muſt by heauenly meditation let the eyes of our ſoule mount aboue them; or elſe wee muſt remooue them further from vs, and then they will ſeeme ſmall, and ſmally to be regarded, in compariſon of the incomparable greatneſſe and goodneſſe of thoſe heauenly ioyes, and euerlaſting glory.

2.Cor.12.7.

Phil.3.7.8.

§. Sect. 2. That the loue of the world may well fit an ignorant worldling; but ill beſeemeth a Chriſtian, who hath aſſurance of future happineſſe.

Tit 2.11.12.13

1.Cor.13.11.

It is no maruell if heretofore liuing in ignorance, wee did not eſteeme of theſe diuine excellencies, but preferred before them theſe worldly vanities, becauſe they were ſubject to our ſenſes; for there is no deſire of that which is not knowne, and the bright Sun-ſhine day is all alike to him, who is ſtarke blind, vnto the darkeſt night. It is no wonder if before wee heard of Heauen, we eſteemed the World as our chiefeſt Paradiſe, and worldly things, as the heauenly ioyes; becauſe euery man naturally affecteth bleſſedneſſe, and deſireth that which is chiefely good; which when through his naturall ignorance and blindneſſe, hee cannot diſcerne, or attaine vnto, he is ready to place his heart and affections vpon that which is beſt, in his owne knowledge and opinion. But now after that the grace of God which bringeth ſaluation vnto all men hath appeared, and taught vs that we ſhould denie vngodlineſſe, and worldly luſts, and that we ſhould liue ſoberly and righteouſly, and godly in this preſent World; looking for the bleſſed hope, and appearing of the glory of the mighty God, and of our Sauiour Ieſus Chriſt; it were more than madneſſe, if wee ſhould ſuffer our ſelues ſtill to bee tranſported with worldly concupiſcence, and prefer the preſent ſatisfying of our carnall deſires, before the eternall fruition of our heauenly ioyes. It is not much to bee maruelled at, if children wanting wit and experience, to guide them better, doe affect childiſh trifles, and fooliſh vanities; for as the Apoſtle ſaith, When I was a Childe, I ſpake as a Childe, I vnderſtood as a Childe, I thought as a Child: and it is counted in them no great abſurdity, if they ſpend their time in idle ſports, and preferre an apple before a goodly Lordſhip, and a top and ſcourge before their patrimonie; but when they come to ripe yeeres, it is then expected, that they put away Childiſh things, contemne thoſe toies which before they ſo much eſteemed, and affect things more graue and waightie, as beſitteth their age and better knowledge; becauſe hauing attained vnto a more ſolid judgement, they eaſily diſcerne the vanity of theſe worthleſſe trifles: and ſo it is not much to bee regarded, if worldly men, being infants in knowledge, before Chriſt Ieſus was preached vnto them, and the riches and glory of his Kingdome manifeſted, did like Children affect worldly vanities, and becauſe they knew no better, tooke their whole delight in theſe trifling toies; but now hauing attained to more ripe knowledge, and hauing beene made acquainted, both with the vanitie, and baſeneſſe of theſe worthleſſe trifles, and with the excellencie and riches of Gods Kingdome, they are to lay aſide their childiſh loue, no more taking their chiefe delight in theſe momentanie vanities and earthly things; but rather, to ſpend their thoughts and meditations, and imploy all their labours and indeauours to aſſure themſelues of thoſe incomparable ioyes of Heauen. And as the Apoſtle ſpeaketh; they are now as obedient Children not to faſhion themſelues according to the former luſts of their ignorance, but to be holy in their whole conuerſation, as hee who hath called them is alſo holy: knowing that they were not redeemed with corruptible things, as ſiluer and gold, from their former vaine conuerſation, receiued by tradition of the Fathers, but with the precious blood of Chriſt. For as there is nothing more vnſeemely, or that argueth more ridiculous folly, than to ſee an old man dote after the vanities of youth, and with like heate of affection, follow in his age thoſe trifling and regardleſſe toyes, which he delighted in when he was a Child, as riding vpon a ſticke, building houſes in the duſt or ſands, and ſuch like childiſh exerciſes: and if any ſhould ſo behaue himſelfe, who ſeeing his great ſtature, and ſmall diſcretion, his manly perſonage, and child-like folly, would not judge him either out of his wits, or neuer in them? ſo much more ridiculous and fooliſh is the behauiour of worldlings, who being old in yeeres, remaine very babes in their knowledge and affections, and after thoſe rich treaſures of Gods heauenly kingdome are diſcouered vnto them, doe neglect and contemne them as heretofore, and perferre before them, both in their judgements and affections, theſe momentanie vanities, and earthly trifles.

1.Pet

§ Sect.
That it is uile beſe for a Chri an who is Child of G and heire Heauen, his heart worldly th

Whileſt wee remained in the eſtate of ſlaues, and were the deuoted vaſſals of ſin and Satan, our baſe deſires did well ſort and agree with our baſe condition; and whileſt wee were Citizens of the World, and Children of the Earth, it might ſuit with our place and calling, to affect and deſire earthly commodities, and to eſteeme the riches, pleaſures and preferments of the place whereof we were inhabitants, at high rates:

rites: but now that God hath dignified vs with moſt royall priuiledges, and made vs of Citizens of the World, free Deniſons of heauen, and of the ſlaues of Satan, his owne children by adoption and grace, yea, heires apparant of his glorious Kingdome; let vs, remembring this high calling, for ſhame forſake our baſe deſires, not ſuffering our hearts to lie groueling on the earth, wallowing in carnall pleaſures, and worldly delights: but raiſing them vp according to the height of our hopes, let vs aime at no leſſe than crownes and Kingdomes, and theſe not momentany, and of this world, ſeeing they are vaine and of little worth; but thoſe which are moſt glorious and eternall in the World to come. For if it be a baſe and vnſeemely thing, that a Princes Sonne for a trifling gaine, ſhould ſpend his time and ſtrength in ſeruile and ſlauiſh actions, ſeruing Hogges, and playing the Skull, and running on errands at the command of thoſe whome hee ſhould command: how much more vncomely and abjectly baſe is it for vs, who are (as the Apoſtle ſpeaketh) the a generation of God, his b ſonnes and children in Ieſus Chriſt, yea c heires of God, and coheires with Chriſt, that wee ſhould ſpend our pretious time in ſeeking after contemptible vanities, and be at the ſeruice and beck of ſinne and Satan, for the baſe hire of theſe worldly trifles; neuer thinking of our ſpirituall preferments, and glorious priuiledges, but ſetting all to ſale for the preſent fruition of theſe momentary toyes? Heretofore we were (as the Apoſtle teacheth vs) dead in treſpaſſes and ſinnes, and being in this condition it was ſuitable vnto it, that we ſhould be buried in the world, hauing our hearts burthened and oppreſſed with the cares of this life, and with the vnſupportable waight of theſe earthly things; but now wee are reuiued with the bloud of Chriſt, and quickned with his death; yea, by vertue of his reſurrection, God hath raiſed vs vp together with him, and hath in Ieſus Chriſt made vs ſit together in heauenly places, to ſhew in the ages to come the exceeding riches of his grace: and therefore as the Apoſtle exhorteth vs, If we be riſen with Chriſt, let vs ſeeke thoſe things which are aboue, where Chriſt ſitteth on the right hand of God; and ſet our affections on things which are aboue, and not on things which are on the earth. For if it were a ſufficient reaſon to moue Iacob to neglect his ſtuffe in the land of Canaan, becauſe Pharaoh promiſed the beſt things of Egypt when he came into his Kingdome; how much more ſhould it be auaileable to perſwade vs, vnto the contempt of theſe worldly and worthleſſe vanities, ſeeing wee haue the aſſured promiſe of God himſelfe, that wee ſhall enjoy the beſt things of his heauenly Kingdome when wee come vnto him? It is obſerued, that therefore with the Grecians man is called ἄνθρωπος, to put in mind, that howſoeuer hee dwelleth on the earth, yet hee ſhould ſtill lift vp his eyes and heart towards Heauen, that ſo hee might be occaſioned to meditate on his Creatour, and on thoſe diuine joyes, and eternall glory which are there reſerued for him. And it is further noted, that of all the parts of mans bodie, the Head which is the ſeat of the vnderſtanding, and the place wherein the Soule ſheweth and exerciſeth its chiefe faculties and functions, is moſt remote from the earth, and neareſt vnto Heauen; by which fabrique and wiſe placing of theſe humane parts, the Lord would teach vs, that wee ſhould as little as may be, trouble our heads with earthly cogitations, but rather exerciſe them continually in ſpirituall and heauenly meditations. And therefore according both to our name and nature, let vs not haue our minds nailed to the earth, and wholly conuerſant in worldly things; but let vs continually lift them vp in diuine contemplation; and as the Apoſtle exhorteth vs, haue our conuerſation in heauen, from whence wee looke for a Sauiour, euen our Lord Ieſus Chriſt. And for as much as they are continually ouer-poyſed with worldly cares, and neceſſary imployments in the earth; let vs daily draw them vp, ſeeing they naturally deſcend like the peyſes of a clocke, and exerciſe them continually in diuine and heauenly meditations, that ſo by their reſting on the earth, our courſe in godlineſſe be not hindred and ſtayed. Whileſt we were without Chriſt, aliants from the Common-wealth of Iſrael, ſtrangers from the couenants of promiſe, and had no hope, and were without God in the world, as the Apoſtle ſpeaketh; it is no maruell if wee much eſteemed our earthly habitation, and made Idols of worldly things, as riches, pleaſures & preferments, by ſetting our hearts and affections wholy on them; for ſo is this naturally imprinted in our hearts, that there is a God; that when we are ignorant of the true diuine nature and eſſence, rather than wee will bee without a Deitie which we may adore, wee are readie to ſerue and worſhip the baſeſt creatures: but now that in Chriſt Ieſus we which once were farre off, are made neere by his bloud, and are no more ſtrangers and forreiners, but Citizens with the Saints, and of the houſhold of God; let vs leaue theſe Idols to be adored by the Gentiles, who haue no knowledge of the true God, nor intereſt in his heauenly Kingdome, and let them deſire things preſent, who haue no hope to enjoy Gods gracious & rich promiſes concerning things to come: & let it be a forcible argument (as our Sauiour vrgeth it) to reſtraine vs from the immoderate louing or caring for the things of this life, that the Gentiles who haue no better hopes, ſeeke mainly after theſe trifles; but let vs who haue more

Hebr.13.14.

§. Sect. 4. That earthly honours, riches and pleaſures, are baſe & of no worth in compariſon of the celeſtiall glory, & ioyes of Heauen.

[illegible]

Philip.3.20.

[illegible]

Ephes.2.12.

[illegible]

Verſe 13.19.

Anxiè curant Gentiles quibus cœleſtia non debentur; concupiſcunt præſentia qui futura non credunt. Math.6.32,33.

more knowledge, and better aſſurance, ſeeke firſt the Kingdome of God and his righteouſneſſe, ſeeing we haue Gods infallible promiſe, that theſe things, without our carking care, ſhall in ſome competent ſufficiencie be miniſtred vnto vs.

Heb.13.5,6.

§. Sect. 4.
That earthly honours, riches and pleaſures, are baſe & of no worth, in compariſon of the treſures, glory, & ioyes of Heauen.

More eſpecially, ſeeing we haue aſſurance of eternall glorie, and be adopted heires of the kingdome of heauen; let vs not in our iudgements ouerualue and eſteeme, nor in our affections and endeauours immoderately loue and ſeeke, the vaine glorie of the world, & theſe momentany honors & preferments; which befitteth them who haue no hope of better aduancement; but ill-beſeemeth vs who expect within a while ſuch glory and greatnes. And this argument Ieremie vſeth to diſſwade Baruch from looking after preferments in the world, becauſe they were momentanie and of not continuance. Behold, ſaith the Lord, that which I haue built will I deſtroy, and that which I haue planted, will I plucke vp, euen this whole land; and ſeekeſt thou great things for thy ſelfe? ſeeke them not. And our Sauiour Chriſt by the ſame reaſon perſwadeth his diſciples not to aſpire ambitiouſly after wordly ſuperioritie and ſoueraigntie, becauſe it better befitted earthly potentates, who had no hope of raigning in the kingdome of God: Ye know (ſaith he) that they which deſire to beare rule among the Gentiles, haue domination ouer them, and they that be great among them, exerciſe authority ouer them; but it ſhall not be ſo among you, &c. So ſeeing this world is the place of our pilgrimage, and heauen our countrey, where vnualuable treaſures are reſerued for vs, it is now no time to affect worldly wealth, and abundance of this earthly riches, for as the Apoſtle teacheth vs, it becommeth Saints to be ſo far from imbracing and practiſing couetouſnes, that it ſhould not be once named among them; both becauſe their title is moſt fickle and vncertain to this earthly traſh; & becauſe alſo they haue ſure intereſt in thoſe vnualuable and eternall treaſures which are reſerued for them in heauen. So that it may be fitly ſaid to Chriſtians, as Eliſha ſpeaketh to Gehazi; Is this a time to take money, and to receiue garments, and oliues, & vineyards, and ſheepe, and oxen, and men ſeruants, and maid ſeruants? eſpecially when the leproſie of ſin accompanieth them, which excludeth vs from the ſocietie of the Saints, and bringeth in the end eternall death. To this purpoſe one ſpeaketh fitly: He (ſaith he) loueth not his money too much, who loueth God enough, &c. O therefore that we could loue the Lord as hee worthily deſerueth, and ſo ſhould wee loue our ſiluer little or nothing: then would our money be only an helpfull inſtrument in our pilgrimage, and not a prouoking bait to our concupiſcence, which we ſhould vſe for neceſſitie alone, and not enjoy for delight, &c. Vſe this world, but ſo as the world doth not faſten on thee; the end of thy comming into it, was not to make any ſtay; but to paſſe through it as a place of pilgrimage; thou cameſt in to goe out againe, and not to remaine: thou art a traueller, and the world is thine Inne; vſe therefore thy money as the traueller in his Inne vſeth his table, cup, and bed, namely, as being to leaue all behind him, and not to make any ſtay with them. Finally, howſoeuer there may bee ſome ſhew of reaſon, why ignorant Worldlings ſhould ſet their hearts vpon worldly and carnall pleaſures, becauſe they are acquainted with no better delights; yet it is more than ſottiſh madneſſe, for thoſe to dote on them, who haue beene enlightned with the knowledge of Gods Truth, or haue euer had but the leaſt taſte of the heauenly ioyes, becauſe they are vaine and momentanie, and theſe moſt excellent and eternall. And, this argument the Apoſtle vſeth to weane our hearts from theſe voluptuous and ſinfull pleaſures: The night (ſaith he) is paſt, and the day is at hand, let vs therefore caſt away the workes of darkneſſe, and let vs put on the armour of light: ſo that we walke honeſtly as in the day, not in gluttonie and drunkenneſſe, neither in chambering and wantonneſſe, nor in ſtrife and enuying. But put ye on the Lord Ieſus Chriſt, and take no thought for the fleſh, to fulfill the luſts of it.

Ierem.45.4,5.

Marke 10.42.

Epheſ.5.3.

2.King.5.26.

[illegible]

It is true indeed that if the loue of God, and the World would ſtand together; if wee could at the ſame inſtant place our hearts and affections both vpon heauenly & earthly things; if wee could exceedingly loue, and earneſtly ſeeke the things of this life, & after be ſure to find the glory and happineſſe of the life to come; if wee could firſt be Citizens of the earth, and afterwards obtaine the freedome and priuiledges of the new Ieruſalem; there were ſome reaſon why wee ſhould ſo much eſteeme, and with ſuch ardent loue affect and ſeeke after theſe worldly vanities. But the Scriptures haue plainly taught vs, that the [a] loue of the world is enmitie with God; that we cannot [b] ſerue God and riches; that wee muſt [c] forſake all, if we will bee Chriſts Diſciples; and finally, that as many as belong to his Kingdome of grace, and afterward ſhall raigne with him in his Kingdome of glory, are [d] choſen out and ſeparated from the World: and therefore wee are put to our choice, whether we will be louers of God, or the World, Citizens of the earth, or Citizens of Heauen, ſeeing both will not ſtand together. For as thoſe who were Citizens of Rome, loſt their freedome if they became Citizens of any other Citie; ſo ſhall we loſe our freedome and priuiledges in the new Ieruſalem, if we become Citizens of the earth. To this purpoſe one ſaith, that many by greedy coueting that which belonged vnto to others, haue loſt that which appertained to themſelues: theſe worldly things are alienated from vs, and our poſſeſſion is in the Kingdome of Heauen; and therefore let vs take heed, leſt by coueting that which is the right of others, wee loſe that which is our owne. It is ſaid of Caine, that hee built the firſt Citie vpon the earth, to ſhew, that hee ſeeketh an habitation and abiding place in this World, who is excommunicate from the communion of Saints, and baniſhed out of our heauenly Country. Whereas Abraham the Father of the faithfull, Iſaac, and Iacob with the reſt of the Patriarchs, liued in Tents, to ſhew that like pilgrimes they were ſtill in remouing to their owne countrey, as the Apoſtle obſerueth. And therefore if we would not be like reprobate Caine, or deſire to imitate theſe holy Patriarches, let vs not ſettle our affections, and fix our hearts vpon the world, and worldly vanities; but onely vſe them as neceſſaries for our paſſage, and contemne them when we find them impediments, or when they come in compariſon of Gods ſpirituall graces, or heauenly ioyes.

Which that we may the rather doe, let vs conſider, that all Gods ſaints and ſeruants haue gone before vs in this holie practice, as precedents and examples: for no ſooner were they made partakers of the gifts & graces of Gods holy ſpirit, and had but ſome little taſte of the heauenly happines, but preſently they contemned the world with the vanities thereof, and were readie to leaue al and follow Chriſt, and euen to lay downe their liues, for the profeſſion of the Goſpell. It were endleſſe to name all; ſome few ſhall ſuffice. The Apoſtle Paul profeſſeth, that he deſired to [a] know nothing but Ieſus Chriſt & him crucified, and ſaith [b] God forbid that he ſhould reioyce in any thing, but in the croſſe of our Lord Ieſus Chriſt; whereby the World was crucified vnto him, and hee vnto the world. Yea hee accounted all things [c] loſſe, and no better than dung that hee might winne Chriſt. So elſewhere hee profeſſeth, that hee [d] ſought not the praiſe of men, neither of the Theſſalonians nor any other. Thus alſo Abraham at Gods commandement left his owne Country, and contemned all the profits, pleaſures, and preferments which it might haue yeelded vnto him, in compariſon of the Land of promiſe, though hee dwelt there but as [e] a ſtranger, and had little ioy and comfort in it, but onely as it was a type of the heauenly Canaan. So Moſes refuſed to be called the ſonne of Pharaohs daughter, and was content to abandon all the proſperitie which hee might haue had in the Land of Egypt; and choſe rather to ſuffer aduerſitie with the people of God, than to enioy the pleaſures of ſinne for a ſeaſon; eſteeming the rebuke of Chriſt greater riches, than the treaſures of Egypt, and that becauſe hee had reſpect to the recompence of the reward, as the Apoſtle teacheth vs. Yea, Dauid himſelfe though he had all the royalties, profits, and delights, which a Kingdome could affoord vnto him; yet could they not allure him to fixe his heart vpon them, but only hee vſed them as neceſſary helpes for his iourney, remembring that he was but a ſtranger and ſoiourner vpon the earth, and that his dayes were like a ſhadow which hath no abiding. Finally, no ſooner were the Diſciples of the Primitiue Church conuerted to the faith, and had ſome aſſurance of their ſaluation, and ſome little knowledge and taſte of the treaſures, glory, and ioyes, prepared for them in the Kingdome of God; but preſently they contemned earthly riches, and hauing ſold their Houſes and Lands, laid the price downe at the Apoſtles feet, that there might be a diſtribution, to euery one according to his need. But aboue all examples, let vs propound vnto vs our Sauiour Chriſts, who by his contempt of the World and worldly things, hath taught vs alſo to deſpiſe and contemne them. For being the moſt glorious and eternall Sonne of God, hee did not here in this World ſeeke for Honour and Soueraigntie, yea, he refuſed it when it was offered, and when he [i] perceiued that the people ſought after him to make him a King, hee departed and hid himſelfe in a deſert place. And though he were the King of Heauen and Earth, yet he profeſſeth that he came into the world not to be [k] ſerued but to ſerue, and that he did not receiue [l] honour from men. Yea, in his greateſt glorie which hee had amongſt men, and when hee would make ſome ſhew that indeed he was a King, it is ſaid that he came [m] meeke and lowly, ſitting on an aſſes colt, hauing only ſome of his Diſciples ſpare clothes vnder him, in ſtead of rich and kingly furniture. So though hee might haue had the riches of the earth at his commandement, yet hee contemned abundance, and contenting himſelfe with neceſſaries only, he gaue the ouerplus to the reliefe of the poore. Thus wee reade that certaine women miniſtred to his neceſſities, that he had not money in his purſe to pay his tribute, but was faine to borrow it of [n] a ſillie fiſh, whereas he might as eaſily haue commanded the ſeas to haue caſt vp her treaſures and pearles, if hee had regarded them. So himſelfe ſaith, that [o] the foxes had holes, and the birds of heauen neſts, but the ſonne of man had not whereon to reſt his head. All which pouertie hee willingly vndertooke, that hee might inrich vs with heauenly treaſure; as the Apoſtle teſtifieth, [p] Ye know (ſaith he) the grace of our Lord Ieſus Chriſt, that he being rich for your ſakes became poore, that ye by his pouertie might be made rich. The like contempt he alſo ſhewed of worldly pleaſures, ſpending his time in

1.Chron.29.15.

Acts 4.34.

[i] Iohn 6.15.

[k] Mark.10.45.

[l] Iohn 5.41.

[m] Mat.21.5,6.

[n] Math.17.27.

[o] Math.8.20.

[p] 2 Cor.8.9.

watching, and praying, preaching, and teaching; in wearisome iourneys, and ſore trauell, accounting it his chief pleaſure to pleaſe his heauenly Father, and euen his q meate and drinke to doe his will. Finally, in all things our Sauiour Chriſt humbled himſelfe, ſetting light by worldly proſperity in compariſon of that Glory which was reſerued for him with his Faher. Whoſe example wee alſo are to imitate, as the Apoſtle exhorteth vs: Let (ſaith hee) the ſame minde be in you, that was euen in Chriſt Ieſus, who being in the forme of God, thought it not robberie to be equall with God: but he made himſelfe of no reputation, and tooke on him the forme of a ſeruant, and was made like vnto men, and was found in ſhape as a man. He humbled himſelfe and became obedient vnto the death, euen the death of the croſſe; wherefore God hath alſo exalted him, and giuen him a name aboue euery name. O why therefore ſhould wee ambitiouſly aſpire vnto honours, ſeeing the ſonne of God himſelfe was content for our ſakes to be thus abaſed? Why ſhould the ſeruant deſire immoderatly to be aduanced, when his Lord & Maſter was thus humbled? Why ſhould we greedily ſeek after thoſe riches which Chriſt Ieſus the wiſedome of his Father contemned; ſeeing if they had been abſolutely good, and worth the hauing, he who is Lord of heauen and earth, might haue abounded with them? Why ſhould we dote vpon voluptuous pleaſures, ſeeing our Sauiour ſpent his time in painfull labours, and attained vnto the eternall ioyes of his fathers kingdome, by trauelling in the vnpleaſant way of troubles and afflictions? In a word, why ſhould wee adore the world as our earthly idoll, and ſet our hearts and affections vpon theſe momentany vanities, when as all the faithfull from time to time, haue by the contempt of them entred into euerlaſting glorie? Why ſhould wee dreame of hauing a ſpeciall diſpenſation and priuiledge, aboue all the reſt of Gods faithfull children, and thinke that we may cleaue and cling vnto the world and worldly things with our hearts and affections, and yet neuertheleſſe riſe to bee poſſeſſors of that glory, and to enioy that heauenly inheritance, notwithſtanding that all theſe clogs doe hang vpon vs, and keepe vs downe; whereas all the reſt of Gods children in former times haue by many tribulations entred into the Kingdome of Heauen; and haue in reſpect of their heart and affections (though not in regard of the poſſeſſion) ſhaken off theſe cumberſome burthens, and by the contempt of worldly vanities, haue entred into that heauenly happineſſe, and euerlaſting glorie?

q Iohn 4.34.

*Phil.*2.6,7.

Acts 14.22.

CHAP. III.

Of the ioyes of heauen; that they are ineffable and vnconceiuable: and of the names and titles which in the Scripture are giuen vnto them.

BY that which hath beene ſaid it may appeare, both that the world, and the vanities thereof, are of no true worth or excellencie; and alſo that though they were in themſelues of ſome value, yet not vnto vs, who are heere pilgrims and ſtrangers, and citizens and inhabitants of another citie and countrie, euen the new Ieruſalem, and heauenly Canaan. For experience teacheth vs, that though men in their trauailes doe paſſe by lands and kingdomes much more rich, fruitfull, and pleaſant than their owne; yet becauſe they haue neither intereſt, nor abiding in them, they preferre before them their owne home, and take their chiefe delight in ſeeing (as wee ſay) the ſmoake of their owne countrie, becauſe there is the place of their reſiding, wherein they haue their part and ſhare of all the commodities and delights which it affoordeth, for the maintenance and preſeruation of their liues. And we know that this proprietie maketh poore men alſo in the ſame countrie, to take more comfort and pleaſure, in their own houſes, though thatched, and ill furniſhed; and in their owne gardens, fields, and orchards, though they are rude, diſordred, and vnpleaſant, than in thoſe which appertaine vnto other men, though neuer ſo curious, artificiall, and delightfull. In which reſpect though the things of this life were to bee preferred before thoſe of the life to come, yet by the ſame reaſon wee ſhould little regard them, in compariſon of the other, becauſe we haue no right, intereſt, and inheritance in them, but only paſſe by them, and vſe them as helps, whereby wee may the better bee inabled to attaine vnto our iourneys end, and haue the other reſerued for vs as our patrimonie, which wee ſhal hold for the tearme of that life which ſhall be endleſſe and euerlaſting. But as men hauing proprietie vnto thoſe things which are moſt excellent, & by infinite degrees to be preferred before ſuch things as belong vnto others, doe in compariſon of their own poſſeſſions baſely eſteeme, and eaſily contemne that, vnto which they haue no right and title; as the French man or Italian hauing goodly inheritances in their owne countries, may eaſily deſpiſe the deſerts of Arabia for their barennes, and the northerne climes almoſt inhabitable, by reaſon of their extreame cold; ſo this being our caſe, and we hauing a country moſt rich, moſt glorious, full of all goodneſſe and bleſſedneſſe, it may bee a thing eaſie for all thoſe who conſider of it, to contemne

§. Sect.
That Ch ans ough much to p ferre Hea before th earth in gard tha their own Country.

temne and ſet lightly by this earthly deſert, and to preferre before it our heauenly countrey, much more than the children of Iſrael preferred the fruitfull land of Canaan, before that waſte and deſert wilderneſſe, through which they had trauelled towards their owne countrie. But for as much as men in the world doe ſo much ouervalue this place of their pilgrimage, and lightly eſteeme of our heauenly habitation; delighting themſelues here as in their paradiſe, and mourning and fearing to depart vnto their owne home, as though it were the place of their exile and baniſhment: and ſeeing all this loue of the one, proceedeth from a ſuppoſed excellencie, and this diſlike or loathing of the other, from a falſe conceit, that by our change, our ſtate ſhall be impaired, and we in worſe caſe than wee were before; which can proceed from nothing but from groſſe ignorance, or Pagan-like infidelity, whereby either we know not what ioy and happineſſe is prepared for Gods ſaints, or doe not beleeue that we ſhall haue our part and intereſt in them; therefore as I haue already ſhewed the baſe worthleſneſſe, and vaine vnprofitableneſſe of worldly things, that wee might be freed from that deluding opinion which doth bewitch vs with their loue: ſo now for concluſion of this booke, I will alſo intreate of the diuine excellencie of our heauenly ioyes, that hauing ſome knowledge and taſt of them, wee may bee rauiſhed with their loue, and in compariſon of them, & the meanes of attaining vnto them, lightly eſteeme & contemne theſe worldly toyes, and trifling vanities.

Wherein my purpoſe is to auoid curious and friuolous queſtions, which as they haue no vſe or profit, ſo no true ground out of Gods Word; and to content my ſelfe with that which may bee ſaid of theſe heauenly ioyes, either directly out of the Scriptures, or may by neceſſarie conſequence be gathered from theſe infallible teſtimonies. The which becauſe they ſpeake ſparingly in this argument, in reſpect of the glory and greatneſſe of theſe ſurpaſſing ioyes; therefore I would admoniſh the reader, that hee doe not expect any full or perfect deſcription of them, ſeeing this is altogether impoſſible, either to me, or any other liuing, whileſt we remayne here in this place of our pilgrimage, as being a ſecret which is not to be reuealed by diſcourſe, but by experience and fruition. For ſo the Apoſtle Iohn plainly affirmeth, that wee are now the ſonnes of God, but yet it doth not appeare what we ſhall be; and the Apoſtle Paul ſaith, that God dwelleth in the light which none can attaine vnto, whom neuer man ſaw, neither can ſee. Of which our inſufficiency in comprehending theſe heauenly myſteries, diuers reaſons may be rendred: firſt, becauſe the Lord would haue the full and perfect knowledge of theſe diuine excellencies concealed, to exerciſe hereby our Faith, Loue, Obedience and Patience; for he would haue vs whileſt wee continue here to liue by faith, and not by ſight, to ſeeke after theſe joyes vpon his Word, though we haue no diſtinct and ſenſible knowledge of them in our ſelues; to do our worke and performe our dutie as well for loue to himſelfe, as for the reward which we are to receiue, and hauing done what hee enjoyneth vs, wholy to referre the wages to his own bountie. Whereas if there were a cleere and diſtinct knowledge of thoſe heauenly excellencies, and ſurpaſſing joyes in euery one of vs, it were not thankſworthy to be a Chriſtian, neither had we any occaſion of approouing our Faith, Loue, and willing obedience vnto God, ſeeing they would rauiſh vs with their beautie and excellencie, and make vs reſpectiue of our dutie, if not for loue towards God, yet at leaſt for the rewards ſake. And this cauſe the Apoſtle Paul ſeemeth to intimate, where he ſaith, that hee was taken vp into paradiſe, 2.Cor.12.4. and there heard words, which could not againe be ſpoken by him, and which were not lawfull for man to vtter; as being ſecrets of State, the knowledge whereof was appropriated to thoſe who were admitted Citizens and free Burgeſſes of that glorious Kingdom. Another cauſe may be our imperfection in knowledge, which is a fruit and puniſhment of our ſinne, accompanying vs as long as we continue in this life. For the Apoſtle telleth vs, that wee know but in part, and ſee as 1.Cor.13.9,12. through a glaſſe darkly: and that to ſee face to face, and to know as we are knowne, is reſerued for the life to come. So that when we haue ſought out as much as we can theſe inſcrutable and hidden myſteries, we may cry out with Iob; Loe theſe are part of his wayes, but how little a portion heare we of him? And Iob 26.14. who can vnderſtand his fearefull power? Neither need this to ſeeme ſtrange vnto any, if we doe but conſider that our knowledge and vnderſtanding hath receiued ſo great a maime by our originall ſinne, that we are ignorant for the moſt part of the things appertaining to this life, knowing them not in their true nature, formes, and eſſence, but onely in their figures, qualities, and properties; and that not by a preſent, immediate and cleere vnderſtanding, but onely by ſenſe, obſeruation, induction, and experience. In which reſpect it is impoſſible to make a blind man by deſcriptions cleerely to know the nature of colours, and to conceiue of the brightneſſe of the Sunne, becauſe he wanteth thoſe organs and inſtruments of knowledge which ſhould conueigh it to the common ſenſe, phantaſie, and vnderſtanding: or to make a man perfectly to conceiue of the ſweetneſſe of hony, and the delightfull odour of a Roſe, who wants thoſe ſenſes of taſte and ſmelling. And this reaſon the authour of the Booke of Wiſ-

Wiſd.9.16.

Bernard ſuper Cantica, Serm.38.

August. Tom: Serm.1.

Nec ideo tamen debeo tacere, ſed dicere quantum valeo, quia dicere quantum volo, non valeo, Auguſt.lib medit.cap.18.

dome plainly expreſſeth: Hardly (ſaith hee) can wee diſcerne the things that are vpon earth, and with great labour find wee out the things that are before vs: & who then can ſeek out the things that are in Heauen? To which purpoſe another ſaith, that it is not for vs in this time of ignorance, whileſt we remayne in our earthly bodies, to mount into the Clouds, to pierce this fulneſſe of Light, to breake into this bottomleſſe profunditie of Glory, or to dwell in this vnapprochable brightneſſe: for this is reſerued for our laſt day, when we ſhall be preſented vnto God, glorious, and without ſpot or wrinkle; for how ſhal wee ſee God in his glory, and behold the beautifull brightneſſe of his heauenly habitation; ſeeing our vnderſtandings are ſo blinded with ignorance that wee doe not know our ſelues, nor in any perfection conceiue what our owne ſoules are, which is the chiefe part of our eſſence and being? Finally, it is impoſſible till wee come to Heauen, and haue our vnderſtandings inlightened and inlarged by him who firſt made them, that we ſhould conceiue, and comprehend theſe joyes in regard of their greatneſſe, and ſurpaſſing excellencie. For as our weake eyes cannot behold the Sun, but it preſently dazleth them, and if they bee not turned away maketh them blind, becauſe this too excelling object corrupteth the ſenſe: ſo our weake vnderſtandings cannot poſſibly conceiue and comprehend the glorious brightneſſe of theſe heauenly joyes; and if aboue their reach and capacitie they attempt it, they are preſently ſurcharged with their glory and greatneſſe. And the reaſon hereof is cleere and euident; for ſeeing this glory and happineſſe conſiſteth principally in the viſion and fruition of God, who is infinite and incomprehenſible, therefore it is as impoſſible in this life for any man to comprehend them, as to containe the Ocean in the ſhel of a Nut. To which purpoſe one ſaith, what this eternal glory is, with what treaſures this heauenly Kingdome aboundeth, and with what glorious brightneſſe it ſhineth, it cannot be expreſſed, but is rather with prayſes to be admired and magnified. But yet though this heauenly glory cannot be fully expreſſed, it is not wholly to be pretermitted though it cannot be purtrayed (as it were) in liuely colours, yet it is not to be left vnſhadowed; for ſeeing we know but in part, therefore as it is not fit to comprehend the whole; ſo neither to omit and let that part paſſe which we conceiue: and ſeeing the Holy Ghoſt hath in many places of the Scriptures in ſome darke manner ſhadowed this glory, and giuen vs a taſte of theſe joyes, wee muſt not neglect it becauſe we cannot haue our full draught; and becauſe we cannot comprehend as much as we would, we muſt not ſlightly ouerpaſſe that which we can: conſidering that God hath purpoſely granted vs a ſight of theſe firſt fruits, that we may more hartily long after the whole harueſt, and hath in his holy word giuen vs a taſt of this happineſſe, that wee may vſe all poſſible meanes to come vnto this fountaine of glory, where wee may drinke our fil; and hath giuen vs liberty both to thinke and ſpeake of the ioyes of his kingdome, according to our meaſure and proportion, though we cannot fully conceiue them; euen as we haue liberty to thinke and ſpeake of his owne infinite maieſty with reſpectiue reuerence, although hee be ineffable and incomprehenſible. As therefore Moſes for his ſinne was not ſuffered to enter into the land of promiſe, and ſo to take a particular view of euery part of the earthly Canaan, and yet was permitted to goe to the top of mount Abarim, and thence to take ſome general ſight and notice of it; ſo although wee by our ſinnes haue the eyes of our vnderſtandings ſo dimmed, that wee cannot cleerely and diſtinctly behold the glorious beauty of the holy land; yet let vs take ſome ſuch generall view as the Lord in his Word reuealeth it vnto vs. And as thoſe who cannot behold the ſunne ſhining in his full brightneſſe, attaine vnto ſuch a ſight of it as they are capable of by looking vpon it, or rather the image and reſemblance of it, in a ſtanding poole, or diſh of water; ſo though we cannot ſee theſe glorious ioyes in their owne perfect beautie, becauſe our vnderſtandings would bee aſtoniſhed & confounded; yet let vs (as it were) by reflection diſcouer them as well as wee can, in ſome earthly ſhadowes and reſemblances. Onely as one exhorteth, Let vs not curiouſly ſeeke out that, which the Apoſtles themſelues could not fully expreſſe; neither let any man deſire to know of mee that, of which I haue this onely knowledge, that I know it not; vnleſſe hee would learne to bee ignorant of that, which we ought onely thus far to know, that it cannot be known of vs.

cap.11.

§. Sect.

What the

Firſt, therefore that wee may haue ſome ſmall glimpſe of this glory, we are to know, that this Kingdome of God, and joyes of Heauen, is nothing elſe but that chiefe happineſſe and ſupreame felicitie, which the holy Saints, who haue faithfully ſerued God in this life, ſhal eternally enjoy with God himſelfe, and his Sonne Chriſt, in the life to come; whileſt being freed from all worldly euils and miſeries, they doe communicate in all the heauenly happineſſe, and vnſpeakeable bleſſedneſſe prepared for them, eſpecially in the fruition of God, who being infinite in all perfection, ſhall be all in all vnto them. Which joyes, that wee may the better conceiue of, let vs firſt conſider of the Names, Titles, and Epithets, which in the Scriptures are giuen vnto them; and afterwards ſpeake, according to the meaſure of knowledge reuealed vnto vs, of the parts thereof. Concerning the former, we haue of them great va-ritie in the booke of God, whereby both the great excellencie, perfect ſufficiencie, incomparable glory, rauiſhing delight, and eternall felicitie of this heauenly glory is implied and ſignified. The greatneſſe and excellencie of this eternall bleſſedneſſe is noted, when as it is called a [a] Kingdome, ſeeing there is no riches, glory, or pleaſures which a Kingdome affordeth not: and leſt wee ſhould conceiue that it yeeldeth no better treaſures, honours and delights, than earthly Kingdomes doe, it is called the [b] Kingdome of Heauen: to note vnto vs, that as farre as Heauen exceedeth Earth in largeneſſe, ſtatelineſſe, height and beautie, ſo much the priuiledges and roiall prerogatiues of this heauenly kingdome, exceed the earthly in greatneſſe and in glorie. Yea, it is called alſo the [c] Kingdome of God, to ſhew vnto vs, that it is abſolute in all perfection, and as farre aboue earthly Kingdomes in maieſtie and true felicitie, as the King of Kings excelleth the pettie Princes of the World. In the ſame reſpect it is called the [d] new Ieruſalem, and the Citie of God: to ſignifie, that it is the place which God hath ſpecially choſen, the Metropolis, or chiefe ſeate of his boundles Empire, and, as it were, the Court of the great King, where our Lord and Soueraigne, who is omnipreſent, and filleth heauen & earth, doth keepe his chiefe reſidence, and therein maniſeſt his glory and greatnes. And therefore looke how much the chiefe Citie of the Kingdome, & the Princes roiall court doe excell in riches and glorie, the pooreſt & remoteſt countrie villages and ſo, and much more doth this heauenly City, and court roiall of the King of Kings, excell all worldly empire and dominion. The perfect ſufficencie of theſe heauenly ioyes is alſo noted by the names which are giuen vnto them; for they are called a [e] liuely fountaine, and the well of the Water of life, of which, whoſoeuer drinke ſhall neuer thirſt: to ſhew vnto vs, that as he who hath an euer ſpringing fountaine, can neuer want Water; ſo hee who is once poſſeſſed with theſe heauenly ioyes, hath alwaies ſufficiencie of all glory and goodneſſe. And in the ſame reſpect they are called [f] bleſſedneſſe and felicitie: vnto which is required the confluence of all perfections, full contentment, and the fruition of our ſummum bonum, and chiefe happineſſe; ſo that where bleſſedneſſe is, nothing is troubleſome, nothing wanting, but all good things are preſent in poſſeſſion, which the hart of man can deſire and wiſh. The incomparable glory likewiſe of this heauenly happineſſe, is liuely ſignified by the titles and ſimilitudes whereby it is deſcribed; for it is called the maieſticall [g] Temple, wherein our great King vouchſafeth his glorious preſence, and is continually prayſed and magnified, by many millions of his heauenly quiriſters, and holy ſeruants: it is called the throne of God, whereon hee ſitteth, whileſt he raigneth and ruleth ouer all his creatures, and whereon he vouchſafeth to allow [h] vs a place to ſit together with him. Finally, it is called a Crowne, to ſhew, that it is full of glorie and maieſtie; and leſt wee ſhould thinke it a crowne gotten or poſſeſſed with tyrannie and iniuſtice, it is called a [i] crowne of righteouſneſſe: and leſt we ſhould feare, that like earthly crownes, it ſhould bee ſubject to change and alteration; it is called a [k] crowne incorruptible, which cannot be taken from vs; and a [l] crowne of life, and therefore not to bee left or loſt by death; and leſt wee ſhould imagine that it is a copper crowne, baſe and of ſmall value, it is not onely ſaid to bee a glorious crowne, but a [m] crowne of glory, and of beautie. Yea, it is called [o] glory it ſelfe, to note vnto vs, that nothing in Heauen or Earth can bee more glorious. Thus alſo the rauiſhing ioy of this glorious Kingdome is plainely noted by thoſe titles and ſimilitudes which are in the word of God aſcribed and applied vnto it: for it is reſembled by a great [p] feaſt and banquet, where nothing is to bee found but mirth and gladneſſe, yea to a [q] marriage ſupper, which exceedeth all other feaſts in ioy and delight. It is called [r] reſt, wherein being freed from our labours, we ſhal wholy giue our ſelues to pleaſure; and that not an idle reſt, which is more tedious and loathſome, than buſineſſe and imployment, but a reſt which comforteth and [ſ] refreſheth vs, being ſpent in glorifying God, and in ſinging praiſes to him, who is the authour of all our welfare. So it is called [t] fulneſſe of ioy, to ſhew vnto vs, that we ſhall haue our hearts fully ſatisfied with thoſe pleaſures, and that there ſhall bee no part of vs emptie and void of delight. And the [u] ſwift flowing riuer, and torrent of pleaſure: to note that they are like a ſtreame, which hauing an indeficient and euerſpringing fountaine, the God of all ioy and comfort, can neuer become drie; and that wee ſhall bee wholly carried and tranſported by their loue, like a little boate in a ſwift current. Yea, and as though there were nothing now in Earth fit to reſemble the greatneſſe of this heauenly ioy, it is called [x] Paradiſe, which was that place of all joy and happineſſe, and that garden of pleaſure and delight, in which our firſt parents were placed in the ſtate of innocencie. And as though this temporary and finite happineſſe were not enough to expreſſe this eternall and vnſpeakeable glory, it is called the [y] ioy of our great Lord and Maſter, King of Heauen and Earth: to ſhew vnto vs, that ſeeing it is his ioy wherein he delighteth, it muſt needs like himſelfe, be infinite and eternall. Finally, the perpetuitie and euerlaſting con-

[h] Apoc.3.21.

[i] 2.Tim.4.8.

[k] 1.Cor.9.25.

[l] Iames 1.12. Apoc.2.10.

[m] 1.Pet.5.4. Wiſd.5.16.

[o] Rom.9.23.

[p] Apoc.19.9.

[q] Matth.22.2.

[r] 2.Theſ.1,7.

[ſ] Act.3.19.

[t] Pſal.16.11.

[u] Pſalm 36.8.

[x] Luke 23.43. Apoc.2.7.

[y] Matth.25.21.

a Iohn 14.2.
2.Cor.5.1.
b 1.Pet.1.4.
c 1.Pet.5.4.
d Apoc.12.6.
e Iohn 3.16.
f Matth.6.20.
g Heb.12.28.
h 1.Pet.5.10.

tinuance of this heauenly happineſſe, and ineffable glory, is plainely ſignified by thoſe names and titles, which in Gods Word are aſcribed vnto it. For it is called a [a] manſion and dwelling houſe, wherein wee are to remaine, and continually to inhabit in our owne Countrie, and is herein oppoſed to our earthly tents and tabernacles, out of which wee are ſtill flitting and remoouing. It is called, not a tenement at will, to bee poſſeſſed and left at the Landlords pleaſure, but [b] an inheritance, not like vnto our earthly patrimonies, which in a ſhort time, are taken away from vs, or we from them, but an inheritance immortall, vndefiled, and that fadeth not away. In which ſenſe alſo it is called an [c] incorruptible crowne, which cannot periſh; a [d] fountaine of life, which is neuer drie; [e] eternall life, which is ſubject to no mortalitie or end; [f] vncorrupted treaſures, which neither can periſh, nor be ſtollen away; a [g] Kingdome which cannot bee ſhaken with any violence, and [h] eternall glory, which neither hath any limits, nor knoweth end. Seeing therefore names wiſely giuen doe ſignifie the nature and properities of the things named, how vnſpeakeable and infinit are theſe ioyes of Heauen in all goodneſſe, glorie and happineſſe, which the wiſdome of God himſelfe hath impoſed all theſe names vpon, as knowing that no one, or few of them, are ſufficient to expreſſe, or ſo much as darkely to reſemble their infinit perfection, and ſurpaſſing excellencie?

Chap. IIII.

Of the happineſſe of the ſoule in the ioyes of Heauen, and wherein it conſiſteth.

§. Sect. 1. That all defects & wants in the ſoule ſhall be perfectly ſupplied.

ANd thus wee ſee in part, the excellency of theſe heauenly ioyes, by the names and titles which in the Scriptures are giuen vnto them. Now wee are to ſpeake of the parts of theſe ioyes, which are principally two: the firſt is the abſence of all euill, the ſecond is the preſence of all good: for when wee haue freedome from all thoſe euils which trouble vs, and haue the fruition of all good things which may comfort and delight vs, then, and then alone, can wee truly bee ſaid to haue attained vnto bleſſedneſſe. The former of theſe the Grecians ſignified by that name which they gaue vnto it, as though hee alone were bleſſed, who was exempted from the power of fate and death, and freed from all miſeries and calamities; the other the Hebrew name implieth, for being a Word in the plurall number it ſignifieth (as the learned Hebricians obſerue) that there onely is true bleſſedneſſe, where there is a pluralitie and confluence of all good. Seeing therefore the Scriptures plainely teach vs, that whoſoeuer attaine vnto theſe heauenly ioyes ſhall bee truely and perfectly bleſſed; from hence it followeth by neceſſarie conſequence, that all thoſe who ſhall be partakers of theſe ioyes, ſhall alſo be perfectly freed from all euils which might any way hurt or moleſt them, and alſo fully repleniſhed with all manner of good, which may benefit and delight them. For there (as one ſaith) is infinite joy, mirth without mourning, health without ſickneſſe, a pleaſant way without labour, light without darkeneſſe, life without death, all good without any euill. Where youth neuer waxeth old, where life knoweth no end, where beautie neuer decaieth, where the fire of loue neuer cooleth, where health neuer is enfeebled, where joy neuer decreaſeth, where griefe is neuer felt, where grones and lamentations are neuer heard, where nothing ſorrowfull is euer ſeene, where joy ſtill aboundeth, where no euill is euer feared, becauſe there our chiefe good is inioyed, which is to behold the face of our God, who is infinite in all vertue and perfection. Whoſoeuer then is a Citizen of this new Ieruſalem, and made partaker of this heauenly happineſſe, he ſhall bee perfectly freed from all thoſe euils, with which this fraile life is ſo much moleſted, and indued with all good, and inriched with all bleſſings and benefits, of which in this World, we are ſo deſtitute and naked. Now the euils vnto which in this life wee are ſubject, are either priuatiue, conſiſting in the abſence of thoſe things which are good; or poſitiue, conſiſting in the preſence of thoſe things which are euill; and both theſe reſpect, either the ſoule, or body alone, or the whole perſon. The defects and wants in the ſoule in this life are diuers; as firſt, the want of knowledge in the vnderſtanding, whereby wee might know God and his will, that wee might obey it, and our ſelues alſo; which wee were indued with in our creation, but loſt it by the fall of our firſt parents. Vnto which wee may adde the want of conformitie in our wils to the perfect will of God, the want of ſtrength and abilitie in our memories to remember that which is good, and that which God reuealeth vnto vs concerning himſelfe, or his will. And finally, the want of Gods image, chiefly conſiſting in wiſedome, righteouſneſſe and holineſſe; which is vtterly defaced by our fall, and theſe excellent graces of God cleane blotted out. All which, as they are in part renewed by our regeneration in this life, although it be in great weakneſſe, imperfection, and corruption; ſo ſhall they bee perfectly reſtored (and that in farre greater excellencie, than they were in our creation) in the life to come. For then ſhall wee perfectly know Euſtathius μάκαρα dictum ſcribit παρὰ τὸ μὴ ὑποκεῖσθαι κηρί.

אשרי

August. S loqu. li.
cap. 35.

God, and know our ſelues, according to that meaſure of knowledge which a creature is capable of; then ſhall our wils bee ſo perfectly conformable to the will of God, that we ſhall take our chiefe delight to ſerue and pleaſe him; then ſhall wee remember all his mercies and goodneſſe, eſpecially thoſe which concerne our creation, redemption and glorification, that wee may laud his name, who hath beene ſo gracious vnto vs: in a word, then ſhall the image of God be perfectly renewed, and wee ſhall be indued with all true wiſdome, holineſſe and righteouſneſſe, as wee ſhall more clearely declare hereafter.

And as all the defects of the ſoule ſhall be ſupplied; ſo are there many euils and corruptions, from which it ſhall bee deliuered: as for example, the vnderſtanding is exceedingly blinded with ignorance, ſo as wee naturally neither know God nor our ſelues, what is true happineſſe, nor the meanes to attaine vnto it. And as wee are as blind as moles in ſpirituall and heauenly things, ſo wee haue little knowledge in things naturall and ciuill; and yet ſuch is our folly, that though in theſe maine points, the knowledge whereof is neceſſary to ſaluation, wee are ſo blind and ignorant, that our whole life were too little and too ſhort, to bee imployed in the ſearching out of them, yet are we ready to neglect theſe, and to ſpend our time in the diſcuſſing of curious queſtions, of which the end of knowing, is onely to know them, they hauing no further vſe or profit. But in the kingdome of Heauen wee ſhall be freed, both from this ignorance and curioſitie, for we ſhall be endued with the knowledge of God, and in him we ſhall know all things; and therefore our curioſitie alſo ſhall ceaſe, as being needleſſe, ſeeing we ſhal be fully ſatisfied with all wiſdome and knowledge, as it ſhal better appeare hereafter. Now if in this life ignorance bee ſuch a grieuous burthen, that men who haue ſo much ſenſe as to feele their miſerie, are content to ſpend their whole time, and euen to conſume their ſtrength, that they may be eaſed of it; and if Philoſophers haue beene ſo rauiſhed with a dimme ſparke of knowledge, which was firſt kindled by the light of nature, and after blowne vpon, and encreaſed by their owne labour and induſtrie, that in compariſon thereof they haue contemned all the riches, pleaſures and preferments in the world; and if wee Chriſtians illuminated by Gods Spirit, take ſuch ioy and comfort in our knowledge, which is but in part, whereby we ſee darkely, as through a glaſſe, that wee deſeruedly preferre it before all the world and the vanities thereof; how ſhal wee then rejoyce, when being admitted into theſe heauenly ioyes, the ſcales of ignorance ſhal fall cleane from our eyes? how ſhall our hearts be cheared, when being deliuered from this Egyptian darkneſſe, wee ſhall in this heauenly Goſhen, haue the light of knowledge and truth clearely ſhining about vs, hauing not the leaſt miſt or cloud to hinder our ſight, from beholding the brightneſſe of Gods goodneſſe and glorie? And if ſuch a ſmall ſparke of this knowledge, bee ſo pleaſant and delightfull; what will it then bee when this light ſhall be ſo encreaſed, that it ſhal match the Sunne in his full ſtrength? If our darkeneſſe and dimme ſight, as through a glaſſe be ſo eſteemable, what ſhall that bee, when we ſhal ſee face to face?

1.Cor.13.12.

§. Sect. 3.
That our wils ſhall be freed from their peruerſenes, and be made conformable to the will of God.

So alſo our wils ſhall in the life to come bee freed from all euill, and that both in reſpect of their impuritie and corruption, and alſo in regard of their impotencie and imperfection. In this life they are peruerſe, ſtubborne, and rebellious; moſt backward to any thing which is good, and prone vnto all euill, and in ſtead of conformitie betweene them and the will of God, there is ſuch flat oppoſition and repugnancie; that the very knowledge of that which God requireth, is a ſufficient motiue to make vs will the contrarie, and his prohibitions ſet a maruellous edge on our appetites to doe that which wee know he hath forbidden: but in the life to come all this corruption and peruerneſſe of our wils ſhall bee taken away, and they being made wholy conformable to the will of God, ſhall not will any thing which is euill and ſinfull, but that onely which is iuſt, acceptable, and pleaſing in his ſight. Yea then all our deſire ſhall be to glorifie God, to prayſe and ſerue him, not as we doe heere, with great reluctation, conflicts and oppoſitions, but with a full and perfect conſent, freely, and with much more alacritie and cheerefulneſſe, than euer wee tooke in following our owne luſts and the pleaſures of this life; ſo that as our Sauiour Chriſt ſpeaketh of himſelfe, it ſhall be more pleaſing vnto vs than our meate and drinke, when here wee are moſt an hungred, to doe the will of our heauenly Father. And that which ought chiefly to comfort vs, our wils ſhall be moſt free, but yet inclinable onely to chuſe that which is good; like the will of God himſelfe, who though he moſt freely willeth, yet hee neuer willeth any euill, his will being the perfect rule of all iuſtice; ſo that wee ſhall not onely not chuſe any euill or ſinne, but not haue any inclination or abilitie to make ſuch choice, both becauſe our ſanctification ſhall bee then moſt perfect, which is now imperfect and onely begun. Whereof it will come to paſſe that we ſhall haue a perfect hatred of ſinne, and a perfect loue of righteouſneſſe and holineſſe; and alſo becauſe our wils ſhall neuer be forſaken of God, and left to themſelues, but

Rom.7.8.

Iohn 4.

ſhal

ſhall alwayes be ſo effectually, and powerfully ruled and gouerned by the moſt wiſe and juſt will of God, that it ſhall not bee poſſible for them to erre, or to digreſſe any whit out of the way of juſtice and truth. In which reſpect our will ſhall not be like vnto Adams, arbitrarie to good or euill, or mutably and changeably good; but like Gods will, moſt immutable and conſtant in all goodneſſe, righteouſneſſe, and holineſſe, ſo as it ſhall be altogether impoſſible vnto vs, either to will that which God nilleth, or to nil that which hee willeth: the which immutabilitie in goodneſſe, ſhall not then be grounded on our owne ſtrength and abilities of nature, for then had wee cauſe juſtly to feare, that we might like Adam be againe circumuented by Satans ſubtilties; but it ſhall haue this firmeneſſe and immutabitie from Gods eternall loue and election, which is immutable, and on his gracious and neuer failing promiſes, which (as the Apoſtle ſaith) are Yea and Amen, ſubject to no change or alteration: for hee who hath promiſed that our ioyes ſhal be eternall, hath conſequently vndertaken to preſerue vs from falling into any ſinne, which would cut off our happineſſe, and ruine our joy. To this purpoſe one of the Ancients ſpeaketh no leſſe excellently than fitly; The firſt free will (ſaith he) which was giuen to man, when hee was firſt created in righteouſneſſe and holineſſe, was that hee was able not to ſinne, but withall that he could alſo ſin if hee would: but our free will in Heauen ſhall bee much more powerfull than this, in that it ſhall haue no power to ſinne; but this ſhall be the gift of God, and not by the power of our naturall faculties. For it is one thing to be God, and another thing to haue participation and communion with God: for God in his owne nature cannot ſinne; but hee who is partaker of God, receiues this power from him, that hee cannot ſinne, &c. For as the firſt immortalitie which Adam loſt by ſinning, was to be able not to die, but his laſt ſhall bee, not to be able to die; ſo the firſt free will was, to be able not to ſinne; but the laſt free will ſhal bee, not to bee able to ſinne; for our willing of righteouſneſſe and holineſſe, ſhal bee alike vnlooſeable with our felicitie, &c. The other euill from which our wils ſhal bee freed, is, impotencie and inabilitie, to effect that which they will; for in this life although they doe with all earneſtneſſe deſire many things, yet they are not able to atchieue them, becauſe they are not agreeable and conformable to the will of God, and therefore he croſſeth and fruſtrateth them: but in the life to come they ſhall be effectuall and powerfull in atchieuing whatſoeuer they deſire, becauſe they are in all things agreeable and ſubordinate to the will of God, and conſequently doe moſt ſurely attaine vnto their ends, ſeeing there is no power in Heauen or in Earth, which is able to croſſe and defeate the will of God, his will being moſt wiſe and immutable, and his power omnipotent and vnreſiſtable. To which purpoſe the ſame Authour (as it is aſcribed vnto him) ſaith, that becauſe our wils are one and the ſame with Gods will, therefore we ſhal bee after a ſort omnipotent, in bringing our wils to paſſe, as God alſo is omnipotent: for as God can doe whatſoeuer hee will doe by himſelfe, ſo ſhall wee doe whatſoeuer we will doe, by him; becauſe wee ſhal will nothing elſe, but that which hee alſo willeth, and he alſo willeth whatſoeuer we will and deſire, and whatſoeuer hee willeth that muſt neceſſarily come to paſſe; ſeeing he is moſt powerful and omnipotent, to effect his will. Now if worldly Princes and Potentates account it a chiefe part of their regal happineſſe, that they may haue their wils; though in truth they are as often croſſed herein as inferiour perſons, partly through the repugnancie and oppoſition of their owne paſſions and deſires, and partly through the diſcrepancie and contrarietie of their ſtate affaires, and of the things themſelues which they deſire to effect: and though when they haue their wils they receiue thereby little comfort and contentment, becauſe oftentimes being led by paſſion, they are oppoſed to the reuealed will of God, reaſon, and euen the light of nature, which worketh in them both afore and after their wils are accompliſhed, grieuous conflicts betweene their will and their conſcience, terrors, feares, and many troubles of minde: how infinitly more happie ſhall the pooreſt Saint of God be in the kingdome of Heauen, when in all things which they can deſire they ſhal haue their will, without any croſſe or oppoſition; and it being wholy conformable to the will of God, and to the rule of holy reaſon, ſhal alſo haue in accompliſhing of it, joy, peace and full contentment, not onely becauſe it is done, but alſo becauſe God and their owne reaſon and conſcience approue the doing of it?

Sicut prima immortalitas fuit, quam peccando Adam perdidit, poſſe non mori, nouiſſima erit non poſſe mori: ita primum liberum arbitrium poſſe non peccare, nouiſſimum non poſſe peccare. Auguſt. de Ciuit. Dei. lib. 22. cap. 30.

The like alſo may be ſaid of our memories, for whereas in this life wee cannot imprint in them any good thing, but preſently it will be blotted out, nor blot out any ill thing once written, but that our corruption like aqua fortis will doe out the litorature and ſtaine, and ſo renue it, that it will againe become legible; in the ioyes of Heauen wee ſhall be freed from this corruption; and our memories ſhall become faire tables of ſuch an holy Making, that they will eaſily receiue the writing and impreſſion of Gods will, imprinted in them by the finger of his Spirit, neuer againe to bee blotted out; and contrariwiſe will not by any poſſible meanes, receiue the print or impreſſion of any euill, but whether it bee ſinne or puniſhment it ſhal vtterly bee done away and forgotten, ſo farre forth as the remembrance thereof would bring vnto vs any vexation or diſcomfort. For howſoeuer wee ſhal forget both our ſinnes and miſeries, as they haue beene diſhonourable to God, and cauſes vnto vs of griefe and ſorrow; yet ſhal we ſo farre forth remember them, as they may make vs in all loue and thankfulneſſe to laud and magnifie our gracious God, for his mercifull and meruailous deliuerance of vs from all theſe euils. And therefore (as it is diſtinguiſhed) we ſhal be mindful of our paſſed euils in reſpect of our rationall knowledge, and facultie of vnderſtanding; but vtterly forgetful of them in reſpect of our ſenſe, feeling and experience: euen as we ſee the skilfull Phyſitian knoweth all diſeaſes of the body in his skill and theory; but in reſpect of his owne ſenſe and experience, is ignorant of all thoſe, which he neuer ſuffered. Finally, our conſciences in the fruition of theſe heauenly ioyes ſhal bee freed from all their corruptions, vnto which in this life they are ſubiect; as from their impuritie, ſtupiditie and ſleepineſſe; or their terrible accuſations, horrors, and feares; and being full of joy and peace, in regard that all our actions and endeauours ſhall bee moſt holy, righteous, and agreeable with the will of God, they ſhal onely obſerue our hearts, affections, and actions, (not as in this life to preuent their diſorder, and digreſſions, that they may recall and reclaime them) but that taking notice of their perfect conformitie with the will of God, and approuing them, they may thereby continually renue our joy and comfort, and miniſter matter vnto vs of prayſing and glorifying God, for preſeruing vs in this puritie and holineſſe. O how much therefore will this adde to our heauenly ioyes, when we ſhal forget all, which being remembred might moleſt and trouble vs; and retaine all thoſe good things in perfect memorie, the remembrance whereof may bring vnto vs any ioy and contentment? how happy and bleſſed ſhal wee be, when our conſciences ſhal leaue off to accuſe and terifie vs; and bee onely exerciſed in iuſtifying vs, and in giuing approbation to all our actions?

And theſe are the defects of our ſoules, which ſhal then bee ſupplied, and the euils from which they ſhal be deliuered: which being vnderſtood, wee ſhal not neede to ſpeake much of thoſe good things, and of the excellent parts and qualities, wherewith they ſhal bee beautified and adorned, ſeeing there is the ſame reaſon of contraries, and the one being knowne, doth by direct oppoſition ſhew the nature and qualities of the other. In a word therefore, as our ſoules ſhal bee freed from ignorance, ſo they ſhal be endued with heauenly wiſedome, whereby they ſhal know God in that perfection, that the creature is capable of, the high myſterie of the Trinitie, and of the vnion of Chriſts humanitie to the diuine nature, and of the faithful vnto Chriſt. And this knowledge ſhal not then bee darke, and as in a glaſſe, like our dimme knowledge in this life, but cleare and perſpicuous, and (as it were) face to face; it ſhal not then be in part onely, but whole and perfect; for then ſhall wee know, euen as we are knowne. 1.Cor.13.9.10.11.12. In this life wee lie (as it were) in a dungeon of darkneſſe; and all the comfort that wee haue is, that the light of Gods truth, whereby the eyes of our minds are illightned, with ſome ſmall and dimme knowledge of God, ſhineth vnto vs, as thorow a little chinke or hole: but when we attaine to heauenly happineſſe, and enjoy the glorious libertie of the ſonnes of God, then ſhal wee be compaſſed about with light, as with a garment, and our minds ſhal receiue perfect illumination, and fulneſſe of knowledge. Finally, we ſhal not attaine vnto this diuine knowledge, as in this life, with paines and exceſſiue labour, whereby wee conſume the body to enrich the ſoule; neither yet by ſecondarie and inferiour meanes, as namely, the hearing, reading, and meditation of the Word, and the vſe of the Sacraments, through which we ſee after all our ſtudy and induſtrie but darkely, and (as it were) thorow ſome dimme glaſſe; but wee ſhall haue it with all eaſe and facilitie by the immediate illumination of Gods holy ſpirit, whereby being inlightned, wee ſhal ſee all things cleerely, and without vaile or ſhadow, ſeeing at this day there ſhall bee no miniſtery of Man or Angel, but God ſhall be all in all. 1.Cor.15.8. So alſo our ſoules ſhal bee indued with perfect holineſſe, whereby wee ſhal be inabled to performe all good duties vnto God, that ſo wee may euerlaſtingly glorifie him; and with perfect righteouſneſſe, whereby with like perfection wee ſhall performe all duties of loue and juſtice, which wee owe to one another, to our mutuall joy and vnſpeakable comfort. But becauſe this holineſſe and righteouſneſſe belong not to the ſoule alone, but vnto the whole man, I will referre them to their proper place.

CHAP. V.

Of the ſpeciall happineſſe and felicitie of our bodies in the Kingdome of Heauen.

§. Sect. 1. That we ſhall be freed frō all bodily wants & grieuances;

ANd this ſhal bee the happineſſe of our ſoules. Our bodies likewiſe ſhall bee freed from all euill, and repleniſhed with all good; and firſt as hunger and thirſt.

Matth. 22. 30.

Apoc.7.16.

Auguſt.ſerm.in feſt.paſch.tom. 10.c.1533.

Symb.ad Catechum.lib.2. cap.11.

Pſal.36.8.

Luk.22. 29.30.

Prou 9,2.

Plutarch.
Quiſpi Deus tra confeſſio
in Pſal.

firſt they ſhal haue all their defects and wants ſupplyed, and all imperfections taken away. They ſhall then be freed from hunger and thirſt, and conſequently ſhall haue no need of meate and drinke. And this our Sauiour implieth, where he ſaith, that in the reſurrection wee ſhall be like the Angels of God in Heauen; and plainely expreſſeth it to his Apoſtle Iohn, where deſcribing the ſtate of the bleſſed, he ſaith, they ſhall hunger no more, neither thirſt any more. To which purpoſe one ſaith, that here we hunger and thirſt, and haue need to bee ſatisfied: but though wee haue this want in our way, wee ſhal in our country haue ſatietie. The reaſon whereof is cleere and manifeſt; for ſeeing our bodies ſhal bee immortal and incorruptible, therefore no part of their ſubſtance can conſume or waſte, and conſequently they ſhall neede no refreſhing or reparation by meate and drinke. Againe, to need meate and drinke are infirmities of nature, which growing to extremitie cauſe death; but (as one ſaith) there ſhal no infirmitie and corruption riſe with vs; and by the ſame reaſon, neither ſhal wee then haue thoſe things which ordinarily ſerue for the ſupplie of theſe infirmities and imperfections. Only wee ſhal then haue that bread of life, which for our ſakes came downe from Heauen, and that fountaine of life, of which whoſoeuer drinke ſhal neuer thirſt, with whoſe preſence our ſoules ſhal bee ſatisfied, according to that of the Pſalmiſt: They ſhall be ſatisfied with the fatnes of thine houſe, and thou ſhalt giue them drinke out of the riuer of thy pleaſures; for with thee is the well of life, and in thy light ſhall wee ſee light. Now if any object that the Scriptures make mention of eating and drinking in the kingdome of Heauen; and that our Sauiour Chriſt promiſeth to appoint a kingdome to his Diſciples, where they ſhould eate and drinke at his table: the anſwere is, that theſe are but borrowed ſpeeches, wherby the holy Ghoſt fitteth himſelſe to our capacitie, that hee might giue vs ſome taſte of theſe heauenly ioyes in theſe earthly actions, which in their owne excellencie, are vnto vs vnconceiuable. Euen as Wiſedome is is ſaid to haue killed her victuals, drawne out her wine, and prepared her table. Which bodily actions cannot agree to wiſedome which is of a ſpirituall nature, but are onely borrowed ſpeeches whereby the excellencie and profit of Gods ſpirituall graces, as the knowledge of God, a good conſcience, and joy in the holy Ghoſt are noted and ſignified. And if it bee further alleaged that the Angels themſelues and our Sauiour Chriſt after his reſurrection, are ſaid to haue eaten and drunken; wee are to know that in them both, they were actions of power, and not of any neceſſitie; and our Sauiour did not eate for hunger, but that he might ſhew the truth of his humane nature, by theſe naturall actions of eating & drinking; neither were theſe meates and drinkes turned into nouriſhment, or to the increaſing, or perſeruing the ſubſtance of his body, but were againe diſſolued into their firſt principles and elements. Now if an epicure placing a part of his happineſſe in eating and drinking, ſhall thinke in this reſpect that our eſtate ſhall bee worſe becauſe wee ſhall not haue the pleaſure of meate and drinke; let him know that our pleaſure and delight ſhall be infinitly more, in our participation of our ſpirituall nouriſhment the bread and water of life. And if hee ſhall aske what imployment wee can haue, when as wee ſhall haue no vſe of theſe naturall actions, it is all alike (as one ſaith) as if the daughters of Danae ſhould bee carefull what to doe, if they had filled their leaking veſſell. For hunger and thirſt are among thoſe puniſhments which are due vnto ſin, from which when we are deliuered, we are reſtored to a degree of happineſſe; and theſe meates and drinkes being taken at the beſt, are the comforts of pilgrimes, and not the delights of the bleſſed; and howſoeuer it is good to haue them when wee want them, yet it is better not to want them, than to haue them.

§. Sect.
Of other worldly from wh bodies freed.

a Apoc.3.4.

b Rom.8.1

c Apoc.21. and 22.5. Eſay 60.

So we ſhall not in this heauenly happineſſe ſtand in need of ſleepe, ſeeing we ſhall not be ſpent or wearied by labour; nor ſhall need to haue our ſpirits refreſhed, ſeeing we ſhal liue by the al-ſufficient Spirit of God, which can neuer neede any renouation. We ſhall not there need phyſicke, ſeeing wee ſhal enjoy perpetuall health, nor any more clog our ſtomacks, and emptie our purſes, with theſe lothſome drugges, ſeeing after we haue taſted of the tree of life, we ſhall be priuiledged and preſerued from all diſeaſes. Wee ſhall not there want clothes, ſeeing God will giue vnto vs the [a] long white garments of immortalitie, that neuer can bee worne out; which ſhal bee ſo beautiful and glorious, that (like the Sun) wee ſhal bee beſt adorned, when wee haue no other couering, but our owne reſplendent and Majeſticall brighneſſe. Wee ſhal not in theſe ioyes neede the ayre to coole our heate and keepe vs from ſtifling; neither yet breathing and reſpiration, ſeeing we ſhall not liue any longer by the helpe of this animal facultie, but (as the Apoſtle teacheth vs) ſhall bee immediatly quickened by [b] Gods holy ſpirit which alſo giueth life to Chriſt our head. We ſhall not there neede the Sun, for [c] the glory of God ſhall illighten that heauenly City, and the Lambe ſhall bee the light of it. To this purpoſe alſo the Prophet Eſay ſaith: Thou ſhalt haue no more Sun to ſhine by day, neither ſhall the brightneſſe neſſe of the Moonneſhine vnto her: for the Lord ſhall be thine euerlaſting light, and thy God thy glory. Thy Sunne ſhall neuer goe downe, neither ſhall thy Moone be hid, for the Lord ſhall be thine euerlaſting light, and the dayes of thy ſorrow ſhall be ended. And becauſe this Sunne neuer ſetteth, there ſhal neuer be any night there; and conſequently no need of any watch to keepe the gates of that Citie, or of the helpe of Candle light, as the Apoſtle ſpeaketh. And yet though the gates be ſtil open, no vncleane [d] thing can enter into that holy Citie, it being the nature of that Land to put to flight all hurtful vermine, and the poyſonous brood of the olde Serpent. In a word, in this fulneſſe of joy we ſhal not want any thing, for [e] God ſhall bee vnto vs all in all; & he who is [f] all-ſufficient ſhal alſo be our [g] exceeding great reward.

And as we ſhal haue all our bodily wants ſupplyed with all manner of good, and our defects and imperfections wholy aboliſhed; ſo alſo ſhall our bodies be freed from al thoſe poſitiue euils, wherwith in this life they are ſo much troubled and afflicted; for there ſhalbe no more curſe, [h] becauſe there ſhalbe no more ſinne; and conſequently there ſhal bee no plagues and puniſhments, which are contained and compriſed in the malediction. There ſhal be no faintneſſe, becauſe no trauel; nor languiſhing wearineſſe, becauſe we ſhal enjoy perpetual reſt; there ſhal bee no ſeruitude and bondage, becauſe wee ſhal all enjoy the liberty of the ſonnes of God; nor baſe ſubjection, ſeeing we ſhal al [i] reigne as Kings, acknowledging fealty vnto none but to the great Monarch of Heauen and Earth, who alſo wil require no other tribute of vs, but prayſe and thankſgiuing for all his benefits. There our bodies ſhal not bee parched with [k] heate, ſeeing wee ſhal haue a comfortable ſhade and refreſhing vnder the ſhadow of Gods wings, and the Tree of Life; neither ſhal they be pinched with chilling cold, ſeeing the Sunne of righteouſneſſe wil continually ſhine vpon vs, and comfortably warme vs with the beames of his loue. They ſhal not there haue any monſtrous ſhapes, blemiſhes, and deformities, but bee reſtored to perfect beauty, ſeeing theſe are the fruits and effects of ſinne, which muſt of neceſſitie ceaſe, when their cauſe ceaſeth. There they ſhal not be moleſted with wounds and ſkarres, nor worne out and conſumed with ſickneſſes and diſeaſes; there ſhal be no loathſome Leproſies, nor ſpreading Plagues, nor pining Conſumptions, nor raging Feuers. There the head ſhal be free from Megrims, the hands from Palſies, the feet from Gouts, the eyes from dimneſſe, the eares from deafnes, the joynts from lameneſſe, the bones from aches, and the whole body both from deſperate diſeaſes, and the ſmalleſt maladies. In a word, as the body ſhal be priuiledged from entertaining theſe Harbingers of Death, ſo ſhal they bee freed from giuing any more Lodging to that al-killing Tyrant; for then not only the ſting of Death, but euen Death it ſelfe ſhal be taken away.

1.Cor.15.54.

§ Sect. 4.
Of the good things which ſhall be communicated to our bodies; & firſt ſpirituall qualities.

And theſe with many more, are the euils from which our bodies ſhall be deliuered. The good things, and excellent parts which ſhall be communicated vnto them, are diuers. As firſt, they ſhall be ſpirituall bodies, as the Apoſtle alſo teſtifieth: It is ſowne a naturall body and is raiſed a ſpirituall body: As it is written, the firſt man Adam was made a liuing ſpirit, &c. Whereby wee are not to vnderſtand that the ſubſtance of our bodies ſhall be ſpirituall, or that they ſhall be turned into ſpirits; for wee ſhall riſe with the ſame bodies, conſiſting, in reſpect of their ſubſtance, of fleſh and bones, as they now doe. Neither doth the Apoſtle ſay that wee ſhall become ſpirits, but that wee ſhall haue ſpirituall bodies. Now it is one thing to be a ſpirit, or ſpirituall ſubſtance, and another thing to haue a ſpirituall body; for a ſpirit hath neither fleſh nor bones, but a ſpirituall body hath both. Againe, it is vnnaturall and impoſſible for a body to bee changed into a ſpirit, ſeeing they haue not the ſame matter; and contrary alſo to the Scriptures, which teach vs, that man ſhall riſe to inherit glory: now a perfect man conſiſteth as wel of a body as of a ſoule; and therefore hee cannot be all ſpirit, but muſt haue as well a corporall as a ſpirituall ſubſtance. Furthermore, holy Iob profeſſeth his aſſurance, that hee ſhould ſee God in his fleſh, and that he the very ſame, and not another ſhould ſee him, and that his owne eyes ſhould behold him. Finally, ſuch as our Sauiour Chriſts body was, ſuch alſo ſhal ours be, but he had a true, materiall, and phyſicall body, conſiſting of fleſh and bloud, which might not onely be ſeene, but alſo handled; for ſo himſelfe ſaith; Behold my hands and my feet, for it is I my ſelfe; handle mee and ſee, for a ſpirit hath not fleſh and bones, as you ſee mee haue. Neither is that objection of any force, that we ſhall be like the Angels in Heauen and therefore ſpirits; ſeeing the contrary rather followeth; wee ſhal be like them, and therefore not the ſame. And not like them in all things, but in not eating and drinking, marrying, and giuing in marriage, and ſuch like. Whereas therefore the Apoſtle ſaith, that we ſhal haue ſpirituall bodies, & oppoſeth them to natural and phyſical bodies, it is not to be vnderſtood generally of all natural bodies, but of ſuch alone as we now haue, which are ſubject to mortalitie & corruption. Neither is it his meaning, that they ſhall be ſpirituall in regard of their ſubſtance, which ſhall bee one and the ſame as now it is, but in diuers other reſpects. As firſt, becauſe they ſhall be quickned by the Spirit of God, and be preſerued and continued in their

1.Cor.44.45.

Luke 24.39.

Matth.22.30.

1.Cor.15.56.

§ Sect. 4. Of the good things which ſhall be communicated to our bodies, & firſt ſpirituall qualities.

1.Cor.15.53.

§ Sect. 7. [illegible]

their liues, by the vertue and vigour of this ſpirit, which dwelling primarily and aboue meaſure in Chriſt our Head, is from him communicated to vs who are his members; & ſhal no more liue by their animal faculty, nor need for the preſeruation of their liues, meat, drinke, clothing, ſleepe, phyſicke and ſuch like helpes which are altogether neceſſary in this ſtate of mortalitie. In which reſpects they ſhall ceaſe to be naturall bodies, as they ſhall be freed from theſe animal faculties, of nouriſhing, increaſing and multiplying by generation; for no more ſhall they liue by vertue of meat and drinke thrice concocted, firſt in the ſtomacke, turning it to chylus; then in the miſeraicke veines and liuer, conuerting it into bloud; and laſtly in the ſeuerall parts, when it is turned into their ſubſtance, either for the augmentation or preſeruation of the body; but ſhall be ſpirituall and heauenly, liuing without all theſe helpes, by ſole vertue of Gods Spirit, and that life which they communicate from Chriſt their Head, and ſo ſhall in reſpect of this ſpirituall quickening become ſpirituall, euen as the wax of the Candle being kindled by the fire becommeth a flame, and like vnto the fire whereby it is kindled. But yet it ſhall remayne naturall, as it ſtill retaineth its owne ſubſtance, and the faculties of reaſon, ſenſe, and motion, whereby it ſhall ſtill be guided and gouerned; by vertue of that power which our ſoules ſhall receiue from the Spirit of God. Againe, they may be called after the reſurrection, ſpirituall, becauſe they ſhall in all things be ſubject to Gods Spirit, and be by it wholy ruled and gouerned; for that which in this behalfe the ſoule is in this life to the body, that in the life to come ſhall the Spirit of God be to both ſoule and body, obeying it in al things, not in part onely and imperfectly as in this world, but moſt perfectly, wholy, and willingly without the leaſt diſlike or reluctation. In which reſpect alſo it may be called ſpirituall, as it doth attaine vnto ſpirituall, angelicall, and moſt abſolute and free obedience. And with this agreeth the iudgement of that worthy ancient. When as (ſaith hee) wee heare that our bodies are to become ſpirituall, wee are not ſo to vnderſtand it, as though our body ſhould be changed into a ſpiritual ſubſtance, and ſo become a ſpirit; for neither our body now which is called animal is changed into a ſoule, but retayneth its owne ſubſtance. But that is ſaid to be a ſpirituall body, which is ſo in all things ſubject to the Spirit of God, as befitteth that heauenly habitation, all humane fragilitie, and earthly infirmity, being changed and turned into heauenly puritie, and immortalitie. Finally, our bodies ſhall be ſpirituall, in regard that they ſhal be indued and adorned with ſpirituall qualities; for to this end the Apoſtles diſcourſe wholy tendeth, not to ſhew that they ſhal haue their ſubſtance ſpirituall in the reſurrection, but onely their qualities; that whereas now they are mortal, corruptible, earthly, and indued with earthly qualities, as heauineſſe, ſlowneſſe, faintneſſe, weakneſſe and the reſt; they ſhal then become immortal, incorruptible, heauenly, and indued with heauenly and ſpiritual qualities.

August. de fide & ſymbolo cap.5.tom.3.

Now theſe ſpirituall qualities are diuers: as firſt immortality; for our Sauiour Chriſt ſaith, they ſhall die no more, for as much as the Saints ſhall bee equall vnto the Angels, and are the ſonnes of God, &c. And the Apoſtle telleth vs that our mortall muſt put on immortalitie. So by the ſame reaſon they muſt needs be incorruptible: for as hee ſpeaketh in the ſame Chapter, our bodies are ſown in corruption, and raiſed in incorruption: and againe, our corruptible muſt put on incorruption. Vnto this we may adde their agilitie, and their quicke, nimble, and light motion; for being glorified, they are perfectly ruled by the ſoule, and yeeld vnto it ready ſeruice, not being now hindred by their waight or ſluggiſhneſſe, from the preſent performing of any action wherein it wil imploy them: ſo as they ſhal be able to aſcend, as wel as deſcend; as we ſee in the example of our Sauiour, aſcending into Heauen in the ſight of his Apoſtles; and to moue from place to place with incredible ſwiftneſſe, not being at all hindred by their waight. For if (as one ſaith) Lead, which naturally ſinketh to the bottome as ſoone as it is caſt into the water, may by the art of the workman be made in ſuch a forme, thinne, hollow, and like a Boat, that it wil ſwimme and floate aloft; ſhal we think that God cannot giue that abilitie to our body, that the workman to the Lead? And if the water which is naturally heauy, can be made ſo thinne and ſubtile, that it hangeth in the Aire, and is carried about with the wind; how much more may a glorified body, quickened by Gods Spirit, be freed from its dul heauineſſe, and haue power to aſcend, and to moue which way the ſoule pleaſeth to guide it? Againe, we ſee by experience, that the heauier a body is, the ſlower it naturally is, and vnfit for motion, and the lighter it is, the more ſwift and nimble; & yet who ſeeth not, that a mans body which is lean & weak, though it be light, yet moueth ſlowly; and that his body who is in good liking, ſtrong and vigorous; though it be more heauy, is quicke and ſwift in motion? If therefore health can worke this great difference, and make that which is heauy to bee carried by another, light to be carried by it ſelfe; euen as the want thereof maketh that heauy to it ſelfe, which is light vnto another; how much more ſhal this be effected by immortalitie, and the quickening vertue of Gods powerful Spirit? But whether this motion ſhal bee equal in ſwiftneſſe to our ſoule and thoughts, and whether our bodies ſhal be able in an inſtant to paſſe from place to place, as ſome do iudge; or whether they ſhal onely moue with great and extraordinary ſpeed, paſſing whither they wil, though it be in great diſtance, in a very ſhort time, we cannot determine; howſoeuer I thinke this latter much more probable. Finally, our bodies being freed from their earthly groſſeneſſe, ſhall be ſubtile and of a much more fine and pure ſubſtance, not by diminution of their quantity, for in this reſpect it ſhal retaine all its dimenſions, not by reaſon of any rare faction, as water is made ſubtile, in the miſts and clouds; for then our bodies could not be felt, as our Sauiour Chriſt was after his reſurrection; but in reſpect of the compleate perfection of it, in its eſſence and kind, which perfection it hath from the dominion of Gods ſpirit dwelling in it, & of the glorified ſoule which doth informe it, vnto which it is ſubiect; and by reaſon of this perfection which it hath from them, is fit and able for the performing of all actions and motions of the ſoule wherein it will imploy it; for otherwiſe it would ſtil be a burthen & hinderance to the ſoule as it is in this life. And in reſpect of this ſubtility, wherby it is fitted to be ſubiect, and (as it were) the ready inſtrument of the ſoule, it cannot bee hindred in its motion by the oppoſition of any ſolid body, nor yet included, impriſoned, or violently detained in any place. Of which wee haue an example in our Sauiour Chriſts body after his reſurrection, which by reaſon of the ſubtility thereof did ſuddenly appeare vnto his Apoſtles, and preſently againe diſappeared, and alſo did come amongſt them into the roome where they were, the doore being ſhut; not by penetrating their ſubſtance, which is againſt the nature of a body, conſiſting of fleſh and bones; but by their inuiſible yeelding to giue paſſage to this moſt perfect body, that it might hereby bee imployed in ſuch actions as his holy ſpirit, and moſt diuine ſoule thought fit. Finally to this ſubtility we may alſo referre that moſt acute, quicke, and exquiſite perception and comprehenſion of the ſenſes, which the glorified body ſhal haue, & the puritie of the affections, whereby (notwithſtanding they communicate with the body) they ſhall bee moſt obedient and ſeruiceable to the mind, and no more trouble and diſturbe it with their groſneſſe and impurity.

Vnto theſe ſpiritual qualities we may adde diuers others, as namely, they ſhall bee indued with great power and ſtrength, and enioy for euer moſt perfect health and whereas now the ſoule being a ſpirit, mighty, and powerfull, cannot ſhew its ſtrength, becauſe of the weakneſſe of the body, which is its organ and inſtrument; in reſpect whereof we ſee by experience, that it exerciſeth its functions and actions more ſtrongly or weakly, according to the meaſure of bodily ſtrength and health which it vſeth and imployeth: in our heauenly Countrie our bodies ſhal enioy ſuch perfect health, and be indued with ſuch powerfull ſtrength, that they ſhal match the abilitie of the ſoule, and become ſo fit for it in vigour and might, that it ſhal not as it doth now hinder the actions thereof with its weakneſſe, and wearineſſe, but become a perfect and ſufficient inſtrument for all imployments. And this quality the Apoſtle attributeth vnto it, where he ſaith, that it is ſowne in weakneſſe, but is raiſed in power. So alſo they ſhal bee indued with impaſſibility, and be freed from ſuffering any hurt or detriment from any outward agent, to which in this life they are ſo much ſubiected; and conſequently they ſhalbe freed from all alteration, diminution, and corruption: for ſeeing all paſſion or ſuffering proceedeth from an ouer-bearing power of the agent ouer the patient; and for as much as nothing can thus ouer-rule, but by ouercomming the forme of the patient, which reſiſteth all outward force as long as it hath any ability; and finally, ſeeing our humane bodies ſhal bee perfectly ſubiected vnto our ſoules, by which they are informed, euen as the ſoule alſo is perfectly ſubiected vnto God; by whoſe vertue and power they are defended from all outward violence, hurts and iniuries; therefore neceſſarily they become impaſſible, and free from euil, becauſe there is no outward agent able to ouercome our powerful ſoules, & the more powerful Spirit of God; nor ſo ſtrong and mighty to hurt our bodies, as they are to preſerue and defend them.

1.Cor.15.43.

§. Sect. 7. That our bodies ſhall be beautifull, and of a comely ſtature and proportion.

Finally, they ſhal be adorned with moſt compleat and perfect beauty, and that both in reſpect of the comely and due proportion, and ſymmetry of all the parts and members, and fit quantity and ſtature of the whole body; and alſo in reſpect of the colour & complexion. So that then our bodies ſhal be freed from all maymes, defects, and monſtrous ſhapes, from all deformities, blemiſhes, and diſgraces; from al diſproportion, & vnſeemely ſhape of the members one with another, and in themſelues: and the whole man ſhal be adorned and graced with a goodly ſhape, feature and comelineſſe. And as there ſhal be perfection of all the parts of the body, ſo alſo of the whole in reſpect of age and ſtature. For although we can gather little concerning this point directly and plainely out of the Scriptures, yet may it bee inferred by conſequence, and concluded by good reaſon; for if old age and childhood bee the infirmities & imperfections of man, the one not hauing attained the perfection of nature, and the other being paſt it, and the middle age moſt compleat and perfect, & ſeeing both a genelike and dwarfiſh ſtature, are the aberrations of nature, and much more imperfect than a proportionable perſon, and a body of a conuenient and comely quantity; then it will follow hereupon that al the ſaints of heauen ſhal bee of a middle and perfect age, and though not of an exact equality, yet of a comely and goodly ſtature, for as much as in the ſtate of bleſſedneſſe al imperfections and infirmities ſhall bee taken away, and that which is moſt perfect and excellent ſhal bee receiued and inioyed. And of this I am the more certainely perſuaded, becauſe God in the firſt creation, making man his moſt perfect creature, did make him neither a child nor old man, but of a middle and perfect age, nor yet of huge ſtature (for giants came long after, through that monſtrous and vnequall matching of the ſons of God with the daughters of men) nor of dwarfiſh ſmalneſſe, in which there is no maieſty or comelineſſe; but of ſuch a mean and conuenient ſtature, as might make maieſty and beauty meet together. And therefore ſeeing our reſurrection ſhal be a renouation, and (as it were) a new and more perfect creation, than the firſt in Adam; it is more than probable, that there will bee a conformity, and likeneſſe between them, ſeing that the latter ſhall bee much more perfect and excellent, God then purpoſing to ſhew his extraordinarie goodneſſe, mercie, wiſdome and power, in aduancing the bleſſed eſtate and condition of the veſſels of grace, whom he hath choſen to honour and euerlaſting glory. Againe, if the Lord promiſeth to his Church, euen in the ſtate of imperfect regeneration, ſuch a vigorous and flouriſhing condition, that there ſhould be neither child nor old man amongſt them, in reſpect of the infirmities & weakeneſſes of theſe ages, but all ſhould bee of full and perfect ſtrength; how much more will he conferre and beſtow vpon vs this vigorous perfection and ſtrength in our renouation & ſtate of glorie? Finally, we know that our Sauiour Chriſt continued in this life to his perfect age, and before the time, wherein according to the common courſe of nature, his bodie ſhould haue declined, hee laid it aſide by death, and after riſing againe, hee aſcended with it into glory in this perfect age. From which ſome not improbably do gather that ſeeing wee ſhall bee made conformable vnto our head in glorie, we ſhall not be vnlike him in this vigorous maturitie and perfect age; but ſhal, if we die in our infancy, attaine vnto that perfection and ripenes, by the vertue and power of God, which time & continuance here would haue brought vs vnto; and if wee die in old age, ſhall by the ſame diuine might, bee freed from all the infirmities thereof, and be renewed and reſtored againe to our perfect vigour, ſtrength and beautie.

Gen.6.4.

Eſay 65.20.

Credibilius accipitur & probabilius plenas ætates reſurrecturas, vt reddatur munere quod acceſſurum erat tempore. Auguſt. de reſur. corporum ſerm.4. Tom.10. ſerm. 147.

Vnto this ſymmetrie and fit proportion of all the members and parts, ſhall be added the other part of beautie, conſiſting not only in the pleaſing mixture of thoſe two liuely colours of white & red, but alſo in the bright ſhining, and glorious maieſtie of the body. For if Moſes mortall and earthly bodie, being but a while conuerſant with God, did ſo participate of his glory, that his face did ſhine, when he returned into the congregation, ſo as Aaron and the people could not looke vpon him, till he had caſt a vaile ouer it; how much more ſhal ours, being glorified, immortal, and heauenly, when they ſhal bee continually conuerſant with God, and enjoy his glorious preſence for euermore? And if our Sauiour Chriſt, before hee was glorified, in his temporary Transfiguration, did ſhine like the Sun in his glorious brightneſſe, and had euen his clothes made as white as the Light, then ſhal we alſo the members of his body bee conformable to Chriſt our Head, and be like vnto him in this glorious quality, though not in equalitie. And this alſo the Scriptures plainly teſtifie; for ſo Daniel ſaith, that they who be wiſe, ſhall ſhine as the brighteneſſe of the firmament, and they that turne many vnto righteouſneſſe, ſhall ſhine as the ſtarres for euer and euer. Which is to be vnderſtood comparatiuely, namely, that theſe ſhal as much excel other of the Saints in glorious brightneſſe, as the firmament the earth, or the ſtarres the firmament: for when Chriſt ſimply ſpeaketh of the ſhining brighteneſſe of the Saints, hee ſaith of them all that the iuſt men ſhall then ſhine as the Sunne in the Kingdome of their Father. The which glory and brightnes ſhal extend euen to their very garments, and robes of immortality and righteouſneſſe; for, as the Apostle ſaith, the Spouſe of Chriſt, the Church, ſhall be arraied with pure linnen and ſhining. To this purpoſe one ſaith, that men in the Kingdome of Heauen ſhal bee like vnto the Angels, not in ſubſtance, but in bleſſedneſſe; and the juſt ſhal ſhine like the Sunne in the Kingdome of their Father: and if the brightneſſe of the body ſhal match the Light of the Sunne, what doe you thinke ſhal be the glory of the ſoule? Now if we further adde, that this beauty and brightneſſe, ſhal be joyned with great majeſty and glory, what can be added to this excellency and perfection? But herein we ſhal as much excel the Sunne, as a liuing, reaſonable, and glorified creature excelleth another which is deſtitute of life, ſenſleſſe and meerely natural; at which the Apoſtle aymeth, where he ſaith, that though our body be [a] ſowne in diſhonour, baſe and contemptible, yet it is rayſed in glory. The which may further appeare, if wee conſider that the Scriptures in many places teach vs, that in the reſurrection to this heauenly happineſſe, our bodies ſhal be like the glorified

Body of our Sauiour Chriſt; for ſo the Apoſtle telleth vs, that b God hath predeſtinate vs to be made like to the image of his Son, that he might be the firſt born of many brethren. So elſwhere he ſaith, that ſuch as is the earthly Adam, ſuch are they which are earthly; and ſuch as is the heauenly Adam, ſuch are they alſo that are heauenly. And as wee haue borne the image of the earthly, ſo ſhall we beare the image of the heauenly. And in another place he affirmeth, that d we all behold, as in a mirrour, the glory of the Lord with open face, and are changed into the ſame image, from glory to glory, as by the ſpirit of the Lord. And again he ſaith, that when Chriſt, which is our life ſhall appeare, wee ſhall appeare with him in glory. But moſt plainly in the Epiſtle to the Philippians hee teacheth vs, that f Chriſt Ieſus ſhall change our vile body, that it may bee faſhioned like unto his glorious body, according to the working, whereby he is able to ſubdue all things to himſelfe. And with him agreeth the teſtimony of the Apoſtle Iohn, as being both guided by the ſame Spirit; g Wee know (ſaith hee) that when he ſhal appeare, we ſhall be like vnto him. And as this is confirmed with plentiful teſtimonies, ſo it ſtandeth with good reaſon; for ſeeing Ieſus Chriſt is our Head, and we the members of his Body, decorum and comelineſſe requireth, that wee ſhould bee conformable & like vnto him; for ill would it beſeeme a glorious Head to haue an inglorious body, and not to haue the reſt of the members ſutable with it in majeſtie and perfection. Now if we further inquire, what is the glory of the Body of Chriſt our Head, the Apoſtle Iohn (who did behold it but through theſe dimme ſpectacles of mortality) wil tel vs, that his face ſhone as the Sun ſhineth in his chiefe ſtrength; and yet this was but a glimpſe of his glory, ſuch as this bleſſed Apoſtle was capable of in this fraile condition, and could behold with his weake ſight; and therefore our Sauiour himſelfe further ſaith, that at the laſt judgement, the Sonne of man ſhall come in the glory of his Father. In compariſon of whoſe ſhining brightneſſe, and moſt glorious Majeſty, the Sun is but a ſhadow, yea groſſe & palpable darknes. Seeing therefore Chriſt ſhal be like vnto his Father, & wee like vnto Chriſt, how beautiful & glorious ſhal we be at the day of his bleſſed appearing? Now if we would know by what means our earthly bodies ſhal be made thus beautiful, and ful of glorious Majeſty, it is by that communion which we ſhal haue with Chriſt our Head, by his Spirit, and by that communion which we ſhal haue with God through him. For he being vnited to the Godhead, and wee vnto him, it followeth hereupon, that as he cōmunicateth with his Father in glory & majeſty, ſo we alſo communicate with him, & by this Conduit pipe, haue the ſtreames of glory and happineſſe from God, who is the fountaine of all Maieſtie & bleſſednes, deriued vnto vs.

CHAP. VI.

Of the felicitie and bleſſedneſſe of the whole man, bodie and ſoule, conſiſting in his freedome from euill, and fruition of good.

§. Sect. 1. That we ſhall no more be moleſted with our turbulent affections.

ANd thus haue I ſhadowed out the ioyes, which we ſhal attaine vnto in our bodies and ſoules ſeuerally, when we come into our heauenly country. Now wee are to ſpeake of thoſe which concerne the whole man, conſiſting both in our freedome from euils; and in our communication of that poſitiue good, and thoſe vnſpeakable ioyes which are there prepared for vs. The euils from which we ſhall then be deliuered, are either internall, or externall; the former are ſuch as are inherent in our ſelues, and the other adherent and accidentall; from all which wee ſhall be freed in this day of our ful redemption. As firſt, wee ſhall be deliuered from the corruption, and troubleſome diſorder of our turbulent affections; ſome whereof, being in their owne nature euill, and ſome vnprofitable, and of no further vſe, ſhall be vtterly aboliſhed; and the reſt which are ſtill neceſſary, ſhal be perfectly ſanctified, and made ſo holy and pure, that they ſhall in all things be ſubiect to Gods will, and to the rule of holy reaſon, & fit and ready to ſerue and glorifie God. Then ſhall malice ceaſe, ſeeing there ſhall bee no enemie to maligne; there pining enuie ſhall haue no place, becauſe our owne deſires ſhal be fully ſatisfied, and we ſhal be as glorious and happy as wee would be; and if any haue more glory than we, our joy ſhal be the greater, becauſe we ſhal communicate with him therein, by reaſon of our perfect loue. There ſhal be no place for ſcornful cōtempt, & proud diſdaine, becauſe euery one ſhal be glorious and happy, and yet haue no greater happines & glory, than euery other of the Saints ſhal like and approue. Neither then ſhal we haue any doubts, or be ſubject to deſpaire, becauſe all our hopes ſhal be fully ſatisfied, and wee ſhal haue ſecure aſſurance of Gods loue. There ſhal be no need of deſiring, longing, & wiſhing, becauſe wee ſhall enjoy all which wee can deſire; and all that wee can wiſh is, that (if it were poſſible) we might more glorifie God, who of his infinite grace and mercy hath thus glorified vs. There we ſhal not be diſtracted betweene hope and feare, for our hopes ſhal be fully ſatisfied, and al cauſe of feare ſhal be taken away, ſo that thoſe paſſions of dul ſtupidity, pale wanneſſe, and trembling horrour, ſhal no more annoy vs, ſeeing we ſhal be freed from al danger of loſing our heauenly happineſſe, and of being circumuented by the malice of any enemy. Then ſhal our hearts no more boyle with angery, nor burne with deſire of cruel reuenge;

ſeeing there ſhal be no euil to offend vs, nor any foe to oppoſe againſt vs; for the Lambe of God, and the Lion of the Tribe of Iuda, wil at that day haue all his and our enemies ſubdued and trodden vnder foot. There ſhal be no place for zeale, ſeeing we ſhal all alike loue God, and chearefully joyne together in his worſhip and ſeruice; nor yet for hatred, ſeeing ſinne ſhal be aboliſhed both in our ſelues and others; there ſhal be no ſhamefaſtneſſe, becauſe no guiltineſſe; nor no need of mercie, becauſe there is no ſenſe of miſery. There ſhal bee no jealouſies and ſuſpitions, becauſe our hearts being tranſparent, we ſhal cleerely ſee, and be certainly aſſured of one anothers loue; nor contending emulation, vnleſſe it be, who ſhal loue God beſt, and ſhew moſt loue, both to Chriſt our Head, and all our fellow-members of his glorious Body. Finally, in this heauenly joy, there ſhal be no place for ſorrow, heauineſſe, griefe and mourning, no ſighing and groning, weeping and ſobbing: for at that day the Lord wil [a] wipe away the teares from all faces and eyes, and there ſhal in this new Ieruſalem, [b] the voice of weeping bee no more heard, nor the voyce of crying; and becauſe death, griefe and paine, ſhal haue no place, the [c] dayes of ſorrow and mourning ſhall then be ended. But the other affections which are of neceſſary vſe, ſhal then being purified and perfitted, be made ſeruiceable for the glorifying of God. For there wee ſhal haue perfection of loue, and no more affecting the World, and worldly things, nor the ſinful pleaſures of the fleſh, but contemning the one, in compariſon of our heauenly excellencies, and being quite wained and purged from the other, we ſhal with all our hearts, minds and ſoules, loue the Lord aboue all things, and his holy Saints and Angels, our Brethren, & copartners in joy as our ſelues. There ſhall we haue perfect affiance in God, ſecurely reſting, and wholly depending vpon his loue and power for our preſeruation, and the continuance of our joy; and then ſhal our hearts and minds be ful of holy admiration, and rauiſhing wonder, to ſee and enjoy the glorious Trinity, and the vnconceiueable pleaſures of this heauenly happineſſe. Then ſhal wee be ful of joy and gladneſſe in the fruition of God, and that eternal felicitie, yea we ſhal triumph with joy, and with an holy boaſting glory in our gladneſſe. And finally, wee ſhal then haue peaceful mindes, and ful contentment, hauing what wee wil, and not hauing what we wil not. Neither ſhal there at this day be any reluctation or repugnancie betweene our paſſions and affections, the one croſſing the other, as they doe in this life, but then, they being al ſubjected to holy reaſon, ſhal haue conformity, peace, and concord among themſelues.

a Eſay 25.8. Apoc. 7.17.
b Apoc. 21.4. Eſay 65.19. &
c 60.20.

§. Sect. 2.

Furthermore, in theſe heauenly joyes wee ſhal be freed from all weakneſſe and impotencie, and ſhal be indued with power and ability to doe whatſoeuer wee wil; for (as I haue ſaid) our wils ſhal be perfectly conformable to Gods wil, ſo that we ſhal wil whatſoeuer he willeth, whoſe will and power nothing can reſiſt. Wee ſhall be freed from all ſinne, not onely in reſpect of the guilt and puniſhment, but alſo the corruption and power of ſinning. For (as one ſaith) here we are commanded that wee doe not ſinne; there we are rewarded that we cannot ſinne; here we are enjoyned not to obey our ſinful concupiſcence, there our reward ſhal be, not to haue any concupiſcence vnto ſinne. So elſewhere: we ſhal not then ſinne, not only in act and deed, but not ſo much as in concupiſcence and deſire, when as we ſhal behold the face of God, which ſubdueth all concupiſcence vnto euill: for ſo ſweete is hee and beautiful, that when we ſee him, nothing elſe can delight vs; but there wee ſhal haue an vnſatiable ſatiety, without lothing, and being alwayes ful wee ſhal ſtil hunger. Now what can be more comfortable than this, to be freed not only from ſinne, but from power of ſinning; to be deliuered not only from the wrath and diſpleaſure of God, but from committing any thing which might deſerue it? what can be more effectual to make vs lothe this World, and with longing deſire to ſeeke this heauenly and holy Kingdome, and with the Apoſtle Paul to be diſſolued, and to bee with Chriſt, ſeeing then wee ſhal bee freed from this body of ſinne, and be vnburthened of this maſſie and heauy load of wickednes? The ſenſe whereof made the Apoſtle Paul lamentably to complaine: O wretched man that I am, who ſhall deliuer me from the bodie of this death; and to labour ſo earneſtly with God by heartie prayer, that he might be freed from theſe buffettings of Satan, and this pricke in the fleſh? Finally, as wee ſhal at this day be freed from ſinne the curſed mother, ſo alſo from death the dreadfull of-ſpring of that wicked parent; for then being made equal with the Angels, [a] we ſhal (as our Sauiour ſaith) die no more, neither [b] ſhal there be there any more death, ſeeing [c] God will deſtroy death for euer, as the Prophet ſpeaketh; ſo that it being ſwallowed vp in victorie, wee may with the Apoſtle triumphing ſay, O death where is thy ſting! O graue where is thy victorie! and conclude with that grateful praiſe of Gods mercie and goodneſſe, Thankes be vnto God which hath giuen vs victorie, through Ieſus Chriſt our Lord.

That w bee fre all imp and Hic p eſt u num:
mini d poſſe p
&c. A Bonifac
cap. 7. T

Satiat
ſatiabili lam ſ ſemper mus, tui
Aug. de T pore, Se Domini
Tom. 10.

Rom 7.24.

2. Cor. 12.

a Luke 20
b Apoc. 21.4
c Eſay 25.

1. Cor. 15.
1. Cor. 15.5
55, 57.

§. Sect.
That in our heauenly h pineſſe we bee freed all extern euils: as p ful labours and con

And as we ſhal bee deliuered from theſe internal euils, ſo alſo from thoſe which are external and accidental: as for example, we ſhal be freed from our painfull labors, wherein wee heere ſpend our liues, and conſume our ſtrength; and ſhal obtaine eternall reſt, and keepe a perpetual Sabbath vnto God: & whereas in this life wee cannot lawfully eate our bread, vnleſſe wee earne it with the ſweat of our browes; nor purchaſe vnto our ſelues any thing which is good, without the coine of painfull labour: in this eſtate of bleſſednes this troubleſome toile ſhall ceaſe, and wee ſhall attaine vnto whatſoeuer we can deſire, with reſt and quietneſſe. So alſo in this heauenly happineſſe wee ſhall bee freed from the ſocietie and company of worldly wicked men, and ſhall no more be corrupted and poyſoned by their euill example, whileſt either wee are drawne to imitate them, or to giue ſome approbation to their ſinnes by Word or countenance, becauſe, we would not incurre their diſpleaſure, or loſe ſome worldly aduantage: nor yet be offended when by their euill conuerſation they diſhonour God, and vex our righteous ſoules, making vs often to crie out with David: Woe is me that I remaine in Meſhech, and dwell in the tents of Kedar: for being deliuered from this ſinfull World, we looke for new Heauens, and a new earth, according to Gods promiſe, wherein dwelleth righteouſneſſe, as the Apoſtle ſpeaketh. Againe, as we ſhall be deliuered from the company, ſo alſo from the crueltie of wicked worldlings, and be no more endangered to their iniuries, oppreſſions, and bloody perſecutions. For then we ſhall haue the vpper hand of all who aſſault vs; and triumph in victorie ouer them, who haue formerly troden vs vnder foote. Then ſhall our noiſome priſons bee changed into a paradiſe of heauenly pleaſures: then ſhall our bands and bolts, be turned into moſt glorious and precious ornaments of joy and happineſſe: then for mens railings and proud menaces, we ſhall haue the approbation of God, and applauſe of the Saints and Angels: then our reproches and diſgraces ſhall be turned into heauenly honour, and euerlaſting glorie; and for our bitter ſufferings, and ſore combats we ſhall haue a crowne of victorie, and a full recompence of reward. Furthermore, we ſhall then be deliuered from the cruell aſſaults of our ſpirituall enemies, and attaine vnto, after a full and finall victorie, a glorious triumph, and euerlaſting peace. In this World we are exerciſed and turmoiled in a continuall conflict againſt the cruell enemies of our ſaluation, Satan, the World, and our owne Fleſh: and ſometime Amelek, ſometime Iſrael hath the vpper hand: but then wee ſhall be freed from theſe troubles and dangers, ſo as we ſhall no more neede to feare the aſſaults of Satan, the allurements and perſecutions of the World, nor the frailtie and treacherie of our owne fleſh; neither ſhall they then be able to ouercome and foile vs, nor ſo much as to aſſault vs, or once by all their power and malice to diſturbe our ioyes: for in the heauenly happineſſe (as one ſaith) no friend periſheth, nor enemie entreth: and therefore the gates of this heauenly City need no ſhutting, becauſe no enemie can approach vnto them. Finally, by this heauenly happineſſe wee ſhall be exempted and freed from all miſeries and afflictions, with which this mortall life is made bitter and irkeſome, and then (as Zophar ſpeaketh) wee ſhall forget our miſeries, or remember them as Waters that are paſt. For there ſhall be no thunder, lightnings, and earth-quakes, no ſtormie tempeſts; ſcorching heate, nor extremitie of cold; there ſhall be no nakedneſſe, famine, warre, or plague; no griefe for the departure of true friends, nor diſcontent for the treacherie and infidelitie of thoſe which are falſe. But I ſhall not need to inſiſt in particulars, ſeeing I haue already more largely expreſſed them; vnto which, if need were, I doubt not but euery Reader may adde a great number out of his owne feeling and experience.

In cœleſtibus gaudijs nullus perit amicus: nullus admittitur inimicus. August.
Apocal. 21. 25.
Iob 11. 16.

Benè regnum Dei æſtati comparatur, quoniam tunc mœroris noſtri nubila tranſeunt, & vitæ Dies æterni ſolis claritate fulgeſcunt. Gregor. lib. 40. Homil. Homil. 1

§. Sect. 4.
Reaſons to proue that the Ioyes of Heauen muſt needs be moſt excellent and bleſſed.
1. Cor. 2. 9.

But as the whole man ſhal be freed from all euils; ſo alſo he ſhal be repleniſhed with all good, and haue the fruition of thoſe heauenly ioyes; which as they are vnconceiueable and infinite, ſo alſo they ſhal be endleſſe and euerlaſting: the former point the Apoſtle expreſſeth, where he ſaith, that the things which the eye hath not ſeene, neither eare hath heard, neither euer came into mans heart, are which God hath prepared for them that loue him. For if this bee true of the great worke of our redemption, and of the hidden myſteries of Chriſtian religion; how much more of that greater worke of our glorification, and of thoſe vnſpeakeable and incomprehenſible ioyes, which God hath prepared for his Saints and Angels? which though they be vnto vs inuiſible, & in themſelues infinite, yet it ſhal not be amiſſe according to that ſmall meaſure of knowledge which wee haue receiued, to adde ſomething of them that by the conſideration hereof, we may haue our affections weaned from the immoderate loue of theſe baſe and earthly vanities, and may haue our hearts ſo inflamed with theſe diuine and heauenly excellencies, that we may vſe all good meanes whereby wee may attaine vnto them. And that we may the better conceiue of the greatneſſe of theſe ioyes which are in themſelues vnconceiueable, and may haue ſome little glimpſe of this glorious light, I wil firſt ſet downe ſome reaſons which may neceſſarily proue, that though in this place of baniſhment and time of ignorance, wee cannot perfectly know and diſtinctly expreſſe what theſe ioyes are, yet it muſt needs bee that they are moſt excellent; and afterward in ſome darke deſcription ſhadow out this bleſſedneſſe and vnconceiueable glory, by ſetting downe (though but darkely) ſome particulars wherein their excellencie and perfection doth conſiſt. The arguments to proue this point may bee taken from the leſſe to the greater, wherein we are to vſe the beſt things of the World, as ſteps whereby being raiſed we may obtaine ſome darke proſpect of this glory, as it were a farre off; and as foiles to ſet out the better the incomparable beautie of that inualuable iewell the bleſſedneſſe of the Saints, and ioyes of Heauen. For thus wee may reaſon and neceſſarily conclude, that if the Lord who is infinite in all goodneſſe, wiſdome and power, hath in this life prouided ſuch a world for the good and bad together, for ſtrangers as well as his friends, yea for Turkes, Pagans, Infidels, Atheiſts, blaſpemers, and perſecutors, who are his profeſſed enemies, as well as his faithfull ſeruants and deare children; what glory and happineſſe hath hee prepared for them alone in the world to come? If all haue in common ſuch profits and delights, how glorious and great is that peculiar portion reſerued for the Saints? If this world deſtinated to deſtruction, haue ſuch a goodly vaulted roofe, adorned in the day with ſuch a glorious Sunne, and in the night with the Moone, ſhining with ſuch beautie and brightneſſe, beſpangled alſo with ſuch a multitude of ſtarres, as it were precious ſhining iewels and rich diamonds, and ſuch a goodly floore as the Earth is, beautified with ſuch variety of beaſts, birds, trees, plants wholeſome hearbes, & odoriferous flowers, no leſſe delightfull to the ſight for their admirable colours and figures, than to the ſmell for their pleaſant and ſweet ſent, and watred with ſo many Chryſtall ſprings, and cleare ſtreames, riuers and brookes; if wee haue heere ſuch muſicke to delight the eare, the naturall melodie of ſweet ſinging birds, and the artificial harmonie of inſtruments and voices made by men; ſuch delightful meates and drinkes to pleaſe the taſte, and ſuch ſoft and beautiful rayment, goodly houſes, and doune lodgings to delight the feeling: ſuch orchards, ſuch gardens, ſuch walkes, ſuch groues and ſhades, ſuch fields, ſuch medowes, ſuch iewels and ſuch treaſures, in all which Gods enemies and reprobate men haue for the moſt part a farre larger ſhare, than the deare ſeruants of God; then how incomparably more excellent is the Kingdome of Heauen, the place of Gods owne reſidence, appointed to continue for euer, and purpoſely prepared for the holy Saints, the veſſels of Gods mercie, ordained to life and glory, whom God loueth as the apple of his eye, and for whoſe ſake hee made the world and all theſe creatures, and gaue his Sonne of infinite more worth than many worlds, to worke the worke of their redemption and ſaluation? If this world, which in compariſon is but a cottage, prepared, not for laſting habitation, but for preſent vſe, like a ſhed to beare off a ſtorme, be ſo ſtately built and ſo richly furniſhed, what ſhall wee thinke of the ſtate, beautie, and glorie which is reſerued for vs in our Manour and manſion houſes, which are the chiefe ſeates of our heauenly inheritance? If the out-borders of Gods Kingdome be ſo rich and beautifull, how much more excellent is the Kings Court, the great Monarch of Heauen and Earth, where he chiefely ſheweth his glory and Maieſtie? If the Lord in his rich bountie, hath appointed vnto vs a place of ſuch profit and delight for our exile and baniſhment, how rich and full of all pleaſures is his owne countrie, which he reſerueth for his owne vſe, to ſhew therin his owne glorious preſence; & for the reward of thoſe whom he moſt graceth with his fauour? If the place of our pilgrimage haue ſo many delights and comforts, what pleaſure and contentment ſhall wee find in our heauenly home? If wee haue ſo many cauſes of ioy and reioycing in this valley of teares, and time of mourning for our ſinnes; how ſhall wee triumph with ioy, and bee euen rauiſhed with delight, on our mariage day, when as all our ſinnes being forgiuen, and we reconciled and reſtored to the fauour of God, wee ſhall haue the wedding betweene vs and our husband Chriſt ſolemnized, when as girding himſelfe about, and making vs to ſit downe at the table, he will come forth in great Maieſtie and glorie, and miniſter vnto vs at his feaſt; and afterwards carie vs into the bridall Chamber of reſt and happineſſe, that wee may eternally ſolace our ſelues with him in heauenly delights? If the World, which is but (as it were) a priſon, wherein we are kept in ſafe cuſtody, till we be brought forth to appeare before Gods tribunall ſeat at the day of iudgement, be ſo excellently adorned, and ſo richly furniſhed with varietie of delights, that worldly men could find in their hearts to remaine in it for euer; how excellent and abſolute in all perfection, is that Kingdome which he hath prepared to be the Countrie and Citie of the Saints, and his owne Kingly palace which hee hath built to be the ſeat of his Maieſtie, and the Throne and Theater of his glorie? Finally, if there be ſo great varietie of profits and pleaſures in this world, where the Lord would haue his elect afflicted and corrected for their faults, that they might amend them, what infinite & incomparable treaſures, ioyes and delights, hath he prouided for them in Heauen, where he purpoſeth to reward them, to communicate vnto them the full ſtreames of his bountie and goodneſſe, to ſet vpon their heads crownes of glory, and to cloth and compaſſe them about with ioy and happineſſe? Surely the ioyes of this place are ſo infinit and incomprehenſible, that the Apoſtle Paul who had ſeene them in viſion onely, was ſo delighted, and euen rauiſhed with them, that it was needfull that he ſhould haue a pricke in the fleſh, and the meſſenger of Satan to buffet him, that hee might not bee exalted aboue meaſure, through the excellencie and abundance of reuelations. And therefore if Paul ſo triumphed in ioy, becauſe hee had for a ſhort time beheld that heauenly happineſſe in viſion only, what vnſpeakeable rauiſhing delight ſhall the elect attaine vnto, who ſhall not onely ſee it, but enioy it, and that not for a ſhort time alone, but for euer and euer.

Luke 12.3

Iohn 14.2.

CHAP. VII.

That in Heauen wee ſhall abound with all happineſſe, both in reſpect of our perſons and eſtates. And that there are degrees of happineſſe.

BVt let vs not reſt alone in generalities, and onely know and beleeue, that ſuch excellent ioyes are prepared for vs in Heauen, as doe without all compariſon exceed all the pleaſures and comforts which this world affoordeth; but alſo let vs deſcend to ſome ſpecials, and ſo (according to the darke meaſure of knowledge which wee haue in this place of ignorance) let vs ſhadow out, and make ſome rude draught of theſe diuine ioyes and heauenly happineſſe, by ſetting downe ſome particulars, that ſo hauing ſome dim ſight, and ſmall taſte of them, wee may thereby the rather bee incouraged to ſeeke after their full fruition. And for order ſake let vs diſtinguiſh them into either thoſe ioyes the matter whereof we ſhall haue within vs; or thoſe which are grounded on ſuch things as are with vs and about vs. And firſt we are to know that the image of God, which was wholy defaced and blotted out by ſin, and is but in part onely repaired by regeneration in this life, ſhall bee perfectly renued and reſtored in the life to come. For as in our firſt creation wee were made according to this image and ſimilitude; ſo ſhall wee in farre greater perfection bee reſtored vnto this diuine beautie in our regeneration at the laſt day. For then in our ſoules ſhall be a liuely reſemblance of the wiſedome, holineſſe, and righteouſneſſe of God, and our bodies alſo ſhall carrie ſome ſimilitude of him, not in their matter and ſubſtance (for they are corporall, and hee ſpirituall) but in their beautie, brightneſſe, and glorious Maieſtie. So that then wee ſhall not grope in the darkneſſe of ignorance, as wee now doe, knowing little of God and his workes, or of our ſelues; but we ſhall haue a cleere knowledge of theſe diuine excellencies, as wee haue in part ſhewed, and ſhall more fully ſet downe hereafter. Thus alſo both in our bodies and ſoules we ſhall be throughly purged and cleanſed from all filthineſſe of ſinne, prophanenes, and impietie, and we ſhall bee holy as our God is holy, not in equality of meaſure which is impoſſible, but in ſimilitude and reſemblance. For now we ſhall be glorious, not hauing ſpot or wrinkle or any ſuch thing, but holy and without blame, as the Apoſtle ſpeaketh. By reaſon of which puritie and holines of our natures, we ſhall take all our delight in the ſeruice of God, glorifying and prayſing his holy name without ceaſing for euermore. So ſhall wee alſo in this life of glory bee freed from all manner of vnrighteouſneſſe, and bee made throughly conformable both in our wils, affections, and actions to the moſt perfect will of God, which is the exact rule of all iuſtice, ſo as we ſhall not in the leaſt thought and deſire decline or digreſſe from it on the right hand or on the left. Finally, our bodies ſhall bee indued with diuine beautie, and haue ſuch an excellent and heauenly Maieſtie ſhining in them, that theſe glorious beames ſhall eaſily with their likeneſſe and reſemblance, bring any that behold them to that Sunne of perfect beautie, from whom they haue receiued all their light, and theſe little ſparkes of diuine excellencie, may guide them with their ſimilitude to that glorious and infinite flame by which they haue beene kindled.

Epheſ. 5. 27.

§. Sect. 2. That the ioyes of heauen ſhal fill vs without glutting, and ſatiate vs without loathing.

Secondly, wee ſhall be repleniſhed with fulneſſe of joy without glutting, with ſatietie without loathing, and haue a perpetuall continuance of heauenly delights without cloying. For at the ſame time our deſires ſhall bee ſatisfied, and not decreaſed, our wils and longing ſhall be accompliſhed, and yet continued, and wee ſhall ſtill thirſt, and ſtill haue our fill; ſo that by enioying our deſires, we ſhall haue contentment, and by louing and deſiring that wee enjoy, all loathing ſhall bee auoided. So Dauid ſaith, that in Gods preſence there is fulneſſe of ioy, and yet notwithſtanding this fulneſſe, there is at his right hand pleaſures for euermore. And elſewere, I will behold thy face in righteouſneſſe, and when I awake I ſhall be ſatisfied with thy image. Vpon the occaſion of which words one obiecteth, that glutting and loathing followeth ſatietie: and then anſwereth, that it is not ſo in this heauenly fulnes; for that there may be no griefe and vexation in the minde, deſiring, they are ſatisfied; and leſt there ſhould bee any loathing in this fulneſſe, they deſire this ſatietie. And therefore they deſire without any trouble, becauſe ſatietie accompanieth their deſires, and they are ſatiate without cloying, becauſe their ſatietie is ſtill kindled and ſharpned

Pſal.16.11. and 17.15.

Gregor. Moral. lib.18. cap.28.

Satietas erit inſatiabilis, nullum faſtidium. Semper eſuriemus, ſemper ſaturi erimus. Auguſt. de tempore, ſerm, 1. in 90. Tom. 10.

ned by their renued deſiring. And this ſhall be our eſtate and diſpoſition when we haue this fruition of this fountaine of life; for at the ſame time we ſhal haue a ſatisfied thirſt, and a thirſting ſatietie, hauing in our thirſt not the leaſt neceſſitie, nor in our ſatietie, any loathing, becauſe being ſatisfied wee ſhall thirſt, & thirſting we ſhal be ſatisfied. So that we ſhall haue in theſe heauenly ioyes an inſatiable ſatietie, fulneſſe without loathing, and alwaies hungring, wee ſhall alwaies bee ſatisfied. The which though it may ſeeme a riddle, yet wee may eaſily reſolue it, if wee conſider that we haue this thirſting fulneſſe of ioy from the fruition of God himſelfe, who being infinite in all perfection, muſt needs fully ſatisfie all thoſe who enioy him; and becauſe he is thus infinit there can bee no tedious cloying, or loathſome glutting, ſeeing they haue in him continuall and endleſſe varietie of ioyes and delights; and being ſatisfied with the fruition of ſome, they ſee others, after which they thirſt and hunger. Neither muſt wee thinke that they are wearie of the old, when they affect new, for this is onely incident to worldly ioyes, which being imperfect doe not bring contentment; but euen the ſame heauenly ioyes, at the ſame time, worke both ſatietie and thirſt, becauſe being abſolute in all perfection, they giue full contentment, and contenting vs they inflame our loue, and becauſe wee loue them, they kindle ſtill in vs a thirſting deſire, to haue ſtill the fruition of that which wee loue no leſſe dearely than deſeruedly. Now furthermore hauing this pleaſing ſatietie not onely in our appetites, affections, and deſires, but alſo in our wils, and vnderſtandings, and in all other powers and faculties of our bodies and ſoules, being perfectly ioyned in a bond of felicitie one with another, and with their ſeuerall functions and operations; there will from hence follow ſuch full and perfect contentment vnto euery one with their owne ſtate and condition, that none will deſire to bee other than he is; nor wiſh to change with another, though hee haue a ſuperiour degree in glory.

§. Sect. 3. That the ioyes of heauen ſhall be moſt excellent, in regard of the things about vs.

And this is that ioy and bleſſedneſſe which wee ſhall haue in reſpect of our owne eſtate, and the excellent parts and properties wherewith wee our ſelues ſhall be indued: beſides which wee ſhall haue infinite cauſe of ioy and contentment in reſpect of that glory, excellencie, and al-ſufficiencie of thoſe things which are about vs. In regard whereof it is truly ſaid by the holy Apoſtle, that the afflictions of this preſent time are not worthie of the glory which ſhall bee ſhewed vnto vs. For as hee ſaith elſewhere, our light affliction which is but for a moment, cauſeth vnto vs a farre moſt excellent, and an eternall waight of glory: and againe; the things which eye hath not ſeene, neither eare hath heard, neither came into mans heart, are which God hath prepared for thoſe that loue him. For there (as one ſaith) is ioy without ſorrow, which cauſeth eternall gladneſſe; there ſhall be all good, and ſhall not be any euill; there ſhall be whatſoeuer we will, and ſhall not be, what we will not; there our life ſhal be truely vitall, ſweete and louely, being eternall and eternally bleſſed. There ſhal be no aſſaulting enemie, nor any alluring baite of tentation, but chiefe & certaine ſecuritie, ſecure tranquillitie, peacefull pleaſure, pleaſant happineſſe, happy eternity, eternall bleſſedneſſe, the bleſſed Trinitie, of the Trinitie Vnitie, of the Vnitie Deity; and of this Deity a happy viſion and fruition, which is the chiefe part of our Maſters joy. So elſewhere hee hath this holy and heauenly meditation: What (ſaith he) loueſt thou O my body? what deſireſt thou O my ſoule? whatſoeuer it is that you loue and deſire, there ſhall you ſurely finde it. If beautie delight thee, the juſt ſhall ſhine like the Sunne in his brightneſſe; if ſuch ſwiftneſſe, power, and freedome of the body that nothing can hinder or reſiſt, we ſhall bee like the holy Angels; if a life long and healthy, there is eternall health, and healthfull eternitie; if ſatietie, we ſhall be ſatisfied with Gods image when hee appeareth; if melody, there ſhall be a full quire of Saints and Angels ſinging prayſes vnto God; if pleaſure, God will make vs drinke of the riuer of his delights; if wiſedome, we ſhal be taught of God; if friendſhip, wee ſhal loue God more than any thing, and our neighbours as our ſelues; if concord, it ſhal bee our meate and drinke, to haue one minde and one will, becauſe we ſhall all be conformable to the will of God; if power we ſhall be omnipotent in our will, becauſe it is alſo Gods will; if wee take pleaſure in honour and riches, God will make his good and faithfull Seruants rulers ouer much, and they ſhall bee the Sonnes of God and heires of his Kingdome: finally, if we deſire true ſecuritie, we ſhall be ſo ſure that wee ſhall neuer loſe theſe ioyes, as wee are ſure that we would not willingly bee depriued of them; neither will our louing God, who prouided for vs theſe ioyes when wee were ſtrangers and enemies, take them away from vs againſt our wils, being reconciled, and become his friends. In a word, ſo many and excellent ſhall theſe ioyes of Heauen bee, that the heart of man ſhall not bee able to containe and comprehend them; for wee ſhall haue abundant ioy and glory within vs, and round about vs; and becauſe wee cannot compaſſe them, being infinite and incomprehenſible, they ſhall incloſe and compaſſe vs. Vnto which (as ſome thinke) our Sauiour in the parable alludeth; for whereas in this

Rom. 8.18.

2. Cor. 4.17.

Auguſt.
loqu cap.
& medita Quæ eſt ibid quicquid eſt ibi
eſt. Auguſt conf
rum, lib.
20.

Auguſt.
mal. cap.
Tom. 9.

this World joy is ſaid to enter into vs, becauſe it is not ſo great but that it may eaſily be comprehended; hee biddeth the faithfull ſeruant to enter into his Maſters ioy, becauſe theſe heauenly ioyes are ſo ineffable and vnconceiueable, that the Saints of God cannot containe them, but are contained, and on all ſides compaſſed and incloſed with them. No maruell then if theſe ioyes cannot in this time of ignorance and miſerie bee expreſſed or conceiued, ſeeing they cannot bee comprehended when they are enioyed; hee being infinite and incomprehenſible who is the chiefe cauſe and object of all our joy. Onely they may bee darkly ſhadowed by ſome earthly ſimilitudes and reſemblances which are within the compaſſe of our capacitie. As for example, ſome compare this heauenly happineſſe, to the ſtate of ſuch an one, as being vniuerſall Monarch ouer the whole World, ſhould enioy a long, peaceable, and proſperous raigne, without any warres, care, trouble or vexation, louing all, and being beloued of all his ſubjects. Or to an imaginarie aduancement of a Kings Childe out of his mothers wombe to ſit on the Throne of the Kingdome, not according to the ordinary manner, by degrees, when he commeth to age, but attaining vnto age and ſoueraigntie together, and all vpon a ſudden. Or as if a man ſhould in the ſame houre lie in a darke and noiſome dungeon, hungrie, naked, and comfortleſſe, continually expecting a cruell and ſhamefull death, and inſtantly be aduanced to a Kingdome, and to the fruition of all delights which it could yeeld him. Others expreſſe them by making a proportionable compariſon betweene the Mothers wombe, the world, and the kingdome of Heauen: namely, that this heauenly Kingdome as much exceedeth this world in glory, beauty, and variety of all delights, as the World herein excelleth the Mothers wombe; in which compariſon if there bee any diſproportion, it is becauſe our heauenly ioyes being infinite and without the mixture of any miſerie, doe by innumerable degrees excell the pleaſures and Majeſtie of the World, more than the World excelleth that darke and cloſe priſon of the Mothers belly.

By all which it appeareth that theſe heauenly ioyes bee vnſpeakable, and in themſelues infinite and incomprehenſible, but yet in reſpect of vs who ſhall enjoy them, there are (I take it) diuers degrees of them. For whereas in theſe heauenly ioyes there are two things to be conſidered; the firſt is the cauſe or obiect of this joy and happineſſe; the other the application, comprehenſion, and fruition of them: it is true in the former reſpect, *one cannot bee more happy and bleſſed than another, becauſe all ſhall injoy God, as their ſummum bonum, and chiefe good, and thoſe heauenly ioyes which hee will communicate vnto them: but in reſpect of the other, there are diuers degrees, as one more than another is more capable and comprehenſiue of this infinite goodneſſe, whereby he is fitted and diſpoſed to a more large and perfect fruition of God, and ſo becommeth more bleſſed, becauſe hee more injoyeth his ſummum bonum. Euen as diuers veſſels being filled in the ſame Sea, there is no difference in the Water, wherewith they are filled, which is ſufficient to fill them, though they were neuer ſo great; but yet one of them may hold more than another, according as they exceed in bigneſſe and largeneſſe of capacitie. And this (as I take it) is cleere enough in the Scriptures. In the twelfe of Daniel it is ſaid, that they that be wiſe ſhall ſhine as the brightneſſe of the firmament, and they that turne many to righteouſneſſe ſhall ſhine as the ſtarres for euer and euer. Both which though they bee vnderſtood of the ſame Preachers of righteouſneſſe which ſhall conuert men to the faith, and therefore there is no compariſon made betweene the wiſe, and ſuch as conuert others, nor betweene the brightneſſe of the firmament, and the brightnes of the ſtarres; yet I doubt not, that in both theſe they are preferred before other men, who haue not that excellencie of wiſdome, and fruites of their miniſterie; and that it is the meaning of the holy Ghoſt there to ſhew, that as they excell others in theſe gifts and fruitfull labours, ſo alſo they ſhall excell them in glory and happineſſe. The Apoſtle alſo ſeemeth to ſignifie this, where he ſaith, that as there is another glory of the Sunne, and another glory of the Moone, and another glorie of the Starres, one Starre differing from another Starre in glorie: ſo alſo is the reſurrection of the dead. Againe, our Sauiour Chriſt appropriateth this to his Apoſtles as a ſpeciall priuiledge and prerogatiue in regard of the dignitie of their office, their paines, and faithfulneſſe, that they ſhall ſit vpon twelue Thrones, & iudge the twelue tribes of Iſrael. And the Apoſtle ſeemeth to ſpeake of a peculiar crown laid vp for him in regard of his extraordinarie ſufferings & labours. Finally, whereas the Scriptures promiſe not onely eternall life in generall to all the faithfull, but alſo ſpeciall wages and rewards according to their workes, and that faithfull ſeruice which they haue done vnto God, thereby it appeareth that according to the meaſure of our graces and obedience in this life, wee ſhall haue a proportionable degree of glory in the life to come.

Vnto theſe teſtimonies wee might adde diuers reaſons, as firſt, ſeeing the Lord doth in this World giue his gifts and graces in a diuers and vnequall proportion, to ſome a greater, and to others a leſſe meaſure, it is more

Dan. 12.3.

1.Cor.15.41.42.

Matth. 19.28.

1.Theſſ.2.19.

§. Sect. 5.

Diuers reaſons to proue that there are diuers degrees of glory, and ſome ob-iections an-ſwered.

more than probable that he will accordingly giue vnto the Saints a diuers meaſure and proportion of glory and felicitie, in the Kingdome of Heauen, when as hee will reward and crowne theſe his gifts according to his gracious and free promiſes. And this our Sauiour Chriſt ſeemeth to intimate in the parable: where the Lord maketh his faithfull ſeruant, who by well vſing his ten talents had gained other ten, ruler ouer ten Cities; and according to the ſame proportion, aſſigneth vnto him, who with his fiue talents had gained fiue more, the gouernment of fiue Cities. Againe, the puniſhments of the wicked and reprobate ſhall bee diuers in their meaſure and proportion, according to the qualitie of their ſinnes; in which reſpect our Sauiour Chriſt ſaith, that it ſhall be eaſier for Sodome and Gomorrah in the day of iudgement, than for that Citie which contemneth the preaching of the Goſpell; and for Tyre and Sidon, than for Corazin and Bethſaida, who were not conuerted by Chriſts doctrine and miracles. For whereas it may be obiected, that the reaſon followeth not, because the wicked are puniſhed for their ſinnes, but the faithfull are not ſaued for their merits, but by the obedience, righteouſneſſe, and death of Chriſt, which equally appertaineth to all the faithfull: To this I anſwere, firſt, that God hath not onely in generall promiſed vnto all euerlaſting life, for the death and merits of Chriſt, but alſo that he will of his free grace, and infinite bountie reward men according to their owne workes which they haue done in the fleſh; for ſo the Apoſtle ſaith, that wee muſt all appeare before the iudgement ſeate of Chriſt, that euery man may receiue the things which are done in his body, according to that he hath done, whether it bee good or euill. Secondly, howſoeuer euerlaſting life belongeth to all them who haue their part and intereſt in the death and obedience of Chriſt, yet forasmuch as theſe are diuerſly applied, by ſome more weakely, by others more ſtrongly, according to the diuers meaſure and degree of their faith; ſo anſwerably theſe diuers degrees, ſhall haue diuers rewards, and a different meaſure of glorie fitted vnto them: for as all the faithfull haue their part in Chriſt, and one and the ſame Sauiour equally belongeth to them all, but in reſpect of the application (howſoeuer he is truly applied to all) yet all apprehend him not alike, but ſome weakely by their little faith, and others more ſtrongly by their full perſwaſion; and according to their ſtrength of apprehenſion, and diuers meaſure of faith, bring forth proportionable fruits of good workes, godlineſſe, and righteouſneſſe in their liues and conuerſations: So in like manner all the faithfull haue the ſame ioyes of Heauen common to them all; but yet in regard that thoſe who haue had a greater meaſure of faith, and other ſanctifying gifts and graces on the Earth, ſhall anſwerably haue a more large and ſtrong apprehenſion of theſe ioyes, and haue a greater and more ample capacitie to receiue and containe them, there ſhall bee diuers degrees of glory and happineſſe. Euen as thoſe who are at one feaſt or banquet, haue all the ſame meate and dainties ſet before them, but yet haue different degrees of comfort and fruition in feeding on them, according to the goodneſſe or weakeneſſe of their ſtomackes; in which reſpect though all be equally ſatisfied, yet he who hath the ſharper appetite, and ſtronger digeſtion, hath the largeſt ſhare, and the fruition of it with moſt pleaſure and delight. Finally, in the inchoation and beginning of our glorification, which is in this life, when as being ſanctified we are endued with peace of conſcience, and joy in the holy Ghoſt, there are diuers degrees of grace, holineſſe, and ſpirituall ioy and comfort, ſome hauing a greater, and ſome a leſſe meaſure; and therefore the Lord being conſtant, vniforme, and immutable in his courſes and proceedings, we may conclude, that hee will obſerue the ſame tenure in accompliſhing and perfecting our glorification, giuing vnto thoſe a greater meaſure, and higher degree of glorie and happineſſe in his kingdome, who in this life had the greateſt beginnings, and largeſt proportion of grace and ſanctification. But againſt this is obiected the parable of the labourers in the vineyard, where all are ſaid to haue equality of reward; and the laſt as well as the firſt to haue receiued a pennie. To which I anſwere, that the ſcope of this parable is not to ſhew, that there ſhall bee equalitie of rewards in the Kingdome of Heauen, but that God in his infinite mercy will giue vnto thoſe who are called at the laſt houre euerlaſting life, as well as vnto them who are firſt called; and therefore thoſe who are firſt called, haue no cauſe to triumph and inſult ouer thoſe who are called laſt: but hereupon it followeth not, that becauſe they haue the ſame kingdome, glorie, and happineſſe, therefore they ſhall haue the ſame degree; ſeeing wee may all haue the freedome and generall priuiledges of the ſame Citie, and yet haue therein diuers, offices and preferments. All ſhall haue indeed the ſame life, glory and happineſſe, in reſpect of the obiect which is the Lord himſelfe and the ioyes of Heauen; but all ſhall not (as I haue ſhewed) haue equall application, apprehenſion, and capacitie in conceiuing and comprehending of theſe obiects, by reaſon whereof one ſhall containe more ioy and happineſſe than another, though all ſhall be full and perfectly repleniſhed. Others obiect, that all ſhall haue haue the fruition of our ſummum bonum and chiefeſt happineſſe; and therefore if all haue the chiefeſt happineſſe, none can be ſuperiour vnto other. Vnto which the ſame anſwere ſerueth: for all ſhal equally enjoy the ſummum bonum, the obiect and cauſe of our happineſſe; but not in equalitie, in reſpect of the application and comprehenſion of this infinite good and chiefe happineſſe, which (as I haue ſaid) ſhal bee in diuers meaſures and degrees.

Luke 19,16.17.

Matth.10.15.

2.Cor.5.10.

Finally, whereas they obiect, if ſome haue a greater meaſure of joy and happineſſe than others, then they ſhal want who haue not ſo much as they; and wanting ſhal not be fully ſatisfied and contented, but contrariwiſe ſhal bee apt to enuy thoſe who excel them, and to wiſh their owne aduancement; all which argue inſufficiencie and imperfection, from which that heauenly happineſſe is exempted: To this I anſwere, that though there be not equality of joy, yet there is ſufficiency, ſeeing euery one ſhal be filled, and haue as much joy and happines as he can containe or yet deſire; and conſequently being fully ſatisfied and contented they ſhal not enuy any Superiour, or deſire to change. For as a leſſer pot needeth not, nor (if it had reaſon) would deſire, to haue as much powred into it, as into a greater, becauſe it is inſufficient to containe it, & being ful, the ouerplus would but ſpil and run ouer; and as no man, but a Glutton, being filled and ſatisfied at a daintie Banquet, would enuy his fellow becauſe his ſtomacke containeth more; and none but a foole, being of a low ſtature would once deſire to be apparelled in the clothes of a taller man, but rather ſuch as are fit for his own perſonage: ſo euery Saint being filled and fitted with a ſufficient meaſure of glory and happineſſe, is wel contented with his eſtate, and deſireth not ſuch a proportion as is vnmeete and vnfit for him. Againe, being fellow-members of the ſame Body, whereof Chriſt Ieſus is the Head, wee ſhal be content with that proportion of glory and happines, which is fit for vs in our ſeueral places, as being moſt comely and conuenient both for the part it ſelfe, and for the whole Body; for as the members of the natural body are contented with their owne beauty, proportion, and place; becauſe if they ſhould be greater or leſſer, higher or lower, or not themſelues, but the ſame with others, or finally any other way diſpoſed, than as they are in their own nature and creation, it were vnto themſelues a deformitie, and would make the whole body monſtrous; and therefore the hand or foot, deſire not to bee the head or heart, nor enuy vnto them their greater honour and dignity: ſo the members of this heauenly body, are contented with that they are, and deſire to be no other, nor enuy their Superiours in glory, their greater aduancement; becauſe all haue receiued ſuch a meaſure of glory as is moſt conuenient & comely, both for themſelues, and for the glorious perfection of the whole body; and to bee higher or lower than Gods Wiſdome hath diſpoſed of them, would but deforme and diſgrace the whole, and euery ſeueral part. Finally, though there be inequality of glory, there can be no diſcontent in any, becauſe he hath not ſo much, nor enuy towards another, becauſe he hath more; ſeeing like the members of the ſame body they receiue their greater excellencie and perfection, not for themſelues alone, but for the good of all their fellow-members, and of the whole Body. And moreouer, becauſe through that perfection of loue which ſhall be amongſt them, they ſhal communicate with one another in all their happineſſe, rejoycing as much in their glory and felicity, as in that which they themſelues haue receiued; therfore there can be no place to enuy or diſcontent.

Chap. VIII.

That Heauen is a place moſt glorious; and of our bleſſed ſocietie with the Saints, Angels and our Sauiour Chriſt.

§. Sect. 1. That the Heauen of Heauens ſhall be the place of our happines, which is moſt beautifull and glorious.

ANd thus haue I (though but in darke maner) deſcribed the ioyes of heauen, both which concerne the excellent condition of our owne perſons, and alſo thoſe things which are about vs. Vnto which we may now adde the excellencie and glorious beautie of the place where, and of the ſociety with whom, wee ſhal enioy al this happineſſe. And firſt for the place of our happineſſe; it is not the earth, aire, or firmament, wherein the ſtarres are fixed, but the heauen of heauens, or the ſupreme and higheſt heauen, into which Chriſt as hee was man aſcended, and ſo was made higher than all the viſible heauens, as the Apoſtle ſpeaketh; which is alſo that which the Apoſtle Paul calleth the third heauen, into which he was taken vp. Howſoeuer ſome thinke that after the reſurrection, the bleſſed ſaints ſhal not be confined to any place, but haue the vſe both of heauen and earth for their habitation, in both which they ſhal enioy the preſence of God, and all diuine and heauenly happineſſe. The which their opinion they ground vpon thoſe places of Scripture, wherein it is not onely ſaid, that there ſhal bee new heauens and new earth; but alſo that therein ſhal dwel righteouſneſſe, that is, the holy and iuſt who ſhal execute righteouſneſſe, and that the Saints being [c] made kings ſhal reigne vpon the earth. But concerning this point I can determine nothing; onely let vs know this to our ioy and comfort, that whereſoeuer the ſituation of this a Eſay 65.17. and 66.22. Apoc.21.1.

Heb.7.26.

2.Cor.12.2.

b 2.Pet.3.13.

c Apoc.5.10.

this ſeat of bleſſedneſſe ſhal be, it is certainely moſt glorious and maieſtical. Neither muſt we thinke that the Lord hath onely prouided for vs goodly and rich furniture, but alſo ſtately palaces and glorious manſions. For if earthly kings will haue habitations anſwerable to the greatnes of their maieſty, wherein they keepe their chiefe reſidence; then how glorious and ful of ſtately maieſty is this heauenly palace, which is the chiefe ſeat of the King of kings, where he communicateth himſelfe to his chiefe nobles and courtiers, the holy Angels, and bleſſed Saints? But hard and impoſſible it is to deſcribe in a liuely manner, the excellencie and ſtatelineſſe of this glorious manſion, and city of the ſaints, in al the particulars therof; only this wee may conclude, that it is; firſt, of moſt large and almoſt infinite extent and circuit, ſeeing it is to be the ſeat and habitation of innumerable Saints and Angels, vnto the maieſty whereof is required that it be moſt ample and ſpatious, that they may haue liberty and roome enough. For as it is one part of the wickeds diſgrace & puniſhment, that they ſhall be thruſt together in a ſtraite roome, and like ſtincking tares and noiſome weeds bee cruſht together, & tied in bundles that they may bee caſt into the fire: ſo contrariwiſe it is more than probable, that the ſeat of the bleſſed is moſt ample and ſpatious, that ſo it may bee the more glorious, ſtately, and magnificent. And this appeareth alſo by euidence of reaſon: for if the viſible heauens be ſo many and innumerable degrees greater than the earth; then how much more ample and ſpatious is the Heauen of Heauens, which doth incloſe and compaſſe them, as they doe the Aire and Earth? Secondly, wee may be aſſured that this place is moſt holy and pure, ſeeing it is the ſeat, not only of the holy Saints and Angels, but alſo of the Lord, who is holineſſe it ſelfe. For if that place of his temporall and momentany preſence, when as he appeared vnto Moſes, was holy; how much more holy are the Heauens, which is the place of his continuall reſidence? In reſpect of which purity and holineſſe it will not admit of any impure gueſt; for as it is ſaid, no vncleane thing ſhall enter in thither, neither whatſoeuer worketh abomination and lies. Finally, we may be aſſured though we cannot deſcribe it according to its worth and excellency, that it is a place moſt glorious and majeſtical. For if the Tabernacle when God gaue ſome ſuch viſible ſignes of his preſence, as the people in their frailty and mortality were capable of, was filled with glory; how ful of glory and majeſty are the higheſt Heauens, where God keepeth his chiefe reſidence, and manifeſteth his glory and greatneſſe, in a farre greater meaſure to his Saints and Angels, which are incorruptible and immortall? And this royal excellency being in it ſelfe ineffable and vnconceiuable, the Apoſtle deſcribeth according to our weake capacity, by ſuch viſible and earthly things as are moſt precious and glorious. And firſt hee ſaith, that this new Ieruſalem and City of God, is ful of Gods glory, and her ſhining like vnto a ſtone moſt precious, and as a Iaſper ſtone, cleere as chryſtal: that it hath a wal great and high, and twelue gates, and at the gates twelue Angels; that it is both in length and in bredth twelue thouſand furlongs; that the building of the wal of it was of Iaſper, and the City of pure gold, like vnto glaſſe, cleere and tranſparent, pure and glorious: that the foundations of the wal of the City are garniſhed with all manner of precious ſtones: the firſt foundation of Iaſper, the ſecond of Saphire, the third of Calcedonie, the fourth of an Emerald, the fifth of a Sardonyx, the ſixth of a Sardius, the ſeuenth of a Chryſolite, the eight of a Beryl, the ninth of a Topaz, the tenth of a Chryſopraſus, the eleuenth of a Iacynth, the twelfth of an Amethyſt. That the twelue gates were twelue Pearles, and euery gate of one Pearle, and the ſtreet of the Citie pure gold, and like ſhining glaſſe. All which if it be to be vnderdood (as ſome would haue it) of the glory of the Church here on earth, when as Iewes and Gentiles ſhal bee ioyned together before the comming of Chriſt to judgement; it, is no leſſe forcible to proue that the Heauen of Heauens is a place moſt glorious; for if there be ſuch glory, beautie, and maieſty in the Church militant how innumerable degrees ſhall it be increaſed and inlarged in the Church triumphant? if there be ſuch excellency to be ſeene on earth, what ſhall we thinke of the Heauen of Heauens? And ſurely, if theſe out-caſes of this Imperiall Heauen, the ſtarry firmament, daily ſubject to our view, be ſo glorious; How much more majeſticall is that place reſerued for Gods Saints? If the roofe of our priſon and earthly habitation be ſo curiouſly vaulted, and ſo richly garniſhed and beſpangled with bright ſhining lights, and beautiful ſtarres; what workmanſhip, what maieſty, and incomparable excellency may we expect in the Palace of the great King, and the heauenly habitation of the Saints and Angels? If the very porch and firſt entry bee ſo ſtately and glorious; how full of majeſty, beauty and glory, are the chiefe roomes, and the Preſence-chamber of this great and glorious Monarch of Heauen and Earth.

Matth.13.30.

Exod.3.5.

Apoc.21.27.

Exod.40.34.

Apoc.21.

§. Sect.

Of the g felicitie we ſhall in the ſo of the Sa and Ang
Matth.8.1

Vnto this glory and happineſſe of the place, we may adde that felicity, joy, and contentment which wee ſhall take in our company; for firſt, we ſhall haue the ſociety and fellowſhip of the Saints and bleſſed Angels, according to that of our Sauiour Chriſt, many ſhall come from the Eaſt and weſt, and ſhall ſit downe with Abraham, and Iſaac,

their

and Iacob, in the Kingdome of Heauen. And becauſe there ſhal be perfect loue and charity among vs, euery one louing another as themſelues, and rejoycing as much in their happines and felicity as in their own; hereof it wil come to paſſe that according to the innumerable number of the Saints and Angels, ſo infinitely ſhal our joyes be doubled & rebled, and that which one hath not of this glory and happineſſe in himſelfe, becauſe he is not capable of it, he ſhal enjoy it through his perfect loue, in the reſt of this holy and heauenly Society; they being mutually one to another, ſtorehouſes and treaſuries of theſe euerlaſting joyes, to keepe for their vſe and comfort, that which themſelues cannot containe and comprehend. So that this joy of Loue and perfect Charity, ſhal infinitely exceed al other heauenly ioyes which belong peculiarly vnto any one; ſeeing therby euery one perfectly enioyeth all the happineſſe and bleſſednes of the whole ſociety of the Saints and Angels, whoſe glory as it is moſt excellent, ſo their number numberleſſe. Now if theſe heauenly ioyes bee ſo vnſpeakeable and ſo incomprehenſible in euery one, that he can ſcarce containe them, how ſhall we be rauiſhed with ioy and delight, when wee ſhall communicate in the glory and happineſſe of ſo great a multitude? And if there be ſuch ioy and ſweet content on earth, whileſt two or three liuing in all proſperity, dearely loue one another, who notwithſtanding loue imperfectly, and ſpend the leaſt part of their time in their mutuall fellowſhip with their beloued friends; what infinite ioy and reioycing ſhall there be, when all the ſaints ſhall be ioyned in their hearts with the bond of perfect charity, and in their perſons in a neere fellowſhip and ſociety, neuer againe to be ſeparated and diuided? Neither ſhall heere (as in the earth) propriety vnto theſe ſpiritual ioyes, and heauenly treaſures be any cauſe of difference, by reaſon that the ones hauing them, is the cauſe why others want them; ſeeing all theſe vnualuable riches, and vnſpeakeable happineſſe ſhal lie out in common, for the vſe and comfort of all the inhabitants. And as all ſhal ioyntly enioy this kingdome of glory in an holy communion, ſo euery one ſhal enioy it wholly to himſelfe; euen as the Sun ſerueth for the vſe and benefit of the whole world; and yet euery one indued with ſight inioyeth it wholly, as though no other were partner with him. And therefore becauſe the ones hauing of this heauenly ioy and bleſſedneſſe, is ſo farre from hindring of another, that contrariwiſe through that communion and perfect loue which is amongſt them, euery one enioyeth anothers happineſſe, and ſo by this fellowſhip hath his ioyes infinitely multiplied; from hence will ſpring vnſpeakeable ioy in one anothers loue, and vnconceiueable loue by reaſon of this joy.

§ Sect. 3.
Whether we ſhall in Heauen know one another.

But here it may bee demanded, whether in this heauenly ſocietie, we ſhall know euery one their earthly friends, kindred and acquaintance. To which I anſwere, that it were better if we would learne to know, and to bee aſſured, that wee our ſelues ſhal bee happie members of this heauenly ſocietie; for what will it profit a man to know, that the Saints ſhall haue this knowledge one of another, if he be ignorant of the meanes whereby he may come to be in this number? Secondly, I anſwere, that if this particular knowledge, which here wee ſo much deſire would after that manner which we deſire it, any whit aduance our ioy and heauenly happineſſe; then moſt certainely wee ſhall attaine vnto it, and ſhall euery man know his neere and deare friends, as wife, husband, father, mother, ſiſters, brethren, children, and familiar acquaintance, ſeeing nothing ſhall bee wanting to that felicitie and bleſſednes, which may make it perfect and compleate; & contrariwiſe if it will not, wee haue no reaſon greatly to deſire it. Finally, I anſwere more plainely and directly, that in the heauenly ioyes, wee ſhall all know, and knowing loue one another, but yet not after a carnall and worldly manner. The former point is more than probable; for being plentifully indued with Gods ſpirit, and hauing thereby our minds illuminated with all knowledge and ſpirituall wiſdome, we ſhall bee inabled to know, not onely thoſe who haue beene formerly of our acquaintance, but euen ſtrangers, whom we neuer ſaw. For if Adam before the fall, had his mind ſo inlightned with wiſedome and knowledge, that he knew Eue and from whence ſhe came, at the firſt ſight; and if the Apoſtles accompanying Chriſt in his transfiguration, and hauing but a ſmall beginning, and a little taſt of their glorification were able thereby to know Moſes and Elias whom they had neuer ſeene: And (as ſome adde) if Diues (as it is in the parable) knew Abraham, and Lazarus in his boſome in ſo great a diſtance; then how much more ſhall they, who are perfectly glorified, and indued with all knowledge, through the illumination of Gods holy ſpirit, know all their friends and kindred, with whom formerly they haue beene acquainted? But yet this knowledge, both in reſpect of the cauſe and manner thereof is not worldly and carnall, neither ſhal we know them by their outward ſhape and fauour; for this is impoſſible, in regard of the great difference betweene a bodie mortal, and immortal, earthly and glorified, which, as I ſaid, ſhal bee freed from all blemiſhes and imperfections, either of age or ſtature; nor by the helpe of our naturall memorie, which in ſuch length of time, and great alterations, which in the meanetime ſhall happen, muſt of neceſſitie faile vs; but by that diuine illumination of

*Gen.*2.23.

*Matth.*17.4.

Luke 16.

2.Cor.5.15.

Gods ſpirit, which maketh acquaintance & ſtrangers all alike knowne vnto vs. In both which reſpects, the Apoſtle Paul ſaith, that from henceforth we know no man after the fleſh; yea, though we had knowne Christ after the fleſh, yet now henceforth know we him no more. Whereby is meant, that the knowledge which we haue one of another, is not in outward and worldly reſpects, but diuine and ſpirituall, as wee know them in Chriſt, by the inlightning of the ſpirit. And the like alſo may be ſaid of our loue towards them, which ſhall no more bee, in regard of our earthly kindred, acquaintance and friendſhip, all which ſhall be aboliſhed, but in reſpect that they are the members of Ieſus Chriſt, copartners of the ſame ioyes, and fellow members vnited one to another by the ſame ſpirit. Neither ſhall we more reioyce in the ſocietie of our earthly kindred and acquaintance, or better loue them in theſe earthly reſpects; for this would not augment and increaſe, but diminiſh and detract both from our loue and ioy; ſeeing this ſhal be the perfection of them both, to bee towards all in the higheſt degree, louing and reioycing in the happineſſe of euery one of God Saints, much more than the tendereſt mother can loue her child, or wife her husband, and as much as they loue themſelues, and reioyce in their owne happineſſe. And if there bee then any difference in our loue, it ſhall bee in diuine and ſpirituall reſpects, euen as our loue ſhall bee diuine and ſpirituall, namely, as wee ſhall more loue them, who haue greateſt excellency of gifts, and meaſure of glory, hauing a more perfect apprehenſion of God, and that heauenly bleſſedneſſe, and the greateſt proportion of that holy ſpirit, which ſhall be the bond of our vnion, and cauſe of our loue.

§. Sect. 4.
That it ſhall be a great part of our heauenly happineſſe to enioy the company of our Sauiour Chriſt

But as wee ſhal haue knowledge of all the bleſſed Saints, and louing them as our ſelues, ſhal haue great ioy in their societie: ſo eſpecially ſhal we know our Sauiour Ieſus Chriſt louing him aboue all the reſt, yea and more than wee loue our ſelues, and taking vnconceiuable ioy in that vnion and communion, which wee ſhal haue with him, in all that glory and happineſſe, wherein hee ſhal bee farre preferred before all the ſonnes of men. Of this ſpecial knowledge of Chriſt, himſelfe ſpeaketh. Father (ſaith he) I will that they which thou haſt giuen mee, be with mee, euen where I am, that they may behold my glory which thou haſt giuen me. Yea, in this knowledge of him, he placeth a chiefe part of our heauenly happineſſe, ſaying, that it is life eternall, to know God, and whom hee hath ſent Ieſus Chriſt. Of which happineſſe, holy Iob aſſureth himſelfe, where hee ſaith, that hee was not onely ſure that his Redeemer liued, but alſo that he ſhould ſee and behold him with his bodilie eies. By which knowledge of Chriſt, and fellowſhip with him, wee ſhall haue ineſtimable ioy and comfort; for if Iohn the Baptiſt ſprang for ioy in his mothers belly, at the preſence of Chriſt in his firſt conception; if his earneſt deſire to ſee Chriſt in the fleſh, made old Simeon wiſh the prolonging of his life, and hauing obtained his deſire, and ſeene Chriſt his ſaluation, was moſt willing to depart in peace: If the eyes of the Diſciples were bleſſed by Chriſts own teſtimony, becauſe they had ſeen that, which many many Prophets and Kings had deſired to ſee, and yet could not, to wit, the Sauiour of the World clothed with our humane nature, and but in the eſtate of a ſeruant, deſpiſed of men, and contemptible in the World: And finally, if Peter, Iames, and Iohn, ſeeing but ſome ſmal ſparkes of his glory and maieſtie in his transfiguration, were ſo rauiſhed with delight, that ſetting aſide all worldly deſires, they wiſhed only the continuance of this joy; then what ineſtimable pleaſure, comfort, and rejoycing ſhall we haue, when wee ſhall continually behold our Sauiour Chriſt in his glory and majeſty, adorned in his Kingly attire, accompanied with his bleſſed Saints and Angels, and ſitting at the right hand of his Father, like a triumphant Conquerour, hauing ſubdued and trodden vnder foot all his and our enemies? eſpecially conſidering that wee ſhal not be bare beholders onely of his glory and happineſſe, but ſhall communicate with him, as members of his body, in all his joyes, and be made partakers of all his glory. O what rauiſhing joy ſhal then poſſeſſe our ſoules, when as we, who haue long beene contracted to our Lord and Husband, ſhal ſee that bleſſed time come, when we ſhal haue that royal marriage betweene him and vs ſolemnized in the preſence of God and his holy Angels, and ſhal haue the fruition of him, and all his happines, when as wee ſhal not be able to determine, whether the glorious majeſtie, or the vnmatchable loue of our deare Husband ſhal exceed one the other? What delight and comfort ſhal we then feele, when we poore contemptible members, baſe, and inglorious in the world, ſhal be vnited to our moſt glorious head, Ieſus Chriſt, and by vertue of this vnion with him, ſhal alſo be glorified, and communicate with him in all his felicity, and heauenly joy? O how ſhal at this day our hearts and ſoules bee able to containe that pleaſure and delight, when wee ſhal haue ſo neere ſocietie and fellowſhip with our bleſſed Sauiour & Redeemer, who hath loued vs ſo dearely, that when we were Bankrupts to Gods Iuſtice, he became our ſuretie, and diſcharged our debt to the vtmoſt farthing? When we were enemies, he wrought our reconciliation; when we were condemned, hee procured our pardō; when we were the ſlaues of ſinne and Satan, he powerfully redeemed vs; and when we were in the ſtate of condemnation,

Iohn 17.24.
Verſe 3.

Iob 19.25,27.

Luke 1.4

Luke 2.2

Luke 10.2

Math.17.

damnation, & the very firebrands of hel fire, he brought vs into the ſtate of ſaluation, and made vs the ſonnes of God, and coheires with him in all his glory and heauenly happineſſe. All which he effected by humbling himſelfe to the ſtate of a ſeruant, when he enjoyed with his Father al glory and Majeſty, and by ſuffering miſeries and afflictions, hunger, wearineſſe, griefe, and worldly contempt, ſcornings, reuilings, buffettings, ſcourgings, and finally, that ſharpe and ſhameful death of the Croſſe, and his Fathers heauy diſpleaſure, much more bitter and intolerable than all the reſt of his bodily ſufferings. O how then ſhall wee rejoyce in his Loue, and in louing him againe, for all his grace and goodneſſe vnto vs?

CHAP. IX.

Of the fruition of God, and of thoſe vnſpeakable joyes which will ariſe from it.

ANd thus haue I ſhewed what ineſtimable joyes are prepared for the Saints, both in reſpect of the things within them, and without them; all which, though they are ſo great, that the heart of man cannot poſſibly conceiue them; yet are they all but little or nothing, in compariſon of that incomprehenſible joy and happineſſe, which we ſhal haue in the fruition of God himſelfe, infinite in all goodnes and perfection; whereby we ſhal for euer enjoy his preſence, behold his face and glory, and be vnited vnto him in a bleſſed and holy communion, that ſo he may become all in all. Which joy being like the authour and object therof, infinite and incomprehenſible, it is not to bee expected, that I ſhould in the leaſt meaſure, as it is in it owne nature, expreſſe it; ſeeing in regard of its infinite perfection, the heart of man cannot conceiue the leaſt part thereof, much leſſe his tongue or pen vtter it; onely I wil content my ſelfe to haue ſhadowed it out in ſome darke manner, and to diſcouer it by the light of the word, as it were a farre off, expecting the ful reuelation thereof in the great day of Gods appearing. Firſt therefore we are to know, that as God is the chiefe author and cauſe of all our happines, electing vs to eternal life before the world was, creating vs vnto glory and graciouſlie affording vnto vs all the meanes of our ſaluation; ſo alſo he is the chief obiect, and (as it were) material cauſe, and ſubſtance, of all our ioy and happineſſe. And (as one ſaith) it is he, both which crowneth vs with a glorious crown, & is alſo himſelf this crowne of glorie; it is he that promiſeth, and who is alſo that which is promiſed, he is the rewarder, and hee alſo is our reward. And finally, he giueth vnto vs heauenly happineſſe and bleſſedneſſe, and is alſo this bleſſedneſſe and felicitie it ſelfe. And thus the Lord promiſeth vnto Abraham, not onely that he would reward him greatly, but alſo that hee himſelfe would bee his exceeding great reward. And holy Dauid in many places calleth the Lord his life, his light, his glorie, his ſtrength, his portion, and the lot of his inheritance: and finally affirmeth, that when hee ſhould appeare, hee ſhould bee throughly ſatisfied with his image, becauſe in his preſence is fulneſſe of ioy, and pleaſures at his right hand for euermore. To which purpoſe one ſaith, that it ſhall bee our reward to ſee God, to liue with God, to liue of God, to bee with God, and to bee in God, who ſhall be all in all; to haue God, who is the ſummum bonum, and chiefe good; for where the chiefe good is, there is the chiefe happines, the chiefe pleaſure, true libertie, perfect charity, eternall ſecuritie, & ſecure eternity: there is true gladnes and reioycing, perfect knowledge, all fulnes, and all bleſſedneſſe; there is Peace, Piety, Goodneſſe, Light, Vertue, Honeſty, the joy of continual Mirth, Sweetneſſe, Life eternal; Glory, Prayſe, Reſt, Loue, and ſweet Concord. And this (namely, that God is our ſummum bonum, and chiefe happineſſe) the very Heathens themſelues from time to time haue confeſſed and acknowledged, as it were eaſie to ſhew, had not that ornament of true Nobilitie, and excellent inſtrument of Gods Glory, by his learned labours ſhewed this at large, and ſaued me this labour.

Gen. 15. 1.
Pſal. 16. 5, 11.
Pſal. 17. 15.
Bernard. meditat. deuot. cap. 4.
Morn. de verit. relig. Chriſt. cap. 19.

§. Sect. 2.
That all joy & happineſſe accompanieth our fruition of God, as being the perfection and accompliſhment of them all.

Now as the Lord is our reward and the perfection of our joy and happineſſe; ſo wee are further to know, that aboue all other rewards he is moſt excellent; and of all other joyes, by infinite degres moſt delightfull; for whereas other joyes in Heauen exceedingly pleaſe, it is he alone that can fully content vs: whereas others are ineſtimable and of great worth; it is he only who is al-ſufficient, and being infinite in all goodnes and perfection, doth giue vnto vs ful contentment, & cōpleat happineſſe. And this is that which hee himſelfe ſaith vnto Abraham; I am God al-ſufficient, walke before me and be thou vpright: and hereof it is, that hauing promiſed in the Reuelation to him that ouercommeth, that he ſhall inherit all things, hee ſheweth how hee ſhal be made thus compleate, ſaying, I will be his God, and he ſhall be my Sonne. And indeed how can hee want light, that hath this Sunne of righteouſneſſe ſtill ſhining vpon him? How can hee lacke warmth, who is continually heated with the flames of this diuine Loue? How can he thirſt, who hath this euer-ſpringing fountain which yeeldeth ſtreames of the water of life? And in a word, how can he want any good who enjoyeth the chiefe goodneſſe, in whom all vertue, knowledge, and whatſoeuer goodneſſe can be named, or deſired are moſt abſolute, and in all ful-

Gen. 17. 1.
Apoc. 21. 7.

fulneſſe and perfection? For (as one ſaith) his diuine beauty the Angels wonder at, by his power the dead are raiſed, of his wiſdome there is no number, or meaſure, whoſe Kingdome knoweth no end, whoſe glory cannot change, whoſe light ſo obſcureth the Sunne, that in compariſon thereof it is but darknes; who in ſweetneſſe ſo farre exceedeth Hony, that being compared, it is as bitter as Wormwood; whoſe face if the damned ſoules could behold, they would feele no puniſhment, no griefe or heauineſſe; whoſe preſence would change Hel it ſelfe into a Paradiſe of pleaſure and delight. Whereby it appeareth, not only that God is the chiefe and ſupreame cauſe, and object of all our fellicitie and bleſſednes in the Kingdome of Heauen; but alſo that he is Al-ſufficient to make vs perfectly happy, as being our ſummum bonum, infinite in all goodneſſe and perfection. Now further wee are to know, that the fruition of this God Al-ſufficient, and our chiefe and ſupreame good, is that which we call bleſſedneſſe, and our heauenly happineſſe. Of which fruition of God, there are made three degrees, or diuers manners: Firſt, when we enjoy God in his creatures; in them ſeeing and vnderſtanding his wiſdome, power, and goodnes, in his creating, preſeruing, gouerning and diſpoſing of all the creatures in Heauen and Earth moſt wiſely, mightily, and graciouſly. To which purpoſe the Pſalmiſt ſaith, that the Heauens declare the glory of God, and the firmament ſheweth the worke of his hands: and the Apoſtle Paul more plainly affirmeth, that the inuiſible things of God, that is, his eternall power and Godhead, are ſeene in the creation of the World, being conſidered in his workes. Secondly, we are ſaid to enjoy him in our ſelues, and that diuerſly in reſpect of the diuers faculties of our ſoules, as in our vnderſtandings, when they are enlightned with the beames of his wiſdome, and diuine knowledge, wherby we are enabled to know him, and our ſelues, together with his will and workes; in our wils and deſires, when he repleniſheth them with perfect juſtice and righteouſneſſe, whereby they are made conformable to his will (in which ſenſe they are pronounced bleſſed, who hunger after righteouſneſſe, becauſe they ſhall be ſatisfied) and inabled to refuſe that which God diſliketh, and to chuſe that which he loueth. Finally, we enjoy him in our heart, and affections, when as louing him aboue all, and wholy depending vpon his power and goodneſſe, wee attaine vnto peace and tranquility of minde, and are repleniſhed with all joy and delight: in which reſpect wee ſhall bee moſt happy, when as our knowledge cannot puffe vs vp by reaſon of our righteouſneſſe, nor our righteouſneſſe be diſtaſtful and troubleſome by reaſon of our joy. And laſtly, we are ſaid to enjoy God in himſelfe, which of all the reſt is moſt pleaſing & delightfull; when we ſhal know him in his perſons, nature, and attributes, not as in this life darkly, and through a glaſſe, but as the Apoſtle ſpeaketh face to face: for this (as our Sauiour ſaith) is eternall life to know God, and whom he hath ſent Ieſus Chriſt. Neither ſhal this fruition conſiſt in a bare knowledge of God the Father, his Sonne, and holy Spirit, but in that communion which wee ſhall haue with them whereby they will become vnto vs all in all, as wee ſhall ſee hereafter. And that not in a party, or imperfect communion, whereby euery of the Saints ſhould haue their ſhare in this bleſſed fruition; for God is a moſt perfect and indiuiſible eſſence, ſo that they who enjoy him, enjoy him wholy; without any ſharing and diuiſion. For as on the earth, euery one totally enjoyeth the light of the Sunne; and as a ſpeech made among a multitude, is not diuided by words & ſyllables, but is wholy & intirely receiued of all the hearers: ſo much more may our God whoſe eſſence is moſt ſimple, pure, indiuiſible, & omnipreſent, not filling one place more than another with his preſence, but all alike, whether they be neere at hand, or more remote; communicate himſelf to be enjoyed totally & wholy, of all, & euery of the bleſſed Saints.

Aug. de Triplici habitac. c.4.

Aug. de Spiri-tu & Anima, cap.65.

Pſal.19.1

Rom.1.20.

Math.5.6.

By all which it is cleare and manifeſt, that howſoeuer there are innumerable and ineſtimable ioyes in Heauen, yet the fruition of God is the chiefe, and the perfection of them all; with which alone, without all the reſt wee ſhould be moſt perfectly bleſſed, and without which, though we had all the other, our happineſſe ſhould be maimed and imperfect: for inioying God infinite in all perfection, our hearts and ſoules ſhal be fully ſatisfied and repleniſhed with joy, and (as one ſaith) hee is too too couetous, who is not ſufficed with the fruition of God; and without him, though wee had all other ioyes of Heauen and Earth, there would ſtill remaine an emptines in the ſoule, which would keepe vs from full contentment, and make vs ſtill ſeeke after more happineſſe. Concerning the former; how can it be but there muſt needs bee perfection of joy, where God himſelfe our chiefe goodneſſe ſhal be injoyed? for if the beautie of vertue, being beheld and well diſcerned, would (as one ſaith) ſtirre vp in vs, a wonderfull loue and admiration of it; how much more will the ſight and fruition of God doe this, who is the fountaine of all vertue and goodneſſe, infinite in all glory and perfection? If the Queene of Saba thought Salomons ſeruants happy, becauſe they alwaies ſtood before him, and heard his wiſdome; how much more bleſſed are they, who enjoy Gods preſence for euermore, who being a boundleſſe Ocean of wiſedome, from which thoſe little droppes diſtilled, can neuer be drie, Plato.

drie, but ſhal continually haue riuers and ſtreames of diuine prudence flowing from him? If Moſes attained vnto an extraordinarie meaſure of ioy and happineſſe, when he was admitted to ſee Gods hinder parts, and ſome ſmall beames of his infinite glory and Majeſtie; how happy and bleſſed ſhall we be, when wee ſhal be admitted into his glorious preſence, and continually ſee him face to face? If we ſo much deſire to ſee, and ſee with joy and admiration, men who are excellent in any kind, as thoſe who are exceeding wiſe, valorous, ſtrong, beautiful, learned, or indued with ſome extraordinarie parts, although they bee but maimed and imperfect; then how ſhall wee be rauiſhed with joy and holy wonder, when wee ſhall both ſee and enjoy God himſelfe, in whom all excellencies doe concurre, and that infinitly and in all fulneſſe and perfection? If wee could find a man in whom the graces and good parts, not only of all other men, but alſo of all the reſt of the creatures, fully concurred, as the faith of Abraham, the piety of Dauid, the loue of Ionathan, the wiſdome of Salomon, the beautie of Abſolon, the ſtrength of Sampſon, the ſweetneſſe of odoriferous flowers, the brighteneſſe of the Sunne, &c. who would not admire his excellency, and thinke himſelfe happy, if hee might injoy his loue and company? but all the goodneſſe, beauty, excellencie, and perfection of all the creatures ioyned together, is nothing in comparison of that, which wee ſhal ſee and enjoy in our al-ſufficient Creator, they being all but little drops of this euer-ſpringing fountaine, ſmall ſparkes of this great flame, and leſſe than a graine of ſand, in compariſon of the whole Earth and Heauens: ſeeing he hath in him all beautie, glory, and goodneſſe, which they haue but in ſmall portions; hee hath that in all perfections, which they haue imperfectly, and in ſome little degree; and infinitly aboue all meaſure, whereas they haue it but in their meaſure and proportion. Whereof it is that what excellencies and good parts are aſcribed to the creatures (as we ſay in the concrete) as being properties and qualities of their nature and ſubſtance, they are all attributed vnto God in the abſtract, as being his very nature it ſelfe, and of his eſſence and Being. So the creatures are called good, but the Creator goodneſſe it ſelfe; man is ſaid to be wiſe, holy, juſt, louing, when as he hath theſe graces and vertues imparted vnto him; but God is wiſdome, holineſſe, juſtice, loue, not receiuing them from any other, but hauing them eternally in his owne nature and Being. In which reſpect it is ſaid, that there is none[a] good but God: that he is[b] only wiſe: that there is none[c] holy as the Lord, yea none beſides him: becauſe none are ſo in their owne nature, and from themſelues; but what they haue, they haue receiued it from God. From whence we may conclude, that if there be any beautie, excellencie, goodneſſe and perfection in the creatures, it is infinitely more in the Creator, from whom they firſt had it: for if he could without impairing of his owne excellencie and ſubſtance, impart vnto his creatures, ſuch goodneſſe, beautie, and perfection, by his ſole word, making them of nothing ſuch as they are, and enriching them with ſo many good parts and properties, without impoueriſhing himſelfe, or abating any whit of his owne ſtore; how glorious, how gracious, how beautifull and infinite in all perfection is hee in his owne nature and Eſſence, which wanteth nothing, though hee haue made his creatures to abound? To this purpoſe the author of the booke of Wiſdome ſaith: that though they had ſuch pleaſure in the beautie of their idols (as the Sunne, Moone, and reſt of the creatures) yet ſhould they haue knowne how much more excellent he is that made them: for the firſt author of beautie hath created theſe things; or if they marueiled at the power and operation of them, yet ſhould they haue perceiued thereby, how much he that made theſe things is mightier: for by the greatneſſe and the beauty of the creatures, the Creator being compared with them, may be conſidered. For if the ſingular parts of beautie and goodneſſe, being diuided and diſperſed amongſt the creatures, be ſo louely and delightfull; then what admirable loue and delight ſhall we haue in the chiefe goodneſſe, in whom alone they are contained, compacted, and infinitly ſurpaſſed and excelled? If life created be ſo pleaſant, how much more is life the Creator? if health bee ſo ſweete and comfortable, how much more is he that made health? if wiſdome be louely, conſiſting in the knowledge of things created, how infinitely louely is that wiſdome, which hath created them all of nothing? Doe wee therefore loue beautie in the creatures? wee ſhall ſee it infinitely redoubled in the Creator, from which chryſtall fountaine theſe little drops haue flowed. Doe we loue vertue and goodneſſe in men? they are infinite in the God of vertue and goodneſſe. Doe we delight in wiſedome? hee is the God of all wiſdome and knowledge, from which great light, men haue receiued theſe little ſparkes. Doe we deſire honours, riches, and pleaſures? why, he is the God of all glory, who ſatisfieth and filleth all with his hidden treaſures; and in his preſence is fulneſſe of ioy, and at his right hand pleaſures for euermore. In a word, whatſoeuer is good, pleaſant, and deſireable in all the creatures, it is conioyned and by infinite degrees ſurpaſſed in the Creatour, from whom they haue had all their excellencie, without any di-

…31.23

…19.17
…1.17.
…2.2.

Wiſdome 13. 3.4.5.

Auguſt. Meditat. cap. 18.

Pſalme 16.11.

diminution of his fulneſſe and perfection.

§. Sect. 4. That all the heauenly ioyes without the fruition of God could not make vs perfectly happy.

And thus it appeareth, that the perfection of our happineſſe conſiſteth in the fruition of our ſummun bonum, and ſupreme good, which when wee enjoy, we can want nothing, and wanting him, can neuer bee ſatisfied with all other good. For the heart and mind of man is of ſuch large capacity, that nothing can fill it but he who being infinite did firſt make it. And becauſe God alone is our ſummum bonum, and the ſupreme end of all our indeauours and deſires; therefore if wee ſhould injoy all the World, and could engroſſe all the pleaſures of Heauen and Earth, wee ſhould not reſt ſatisfied and contented, becauſe we haue not attained vnto our end, and that chiefe and ſupreme good at which wee naturally aime in our deſires. Againe, ſeeing none are bleſſed, but thoſe who are perfectly ſatisfied and contented, and none thus ſatisfied, but they who enjoy God, their ſummum bonum, who, as he freeth them from all euill, ſo alſo hee repleniſheth them with all good; therefore without this fruition of God, though we ſhould haue neuer ſo much good, yet wee ſhould not attaine vnto full happineſſe aud felicity. So one ſaith, that whatſoeuer is leſſe than God, though wee ſhould receiue it for our reward, wee ſhould yet deſire more, and they who haue not their deſires ſatisfied, haue not attained vnto fulneſſe of joy. And therefore he concludeth in another place; that whatſoeuer is preſent when God is abſent, is not ſweet and comfortable; and that he did not deſire any, or all thoſe things which God hath giuen, vnleſſe hee who gaue them, giue himſelfe alſo. So that wee may ſay with Dauid: Whom haue I in Heauen but thee? and I haue deſired none in the Earth beſides thee: and conclude with him, that they are truely bleſſed, not who abound with worldly plenty and proſperity, but who haue Iehouah to be their God.

Auguſt. de cognit. veræ vitæ. cap. 47. Quiquid nobis adeſt præter Deum non eſt dulce. Nolumus omnia quæ dedit, ſi non dat ſeipſum qui omnia dedit. Auguſt. In Pſal. 85. Pſa. 73. 25. Pſal. 144. 15.

Chap. X.

Of the viſion and ſight of God, and of that communion which wee ſhall haue with him.

§. Sect. 1. Wherein the viſion of God chiefly conſiſteth; and that it is not a darke ſight, as in this life, but a cleere knowledge of him.

I Haue generally ſhewed that God is the ſupreme cauſe and maine obiect of our heauenly happineſſe, and that as in the fruition of him conſiſteth our chiefe bleſſedneſſe; ſo without him wee can neuer attaine to true and compleate felicity. In the next place let vs ſomewhat intreate of the ſpeciall parts of this fruition; which conſiſt either in the viſion, ſight, and knowledge of God, or in that communion which wee ſhall haue with him. Concerning the former, wee are ſaid in Heauen to enjoy the viſion of God, and to ſee him, when wee haue not onely in our vnderſtanding ſuch a perfect and cleere knowledge of him, his nature, attributes, perſon, will, and workes, as the creature is capable of, but when as thus knowing him, our hearts and affections doe adhere vnto him, in moſt feruent loue, reioycing in, and prayſing him, and conforming our ſelues in all things according to his will. Neither are wee to conceiue, that this viſion is a bare and naked ſight and knowledge, but ſuch as is apprehenſiue and operatiue, both in our affections and actions. For ſo theſe words of ſenſe and knowledge doe vſually in the Scriptures ſignifie, not a bare ſight alone, and naked knowledge, whereby the obiect is apprehended in the ſenſe and mind, but alſo the operations and functions of the wil, heart, and affections, together with the effects and actions which do follow and accompanie this ſight and knowledge. So Dauid profeſſeth that hee beleeueth to ſee the goodneſſe of the Lord in the land of the liuing: that is, to haue the benefit and fruition of it. And Chriſt ſaith, that he who beleeueth not, ſhall not ſee life; and contrariwiſe, that the faithfull ſhall not ſee death; whereby is meant, that they ſhould not taſte the joy of the one, nor theſe the puniſhment of the other: and elſewhere, that his ſheepe heare his voyce, that is, beleeue and obey it, in their heart, affections, and conuerſation. And thus alſo we are ſaid to ſee God, and to know him, not onely when in our vnderſtandings wee conceiue ſome bare notions of his nature and attributes, but alſo when wee apprehend and receiue him into our hearts, ſoules, and affections, and injoying him, doe rejoyce in his fruition. Whereby we vnderſtand, not only what this heauenly viſion is, but alſo what is the chiefe obiect thereof, namely, the Lord himſelfe, his nature, perſons, glory and Majeſty. And this is ſignified by the ſeeing of Gods face, of which the Scriptures make mention. Thus the Pſalmiſt ſaith; I will behold thy face in righteouſneſſe, and when I awake I ſhall bee ſatisfied with thine image. So it is ſaid, that the faithfull ſhall ſee Gods face, and his name ſhall bee written in their foreheads: And the Apoſtle Iohn affirmeth, that we ſhall ſee him as he is. In this life, as wee doe receiue the firſt fruits of our glorification, ſo anſwerably we haue a viſion and ſight of God; but it is (as the Apoſtle ſpeaketh) darke, as though it were through a glaſſe; and that either as wee ſee the wiſedome, power, and goodneſſe of God ſhining (though dimly) in the glaſſe of the creatures, which is our naturall viſion and ſeeing of him, common vnto vs with the Gentiles and Heathens: or that ſymbolicall ſight and viſion, when as wee haue

Pſal. 27. 13. & 56. 13.

Ioh. 3. 36.

Pſal. 17. 15.

Apoc. 22. 4.

1. Ioh. 3. 2.

Rom.

haue ſome ſmall glimpſe of his glory, by ſome ſignes, ſhadowes, and darke reſemblances. In which kind Moſes is ſaid to haue ſeene Gods hinder parts, that is, ſome ſmall ſignes and apparances of his glorious preſence; and Eſay affirmeth, that hee thus ſaw the Lord ſitting vpon an high Throne, and lifted vp, and the lower parts thereof filled the Temple, and the Seraphims ſtood vpon it. Or finally, the viſion of faith, whereby we ſee God in his Word, not onely deſcribed vnto vs in his attributes and perſons, but alſo in that liuely image of his Son, in whom the glory of the Father ſhined, both in his heauenly doctrine, and moſt powerfull miracles. In which ſenſe Chriſt ſaith to Philip, hee that hath ſeene me, hath ſeene my Father. But in the life to come we ſhall ſee God face to face, that is, with a cleere and manifeſt knowledge, and not in darke glaſſes, ſhadowes, and reſemblances: but as he is. Not that we ſhall behold him in his full quantitie which is infinite, and therefore incomprehenſible, but ſo much as the creature is capable of; and in his nature and attributes, knowing him in his wiſdome, power, goodneſſe, iuſtice and the reſt (all ſhadowes and vailes being taken away) much more perfectly and clerely than Adam did before his fall. For as we know men by their faces, and are able thereby to diſtinguiſh them from all others: ſo by that ſight of God, whereby wee ſhall with the cleere eyes of our vnderſtandings know his ſubſtance, nature, and attributes, we ſhall be able not onely to know him in himſelfe, but alſo to diſtinguiſh him from all the creatures. Whereby we are not to conceiue that our knowledge of God in this life, and in the life to come ſhall be diuers in themſelues, and differing in their ſubſtance and eſſence, but onely in degree and excellency; for ſo the Apoſtle ſaith, that now we know in part, that is, imperfectly and obſcurely, but then face to face. Whereby he ſignifieth, that this knowledge of God in this life, is a part and beginning of the other, and not of a diuers kind and different nature. And that wee know and vnderſtand as children: whereby is meant, that as children haue but a weake and imperfect knowledge, whereby they do but after a childiſh maner conceiue of high matters, as of Kings, Empires, forraine countries, State affaires, when they heare their parents talking of them, ſometimes imitating them in their words and diſcourſes, and not cleerely vnderſtanding what they ſay; but when they come to riper age, they haue in ſubſtance indeed and nature, the ſame vnderſtanding and knowledge, but in farre greater growth, perfection and excellency, euen as they haue being men, the ſame bodies which they had in their infancie, but much more ſtrong and perfect. And as we ſee the ſame ſunne, with the ſame eyes, and after the ſame maner, through a thicke miſt or cloud, which wee doe in a cleere day, though much more obſcurely and imperfectly: ſo ſhall wee with the ſame vnderſtandings, ſee the ſame God, after the ſame ſpirituall maner in Heauen, as we doe on the Earth, but yet in reſpect of the meaſure and degree, with much more excellencie, cleereneſſe and perfection. For here wee ſee God and conceiue of the ioyes of his kingdome, after a ſimple, weake, and childiſh maner, ſpeaking of them as we haue heard and read in the Word of our heauenly Father, and not perfectly vnderſtanding what wee ſay, becauſe wanting experience and perfect vnderſtanding of that which wee diſcourſe of, we are not able to comprehend it. But in the life to come we ſhall ſee God face to face, and know him as wee are knowne, that is, cleerely, experimentally, ſubſtantially, and eſſentially, without any darke riddles or ſhadowes of obſcurity; without which viſion and knowledge there could be no perfection of happineſſe. For then alone are we truely bleſſed, when as wee haue our wils and all our deſires throughly ſatisfied; but it is impoſſible that we ſhould bee thus ſatisfied and contented, vnleſſe we be filled with this diuine nature, in our vnderſtandings apprehending, and with our wils, deſires, and affections, louing and imbracing this moſt perfect ſubſtance, and diuine eſſence; ſeeing (as I haue ſaid) their capacity is ſo large, that nothning but an infinite goodneſſe can fill and ſatisfie them. Neither is it poſſible that our minds ſhould bee contented and at quiet, when as we ſee many excellent effects, and doe not know the more excellent cauſes; and when as we behold and know the beautifull creatures, and are ignorant, or not throughly acquainted with the Creator himſelfe, of infinite more beauty and perfection.

§. Sect. 2.
That our viſion of God ſhall be ſpirituall, and how farre forth we may be ſaid to ſee him with our bodily eyes; and that in him we ſhall haue the knowledge of all diuine myſteries.

Auguſt. epiſt. 112. Tom. 2.

Whereby we are not groſly to conceiue, that we ſhall ſee Gods nature and ſubſtance with our bodily eyes; for hee is ſpirituall and they corporall; but with the ſpirituall, and pure eyes of our minds and vnderſtandings ſhall wee behold this pure, perfect and ſpirituall ſubſtance; neither can (as one ſaith) the eſſence of God be ſeene with corporall eyes, for then ſhould he be alſo corporall, and viſibly circumſcribed in a ſpace or place, and not incomprehenſible and omni-preſent, but diuiſible and circumſcriptible: but the inuiſible God is ſeene inuiſibly, that is, by that part of our nature which is inuiſible; to wit, a pure and vndefiled minde or ſoule. Notwithſtanding though wee cannot ſee God eſſentially with our bodily eyes; yet ſhall we accidentally behold him in his viſible creatures, in whoſe glorified bodies, his glory, wiſedome, and power ſhall cleerely ſhine. And though we cannot ſee the Deitie or diuine nature, becauſe in its owne eſſence it is ſpirituall and inuiſible, yet ſhall we ſee God, in that liuely image of his Sonne and our Sauiour Ieſus Chriſt, who is God and man. In which ſenſe Iob ſaith, that he ſhall ſee God in his fleſh, that is, Chriſt Ieſus his redeemer, and in him, as his perfect image and liuely picture, in whom all the fulneſſe of the Godhead dwelleth bodily, as the Apoſtle ſpeaketh, ſhall wee ſee the Father and his Holy Spirit. And as wee cannot in this life ſee the ſubſtance and eſſence of our ſoules with our bodily eyes; but yet can with them behold them in the functions, operations, and actions which they exerciſe in the body; ſo though we cannot viſibly and ſenſibly ſee the inuiſible and incomprehenſible God in his owne ſpiritual nature and Being; yet may wee behold him in his creatures, exerciſing in them his wiſedome, power, and goodneſſe, eſpecially in that liuely character, and perfect paterne, his Sonne Ieſus Chriſt. But our chiefe viſion and knowledge of God ſhall be ſpirituall in our ſoule, minde, and vnderſtanding, wherewith we ſhall cleerely behold Gods eſſence and nature, in all his attributes and perfections, and alſo his perſons, conceiuing the great myſterie of the Trinitie, the Father, Sonne, and holy Spirit, in the Vnity of their moſt ſimple and vndiuided nature; and cleerely knowing the eternall generation of the Son by the Father, and the proceeding of the holy Spirit, and what diſtinction and difference there is betweene them. Then ſhall we know how all things in God are one and the ſame (except onely the relation of the perſons one to another) and that there is no diuerſitie of faculties, but one pure and perfect eſſence, nor his wiſedome, goodneſſe, iuſtice, mercy, and the reſt of the attributes different the one from the other, but all one and the ſame in God, yea of God, as being all of his eſſence and Being. Then ſhall wee vnderſtand how God is wholy euery where, and yet without place; great without quantitie, and good without quality. Then ſhall we know thoſe great myſteries of Chriſts two natures conioyned in the ſame perſon in the hypoſtaticall vnion, and of the vnion of our bodies with our head Chriſt, by the ſame Spirit dwelling in vs; whereby we become fleſh of his fleſh, & bone of his bones, though we be farre remote the one from the other; then ſhall we be acquainted with the cauſes of Gods eternall counſell in our election, creation, redemption, and in the gathering and gouerning of his Church, with all other his workes of wonder. Then ſhall wee know the ſpirituall ſubſtances of Angels, the nature, eſſence, and beginning of our owne ſoules; together with the hidden formes of other creatures. In a word, euery myſterie or ſecret whatſoeuer which is profitable, and the knowledge thereof by vs deſired, ſhall there be vnderſtood of vs; ſeeing bleſſedneſſe conſiſteth in full contentment, and wee cannot reſt quiet and content, vnleſſe our deſires be perfectly ſatisfied. All which excellent and bottomleſſe myſteries ſhall not grow ſtale and common vnto the Saints as ſoone as they haue conceiued them, but for euer remaine new and wonderfull; neither ſhall they procure in the beholders leſſe admiration and wonder after many thouſand yeeres beholding them, than at their firſt illumination and acquaintance with them. So that being illuminated with that diuine light of Gods holy Spirit, wee ſhall not onely ſee God, but by him his workes and creatures; and as in this life we ſee God in the creatures, ſo in the life to come, we ſhall ſee the creatures in and by God; for then he alone ſhall be our Sunne which ſhall giue vs all our light, as the holy Ghoſt ſpeaketh. And as in this World wherein things are ſenſible, we haue our power of ſeeing the creatures from the benefit of the Sunne inlightning the ayre, and the obiect, that wee may behold and diſcerne it in; ſo God the intelligible Sun of the World, with the beames and light of his holy ſpirit, doth ſo illighten the minds of the bleſſed, that thereby they are inabled to ſee his owne face and eſſence, will, and counſels, with open and cleere view, and alſo his creatures and workes of wonder which hee hath made for our delight and admiration, and for his owne prayſe and glory. By all which it appeareth that one of the greateſt parts of our heauenly happineſſe, conſiſteth in our viſion and ioyfull knowledge of God, whereby we ſhall not onely know himſelfe, but his creatures and workes of excellencie, in and by the light of his Spirit. So our Sauiour ſaith, that the pure in heart are [a] bleſſed, becauſe they ſhall ſee God: and that [b] eternall life conſiſteth in the knowledge of God, and his Sonne Chriſt. So the Apoſtles Paul and Iohn, doe make it a chiefe part of our happineſſe, that we ſhall [c] ſee God face to face, know him as we are knowne, and [d] ſee him as he is. And the Prophet Dauid ſaith, that beholding Gods face in righteouſneſſe, he ſhould be [e] ſatisfied with his image. And hence it is that our Sauiour earneſtly deſiring the happineſſe of his ſeruants, doth intreate of his Father, that thoſe whom he had [f] giuen him might bee with him, and behold his glory. And this ſtandeth with good reaſon that this viſion and knowledge of God ſhould be a chiefe and principall part of our happineſſe; firſt, becauſe our vnderſtanding being the chiefeſt facultie of the chiefeſt part of Iob 19.27.

Col.2.9.

[illegible]

Apoc.21.23.

[a] Matth.5.8.

[b] Iohn 17.3.

[c] 1.Cor.13.

[d] 1.Ioh.3.2.

[e] Pſal.17.15.

[f] Ioh.17.24.

of man, it muſt needs bee a chiefe part of our joy and glory to haue it ſatisfied and contented. But how can it be ſatisfied if ſeeing excellent effects, it doe not ſee the cauſe; and if knowing the rare workes of God, it doe not alſo know the workman? Againe, if there ſhould be in Heauen no true knowledge of God, there could bee no loue of him, and conſequently no pleaſure and delight: for howſoeuer we may loue an euill thing, yet wee cannot loue a thing vnknowne; and if wee doe not loue it, wee take no comfort or ioy in the being of it. So that take away knowledge and take away loue and delight; and contrariwiſe preſuppoſe excellencie and perfection of the object, and the greater our knowledge is, the greater will be our loue, the greater alſo our pleaſure and contentment in the fruition of it.

The other part of our fruition of God, is communion with him; neither ſhall wee onely ſee and behold him in all his goodnes, glory, and Maieſtie, but we ſhall alſo in a moſt bleſſed manner bee vnited vnto him, and communicate with him in all his happineſſe; which is the ſupreme end of our creation and redemption, and the very perfection of our glorification. For therefore did the Lord create vs according to his own image, and conformable to himſelfe in wiſedome, righteouſneſſe and holineſſe, that he might dwell with vs, and in vs, as in his holy Temple and habitation, and that wee might haue communion with him in all his excellencies and perfections. And when this communion was diſſolued and broken off by the fall of our firſt parents, and our ſins had ſeparated betweene our God and vs, becauſe our bodies and ſoules being corrupted and defiled with ſinne and wickedneſſe, were more fit to bee the habitations and dwelling places of the wicked and vncleane ſpirits, than the temples of the holy Ghoſt; then the Lord louing vs as his creatures ordained to glorie, with an eternall loue, and taking compaſſion of our miſerable condition, ſent his Sonne into the World to bee our Mediatour, and to repaire this communion betweene him and vs, by taking our nature vpon him, and vniting it to the diuine nature, that ſo it being vnited to his Deitie, and we to his Humanitie, by this mediation and bond we might be reunited vnto him, and that much more perfectly than in our firſt creation. So that the bond of our vnion with God is our Sauiour Chriſt, who being God and man, by his humane nature aſſumed, vniteth vs to God, and by his diuine nature aſſuming, vniteth God vnto vs, and by vertue of this vnion maketh vs partakers of God, and to haue communion with him in all his goodneſſe and diuine excellencies, and to become againe the habitations of God, and the temples of his holy Spirit. Now the meanes whereby we are vnited vnto Chriſt, he becomming our Head, and we the members of his body, are not onely his Aſſuming of our nature, but alſo our receiuing of his Spirit, whereby being vnited vnto Chriſt, and becomming one with him, as the Head and Members of the Body are one, becauſe they are informed with the ſame ſoule, wee are quickned thereby and doe liue the [a] life of Chriſt, as the Apoſtle ſpeaketh. So it is ſaid, that wee [b] are built together to bee the habitation of God by the ſpirit, that [c] by one ſpirit we are baptized into one body, that [d] he who is ioyned with the Lord, is one ſpirit with him; and contrariwiſe, that [e] hee who hath not the ſpirit of Chriſt, the ſame is none of his. The which communion betweene God and vs through Ieſus Chriſt, is begun in this life, truly, though in reſpect of the degree, it be weake and imperfect: for as we haue receiued but the firſt fruites of the Spirit, ſo we haue but a ſmall and weake entrance into this communion, and that by certaine inferiour meanes and inſtruments. For firſt by baptiſme wee are outwardly and ſacramentally ingrafted into the body of Chriſt, and after by the preaching of the Goſpell, made effectuall by the inward operation of Gods holy Spirit, a liuely faith is begun in vs, whereby we apply vnto our ſelues Chriſt and all his benefits, and ſo haue communion and fellowſhip with him. The which vnion and communion is more and more confirmed by the receiuing of the Lords Supper, becauſe by it our faith, which is on our part the bond thereof, is ſtrengthened and increaſed.

§. Sect. 4. That our communion with God ſhall be much more excellent and perfect than it is in this life.

But howſoeuer this communion with God and his ſonne Chriſt, be the ſame in nature and ſubſtance, with that which wee haue with them in this life, yet doe they exceedingly differ in the quantitie and degree, in the inferiour meanes which God vſeth to haue communion with vs, and in the bond on our part, whereby we are vnited vnto Chriſt. For then we hauing fulneſſe of the Spirit, ſhall be fully and perfectly vnited vnto our Head and Sauiour, and through him vnto God; injoying him in a neere, excellent, and vnſpeakeable manner. And whereas in this life God communicateth vnto vs Himſelfe, his mercy, and goodnes, by inferiour meanes, and ſecondarie cauſes; as his ſpirituall graces, by the meanes and Miniſterie of his Word and Sacraments; his temporall benefits tending to our preſeruation, and the maintenance of our liues, by his creatures, as meate, drinke, clothing, the ſunne, ayre, earth, and the reſt; after this life theſe inferiour cauſes and meanes ſhall ceaſe, and God without them ſhall be all in all, ſupplying vs with all things which wee

can

[a] Gal. 2. 20. Col. 3. 3. 4.

[b] Ephe. 2. 22.

[c] 1. Cor. 12. 13.

[d] 1. Cor. 6. 17.

[e] Rom. 8. 9.

can deſire, immediatly by his owne al-ſufficiencie, and perfecting our happineſſe by himſelfe alone, without any helpes or inferiour inſtruments. Finally, the bond of our vnion with Chriſt in this life, is a true faith, which in the life to come ſhall ceaſe; and wee ſhall be vnited vnto him, and through him vnto God immediately by his ſpirit, which ſhall dwell in vs. And on our part, in ſtead of faith, wee ſhall be vnited vnto the bleſſed Trinitie, by that perfect viſion and knowledge of God, it being the nature of true and effectuall knowledge, to comprehend and (as it were) to infold as much as may be the object or thing known, either receiuing it ſelfe, or the ſpecies and forme thereof into the mind and vnderſtanding: and by that perfect loue, which wee ſhall haue of God the Father, his Son, and Holy Spirit, the nature whereof is, to transforme (as much as may bee) the party louing into the thing beloued, and to make all things common betweene them. Whereby we may partly, and in ſome darke manner vnderſtand, what that diuine and holy vnion betweene God and vs ſhall be in the life to come: namely, a communion with God, in all his goodneſſe and perfections, through the Spirit of God dwelling in vs, vniting vs firſt vnto Chriſt, and in him to God the Father; and through our knowledge and loue of God, ſeeing and injoying him, whereby wee ſhall become the habitations and Temples of the Deitie, in which it will eternally dwell, and God ſhall become vnto vs all in all, immediately quickning, preſeruing, and gloryfying vs by himſelfe, without the helpe and miniſterie of inferiour meanes. And of this vnion, the ſcriptures ſpeake plentifully. For ſo the Apoſtle Peter ſaith, that wee ſhall be made partakers of [a] the diuine nature. And our Sauiour Chriſt prayeth for all his elect, that they may bee all one, as he and his Father were one: [b] I pray (ſaith he) for all that ſhall beleeue in me, that they all may be one, as thou O Father art in me, and I in thee, euen that they may bee alſo one in vs. And in this reſpect, they are ſaid to be the Temples of God, in which he dwelleth. [c] Yee are (ſaith the Apoſtle) the temple of the liuing God; as God hath ſaid, I will dwell among them, and walke there: I will be their God, and they ſhall be my people. So elſewhere he ſaith, that [d] we are built together to be the habitation of God by the ſpirit. And this is the voice of God from Heauen, [e] Behold the Tabernacle of God is with men, and he will dwell with them, and they ſhall bee his people, and God himſelfe ſhall bee their God with them.

Heb.11.1.
a 2.Pet.1.4.
b Iohn 17.21.
c 2 Cor.6.16.
d Epheſ.2.22.
e Apoc.21.4.

§. Sect.5. Of the excellent fruits

And this is that communion which the glorified Saints ſhall haue with God and our Sauiour Chriſt, the fruits and benefits whereof are infinite and ineſtimable; for communicating with God, who is infinite in all perfections, in his goodneſſe, glory, and excellencie, wee ſhall abound with all bleſſings which our hearts can deſire, and farre aboue all which we can conceiue; for whether it bee glory, riches, pleaſures, beautie, loue, wiſedome, or whatſoeuer other excellencies wee can conceiue, wee ſhall find them infinitely contained in the fountaine and treaſurie of all goodneſſe. Againe, being vnited vnto God, and communicating with him in the vertue and power of his holy Spirit, wee ſhall be quickned thereby, and liue the life of God, in puritie, eternitie, and all perfection, not in the quantitie, for God is infinite in all good, but in qualitie and ſimilitude, according to our meaſure and proportion. To which purpoſe one ſaith, that, as the ſoule is the life of the body; ſo God is the life of the ſoule; and as the body is dead, when it hath not the ſoule, ſo the ſoule is dead when it wanteth God. And as the blind man is ſaid to haue dead eyes, when they are depriued of light and ſight; ſo the ſoule is dead, if it doe not inioy God, the life of bleſſedneſſe. Furthermore by vertue of this communion it commeth to paſſe, that God al-ſufficient is vnto vs all in all, as the Apoſtle ſpeaketh, that is, doth free vs from all euill, and repleniſh and furniſh vs with all good, which our hearts can deſire, and that immediately by himſelfe, and not by ſecondary helps, and inferiour means, as hee doth in this life. To which purpoſe elſe-where hee deſireth, that the Epheſians might know the loue of Chriſt, which paſſeth all knowledge; that they might be filled with all fulneſſe of God. In this life, God is not thus all in all, as he wil be in the life to come, partly becauſe he vſeth for the procuring of our good, many meanes and inſtruments by which hee worketh; and partly becauſe hee doth not giue vnto vs all things in any excellency and perfection, in which reſpect it is truly ſaid, that Gods gifts are not now all in all, but ſome in euery man, as Wiſdome in Salomon, piety in Dauid, patience in Iob, and ſo in the reſt; but in our heauenly happineſſe, when God ſhall be all in all, we ſhal excel in all goodnes, vertue, glory and perfection. Neither ſhal wee then need any thing, becauſe we ſhal enjoy God Al-ſufficient, who wil by himſelfe ſupply all our wants, and grant vnto vs all our wiſhes. So the Apoſtle ſaith, that in the heauenly Ieruſalem; There ſhall be no Temple, for the Lord God Almightie, and the Lambe ſhall be the Temple of it, and wee ſhal worſhip God in God: nor Sunne or Moone to ſhine in it, for the glory of the Lord ſhall light it, and the Lambe ſhall be the light of it. And therefore wee ſhal no more need theſe worldly lights, than we need the light of a Candle, when the Sunne which wi compan commun with God namely he will be vs all in a cap.26.

Epheſ.3.19.

Hieron.
37. ad A

Apoc.21.
22.23.

Sunne ſhineth. We ſhall not need the Word and Sacraments, as meanes whereby we may more firmely be vnited vnto God; for then God will communicate himſelfe vnto vs immediately without theſe ſecondary and inferiour helpes. Neither ſhal wee need food, apparel, ſleepe, and other meanes of preſeruing life, ſeeing God wil immediately quicken vs, by his holy Spirit dwelling in vs. And this ſhal bee the perfection of our heauenly happineſſe, that God moſt wiſe, omnipotent, and Al-ſufficient, ſhal by himſelfe free and preſerue vs from euil, and fil, and furniſh vs with all good: and though when we haue ſpoken neuer ſo much of this eternal bleſſedneſſe, wee cannot attaine vnto the excellency thereof, yet let vs know, that this is the ſumme of all, that God is all, as the ſonne of Syrach ſpeaketh. Finally, by our communion with God, we ſhal become as like vnto him, as a finite creature may reſemble the infinite Creatour; like in goodneſſe, like in glory, like in eternitie, and in all perfection; for ſo the Apoſtle Paul ſaith, That wee ſhall all behold as in a mirrour, the glory of the Lord with open face, and ſhall be changed into the ſame Image from glory to glory, as by the Spirit of the Lord. And the Apoſtle Iohn ſaith, that when he ſhall appeare, wee ſhall be like vnto him, becauſe we ſhall ſee him as hee is. For as a drop of water being put into a veſſel of Wine, hath it owne nature altered, and receiueth both the taſte and colour of the Wine: And as Iron lying long in the fire, retayning its owne ſubſtance, receiueth the fires properties of light and heat, and becommeth like vnto it: And as the Sun-beames ſhining in the Ayre, doe make it bright and cleere, like the Sunne it ſelfe: And finally, as a glaſſe hauing the Sunne ſhining on it, retaineth in it a liuely Image of the Sunne both in figure and light: ſo the faithful being conuerſant with God vnto all eternitie, ſhal be, as it were, ſwallowed vp of that infinite excellency; and though they retaine their owne nature and ſubſtance, yet ſhal they be ſo indued with diuine qualities, that they ſhal be liuely Images, and, as it were, little models of Gods infinite goodneſſe, glory and perfection. And to conclude all in a word, by this communion we ſhal attaine vnto perfect bleſſedneſſe, wee hauing in God whatſoeuer wee deſire. For (as one ſaith) What ſeekeſt thou that is not in him? What deſireſt thou beſides him? What pleaſeth thee without him? He hath made all, he hath all, he is all. Whatſoeuer good thing thou deſireſt, whatſoeuer beautiful thing thou likeſt, whatſoeuer ſweet and delightful thing thou requireſt, in him thou ſhalt find it, and in him thou ſhalt enjoy it. If thou wilt rejoyce, hee is joy; if thou wilt ſtriue, hee is the garland; if thou wilt be crowned, hee is the Crowne; if thou wilt ouercome, he is the victory; if thou deſire power, he is omnipotent; if fortitude, he is a God of ſtrength; if righteouſneſſe, he is juſtice it ſelfe; if prudence, he is the fountaine of Wiſedome; if Charitie, he is Loue; if riches, he is a treaſure that can neuer faile; if thou wouldeſt be beautifull, hee is beautie it ſelfe; if thou ſeekeſt honour, he is a God of glory and majeſty; if peace, he is peace eternal; if fulneſſe of all good, he is an infinite and inexhauſtable goodneſſe, and whatſoeuer good thou canſt deſire, this ſummum bonum, and chiefe good ſhall repleniſh thee with it.

Chap. XI.

Of our perfect loue of God; our vnwearied delight in prayſing him; our perpetuall Sabbath, continuall ioy, and reioycing in the fruition of God; and of the eternitie of all this our happineſſe.

§. Sect. 1. That we ſhall moſt perfectly loue God, and be moſt happy in this our loue.

BVt ſeeing it were infinite to ſtand in ſuch particulars; becauſe God, whom we enjoy, is infinite in all goodneſſe and perfection; therefore leauing all the reſt of the fruits which our communion with God will yeeld vnto vs; I will onely inſiſt in that heauenly loue, and the fruits thereof, wherwith being vnited vnto God, we ſhall loue him, and he vs; which is the bond of our vnion with him, and the very perfection of our happineſſe. For when we ſhall ſee Gods excellencies and perfections, and communicate with him in all his happineſſe, and call to minde the infinite loue wherewith he hath alwayes loued vs, chuſing vs vnto life before we were, creating vs according to his owne Image vnto glory, ſuſtaining vs by his power and prouidence from time to time, and preſeruing and protecting vs in the middeſt of innumerable dangers; redeeming vs by giuing his onely Sonne, as the price of our redemption, calling vs by his Word and Spirit, to the participation of him, and all his benefits; juſtifying, ſanctifying, and finally, imparting vnto vs the joyes of Heauen, yea, himſelfe, his glory, goodneſſe, and eternall happineſſe to be enjoyed of vs; then wil this exceeding loue of God inflame our hearts with loue towards him againe, fill and repleniſh them with infinite joy in his fruition, and make vs to take our whole delight in thinking, ſpeaking, and doing whatſoeuer we know may be pleaſing & acceptable vnto him: then ſhal it be our pleaſure to thinke and ſpeake of his mercies and goodneſſe, to ſing his prayſes, and with all our might to extoll, and magnifie his beauty and excellency in himſelfe, and his benefits and bleſſedneſſe communicated vnto vs: then ſhall not his Commandements bee grieuous vnto vs, but we ſhal performe them with all alacrity, August. de ciuit. Dei. lib. 22. cap. 30.

August. de ſpiritu & anima cap. 65.

Ipſe facit vt deſideres; ipſe eſt quod deſideras. Cauſa diligendi Deum Deus eſt. Ipſe dat occaſionem, ipſe creat affectionem, deſiderium ipſe conſummat. Bernard. de dilig. Deo tract.

1. Iohn 4.16.

joy and comfort: then ſhall we (as one ſaith) haue an holy otium, and good leiſure to contemplate Gods diuine excellencies, and ſeeing them, wee ſhall loue them, and louing ſhal prayſe them. And this ſhal bee our end without end; for what other end haue wee, but to come to that Kingdom which hath no end? then being freed from all euill, and fully repleniſhed with all good, wee ſhal contemplate and behold Gods beauty and goodneſſe, which doth repleniſh and fill vs; and he ſhall be the end of all our deſires, whom wee ſhal ſee without end, loue without loathing, and prayſe without wearineſſe. Of all which loue and joy the Lord himſelfe is the ſole Authour, efficient, object, end and fruit. For firſt in our creation, hee wrought in vs this faculty or affection of loue, whereby man deſireth to imbrace and vnite vnto himſelfe the thing beloued, that ſo enjoying it, he may reſt contented, and rejoyce in this fruition. And that to this mayne end, that we might deſire, imbrace, and be vnited with all our hearts, wils and affections, vnto himſelfe our ſupreame good, who is infinite in all beauty and perfection, & ſo by this bond of loue become one with him. For as the Apoſtle ſaith, God is loue, and he that dwelleth in loue, dwelleth in God, and God in him. So the Lord is the efficient cauſe of our loue, whileſt he communicateth himſelfe vnto vs, who is worthy of all loue, and with the infinite flames of his loue towards vs, doth inflame our hearts with loue towardes him: and the object likewiſe of our affection being moſt louely and ful of all beauty, excellency, and perection. And finally, he is the ſupreme end, and from him alone haue wee all the fruit of our loue, whileſt imbracing him in our harts and affections, who containeth all good and perfection, wee are fullie ſatisfied, repleniſhed with delight, and made thereby moſt happie and bleſſed. For ſeeing it is the nature of loue to vnite the perſon louing, with the thing beloued, yea, to transforme him as much as may be, into the ſame nature, and to adorne him with the ſame excellencies which it affecteth: and ſeeing our loue of God ſhal bee ſo perfect, that wee ſhall loue him with all the powers of our ſoules, much more ardently than we do our ſelues; hereof it wil come to paſſe, that we ſhal much more reioyce in his glory and bleſſednes, than in our owne; and the fuller our hearts be with his loue, the more ioy ſhall wee haue in beholding his felicitie. As therefore wee loue God becauſe he communicateth vnto vs heauenly happineſſe, ſo ſhal wee be moſt happy, becauſe we loue him. For then are wee perfectly bleſſed, when we haue the full fruition of our ſummum bonum, and chiefe happineſſe; and the chiefe meanes, whereby wee imbrace and inioy it, is, when our wils deſire it, and our hearts and affections are ſet vpon it. And as wee are thus happie and bleſſed, becauſe wee ſhall perfectlie loue the Lord, ſo much more, becauſe he will loue vs, both becauſe his loue is infinite, and far beyond all degrees of compariſon ſurpaſſing ours; and alſo becauſe it is actiue, operatiue, and moſt powerfull to communicate vnto vs all goodneſſe and perfection; for louing our Being, he cauſeth vs to bee: louing vs by his grace, he communicateth grace vnto vs; louing vs vnto glory and eternall happines, he doth by this loue glorifie vs, and make vs happie. Wherein the loue of God infinitly exceedeth the loue of men: for they loue one another, becauſe they find them worthie their loue, as being beautifull, good, vertuous, and indued with good parts; but God by his louing vs, maketh vs worthie his loue; and doth not therefore firſt loue vs, becauſe wee are good, beautifull, and full of vertue, and perfection, but becauſe he loueth vs, he imparteth vnto vs Beautie, Vertue, Goodneſſe, and all good parts, framing the object of his Loue to his owne minde, that he may eternally delight in louing of it, being fitted and made worthy of his loue and fauour.

And thus being filled with Gods loue, and through this loue repleniſhed with all joy and bleſſedneſſe; we ſhal take all our delight in prayſing and magnifying the Lord, and in ſpeaking of his infinite Wiſdome, Power, Majeſty, Iuſtice, Goodneſſe, Mercy, and of the reſt of his attributes and perfections; ſinging continually Pſalmes of prayſe & thankſgiuing to God the Father, his Sonne, and holy Spirit, for our Creation, Redemption, Glorification; becauſe in the one he hath giuen vs our ſelues, in the other his Sonne, and in the laſt Himſelf to be enjoyed for the perfecting of our happineſſe. For as in this life we offer this ſeruice vnto God, becauſe wee haue nothing elſe to giue vnto him for all his benefits, but the ſacrifice of prayſe & thankſgiuing, (neither can we render vnto him any preſent to ſhew our loue, which is more acceptable, than the lauding and magnifying of his excellencies in himſelfe, and his mercy and goodneſſe towards vs) ſo ſhall wee performe this ſeruice vnto God eternally in the heauenly joyes, with as much more rejoycing, alacrity and comfort, as we haue a more ful ſight of his glory and majeſty, and a more compleat, and perfect fruition of his grace and goodneſſe. For (as one ſaith) God is the end of our deſires, whom wee ſhall ſee without end, loue without loathing, and prayſe without wearineſſe. Of which diuine and heauenly prayſes wee haue ſome taſte in the holy Scriptures: ſo Dauid hauing receiued the firſt fruits of glorification, in his aſſurance of Gods loue, peace of conſcience, and joy in the Holy Ghoſt, had his heart filled with thankfulneſſe, and his mouth with thankeſgiuing, taking his chiefe pleaſure in re-

§. Sect.
That all o delight ſ be to ſing tinually prayſes of God.

Ipſe finis deſiderio noſtrorū ſine fin tur, ſine f amabitur, fatigation dabitur, Auguſt. de Ci Dei, lib.
cap. 30.

recording Gods mercies, and in ſinging his prayſes; as it plentifully appeareth in the Booke of the Pſalmes. So the foure and twenty Elders in the Reuelation, fall downe before God, and worſhip him, ſaying: Thou art worthy O Lord to receiue glory, and honour, and power, for thou haſt created all things, and for thy wils ſake they are, and haue beene created: ſo they are ſaid to haue taken their Harps and golden Vials, and to haue ſung this new Song in the prayſe of our Sauiour, ſaying, Thou art worthy to take the Booke, and open the ſeales thereof, becauſe thou waſt killed, and haſt redeemed vs to God by thy bloud, out of euery kindred, and tongue, and people, and nation, and haſt made vs vnto our God Kings and Prieſt, and wee ſhall raigne on the earth. And with them joyne thouſand thouſands of the Saints, ſinging and ſaying with a loud voice; Worthy is the Lambe that was killed, to receiue power, and riches, and wiſdome, and ſtrength, and honour, and glory, and prayſe, &c. And elſewhere it is ſaid, that a great multitude which no man could number, of all nations, and kindreds, and people, and tongues, ſtood before the Throne, and before the Lambe clothed with long white robes, and palmes in their hands, and cryed with a loud voice ſaying: Saluation commeth of our God, that ſitteth vpon the Throne, and of the Lambe: and all the Angels ſtood about the Throne, and about the Elders, and the foure beaſts, and they fell downe before the Throne on their faces, and worſhipped God; ſaying, Amen, Prayſe, and glory, and wiſdome, and thankes, and honour, and power, and might, bee vnto God for euermore. Amen. Which holy exerciſe (as he ſaith) they performe continually vnto God in his Temple day and night. And in another place hee ſaith, that hee heard a great voice, of a great multitude in Heauen, ſaying, Hallelujah ſaluation, and glory, and honour, and power, be to the Lord our God; for true and righteous are his iudgements. All which worſhip and ſeruice ſhall be performed vnto God, in, and by God, for there ſhal be no Temple, Ceremony, preaching of the Word, or Sacraments; for God immediately with his holy Spirit ſhal both incite and inable vs with all joy to performe theſe duties, and hee ſhal be our Temple, Light, and all in all. All which actions of prayſe and thankeſgiuing, as they tend to the glory of God, ſo chiefly and principally to our owne good; for Gods glory in its owne nature and eſſence, being infinite and moſt perfect, cannot be increaſed by our prayſes, but is only manifeſted to his beſt beloued creatures, for their owne good and glory. And as the Sunne draweth vp vapours from the Sea and other waters, not for its owne vſe and benefit, but that it may cauſe them to diſtill downe in raine to water the earth, and make it fruitfull: ſo the Lord with the beames of his grace and holy Spirit, draweth from vs theſe prayſes and thankeſgiuings, not for his owne good, vnto which nothing can be added, but that his Saints and holy Angels by theſe heauenly exerciſes of his ſeruice, may haue an increaſe of their joy and bleſſednes.

4.11.

9,10, 15.

§. Sect. 3.
That wee ſhall keepe an eternall Sabbath vnto God.

And becauſe this ſhal be our continuall exerciſe to contemplate Gods infinite beauty, glory, and perfections, hereof it will come to paſſe, that wee ſhal keepe an eternall Sabbath, and perpetual reſt vnto the Lord, for his glory and our own infinite joy and comfort. Neither is it to be thought, that in this heauenly happineſſe, we ſhal ſpend our time in ſlothful eaſe, and idle reſt, which is more tedious and lothſome than the painfulleſt labour; but that we ſhal wholy reſt from ſin, and performe vnto God, pure and perfect ſeruice; and alſo from the fruits of ſinne, as the troubles and grieuances of this life, our painful labours, wearines of body, and cares of minde; and enjoy peaceable quietneſſe in the viſion and fruition of God, without any trouble care, or other moleſtation. So the Apoſtle Paul ſaith, that the Lord at his appearing, wil free vs from our troubles, and giue vnto vs reſt: and elſe-where hee affirmeth, that there remayneth a reſt to the people of God: for hee that is entred into his reſt, hath alſo ceaſed from his owne workes, as God from his: And the Apoſtle Iohn telleth vs that in our heauenly happineſſe, there ſhall bee no more ſorrow, nor crying, nor pain, becauſe God ſhall wipe all teares from our eyes. And this is the perfection of that reſt, which our Sauiour promiſeth. Take my yoke on you (ſaith hee) and learne of me, that I am meeke and lowly in heart, and you ſhall find reſt to your ſoules. Beſides, we ſhal reſt in our wils and deſires, and no more (as in this life) couet after better, or other things; becauſe hauing attained vnto the fruition of our ſummum bonum, and perfection of happines, we ſhal be throughly, and fully ſatiſfied, there being nothing in heauen or in earth which wee can deſire more. For as in nature reſt is the end of motion, and the appetite ceaſeth as being ſatiſfied, when the matter hath attained its deſired forme: and as the body reſteth, when it is come vnto the place vnto which it trauelled: ſo our ſoules endeauouring to obtaine thoſe things which they loue and deſire, that being thereby fully ſatisfied and contented, they may reſt and rejoyce in their fruition, hauing attained vnto the fruition of God, and that heauenly happineſſe, and infinite joy in his preſence, and being ſatiate without ſatietie with his goodneſſe and perfection, doe peacefully and moſt joyfully reſt in this bleſſed communion with him.

Eſay 66,23.

2.Theſſ.1.7.

Heb.4.9,10.

Apocal.21,4.

Matth.11.29.

§ Sect.4.
That in our

For with this reſt there ſhall be joyned all peace, comfort, joy, and rejoycing in God, heauenly happines we ſhall haue all ioy, comfort, peace and reioycing in God.

and in the fruition of our heauenly happines, which is (as it were) the top of our perfection, and the harueſt of our glory. For as the ſight and preſence of God, is the root of all our felicity and bleſſedneſſe, the loue and fruition of him, the body, boughes, and branches of this Tree of Life eternall; ſo this joy and gladneſſe, rejoycing and triumphing in God, our ſummum bonum, ſhal be the fruit vpon which wee ſhal feed to our euerlaſting comfort: when as ſeeing, enjoying, louing, prayſing, and reſting in him; wee ſhal take infinite pleaſure and delight in the ſight of his beauty and glory, in the taſt of his ſweetneſſe and bounty, and in the fruition of his goodneſſe and perfection. And hence it is, that our Sauiour Chriſt calleth our heauenly happineſſe by the name of joy: Enter (ſaith he) into thy Maſters ioy; and the Pſalmiſt, fulneſſe of ioy and eternall pleaſures; and that they are deſcribed by the actions of pleaſure which we vſe in this life, as eating, drinking, ſinging playing on inſtruments & ſuch like: to note vnto vs, that our ſweet repoſe in God, accompanied with all theſe joyes, comforts and delights, is the conſummation and perfection of all our happineſſe. For as in this life God hath endued man with ſuch a nature, that his will, heart and affections, embracing their loued and liked objects, hee is ſweetly affected with them, and hath his heart opened with joy, that (as much as may be) it may receiue them into it, and ſo rejoyce in their fruition; with which joy and gladneſſe the heart is cheared, the health preſerued, and the life prolonged: ſo he retayning ſtill his nature, and natural faculties, though in farre greater excellency and perfection, doth, when hee ſeeth his ſummum bonum, and chiefe happineſſe, God infinite in all perfection, with his will and ſoule embrace this moſt beloued object, and hauing his heart with this heauenly Viſion, filled with all joy and gladneſſe, it doth more and more dilate and enlarge it, to make an open entrance & paſſage for this chiefe good which it moſt dearely loueth, that by a more full fruition of it, there may be ſtill greater cauſe of glorying and rejoycing. And this is that peace and infinite joy which is begunne in all the faithfull, euen in this life; when as knowing God in Chriſt, and being aſſured by faith of the pardon of our ſinnes, of our reconciliation, and recouery of his loue and fauour, by our Sauiours perfect and al-ſufficient ſatisfaction, and of thoſe future joyes which in our heauenly Country are prepared and reſerued for vs; we doe joy and rejoyce in this knowledge and aſſurance, not only when we enjoy worldly proſperity, but alſo in our greateſt afflictions and perſecutions. Neither is the joy and peace of the faithfull in earth, of a diuers kinde, and different nature to that which the Saints ſhal haue in Heauen; for the whole Kingdome of God, compriſing both the Kingdome of grace, and the Kingdome of glory, is righteouſneſſe, peace, and ioy in the holy Ghoſt, as the Apoſtle ſpeaketh: but the difference betweene them, is in their degree and quantity; for as the knowledge, fruition, and loue of God is weake and imperfect in this life; ſo alſo is our peace and joy; beſides that it is continually moleſted and diſturbed, with many cares, feares, and griefes, ariſing both from the things without vs, and within vs; from all which imperfections and troubles we being perfectly freed in our heauenly Country, ſhal alſo attaine vnto perfect peace, and compleate fulneſſe of joy and comfort; ſo as it ſhal not be like our worldly joy, counterfeit, outward, and mixt with griefe and ſorrow, according to the ſaying of the Wiſe man, euen in laughing the heart is ſorrowfull, and the end of that mirth is heauineſſe: but kindly, hearty, pure and ſincere, without the mixture of either griefe or miſery; not tickle and inconſtant, rejoycing and mourning almoſt with the ſame breath, but moſt conſtant and durable, permanent and continuall, being free, both from end, and all diſtraction and perturbation: not cauſed by bitter quips and biting girds, nor yet by fooliſh jeſting, and filthy ſpeaking; but ſpirituall, graue and holy, hauing a farre different roote from which it ſpringeth, namely, the fruition of God, and our heauenly happineſſe. Finally, our joyes ſhal not like the pleaſures of the World, become tedious in their vſe, and loathſome if there be not continually new variety, but ſhal conſtantly remaine ſweet and pleaſant, bringing fulneſſe without loathing, and ſatiety without tediouſneſſe. Now what ſhal be the ſubiect and cauſe of this our joy, ſo infinite, and ſo endleſſe, I haue in part ſhewed, namely, becauſe we ſhal be freed from all euil, and repleniſhed with all good, hauing our minds enlightened, our wils reformed, our conſciences purged and purified, our affections ſanctified, our whole man perfectly glorified. And alſo becauſe wee ſhall enjoy the ſociety of the Angels and Saints, our fellowſhip with the Sonne of God, and our Sauiour, whoſe excellencies in himſelfe and benefits deriued to vs, we ſhall behold and admire, and admiring, againe contemplate: our communion alſo with the Spirit of God dwelling in vs; which being ſuch a Comforter, and infuſing ſuch joy into our hearts in this life, that enableth vs to endure not only with patience, but with comfort and rejoycing all troubles and tortures, afflictions, and perſecutions; with what infinite joy wil it fill vs in the world to come in the fruition of God, and all his benefits? Vnto which ſome alſo adde that exceeding joy, which the Saints ſhal haue, when they ſee Gods and their enemies trodden vnder foote, and bearing

Matth.25.21.

Pſal.16.11.

Rom.5.3.

Rom.14.17.

Prou.14.13.

ring deſerued puniſhments for their ſinnes, not out of the hatred of their perſons, and deſire of reuenge, but becauſe God is glorified in the execution of Iuſtice, and in verifying his threatnings, according to that of the Pſalmiſt; The righteous ſhall reioyce, when he ſeeth the vengeance, hee ſhall waſh his feet in the blood of the wicked, and ſhall ſay verily there is a fruit for the righteous, doubtleſſe there is a God that iudgeth the earth: an example whereof wee haue in the Saints, rejoycing and prayſing God, becauſe hee had ſhewed his truth, and executed his righteouſneſſe, in the puniſhment and deſtruction of the Whore of Babylon.

All which their joy is made moſt perfect and compleat, becauſe it ſhal not continue onely for a time, but remayne and endure for euer and euer; for the joy which our Sauiour will giue vnto vs, no man ſhal be able to take it from vs. And this is the laſt point which I propounded, without which all the reſt were maymed & vnperfect; for though our heauenly happines were in it ſelfe neuer ſo compleat and abſolute in all perfections, yet if it were not alſo permanent and euerlaſting, and infinite in time, as well as incomprehenſible in quantitie, we could not be ſaid to be perfectly happy, and truly bleſſed. For though we were ſure they ſhould continue many hundred thouſand of yeeres, yet if wee alſo knew, that they would then end and leaue vs, wee ſhould be as much diſcontented, that the time would come when as wee ſhould be depriued of them, as comforted in their preſent fruition; yea, the greater and more excellent our joyes ſhould be whileſt wee haue them, the greater would in this reſpect our ſorrow & griefe be, to thinke that we ſhould once be diſpoyled of them; whereas now finding them for the preſent infinite, and in reſpect of the time to come endleſſe, nothing can be added to their perfection. But the eternity of theſe joyes may as cleerely be proued out of the holy Scriptures, as their vnconceiueable excellency. So the Pſalmiſt ſaith, that in Gods [a] preſence is fulneſſe of ioy, and at his right hand pleaſures for euermore. And our Sauiour promiſeth, that they who [b] eate of the bread of life ſhall liue for euer: and ſaith, that it is [c] life eternall to know God and his Sonne Chriſt. And in this the Apoſtle maketh an oppoſition betweene the things of this life, & the life to come; In that the [d] world paſſeth away, and the luſts thereof, but hee that fulfilleth the will of God abideth euer. So the Kingdome of glory is ſaid to be ſo conſtant and permanent that it cannot be ſhaken, and hath the Epithete of eternity, oftentimes attributed vnto it: thus it is called [e] eternall glory, vnto which the God of all grace hath called vs by Ieſus Chriſt; and an [f] eternall inheritance, which can neuer fade nor periſh. So the Apoſtle ſaith, that [g] Chriſt was appointed to bee our mediatour, that through his death thoſe which are called, might receiue the promiſe of an eternall inheritance. And the Apoſtle Peter telleth vs, that we haue [h] an inheritance, immortall, and vndefiled, and that fadeth not away, reſerued in Heauen for vs. And in this reſpect the eſtate of the faithfull, is by the Pſalmiſt made much more excellent than the ſtate of the wicked; that whereas theſe with all their power and might ſhall bee quite ruined and ouerthrowne, the juſt are vpholden by God, and ſhall haue an [i] inheritance which ſhall be perpetuall. Finally, the Kingdome of our Sauiour Chriſt is ſaid to be eternall and conſequently his ſubjects ouer whom he raigneth muſt liue eternally with him: and leſt wee ſhould thinke that hee continuing in his regencie, may make choice of other ſubjects, they alſo are ſpecified to be the houſe of Iacob, that is, his Church, and faithfull, the true poſterity of Abraham according to the promiſe. For ſo the Angell of God ſaith vnto the bleſſed virgin: [k] He ſhall reigne ouer the houſe of Iacob for euer, and of his Kingdome ſhall be no end. And to put the matter out of all doubt, that wee alſo ſhall reigne with him; it is not onely ſaid in the Scriptures, that wee ſhall be [l] incorruptible and immortall; but more preciſely, that wee [m] ſhall reigne in this Kingdome of glory for euermore. Fooliſh therefore is the dreame and dotage of thoſe Heretiques, who imagined that this heauenly glory and happineſſe ſhould continue but a thouſand yeeres; ſeeing the Scriptures ſo plentifully proue, that they ſhall bee endleſſe and euerlaſting. And as weake and feeble is their ground and foundation, whereupon they build their vaine opinion; namely, becauſe it is ſaid in the Reuelation, that the faithfull ſhall reigne with God and our Sauiour Chriſt a thouſand yeeres: which is not to be vnderſtood of the Kingdome of glory in Heauen, but of the Kingdome of grace in Earth, as the words immediately going before, ſpecially limiting it to the firſt reſurrection, which is our regeneration, whereby in this world we riſe from the death of ſinne, to holineſſe and newneſſe of life, doe plainely ſhew. So that notwithſtanding their fooliſh and vngrounded aſſertion wee may conclude, that as the ioyes of Heauen are in their quantity and quality moſt excellent and vnſpeakeable, infinite and incomprehenſible; ſo alſo in reſpect of time they are endleſſe and euerlaſting, not onely in themſelues, but alſo vnto vs, ſeeing they ſhall neuer bee taken from vs, nor we from them; but after many thouſand millions of yeeres expired, they ſhall be as far from their end as the firſt day when wee entred into them. For otherwiſe wee ſhould not attaine vnto perfect felicity, and compleat bleſſedneſſe, which the Scriptures

[h] 1.Pet.1.4.

[i] Pſal.37.27,18

[k] Luke 1.33. Dan.7.27.

[l] 1.Cor.15.53. 2.Tim.1.10.

[m] Apoc.22.5.

Apoc.20.5,6.

tures ſo often doe promiſe vnto vs; ſeeing it comprehendeth not only an infinite quantitie and meaſure of happineſſe, but alſo an euerlaſting time, and a perpetuall continuance of this glory and felicity, without the aſſurance whereof wee could neuer bee ſecure, nor our hearts and deſires fully satiſfied, and without which ſecuritie and ſatietie there can bee no perfect bleſſedneſſe and fellicitie.

Chap. XII.

Of the vſes of the former doctrine concerning the ioyes of Heauen.

§. Sect. I.
That we ſhould ſpend our time rather in getting aſſurance of theſe heauenly ioyes, than in curious inquiring after them.
1.Cor.2.9.
Thom. Aquin. de veri. theolog. lib. 7. cap. vlt.

AND thus haue I darkely ſhadowed out the ioyes of Heauen, which no mortall man can deſcribe according to their glory & full perfections: for as the Apoſtle hath taught vs, the things which God hath prepared for all thoſe that loue him, are ſuch, as neither eye hath ſeene, nor eare hath heard, nor hart conceiued. And as another ſaith, ſo innumerable & incomprehenſible be theſe euerlaſting ioyes of Gods Kingdome, that all the Arithmeticians in the world cannot ſufficiently number thē, nor Geometricians meaſure them; nor all the Grammarians, Logicians, and Rhetoricians, to the full expreſſe them. That therefore you may ſomewhat ſupply that wherein the former diſcription is defectiue, call to mind all thoſe ioyes which you haue euer ſeene, and ſay with your ſelues, that they are not theſe, but farre greater, becauſe your eyes haue beheld them. Recall to your memories all thoſe delights and comforts, which you haue euer beene told of, and then withall thinke that they are not theſe, but much more excellent, becauſe your eares haue heard them; yea faine in your imaginations, whatſoeuer glory and happineſſe your mind can conceiue and comprehend, and conclude with ioy, that they are not theſe, but much more admirable and incomprehenſible, becauſe your heart and ſoule hath beene able to conceiue them; ſeeing the Apoſtle hath plainely told vs, that theſe heauenly ioyes are ſo infinite, and farre aboue all humane reach, that neither the eye, eare, nor heart, haue ſeene, heard, or conceiued the leaſt part of this diuine glory, and ſurpaſſing excellencie. And therefore ſeeing they cannot perfectly be known before they be enioyed, let vs not (as many doe) ſpend our time in curious queſtions, and buſie our ſelues in ſearching what is done in Heauen, and what are the particular degrees of euery ones glory, neglecting in the meane time the way which ſhould bring vs vnto this happineſſe; but conſidering that this Kingdome is a garland and crowne of glory, which none obtaine but they who runne a race; let vs not fooliſhly ſtand ſtill and loiter, enquiring after thoſe hidden and vnknowne jewels, wherewith this crowne is enriched and adorned; but let vs firſt runne this race, that wee may be aſſured that wee ſhall obtaine it, and then ſhall wee haue time and leaſure enough to conſider of its worth and excellency. Now is the time wherein we muſt ſtriue againſt the enemies of our ſaluation, that hauing the victorie, wee may receiue the crowne of glory; and as the Apoſtle ſaith, if any man ſtriue for a maſterie, he is not crowned except hee ſtriue as he ought to doe. Now is our ſeed time, & hereafter ſhal be our haruest of happineſſe, & (as in the ſame place he telleth vs) the husbandman muſt labour before hee receiue the fruits. And that we may not deceiue our ſelues in thinking that we ſhall find it an eaſie paſſage to fleſh and bloud, and that we may with ſmall paines and trouble come to the end of our iourney; let vs conſider that the enemies of our ſaluation are not few and feeble, but many and potent, euen principalities, powers, gouernours and great Princes, as the Apoſtle calleth them; who are not eaſily ouercome, vnleſſe we be armed with the ſpirituall armour, and fight couragiouſly vnto the end: and that our way to Heauen is not by a faire and pleaſant Sea, vpon which wee might saile, though we ſpend our time in ſleeping, and attaine vnto the hauen by other mens labours before wee are aware; but a iourney by land; and that the way which wee trauell, is not champion, and delightfull to the old Adam, but (as our Sauiour calleth it) a narrow and afflicted path, in it ſelfe rough, and full of rubs, and beſet on all ſides with the thornes of afflictions, and briars of tribulations, which are likely to diſcourage vs that wee will not, or hinder vs that wee cannot goe forward to our iourneyes end, vnleſſe wee breake through them with a magnanimous ſpirit, and Chriſtian reſolution. The gate which entreth into this heauenly Paradiſe, is (as Chriſt alſo telleth vs) ſo ſtraite and vneaſie for entrance, that we muſt ſtriue (if we will haue any paſſage) to enter into it; and that not according to our owne ſuperſtitions, but Gods direction; for as much as hee ſaith in another place: many ſhall ſeeke to enter in, but ſhall not be able. And (as the Apoſtle ſpeaketh) if the righteous be ſcarcely ſaued; that is, not without great paines and difficultie, where ſhall the vngodly and ſinner appeare?

1.Cor.14.24.
2.Tim.2.5.
Eph.6.12.
Mat.7.13.
Act.14.22.
2.Tim.3.
Luk.13.24.
1.Pet.4.18.

§. Sect.
That the culty in ning the of Heauen ſhould no courage v

But yet let not this labour and vneaſie paſſage diſcourage and hinder vs from entring or going forward in this difficult and afflicted way, ſeeing if wee take the paines which God hath preſcribed, we ſhall moſt certainly obtaine the reward; and when we enioy vs more in paines.

4.17.

enioy it, we ſhall be ſure to finde it worth our labour: for the Apoſtle telleth vs, that the afflictions of this preſent life are not worthy the glory which ſhall bee reueiled in vs; becauſe (as elſewhere he ſpeaketh) theſe light and momentanie afflictions, ſhall cauſe vnto vs a farre moſt excellent, and an eternal waight of glory. Yea rather let vs with greater courage and reſolution, paſſe through all dangers, and endure all paines and labour, that we may attaine vnto this eternall reſt and glorious Kingdome. For if men for the obtaining of a corruptible crowne, are content to oppreſſe themſelues with cares, to endure all labours, to run a thouſand deſperate courſes, and euen to hazard their owne ſoules; yea, if they bee willing, for the ſmalleſt preferments and profits of a Kingdome, to trauell by Sea and Land, to ſpend their ſtrength, and conſume their bodies, and to indanger themſelues daily to many deaths, though (as I haue ſhewed) they are but of ſmall worth, and leſſe certaintie for their continuance; what cares, dangers, and labours ſhould wee thinke too much for the obtaining of a crowne, which is moſt glorious and incorruptible, and a Kingdome without end? But yet alas, ſuch is either the great infidelitie of men, that they doe not beleeue theſe things, though God who is truth it ſelfe doe promiſe them; or their negligence, that they neuer ſo much as thinke and meditate vpon them; or their ſecuritie and preſumption, that they hope to obtaine this Kingdome whether they ſeeke it or no; or finally, ſuch is their prophaneneſſe and carnall folly, that they eſteeme theſe earthly and momentanie trifles, vaine honours, vncertaine riches, and brutiſh pleaſures, more than theſe vnſpeakable ioyes and euerlaſting glory. For that they ſtand thus affected, it may plainly appeare by their practiſe and our daily experience. For whereas if any man of credit ſhould promiſe vnto them, I will not ſay a Kingdome, but ſome ſmall profit, pleaſure, or preferment, vpon condition that they will take ſome paines in ſuing and ſeeking to obtaine it; how readily and earneſtly will they become ſeekers and ſuers, that they may inrich themſelues with theſe earthly benefits? But when Chriſt the eternall verity, who neuer failed of his Word, offereth this heauenly Kingdome of his free grace, as a reward of their paines, if they will labour to obtaine it; how little doe they regard it? how ſlowly doe they ſeeke it? thereby ſhewing manifeſtly that either they doe not beleeue Gods promiſe; or doe ſo baſely eſteeme the thing promiſed, that they preferre before it theſe worldly trifles and worthleſſe vanities. If an earthly King ſhould promiſe to his ſubiect ſome great treaſures and high preferments, on this condition, that hee ſhew himſelfe dutifull and obedient, in performing ſome of his lawfull commandements; with how great care and diligence would hee yeeld obedience? and how much more if hee ſhould promiſe, yea and confirme it by his hand, ſeale, and Oath, that he would adopt him for his Sonne, and make him heire apparant of his Kingdome? But when God thus promiſeth his heauenly benefits, and offereth vnto vs his Kingdome of glory, and to make vs heires of this eternall inheritance, if wee will beſtow any paines in ſeeking of it; how few are the number that regard his promiſes, or beſtow any labour in attaining to this aſſurance? and yet there is great difference, both in reſpect of the perſons promiſing, and the things promiſed. For a King being mortall, and mutable, may either die, and ſo cannot; or change his minde vpon ſome diſpleaſure, and ſo will not performe his promiſe, or though neither of theſe fall out, hee may die to whom the promiſe is made, before him that made it, and ſo neuer come to inherit the Kingdome: But God is immortall and immutable, and as he cannot die, ſo he cannot be changed, and therefore will moſt certainely performe his promiſe, if wee performe the condition of our dutie and obedience. And againe, there is great difference betweene the things promiſed, euen as great, as betweene Heauen and Earth, a ſubſtance and a ſhadow, momentany pleaſure, and euerlaſting joy, betweene a flitting and fading Kingdome, incumbred with many croſſes and afflictions, and a Kingdome abſolute in all perfection, infinite, endleſſe, repleniſhed with all glory, joy and riches, and obnoxious to no trouble and incumbrance.

§. Sect. 3.
Of the meanes whereby wee may be aſſured to attaine vnto our heauenly ioyes.

But let vs, who haue ſeene ſome ſmall ſhadow and reſemblance of this heauenly happineſſe, and moſt perfect glory, auoid, and not ſuffer our ſelues to be carried away, with this common ſtreame of worldly dotage; but as farre as we ſee the eternall joyes of Heauen, to exceed the momentanie pleaſures which are in Earth, ſo much let our loue, care, and paines exceed in deſiring and ſeeking to obtaine them. And that wee may not ſpend our paines in the trauelling of a wrong way, and ſo in the end complaine that we haue laboured in vaine, let vs make choice of that onely way Ieſus Chriſt, deſiring to bee true members ingrafted into his glorious body by a liuely faith, that ſo in him we may be the Sonnes of God, and the adopted heires of his glorious Kingdome. Let vs adioyne our ſelues to the Kingdome of grace, profeſſing our ſubjection vnto God, and communicating with the reſt of the Saints in the exerciſes of the true religion; as calling vpon God, hearing his Word, receiuing his Sacraments, and ſubmitting our ſelues to be ordred and ruled by the outward diſcipline and gouernment of the Church. Yea we muſt not onely outwardly profeſſe our ſelues the ſubjects and ſeruants of God, but wee muſt alſo liue like his ſubjects in obedience to his will and word. For in vaine doe wee draw neere vnto God with our lips, if our hearts be farre from him; in vaine wee heare the Word, vnleſſe wee obey it; in vaine doe wee receiue the Sacraments with our hand and mouth, vnleſſe we alſo receiue, and apply Chriſt vnto vs with a true faith, and ſhew the vigour and vertue of this holy vnion in our vnfained repentance, dying vnto ſinne, and riſing againe to newneſſe of life; in vaine doe wee ſubmit our ſelues to the outward gouernment of the Church, vnleſſe alſo Chriſt doe inwardly raigne and rule in vs by the ſcepter of his Word and Holy Spirit: finally, in vaine doe we profeſſe our ſelues Gods ſubjects and ſeruants, if wee liue like the ſeruants of ſin, and ſlaues of Satan. Whereas contrariwiſe, if wee ſo liue in holy obedience to Gods will, with faith and a good conſcience, as wee may bee aſſured thereby, that wee are true members of the Kingdome of grace, wee may alſo be aſcertained, that wee ſhall bee heires of the Kingdome of glory, this being the Porch or ſuburbs whereby we enter into our heauenly manſions, and the new Ieruſalem, the Citie of God. In a word, if euer wee thinke to raigne triumphantly in the Kingdome of Heauen, and to haue our portion and ſhare in that eternall glorie; wee muſt haue the Kingdome of God begun in vs in this life, and be repleniſhed with the gifts and graces of his holy Spirit: for as the Apoſtle teacheth vs, [a] the Kingdome of God is righteouſneſſe, and peace, and ioy in the Holy Ghoſt. If wee meane to haue Chriſt Ieſus liuing in vs vnto glory, we muſt liue in him vnto grace and holineſſe; ſo as wee may ſay with the Apoſtle, that [b] we liue no more now, but Chriſt liueth in vs, and in that wee now liue in the fleſh, we liue by the faith in the Son of God; for there is none ſhall eternally liue in Heauen, in whom life eternall is not begun on Earth, becauſe none ſhall bee ſaued but they who haue faith; and he that [c] beleeueth hath euerlaſting life, and hath paſſed from death to life already, as our Sauiour ſpeaketh. Finally, if we would haue any hope to liue that life of glory and happineſſe, wee muſt firſt liue the life of grace and holineſſe. If wee would bee [d] ſatisfied with Gods image, we muſt behold his face in righteouſneſſe; if we would be [e] partakers of Gods goodneſſe in the World to come, wee muſt in this life be indued with his feare; if wee would haue the fruition of God [f] al-ſufficient, we muſt walke before him and be vpright. If we would aſcend into the [g] mountaine of the Lord, and ſtand in the place of his holineſſe, we muſt haue innocent hands, and a pure heart; and find in our ſelues conformitie with that excellent deſcription, which the Lord himſelfe maketh vnto the Pſalmiſt, of an heauenly inhabitant; if we would not let the [h] ſecond death take hold of vs, but contrariwiſe attaine vnto heauenly bleſſedneſſe, wee muſt haue our part in the firſt reſurrection; and to conclude this point, if we would be like our Sauiour Chriſt when he appeareth, and would [i] ſee God as he is, whoſe viſion, as I haue ſhewed, is our chiefe felicitie, wee muſt, as the Apoſtle telleth vs, purge our ſelues, euen as hee is pure; for without holineſſe wee ſhall neuer ſee God: and if we remaine in our vncleanneſſe, and pollution of ſinne, wee ſhall neuer find entrance into the [k] City of God, nor bee admitted as inhabitants of the Kingdome of Heauen, which as much excelleth in puritie and perfection, as in glory, happineſſe, and vnſpeakeable ioyes.

Iohn 14.6.

And thus haue I, through the gracious aſſiſtance of Gods Holy Spirit, finiſhed this part alſo of the Chriſtian Warfare, wherein I haue indeauoured to arme euery man againſt the tentations of worldly proſperitie; by ſhewing and prouing that the world and worldly things are baſe and contemptible, and not worthy any loue and eſteeme, in compariſon of Gods ſpirituall graces and heauenly ioyes. For if theſe earthly things which carnall worldlings doe ſo much affect, bee vaine and worthleſſe, and Gods ſpirituall graces, and heauenly ioyes bee moſt excellent and precious; they vnprofitable euen in this life, and theſe moſt beneficiall both in this life, and the life to come; if they in themſelues are miſerable comforters, and bring many other miſeries attending on them, and theſe moſt ſweete and delightfull, without the mixture of any euill; if they be vncertaine to be gotten by thoſe who loue them, and fugitiue to thoſe who moſt runne after them, and theſe moſt aſſuredly obtained by thoſe who deſire them, and vſe the meanes whereby they may injoy them; if they be as vncertaine in their poſſeſſion, as in their purſuit, being euery day ready to leaue their owners, or their owners to leaue them, and theſe moſt conſtant, permanent & eternall: finally, if they through our corruption abuſing them, doe ſo much hurt vs, being the cauſes, occaſions, and inſtruments of ſo manifold euils; and theſe ſo much benefit vs, adorning vs with all glory, inriching vs with all good, repleniſhing vs, both in our ſoules and bodies with all ioyes, pleaſures and delights, and making vs in all reſpects truly happy, and eternally bleſſed: what doting folly and franticke madneſſe is it, either in our iudgements or affections, to preferre the worlds baſe, worthleſſe and momentany trifles, before a Rom. 14.17.

Matth. 15.8.

b Gal. 2.20.

c Ioh. 5.24.

d Pſal. 17.15.

e Pſal. 31.19.

f Gen. 17.1.

g Pſal. 15.1.2.3. & 24.3.4.

h Apo

i 1.Ioh.

k Apoc.

§. Se

The conc ſion of the booke, cing fr which h beene ſ contemp
the World

fore theſe ineſtimable iewels, and heauenly treaſures? Wee account him a Childe or a foole, who will preferre a counter before a Kingdome, a ſhadow before a ſubſtance, and euery baſe trifle, before his patrimonie and inheritance: and wee both wonder and laugh at the ſimplicitie of the barbarous nations, who will exchange their gold and pearles, for a knife or glaſſe; but how much more abſurd and ridiculous is their folly and madneſſe, who preferre Earth before Heauen, Mammon before God, and the vaine pleaſures of ſin, which laſt but for a ſeaſon, before the Kingdome of glory, and thoſe vnſpeakeable ioyes which ſhall neuer end? Let vs therefore beware of this worldly frenſie; and ſeeing we profeſſe the name of Chriſt, and boaſt our ſelues of our heauenly hopes, as though wee were aſſured of them, and expected eternall Crownes and Kingdomes, let vs bee aſhamed that our practice ſhould bewray our iudgements and affections, manifeſtly ſhewing by our neglect of things ſpirituall and eternall, and by our earneſt and inceſſant ſeeking of things momentany and temporall, that wee more eſteeme Earth than Heauen, and deſire more the ſhort poſſeſſion of theſe worldly vanities, than the euerlaſting fruition of God himſelfe, and thoſe glorious ioyes of his heauenly Kingdome. We know that thoſe who haue fed on dainties, doe loath the taſte of groſſer meates; and that when the Sunne ſhineth vpon the fire, it maketh the light thereof like vnto a painted colour, and much abateth of its heate, if it doe not quite extinguiſh it: and ſo let vs who haue taſted how good God is, and the moſt delicate ſweetneſſe of thoſe heauenly ioyes, learne to loath the ſwiniſh huſks of filthy pleaſures, and the windy pulſe of worldly honours; and ſeeing the diuine light of that heauenly glorie hath ſhined vnto vs, let it dimme the light of carnall reaſon, and abate, if not extinguiſh, the flame and fire of our earthly concupiſcence. For this is the end, as the Apoſtle teacheth vs, why the Lord in mercie hath cauſed his truth to ſhine vnto vs, and to inlighten our minds with thoſe glorious raies. The grace of God (ſaith he) that bringeth ſaluation vnto all men hath appeared, and teacheth vs, that we ſhould denie vngodlineſſe, and worldly luſts, and that wee ſhould liue ſoberly, and righteouſly, and godly in this preſent World. Tit.2.11.12. Let vs not too much eſteeme and affect this ſtate of mortality, ſeeing wee our ſelues are immortall, nor value theſe earthly things at high rates, as though they were parts and members of our bodies, but onely account of them as haire, nailes, and other excrements, making a fit proportion of them to ſerue for ornament and vſe, but cutting them off (at leaſt in our hearts & affections) when being more than needs, they grow ſuperfluous. Wee are pilgrimes on Earth, and therefore let our hearts be ſpecially ſet and fixed on our heauenly countrie; we are to runne a race for no leſſe a prize, than the crowne of glory, and therefore let vs ſo runne, that we may obtaine, 1.Cor.9.23.24. and as the Apoſtle exhorteth vs, let vs caſt away euery thing that preſſeth downe, and the ſinne that hangeth ſo faſt on, and runwith patience the race that is ſet before vs. Heb.12.1. Wee are now fighting in a ſpirituall warfare: and (as the Apoſtle ſaith) no man that warreth, intangleth himſelfe with the affaires of this life, becauſe he would pleaſe him who hath choſen him to be a Souldier. 2.Tim.2.4. Wee are now contending for victorie, and wraſtling not with fleſh and blood, but againſt principalities, powers, and worldly gouernours. Ephes.6.12. Let vs therefore ſo fight and ſtriue, that wee may haue a glorious conqueſt ouer the ſpirituall enemies of our ſaluation, and ſo obtaine the crowne of victorie, which God hath promiſed vs, euen that glorious felicitie, and eternall happineſſe of his heauenly Kingdome. The which he grant vnto vs which hath dearely bought it for vs, Ieſus Chriſt the righteous, to whom with the Father, and his Holy Spirit, one true, inuiſible, moſt glorious, moſt gracious, and only wiſe God, bee aſcribed of vs, and of his whole Church, all honour and glory, prayſe and thankſgiuing, power, maieſtie and dominion, both now and for euermore. Amen.

FINIS.

THE CHRISTIAN WARFARE,

The Third Part.

OR, CONSOLATIONS FOR THE AFFLICTED:

Wherein is ſhewed, how the Chriſtian may bee armed and ſtrengthened againſt the tentations of the WORLD on the left hand, ariſing from trouble and affliction; and inabled to beare all croſſes and miſeries with patience, comfort and thankſgiuing.

By I. DOWNAME Bachelar in Diuinitie, and Preacher of GODS Word.

IAMES 1.2.
My Brethren count it exceeding ioy, when yee fall into diuers tentations.

2. COR. 4. 17.
For the light affliction which is but for a moment, cauſeth vnto vs a farre more excellent and an eternall weight of glorie.

LONDON,
Printed by William Stansby, 1633.

TO THE MOST REVEREND FATHER IN GOD, GEORGE:

By GODS prouidence Archbiſhop of Canterburie, Primate of all England, and Metropolitan, and one of his MAIESTIES moſt Honourable Priuie Councell, I.D. wiſheth all riches of Gods graces in this life, and of glory in the life to come.

IT will not (I hope) be thought vnprofitable, (moſt Reuerend Father in God) that in this time of peace and flouriſhing proſperitie of our Church and Country, I write of Warfare with the World, and our combat with afflictions, ſeeing we haue no aſſurance that theſe temporall bleſsings and Halcyon dayes will be continued; but rather may probably expect and iuſtly feare, that according to that viciſſitude and mutuall interchange of worldly things, which both the Scriptures and the experience of all ages paſt haue made knowne vnto vs, there may happily come a wane after this full, a low ebbe after this high tide, and a darke night of ſorrow and mourning, after this bright Sunſhine day of gladneſſe and reioycing. And that the rather, becauſe by our ſinnes long agoe we haue deſerued to be diſpoyled of Gods long continued fauours, and with vnreſiſtable violence doe pull and hale his iuſt iudgements vpon our guiltie heads. For to ſay nothing of the deſperate wickedneſſe of prophane men, who being rotten members of this bodie of our Church and Countrie, doe deſerue to be cut off (which is not commonly effected without the griefe and ſmart of all thoſe ſounder parts which are neere about them) who doth not ſee that the beſt Seruants and deareſt Children of God, are by long eaſe growne ſo ſlothfull and ſecure, and ſo corrupted rupted with continuall peace and proſperitie, that they need to be quickened and rouzed vp with Gods ſcourges of correction, and to be purged from their droſſe and ruſt by the fierie triall? And therefore it will not be amiſſe, if in this Summer and Sunſhine of our proſperitie, we erect ſhelters to ſhade vs againſt the ſtormie tempeſts of approching troubles; and in the dayes of our peace, doe prepare our ſelues for this ſpirituall Warfare, building Fortreſſes and Bulwarkes for our defence before we be aſſaulted by the enemy, & putting on our ſpirituall armour, before our great Commander doe ſummon vs to the fight, and cauſe the alarme to be ſounded to the Battaile. For then ſhall wee moſt ſecurely enioy our peace, when as wee ſtand vpon our guard, and haue our weapons in readineſſe to reſiſt the enemy; and then ſhall our ioy of proſperitie bee moſt ſweet and delightfull, when it is not embittered with the feare of loſing it, nor with the expectation of thoſe afflictions, whoſe force and furie we are by due preparation enabled to ouercome. Yea, though the body of our State had a ſound conſtitution, and did not onely for the preſent enioy the health of flouriſhing proſperitie, but were alſo aſſured that it would continue for the time to come: yet are there many members of it, which being diſeaſed with the ſores of affliction, doe need to haue the playſters of comfort applyed vnto them. And though the whole army of our Church Militant doe not yet ioyne in a mayn battaile with theſe ſpirituall enemies, yet are there many of Gods Souldiers picked out by our Lord and Generall, to skirmiſh in their courſes with them, who need to bee inſtructed in this ſpirituall Warfare, and to be ſo trained in the skill of this fight, that when they are aſſaulted, they may manfully ſtand vnto it and obtaine the victory. In which reſpects, I tendring the future benefit of the whole body, and the preſent good of euery particular member, haue vndertaken this paines in preparing them for this fight. In which my endeuours, if God ſo bleſſe mee, that I attaine vnto my end, I ſhall haue no ſmall ioy, ſeeing I ſhall communicate with them in all their conſolation, and triumph together in their victorious conqueſt. Or if I faile hereof, yet ſhall I not loſe all my labour, ſeeing whileſt I prouided theſe cordials of comfort for the curing of others, I my ſelfe haue beene cheered by them in my wants and weakneſſe; and whileſt I cooked others meate, haue ſomewhat ſtayed my fainting ſtomacke by licking mine owne fingers and taſting of theſe meates, as they paſſed thorow my hands.

Now theſe my labours I humbly offer to your Graces patronage, as an vnfained teſtimony of that loue and duty which your worth and merit doe iuſtly challenge. For if the Elder that doth gouerne well, be worthy of double honour, eſpecially if he labour painfully in the Word and Doctrine; how much are we bound to ſhew by all meanes, with what zeale wee honour you, who by your gouernment (as chiefe Lieutenant vnder our dread Soueraigne) preſerue among vs the purity of our Chriſtian Religion, from being tainted and corrupted by Errours and Hereſies (herein extending your care not only vnto vs, but alſo to our Neighbour Churches round about vs) and continue with increaſe the peace of our Church, defending vs all you may from the inroades and inuaſions of our Romiſh enemies: and alſo (as though you were quite freed from the waight of this burthen) doe continually imploy your ſelfe in ſound doctrine and painfull preaching not only vrging thoſe, who are vnder your gouernment to take like fruitfull paines by your graue authoritie, fatherly admonitions, and earneſt exhortations; tations; but alſo ſhaming thoſe who neglect it, by your example; ſeeing they come farre ſhort of you, in that which they haue only to intend, who are otherwiſe taken vp in ſuch a multitude of buſineſſe. The which I write not to get vnto my ſelfe the baſe reward of a ſeruile flatterer (for who yet could euer challenge mee of ſuch ſelfe-reſpecting flattery?) but that God may be glorified in thoſe excellent gifts wherewith he hath inriched you; and that they being continued vpon this record for after ages, you may not only be acknowledged a worthy Preſident and Gouernour vnto vs, but be imitated as a precedent and paterne vnto thoſe who ſhall come after you; and ſo leaue behind you ſuch a ſweet ſent of a good Name, as it were, of a precious ointment, that thoſe who yet breathe not, may be refreſhed by it.

The Lord long continue, increaſe and multiply theſe his good gifts and graces in you, that he more and more may haue the glory of them, his Church and Children the vſe and benefit, and your ſelfe both the preſent comfort of a good conſcience, and the greater meaſure of glory and happineſſe at the day of Chriſts appearing.

Your Graces in all obſeruant duty, to be commanded,

IOHN DOWNAME.

- A In the third part of the Chriſtian Warfare againſt the World, wee are to conſider,
  - 1. Of the enemies againſt whō wee muſt fight, which are the Worlds forces on the left hand: viz. afflictions in which wee are to conſider, Chap. 1, 2, 3:
    - 1. Their nature & qualitie, which is deciphered by Lib. 1. chap. 1, 2.
      - Diuers deſcriptions of afflictions, Lib. 1. chap. 1. Sect. 3, 4.
      - Shewing their
        - Cauſes:
          - Efficient.
          - Finall.
        - Effects, Lib. 1. Chap. 1.
        - Subject.
        - Adjuncts and properties.
    - 2. The manner of their fight by a dangerous tentation, Lib. 1. chap 3.
      - Ariſing from them, Lib. 1. chap. 3.
      - Strongly vrged by
        - 1. Sathan, Lib. 1. chap. 3. Sect. 2.
        - 2. The World. Sect. 3.
        - 3. Our owne fleſh. Sect. 4.
  - 2. The meanes to ouercome them, which reſpect either
    - Preparation to the fight; vnto which is required
      - Prouiſion of ſpirituall Armour, conſiſting of many parts: as, Lib. 1. cap. 4.
        - 1. Sauing knowledge, Lib. 4 chap. 4. Sect. 4.
        - 2. Iuſtifying faith, Sect. 5.
        - 3. Truth or affiance in God, Sect. 6.
        - 4. Hope in God, Sect. 7.
        - 5. Loue of God, Sect. 8.
        - 6. True humilitie, Sect. 9.
        - 7. Vnfained repentance, Sect. 10, 11, 12.
        - 8. A good conſcience, Sect. 13.
      - Trayning in this Warfare, vnto which is required the learning and obſeruing of eight Rules, whereby wee may be inabled to demeane our ſelues well in this conflict, Lib. 1. cap. 5.
    - Fight it ſelfe. See B.

- B The fight it ſelf, vnto which is required holy and Chriſtian behauiour both in the
  - Conflict, in which is required that wee beare our afflictions with patience, where wee are to conſider;
    - Firſt, of patience it ſelf, Lib. 1, ch. 2. where is ſhewed:
      - 1. What it is, chap. 2. Sect. 1, 2.
      - 2. The obiect of it.
      - 3. The nature and properties of it, Sect. 4, to 13.
    - The meanes to attaine to it, which are of two ſorts,
      - 1. Reaſons commending this vertue to our loue, and inciting vs to ſeeke after it, as the
        - 1. Excellency, Chap. 2. Sect. 1.
        - 2. Vtilitie, Sect. 2.
        - 3. Neceſſitie, Sect. 3.
      - 2. Actions to bee performed of vs, which reſpect either
        - Prayer, where conſider
          - Of the reaſons which may moue vs to p forme this dutie in our afflictions, chap. 3. Sect. 2. to 8.
          - Of the things required in this Prayer, both in reſpect of the
            - Perſon that prayeth,
            - Prayer it ſelfe, whereof the
              - matter,
              - manner.
              - time and continuance,
        - Meditation, vide C.
  - Victory, namely thankſgiuing and praiſing God, Lib. 2. chap. vlt.

C Meditations on ſuch rea-ns as may inreaſe our pati-ce & comfort, ch reaſons are either

- Enduring of the Croſſe: and theſe are either ſpirituall, ſpringing out of holy Scriptures, which are either
  - Simple, ariſing either from the
    - Cauſes and effects of our afflictions,
      - Efficient, Vide D.
      - Finall, Vide E.
    - Subiect and adiuncts of our afflictions:
      - Subiect: taken from the conſideration of the place, Chap. 28.
      - Adiuncts: as the
        - Neceſſitie, Profit, Breuitie, Lightneſſe, of them, Chap. 28. Sect. 5.
        - And our aſſiſtants,
          - The Angels, Sect. 6.
          - Our Sauiour Chriſt, Sect. 7.
  - Comparatiue, raiſed by comparing our leſſer afflictions with the greater of
    1. Gods deareſt children, as either
       - All the faithfull, Chap. 29.
       - Our Sauiour Chriſt, Chap. 30.
    2. Of Worldlings, for attaining their worldly ends, Chap. 31. Sect. 1, 2, 3.
    3. With the puniſhments of the damned, Sect. 4.
    4. With the eternall ioyes which follow our ſhort afflictions, Chap. 31. Sect. 5.
  - Ciuill, and worldly, grounded vpon meere morall conſiderations: which are eſpecially two;
    - Imparting our griefe to a friend, Chap. 32. Sect. 2, 3.
    - Lawfull
      - Labour, Recreation, Sect. 4.
- End, aſſuring vs of a ſeaſonable deliuerance: which are taken from Gods
  - Al-ſeeing knowledge, Preſence with vs to helpe vs, Omnipotent power, Infinite loue, Chap. 33.
  - Gracious promiſes, where of the meanes to ſtrengthen our faith when God deferreth to accompliſh his promiſes, Chap. 34.

D inſufficient, either the ſes

- Inflicting, namely God, in a threefold reſpect:
  1. Predeſtination, ordayning vs vnto them, chap. 6. Sect. 1.
  2. Execution, whereby according to his purpoſe he doth effect it, chap. 6. Sect. 2, 3, 4.
  3. Prouidence, whereby he rules and diſpoſeth them for his glory, and our good, Ch. 7.
- Mouing the Lord to afflict vs, which are either in
  - Vs, the deſeruing cauſe, ſinne, chap. 8.
  - God, namely, his loue, correcting vs as a Father; & not his wrath, puniſhing as a Iudge, chap. 9. which loue appeareth in our afflictions, both in the
    - Meaſure, Chapter 10. both in reſpect of
      - The afflictions themſelues, and that in reſpect of their
        - Quantitie, which is ſmall, Sect. 4.
        - Time, which is ſhort, Sect. 5.
      - Vs, who beare them, ſeeing they doe not exceed
        - Our ſtrength, chap. 11.
        - Neceſſitie, chap. 12.
    - Ends made knowne in their effects,

- E Finall cauſes of afflictions are either
  - Gods glory, Chap. 14.
  - Our good, and that whether we reſpect our
    - Neighbours,
    - Our ſelues, where is proued that afflictions are
      - not hurtfull, Chap. 15.
      - profitable, *
- * profitable, both in reſpect of
  - this life, & that whether wee conſider them as
    - Trialls,
    - chaſtiſements in which reſpect God aduanceth our good, and that both
      - ſpirituall, vide F.
      - earthly and worldly benefits, which are increaſed by afflictions, as
        - 1. Wiſdome and policie, Chap. 1 §. 1.
        - 2. Abilitie to diſcerne frien from flatterers, §. 2.
        - 3. A good name, § 3.
        - 4. Better taſte of Gods benefit §. 4.
  - life to come, for by them hee
    - preſerueth vs from condemnation, Chap. 26. §. 1.
    - furthereth our ſaluation, and increaſeth our happineſſe, §. 2. to
- F Spirituall, ſeeing by them the Lord furthereth our
  - Effectuall calling and conuerſion, Chap. 18.
  - Sanctification whileſt God vſeth them as meanes to
    - free vs from ſinne, both by
      - preuenting, Chap. 19. §. 1, 2.
      - Mortifying, Chap. 19. §. 3.
    - * To furniſh vs with ſpirituall graces,
- * To furniſh vs with ſpirituall graces, the which is proued:
  - First in generall, Chap. 20. §. 1, 2.
  - 2. More particularly, the ſpeciall graces wherewith they furniſh vs, reſpect either
    - God, either in the
      - Vnderſtanding which are either the
        - Knowledge C. 20. §. 3, 4.
        - Remembrance, Ch. 20. §. 5.
        - of God.
      - Heart and affections:
        - Affiance,
        - Hope,
        - Loue,
        - Feare,
        - Humilitie.
        - Cha
      - In both together, namely,
        - Faith, Chap. 21.
        - Fruits of them all,
          - Repentance,
          - New obedience, Chap.
    - Our Neighbours, for by afflictions wee are mooued to imbrace
      - Iuſtice, Chap. 24. §. 1.
      - Compaſſion, §. 2.
      - Humilitie and Meekneſſe, §. 3.
    - Our ſelues, for by afflictions wee haue increaſe of
      - The knowledge of our ſelues, §. 4.
      - Strength to beare them, §. 5.
      - Courage and fortitude, §. 6.
      - Temperance, Sobrietie, Modeſ Chaſtitie, §. 7.

TH

THE CHRISTIAN WARFARE,

The third Part.

OF AFFLICTIONS, WHICH ARE THE SECOND SORT OF WORLDLY Enemies, their Nature, Properties and the manner of their fight, and how wee may be ſo prepared and armed for this ſpirituall Warfare, as that we may be aſſured to obtaine the victory.

The firſt Booke.

Chap. I.

Of afflictions, which are the ſecond ſort of our worldly Enemies, of their power and danger: what they are, and of the diuers kinds of them.

d.1.
rface illowwarfe.

WEll may the Chriſtians life bee called a Warfare on Earth, and the whole number of the elect and faithfull a Church militant, or royall armie of the Lord of hoſts, ſeeing whileſt wee continue here, we are beſet on all ſides with enemies, mightie, and malitious; which neuer ceaſe to aſſault and vexe vs, either with the lighter skirmiſh of weaker trialls, or the maine battell of ſtronger tentations, vntill by death obtaining a full victorie, the retrait is ſounded by our great Commander, and thoſe receiued into the Church triumphant, who haue fought valiantly in the Church Militant, that they who haue contemned worldly ſhame may bee crowned with heauenly glory, and they triumph in ioy and happineſſe, who to obtaine the victory haue fought vnto blood. For no ſooner are Sathan and his Angels beaten backe, and that huge army of his helliſh tentations diſcomfited and ouercome with the Word of God, and the aſſiſtance of his Holy Spirit; but gathering againe their ſcattered forces, and adioyning vnto them their ſtrong aids the World and the Fleſh, with theſe freſh ſupplies they ſet forward againe with ſuch hope and courage, as though they had neuer receiued any ouerthrow, and (as it were) filled with ſhame and malice becauſe of their former foyle, they redouble their force and affreſh aſſault vs with greater furie. The conſideration whereof as it ſhould moue all Chriſtians to ſhake off ſecuritie, and to ſtand vpon their guard with all care and watchfulneſſe, armed at all points with their ſpirituall armour, that ſo they may be ready for the encounter; ſo ſhould it moue all Gods faithfull Miniſters, who are made Captaines and Leaders vnder our great Commander; to traine vp Gods people and Souldiers vnder their charge in that skil which is required in this ſpiritual Warfare, & teach them ſo to vſe their weapons, that they may be the better inabled to defend themſelues and offend the enemy. In conſcience of which duty I (the weakeſt and vnworthieſt of many) haue vndertaken this hard taske, and hauing laid open the malice, might, and politicke ſtratagems of our Arch-enemie the Diuell, and inſtructed the weake Chriſtian (according to my mediocrity of skill) in the art of this Chriſtian Warfare, and taught him how to prepare himſelfe for the day of conflict, and ſo to buckle vnto him the Chriſtian armour, and manage his ſpirituall weapons, that he may bee aſſured to foyle his enemy and obtaine the victory; no ſooner had I ended this labour, but I preſently diſcouered new forces led vnder the conduct of the World, one of Sathans chiefeſt commanders and ſtrongeſt ayds, armed with no leſſe power and malice to worke the Chriſtians ouerthrow, that ſo they may againe be made the captiues of ſin, & regained to the ſeruice of their olde maſter, the Prince of darknes, and god of this world. And being hartened and encouraged by that late victory obtained againſt that chiefe enemy of our ſaluation, and reſting aſſured, by that experience which I haue had of the inuincible ſtrength of my great Lord and commander aſſiſting mee in this fight, or the goodneſſe of the ſpirituall armour, and of the excellency of that both defending and wounding ſword of Gods Word, that if now againe I gaue the aſſault, I ſhould alſo obtaine the victory; I willingly re-entred the field with a purpoſe to encounter theſe new ſupplies: and firſt taking a view of the enemie, that I might diſcouer their ſtrength, number, and militarie diſcipline, I perceiued that they ſo farre excelled in might, multitude, and warlike policy, that they were an army plainely inuincible in reſpect of humane ſtrength. In the front and maine battell were marſhalled the Worlds glorious and glittering troups of proſperity, armed with thoſe often approued weapons of honours, pleaſures and riches, wherewith few are encountred who are not alſo ouercome. And obſeruing the manner of their fight, I found it to be no leſſe admirable than dangerous, for they ouercame by yeelding, wounded by perſwading, killed by imbracing, and whileſt caſting away their Armes and all ſignes of hoſtility, they offered themſelues as captiues and ſlaues, they became conquerours of thoſe who tooke them, iaylors of thoſe that kept them, and commanders of thoſe who ſeemed to hold them in captiuity. In the flanke and rere-ward were ranged thoſe terrible troups of aduerſity and affliction, there placed by the Diuell and the World, to vanquiſh thoſe by force, violence, and furious encounter, who could not be ouercome by the perſwading allurements of deceiptfull proſperity, and theſe enemies ſeemed to bee of hideous ſtrength, and in reſpect of their ſterne and grimme viſage, proud threats, and dangerous weapons, fearefull to looke vpon.

§.Sect.3
That tem ons ariſing from affli ons are leſ dangerou than thoſe proſperitie though in their firſt ſpect they more

Againſt the former (as order required) I made my firſt aſſault, teaching the Chriſtian Souldier, who will ioyne with mee in this fight, to ouercome them by contemning them, and to ſtand with impregnable ſtrength againſt their trecherous furie, and ſmooth ſmiling malice, by turning his eyes from their alluring baits, by refuſing their falſe fauours, by ſtopping his eares againſt their charming perſwaſions, and by ſuſpecting moſt their malitious attempts, when as with greateſt ſhew of loue they ſmile and fawne vpon him. And thus hauing enabled him, by the aſſiſtance of Gods Spirit, and his owne carefull endeuour to beate backe the force of theſe enemies alſo, and to put them to flight: it now remaineth that being armed with Gods might, and defended with the Chriſtian armour, eſpecially with the ſhield of faith, and ſword of the Spirit, wee doe encounter thoſe other ſort of enemies, not doubting (being thus aſſiſted) but we ſhall alſo giue them the foyle, and ſo obtaine full victory againſt theſe worldly forces. For howſoeuer this enemy aduerſity, and theſe innumerable troups of afflictions, are in ſhew much more terrible than proſperity, and thoſe glorious forces led vnder his conduct; yet are they much weaker in truth, and leſſe dangerous when wee come to buckle with them. For theſe indeed are grimme in their outward viſage and appearance, but not ſo fearefull, when hauing experience of their ſtrength, they are become more familiar with vs; like thoſe Barbarians which, when they were to fight with their enemies, painted themſelues that they might appeare more terrible, whereas in truth they were weake and naked, vnable to endure the firſt onſet: For ſo theſe afflictions haue in them but a painted ſhadow of fierceneſſe, and doe put on but an vgly viſard to make them full of terrour at their firſt appearing, whereas if the viſard bee done away, and wee ceaſing to looke vpon them through the falſe glaſſe of feare and aſtoniſhment, doe behold them with a true iudgement, wee ſhall find them ſo tolerable and eaſie to be endured, through the aſſiſtance of Gods Spirit, that there will bee no cauſe of terrour and amazement. But on the other ſide thoſe enemies, proſperity, and worldly allurements, hiding hoſtility vnder pretence of friendſhip, and being much ſtronger, and more forcible than they ſeeme in outward appearances, doe bring vs into a pernicious ſecurity, and without ſhew of aſſault get the victory. Afflictions like billes and pikes make a terrible ſhew when they cannot reach vs: but the tentations of proſperity like vnſeene bullets wound and kill vs before they are diſcerned. They like the fiery Serpents ſting vs, but, with ſenſe of paine, make vs ſeeke for remedy, looking vp to the true braſen Serpent, that we may bee cured; theſe like the viper putting vs to no paine, bring vs into a ſweet ſlumber of ſecurity, which endeth in that dead ſleepe of death and condemnation. They wound with paine and enforce vs with torment to ſeeke recouery, theſe with delight, making vs to loue ſtill the weapons that hurt vs, and to abhorre the meanes whereby we may bee healed, becauſe euen our wounds and ſores are pleaſing vnto vs. The one like the winde boyſterouſly blowing vpon vs, make vs more carefull to hold faſt the garment of Gods graces that it be not taken from vs; the other like the Sunne warming vs with delight, cauſe vs of our owne accord to caſt it from vs. Finally they vanquiſhing vs by force make vs captiues vnto ſinne, who are willing vpon the next opportunity to come out of thraldome and re-gaine our liberty, becauſe wee find but hard entertainment; theſe making conqueſt not onely of our ſtrength and power, but alſo of our hearts, wills and affections, retaine vs in a voluntary ſeruitude, for the wages of worldly vanities; ſo as we haue no deſire to come out of this pleaſing bondage, nor to recouer our liberty though the meanes were offered vs. In all which and many other reſpects Salomon truly ſaith, that, It is better to goe into the houſe of mourning, than into the houſe of feaſting, and preferreth anger before laughter, affirming that the heart of the wiſe is in the houſe of mourning, but the heart of fooles is in the houſe of mirth. Eccl. 7.4.6.7.

7.4.

34.6.7.

Sect.3.
ns deptions of ctions bediuerſly dered.

But howſoeuer aduerſitie and afflictions be enemies vnto our ſaluation, leſſe dangerous than thoſe of proſperity and worldly abundance; yet are they ſtrong enough to worke our ouerthrow, vnleſſe we be aſſiſted with the power of Gods might, armed with the Chriſtian armour, and with care and watchfulneſſe doe learne and practiſe all good meanes which may inable vs to make reſiſtance and obtaine the victory. And therefore let vs in the next place fit our ſelues againſt the day of conflict, and as we haue learned to contemne the World when it fawneth, ſo alſo let vs learne not to feare it when it frowneth and rageth; that ſo when our great commander ſoundeth the alarme vnto battell, wee may with comfort and courage enter the field, and becomming conquerours, may receiue the Crowne of victory, glory matchleſſe, and happineſſe endleſſe. And to this purpoſe let vs conſider of the nature, quality and ſtrength of theſe our enemies; and then of the meanes whereby wee may bee inabled to endure their encounters, abate their ſtrength and fury, and ſo obtaine the victory. Concerning the former wee are to know that afflictions diuerſly conſidered may bee diuerſly deſcribed; for if we looke vpon them as they are in their owne nature, and by God inflicted vpon the wicked; they are thoſe euils of puniſhment, wherewith he beginneth iuſtly to puniſh their ſinnes euen in this life, and (as it were) the flaſhes of Hell fire, and firſt entrance into vtter deſtruction; as it may hereby appeare in that they are all comprized vnder the curſe of the Law, and denounced and threatned againſt the tranſgreſſours of it. Againe if we conſider them as inflicted by God vpon the faithfull, they are thoſe fatherly chaſtiſements, wherewith out of his loue and wiſedome hee either correcteth them for their ſinnes, that being brought to repentance they may not be condemned with the World; or trieth them that his ſpirituall graces beſtowed on them may more cleerely ſhine to his owne glory that gaue them, and the furthering and aſſuring of their ſaluation who haue receiued them. So that howſoeuer the afflictions of the wicked, and of the faithfull are all one in reſpect of their matter, yet they differ in reſpect of the author, the one being the puniſhments of an angry and iuſt iudge, the other the chaſtiſements and trials of a gracious and louing Father; and in reſpect of their vſe and end, the one tending to deſtroy, the other to ſaue; the one to puniſh, the other to correct; the one to begin the torments of Hell, the other to fit and prepare for the ioyes of Heauen. Furthermore if we conſider afflictions in reſpect of vs vpon whom they are inflicted, wee may define them to be, all that our nature abhorreth, and that croſſeth our deſires; or all thoſe croſſes which either in their owne nature, or through our opinion doe moleſt and greeue vs. Neither are thoſe alone afflictions vnto vs which are ſo in truth, and in their owne nature, but thoſe alſo which wee conceit ſo to be in the eſtimation of our opinion: yea it may be truely ſaid that as theſe in number doe

1.Cor.11.32.

Ad tantas ineptias peruentum eſt vt non dolore tantum ſed doloris opinione vexemur. Sen. l.b. in ſap. non. Cad. iniur. cap 4.

doe much exceed the other, ſo are they much more intolerable to thoſe that beare them. For whereas there is one affliction truely ſo in its owne nature laide vpon men, there are many which they fancie to themſelues out of meere conceipt, the which wanting ſtrength to hurt them becauſe they haue no true exiſtence, they make powerfull enough to deiect their minds by the ſtrength of their apprehenſion. Thus one tormenteth himſelfe with greefe, becauſe he hath loſt thoſe riches, which if hee had ſtill poſſeſſed he would neuer haue vſed; another vexeth himſelfe about the ſmoake of honour, eating out his heart with ſorrow becauſe hee is put from that authoritie which whil'ſt hee had it, oppreſſed him with the burthen; and pining with griefe becauſe his ſuperiour either frowned vpon or graced him not; becauſe he is bearded by his equals, and not according to expectation reſpected and reuerenced by his inferiours; and becauſe he hath not the wall and precedence, or higher place of thoſe, before whom his proud conceipt preferreth him. Thus a bare feare of expected euils which neuer happen, doth as much vexe men, as thoſe which they truely ſuffer, and a bare ſuſpition of faultineſſe in their friends as much tormenteth them, as if they were truely guilty. And, as this opinion giues life and being to many afflictions, ſo alſo their quantity and meaſure; by reaſon whereof that which is a light affliction to one, is intolerable to another: and that which maketh one to grone vnder it as being an vnſupportable waight, is by another caried with eaſe. One is moſt tender when his honour is touched; another little reſpecteth this, but groweth very paſſionate if he be wronged in his riches; this man is patient in bearing blowes, yet cannot indure contumelious wordes; but another is ſenſible onely of ſmart, and careth not for the winde of words, ſo he may ſleepe in a whole ſkinne. Yea by reaſon of this opinion, croſſes are made comforts, and great bleſſings in themſelues are turned into great afflictions, in conceipt: and heereof it is, that that which is one mans delight, is anothers torment, and that which one affecteth as his paradiſe, another loatheth as his hell. One thinketh reſtraint of his liberty to be an intolerable bondage, though he fare daintily, lie ſoft, and abound in all plenty: another would willingly preſſe into ſuch a priſon, and could be content to become an inmured Anachoret to haue ſuch eaſe with ſuch abundance. One taketh his chiefe contentment in eaſe and idleneſſe, and to another it is the greateſt paines to ſit ſtill and doe nothing, ſeeing all his delight is in buſineſſe and imployment: and accordingly as hee is afflicted and tormented with the leaſt labour, ſo this man is no leſſe moleſted and grieued, if for want of imployment he be forced to waſt his time in languiſhing idleneſſe. Finally if we conſider afflictions in reſpect of the World inflicting them, vpon the faithfull, they are thoſe tentations on the left hand, grounded on all thoſe miſeries which are incident to the life of man, whether in reſpect of his mind, body, name, ſtate or friends, whereby the World as the inſtrument of Sathan endeauoureth to diſcourage and hinder them in the way of godlineſſe and righteouſneſſe which leadeth to Gods kingdome, and to diuert and thruſt them into the way of ſinne which leadeth to deſtruction. By all which it appeareth what wee vnderſtand by afflictions, namely all euills of puniſhment ſent of God, either as from a father to correct vs, or as a judge to puniſh vs; all things which croſſe our deſires, and doe moleſt and grieue vs, either in their owne nature, or through our opinion and conceipt; and finally all the miſeries of this life which the Diuell and the World do caſt in our way, as we are running in the race of godlinſſe for the garland of eternall happineſſe, that like briars they may hold vs from going forward, or like thornes vnder our feete may vexe and torment vs, that ſo being weary in this vnpleaſant paſſage, wee may turne aſide into that broad and delightfull way of ſinne which leadeth to deſtruction.

Opinio eſt ergo quæ nos cruciat & tanti quodque malum eſt quanti illud taxauimus. In noſtra poteſtate remedium habemus. Senec. conſol. ad Marc. cap. 19.

§. Sect. 4.
That affli ons are e bare puniſh ments,or el alſo ioyned with ſinne,

And thus our afflictions are but bare puniſhments onely, or elſe ioyned with ſinne: Bare puniſhments I call thoſe plagues, croſſes, loſſes, troubles and trialls which by God are inflicted vpon men; and that either vpon the wicked for the ſatisfying of his iuſtice which is offended, in regard of whom they are properly called puniſhments as tending to their hurt and deſtruction; or vpon the faithfull for their chaſtiſment or triall, in reſpect of whom they are improperly, and in a large ſignification called puniſhments, becauſe they are not inflicted to ſatisfie Gods iuſtice which is fully ſatisfied by Chriſt, but out of fatherly loue for their amendment, that they may not bee condemned with the World. Puniſhment ioyned with ſinne is, when as God puniſheth one ſinne with another, not by infuſing into men any corruption or malitiouſneſſe, for ſeeing he is moſt holy and pure, and his will the rule of all iuſtice, hee cannot be ſaid to be the authour of ſin, nor to haue any hand in that euill which his nature abhorreth, and his iuſtice puniſheth; but when for their former ſinnes he leaueth them to their owne corruptions, luſts, vile affections, and to a reprobate minde, as the Apoſtle ſpeaketh, Rom. 1.24.26.28. and being ſo left to themſelues they runne headlong into wickedneſſe: for that men may become as bad as Cain, Saul, Ahab, or Iudas, it needeth not that

1.Cor.11.32.

Rom. 1.24.
28.

that externall wickedneſſe ſhould be infuſed into them, ſeeing it is enough if they be left of God to their owne naturall corruption which inclineth them to all manner of ſin; euen as for the deſcending of a ſtone, it is not needfull to caſt it to the Earth, but onely to leaue holding of it, and then it will fall downe in its owne nature. And as the boat goes vp the ſtreame by an externall ſtrength thruſting it on, but needeth not any to carrie it downe, ſeeing its driueth that way of its owne accord; ſo we goe againſt the ſtreame of our naturall corruptions towards the hauen of reſt, by the aſſiſtance of the diuine power which helpeth vs forward; but wee need not to be thruſt downward, ſeeing it is ſufficient if the Lord withhold his hand and leaue vs to our owne naturall inclination. Againe the Lord puniſheth in men one ſinne with another; when like a righteous judge hee doth puniſh their former ſins by deliuering them into the power of his executioner Sathan, to bee tempted and ouercome by him; ſuffering them to bee ruled by him, becauſe they haue pulled their neckes from the yoke of his ſubjection, and to row in his gallies, becauſe they would not freely ſerue their great King and Maſter. Neither is the Lord hereby made the author of ſinne, ſeeing he onely performeth a juſt act of a righteous judge, in deliuering vp wicked men for their demerits to Sathan, as his executioner to bee blinded, miſled, and puniſhed by him; nor yet are they any whit excuſed, in that being deliuered vp of God they run headlong into all ſinne; becauſe they haue deſeruedly brought vpon themſelues this fearefull judgement, by their former ſinnes; and now are ready to commit all wickedneſſe, not by any outward violence, forcing them thereunto, but by Sathans perſwaſion alluring them, and their owne ſinfull luſts inclining them to perpetrate theſe ſinnes with all chearefulnes and delight, hauing therein no reſpect vnto God or his judgements; but onely to pleaſe and ſatisfie their owne corrupt will and carnall luſts. So that God puniſheth one ſinne with another, not by infuſing wickedneſſe, or by tempting, that is, alluring and prouoking men vnto ſin; for thus God tempteth no man, as the Apoſtle affirmeth: but by withdrawing his grace, and by leauing men to be miſled by their owne corruptions. Hee leadeth men into tentation, and deliuereth them into euill; not by perſwading or compelling them to commit wickedneſſe, for his nature abhorreth it, and his will is the rule of all juſtice, but by giuing them ouer, and deliuering them vp, as a righteous judge, vnto the Diuell his executioner, to be for their former ſinnes further blinded, hardned and made more wicked, that their condemnation might bee more juſt and fearefull in the life to come. And of this wee haue manifold examples in the Scriptures, for thus the Lord hardned Pharaohs heart, when he denied to giue him the oyle of his grace, whereby it might be ſoftned, and left him to his owne obſtinacie, and Sathans tentations. Thus he puniſhed the ſpiritual whoredome of the Iſraelites, by giuing them vp to commit corporall vncleanneſſe. Hoſ. 4. Thus hee puniſhed the couetouſneſſe and worldlineſſe of Iudas, by permitting Sathan to enter into him, and ſo to carry him to the committing of that horrible treaſon againſt his Maſter. Thus hee puniſhed the Gentiles idolatry, by giuing them vp to their owne hearts luſts, vnto vncleanneſſe, to defile their owne bodies betweene themſelues; and vnto vile affections, and to a reprobate mind, to doe thoſe things which are not conuenient. And thus the Apoſtle ſaith, that becauſe men receiued not the loue of the truth, that they might bee ſaued, therefore God would ſend them ſtrong deluſions, that they ſhould beleeue lyes, that all might bee damned which beleeued not the truth, but had pleaſure in vnrighteouſneſſe. The which judgement wee ſee powerfully inflicted vpon many Apoſtates in theſe dayes, who are giuen ouer of God to bee deluded and ſeduced by Prieſts and Ieſuites, becauſe they haue not loued God his truth, but haue ſhut their eyes againſt the light of the Goſpell. Euen as the like was threatned againſt the Iewes. Eſa. 6 9. Goe and ſay to this people, yee ſhall heare indeed but yee ſhall not vnderſtand, ye ſhall plainely ſee and not perceiue: make the heart of this people fat, make their eares heauy, and ſhut their eyes, leſt they ſhould ſee with their eyes, and heare with their eares, and vnderſtand with their hearts, and conuert, and he heale them, the which accordingly was inflicted on them as the Apoſtle obſerueth. Act. 28. 25.26. And this is the fearefulleſt puniſhment of all others; for other afflictions are vſuall meanes to draw vs neerer vnto God but theſe make vs flee further from him; they ſharpen our ſight, theſe make vs the more blind; they like good ſalues draw out the core of our corruptions, but theſe make vs to rot and putrifie in our ſinnes. From which neuertheleſſe Gods ſeruants are not exempted, as appeareth in the example of Lot, whoſe drunkenneſſe God puniſhed by giuing him ouer to commit the ſinne of inceſt; in Dauid, whoſe adultery God puniſhed by leauing him to himſelfe, and withdrawing his grace, whereby it came to paſſe that hee alſo fell into the ſinne of murther; and whoſe pride and confidence in the arme of fleſh he puniſhed by mouing him, that is, by ſuffering Sathan his executioner to prouoke him to number the people; as may appeare by comparing the ſtory in the 1.13.

Exod 7.3.11. & 9.12.

Hoſ. 4.13.14.

Iohn 13.26.27.

Rom. 1.24.26. 28.

2. Theſ. 2.11.12.

Eſa. 6.9.

Act 28.25.

ſecond

2.Sam.24.1. with 1.Chron.21.1.

ſecond booke of Samuel, with the ſame recorded in the firſt of Chronicles: for whereas in the one place he ſaith, that God moued Dauid againſt Iſraell to cauſe them to bee numbred, in the other it is ſaid that Sathan prouoked him to doe it, whereby is meant, that God as a righteous judge, intending to puniſh Dauids ſinne, and thereupon to take occaſion to puniſh the ſinnes of the people, did giue or deliuer him into the power of Sathan, as vnto the executioner of his puniſhments, to bee tempted by him vnto the committing of this ſinne. And thus God puniſhed the pride, preſumption, and ſelfe-confidence of Peter by ſuffering Satan to ſift him like wheat, and to preuaile thus farre againſt him, as to moue him firſt to deny, and then to forſweare his Maſter.

CHAP. II.

Of the cauſes, effects, ſubject and adjuncts of afflictions.

§ Sect. 1. Of the efficient and impulſiue cauſe of afflictions.

ANd thus wee ſee what afflictions are, both as they are puniſhments, properly ſo called, and as they are chaſtiſements and corrections; now briefly wee will conſider of their cauſes, effects, ſubjects and adjuncts or qualities, that ſo their nature being better vnderſtood, there may bee a fitter paſſage to the diſcourſe following. And firſt wee are to know that the Lord himſelfe is the chiefe efficient and principall cauſe of all afflictions, which are not ſinnes; for ſo himſelfe ſpeaketh by his Prophet; Shall there be euill in a City (that is the euill of puniſhment and chaſtiſement) and the Lord hath not done it? not that it is Gods proper and ordinary worke to afflict his creatures; for being the chiefe goodneſſe, hee chiefely intendeth doing good, he delighteth in the conuerſion of ſinners, and in ſhewing mercy; and thus doing hee doth his owne proper and vſuall worke, familiar to his owne nature; whereas the other is his worke improperly, and as the Prophet calleth it, his ſtrange worke, and his ſtrange act, which with a kind of neceſſity wee force vpon his juſtice, by our ſin and wickedneſſe. So that the meritorious cauſe of afflictions is ſinne, whereby men offend againſt Gods juſtice in tranſgreſſing his Law, as ſhall more fully appeare hereafter and that whether wee reſpect the wicked or the faithfull; although there bee great difference in the end why God afflicteth them; for (as I haue ſaid) theſe puniſhments are laide vpon the wicked for ſin, that Gods iuſtice may bee ſatisfied by taking due vengeance on them: but howſoeuer they are alſo inflicted vpon the faithfull for ſin, yet not to the former end, but that they may be brought vnto the ſight and ſenſe of it, that they may repent of it, and for the time to come forſake it, that ſo they may not bee condemned with the world. The impulſiue or motiue cauſe, wherby the Lord is incited to inflict theſe puniſhments and afflictions, is his juſtice which is heereby manifeſted; for if euen in this life God puniſheth the ſinnes of the wicked, where they are to receiue all their good, as Abraham ſpeaketh to Diues, then how much more grieuous puniſhments remaine for them in the life to come, which is the time appointed for their torment? And if hee puniſh and chaſtiſe the ſinnes of his faithfull Children, where ſhall the wicked and the vngodly appeare? as the Apoſtle ſpeaketh. If hee will not ſuffer them to eſcape without ſeuere correction, whoſe ſinnes are puniſhed in Chriſt euen by his death as being ſatisfactorie, and in themſelues by repentance, as being the fruit of their faith, loue and zeale, which cauſe them to bewaile and lament for him whom they haue pearced, and to afflict their ſoules with bitter ſorrow, for that they haue offended him who hath ſo loued them; then how certainely will there be a day of iudgement, wherein God will manifeſt the ſeuerity of his juſtice, in puniſhing their outragious ſinnes, which haue with an high hand ſinned againſt him, ſeeing they haue not had their puniſhments here, but haue paſſed their time in all worldly proſperity, pleaſure and delight? Secondly the mercy of God moueth him alſo to inflict on the faithfull theſe afflictions, that it may bee manifeſted to his glory and their comfort, whileſt hereby hee ſtoppeth them in their courſe of ſinne, and draweth them neerer to himſelfe when they goe aſtray, that ſo eſcaping condemnation, they may walke in that way of holineſſe, which will bring them to eternall happineſſe. The inſtrumentall cauſes of theſe puniſhments and afflictions are the whole Army of Gods creatures, which as they are his ready inſtruments, in deriuing his bleſſings and benefits to thoſe that feare and ſerue him; ſo are they no leſſe ready with all chearefulneſſe, to inflict thoſe puniſhments, which his juſtice hath pronounced againſt the wicked for their confuſion and deſtruction; and thoſe afflictions wherewith hee correcteth the ſlips and faults of his owne ſeruants, that they may bee brought to repentance and amendment. But eſpecially this Lord of hoſts imployeth in this ſeruice his Angels; and that both the good Angels, who are miniſtring Spirits, alwayes preſt to doe his will, as appeareth in the deſtruction of the hoaſt of Senacherib; and in the ſeuentie thouſand Iſraelites ſlaine by the Angell of God with the ſword of peſtilence; and alſo the euill and wicked ſpirits, as appeareth in the

Amos 3.6.

Michah.7.18.

Eſay 28.21.

Luc.16.25.

1.Pet.4.18.

Zach.12.10.

the afflictions of Iob, and in the deceiuing and ouerthrowing of Ahab, in the tormenting of Saul, in the afflicting of the Apoſtle Paul, and in the tempting of our Sauiour Chriſt himſelfe. And for this purpoſe hee no leſſe vſually imployeth the World, that is, worldly wicked men, ſometime to execute his iudgements one vpon another, and ſometimes as his rods and whips, wherwith hee correcteth the faults of his owne children and ſeruants: and that either, when by their allurements, perſwaſions and euill example; or threats, violence and perſecution they draw them into ſinne; or when after they haue committed it, they ſerue as inſtruments to correct and chaſtiſe thoſe offences, which through their inducements the faithfull haue fallen into. As wee may ſee in the example of the Iſraelites thus afflicted with the Canaanites, Moabites, Philiſtims, Aramits and Babilonians. All which (if wee looke to their owne intentions) had no purpoſe at all to bee Gods inſtruments for the correcting of his children; but chiefly aimed at their deſtruction, being moued thereunto with enuy, rage, hatred couetouſneſſe, and ambitious deſire of ſoueraignty; but if we reſpect the will and worke of God, they were ſo ruled by his power and prouidence, that they were but his bare inſtruments for the chaſtiſing of his ſeruants for their amendment.

ſect, 2.
ends, ſubiect iuncts afflicti-

The ends of theſe afflictions for which God correcteth his Children are manifold; as principally his owne glory in the manifeſtation of his iuſtice, mercy, wiſedome, power and prouidence; and next hereunto the good and ſaluation of the faithfull, whom he thus chaſtiſeth with theſe temporary afflictions, that repenting of their euill wayes, they may not bee condemned with the World: that he may heereby ſtrengthen and increaſe in them their faith, affiance, hope, patience, humility, obedience and all other ſanctifying and ſauing graces; that they may be brought to a true hatred of ſin, when as they feele and taſt the bitter fruits thereof; and to loath the World where they find no better entertainment; that their fleſh with the coruptions thereof may bee mortified and crucified, and the ſpirituall man receiuing more ſtrength hereby may hold it in ſubjection: and finally that being hereby put in minde of their corruption and mortality, they may not fixe and ſettle their hopes and hearts vpon the things of this life, but may bee moued to deſire earneſtly with the Apoſtle Paul to be diſſolued and to be with Chriſt, ſeeing that is beſt of all; the which with diuers other ends of theſe afflictions, I onely heere name, becauſe afterwards I ſhall haue fit occaſion to intreat more largely of them. The effects of theſe croſſes and corrections are all thoſe benefits and bleſſings, which God propoundeth for his ends in inflicting them; for ſeeing he is infinite both in wiſdome and power, hee can faile of nothing which he intendeth, but alwaies attaineth vnto his ends, & mightily effecteth all theſe things at which hee aymeth. The ſubject of theſe afflictions (if we reſpect the place) is this miſerable World; for this is the valley of death, the vale of teares, the fiery furnace, in which when we haue beene tried and approued, we ſhall be laid vp in Gods treaſury of bleſſedneſſe; the liſts of our ſpirituall combat, in which when wee haue fought and ouercome, wee ſhall afterwards triumph in glory and bee crowned with victory; the race, wherein hauing run wee get the price and garland of bleſſedneſſe: the vineyard, in which wee labour till the night of death, when as wee ſhall receiue the wages of euerlaſting happineſſe; and finally the place of our pilgrimage, which when we haue trauailed, we ſhall ioyfully arriue at our owne country, and enter into the paradiſe of our delights. But if we reſpect the ſubject vpon which they are exerciſed, then is it the whole Chriſtian man with all that belongeth vnto him; as his body, ſoule, name, ſtate and friends, there being no part of him or his, which is not a fit ſubject for ſorrow and ſmart, and a fit place where afflictions vſually may keepe their reſidence. The adjuncts, properties, and qualities of theſe afflictions are manifold. In reſpect of their time they laſt onely for this life: and therefore are of [a] ſhort and momentany continuance; they are for their waight, light and eaſie to bee borne by thoſe who are aſſiſted by Gods Spirit; in reſpect of our ſenſe, they are [b] ſharpe and bitter vntill by often taſting them, they are made more familiar vnto vs. In reſpect of the fruit which through the bleſſing of God ariſeth from them, they are vnto the faithfull exceeding profitable, ſtopping them in the courſe of ſinne, pricking them forward in the race of new obedience, preſeruing them from the [c] condemnation of the World, and bringing forth the quiet fruit of righteouſneſſe vnto them, which are therby exerciſed, as the Apoſtle ſpeaketh. [d] Heb. 12. 11.

§. Sect. 3.
That afflictions are euill in their owne nature.

But this profit and fruit is not to bee attributed vnto afflictions in themſelues, for if we reſpect them in their owne nature they are euill, and ſo the Lord himſelfe ſtileth them; Eſay 45. 7. I make peace, and create euill. So the Prophet ſpeaketh. Amos. 3. Shall there bee euill in a City, and the Lord hath not done it? Yea as they are in themſelues euill; ſo are they of a contagious quality ſpreading their poyſon, and making thoſe things euill which are good in their owne nature, and therefore the wiſe man ſaith, that all the dayes of the afflicted are euill: Of which Iacob hauing experience com-

[a] 2. Cor. 4. 17.

[b] Heb. 12. 11. Lamen. 3. 19.

[c] 1. Cor. 11. 32.

[d] Heb. 12. 11.

Eſa. 45. 7. Amos 3. 6.

Pro. 15. 15. Gen. 47. 9.

complaineth, that the dayes of his life had beene few and euill, in reſpect of the manifold miſeries which he had indured. And this reaſon it ſelfe will teach vs, for what are afflictions (in their owne nature) but the puniſhments of ſinne, the fruits of Gods iuſt diſpleaſure, a prelude to death; ſmall flaſhes of thoſe endleſſe flames of torment, the blacke guard of Hell and deſtruction, the firſt beginning of euerlaſting torments, and enemies to our joy, peace and comfort, of which the faithfull at laſt ſhall haue the victory, when as all teares ſhall be wiped from their eyes, and they receiued into thoſe eternall joyes, from which all theſe croſſes and moleſtations ſhal bee for euer baniſhed? Yea, though reaſon were ſilent, yet ſenſe it ſelfe would learne vs this leſſon, that afflictions are euill and to be auoided, ſeeing they are the mother and nurſes of ſmart and ſorrow, terrible in their very ſound, fearefull to looke vpon, bitter to the taſte, painfull to our feeling, and tormenting vs whileſt they touch vs. Whereof it is, that the lamenting Church joyneth together her croſſes and her griefes, and remembring her affliction could not forget her mourning, becauſe though memory ſhould haue failed, taſte, diſtaſted with this Wormewood and gall, would haue brought ſorrow to minde, and miniſtred matter of juſt complayning. Remembring (ſaith ſhe) my affliction and my mourning, the Wormewood and the gall, my ſoule hath them in remembrance, and is humbled in me. And hereof it is, that not onely wiſe men but Fooles and Idiots, yea, euen the bruit beaſts that haue no vnderſtanding, taught onely by ſenſe and inſtinct of nature, doe flee theſe euils, and feare them at their firſt appearance, as robbing them of their pleaſure, plunging them into griefe and miſery, and tending to the hurt and vtter deſtruction of their eſſence and being. And as they are in themſelues euill trees, ſo naturally they bring forth euill fruits, vnleſſe grace being ingrafted in them doe alter their nature. As wee may ſee in the example of wicked men, who the more they are afflicted, the more they hate God, deſpaire of his mercy, murmure and repine againſt his prouidence, and vſe all vnlawfull meanes, and wicked courſes, to eaſe themſelues of theſe afflictions, which they find ſo painfull to them: the which they would not doe, if theſe afflictions were in their owne nature ſimply good, ſeeing (as our Sauiour hath taught vs) a good tree cannot bring forth euill fruit. And therefore that extreame is to be auoyded, which ſome vndiſcreetly run into, who becauſe they often obſerue men to bee bettered by their croſſes, and that much better fruits doe vſually ſpring from affliction, than proſperity and worldly plenty, do condemne this eſtate as euill, and magnifie the other, as good and profitable in it ſelfe: as though our health and ſafety were to be aſcribed to this deadly poyſon, and not rather, to the loue and skill of our heauenly Phyſician, who by his wiſe tempering of it hath altered its nature, and being hurtfull in it ſelfe, hath made it helpfull vnto vs. And although afflictions ſerue as inſtruments and meanes to reclaime men from ſinne, and to increaſe in them ſauing and ſanctifying graces, yet are we not ſimply to deſire or pray for them, nor yet to afflict our ſelues and to pull croſſes vnto vs, and lay them on our owne ſhoulders, ſeeing they are euill in their owne nature, and worke thoſe former good effects not properly by themſelues, but by accident, as they are ſo diſpoſed by the infinite wiſdome, goodneſſe, and power of God, who is able to bring light out of darkneſſe, and good out of euill.

Lamen.3.19.

Matth.7.18.

§. Se

The affl

ons are no abſolutely

but incli

ble to g through G power and wiſdome.

So with no leſſe care, we muſt auoid the contrary extreame, whereinto worldly men run more vſually, who remaining ſtill in loue with their ſinne, which is the greateſt euil, yea in truth, if we ſpeak abſolutely, and properly, the onely euill, doe abhorre and flee from theſe afflictions, eſteeming them onely, or at leaſt the moſt intolerable euill, which neuertheleſſe doe not make men euil, but oftentimes (through the bleſſing of God) much the better. To which purpoſe we are to know, that howſoeuer afflictions are euill in their owne nature, yet not ſimply and abſolutely (for thus ſinne only is euill) but of an indifferent quality, and inclinable to good. For if wee reſpect the chiefe efficient and author from whom they come, they are good, either as they are puniſhments inflicted by a righteous Iudge, or chaſtiſements comming from the hand of a mercifull Father; neither can any euill, properly ſo called, proceed from the fountaine of all goodneſſe, whoſe will is the rule of all Iuſtice and righteouſneſſe. And as proceeding from the chiefe goodneſſe, as their authour, they are therefore good; ſo alſo becauſe they haue had for their ſubject the chiefe goodneſſe, euen our Sauiour Ieſus Chriſt God and Man, who whileſt he liued in this World was as much afflicted as any other; whoſe moſt pure nature could not admit of any thing, which in its owne nature was ſimply euill, and was able to turne all things (which was not ſo) into good. Euen as the ſweet perfume is not ſweete to it ſelfe alone, but is able to make ſweet whatſoeuer toucheth it. To which purpoſe one ſaith, that the man Chriſt contemned all earthly good, that hee might ſhew them to be contemptible; and ſuſtained all earthly euils, which hee commanded others to beare with patience, that happineſſe might not be ſought in them, nor vnhappineſſe feared in theſe. So alſo they helpe vs to come to this chiefe goodneſſe, and in this reſpect alſo they are not euill; for God in his eternall counſell hath ordained them as meanes to fur-deputant

Hæc ſola

quæ non malos,

Ciuit. De

3.cap.4.

Auguſtin.

further his Elect in attaining to ſaluation. For thoſe which hee knew before, hee alſo did predeſtinate to be made like to the image of his Sonne, that is, to be comformable vnto him in his ſufferings, as elſewhere he expoundeth it. So he willeth, that no man ſhould be moued or offended with theſe afflictions of the faithful, ſeeing we our ſelues know that we are appointed thereunto. And thus they are the means to make vs draw neere vnto this chief goodneſſe in this life, by true repentance, and feruent Prayer; and the way which leadeth to this eternall and heauenly happines, of which wee ſhall haue the full fruition in the life to come: for they are that narrow way and ſtraight gate, which leade to theſe euerlaſting ioyes; and if wee meane euer to come thither, wee muſt by many afflictions enter into the Kingdome of God, as the Apoſtle ſpeaketh, Acts 14.22. So that in reſpect of Gods Decree and Ordinance they are good to the faithfull, becauſe through his bleſſing they tend to their good, euen the furniſhing them with Gods graces and the euerlaſting ſaluation of their ſoules. Whereby it appeareth, that afflictions (in reſpect of their ſubject) are of an indifferent nature, good to thoſe who rightly vſe, and profit by them; and euill to thoſe, who take occaſion by them to haſten, and increaſe their condemnation in abuſing them vnto ſinne, wherein they are not vnfitly compared to the red Sea, which according to its owne nature drowned the Egyptians, but by the power and bleſſing of God was the meanes of the Iſraelites preſeruation and deliuerance: for ſo theſe afflictions which drowne vnbeleeuers and worldlings in the gulfe of deſperation, doe ſerue for a ready, though ſtrait, way, to conduct the true Iſraelites into the heauenly Canaan, and as a wall on either hand to keepe them from erring and going aſtray into the bypaths of ſinne, and to preſerue them harmeleſſe from the moſt dangerous aſſaults of their ſpirituall enemies.

Chap. III.

Of the tentation of afflictions, and how it is vrged by the enemies of our ſaluation.

BVt howſoeuer afflictions through the bleſſing of God, and his ouerruling wiſedome and power, become vnto the faithfull, not onely harmeles, but alſo profitable, and doe ſerue as meanes to further their ſaluation; yet are they in their owne nature euill and hurtfull, and ſo dangerous and pernicious vnto vs, that though wee had no other enemies, yet theſe were ſtrong enough to giue vs a finall ouerthrow, and to hinder the ſaluation of our ſoules, if the Lord ſhould withdraw his helping hand, and leaue vs to our owne ſtrength. For in themſelues they are the ground and foundation of a ſtrong tentation; namely, that becauſe wee are thus afflicted, it is a certaine ſigne that we are condemned of God as wicked and reprobate men, and for our ſins juſtly caſt out of his loue and fauour; that wee are purſued by his wrath, which beginneth to inflict thoſe deſerued puniſhments vpon vs in this life wherewith wee ſhall bee ouerwhelmed in the life to come; and therefore that our eſtate is moſt miſerable and deſperate, our burthen for the preſent being intolerable and we without hope of eaſe for the time to come; ; if at leaſt God hauing forſaken vs, wee doe not helpe our ſelues with our own power and politie, and (thoſe means fayling which Gods Word warranteth as lawfull) wee doe not find ſome other meanes of our owne deuiſing, whereby we may bee eaſed and deliuered. The ſcope of which tentation is to ouerthrow our faith, hope, and affiance in God, as being our chiefe enemy, who doth thus afflict vs; to plunge vs into deepe deſpaire and to driue vs into all impatiencie, that thereby wee may bee moued to murmure and repine againſt the diuine prouidence, and euen to blaſpheme God to his face; to caſt off all profeſſion of Religion, all feare and ſeruice of God as being bootleſſe and vnprofitable, and finally to ceaſe relying vpon his power and promiſes, and to vſe all wicked and vnlawfull meanes for the remouall of theſe afflictions.

§. Sect.2. How the tentation of afflictions is vrged by Sathan.

And this tentation being in it ſelfe very dangerous, is made much more ſtrong and powerfull to worke our ouerthrow, as it is vrged and inforced by the ſpirituall enemies of our ſaluation. For Sathan is ready to tell vs that theſe afflictions are the juſt puniſhments of our ſinnes, and the ſignes of Gods wrath, and heauy diſpleaſure, that they are teſtimonies to aſſure vs that wee are caſt out of his loue and fauour; for if God loued and delighted in vs, he would communicate his bleſſings vnto vs, which are the pledges of his loue, and not continually torment vs with theſe plagues and puniſhments, afflictions of minde and body, ſickneſſes and diſeaſes, impriſonment and baniſhment, loſſe of goods and friends, and innumerable other miſeries, which in his Law he hath threatned againſt the wicked and reprobate. And thus he vrged this tentation againſt our Sauiour Chriſt himſelfe, vſing his pouertie and want of neceſſaries, as a reaſon to proue that hee was not the Sonne of God. If (ſaith hee) thou be the Sonne of God, command that theſe ſtones be made bread. As though hee ſhould haue ſaid, thy want and penury doe plainly manifeſt that thou art not the Sonne of God, as thou doeſt boaſt thy ſelfe to be; for if thou were ſo neere and deare vnto him, hee would not ſuffer thee to want common neceſſaries; or elſe at leaſt thou haſt power in thy ſelfe, to make prouiſion of fit meanes for the preſeruing of thy life; and without dependancie on him, art able of thy ſelfe to make bread of ſtones wherewith thou mayeſt nouriſh thy body, and preſerue thy life.

Matth.4.3.

§. Sect. 3.
How the tentation of afflictions is vrged by the World.

But eſpecially the World and wicked Worldlings enforce this tentation of afflictions. For as they are alwayes ready to perſecute Gods Seruants, and both in their words and actions to do them all the hurt they can, by wrong, injuſtice, violence, and oppreſſion, becauſe they make conſcience of their wayes, and will not run with them into the ſame exceſſe of riot and outragious wickedneſſe; that ſo they may diſcourage them in their vertuous courſes, and make them to become as bad as themſelues or elſe may ſatisfie their ſpight and ſpleene againſt them by vexing and tormenting them: ſo when by their meanes and malice they lye vnder theſe heauy burthens, in ſtead of pittying or eaſing their diſtreſſed eſtate, with all their skill and power they increaſe their afflictions, aggrauate their ſorrowes, and labour all they can to diſarme them of all patience, whereby they might be comforted in their grieuous miſeries. So the Lord ſaith, that when being angry with his people for their ſinnes, he deliuered them into the hands of the Babylonians: they ſhewed no mercy vnto them, but did lay their very heauy yoke vpon the ancient. And for this he profeſſeth, that he was greatly angry againſt the careleſſe heathen, becauſe when hee was angry but a little with his people, they helped forward their affliction. By all which, theſe wicked Worldlings doe adde ſuch waight to this heauy burthen, as vnleſſe the faithful were ſupported with the power of Gods might, it would preſently ouer-whelme them. For firſt worldly wicked men (with whom ſometimes Gods Seruants themſelues conſpire in this vnrighteous judgement) thruſt them downe, who are already falling, encreaſing and ſtrengthning their afflictions, and decreaſing and weakning the patience of the faithfull with their falſe cenſures and vnjuſt criminations; whereby they are ready to judge thoſe who are afflicted, to bee aboue all men moſt miſerable, abhorred and forſaken of God; and of all others to be the greateſt Sinners, either in reſpect of ſome open crimes, which the world takes notice of, or of ſome hidden ſinnes, and groſſe hypocriſie which the Lord hath ſeene in them, though men haue thought well of them, which hath moued him in this extraordinary manner to afflict and puniſh them. Of this wee haue an example in Iobs friends, who when they could not deteſt iuſt Iob of any enormious crime, cenſured him for an Hypocrite, becauſe the hand of God was heauy vpon him: of the other we ſee the experience in thoſe Iews who condemned the [b] Galilæans, and them vpon whom the tower of Siloam fell, to be greater ſinners than all other men, becauſe of thoſe extraordinary judgments which were inflicted vpon them; and in the [c] Barbarians, who ſeeing the Viper leape vpon Pauls hand, concluded preſently that he was a murtherer, whom vengeance would not ſuffer to liue. Yea, euen in the Diſciples themſelues, who conjectured that either the [d] blinde man or his parents, had by ſome ſpeciall ſinne brought vpon him this ſpeciall puniſhment. Againe, worldly men adde vnto the waight of affliction by inſulting ouer thoſe who are thus dejected, and treading in their necks, whom the hand of God hath caſt down & humbled. And thus they [e] inſulted ouer Dauid, [f] ſaying vnto his ſoule that there was no helpe for him in his God: and elſewhere he complaineth that [g] in his aduerſity his enemies reioyced and gathered themſelues togethr, yea, the very abjects aſſembled themſelues againſt him, tearing him and ceaſing not; and that his teares were his meate and drinke, whileſt they daily ſaid vnto him, where is thy God? A particular example whereof we haue in Shemei, who in Dauids affliction inſulted ouer him, [h] curſing him and ſaying, come forth thou murtherer and wicked man, the Lord hath brought vpon thee all the bloud of the houſe of Saul, &c. And thus they railed on our Sauiour Chriſt himſelf hanging on the Croſſe, [i] wagging their heads and ſaying, Hey, thou that deſtroyeſt the Temple, and buildeſt it in three dayes, ſaue thy ſelfe and come downe from the Croſſe. And with this inſulting and triumphing is often joyned mocking and deriſion, as we may ſee in the example of afflicted Iob, who though in his proſperity hee were reuerenced as a King, yet in his afflictions he was [k] mocked by thoſe who were younger than he, yea euen by abject perſons, whoſe fathers hee had refuſed to ſet with the dogges of his flockes. So Dauid complayneth, that the wicked made ſongs of him, and [l] laughed him to ſcorne when hee was in miſery; yea, it was not his caſe alone but common to him with all the Church, for being in captiuity, by way of deriſion, they willed them to [m] ſing ſome of the Songs of Sion. Thus alſo Ieremy complaineth, [n] I am in deriſion daily, and euery one mocketh me. Yea, euen our Sauiour Chriſt himſelfe, as hee had the greateſt meaſure of affliction, ſo was hee aboue all others ſcorned and derided, for they put on him a Crowne of Thornes, & a purple Robe, they bowed downe vnto and mocked him ſaying, God ſaue the King of the Iewes. Finally, worldly men adde vnto the afflictions of Gods Seruants by contemning and deſpiſing them in their afflictions; for as they labour by all meanes to make them contemptible and of an abject condition, ſo hauing brought

Pſal.38.20.

Eſay 47.6.

Zach.1.15.

Iob 22.6.

[b] Luke 13.2

[c] Act.28.4

[d] Iohn 9.2

[e] Pſal.3.2

[f] Pſal.42.

[g] Pſal.35.15. and 42.3.

[h] 2.Sam.

[i] Mark 15

[k] Iob 30.

[l] Pſal.69. & 35.16.

[m] Pſal.137

[n] Ier.20.

Matth.27

brought them into this eſtate, they deſpitefully deſpiſe them as the very off-ſcourings of all things. They make them poore by oppreſſion or deceit, and then contemne them becauſe of their pouerty; they load them with ſlanders and foule imputations, and then deſpiſe them as men defamed and of euill report; and in a word, they helpe to plunge them into all miſeries, and then diſgrace and lightly value them, as being miſerable and of an abject fortune. And this Iob obſerueth, where he ſaith, that he who is ready to fall, is, as a ſpent Lampe deſpiſed in the opinion of the rich. The which contempt, deriſion, inſulting and ſpitefull cenſuring vſed by wicked Worldlings towards the faithful in their afflictions is much more intolerable, and giueth a farre more fierce aſſault to their patience, than all the troubles and miſeries which they ſuſtaine; for though they can be content to ſtoope and humble themſelues vnder the hand of God, and quietly beare the burthen which hee layeth vpon them; yet their ſtomackes riſe, and their hearts are ready to boyle with anger, and impatiencie, when men, who ſhould rather pitty them, doe deride and ſcorne, contemne and inſult ouer them in their diſtreſſe. But eſpecially the ſtrength of this tentation is increaſed, when as the afflictions of the faithfull are thus aggrauated, not onely by ſtrangers from whom they expect no better, but alſo by their friends and acquaintance, by their kindred and allies, who are bound vnto them not onely in nature and neereneſſe of bloud, but alſo by many benefits beſtowed, and many good offices performed vnto them. For this made Iobs afflictions grieuous and intolerable, when vnto them were added the vniuſt criminations and hard cenſures of his friends, from whom hee expected comfort, whereas their mercy & compaſſion towards him would haue made his heauy burthen light, like a load carried vpon many ſhoulders. And this made him to complaine that they were miſerable comforters, becauſe they had opened their mouthes vpon him, and ſmitten him on the cheeke in reproch, and had gathered themſelues together againſt him: that they ſpoke eloquently againſt him, vexing his ſoule and tormenting him with words; that they had many times reproched him and were not aſhamed, but were impudent towards him. This made him to cry out in that great paſſion. Haue pittie vpon mee (O yee my friends) for the hand of God hath touched me. Why doe yee perſecute me as God, and are not ſatisfied with my fleſh? And as his afflictions were increaſed by the vnpleaſing ſocietie of ſome of his friends, who in ſteed of comforting tormented him, ſo by others of them, whileſt they did abandon and forſake him, becauſe of his afflictions; the which his miſerie in reſpect of this deſertion he elſewhere bewayleth; He hath (ſaith he) remooued my brethren farre from mee, and alſo mine acquaintance were ſtrangers vnto me; my neighbours haue forſaken mee, and my familiars haue forgotten me, &c. Of this alſo Dauid complayneth. My louers and my friends ſtand aſide from my plague, and my kinſmen ſtand afarre off, and elſewhere he ſaith, thou haſt put mine acquaintance farre from mee, and made me to be abhorred of them. My louers and my friends haſt thou put away from me, and mine acquaintance hid themſelues. But moſt intolerable are the afflictions of the faithfull, when as their friends, from whom chiefly they expect comfort, doe not onely neglect this duty, but alſo are the meanes and inſtruments to bring vpon them all theſe miſeries and croſſes; and of this Dauid complayneth, My familiar friend whom I truſted, which did eat of my bread, hath lifted vp the heele againſt mee: yea ſo ſtrong was this tentation in his apprehenſion, that he was ready to ſinke vnder it, as hee implyeth elſe-where. Surely (ſaith he) mine enemy did not diffame me, for I could haue born it, neither did my aduerſary exalt himſelfe againſt me, for I would haue hid mee from him, but it was thou, O man, euen my companion, my guide and my familiar, which delighted in conſulting together, and went into the houſe of God as companions.

Iob 19.13,14.

Pſal. 38.11.

Pſal 88.8.

Pſal. 41.9.

Pſal. 55. 11,12, 13.

§. Sect. 4. How the tentation of afflictions is admitted and vrged by the fleſh.

And as the world doth exceedingly enforce this tentation of afflictiõs, partly as the means of inflicting them, and partly as it doth aggrauate and increaſe them being inflicted: ſo the corrupt fleſh is as ready to admit and entertain this tentation; and judging all things according to ſenſe and preſent apprehenſion, as in the time of proſperitie it ſwelleth with pride and preſumption, perſwading men that none more than they are in Gods loue and fauour, becauſe they haue had the largeſt draught of temporall benefits allowed vnto them; ſo in the time of aduerſitie and affliction, it is as baſely dejected and plunged into the bottomles gulfe of horrour and deſpaire, perſwading men that they are forſaken of God, and purſued with his wrath, which now beginneth to take vengeance againſt them. From whence proceedeth their murmuring and repining againſt God and his prouidence; their impatiencie to beare that croſſe from which they haue no hope to bee eaſed; and their reſolution to vſe all vnlawfull meanes to vnburthen themſelues, when lawfull meanes faile and will not helpe. So that this tentation of afflictions being ſo ſtrongly vrged by the Deuil and the World, and ſo readily entertained by our corrupt fleſh, muſt needs be very potent and powerfull to preuaile againſt thoſe who are aſſaulted with it; and that not only meere worldlings, who eſteeming the Worlds proſperity as their chiefe Paradiſe, doe abhorre affliction as their greateſt Hell; but euen Gods faithfull ſeruants, who nouriſhing this traytour (the fleſh) in their boſomes are betrayed by it, and ſo often foyled in this combate of tentations. Of the former we haue manifold examples among worldly wicked men, who being preſſed with the waight of afflictions, ſeeke to eaſe their ſtomackes, by belching out their blaſphemies againſt God; and feeling preſent ſmart, and hauing no hope of being eaſed for the time to come, fall into ſuch impatiencie, that ſome languiſh in melancholy & diſcontent, refuſing thoſe comforts which they might enjoy, becauſe they are depriued of ſome which they deſire; and becomming in all things miſerable through their owne wilfull choice, becauſe in ſome things they are miſerable through neceſſitie. Others tyred with the burthen of afflictions grow weary of their liues, and by laying violent hands vpon themſelues, ſhorten their dayes wilfully, leaping into the endleſſe torments of Hell, to auoide the temporary miſeries of this World. Finally, others wanting ſtrength and patience to beare their afflictions, and alſo this courage and deſperate reſolution to put an end vnto them by ſuch a violent courſe, doe willingly fall into any manner of ſinne, and practice all vnlawfull meanes, which ſeeme to promiſe vnto them the leaſt hope of eaſe and freedome. Of the other we haue an example in the Iſraelites, who though they were the ſole people of God, deliuered by his mighty power from their malicious enemies, and enriched with many bleſſings (as it were) from the immediate hand of God, yet being a little afflicted and pinched with want, doe murmure and repine againſt the Lord, their Creatour and Redeemer, being mooued hereunto, ſometime through a bare and falſe feare of not preuailing [a] againſt their enemies, and ſometime for want of ſuch [b] meat as they luſted after, and of [c] water to quench their thirſt. Yea, euen Iob himſelfe renowned for patience, being ſore preſſed with the waight of afflictions; doth often breake out into great impatiency, vttering ſuch words as were not farre from blaſphemy, If they had proceeded from a ſetled judgement, and not from a ſudden and diſtempered paſſion. For he curſeth his Natiuity, and wiſheth that he had neuer bin, or that he had miſcarried in the birth; he complaineth that God was his enemy, and that he did ſhoot at him his enuenomed Arrowes, that hee oppreſſed him by ſtrong hand, without hearing his cauſe, and that his terrours did fight againſt him. Thus alſo Dauid by his afflictions was brought ſometimes to the brinke of deſpaire, and ſometime to bewray his impatiencie; for he cryeth out that he was forſaken of God, that hee heard not his prayers, nor regarded his roring, that Gods mercies were cleane gone, and his promiſes vtterly failed; that hee had rejected his ſoule and preſſed him down with his terrors and indignation; that the ſtate of the wicked was happy, & that he had waſhed his hands in innocencie in vaine, becauſe he was puniſhed and chaſtened euery morning. And the like or greater impatiency was ſhewed by the Prophet Ieremy, who alſo curſeth the day of his birth, and the man, that brought firſt newes hereof to his father, and wiſheth that his mothers belly had beene his graue, or her wombe a perpetuall conception, becauſe he came forth of it to ſee labour and ſorrow, and that his dayes ſhould be conſumed with ſhame.

Pſal.22.1.
7.88.14.7
13,13.

Ier.20.14.

Chap. IV.

Of the preparation, which is required before the conflict of afflictions; and firſt of our ſpirituall armour which wee muſt buckle vnto vs.

§. Sect. 1
That the dangerouſneſſe of theſe ſpiritual enemies not diſcou vs from the fight.

By all which it appeareth, that theſe tentations of affliction, though they be not altogether ſo dangerous and powerfull as thoſe of proſperity, yet are they ſtrong enough to ouercome vs, if wee be left to our ſelues, and to make vs the captiues of ſinne and Sathan. And therefore, as on the one ſide we are not in ſuch a cowardly manner to feare theſe mighty enemies, nor diſpayring of victory to caſt away our weapons, and betake our ſelues to flight: ſo on the other ſide, wee are not ſecurely to contemne them, as being eaſie to ouercome; for if they haue foyled Gods greateſt Worthies and moſt valiant Captaines; how ſhall not we be indangered, yea vanquiſhed by them, if we were left vnto our owne ſtrength, who are but vnexperienced weaklings and common Souldiers? But ſeeing the ſtrength of our enemies, and our owne weakneſſe, wee muſt be moued hereby by a liuely faith, to reſt vpon the power of Gods might aſſiſting vs, to implore his helpe and ſuccour in this ſpirituall conflict; and then in the next place, to vſe all the good means appointed by God, for the defending of our ſelues, and the obtayning of victory. Of which (as order requireth) I am now to ſpeake; for as in worldly warres, it is requiſite and neceſſary that we firſt know the nature, qualitie, diſpoſition and ſtrength of our enemies, and then accordingly to thinke of the meanes, whereby wee may bee inabled to make reſiſtance and obtaine the victory; ſo muſt we do in this ſpirituall Warfare; & therefore hauing already entreated of the former point, I come now to the other; in ſpeaking whereof my purpoſe is (by the aſſiſtance of God) to ſhew, firſt the means wherby the Chriſtian may be ſtrengthened to beare with patience, and by bearing ring to overcome all afflictions in generall; and then, beſides the application of the generals, to inſiſt in the ſpeciall meanes, whereby they may be armed, and prepared againſt ſome ſpeciall and particular croſſes and calamities.

[a] *Numb.*14.2.
[b] *Exod.*16.3.
[c] Numb. 20.3.

The meanes, whereby wee may bee ſtrengthened againſt all afflictions generally, may bee referred to two heads, for either they reſpect preparation, or elſe action and execution; for as in warlike expeditions, thoſe who deſire victory ouer their mighty enemies, do firſt prepare their forces, furniſhing them with armour, weapons, and all other warlike neceſſaries, and then enter the field, couragiouſly withſtanding, or charging the enemy; wiſely managing all the meanes prouided in the time of preparation for their beſt aduantage, and neuer giuing ouer their valiant fight, till they haue put their enemies to flight and obtained victory: ſo muſt wee in this ſpirituall Warfare, firſt prepare our ſelues for the fight, and then manfully & Chriſtianly demeane our ſelues in the day of battell. And vnto this preparation the Sonne of Syrach perſwadeth all thoſe, who intend to ſerue the Lord in this ſpirituall Warfare. My Sonne (ſaith he) if thou wilt come into the ſeruice of God, ſtand faſt in righteouſneſſe and feare, and prepare thy ſoule to tentation; ſettle thine heart and be patient, bow downe thine eare, and receiue the words of vnderſtanding, and ſhrinke not away when thou art aſſayled, but wait vpon God patiently. For if all bee deferred to the day of battell, and no preparation made before we enter the field, and the alarme bee ſounded; if in the time of peace, wee neuer thinke of Warre, and in proſperity, neuer prepare for the day of aduerſity and affliction; if wee neuer expect nor feare the enemy, till he be in ſight & ready to encounter vs, but are then to be trained in this martiall diſcipline, when we ſhould fight; to ſeeke for weapons, when we ſhould vſe them; and to put on our ſpirituall armour, when as already the skirmiſh is begun, it is a thouſand to one that we ſhall be wounded to the death in the firſt encounter, put to flight, and eaſily ouercome, being altogether vnable to make any reſiſtance.

Now vnto this preparation there is required, firſt that wee prouide and put on the ſpirituall armour, and then that wee bee trained in the knowledge and skill of this Chriſtian Warfare, whereby wee may be enabled to vſe our weapons, and ſtrength to our beſt aduantage; vnto which is required the learning and obſeruing of certaine rules and inſtructions, whereby wee may know how to carry and demeane our ſelues in this ſpirituall conflict. The weapons and armour required to this Warfare are not the ſword, ſpeare and canon, nor the harneſſe and ſhield of iron and ſteele, for we wraſtle not againſt fleſh and blood, but againſt ſpirituall wickedneſſes, as the Apoſtle ſpeaketh; but that ſpirituall armour of a Chriſtian, euen all Gods ſanctifying and ſauing graces, with which if wee bee furniſhed, wee ſhall by them bee inabled to make reſiſtance and obtaine the victory, partly becauſe, knowing the goodneſſe of our armour wee ſhall bee more bold and confident, and valiantly ſuſtaine the ſharpeſt encounter in hope of victorie, and partly, and that more principally, becauſe the Lord of hoſts our great commander, when hee ſeeth vs armed, with his owne furniture, and adorned with his owne colours, will graciouſly acknowledge vs for ſouldiers of his owne band, and ſtrengthen and aſſiſt vs with his owne almighty power, whereby we are ſure to put our enemies to flight and obtaine the conqueſt. Neither will it ſtand with the glory of our mighty Generall, to haue his owne faithfull ſouldiers and ſeruants to bee foyled and ouercome, or to haue his owne furniture, armour, and weapons to bee found weake and inſufficient, when they come to be tried and approued.

Eph.6.12.

§. Sect.4.
Of the firſt part of our ſpirituall armour, which is ſauing knowledge.

Now the firſt part of this ſpirituall Armour, which we muſt put on in this time of preparation, is ſauing knowledge; for this is the eye of the ſoule, which muſt guide vs in all our trauels, & that heauenly light, which muſt direct vs in theſe crooked and rugged wayes; which if wee want, we ſhall ſtumble and fall at euery ſtone of offence, and looſe our ſelues in this labyrinth of troubles; it is the pilote which muſt gouerne and guide vs in theſe tempeſtuous ſtormes of miſeries and afflictions, whileſt wee ſayle in the dangerous Sea of this wretched World, without whoſe helpe wee ſhall daſh againſt the rockes of deſperation, bee ouerſet and ſwallowed with the boyſterous blaſts, and huge billowes of troubles and calamities, and ſo make ſhipwracke of our ſoules; in a word, it is the ſterne and Carde, from which wee haue all our direction through this ſea of miſeries into our heauenly country, without the helpe whereof we ſhould hold wrong courſes, and neuer find the way into the hauen of reſt. But if we haue the eye of ſauing knowledge illightned with the bright-ſhining beames of the holy Scriptures, we ſhall be ſo guided thereby, that wee ſhall eaſily ouercome all difficulties, eſcape all dangers, and notwithſtanding all theſe lets and impediments, ſafely attaine vnto the end of our hopes, the euerlaſting ſaluation of our ſoules. For if we haue learned out of Gods Word that all theſe afflictions come from God, and that not as an angry judge, but as a mercifull and louing Father; not as ſignes of his diſ-

Vt nauis cum undarum tempeſtate quaſſatur niſi gubernatorem peritiſſimum habeat, à fluctibus maris citò conteritur: ita & homo cum in aliquibus aduerſis fuerit conſtitutus, niſi habuerit mentem diuinis eloquijs eruditã citò animus eius frangitur & ſalutis ſuæ ſuſtinet damnum. Baſil. tract. de conſol. in aduerſ.

Apoc.21.4.
Eſa.61.3.

pleaſure, but as teſtimonies of his fauour, and markes of our adoption; not to puniſh vs for ſinne, but to purge vs from it; not to deſtroy, but to increaſe and perfit his graces in vs; not to condemne vs, but to further our ſaluation; making this ſtrait gate, and this narrow and afflicted way, to ſerue for a paſſage and entrance into the ioyes of Heauen; and finally, that the Lord our louing Father will not correct vs without meaſure, and aboue our ſtrength, yea no more or longer than is neceſſarily required for our amendment, and for the better fitting of vs for his ſeruice and our glory; and that then hee will deliuer vs from all theſe troubles, wipe all teares from our eyes, and giue vs beauty for aſhes, the oyle of ioy for mourning, and the garment of gladneſſe for the ſpirit of heauineſſe; then ſhall wee be ſufficiently ſtrengthened againſt the day of triall, withſtand all theſe ſharpe encounters, and obtaining victory ouer theſe enemies of our ſaluation, we ſhall with peace and comfort hold on in our courſe of righteouſneſſe towards our heauenly countrey, and bee rather furthered than hindred in our iourney by their aſſaults.

§. Sect. 5.
Of the ſecond part of our ſpirituall armour, which is a iuſtifying faith.

Heb.6.12.
Apoc.13.10.
1.Iohn 5.4.

The ſecond part of this Armour is a liuely and iuſtifying faith; for this is that impenetrable ſhield, which cannot bee pearced with theſe fiery darts, and that high and impregnable rampire and bulwarke, which our ſpirituall enemies can neither mount with their longeſt ſcaling ladders, nor batter and ouerthrow with their ſtrongeſt engines of trials and tentations. And therefore, if we would ouercome by patience, when we are aſſaulted with afflictions, wee muſt in our preparation buckle vnto vs this ſhield of faith, and lay this foundation vpon which our patience chiefly reſteth: for theſe two alwayes goe together, ſo that if faith goe not before, it is impoſſible that true and Chriſtian patience ſhould follow after. And hence it is, that they are conioyned in the Scriptures; ſo the Apoſtle exhorteth vs to bee followers of them, who through faith and patience inherit the promiſes; and thus the Apoſtle Iohn coupleth them together, Here (ſaith hee) is the patience and faith of the Saints. If then wee would ouercome the World, as well when it frowneth as when it fawneth, and ſtand inuincible both againſt his bewitching allurements, & proud threats, let vs buckle vnto vs this faith, as a principall part of our Chriſtian Armour, wherby we are enabled to get the conqueſt, for this is the victory, that ouercommeth the World, euen our faith. The which will euidently appeare vnto vs, if we conſider, that it is faith alone which pulleth out the ſting of afflictions, and ſo maketh them to become harmeleſſe; for thereby we are aſſured of remiſſion of our ſinnes, of our peace and reconciliation with God; and therefore that wee are not now puniſhed as ſlaues, but chaſtiſed as ſonnes; the which maketh vs not onely patient, but euen ioyfull in our afflictions; for as the Apoſtle ſaith, being iuſtified by faith we haue peace towards God through our Lord Ieſus Chriſt, and in this faith wee ſtand and reioyce, not only vnder the hope of the glory of God, but alſo in tribulation. So it is faith onely, which giueth vnto vs title and intereſt vnto all the gracious promiſes of the Goſpell, as being the alone condition of the couenant of grace betweene God and vs; and therefore as without faith, all the comforts of the Goſpell are no comforts vnto vs, becauſe wee haue no right vnto them; ſo being indued therewith, wee haue our ſhare and part in them all, whether they concerne this life or the life to come. For example, by this faith we are aſſured that Iehouah is our Lord and King, our Redeemer and Sauiour, our ſanctifier and preſeruer; that he is on our ſide, and therefore wee neede not to feare who oppoſe againſt vs; that hee will deny nothing vnto vs which is good and profitable; for if hee ſpared not his owne ſonne, but gaue him for vs all to death, how ſhall he not with him giue vs all things alſo, as the Apoſtle ſpeaketh: that hee ruleth and diſpoſeth all things with his prouidence, and particularly all our croſſes and calamities, euen to the falling of the leaſt hayre of our head, and therefore that all ſhall turne to our good, and worke together for the beſt, through his wiſedome, power and goodneſſe, ordering them to this end. Furthermore by this faith we are ſo firmely vnited vnto Ieſus Chriſt our Head, that nothing can deuide vs, whereby wee are aſſured, that there is not any thing, which can ſeparate vs from Gods loue, becauſe nothing can part Chriſt and vs, in whom he loueth vs. So hereby wee are certainely perſwaded, that Ieſus Chriſt did not onely ſuffer for vs, but that he doth alſo ſuffer with vs, who is able to eaſe and comfort vs, by vpholding vs when we are ready to faint, and bearing the greateſt part of our burthen. That if wee ſuffer with Chriſt we ſhall raigne with him, and that our light and momentanie afflictions ſhall cauſe vnto vs, a farre moſt excellent, and an eternall waight of glory. Finally by this faith we are aſſured, that God himſelfe is preſent with vs in all our troubles, that hee meaſureth out vnto vs this bitter draught in a iuſt and conuenient proportion, and when hee hath wrought in vs his owne good worke of grace, hee will remoue the croſſe, and giue vnto vs a ioyfull deliuerance. So that there are no comforts like thoſe which are brought vnto vs by a liuely faith, vnto which when we haue attained in full meaſure, we may in all our afflictions ſay with the Pſalmiſt, God is

Rom.5.1,2.
Rom.8.32.
Verſ.35.
Rom.8.2
Rom.8.39.
2.Tim.2.1
2.Cor.4.17.

46.1,2,3.
11.17.
35,36,39.

is our hope and ſtrength ready to bee found. Therefore will we not feare though the earth be moued, and though the mountaines fall into the middeſt of the Sea, though the waters rage and bee troubled, and the mountaines greatly ſhake at the ſurges of the ſame. Neither is there any triall or tentation ſo great, which faith doth not eaſily ouercome, as the Apoſtle maketh it plaine vnto vs in the example of Abraham, who by faith offered vp his onely ſonne Iſaac when he was tryed; and of the reſt of Gods Saints, who being ſtrong in faith, bore with patience thoſe great afflictions; being content to indure the racke and would not bee deliuered, that they might receiue a better reſurrection; to bee tryed by mockings and ſcourgings (the one whipping the ſoule, the other the body) by bonds & impriſonment, by ſtoning and cutting in ſunder, ouer which they triumphed, as glorious conquerers, by their faith, as the Apoſtle witneſſeth. And therefore if we would ſtand in the day of battel, we muſt in our preparation buckle vnto vs this ſhield of faith which is the chiefe inſtrument of deriuing vnto vs from God all comfort & conſolation.

Sect. 6. the third t of our itual ar-r, which is t and af-e in God.

The third part of our Armour, is a firme truſt and affiance in God through Ieſus Chriſt, the which (as alſo thoſe other parts that remaine) is the fruit of a liuely faith; for being thereby aſſured that God is both omnipotent in power, and almighty to ſaue and deliuer vs, infinite in wiſdome and knowledge, beholding and diſpoſing, as all other things, ſo all our troubles and afflictions; and that as in himſelfe hee is loue and truth, ſo hee is moſt louing and careful ouer vs, and alwayes ready to make good his promiſes, concerning his aſſiſtance and our deliuerance; we reſt & rely vpon him in all our afflictions for help & ſuccour as vpon our omnipotent and all-ſufficient creatour, preſeruer & redeemer; and reſigne our ſelues ouer vnto him our moſt faithfull Sauiour; hauing a firme and ſtrong affiance and confidence in him, that hee will vphold vs in all our troubles, and deliuer vs from all our afflictions, when as it ſhall bee moſt fit for his owne glory, and our ſpirituall and euerlaſting good. And this is that confidence wherewith if we be indued, wee ſhall thereby bee meruailouſly vpheld in all our trials, and haue our patience ſo ſtrenghthened and confirmed, that we ſhall eaſily beare all afflictions which hee ſhall lay vpon vs, in whom wee put our truſt, and couragiouſly indure the brunt of all tentations, not fearing what may befal vs, ſeeing all things are ordered and diſpoſed by his moſt wiſe prouidence, who is our chiefe Rocke of defence, vpon whom wee reſt in all difficulties and dangers. An example whereof we haue in Iob, who being ſo confident in Gods mercy and goodneſſe, that he profeſſeth [a] though he ſhould kill him, yet hee would truſt in him; was alſo a petterne of pacience to all poſterity; and ſo Dauid reſting vpon the Lord, as vpon his [b] rocke and fortreſſe, his deliuerer and ſtrength, his ſhield, the horne of his ſaluation and his refuge, is hereby ſo armed with patience, that in his greateſt affliction he ſaith, [c] heere am I, let him doe to mee as ſeemeth good in his eyes, and when as in his greateſt diſtreſſe hee was forſaken of all other hope and helpe, hee is ſaid to haue [d] comforted himſelfe in the Lord his God. This made him, when ſenſe of paine would haue forced him to murmure & complaine, to hold his peace and beare all with patience becauſe [e] the Lord had done it. Yea as hereby hee patiently ſuffered his preſent euils, ſo hee was bold and confident againſt all future croſſes, for [f] truſting in God, he did not feare what man could doe vnto him; yea hee profeſſeth, becauſe the Lord was his [g] ſhepheard, and tooke care of him, that though hee ſhould walke through the valley of the ſhadow of death hee would feare no euill; and that [h] he ſlept ſecurely, not fearing tenne thouſand of his enemies encloſing him about, becauſe the Lord ſuſtained him. And therefore if wee would haue our patience confirmed and ſtrengthened both againſt preſent and future euils, wee muſt ſeeke to attaine vnto this affiance, and truſt in God, as in our mighty and mercifull Father; and ſo ſhall wee with patience and meekneſſe depend vpon his prouidence, both for ſupplying of thoſe wants which pinch vs, for our preſeruation from thoſe dangers we feare, and for deliurance from theſe preſent miſeries and afflictions, which we feele and ſuffer; ſeeing he is all-ſufficient to prouide for vs, omnipotent to defend vs, and infinite both in power and loue to ſaue all thoſe who truſt in him.

1,9.
13,15.
b Pſalm.18.1,2.
c 2.Sam.15.26.
d 1.Sam.30.6.
e Pſal 39.9.
f Pſal.56.4.11.
g Pſal.23.1.4.&
h 3.5.& 4.8.

§. Sect.7. Of the fourth part of our ſpirituall armour, which Is Hope in God

The fourth peece of armour, which wee muſt prouide againſt the day of triall, is hope in God, whereby wee expect the performance of all thoſe promiſes, which are made vnto vs in the Goſpell, and eſpecially ſuch as concerne Gods aſſiſting and ſtrengthening of vs in the day of tentation, or our deliuerance from all our troubles. The which alſo is a fruit of our faith and affiance in God; for when wee beleeue all his gracious promiſes made vnto vs, for the ſupplying of our wants, protection from perils, and deliuerance from thoſe euils which wee ſuſtaine and ſuffer, and doe relye vpon them with aſſured confidence; then doe wee alſo wait Gods leaſure attend his pleaſure, and hopefully expect when theſe promiſes ſhall bee performed, and made good vnto vs for our vſe and benefit. And this the Apoſtle teacheth vs, where he ſaith, that Faith is the ground of things hoped for, and the euidence of things which are not ſeene

Heb.11.1.

Eſa.28.16.

Rom.8.24.25.

Ipſa ſpes peregrinationi neceſſaria eſt, ipſa eſt quæ conſolatur in via, viator enim quando laborat ambulando, ideò laborem tolerat, quia peruenire ſperat. tolle illi ſpem perueniendi, continuò franguntur vires ambulandi Aug.in Rom.8.31.Tom.10. Serm.16.

Heb.12.1.2.

ſeene; and the Prophet implyeth it, where he willeth thoſe that beleeue, not to make haſt, but to wait Gods leaſure, and hopefully to expect the accompliſhment of his promiſes. Now as this hope is the daughter of faith and affiance, ſo it is the nurſe of patience, whereby it is fed and nouriſhed, and ſo ſtrengthened and vpheld, that it cannot faint or fall. So the Apoſtle telleth vs, that wee are ſaued by hope which expecteth things inuiſible, and if we hope for that wee ſee not, wee doe with patience abide for it. And thus doth our hope ſtrengthen our patience, as it expecteth the performance of Gods promiſes, either reſpecting this life or the life to come. In reſpect of this life our patience is confirmed, whileſt we hopefully expect the performance of Gods promiſes, for our deliuerance out of our afflictions, and in the meane time his aſſiſtance to ſtrengthen vs, in the bearing of all thoſe croſſes and calamities which he layeth vpon vs: for when wee hope that our troubles will haue an end, and that the cloud of calamities being blowne away, the Sun of Gods fauour will ſhine againe vnto vs; when wee expect reſt and peace, after our labour and dangerous Warfare, and that our mourning ſhall bee turned into joy, and our troubles into comforts; then doe wee beare the preſent brunt with patience, in reſpect of theſe future hopes; and are eaſed in thoſe miſeries which wee feele, by that immunity and freedome which wee expect. And thus doth the Mariner whileſt the ſtorme laſteth, take exceſſiue paines to ſaue his ſhip and life, in hope that it will be ouerblowne, when as againe he ſhall haue faire weather and a good paſſage; thus doth the poore man patiently indure his toylſome labour, whileſt hee hopeth that his paines will bring riches, and his riches reſt; thus doth he who is tormented with a feauer, beare with patience his preſent griefe, whileſt he hopeth for the end of his fit, and the recouery of his health; and thus doth the poore traueller patiently hold out in his weary iourny, whileſt he hopeth for ſweet repoſe at his iourneys end. Wheras when hope vtterly faileth, the ſayler letteth his ſhip roame at the mercy of the wind and weather; the poore man loytereth, preferring eaſie reſt before hopeleſſe labour; the ſicke man is as much tormented with impatiencie, and tyred with toſſing, as with the ſenſe and ſmart of his ſickeneſſe and diſeaſe; and the poore traueller fainteth not more for want of reſt, than for want of hope of attaining the end of his labour. But eſpecially is our patience confirmed by thoſe hopes which reſpect the life to come; for then wee caſt away euery thing that preſſeth downe, and the ſinne that hangeth ſo faſt on, and run with patience the race which is ſet before vs, when wee looke vnto Ieſus the author and finiſher of our Faith, who for the ioy which was ſet before him endured the croſſe, deſpiſed ſhame, and is ſet at the right hand of the throne of God. Then doe we patiently beare all croſſes and troubles, when our faith apprehendeth and our hope expecteth (after our light and momentany afflictions) a farre most excellent and an eternall crowne of glory: becauſe wee count that the afflictions of this preſent time are not worthy the glory which ſhall be ſhewed vnto vs: then doe wee with Moſes refuſe to bee heires of worldly happineſſe, and chuſe rather to ſuffer aduerſity with the people of God, than to enioy the pleaſures of ſinne for a ſeaſon; eſteeming the rebuke of Chriſt greater riches than treaſures of this earthly Egypt, when we hopefully expect the recompence of reward, and that all teares being wiped from our eyes, wee ſhall haue fulneſſe of ioy; and pleaſures at Gods right hand for euermore. Then doe wee patiently endure the miſeries of this life, when in reſpect of future hopes, they are not all able to make vs miſerable: and finally then doe wee with quiet meekeneſſe ſuffer with Dauid long furrowes to bee made on our backes, and ſubmit our ſelues to be euen harrowed with croſſes, and to bee threſhed and winnowed with theſe tentations, when as faith aſſureth vs, that the ſeede of happineſſe is ſowne in the deepe furrowes of affliction, and hope expecteth a fruitfull haruest. Whereas on the other ſide if hope forſake vs, then our patience alſo; and no ſooner doe wee deſpaire of helpe and deliuerance, but perſently wee begin to bewray our impatiency, murmure and repine againſt Gods prouidence, and euen to blaſpheme him to his face, as Satan judged of Iob, out of his owne experience.

2.Cor.4.17. Rom.8.18.

Heb.11.24.25. Apoc.21.4. Pſalm.16.11.

§ Sect.8. Of the fifth peece of ſpirituall armour, which is charity and the true loue of God.

The fifth peece of armour, which wee muſt prepare and put on, to ſtrengthen vs againſt the aſſaults of afflictions and tentations, is charity and the true loue of God, for as this is the oyle which maketh vs nimble and actiue in obedience, and in the workes of godlineſſe; ſo alſo it suppleth and ſoftneth the ſwelling tumors of our corruptions, whereby Chriſts yoke becommeth eaſie and his burthen light, and if this heauenly flame haue illightned and warmed our hearts, it will ſo mitigate and euen extinguiſh the fire of afflictions, that it cannot burne vs, and make it more like a colour or ſhadow, than any ſubſtance or reall quality; or if wee be ſcorched by it, this heauenly and vitall heat will draw out that which is earthly, and ſo take away and eaſe vs of all griefe and torment. For it is the nature of loue to make things ſtrange to become familiar, difficult things eaſie, and cauſeth men both to attempt, and alſo happily to atchieue that which otherwiſe would ſeeme impoſſible. So that if wee loue the Lord, nothing will bee hard vnto vs which he enjoyneth vs, his will and pleaſure will be the rule of our contentment, and whatſoeuer commeth from him for the triall of our loue & obedience, we will take it well at his hands, and beare it not onely with patience, but euen with gladneſſe and reioycing, ſeeing wee haue fit occaſion to approue our loue vnto him by theſe trialls. Againe our loue to God is a notable meanes to worke and increaſe in vs patience in afflictions, becauſe our loue toward him aſſureth vs of his loue towards vs, ſeeing our loue is but ſome ſmall reflection of that heauenly heat, and but a little ſparke of that infinite diuine flame; neither doe wee beginne with him, but wee loue him, becauſe he loueth vs firſt, as the Apoſtle ſpeaketh. Now whoſoeuer is thus aſſured of the loue of God towards him, he may alſo with patience beare thoſe croſſes which come from him, ſeeing they are not the puniſhments of a juſt judge, but the chaſtiſements of a louing Father, in which hee aymeth not at his hurt and deſtruction, but at the bettering of his eſtate, and the euerlaſting ſaluation of his ſoule. Furthermore this loue worketh patience by giuing vs hope and aſſurance of our deliuerance, ſeeing hereby we know, that God taketh no delight in the torments of thoſe that loue him. And therefore when hee hath effected his owne good worke in vs, and hath recouered our ſpirituall health by theſe bitter and vnpleaſant medicines, hee will miniſter them no more vnto vs: but as he can, becauſe his power neuer faileth him; ſo hee will, becauſe his loue neuer faileth vs, deliuer vs in moſt conuenient time out of all our troubles, and in the meane while will be preſent with vs, and ſo ſupport vs with his might, that though we be ſometime foyled, yet we ſhall neuer be ouercome. And theſe bonds of loue, whereby God hath voluntarily tyed himſelfe to helpe and ſuccour vs, he hath further ſtrengthened by the ſtrong and inuiolable cable of his truth, promiſing deliuerance (to thoſe that loue him) out of all their euils and afflictions; Becauſe (ſaith he) he hath loued me therefore will I deliuer him, I will exalt him becauſe he hath knowne my name, he ſhall call vpon me, and I will heare him, I will bee with him in trouble, I will deliuer him and glorifie him, with long life will I ſatisfie him, and ſhew him my ſaluation. Or if in his wiſedome hee thinketh it fit to continue vpon ſuch their croſſes and calamities, yet ſhall they not hurt them, but bee turned to their good. For he hath aſſured vs, that all things (euen troubles and afflictions) ſhall worke together for the beſt vnto them that loue God. Finally ſeeing afflictions are that narrow way, and ſtraight gate which leadeth vs into Gods preſence, and no man can come vnto him, but by the difficult paſſage of trialls and tribulations; therefore loue, deſiring nothing in compariſon of Gods preſence, and fearing nothing ſo much as to be excluded from it, doth make vs not to reſpect the fouleneſſe of the way, by which we are conducted to that faire end of our deſires, and to trauell not onely with patience, but alſo with joy in this vnpleaſant paſſage, ruſhing through thoſe thornes and briars of troubles, which would ſtop and hinder vs, leaping ouer all blockes of difficulties which lye in the way, and running reſolutely through Fire and Water, tortures and torments, thicke and thinne, not caring what wee indure and ſuffer, ſo wee may come vnto God, whom wee ſo deerely loue, and in his fruition haue fulneſſe of joy for euermore. And therefore, if wee would beare with eaſe this cumberſome burthen of afflictions, let vs labour after loue, which will make it light; if wee would not bee weary in trauelling this foule way, let vs chuſe loue to accompany vs in our iourney, and ſo hauing the Lord continually for the object of our ſight, and haſting to enjoy him whom wee ſo dearely loue, wee ſhall not tyre in our trauels, but patiently paſſe all difficulties, and with much joy and comfort come at the length to our iourneyes end.

4.10.19.

91.14,15.

8.28.

th.7.14.

14.22.

§. Sect. 9. Of the ſixth peece of our ſpirituall armour, which is true humilitie.

The ſixth part of our ſpirituall armour is true humility, by which our patience is ſo notably ſtrengthened and confirmed, that we may ſurely conclude, where the one is, there is the other, and where there is a great meaſure of humility, there alſo there is patience in like proportion. An example whereof wee haue in Iob, who as he was a paterne of patience, ſo alſo of humility: for in ſight and ſenſe of his owne baſeneſſe, hee ſaith to corruption, thou art my father, and to the worme, thou art my mother, and my ſiſter. And ſo vile he was in his owne eyes, when he appeared in Gods preſence, that he abhorred himſelfe, and repented in duſt and aſhes: So Dauid who had ſo denyed himſelfe, that he was in his owne ſight a flea, a Partrich on the mountaines, yea, a worme and no man, in his afflictions was armed with like patience, laying his hand vpon his mouth, becauſe God had done it. But aboue all is the example of our Sauiour Chriſt, who as he exceeded all men in humilitie & meekneſſe, ſo alſo in patience; and as being the glorious Sonne of God, equall to his Father, he was content in humility to abaſe himſelfe and to become of no reputation, taking vpon him the ſtate of a ſeruant, and ſubmitting himſelfe in obedience to his Father, to the death, yea the ſhamefull death of the croſſe; ſo being in this affliction, hee as much exceeded all in patience, offering his backe to the

*Iob.*17.14.

*Chap.*42.6.

*Pſal.*39.9.

*Phil.*2.6.7.

the ſmiter, and his cheeke to the nippers, Eſai.50.6.7. and with meekeneſſe ſuffering his face to bee buffeted, his head to bee pricked with thornes, his body to bee whipped, and after crucified, and that when almoſt all ſcorned and derided him, and none pitied him in his miſeries; all which he ſuffered with meekneſſe, and when he was oppreſſed and Eſa.53.7. afflicted, hee opened not his mouth, but was brought as a ſheepe to the ſlaughter, and as a ſheepe before the ſheerer is dumbe, ſo hee opened not his mouth; and as the Apoſtle 1.Pet.2.23. ſpeaketh, when he was reuiled, reuiled not againe; when hee ſuffered, he threatned not, but committed it to him that iudgeth righteouſly. And therefore if wee will learne of Chriſt, and imbrace and imitate his meekneſſe and humilitie, then will wee alſo with patience take his yoke vpon vs. For if wee haue an humble conceite of our ſelues, in reſpect not onely of our vileneſſe and baſeneſſe, but alſo of our corruption and ſinfulneſſe: then will we alwayes conclude, that our condition, though neuer ſo meane and miſerable, is yet better than wee haue deſerued; that if wee had our due, we ſhould ſuffer farre greater puniſhments; and that it Lamen.3.22. is the great mercy of the Lord that we are not vtterly conſumed, as the Church confeſſeth in her greateſt afflictions; and this will make vs not onely with patience, but alſo with thankfulneſſe beare lighter croſſes, when as wee know and acknowledge that we haue juſtly deſerued to haue farre heauier laide vpon vs. Moreouer, if we be thus humbled in our owne eyes, then will wee deny our ſelues and all that is in vs, that God may be all in all; then will we ſubmit our will, which is ſubject to bee miſlead by errour and ignorance, vnto the will of God, and bee contented in all things to be guided and gouerned by his prouidence, becauſe he is infinite in wiſedome, and knoweth what is beſt for vs; infinite in power, and therefore able to effect what his wiſedome ſeeth beſt; and infinite alſo in loue and compaſſion, and therefore alwayes ready to bring good vnto vs out of the greateſt euill. And this is that which the Apoſtle requireth, 1.Pet.4.19. namely, that thoſe who ſuffer according to the will of God, ſhould commit their ſoules to him in well doing, as vnto a faithfull creatour, reſting contented with his good pleaſure, in whatſoeuer eſtate it is his will to place and beſtow them; whether it be proſperity or aduerſity, health or ſickneſſe, plenty or pouerty, honour or diſhonour, life or death.
An example whereof wee haue in Dauid, who in his greateſt extremitie ſubmitted himſelfe to Gods good pleaſure: Here I am 2.Sam.15.26. (ſaith he) let him doe vnto me as ſeemeth good in his eyes. As alſo in juſt Iob, who being ſpoyled of all his great ſubſtance, and brought to extreame pouerty, humbled himſelfe and worſhipped, ſaying, Naked Iob.1.21.
came I out of my mothers wombe, and naked ſhall I returne thither; the Lord hath giuen, and the Lord hath taken away, bleſſed be the name of the Lord. And againe being grieuouſly afflicted with ſores and ſickneſſe, and prouoked to impatiencie by his wiſe, he ſaith vnto her, Thou ſpeakeſt like a fooliſh Iob.2.10.
woman. What, ſhall we receiue good at the hand of God, and ſhall we not receiue euill?
But aboue all, the example of our Sauiour Chriſt is to bee propounded vnto vs for our imitation, who being to ſuffer the curſed and ſhamefull death of the croſſe, and the heauie burthen of Gods wrath due to our ſinnes, which his naturall and humane will moſt feared and abhorred, yet with all humilitie and patience ſubmitteth himſelfe to his Fathers pleaſure; O my father (ſaith he) if it be Mat.26.39 poſſible let this cup paſſe from mee; neuertheleſſe, not as I will, but as thou wilt: and againe, O my Father, if this cup cannot paſſe away from me, but that I muſt drinke it, thy will be done. And if we can thus ſubmit our wills vnto the will of God, and reſigne our bodies, ſoules and ſtates to bee ordered and diſpoſed of according to his good pleaſure, it will exceedingly lighten our burthen, and eaſe our ſmart: whereas if this humilitie be wanting, there will bee nothing but impatiencie, murmuring and repining, fretting and fuming, as though our puniſhment were aboue our fault, and we ſuffered things farre vnworthy of vs. By which meanes the waight of our afflictions is exceedingly aggrauated, for whereas in their owne nature they did onely preſſe vs, now alſo they vex and gaule vs; like the yoke caried by the ſtubburne and refractarie oxe, which by his much ſtruggling fretteth off the skinne, whereas it might bee caried with eaſe and without hurt, if hee would goe quietly, ſubmitting himſelfe to his owners pleaſure.
Finally, this humility whereby wee deny our ſelues, and yeeld in all things vnto Gods good will, is moſt neceſſary for the time of affliction, not onely as a meanes to confirme our patience, whileſt the hand of God is vpon vs, but alſo to free vs from all our croſſes and calamities; for aboue all other ſinnes the Lord like a wiſe Father correcteth in his children their pride and ſtubborneſſe, and although other offences may bee the cauſes mouing him to chaſtize them, yet if with meekneſſe and quietneſſe of Spirit, they ſubmit themſelues in all humility vnder his chaſtizing hand, he will in tender compaſſion Pſal.103.10.
ſpare them, and not deale with them according to their ſinnes, nor reward them according to their iniquities: whereas if they ſhew themſelues ſtubborne and rebellious, proud and impatient, whatſoeuer their faults bee, which were the occaſion of their correction, hee will in this caſe lay on loade and not ſpare, till he haue broken and pulled downe their ſtomacks, brought them vpon their knees, and haue cauſed them to ſubmit themſelues with all humilitie and meekneſſe vnto his good will and pleaſure. Which when hee hath effected, then hee will ſpare vs as a louing Father ſpareth his onely Sonne, and being humbled, he will not only ceaſe correcting vs, but alſo receiue vs into his former fauour, and ſet his face vpon vs for good and not for euill. So the Lord ſaith, .16.17. that he taketh delight to dwell with him, that is of an humble and contrite ſpirit, to reuiue the humble, and to giue life to them that are of a contrite heart, and that when Children are thus broken & humbled, he will not contend with them for euer, nor be alwayes wroth, for ſo the ſpirit ſhould faile before him: but vpon this humiliation hee will be reconciled, exalt them who are thus abaſed, and take them vp in his armes of mercy and compaſſion, who haue caſt themſelues downe, acknowledging their faults, and crauing pardon, as we may ſee in the example of the prodigall Sonne.

Sect. 7.
the ſeah peece of uall ar-
, which is ined rence. And thereby e preſer-ſo aſons.

The ſeauenth part of our Chriſtian Armour, to ſtrengthen vs againſt the aſſaults of affliction, is vnfained repentance for our ſinnes, euen an hearty ſorrow for our ſinnes paſt, in this reſpect, becauſe by them wee haue diſhonoured and diſpleaſed our gracious God and mercifulll Father, a true hatred of them both in regard of their owne vglineſſe, and alſo of the bitter fruites of miſery and affliction which ſpring from them; and a ſtedfaſt purpoſe of heart to leaue and forſake them for the time to come, and to ſerue the Lord in the contrary duties of holineſſe and righteouſneſſe, all the remainder of our liues. For if wee doe thus begin, and often renew our repentance as we renew our ſins, then ſhall we thereby moſt aſſuredly either preuent theſe afflictions, and keep them from falling vpon vs, or be deliuered from them, if already they be impoſed; or finally beare them with ſuch patience and comfort, that they ſhall be vnto vs not only harmeleſſe, but euen good & profitable. Concerning the firſt, the Lord giueth vs a generall rule for the expounding of all his threatnings, that they are alwayes to be vnderſtood vpon the condition of impenitency, and our perſeuerance in ſinne; namely that if wee goe forward in our wickedneſſe, and will not be reclaimed by theſe threats, then the judgements threatned ſhall ſurely be inflicted; but if wee forſake our ſinne, and turne vnto the Lord by vnfained repentance, then this obligation of threatning, binding vs to ſatisfie Gods juſtice by ſuffering puniſhment, is made voide and cancelled. So alſo the ſame rule is giuen for the expounding of Gods promiſes, namely, that if we continue to feare and ſerue him, they ſhall bee made good vnto vs; but if like wandering Planets, wee retrograde in the wayes of godlineſſe, and ſlide backe into our former courſe of wickedneſſe, then alſo this bond aſſuring vs of Gods bleſſings, is made fruſtrate and of no vertue vnto vs, becauſe the condition thereof is not obſerued. Of this the Prophet Ionas ſeemeth to haue beene forgetfull, which maketh him ſo much out of patience, becauſe Niniueh was not deſtroyed, according to the outward letter of his threatning; whereas Gods truth and their preſeruation and deliuerance, might well ſtand both together, ſeeing this threatning was not abſolute but conditionall, and they made it voide by their publicke and ſolemne humiliation and repentance. But the Lord plainely expreſſeth it by his Prophet Ier.18.7.8.9. Ieremie: I will (ſaith he) ſpeake ſuddenly againſt a nation, or againſt a Kingdome to plucke it vp, and to roote it out, and to deſtroy it: but if this nation againſt whom I haue pronounced turne from their wickedneſſe, I will repent of the plague, that I thought to bring vpon them. And I will ſpeake ſuddenly concerning a Nation, and concerning a Kingdome, to build it, and to plant it; but if it doe euill in my ſight, and heare not my voyce, I will repent of the good that I thought to doe for them. And hereupon hee calleth the people of the Iewes to repentance, that ſo they might eſcape his judgments in the ſame place threatned againſt them. Speake thou therefore (ſaith he) Verſ.11. vnto the men of Iudah, and to the inhabitants of Ieruſalem, ſaying, thus ſaith the Lord, Behold, I prepare a plague for you, and purpoſe a thing againſt you: returne you therfore euery one from his euill way, and make your wayes and your workes good. So elſewhere to the ſame purpoſe: Breake vp (ſaith he) your fallow ground, and ſowe not Ier.4.4. among thornes, be circumciſed to the Lord, and take away the fore-skin of your hearts, yee men of Iudah and inhabitants of Ieruſalem, leſt my wrath come forth like fire, and burne that none can quench it, becauſe of the wickedneſſe of your inuentions. And againe: Goe and cry theſe words towards the North, Chap.26.13. and ſay, thou diſobedient Iſraell returne, ſaith the Lord, and I will not let my wrath fall vpon you; &c. And in another place: Now therefore amend your wayes, and your workes, and heare the voyce of the Lord your God, that the Lord may repent him of the plague, that he hath pronounced againſt you. So when by a dreame the Lord had threatned againſt Nebuchadnezar a fearefull judgement for his Idolatry, pride and cruelty; the Prophet Daniel counſaileth Dan.4.24. him, to breake off his ſinnes by righteouſneſſe, and his iniquities by mercy towards the poore, that this might be an healing of his errour. Yea ſo powerfully doth our repentance

tance preuaile with God, for the with-holding of his threatned puniſhments, that euen after ſentence of condemnation is pronounced, execution begun, and Gods meſſengers and ſerjants are ſent out already for the attaching of ſinners with his judgements; thoſe who haue vnfainedly repented of their ſins, haue a protection from God, and being intertained for his ſeruants, and made knowne ſo to be, by his liuery and cognizance, are priuiledged from this generall arreſt, and exempted from hauing any part in theſe common calamities. So the Lord intending to bring deſtruction vpon the inhabitants of Ieruſalem, commandeth his Angell to goe through the middeſt of the Citie, euen through the middeſt of Ieruſalem, and to ſet a marke vpon the foreheads of them, that mourned and cried out for all the abominations that be done in the middeſt thereof. And to the other Angels, the Miniſters of his wrath and vengeance he ſaid, Goe after him through the Citie and ſmite; let your eye ſpare none, neither haue pittie: deſtroy vtterly the old and the young, the maids, and the children, and the women, but touch no man vpon whom is the marke, and beginne at my Sanctuary.

Ezech. 9.4,5,6.

Sect. 11. That repentance is a notable meanes, whereby wee may be freed out of afflictions.

By all which it appeareth, that vnfained repentance is a notable meanes for the preuenting of Gods judgements, and the eſcaping of thoſe afflictions, which our ſins haue deſeruedly drawne vpon vs. Whereas if wee continue in impenitency, we ſhall inflame Gods wrath againſt vs; if wee be not offended with our ſelues for our ſinnes, wee ſhall make God offended with vs, if wee will not judge our ſelues, wee ſhall not eſcape Gods judgements; if we doe not in ſorrow and humilitie lay them open by confeſſion before God; the Lord will lay open our ſhame by our fearefull puniſhments before men. And finally, if we doe not by vnfained repentance take vpon our ſelues an holy reuenge, that God may be glorified; Gods anger will wax hot, and hee will glorifie his owne name by manifeſting his juſtice in our confuſion. For ſinne deſerueth anger and judgement, and anger and judgement it wil haue, either from our ſelues, or elſe from God; neither need we to feare that wee ſhall haue them from both, ſeeing our condemning and puniſhing of our ſelues, by vnfained ſorrow for our offences, doth make vs ſtand abſolued and acquitted before the Tribunall of Gods judgement. But as repentance is a preſeruatiue to keepe vs from the tainture and infection of miſeries: ſo being falne into them, it is a ſingular Antidote to expell this poyſon, and a reſtoratiue to recouer vs vnto our former eſtate and condition. And as the Lord is ready vpon our true repentance to pull backe his judgements, when they are ready to ſeize vpon vs; ſo being plunged into them, he is as ready to pull vs from them, as them from vs, if now at the laſt with penitent and contrite hearts we humble our ſelues before him, imploring mercy and forgiueneſſe. For as the Lord is ſlow to anger, ſo when he is prouoked, he will not alwayes chide, nor keepe his anger for euer. And of this we haue continuall experience in the people of Iſrael in the time of the Iudges and Kings, who no ſooner repented of their ſinnes, but the Lord preſently forgaue them, and eaſed them of their afflictions. And our Sauiour hath left a perpetuall preſident of it in the prodigall ſonne, whom his father vpon his conuerſion and humiliation receiued into his fauour, comforted him in his diſtreſſe, & releeued al his wants. With theſe examples agree plaine places of Scripture: for thus the Lord inuiteth his people of the Iewes vnto repentance, that hee might deliuer them out of all their calamities, into which they were plunged by reaſon of their ſinnes. O yee diſobedient children (ſaith he) returne and I will heale your rebellions. So by the Prophet Ezechiel he willeth the people to returne from their tranſgreſſions, that ſo iniquitie might not be their deſtruction, proteſting vnto them, that he deſired not the death of him that dyeth, but rather that they ſhould returne and liue. And when as the people thought it too late to returne, becauſe not onely the ſentence was paſſed out of Gods mouth, whereby they were adjudged to puniſhment, but execution alſo was already begun; for ſo they ſay, If our tranſgreſſions and our ſinnes be vpon vs, and we are conſumed becauſe of them, how ſhould we then liue? The Lord returneth this comfortable anſwere by the Prophet: Say vnto them, as I liue, ſaith the Lord God, I deſire not the death of the wicked, but that he turn from his way & liue. Turn you, turn you from your euil wayes, for why wil ye die, O ye houſe of Iſrael? And as this wel becommeth the infinite mercy and goodnes of God, ſo it alſo agreeth with the rule of reaſon, that where the cauſe is taken away, there the effect alſo muſt needs ceaſe. For our ſinnes are the cauſes of our afflictions, as appeareth by the words of the Apoſtle; where hauing ſhewed how the Corinthians ſinned in vnworthy receiuing of the Sacrament, hee addeth, for this cauſe many are weake, and ſicke among you, and many ſleepe. And ſo the continuing and multiplying of our ſinnes, is the cauſe which moueth the Lord to continue and multiply our afflictions; for if notwithſtanding his more gentle chaſtizements we will not obey him, but walke againſt him ſtubbornly, then (as he hath threatned) hee will walke ſtubbornly in his anger againſt vs, and will alſo chaſtiſe vs ſeauen times more according to our ſinnes; for when he hath begun, he alſo will make an end, either for our conuerſion and reformation, or our confuſion and deſtruction, as he ſaith to Eli. Whence we may inferre that as ſinne is the cauſe which moueth the Lord to inflict and Pſal. 103, 8, 9. Ier. 3, 12.

Luke 15.

Ier. 3, 22.

Ezech. 18, 30, 31.

Ezech. 33, 10.

1. Cor. 11, 30.

Leuit. 26, 23, 24. 1. Sam. 3, 12.

and continue his corrections vpon vs, ſo the leauing and forſaking of theſe ſinnes will moue him to pardon vs & grant deliuerance.

Sect. 12. … repen- … bringeth … vs ſingu- … & com- … if we ſtill … vnder … Croſſe.

And thus doth repentance vſually through the infinite mercy of God, free and deliuer vs from thoſe afflictions and miſeries, into which ſinne plungeth vs: But if the Lord for his owne glory, our triall, and the exerciſe and increaſe of his graces in vs, doth after our true repentance, ſuffer ſtill the croſſe to lie vpon vs; yet are wee ſo eaſed and ſtrengthened hereby, that we beare his chaſtizements not onely with patience and peace, but alſo with joy and comfort. For then we are ready to ſinke vnder our burthen, when vnto the waight of our afflictions is added the intolerable waight of ſinne, and of the wrath of God which doth accompany it; and then we faint vnder the eaſieſt load, when wee are weakened with ſelfe-guiltineſſe, and conſider that the ſins which we nouriſh in our boſomes and are loath to leaue, are the cauſes of all our miſeries. But when we haue caſt away euery thing that preſſeth downe, and the ſinne that hangeth faſt on, when wee haue vnburthened our ſelues of our owne load, & beare onely that which God hath impoſed, then ſhall we truly find that our afflictions are but light, as the Apoſtle ſpeaketh, and that when we are moſt preſſed with them, we may euen runne with patience the race which is ſet before vs. Now repentance doth take away all our ſinne, not by merit, but through Gods mercy and his gracious and free promiſes made vnto it; and maketh vs to appeare innocent, as though theſe ſinnes had beene neuer committed by vs; and conſequently it plucketh out of our afflictions the ſting of ſinne, and of Gods anger due vnto it, it maketh them to become harmeleſſe vnto vs, ſo that like the Serpent without a ſting, they may feare vs with their hiſſing, but cannot hurt vs with their biting: Neither (as one ſaith) can aduerſitie harme vs, if iniquitie like a Tyrant doe not reigne ouer vs. For if we haue truly repented vs of our ſinnes, then are we aſſured by Gods infallible truth, that they are pardoned and quite blotted out of his remembrance; that we are now reconciled vnto him, and of enemies, are become ſeruants and children; that now there is not onely peace betweene vs, but euen loue and amity; and that therefore the afflictions we beare, are not the fruits of enmity and wrath for our deſtruction, but trials, whereby our gracious Father prooueth and approueth our loue and obedience; and whereby our Captaine and great Commander trieth our valour, our skill in the Chriſtian Warfare, and the goodneſſe of thoſe ſpirituall weapons and armour, wherewith he hath fitted vs againſt the day of battle. From which aſſurance of peace and amity with God, ariſeth peace of conſcience, which doth exceedingly comfort and ſtrengthen vs in all afflictions, pouerty and impriſonment, griefes and ſickneſſes; yea euen in the agony of death it ſelfe, as our Sauiour implyeth in that ſpeech to the ſicke of the Palſie; Sonne, be of good comfort, for thy ſins are forgiuen thee. Finally, this peace with God, and peace of conſcience, which followeth true repentance, is alſo accompanied with joy in the Holy Ghoſt, whereby we rejoyce in Gods mercy and the aſſurance of our ſaluation, not onely in proſperitie, but alſo in aduerſity and tribulation, as the Apoſtle ſpeaketh. The conſideration whereof ſhould make vs earneſtly indeuour and labour in the practice of repentance; and not to be diſcouraged with the preſent bitternes and vnpleaſantneſſe which we feele in it; ſeeing wee ſhall find, that (as one ſaith) theſe teares are full of joy, and this mourning the matter of our mirth; and therefore let vs grieue with this griefe which is the mother of rejoycing, and not rejoyce with that joy which is the parent of heauines; let vs poure out theſe teares which are the ſeeds of pleaſure, & not laugh with that laughter, which ſhall end in wailing and gnaſhing of teeth; let vs (as the Apoſtle ſpeaketh) repent with that repentance which is neuer to be repented of, and not imbrace the joyes of the impenitent, which ſhall be accompanied with eternall ſorrow and lamentation. And becauſe we haue it not at our owne becke, let vs beg it of God, & ſeeing in our corrections we behaue our ſelues like vntamed bullocks, which are not hurt ſo much with the waight of the yoke, as with their owne ſtrugling and impatience, let vs pray earneſtly with the Church: Conuert thou me, and I ſhall be conuerted, for thou art the Lord my God.

Math.9.2.

Rom.5.3.

Huiuſmodi lachrymæ multâ ſunt plenæ lætitiâ, huiuſmodi luctus lætitiæ materia, &c. Chryſoſt. hom. ad pop. 66.

Ier.31.18.

§. Sect. 13. Of the eighth peece of our ſpirituall armour, which is a good conſcience.

The laſt part of armour which wee muſt prouide and put on, is a good conſcience, by which the heart is defended againſt the aſſaults of affliction; ſo that though the outward parts (as it were) the vtmoſt ſconces and forts, bee battered and beaten downe with croſſes and calamities, yet ſo long as this Bulwarke remayneth ſound and ſtrong, it will ſo defend the caſtle of the heart, that it will neuer be ſurprized and ſacked, nor be cowardly yeelded vp vnto our ſpirituall enemies. And this good conſcience the Apoſtle requireth in thoſe who wil profeſſe the faith of Chriſt, and ſuffer for their profeſſion; becauſe (as hee addeth) it is better if the will of God be ſo: that we ſuffer for well doing than for euill doing. Now that wee may obtaine this, there is required not onely that wee labour to keepe our conſcience cleere towards men, by leading a ſpotleſſe and vnblameable life, but alſo towards God, by doing all good duties in ſimplicity & ſincerity of heart; and that as much as in vs lieth wee nouriſh in vs innocencie, & be faultles & vnrebukeable; as alſo that we adorn our ſoules & bodies with all vertue and pietie; for this is the chiefe meanes of getting and retaining a good conſcience, when as wee keepe it cleere and vnſpotted of ſinne. But if through frailtie and infirmitie, wee haue defiled our conſciences with the filth of ſinne and wickedneſſe, then in the next place wee muſt labour to purge and cleanſe them, waſhing out theſe ſpots and ſtaines with the precious bloud of Chriſt applyed by faith, and by the teares of vnfained repentance, iſſuing from the fountaine of a contrite heart; for by faith out ſinnes are not imputed vnto vs, and by repentance (as I haue ſaid) they are ſo done away, and quite blotted out of Gods remembrance, as if they had neuer beene committed by vs.

2.Pet.3.16,17.

Acts 24.16.

Vacare culpa in calamitatibus maximum eſt ſolatium, Crantor apud Plutarch. de conſol. ad Apollonium.
Chryſoſt. ad pop. Antioch. Homil. 25.

And this is the meanes to get and preſerue a good conſcience, which when we haue attained vnto, it will ſerue as a brazen wall againſt all the aſſaults of affliction, and ſo ſtrengthen and confirme our patience; that we ſhal not ſinke nor faint in the greateſt troubles; neither can (as one ſaith) tribulation, treachery & treaſon, nor any thing elſe, deject and caſt downe a godly minde thus armed and defended. But as a ſparke or fiery cole falling into water, is preſently extinguiſhed: ſo the heate and exceſſe of all ſorrow and griefe is cooled and quenched, when it befalleth him, who hath a good conſcience. And therfore if we would haue patience in the time of trouble and affliction, let vs keepe our conſciences cleere and vnſpotted from ſinne, and adorne our ſelues with all grace and godlineſſe, for other vertues and patience are inſeparable companions, which alwayes accompany the one the other; and therefore the Apoſtle linketh them together;

2. Pet. 1. 6.

Ioyne (ſaith hee) vertue with your faith, and with vertue knowledge, and with knowledge temperance, and with temperance patience, and with patience godlineſſe, &c. For if we haue our ſoules adorned with theſe vertues and graces, and bring forth the fruits of new obedience, it is a notable means to confirme our faith and hope in God for helpe and deliuerance, according to that;

Hoſea 12. 6.

turne thou to thy God, keep mercie and iudgement, and hope ſtill in thy God; and being aſſured hereof, wee doe with patience waite Gods leiſure for the accompliſhment of his promiſes. And this appeareth in the examples of Gods Saints;

Iob 31.

for thus doth Iob in his greateſt extremitie comfort himſelfe, and ſtrengthen his patience, by calling to minde his diligence and vprightneſſe of heart in the ſeruice of God; which Sathan knew well enough, and therefore ſought to diſarme him of this helpe, and to plucke from him this ſtay of his patience, whileſt he vſed his wife and three friends as his inſtruments, to conuince him of hypocriſie and impietie againſt God. And thus doth Ezechias comfort himſelfe & ſtrengthen his faith, hope, and patience, by calling to minde his integrity of heart in Gods ſeruice;

Eſay 38. 3.

I beſeech thee O Lord (ſaith he) remember now, how I haue walked before thee in truth, and with a perfect heart, and haue done that which was good in thy ſight. And ſo Dauid doth vſually comfort himſelf, and confirme his patience, by remembring his innocency, and ſincerity in the performance of all good duties both towards God and his Neighbours, as appeareth in many places of the Pſalmes. But contrariwiſe where the conſcience is defiled and ſtained with ſin; there is nothing but impatiency, murmuring and repining, becauſe ſelfe-guiltines maketh them that are afflicted to conceiue of God as of their enemy, and that the miſeries they ſuffer, are the puniſhments of a reuenging Iudge, and not the chaſtizements of a louing Father. So that an euill conſcience maketh the ſmalleſt and lighteſt afflictions great and intolerable; becauſe it ſelfe being moſt heauy and burthenſome, doth adde exceeding waight to this loade of the croſſe, preſſing the bearer down like water in leaden veſſels, which would be carried with eaſe in leather or wood.

Inter om tribulation humanæ nullaſt quam con tia delict
&c. Aug
rat. in P
Tom.

To this purpoſe (one ſaith) that among all tribulations and humane griefes, there is none greater than a conſcience burthened with ſin; for if a man be not wounded in conſcience, but whole and ſound within when he ſuffereth any outward affliction; he will flie thither, and there he wil find his God; but if there be no peace there, becauſe God will not be where iniquitie aboundeth, what ſhall a man then doe, and whether ſhal he flie when he ſuffereth tribulation, ſeeing whitherſoeuer he goeth, this enemy will purſue & torment him? In which reſpect hee compareth in the ſame place an euill conſcience to a piece of wood rotten at the heart, which though it may make a faire ſhew on the outſide whileſt it is vntouched and vntryed, yet if it be put into the building, it indureth not when it beareth any waight; or if it bee touched with the axe or wedge, it eaſily flyeth into fitters, and diſcouereth its inward rottenneſſe; wheras a good conſcience which maketh outwardly no great ſhew nor flouriſh, is like a piece of timber, which though it be rotten on the out ſide in the ſappy parts, yet is ſound at the heart, and appeareth better the more it is tried, and ſtrongly beareth the greateſt waight that lieth vpon it. Let this therefore bee our care, that hauing our conſciences cleere we doe not ſuffer as euill doers, but let vs either retaine our innocency whileſt wee haue it, or regaine it, when we haue loſt it, by true repentance; for a good conſcience bringeth comfort, and comfort patience in afflictions; whereas there can be no conſolation where there is guiltines of ill deſeruing, and without comfort nothing but impatiency, ſhame and horror of mind, as the Apoſtle implyeth, where hee exhorteth that none of the faithfull ſuffer as a murtherer, or as a thiefe, or an euill doer, or as a buſie bodie in other mens matters; but that if any ſuffered as a Chriſtian, hee ſhould not be aſhamed but glorifie God in this behalfe. Or though men could ſhew patience in their ſufferings for their faults, it were not worthy commendations, neither is it much to be reſpected what is ſuffered, but who it is, and for what hee ſuffereth. And this the Apoſtle elſe-where ſheweth This (ſaith he) is thankesworthy if a man for conſcience towards God, indure griefe, ſuffering wrongfully: For what prayſe is it, if when yee be buffeted for your faults ye take it patiently? but if when you doe well, you ſuffer wrong, and take it patiently, this is acceptable vnto God, as appeareth in the example of Chriſt, who being moſt innocent, was alſo moſt patient, not reuiling when hee was reuiled, nor threatning when he ſuffered, but committing all to him who iudgeth righteouſly. And with the Apoſtle accordeth a worthy Father, ſaying: that the patience of theſe men who ſuffer in a bad cauſe, and for their demerits, is rather to be admired than commended; yea, in truth neither to be admired nor commended, becauſe it is no true patience at all; rather their ſtupid ſenſleſnes is to be admired; but that they haue any true patience, it is vtterly to be denied: neither is there heere any thing which deſerueth to be commended, nor profitably to bee imitated and inforced; yea, much more juſtly may we judge ſuch a minde worthy greater puniſhment, being vicious and wicked, by how much the more it hateth the inſtrument and meanes of reclayming it to vertue. And againe he affirmeth, that patience is the companion of true wiſdome, and not the ſlaue of luſt and concupiſcence, the friend of a good conſcience, and not the enemy of innocency. And therefore when you ſee a man ſuffer any thing with courage and quietneſſe, doe not forthwith commend his patience, which nothing ſheweth and approueth, but onely the cauſe of ſuffering; for then onely our patience is true when our cauſe is good, and diſcerned from that which is falſe and counterfait, when it is not defiled with the corruption of concupiſcence, &c.

Chap. V.

Of the rules and cautions, which are to be obſerued in our preparation vnto the conflict with afflictions.

ANd thus much concerning the ſpirituall armour of Gods graces: Now we are to ſpeake of the rules and cautions, which are to bee learned and obſerued, for the well managing of our ſpirituall weapons, and the better demeaning of our ſelues in this conflict of tentations, that thereby our patience may bee confirmed, and we inabled to endure the encounter of afflictions with aſſured hope of a triumphant victory. And firſt wee muſt before the day of battel, carefully and diligently vſe all good meanes ordained by God, for the furniſhing of our ſoules with all thoſe ſauing graces before ſpoken of, which are that ſpirituall armour of proofe, whereby we are defended againſt the aſſaults of afflictions. And chiefly and principally wee muſt heare, meditate, and ſtudy in the Word of God with all diligence, as being an eſpecial means to comfort and vphold vs in all our troubles and trials, without the helpe whereof, it is not poſſible for vs to ſtand in the day of tentation. And this Dauid found by his owne experience, expreſly concluding, that except Gods Law had beene his delight, hee ſhould haue periſhed in his affliction: Pſal. 119. 92. for the Word of God is the Sword of the Spirit, whereby we defend our ſelues, repell all the fury of our ſpirituall enemies, and obtaine victory ouer them in the day of battaile; it is our ſoules armorie, wherein are ſtored all our weapons and munition, which we muſt vſe in this ſpirituall conflict; it is our light to guide vs in this hard paſſage; our thred to lead vs out of this labyrinth of troubles; our Card and Compaſſe to direct in this Sea of miſeries vnto the happy Hauen of our eternall reſt. In it alone is contained the Art of our Chriſtian Warfare, and the ſumme of our Military Diſcipline, which inſtructeth vs how wee muſt order our forces, and how wee muſt march, when wee muſt aſſault the enemy, and when we muſt decline & auoid his force and fury. It is our Captaine, both to conduct and aſſiſt vs in this fight of tentations, and our chiefe encourager in bearing the brunt of the battell, whileſt it offereth vnto vs the wages of our Warfare, and holdeth out the Crowne of victory to thoſe, who valiantly outcome: it is the food by which wee are nouriſhed, ſtrengthened and made hearty to indure the encounter, and whereby we are refreſhed and cheared when wee are faint and weary; it is our Second and ſuccour, which rayſeth vs when wee are falne and foyled; yea, and (as Dauid ſaith of it) Pſal. 119. 25, 50. our quickener and reuiuer, when wee are wounded to death; Verſe 143. it is our ioy in all ſorrowes, and our delight not only when wee liue in all wordly proſperity, but (as hee alſo ſpeaketh) when trouble and anguiſh are come vpon vs; and that refreſhing hony, which if we taſte by a liuely faith, wee ſhall thereby be inabled to beare all aſſaults, and haue our ſtrength renewed not onely to withſtand, but alſo to purſue the enemies of our ſaluation. Finally, it is our chiefe Comforter in all our miſeries and afflictions, as Dauid found by good experience, whileſt it teacheth vs, that all our croſſes and calamities doe come from God, as the chaſtizements of a gracious Father, and are ſo ordered and diſpoſed by his wiſe and powerfull prouidence, that they ſhall all tend to our ſpirituall good, the inriching of our ſoules in this life with all ſauing graces, and the furthering and increaſing of our heauenly happineſſe in the life to come.

§. Sect.2. The ſecond rule is, that we be frequent and feruent in prayer.

A ſecond and moſt eſpeciall meanes, which wee muſt diligently vſe, that wee may bee ſtrengthened againſt the day of affliction, is frequent and feruent prayer, euen an humble confeſſion of ſin, and an acknowledgment, that all Gods fearefull plagues and puniſhments are deſeruedly due vnto vs, a deſire of pardon in and for Ieſus Chriſt, and deprecation of thoſe puniſhments, which by our ſinnes wee haue deſerued; or finally, if it pleaſe the Lord either for our triall, or chaſtizement, to lay affliction and the croſſe vpon vs, that then it will alſo pleaſe him ſo to arme vs with faith, patience, and all other ſanctifying and ſauing graces, that wee may with meekneſſe and comfort, beare whatſoeuer he ſhall lay vpon vs; come more pure and approued out of this fiery furnace; finde our ſelues bettered and amended, more ſtrengthened in grace and all goodnes, & brought neerer vnto God, both in reſpect of the illumination of our minds, and the reformation of all our courſes in our liues and conuerſations. For if wee thus humbly and penitently acknowledge and confeſſe our ſinnes, and earneſtly endeuour to leaue & forſake them, we ſhall haue mercy, & find the Lord faithfull to forgiue them. If we thus lay them open, the Lord is ready to couer them, if wee condemne and adiudge our ſelues to puniſhment, he will be ready to abſolue and acquit vs, if with the Prodigall wee proſtrate our ſelues at his feet, as not worthy to behold his face, hee will imbrace vs with the armes of pitty and compaſſion; & if we confeſſe in regard of our demerits, that the place of a ſeruant is too good for vs, he will receiue vs into the place of Sonnes, pardon all that is paſt, and not thinke the beſt things hee hath too deare for vs. And as vpon our humble confeſſion, hee will bee ready to take away the guilt of ſinne, ſo alſo he will free vs from the puniſhment; and if at all hee afflict vs, our croſſes ſhall bee chaſtiſements, and fatherly corrections, which he will inable vs to beare, and turne to our good, which being effected, he will be intreated by our feruent Prayers, to free and deliuer vs out of all our calamities, to wipe all teares from our eyes, and to reſtore vs to our wonted fruition of his gracious benefits, as in many places of the holy Scriptures, hee hath promiſed vnto vs. The which alſo we ſee verified in the example of Dauid, who by his faithfull and feruent Prayers was often freed from apparent dangers, ſo as they did not touch him; and was often by the ſame meanes deliuered out of his afflictions, when for his ſins he was ouertaken by them; as alſo in the people of Iſrael, who confeſſing their ſins, and crauing pardon and deliuerance out of their affliction, were heard of God, and had their ſuites granted. And the like might be ſaid of Iob, Ionas, Daniel, Eſdra, Nehemiah, Manaſſes, and many others. If therefore we would be prepared againſt the day of afflictions, ſo as we may either eſcape and auoid them, or withſtand and ouercome them, we muſt exerciſe our ſelues in effectuall Prayer. For this is the Horſemen and Chariots of Iſrael, which calleth more and ſtronger forces to our aide, than all our enemies that ſtand againſt vs; this is the pillar of our ſtrength, whereby we, who are ſo weake and ruinous, that we are ready to ſinke and fall, when the leaſt ſtorme of aduerſitie bloweth againſt vs, or the lighteſt waight of affliction lyeth vpon vs, are vpheld and ſtand faſt in faith and patience in the greateſt tempeſts of troubles, and vnder the mountainous waight of the greateſt calamities. This is the hand of our ſoules, to reach out and receiue grace and ſtrength from God, whereby we are ſupported and kept from fainting in our moſt grieuous afflictions; and finally, our Hammer, by which knocking at the gates of Gods mercy in our miſeries and extremities, wee haue legions of Angels ſent to comfort vs in all our croſſes, and to deliuer vs out of all our troubles.

Prou.18.13.
1.Iohn 1.9.

Luke 15.

Math.7.7.
Pſal.50.15.

Iudg.1

§.Se
The thi is that proſpe labour moder mortify our aff

The third rule is, that in the time of our proſperity, we labour diligently in the moderating and mortifying of our inordinate affections and vnruly paſſions, that wee may bring them into ſubjection vnto the good wil of God, and make them ſeruiceable vnto holy reaſon. For whileſt they thus hold their place, and yeeld obedience to them, vnto whom God and Nature hath made them inferiour and ſubordinate, there will bee in all eſtates peace, quietneſſe, and good order: whereas if theſe ſlauiſh ſeruants ride on horſebacke, and make reaſon and religion, which are their lawfull Soueraignes to goe on foot; if they ſit on the Throne, and theſe on the footſtoole; if they (like common people) vſurpe gouernment ouer the other, which ſhould be their Princes and Commanders; and like tyrannicall Vſurpers, rule when they ſhould obey, then will this Anarchie yeeld nothing but rude diſorder & tumultuous confuſion; making men in the time of proſperity to commit Rapes and Riots, Inſolences and Outrages, Iniuſtice, Violence and Oppreſſion; and in the time of aduerſity and affliction, to fall into impatiency and clamorous complayning, mutinous murmuring and trayterous rebellion, and ſo to become ready inſtruments of committing any wickedneſſe, which paſſion (like popular rage) doth prompt and ſuggeſt, if it offer the leaſt hope of helping them out of miſerie. More particularly, if wee would haue ſtrength and patience in the time of affliction, we muſt before the time of tryall ſubdue and moderate the paſſion of feare, which doth much aggrauate the waight of miſery, and is often times more burthenſome and intolerable than the euill ſuffered, both becauſe it doth diſarme and weaken the minde of reſolution, and doth anticipate and ſeaze vpon griefes before they come; yea oftentimes on thoſe which are onely fained in the imagination, and neuer in truth happen vnto vs. So alſo we muſt in the time of our proſperity limit and confine our vnlimited hopes, for the further they are extended and inlarged, the more are wee deiected when they faile vs; the higher they lift vs vp the more grieuouſly are wee cruſhed, when they forſake and caſt vs off; and commonly where there hath beene no bounds for our expectations, there will be no meaſure in impatiency and griefe, when things much deſired and expected anſwere not our hopes, ſeeing men vſually take it as heauily to haue the contract of hope betweene their hearts and the things they loue, made fruſtrate and diſanulled, as to be diuorced and ſeparated from them after their fruition. The like alſo may be ſaid of our concupiſcence and deſires, which if they bee not moderated according to the neceſſity of nature, but left at libertie to their owne inordinate luſting after ſuperfluities and things vnneceſſary, they will ſet vs on the racke of diſcontent, when they are not ſatisfied, making leſſer comforts great croſſes; & the lighteſt afflictions intolerable burthens. And thus he who immoderatly deſireth great riches, is not only impatient of the leaſt loſſe, but alſo of ſmall gaines, becauſe they doe not anſwere his greedy deſires; he who exceſſiuely affecteth vaine glory and popular applauſe, is as much tormented in his minde for receiuing too ſmall commendations, as another would be in the greateſt diſgrace. And thus he who ſetteth his minde too much vpon worldly delights, afflicteth his tender and effeminate heart, when he ſuſtaineth the lighteſt croſſe; yea if either his pleaſures faile him altogether, or continue not in that manner, meaſure and degree, which hee inordinatly fancieth and deſireth. Thus alſo muſt we in the time of our proſperity, exerciſe our ſelues in moderating and mortifying of our vnbridled and raſh anger; for it a man be froward and cholericke, when he is in all his deſires ſoothed and pleaſed, what is to be expected but that he will be ſtarke mad with fury, when he is croſſed and thwarted? If he be peuiſh and fretfull when he is made proſperities wanton, and the worlds darling; what patience is to looked for, when he lyes groning vnder the croſſe, forſaken of his friends, and ſcorned by his enemies? So we muſt labour to mortifie diſcontent, and in all things to ſubmit our wills to Gods good pleaſure. For he who out of melancholicke wantonneſſe is diſcontented with plentie; how can hee with patience indure want and penury? He who is not well pleaſed in the fruition of thoſe great benefits of health and ſtrength, pleaſures and liberty; how vnſauourie and ill reliſhing will ſickneſſe and weakneſſe, paine and impriſonment, be to his dainty palate? He who cannot be contented, when he enjoyeth all that he can almoſt wiſh and deſire; how impatient is he like to ſhew himſelfe, when he hath plenty of nothing but wants and grieuances, and how ſenſible will he be of ſmart and miſerie? So likewiſe wee muſt ſubdue our pride, haughtineſſe of Spirit, and the fruit thereof ſwelling emulation, wherby men ſtudy and labour to match their ſuperiours, and excell their equals. For pride is the very nurſe of impatiency, making men to fret and rage, murmure and repine, when they ſuffer thoſe things, which in their proud conceit they think vnworthy of them; to grind their teeth with diſdaine, when they are forced to ſtoope vnder the croſſe; and to gaule their neckes, whileſt they are conſtrained to beare the yoke of affliction, more with their impatiencie and ſtrugling, than with the waight of the burthen which lyeth vpon them. So alſo it maketh the ſhame of their aduerſity more intolerable than the ſmart; and whileſt they could with ſome patience beare their miſeries, if they were onely miſerable to themſelues, they are altogether impatient, becauſe they are knowne to beare them. So alſo emulation in proſperity doth much aggrauate mens ſorrowes in the time of affliction, when as thoſe triumph ouer them, whom they haue emulated; and they diſdaine them, whom formerly they haue diſdained. Neither doth it more trouble men to haue gone backward in the iourney of their deſires, than that they haue beene out-ſtripped by them, with whom they haue contended; nor to be miſerable in their owne ſenſe and feeling, than to be ſo in the ſight of the others proſperity and happineſſe. Finally we muſt labour in our proſperity, to moderate and keepe vnder thoſe contrary paſſions of ſorrow and joy; for he who will weepe, when (as it were) he but looketh vpon the whippe, will howle and cry out when he feeleth it; he who will mourne when he hath no cauſe, will be mad with griefe, when the waight of affliction lyeth heauy vpon him. And ſo hee, who immoderatly reioyceth in his proſperity commonly immoderatly ſorroweth in the time of aduerſity; hee who exulteth with joy, becauſe the

1.Cor.7.31.

2.Cor.6.8.9.

World ſmileth on him, is vſually as much dejected with griefe when it lowreth and frowneth. Whereas thoſe who with the Apoſtle vſe the things of this life, as though they vſed them not, they can alſo with him abound and want, beare with patience euill report, rejoyce in their ſorrowes, liue in dying, and hauing nothing, poſſeſſe all things. Thoſe who doe not ſwell with proſperity, are not broken with aduerſitie; and the minde which is ſo ſolid and conſtant, that it is not much raiſed aboue its ordinary pitch with worldly felicity, cannot be much depreſſed and abaſed with the waight of worldly miſery and affliction.

§. Sect.4.
The fourth rule is, that we muſt not faine vnto our ſelues afflictions in our conceit and imagination.
Solum vbi neceſſitas cogit infortunatè agas; non autem plura propter imperitiam infortunia tibi adſciſcas. Diphili in Adelph. apud Stobæ.
Nihil admodum atrox paſſus es niſi id tu tibi fingis. Menand. apud. Plutarch de tranquil. animi.

The fourth rule is, that we doe not faine afflictions vnto our ſelues, in our conceit and imagination, nor lay croſſes vpon our owne ſhoulders by a falſe opinion, when as God layeth none vpon vs, giuing vnto accidents that befall vs by our impatient apprehenſion a poyſonons ſting to torment vs, whereas in themſelues they would bee ſo voyde of ill, that wee might put them into our boſomes without receiuing harme; but that then alone we take vpon vs the burthen of ſorrow for our miſeries and affliction, when as neceſſity, and not will, layeth it vpon vs. For how many are there who through conceit become wretched before their time, and are onely miſerable, becauſe they are ſo in their owne apprehenſion; vnto whom the ſaying of Menander may bee well fitted; Thou haſt borne nothing burthenſome, but that which thou haſt laide vpon thine owne ſhoulders? For as it is the nature of opinion, to make things worthleſſe, eſteemed, bad things indifferent, and indifferent excellent; ſo alſo it hath the contrary power of making good things ſeeme euill, and ſuch as are of an indifferent nature to become odious and intolerable; whereby it giueth life and being vnto afflictions, which otherwiſe would not haue any exiſtence to hurt vs, if wee did not make them malignant by our owne fancie. Thus ſome torment themſelues with anger and diſcontent, becauſe they haue not the chiefe place, and vpper hand at meetings, reſalutations from thoſe whom they haue ſaluted, reſpect and obſeruance from their inferiours, and commendation and applauſe for their good parts and well deſeruing, not becauſe the want of theſe much hurteth them in truth, but onely in their owne opinion, by which they ouervalued theſe trifles, and made them things of great worth; not that they might not be happy without them, but becauſe their conceit hath made them neceſſary to their wel-being. And thus ſome grieuouſly afflict themſelues with ſorrow, becauſe they haue loſt ſome part of their abundant wealth, which if they had ſtill poſſeſſed, they would neuer haue injoyed; and where as they haue no other hurt in truth, but that they are purged of ſuperfluity, and and eaſed of a burthen, yet they are as much vexed for the loſſe of theſe tranſitory trifles, as for the loſſe of their liues and ſaluation of their ſoules, becauſe their opinion hath ouerpriſed their wealth, ſhrined it in their hearts as their moſt adored idoll, and giuen vnto it that honour and reſpect which is due onely to God. Whereas if ſuperfluous abundance were thought a burthen, it would alſo bee thought an eaſe to be freed from it; if riches according to their true value were but lightly eſteemed, then their loſſe would bee as light, and ſo borne without paine or difficultie. And the like may be truely ſaid of all worldly things, which in their abſence or preſence become the matter and occaſion of the moſt afflictions according to the value and eſtimation which opinion ſetteth on them. Yea ſo powerfull is opinion in producing theſe effects, that not onely a falſe apprenſion cauſeth a true affliction, but it is able alſo to turne comforts into croſſes, benefits into miſeries, and that which this mans opinion doth make his hell, another mans oppoſite conceite, would make his heauen and happineſſe. And ſo vehemently doth this opinion faſten vpon vs theſe imaginary afflictions, that they become much more intolerable, and wee more impatient in bearing them, than thoſe which haue their being and waight from their owne nature and true exiſtence. Yea and oftentimes they are more hardly remoued, and they comforted, who haue caſt themſelues vnder them, than in other calamities; becauſe the roote of the diſeaſe is internall through the errour of our judgement, and ſo oftentimes wilfull and of choyce, rather than impoſed by any neceſſity & conſtraint, which wee naturally auoyde. Neither is there any other meanes to cure this ſickneſſe, and to eaſe the minde of the burthen of this affliction, but to remoue or rectifie the cauſe, which is a falſe and ill grounded opinion, by ſpirituall wiſdome and a ſound judgement, informed and inſtructed by the Word of God; whereby our minds being illightned, and the miſts of errour diſpelled, which are caſt before the eyes of our vnderſtanding, by either ſenſe, paſſion or carnall reaſon, wee ſhall be inabled to judge of all things according to truth, and as they are in their owne nature, whether they are to bee deſired as good, or auoyded as euill; or betweene both, neither much to bee affected, or much to be ſhunned, as being of a meane and indifferent quality. And ſo ſhall not imaginary afflictions afflict vs, neither ſhall wee make thoſe croſſes to vs, which are no croſſes in themſelues; nor thoſe heauie and intolerable, which in their owne nature are light and eaſie. Whereas if wee bee miſlead by blind and deceiuing opinion, wee

Heſt.5.13.

Non tam natura, patienti ſpoſitio vel par ri facit beſtiis mala, Ch ad Pop.
tioch

wee ſhall not onely make thoſe croſſes, which wiſdome would make benefites, but ſo aggrauate the leaſt afflictions which lye vpon vs, that they will become intolerable. For as it is the nature of opinion to put ſhadowes and ſhewes, for reall exiſtences, ſo alſo it doth (as it were) bombaſe our afflictions, which are truely ſo called, and like ſpectacles makes ſmall ones to ſeeme great, whileſt it doth aggrauate them as though they were new, vnheard of, and neuer ſuffered by any other, although in truth they are common and ordinary. And therefore if we would haue patience in the day of tryall, and indure the aſſaults of affliction with vndaunted courage, let vs pull off theſe falſe vizards, which opinion putting on, doth make them thereby to appeare more terrible, and let vs looke vpon their owne naturall viſage with a wiſe and iudicious eye, eſteeming them onely afflictions which haue their ſtrength from themſelues, and not from our fancie, and apprehending thoſe alone to bee euill, and to bee grieued at, which through their owne malignant qualitie doe indeed hurt vs, either in our bodies, ſoules or friends, hindring our ſenſible or ſpirituall good, and making vs to be truely worſe, either in reſpect of this life or the life to come; and ſo ſhewes of afflictions will not craze our patience, neither will our ſorrow exceed our ſmart.

The fifth rule to be obſerued is, that wee do not by feare anticipate our griefe, making our ſelues miſerable before our time, and preſently pulling croſſes vpon vs through timerous expectation and conceit, which would either neuer befall vs, or not of a long ſeaſon. In which reſpect the greateſt part of men fault againſt themſelues, being more tormented with the feare of euils, than with the euils which they feare, and ſuffering longer and greater ſorrowes with the expectation of their miſeries before they happen, than after they are come and lye vpon them. And as though they could not be wretched enough with the ſenſe of preſent croſſes, they ingroſſe all cauſes of griefe, and wilfully ſeaze vpon needleſſe ſorrowes; and beſides the preſent afflictions which they ſuffer, they recall thoſe which are paſt, making their remembrance to torment their hearts, when as long agoe they were freed from the ſenſe of them; and preſently apprehend thoſe which are not yet ſo much as imminent, meeting them in the mid way by a fearefull expectation, as though they made too ſlow haſte, and would not come ſoone enough of their owne accord, vnleſſe they thus poſted towards them. And thus men vex themſelues with feare and griefe, when they heare but vncertaine rumours of great calamities, as though already they were ouertaken by them, whereas it may bee they will neuer happen, or if they doe, yet not of a long time, or not ſo grieuous as thoſe which by feare were preſented to their conceit. Thus in time of peſtilence many are as much afflicted with feare of infection, as they whoſe houſes are already viſited with the euils which they ſuffer. Thus in time of warre men as much torment themſelues with feare of ſacking, ſpoyling and killing, though oftentimes they eſcape all theſe dangers, as if already theſe miſeries did lye vpon and ouerwhelme them. And finally, thus many when they can not comprehend future meanes of maintayning their eſtate, within the compaſſe of their owne prouidence, vexe themſelues more with care and griefe for feare of pouerty, though now they enjoy ſufficient plenty, than there is juſt cauſe they ſhould, when they are pinched with want and penury. In which reſpect men indued with reaſon, are through their abuſe of it, worſe than the brutiſh creatures, for whereas by benefit of their reaſon, they might foreſee euils, that they might either preuent them, or arme themſelues with patience to beare thoſe which are vnauoidable; they abuſe their light of vnderſtanding to foreſee euils to come, that by a fearefull apprehenſion they may lye groning vnder them, as if they were preſent; yea to ſurmiſe & prognoſticate thoſe miſeries to themſelues that neuer befall them; and to amplifie and aggrauate them before they happen by all circumſtances which feare (onely witty in ſuch inuention) can offer to their conceit, making them much more grieuous and intolerable in the apprehenſion, than they afterwards proue to the ſenſe and feeling. Whereas the brutiſh creatures are onely afflicted with preſent euils, neither grieuing for thoſe which are paſt, nor fearing thoſe which are to come, but haue in their whole life full ſecurity in the fruition of their pleaſures, except onely that time wherein they are pinched and vexed with ſenſe of paine. If therefore religion, and the light of Gods Word can not make vs thus wiſe to put off our miſeries, till God call vs to ſuffer them, and layeth the load vpon vs; yet ſhaming to come behinde bruite beaſtes, let vs learne this wiſdome by their example, not to make our ſelues miſerable before our time; but if reaſon helpe to diſcouer euils before they come, let it alſo helpe vs to vſe all good meanes that wee may preuent them; and whileſt wee are doubtfull of the euent, let vs temper our feare with hope; and (as one counſaileth vs) whileſt there is vncertainty, let vs fauour our ſelues by beleeuing that which wee had rather ſhould happen; and ſo though we doe not gaine freedome, and be fully acquitted of our miſeries, yet ſhall wee bee repreeued from them, and receiue no hurt vntill they touch vs; though wee erre

Quoties incerta ſunt omnia, tibi faue: crede quod mauis. Senec. epiſt. 13.

erre in hoping, yet it is more ſafe and profitable than to erre in fearing, ſeeing that brings comfort, but this torment and vexation. And though at laſt the euils foreſeene doe fall vpon vs yet wee ſhall gaine the comfort of all the time vntill they happen, and bee the better able to beare them when they come; ſeeing they ſhall find our ſtrength intire, and not waſted with fore-running ſorrowes and cares, which feare bringeth alwayes to thoſe who giue way vnto it. And if there bee no meanes to preuent theſe miſeries, let vs not ſpend the time before they come in fearing, grieuing and complayning, whereby our ſtrength will be ſpent, and wee made vnable to indure their weakeſt aſſault, when they ſet vpon vs; but let vs imploy our reaſon in finding out ſuch arguments, as may confirme our patience in the day of triall; let vs, aſſiſted by it, pull off thoſe vizards from our afflictions, wherewith feare hath masked them; and ſo taking away (from the things to be ſuffered) the tumult of paſſion, and looking vpon them as they are in truth, and in their owne nature, wee ſhall (as one ſaith) finde that nothing was terrible in them, but feare and terrour which accompanied their expectation. If therefore we would be the better armed and prepared, to indure afflictions when they are inflicted, two things are to bee obſerued, when they are but threatned or feared; the firſt is, that wee doe not ſuffer our ſelues to be deiected with feare and ſorrow, when there is any ſuſpicion of future euils, and ſo giue the firſt part to be acted by paſſion, which will blind the minde, diſturbe the heart, and ſo bring all out of frame and order; but that in the firſt place, wee imploy our reaſon and judgement to diſcerne, whether the euils which feare is ready to apprehend, will indeede certainely befall vs, or onely ſtand vpon likelyhood and probability. For naturally wee are apt to vexe our ſelues with cauſleſſe iealouſies, and needleſſe ſuſpicions, to looſe our preſent comforts, and to marre all our mirth, when we heare but a rumour of approaching euils, fearing and trembling, but neuer examining the cauſes of our feare; and running away and fleeing from thoſe enemies, which onely our imagination hath fained. Like (as one ſpeaketh) to ſuch daſterdly ſouldiers, as are ready to leaue their ſtanding vpon euery falſe alarme, and to forſake their fortifications, when they ſee duſt rayſed by an heard of cattell, thinking that a mighty Army approacheth to aſſault them. Which cowardly folly that we may not fall into, let vs judge of approaching euils before we feare them, and examine, whether they are likely to come, before we vexe our minds with their apprehenſion, as if already they had befallen vs. And to this end let vs conſider, that as we fall into many afflictions which wee neuer foreſaw; ſo we foreſee many in conceipt, which in truth neuer happen. And as there are many occurrents and vnexpected accidents, which croſſe our hopes, and ſnatch from vs the good things we deſire, when wee are ready to receiue, and to haue the fruition of them: ſo there are no fewer vnlooked-for helps, which preuent our miſeries when they are ready to light vpon vs, or preſently pull vs from them, when they doe but touch vs. And not ſeldome doth the Lord, to ſhew his infinite power and wiſedome, grant deliuerance when all hopes faile, and all meanes forſake vs, pulling our heads euen from the blocke, and making vs to ſuruiue thoſe who were appointed to bee our executioners. So that (as one ſaith) there is nothing ſo certaine of thoſe things which are feared, but that it is more certaine that things feared are often ſtayed and ſtinted; and things hoped doe faile and deceiue vs, when thoſe are feared, and theſe expected. Let vs know that many more things fright vs, than pinch vs, and that wee are more often pained with a falſe opinion, than with any reall hurt; that it is folly to make our ſelues miſerable before the approach of miſerie, ſeeing euils feared often happen not, or at leaſt, are not already happened. Let vs conſider that falſe feares doe beget true griefe, for by a ſtrong apprehenſion they preſſe euils vpon vs, as if they were already preſent, and ſo whileſt wee feare leſt wee ſhould hereafter ſuffer them, wee euen now, ſuffer them by fearing, and as men aſtoniſhed know not what they doe; ſo we by feare are ſo amated, that whileſt ouer-earneſtly we deſire to eſcape afflictions, we in flying fall into them. That hee who is giuen ouer to the paſſion of feare, can neuer be at quiet, for in time of affliction he is vexed with that which he ſuffereth, and euen whileſt hee liueth in proſperity he hath no comfort, ſeeing by expecting of future croſſes, he forgoeth the fruition of preſent bleſſings, and loſeth them for feare of loſing them. That vaine feares which haue no ground but rumor and ſuſpition, doe commonly more torment vs, than thoſe which haue a true cauſe, and ſome reall exiſtence; for (as one ſaith) true things are confined in ſome meaſure; but thoſe which are vaine and vncertaine haue no bounds, but are left onely to exorbiant coniecture, and to the vnlimited liberty of a fearing mind: that the feare of looſing the comforts wee injoy, is as grieuous and intolerable as the griefe which accompanieth their loſſe, yea in this reſpect worſe, in that we know what wee grieue for, and ſo how to find remedy by arming our patience againſt a knowne euill with approued arguments, whereas feare is alwayes vncertaine, changing and varying into Nulla vitæ cauſa eſt, nullus miſeriarum modus, ſi timetur quantum poteſt. Sen. ibid.

Deme rebus tumultum & vide quid in quaq; re ſit: ſcies nihil eſſe in ijs terribile præter timorem Senec. Epiſt. 24.

Senec. epiſt. 13

Nihil ta eſt ex his mentur, certius formida ſidere & ta decip Senec. ep

Plura ſun nos terren quæ prem ſæpius op quam re l mus Sen. 13.

Senec. ibi

In æquo eſt amiſſæ rei timor amit da. Senec. epiſt. 98.

into a thouſand ſhapes, not according to the truth of things, but the opinion and conceipt of him that feareth. That wee ſhall eaſily ſuffer thoſe afflictions which being layd vpon vs by God are vnauoydable, if we doe not with fruitleſſe remembrance recall thoſe which are paſt, and with bootleſſe feare anticipate and apprehend thoſe which are to come; ſeeing they are few and ſhort that preſently torment the body and vexe the mind, in compariſon of that innumerable multitude which either are not come as yet, or already paſt: whereas thoſe who grieue before they need, grieue alſo more than needs, and charge their patience with a needleſſe waight, whileſt they through feare beare all their afflictions at once, which would be light and eaſie if they would beare one of them after another, in that order and ranke which God hath placed them.

The ſecond thing to be obſerued is, that if after due examination it appeare that the afflictions, which feare is ready to apprehend, will heereafter certainely befall vs, wee doe not by and by lay hold of them through feare, care and griefe, and ſo make our ſelues preſently miſerable, becauſe wee muſt bee ſo in the time to come. And this leſſon wee are taught by our heauenly ſchoole-maſter, who willeth vs, not to care for the morrow, but let the morrow care for it ſelfe, ſeeing the day hath enough with his owne griefe: for why ſhould wee haſten the ſpeed of our croſſes and calamities, ſeeing they will come ſoone enough, if we ſtay their owne leaſure? why ſhould we looſe our preſent comforts, by a timerous expectation of future euill, and ſo fill our whole liues with griefe and mourning? whereas if wee would take things as they are offered, there would be an entercourſe of ioy and ſorrow, and a time of breathing, wherein we might recouer ſtrength, and make vp the breaches which were formerly made by the battery of afflictions: why ſhould wee not rather by all lawfull meanes flee from euils, till they ouertake and catch vs; than to runne vnto them when yet they are farre off, and to pull them vnto vs, when as yet they doe not touch vs? why ſhould we not delay at leaſt thoſe miſeries which wee cannot wholly eſcape; ſeeing if it bee beſt in our owne conceipt, to bee freed from them altogether, it is good alſo to auoid them as long as may bee? and why ſhould we ouerſkip our comforts as though wee could neuer ſoone enough come at ſorrow, and not rather reioyce in their fruition whileſt wee may haue them, and leaue that time alone to griefe and diſcontent, wherein wee are vexed with ſenſe of euill, and can find no cauſe of ioy? yea (will ſome ſay) but how ſhould I preuent this feare, ſeeing I am naturally inclined to it? I anſwere that ſeeing wee are reaſonable creatures, wee muſt not like bruit beaſts, giue our ſelues ouer to bee ruled by ſenſe and paſſion, but in all things ſubmit our ſelues to the gouernment of reaſon, whom God hath made Vice-roy in this little world of man, not giuing way to our turbulent affections, but onely when they haue warrantiſe from this their ſoueraigne. And ſo ſhall wee not feare future euills, which are vncertaine, becauſe reaſon will tell vs that wee may eſcape them, and therefore it is folly to take certaine ſorrow for ſuch croſſes as are vncertaine; neither will it ſuffer vs to grieue for ſuch afflictions as are certaine, becauſe ſuch griefe is bootleſſe, and to no purpoſe, or if it haue at all any vſe, it is to eaſe our ſelues when we feele the ſmart, and not when being yet vntouched, wee onely ſee it. A ſecond meanes to auoid theſe cauſleſſe and fruitleſſe feares, is to auoide melancholike idleneſſe, whereby they are both bred and nouriſhed; and to exerciſe our ſelues with all diligence in the honeſt workes of our callings; for if our minds be taken vp with theſe imployments, they will haue no leiſure to fancie theſe feares, nor to giue them ſtrength (after they are conceiued) by reuoluing them in our imaginations: neither indeed ſhall we, being thus imployed, haue cauſe to feare any approaching euils, ſeeing the Lord will giue his Angels charge ouer vs, to keepe vs whileſt we are thus in our wayes, and to beare vs in their hands, that wee hurt not our foote againſt a ſtone. Finally, if wee would bee freed from all theſe feares, we muſt not reſt vpon our owne care and prouidence, for the preuenting of all future euils, for then we ſhall neuer bee at quiet, becauſe our foreſight is dimme in foreſeeing perils; and our power impotent and vnable to preuent them; but we muſt learne, as the Apoſtle teacheth vs, to caſt all our care vpon God, ſeeing hee careth for vs. And for as much as he is omniſcient, foreſeeing all whatſoeuer may befall vs, and omnipotent, able to deliuer vs out of all our afflictions; or to giue vs ſufficient ſtrength to beare them; and finally, our moſt louing and gracious Father who will turne all that befals vs, to our good, therefore let vs wholly reſigne our ſelues ouer to his good will and pleaſure, and ſubmit our ſelues in all eſtates to be ruled and diſpoſed of, by his moſt wiſe and powerfull prouidence; and ſo ſhall we be ſecure in all dangers, and be freed from all theſe fruitleſſe feares, when we are vnder his protection, and reſt vnder the ſhadow of his wings; then ſhall we not feare the aſſaults of our enemies, when as wee haue God for our caſtle and defence, vnto whom we may retire and be in ſafety; then ſhall we not being preſſed with the waight of miſeries, ſinke in the ſands of ſorrow and deſpaire, when as the Lord

Pſal. 91.11.12.

1.Pet.5.7.

Pſalm 91.

Pſalm.18.2.3.

Lord is our ſtrong rocke, vpon whom we may reſt ſecure, when the boyſterous billowes of afflictions doe beate vpon vs.

§. Sect. 7. The fifth rule is, that with Chriſtian prouidence we foreſee afflictions before they befall vs.

The fifth rule is, that with wiſe and Chriſtian prouidence we foreſee croſſes, and in the time of peace and proſperity continually expect, when by our great commander we ſhall bee called out to combat with afflictions; that ſo we may be the better armed and prepared for the conflict, and more eaſily obtaine the victory. For howſoeuer we are not, by a cowardly and timerous apprehenſion, to torment our ſelues with croſſes before they come; yet muſt we wiſely foreſee them, that wee may preuent thoſe which may lawfully be auoided, and confirme our patience againſt them, which we know will neceſſarily befall vs. Though wee may not diſcouer our enemies before they approach, that we may cowardly feare them, and idlely ſit ſtill and bewaile our future ouerthrow before the fight, or elſe amazedly betake our ſelues to flight, when as yet we are not aſſaulted nor purſued: ſo muſt we not retchleſly and ſecurely preſume, that we are in ſafety, till we fall into their ambuſhments; but like good ſouldiers we muſt keepe as vigilant watch in the time of peace or truce, as in the time of warre; diſcouer the number and ſtrength of our enemies, and furniſh our ſelues with ſufficient forces, that we may manfully indure their aſſaults, and victoriouſly ouercome. Though whileſt we ſayle in this ſea of miſeries, we ſhould not foreſee tempeſts, that we may ſit ſtill, and idely lament them; yet like good pilots, we ought in the faire weather of proſperity, to foreſee the ſtormes of aduerſitie, that hauing all things in readineſſe, we may be better able to beare and brooke them when they approach, and finally though we may not like lazie and fooliſh trauellers lie in our beds, and timerouſly forecaſt all the difficulties and dangers of our iourney towards the heauenly Canaan, and afflict our ſelues with the apprehenſion of them all, before we be come to any of thē; yet like wiſe pilgrimes we muſt foreſee all hinderances and incumbrances, as the foulneſſe of the way and weather, the ſtraightneſſe and roughneſſe of the paſſage, the ſtumbling blockes of offences, and the thornes and bryars of afflictions and tribulations which we muſt paſſe through; the dangers of Theeues and Murtherers, and the hard intertainment that we are like to finde in our Inne, that ſo we may furniſh our ſelues with all things neceſſary for this iourney, and be the better inabled to indure the labour, and to continue vnto the end. And thus our Sauiour Chriſt requireth, that as he who mindeth to build a tower, ſitteth downe before, and counteth the coſt, whether he haue ſufficient to performe it; leſt hauing laide the foundation, and not being able to finiſh it, all that behold it, begin to mocke him; and as a King being to make warre againſt another, ſitteth downe firſt, and taketh counſell, whether he be able to meete and incounter his enemy when he inuadeth him; or otherwiſe is ready to ſend his ambaſſadors to treat on conditions of peace: ſo we, before we are aſſaulted by afflictions; muſt foreſee and conſider of the power of theſe enemies, and what ſtrength we haue, either in reſpect of our own ſpirituall graces, or the aides and ſuccours, which we aſſuredly expect from God, whereby we may be aſcertained that we ſhall be inabled to withſtand their fury, and obtaine the victory, that if we finde our forces ſufficient, we may be comforted and incouraged, or if they bee weake and feeble, we may labour to haue them ſupplied and releeued againſt the day of battell. And this counſell the Sonne of Syrach giueth vs; in thy good eſtate (ſaith he) remember aduerſitie, and in aduerſity forget not proſperity; and againe, when thou haſt enough remember the time of hunger, and when thou art rich, thinke vpon pouerty and neede. So the heathen man preſcribeth this way to be rid of care and feare, and to attaine vnto full ſecurity, that whatſoeuer euill we may feare to be comming, we doe ſuppoſe that it will certainely come; and ſo exerciſe our ſelues to beare it willingly, before we be conſtrained to beare it vpon neceſſity. So (elſewhere) he aduiſeth vs that in our greateſt ſecurity, we prepare our minds to indure thoſe things which in themſelues are hard to be indured, and that in the fruition of the benefits of proſperity, we arme our ſelues againſt the grieuances of affliction. Like vnto a Souldier, who in time of peace, inureth himſelfe to painfull labour, and when there is no enemy, lyeth in armour, fareth hardly, deuiſeth ſtratagems, buildeth fortifications, and ſo wearieth himſelfe with voluntary labour, that he may be inabled by vſe and cuſtome, to beare and indure it, when it becommeth neceſſary. Howſoeuer therefore we may for our comfort enjoy the benefits of proſperity whileſt we haue them, and frame our hopes according to our deſires in regard of thoſe wants which we would haue ſupplied; yet muſt we withall prepare our ſelues for the time of aduerſity, and conſidering that thoſe things which haue happened vnto others, may alſo befal vs, let vs at all times be ready to beare thoſe afflictions, which at any time may be laid vpon vs. And for this cauſe hath our Sauiour in the Goſpell forewarned vs of afflictions, that we may expect them, and be forearmed againſt they come: ſo hee ſaith, that if a man will be his diſciple, he muſt take vp his croſſe, and follow him: that his faithfull ſeruants ſhall weepe and lament, whileſt the

Luke 14.

Ecclus. 11.
and 18. 24.

Si vis om ſollicitud exuere qu euenire m at euentur vtiq; pro
Senec. ep 24. Senec.
epiſt. 18.

Quod et mum eſt f & adid eſt iniqu compara.
Sen. Epiſt
Quicquid
poteſt qu turum co
mun. ibid.
Matth. 5

the world rejoyceth; and that whileſt they abide in the world they ſhall haue affliction. And his holy Apoſtle teacheth vs, that the Lord doth chaſtize euery ſonne that hee receiueth, that we are Baſtards and no ſonnes, if we be not thus corrected; and that through many tribulations, wee muſt enter into the Kingdome of God. And therefore ſeeing Truth it ſelfe hath forewarned vs of theſe afflictions, let vs not, becauſe wee haue now the world at will, be negligent and ſecure, nor conclude with Dauid in the time of our proſperity, that we ſhall neuer be moued; let vs not dream of immunity from theſe croſſes, and put the euill day farre from vs; let vs not ſay with Babylon, I ſit as Queene, and ſhall ſee no euill; nor thinke to find a Paradiſe of delight in the place of our pilgrimage: but knowing that the Lord hath foretold vs, that we muſt ſuffer afflictions, let vs expect them before they come, and arme our ſelues with faith and patience to beare them, euen long before they are inflicted on vs.

More eſpecially, let vs not fixe our hearts vpon any thing in the world, but vſe the benefits of this life, as though we vſed them not, and enjoy them ſo, as thoſe who are preſently to forgoe them. For thoſe things which wee poſſeſſe with immoderate loue, we loſe with immoderate griefe; and if we looke vpon our temporall bleſſings, as vpon perpetuities, we ſhall ſubject our ſelues to much ſorrow, and find ſmall patience, when their loſſe proueth vnto vs that they were but moueables. For example, when wee are honoured in the world, and haue euery mans tongue as a Trumpet for our prayſe: let vs conſider that the time may come, when wee ſhall be as much diſgraced and defamed, and that thoſe who cry Hoſanna, will ſoone after cry as loude Crucifige; for this hath befalne to many before vs, and will happen to many after vs; and why then not vnto vs alſo among the reſt? And vpon this meditation let vs examine our ſelues, how we ſhould beare it, if we ſhould be thus caſt downe out of the high Throne of Honour, into the loweſt bottome of ſhame and diſgrace; and with what reaſons and arguments wee might confirme our patience, and mitigate and moderate our griefe and heauineſſe. So when wee abound with riches, and haue ſuch plenty of earthly things, that we haue not onely for our ſelues a ſufficiency of all we can deſire, but are alſo able to giue vnto others, and make all about vs beholding for our benefits, let vs thinke that (as it hath beene the caſe of many) our plenty may bee turned into pouertie and penury; and how we may then retaine our patience, when we are conſtrained by want to begge of thoſe whom wee haue releeued; when in ſtead of our beds of doulne, we muſt lie vpon the ſtraw or hard boords, when our ſoft and ſhining ſilkes ſhall be changed into rags or home ſpun-ruſſet and our coſtly cates and delicate Wines, ſhall bee turned into courſe and ſcant fare, browne bread and cold water. When we haue our health & ſtrength, let vs not conceiue that they are durable or permanent, but that the time wil come, when being tormented with grieuous ſickneſſe we ſhal toſſe and tumble vpon our reſtleſſe beds, drinke loathſome potions, no leſſe diſtaſtfull than the ſickneſſe which they ſhould cure, haue no appetite to our meate and drinke, or to ſuch onely from which by rules of Phyſicke we are reſtrained; and be ſo enfeebled, that we muſt be faine to repeat our firſt learned leſſon of ſtanding and going; and then examine our hearts how we could beare theſe afflictions; that finding our weakneſſe, wee may before they come arme our ſelues with patience againſt the time of triall. So when we are at liberty, let vs prepare our ſelues to ſuffer impriſonment, where wee ſhall haue light dyet and heauy boults, indure the abſence of our friends, and the inſolencies of our jaylours. When we are in our Country, let vs conſider that the time may come, when being exiled, wee ſhall heare nothing but a ſtrange language which we vnderſtand not, and find as ſtrange entertainment and ſmall comfort, when wee ſtand moſt in need of it, in reſpect of our miſery. And finally, when we take our greateſt delight in our friends & acquaintance, let vs call to minde that they are not onely mortall, and may bee taken from vs; but alſo ſo mutable, that of our neereſt friends they may become our greateſt enemies; that our louing parents, vnder the ſhadow of whoſe prouidence wee are ſhielded and ſuſtained, and by whoſe wiſdome we are gouerned, may euen the next day be taken from vs, and leaue vs Orphanes; that our beloued children, which are the comforts of our youth, and the props of our old age, may by their death depriue vs of our preſent joy and future hopes; that our deere wiues, in whoſe loue & ſweet ſociety we now rejoyce, are ſubject to mortality, and that the time may ſhortly come, when as by death (as it were by a dead Palſie) wee ſhall looſe the comfortable vſe of theſe halues of our ſelues; and haue them plucked from vs with no leſſe griefe, than if the members of our bodies were torne in ſunder. That our friends and acquaintance, who now ſmile vpon vs in our proſperity, may with our eſtate change their countenance, not onely forſaking vs in our affliction, but vexing vs alſo with the burthen of their vnkindneſſes, and trying and tyring our patience with their wrongs, more than all the injuries and outrages offered by our enemies. In a word, whatſoeuer wee may loſe of that which we moſt loue, let vs thinke that it is now in loſing, or ſuppoſe it already loſt; that wee may bee the better armed and prepared to beare theſe loſſes, when in truth they ſhall befall vs, and haue weapons ready in our hands, to defend vs from being wounded with impatiency and immoderate griefe in our conflict with theſe afflictions: And if we thus poſſeſſe our worldly comforts, two great benefits wil follow hereupon: the firſt, that we ſhall not be made drunke with proſperity, nor be puffed vp with pride in the confluence of earthly bleſſings, and become inſolent; but vſe them with all ſobrietie and good conſcience, when as our expectation, like a continuall Monitor, doth put vs in minde of our loſſe; for who can ſwell in the fruition of ſuch benefits which are ſo momentany and mutable? And the other is, that this daily expectation will make theſe afflictions, which in themſelues are griſly and terrible, ſo well knowne and familiar, that when they appeare they wil not much skare and affright vs. A notable example whereof we haue in the heathen man, who being certified of the death of his deare and worthy ſonne, heard it with patience without any diſturbance of paſſion, becauſe (as hee ſaid) hee knew when hee begot him, that hee was mortall, and had brought him vp in expectation of this mortalitie. Whereas theſe loſſes when they are vnexpected and vnthought of, doe the more aſtoniſh vs when they happen, and doe more torment vs with their feare than with their ſmart. As the ſame Author ſheweth in the example of Vliſſes, who at his comming home (after his twenty yeers peregrination) vnto his moſt louing and beloued wife, wept not when ſhe wept, becauſe before his comming hee was armed againſt paſſion, by the expectation of this joyfull mourning at their meeting, but yet could not refraine teares at the ſuddaine death of his dogge which he loued, becauſe this accident comming vnlooked for, tooke him vnprouided. And vnto theſe benefits wee may adde that this expectancie will make vs to enjoy with more true comfort whatſoeuer we loue, when as our joy in the fruition of it, is not appalled, & abated with our feare, we being armed already againſt theſe loſſes, and will make them whilſt we haue them more ſweet and delightfull. For whereas the firſt poſſeſſion of earthly things, whileſt they are yet new, is moſt pleaſing, this continuall expectation of their loſſe doth make them to ſeeme euery day (which wee enjoy them afterwards) as new gotten and gained, and much more welcome, becauſe they come as an ouer-plus aboue our hopes.

Anaxagoras apud Plutarch. de tranquil. animi.

§. Sect. 9. That wee muſt not be ſecure in proſperity, but forecaſt what euils may befall vs.

If therefore wee would haue patience and comfort in the time of afflictions, let vs not paſſe the time of our proſperity in deepe ſecurity, promiſing vnto our ſelues immunity from future croſſes, and the continuance of our delights; let vs not fooliſhly imagine that this world, which is vnto other of Gods ſeruants, a pilgrimage and valley of teares, will bee vnto vs a Paradize or Garden of pleaſure; and that when wee ſee many others ouertaken with afflictions, that wee onely (like Iobs meſſengers) ſhall eſcape; for if our enemies come ſuddenly vpon vs, and takes vs vnprouided, we ſhall eaſily be ouerthrowne; if expecting nothing but joy, wee meet with bitter griefes, and if looking for wealth and honour, we be at vnawares ouertaken with pouerty and diſgrace; then when theſe afflictions come, there will be no place for patience; and an open paſſage for immoderate ſorrow and deſperate mourning, and then ſhall wee haue for all our violence of paſſion in theſe our miſeries, onely the fooles excuſe, that theſe are euils which wee neuer thought of; and that we well hoped neuer to haue had ſuch cauſes of mourning. But reſpecting the worlds fauours, as falſe and deceitfull; and conſidering that there are no miſeries which befall one, but they may likewiſe happen to another, let vs prepare and arme our ſelues againſt the time of their approaching, ſeeing on the one ſide we are aſſured that they may happen, and haue no aſſurance that we ſhall eſcape them. Which that we may the rather doe, let vs further conſider that our prouidence and fore-ſight of afflictions will preuent many of them, and leſſen all; neither doth it at all haſten their ſpeed (as many imagine who dare not entertaine into their thoughts any conceit of euils to come, nor can with patience haue any warning giuen of them by others, as though the very naming of them were ominous, and did preſage ſome miſchiefe towards them) but onely maketh our croſſes lighter and eaſier when they come, and vs ſtronger to beare and ſuffer them. For euils fore-ſeene doe looſe the greateſt part of their poyſon and ſtrength, and if we catch theſe darts of aduerſity in the hand of prouidence before they hit vs, they will not wound vs at all, or not ſo mortally, as when with their full ſtrength they pierce vs at vnawares. And as afflictions foreſeene, become much weaker, ſo wee alſo much the ſtronger to beare and ouercome them; partly becauſe before the incounter we haue time to arme our ſelues with reſolution, and to gather together the forces of our minds, which being vnited, are of great ſtrength to ouercome all difficulties, and to beare the greateſt waight of calamitie and miſery; whereas if we be aſſaulted at vnawares, and fall into the ambuſh of afflictions, when neuer thinking of an enemy, we haue theſe our chiefe forces ſcattered and diſordered through deepe ſecurity; then ſhall ſmall and weake forces of aduerſity diſcomfit and put vs to flight, euen at the firſt aſſault, and we ſhall receiue a final ouerthrow before wee haue time to make an head, or ſo much as to aduiſe of any meanes to make reſiſtance. And partly becauſe by exerciſing our ſelues againſt expected euils, as though they were preſent, wee receiue much

Cuiuis pot cidere qu quam pot nec, conſol Marc, cap

Præcogitat li molli i venit. Se Epiſt.76.
Aufert vi præſentib lis qui fu proſpexit, conſol. a Marc. cap

much ſtrength and abilitie to beare them when they come; euen as a man by vſing to fight at foyles, is made both more skilfull and bold to fight at ſharpe; and by skirmiſhing among his friends & fellow ſouldiers, becommeth more cunning, hardy & valiant in encountring of his enemies; whereas if we ſpend our time of proſperity in deep ſecurity, wee will neither prouide armour againſt the aſſaults of affliction, or if we had it in ſtore, we ſhall not be able to beare it; and for want of exerciſe we ſhall grow ſo weake and purſie, that wee ſhall not be able to hold out in the firſt encounter. And therefore, if wee would beare the burthen of afflictions when it is inflicted, let vs often in our meditations, voluntarily (as it were) poize it before it bee impoſed; ſeeing (as one ſaith) the greateſt part of the euils which improuident men ſuſtaine, is cauſed through their noueltie and vnexpected ſuddainneſſe; as it may hereby plainly appeare, in that thoſe miſeries, which at their firſt comming, they bewaile as intolerable, they doe afterwards being inured to them, beare them with patience; the which may moue Wiſe men, to make themſelues acquainted with future euils, by thinking on them before they happen, and to make thoſe afflictions light by meditating on them, which are made light vnto others, by their cuſtomable bearing them.

The ſixth rule is, that hauing in our meditations diſcouered theſe enemies approching, and plainly diſcerned by manifeſt reaſons, or great probability, that wee are likely to be encountred with afflictions and calamities; we doe neither ſecurely contemne the forces of theſe enemies, nor faintly yeeld vnto them before we are aſſaulted. The former of theſe two euils is to bee auoided, becauſe there is ſcarce any force ſo weake, which is not ſufficient to vanquiſh a ſecure enemie, ſeeing hee keepeth no watch, nor maketh any prouiſion whereby hee might be armed and ſtrengthened againſt the aſſault; but being drunke with long proſperitie, lyeth ſnorting in the dead ſleepe of careleſneſſe and ſupine negligence, wherby being depriued of al ſtrength, he is eaſily vanquiſhed, as being rather a prey, lying open to the ſpoyle, than an enemy, which by fight muſt be ouercome. And therfore that wee may not bee thus indangered with this ſecurity, let vs when we ſee afflictions approaching, be content to entertaine a valorous feare, which may moue vs to arme our ſelues againſt the aſſault, though not a feare of cowardize, which would make vs to faint and flee away; and labour to be as farre from preſumptuous ſecuritie, as from the other extreame of daſtardly amazedneſſe; ſeeing it is no vnuſuall thing, for them who neglect the meane, to run out of one extreame into another, and to become timerous cowards when they are encountred, who were quite without prouident feare, and deſperately ſecure in the time of preparation. And to this end let vs not onely looke vpon afflictions, as vpon euils which muſt be borne, or enemies to bee reſiſted, but as they are the judgements of God, wherewith he puniſheth our ſinnes, or at leaſt fatherly chaſtizements, which hee would haue vs to feare moderately for our amendement; like ſonnes, that we may ſue for pardon, though not like ſlaues, that we may flie away. For hee who contemneth his correction, is neuer like to be reformed by it. And this the Apoſtle requireth, My ſonne (ſaith he) deſpiſe not the chaſtening of the Lord: and Dauid practized, where hee cryeth out, My fleſh trembleth for feare of thee, and I am afraid of thy iudgements. As alſo Ioſias, whoſe heart did melt when he did but heare the threatnings of the Law. Againe, wee ſhall haue but little cauſe to contemne afflictions, if wee conſider our owne weakneſſe, and want of patience, whereby wee are ready to ſinke vnder the lighteſt burthen, and to faint and yeeld in the leaſt aſſault, if we be not aſſiſted and ſtrengthened with the power of Gods might; but rather wee haue juſt cauſe to feare leſt being foyled and oppreſſed with their waight, we be moued in impatiency to murmure and repine againſt Gods prouidence, and euen to blaſpheme him to his face.

Heb.12.6.
Pſal.119.120.

But on the other ſide, as wee are not to contemne afflictions, when we ſee them approaching; ſo wee muſt not cowardly flie away, nor baſely yeeld vnto them, as deſpairing of victory: as we muſt not be poſſeſſed with preſumptuous ſecurity, in confidence of our owne ſtrength, and our enemies weakneſſe; ſo we muſt be bold and couragious in the power of Gods might, and aſſurance of his aſſiſtance, when we moſt need his helpe; and as wee muſt not deſpiſe the chaſtening of the Lord, ſo we muſt not faint when wee are rebuked of him: but reſting by a liuely faith and aſſured confidence, vpon the Almighty power, al-ruling prouidence, and infallible promiſes of our gracious Father, let vs be prepared for the fiery triall, and arme our ſelues againſt the day of conflict, as with other of Gods ſpirituall graces, ſo alſo with a couragious and conſtant reſolution, that when we are encountred by afflictions, wee will neuer flee from them, by vſing vnlawful meanes to eſcape their force and fury, nor cowardly yeeld vnto them by caſting away our ſpirituall armes, diſclayming the ſeruice of God, and ſubmitting our ſelues as captiues vnto ſinne and Satan: but in our greateſt diſtreſſe let vs cleaue vnto our Lord and Maſter, and proteſt with Iob, that though he kill vs, yet we will truſt in him. And this magnanimous and Chriſtian reſolution, we may obſerue to haue beene in many of the faithfull, who haue reſolued to vndergoe any afflictions,

Heb.12.6.
Iob 13.15.

Dan.3.18.

Acts 5.29.

Acts 21.13.

Rom.8.35,38.

1.Cor.10.13.

2.Cor.4.17.

flictions, rather than they would leaue the Lord by breaking of his Commandements. So the three children rather than they would worſhip Nebuchadnezzars Image, conſtantly reſolued to indure thoſe tortures in the fiery furnace. And Peter and Iohn, rather than they would ſurceaſe to preach the Goſpell, reſolued couragiouſly to paſſe through all dangers, neglected the threatnings of the High Prieſt, and the reſt of the Councell, and feared not to hazard their innocent bodies to the whip, chuſing to obey God, though they were tormented for it, rather than to obey men in their vnlawfull commands, and ſo to enjoy their liberty and immunity from dangers. Thus alſo the Apoſtle Paul armed himſelfe with a conſtant and Chriſtian reſolution to preach Chriſt, though hereby he indangered himſelfe both to bands and death: yea, ſo ſtrong was hee in faith and patience, that he triumpheth ouer all afflictions, and couragiouſly reſolueth that no extremities ſhould diuide Chriſt and him; Who (ſaith he) ſhall ſeparate vs from the loue of Chriſt? Shal tribulation, or anguiſh, or perſecution, or famine, or nakedneſſe, or peril, or ſword? I am perſwaded that neither death, nor life, nor Angels, nor Principalities, nor powers, nor things preſent, nor things to come nor height, nor depth, nor any other creature ſhall bee able to ſeparate vs from the loue of God, which is in Chriſt Ieſus our Lord. Vnto which Chriſtian reſolution if wee would attaine, we muſt remember Gods promiſes, that hee will be with vs in all our afflictions, which we ſuffer for his ſake, and for the preſeruing of our conſciences pure and vndefiled from the ſpots of ſinne; that hee is faithfull and will not ſuffer vs to be tempted aboue our power, but will giue a good iſſue with the temptation, that we may be able to beare it; that he will turne them all to our good, & finally that he wil crown our patient ſuffering theſe light and momentany afflictions, with a far moſt excellent and an eternall waight of glory.

§. Sect. 11. The eighth rule, that wee muſt not wilfully run into afflictions.

The laſt rule to be obſerued and practiſed in the time of our preparation, is, that wee doe not wilfully run into afflictions, nor pul the croſſe vpon our own ſholders; but that we diligently vſe all good means, either to eſcape thē before they come; or to be freed from thē, when they are inflicted on vs. Concerning the former, as we ought not to flee thoſe enemies through cowardly fear in the vſe of vnlawful meanes; ſo muſt we not prouoke them to aſſault vs when we might liue in peace; as wee muſt not hide our ſelues from them vnder the couert of ſinful ſhifts, whē they are ſent of God to find vs; ſo we muſt not voluntarily ſeeke them, and dare them to encounter vs, when they would be quiet and meane vs no harme; and finally, as we muſt not ſhamefully retire when God ſoundeth the alarme to battell, nor pull backe our ſhoulder when he enjoyneth vs to beare the croſſe; ſo muſt wee not diſorderly march on when hee ſoundeth the retrait, nor thruſt our ſelues vnder a load of our owne making which he neuer laid vpon vs; for as the Sonne of Syrach telleth vs, hee that loueth danger ſhall periſh therein. Neither is it required that we ſhould fill this bitter cup of afflictions vnto our ſelues, but onely that we drinke of it when God putteth it into our hands; nor that wee ſhould make croſſes, but onely beare them, according to the example of our Sauiour Chriſt, who did not carry his croſſe, till it was laid vpon him. For otherwiſe wee doe not take vpon vs the croſſe, but wring it (as it were) out of Gods hand; wee doe not ſubmit our ſelues vnto his will, but rather doe our owne; the which is not fortitude but madneſſe, which will not bring any comfort in our ſufferings; ſeeing we cannot incourage our ſelues with the ſaying of our Sauiour, ſhall I not drinke of the cup which my Fatther hath giuen me? it being a mixture of our owne making, and a potion of our owne prouiding. Now if wee would know how to diſcerne Gods croſſes from our owne, wee may eaſily diſtinguiſh them by this one rule, namely, that God calleth vs then onely to ſuffer, when we haue no lawfull meanes to auoid the affliction; and contrariwiſe we thruſt our ſelues vnder the burthen; when without ſinne, and with a good conſcience, we might eſcape the danger, but chuſe rather wilfully to run into it. An example whereof we haue in the Papiſts, who impoueriſh their eſtates by voluntary pouerty, and torment their bodies with pilgrimages, penance of their own deuiſing, whipping and ſcourging, reſembling herein the ancient Laconians, who inured their children in a ſtockiſh valour, to contend one with another, who ſhould with patience indure moſt ſtripes; or the Baalitiſh Prieſts, who lanced and cut themſelues before their Idols: whoſe practice let vs auoid, not going as voluntaries into the skirmiſh of afflictions, but ſtaying our time till wee are preſſed and called out by our great Commander; not pulling croſſes vpon vs, in which we can haue no comfort, ſeeing therein we yeeld no obedience vnto God but ſerue our own wils, and follow our owne fantaſies; but patiently bearing thoſe onely which wee are aſſured that God hath laid vpon vs, becauſe we haue no lawfull meanes to ſhun and auoid them. And to this end let vs conſider, that this voluntary thruſting of our ſelues into needleſſe afflictions, is expreſly contrary to Gods Commandements; as if they concerne our bodies, we ſinne againſt the ſixth Commandement, which as it requireth that wee doe not any way hurt our Neighbours body, but vſe all good meanes to doe them good; ſo alſo firſt & principally that we do no harme to our owne bodies, but vſe all good meanes to preſerue them in their health; or if it concerne

Eccluſ.3.2

Iohn 18.11.

our goods & eſtate, againſt the eighth Commandement, which requireth no leſſe the preſeruation of our owne eſtate, than of another mans; and forbiddeth the wilfull waſting of our owne ſubſtance, to our vndoing and impoueriſhing, as well as the robbing and ſpoyling of our Neighbour. So our Sauiour Chriſt hath commanded vs to vſe lawfull meanes for the auoyding of afflictions, and that when they perſecute vs in one Citie, we ſhould flye vnto another, and foretelling the miſeries which ſhould befall Ieruſalem, he counſelleth thoſe who would eſcape them, to flee into the mountaines. And with his counſell well agreeth the ſaying of Auſtine; It is folly (ſaith he) to admit thoſe miſeries which may be auoyded; and therefore euery wiſe man will ſeeke to ſhun death and griefe, as much as he can, and as much as is conuenient; leſt if he doe not ſhun them, he be not in this regard wretched, becauſe they befall him; but becauſe when hee might, he would not auoid them, the which is a manifeſt ſigne of folly; and therefore in not auoyding euils, hee is not miſerable in ſuffering them, but becauſe he is marked for a foole. To the ſame purpoſe another perſwadeth vs after this manner. Let vs not (ſaith hee) caſt our ſelues head-long into dangers voluntarily becauſe this is fooliſh raſhneſſe; neither let vs faint and flee being turmoyled with afflictions, when wee are called to ſuffer them, for this is fearefull cowardize. If we are called by the preaching of the Word hereunto let vs not refuſe; but let vs not ruſh into them vnaduiſedly and without cauſe, wee not being moued by any profit or neceſſity which reſpecteth godlineſſe; for this were oſtentation and ambitious aſpiring vnto ſuperfluous honour. Yet if any thing happen which oppugneth religion and holineſſe, we ought not to ſhrinke although it were to ſuffer a thouſand deaths. Let vs not dare and prouoke tentations when all things which concerne godlineſſe ſucceed according to our hearts deſire; for why ſhould we inuite ſuperfluous dangers which haue no profit? &c. Let vs be prepared as becommeth valiant ſouldiers, alwayes armed, ſober and watching as thoſe who continually expect an enemy: But let vs not of our owne accord raiſe Warres, and make a combuſtion againſt our owne peace, for this is not the part of a good Souldier, but of a mutinous and ſeditious perſon. If the trumpet of holineſſe ſound the alarme to battell; then march on valiantly without delay, contemne thy life, and entring the conflict with much cheerefulnes, ruſh into the maine army of thine enemies, put the Deuill to flight, and ſet vp a trophy of victory; but if godlineſſe ſuſtaine no damage, the principles of religion be not vndermined which concerne our ſaluation, nor any man doe enforce vs to doe any thing diſpleaſing to God, let vs not be ſuperfluous in our ſufferings.

§. Sect. 12. That wee muſt carefully vſe all good means whereby wee may bee freed and deliuered from our afflictions.

Furthermore let vs know, that as it is vnlawfull to take vpon vs voluntarily croſſes and afflictions when vvee may lawfully eſcape them; ſo is it alſo as vnlawfull to lye vnder them ſtill, vvhen vvee may by good and honeſt meanes be freed from them; becauſe this is to tempt the Lord, vvhen as needleſly wee deſire to make experience of his power, prouidence, and promiſed aſſiſtance, either for our deliuery, or for ſtrength and patience to indure theſe vvilfull trials. For herein vvee reſemble ſtubborne and fooliſh children, who wilfully fall that their parents may catch hold of them, and being downe, lie ſtill and cry, but neuer offer to riſe, becauſe they expect to be helped vp by others. And this is the ſinne vnto which our Sauiour Chriſt was tempted by the Deuill, but reſiſted the tentation, alleadging that it is vvritten, that we muſt not tempt the Lord our God. Wee our ſelues continually pray that we may not be led into tentation, but that wee may be deliuered from euill; and therefore ſeeing afflictions are ſtrong tentations, whereby the Deuill and the World labour to dravv vs to the committing of ſinne, as impatiency, murmuring and repining againſt God, doubting of his prouidence and ſuch like, and ſeeing they are euils of puniſhment, vvhich are threatned againſt ſin, therefore vvee muſt not vvilfully caſt our ſelues into theſe tentations, into vvhich vvee pray that we may not be led; not of our own accord runne into thoſe euils, from which we intreat at Gods hands that vve may be deliuered. For whatſoeuer wee lawfully deſire by prayer, that vve are to labour after in the vſe of all good meanes that vve may obtaine it; and that vvhich vvee pray againſt vve are bound to vſe the like meanes to ſhun and auoid it, deſiring God to giue vs grace, that we may carefully and proſperouſly vſe them, either for the gaining of the one, or eſcaping of the other, vvhich if vve doe not, vvee doe but play the Hypocrites, praying with our lips for that which our hearts deſire not. So that as vvee muſt not vvilfully plunge our ſelues into tentations; ſo muſt vvee contrariwiſe vſe all good meanes to ſhun afflictions before they happen, and to be deliuered from them if already vve be ouer-taken by them; as namely vvee muſt vſe the lavvfull meanes of Phyſicke, to preuent or cure our ſickneſſes; induſtrious labour in our calling, to preſerue vs from pouerty, or to be freed from it, if vvee be falne into it; the authoritie and aſſiſtance of Magiſtrates, to defend vs from injuries and oppreſſion, or to recouer our right of vvhich vvee are depriued by force and violence; and flight in the time of perſecution, vnleſſe the glory of God, and good of the Church doe require our martyrdome and ſuffering. The vvhich is vvarranted vnto vs, not onely by thoſe teſtimonies of

Matth. 4. 7.

Gen.32.11,13.
Exod.2.
1.Sam.19.
2.Sam.15.
Matth.2.
Act.9. & chap. 21, & 23.

Scripture before alleaged, but alſo by the example of the Saints of God from time to time. For thus Iacob vſed all good policie, & neglected no means which he thought auailable for the appeaſing of his brothers fury, and auoyding thoſe miſchiefes which would haue accompanied his rage. Thus Moſes fled from Pharaoh, Dauid from Saul and Abſalon, Ioſeph and Mary from Herods cruell perſecution; Paul from the Iewes at Damaſcus; and thoſe who hauing vowed his death, did lie in waite to murder him. And thus hee eſcaped bonds by pleading the priuiledge of a Citizen of Rome; and made a great party on his ſide to defend him from raging violence, by profeſſing himſelfe to be a Phariſie. Yea, our Sauiour Chriſt himſelfe, who came into the World to ſuffer for vs, did flee perſecution vntill the appointed time came; and euen then being affrighted with that heauy burthen which he was to beare, and abhorring to drinke of that bitter potion prepared for him, he did inſtantly deſire (though with ſubmiſſion of his will to his heauenly Father's) that this Cup might paſſe from him. The which examples are ſufficient warrant for vs to auoid afflictions by all lawfull meanes, taking them as ſent by God for our preſeruation or deliuerance, and prayſing his name in the vſe of them. Neither is it fit that wee ſhould ſit ſtill, and effeminately complaine when wee are in any miſery and calamitie; but as it beſeemeth a manly diſpoſition, wee muſt aduiſe with our ſelues, take counſaile of others, and labour and endeauour in the vſe of all lawfull meanes to eſcape afflictions, or to ouercome them, if we cannot auoid them. Nor is it enough that we deſire deliuerance, or implore by prayer Gods aſſiſtance to free vs from trouble; but as the wiſe Pilot doth prouide all things neceſſary againſt the tempeſt, and vſeth them with all care and diligence when the ſtorme commeth, and ſo craueth Gods bleſſing vpon his endeauours, becauſe without this, his paines & prouidence become vain and fruitles; ſo muſt we take the ſame courſe in all dangers and troubles (hauing holy Iacob for our example, who though hee had wreſtled with God all the night, by prayers and ſtrong cryes, and had preuailed, yet he ſerueth Gods prouidence by his owne endeuours, and vſeth all good meanes to pacifie or auoid his brothers rage) and not after a childiſh manner lye ſtil and cry, beating (as it were) the ground vpon which wee are falne, and complayning of our afflictions which haue hurt and grieued vs, but neuer endeuouring to riſe againe, nor vſing any meanes of eaſe or comfort. But yet in the vſe of all meanes to free vs from afflictions, wee muſt carefully obſerue theſe rules: firſt, that they be lawfull and warrantable, not wicked and ſinfull, leaſt that reproofe of Elihu, intended againſt Iob, be juſtly applyed vnto vs that we chuſe iniquitie rather than affliction; for he ill prouideth for his owne good, who falleth into the euill of ſin, to eſcape the euill of puniſhment, & that indangereth his ſoule to moſt grieuous & euerlaſting torments, that hee may bee freed from thoſe bodily afflictions, which are light & momentany. For beſides that he hazardeth himſelfe to the ſuffering of thoſe endleſſe torments for the time to come, that he may be eaſed of preſent ſmart; he doth through the juſt judgement of God faile oftentimes of his purpoſe, and lieth ſtill vnder the croſſe which hee thought to haue auoided. And not ſeldome whileſt he thus eſcapeth one miſery, hee falleth at vnawares into a farre greater, finding no more eaſe and comfort, by all his vnlawfull ſhifts than the ſilly fiſh which leapeth out of the frying pan into the fire. And whereas hee might haue borne the hand of God in the former afflictions with greater patience, becauſe he had inwardly the teſtimony of a good conſcience to comfort him; and outwardly the ſweet odour of a good name, hee is by his wicked ſhifts robbed of both, and is forced to beare his more heauy croſſes with the terrours of an euill conſcience, and deſerued infamy and reproach. The ſecond caution is, that in vſing theſe meanes wee doe referre the iſſue to the good pleaſure of God, and ſubmit our wils to his will, ſaying with our Sauiour, Father let this cup paſſe from mee, howbeit not my will, but thine be done; foraſmuch as he knoweth better than our ſelues what is fit for vs, & will according to his promiſe in time conuenient, giue a good iſſue out of the tentation. And laſtly, wee muſt take heed leſt in vſing the meanes wee truſt in them, and leauing the Lord, who is the ſupreame cauſe of our deliuerance, doe reſt vpon our owne prouidence, and vpon inferiour cauſes, which are but his inſtruments; like vnto Aſa, who truſted in the Phyſicians for the recouery of his health; for then we ſhal rob God of his glory, and in ſtead of returning the prayſe of our deliuerance vnto him, wee will, with thoſe whom the Prophet Habackucke reproueth, Sacrifice vnto our Nets, and burne incenſe to our Dragge. And theſe are the cautions, which being obſerued, we may lawfully, yea, wee ought to vſe all good meanes to eſcape afflictions, or be deliuered out of them; ſeeing otherwiſe we ſhal tempt God, offer wrong againſt our own perſons, & not be accepted of God in our ſufferings, ſeeing herein we yeeld no obedience vnto him, theſe not being croſſes of his impoſing; but follow our own wilful phantaſies, in making choice of vnneceſſary afflictions; nor fight his battels againſt the World, ſeeing hee hath not called vs out, nor ſounded the alarme; but (as it were) pick priuate quarrels againſt our owne peace, ſeeking out, & prouoking an enemy, with whō the Lord hath not commanded vs to fight.

Matth.26.

Gen.32.
Hoſ.12.4.

Iob 36.21.

Matth.26

Hab.1,16

THE CHRISTIAN WARFARE.

The third Part.

CONTAINING OVR CONFILCT WITH AFFLICTIONS, WHEREIN IS intreated of Patience in bearing the Croſſe, and the meanes whereby wee may attaine vnto it.

The ſecond Booke.

Chap. I.

Of patience in afflictions, what it is, and the cauſes and properties thereof.

IN the former Booke I haue ſhewed what preparation is required of vs, before wee enter into this ſpirituall conflict of afflictions. Now we are to ſpeake of the right demeaning of our ſelues when we are entered into the battell, and of the holy and Christian diſpoſition and behauiour, which wee muſt exerciſe and ſhew, both in the bearing of thoſe croſſes, whileſt it ſhall pleaſe God to let them lye vpon vs, and alſo in returning thankes and prayſe vnto God, after we are through his gracious aſſiſtance deliuered from them, and haue obtained full victory in this ſpirituall conflict: vnto the well bearing of the croſſe, is required patience, in all our afflictions, the higheſt degree whereof is, when we beare them with thankeſgiuing, ſpirituall ioy, and rejoycing in the holy Ghoſt. And firſt I will intreate of this grace it ſelfe, and then of the meanes whereby we may attaine vnto it. Concerning the former Patience is our paſſiue obedience, or the obedience of the croſſe, which is a fruite and grace of Gods holy ſpirit, ariſing from the true knowledge of God, and of our ſelues, as alſo from a liuely faith, affiance, hope and vnfained loue of God, whereby we beare our croſſe impoſed vpon vs by God, quietly, conſtantly, and willingly. Where firſt I ſhew the roote, whereof this patience is a branch, namely our obedience vnto God, whereby wee in all things ſubmit out wills vnto his good pleaſure, both for the doing and ſuffering of all which he requireth; ſaying with Eli, It is the Lord, let him doe what ſeemeth good vnto him. And with Dauid, Heere I am, let him doe vnto me as it ſeemeth good in his eyes. And with our Sauiour Chriſt himſelfe, Not as I will, but as thou wilt: and againe, O my Father, if this cup cannot paſſe away from me, but that I muſt drinke of it, thy will be done. And this is that which wee continually begge in that petition of the Lords prayer, Thy will be done, in Earth as it is in Heauen. And therefore if we pray with vpright hearts, and not like hypocrites, we will ſubmit our ſelues to this good will of God, when by the euent it is reuealed vnto vs; whether it be for the doing of that which he requireth, or the ſuffering of that which he impoſeth vpon vs. And thus it appeareth, that our patience is a branch of that obedience which wee owe vnto God; I adde further, that it is a fruit of the Spirit; for Gods Holy Spirit is the chiefe and principall cauſe both of this, and of all other Gods ſanctifying and ſauing graces, as the Apoſtle ſheweth in the Epiſtle to the Galathians, The fruite (ſaith he) of the Spirit is loue, ioy, peace, long ſuffering, gentleneſſe, goodneſſe, faith, meekneſſe, temperance, &c. But becauſe the Spirit of God, as the chiefe and

1.*Sam.*3.18.

2.Sam. 15.26.

*Matth.*26.39. 42.

*Gal.*5.22.

Scripture before alleaged, but alſo by the example of the Saints of God from time to time. For thus Iacob vſed all good policie, & neglected no means which he thought auailable for the appeaſing of his brothers fury, and auoyding thoſe miſchiefes which would haue accompanied his rage.

Gen.32. 11,13.
Exod.2.
1.Sam.19.
2.Sam.15.
Matth.2.
Acts 9. & chap. 22, & 23.

Thus Moſes fled from Pharaoh, Dauid from Saul and Abſalon, Ioſeph and Mary from Herods cruell perſecution; Paul from the Iewes at Damaſcus; and thoſe who hauing vowed his death, did lie in waite to murder him. And thus hee eſcaped bonds by pleading the priuiledge of a Citizen of Rome; and made a great party on his ſide to defend him from raging violence, by profeſſing himſelfe to be a Phariſie. Yea, our Sauiour Chriſt himſelfe, who came into the World to ſuffer for vs, did flee perſecution vntill the appointed time came; and euen then being affrighted with that heauy burthen which he was to beare, and abhorring to drinke of that bitter potion prepared for him, he did inſtantly deſire (though with ſubmiſſion of his will to his heauenly Father's) that this Cup might paſſe from him.

Matth.26.

The which examples are ſufficient warrant for vs to auoid afflictions by all lawfull meanes, taking them as ſent by God for our preſeruation or deliuerance, and prayſing his name in the vſe of them. Neither is it fit that wee ſhould ſit ſtill, and effeminately complaine when wee are in any miſery and calamitie; but as it beſeemeth a manly diſpoſition, wee muſt aduiſe with our ſelues, take counſaile of others, and labour and endeauour in the vſe of all lawfull meanes to eſcape afflictions, or to ouercome them, if we cannot auoid them. Nor is it enough that we deſire deliuerance, or implore by prayer Gods aſſiſtance to free vs from trouble; but as the wiſe Pilot doth prouide all things neceſſary againſt the tempeſt, and vſeth them with all care and diligence when the ſtorme commeth, and ſo craueth Gods bleſſing vpon his endeauours, becauſe without this, his paines & prouidence become vain and fruitles; ſo muſt we take the ſame courſe in all dangers and troubles (hauing holy Iacob for our example, who though hee had wreſtled with God all the night, by prayers and ſtrong cryes, and had preuailed, yet he ſerueth Gods prouidence by his owne endeuours, and vſeth all good meanes to pacifie or auoid his brothers rage) and not after a childiſh manner lye ſtil and cry, beating (as it were) the ground vpon which wee are falne, and complayning of our afflictions which haue hurt and grieued vs, but neuer endeuouring to riſe againe, nor vſing any meanes of eaſe or comfort.

Gen.32.
Hoſ.12.4.

But yet in the vſe of all meanes to free vs from afflictions, wee muſt carefully obſerue theſe rules: firſt, that they be lawfull and warrantable, not wicked and ſinfull, leaſt that reproofe of Elihu, intended againſt Iob, be iuſtly applyed vnto vs that we chuſe iniquitie rather than affliction; for he ill prouideth for his owne good, who falleth into the euill of ſin, to eſcape the euill of puniſhment, & that indangereth his ſoule to moſt grieuous & euerlaſting torments, that hee may bee freed from thoſe bodily afflictions, which are light & momentany.

Iob 36.21.

For beſides that he hazardeth himſelfe to the ſuffering of thoſe endleſſe torments for the time to come, that he may be eaſed of preſent ſmart; he doth through the iuſt judgement of God faile oftentimes of his purpoſe, and lieth ſtill vnder the croſſe which hee thought to haue auoided. And not ſeldome whileſt he thus eſcapeth one miſery, hee falleth at vnawares into a farre greater, finding no more eaſe and comfort, by all his vnlawfull ſhifts than the ſilly fiſh which leapeth out of the frying pan into the fire. And whereas hee might haue borne the hand of God in the former afflictions with greater patience, becauſe he had inwardly the teſtimony of a good conſcience to comfort him; and outwardly the ſweet odour of a good name, hee is by his wicked ſhifts robbed of both, and is forced to beare his more heauy croſſes with the terrours of an euill conſcience, and deſerued infamy and reproach. The ſecond caution is, that in vſing theſe meanes wee doe referre the iſſue to the good pleaſure of God, and ſubmit our wils to his will, ſaying with our Sauiour, Father let this cup paſſe from mee, howbeit not my will, but thine be done; foraſmuch as he knoweth better than our ſelues what is fit for vs, & will according to his promiſe in time conuenient, giue a good iſſue out of the tentation.

Matth.26.

And laſtly, wee muſt take heed leſt in vſing the meanes wee truſt in them, and leauing the Lord, who is the ſupreame cauſe of our deliuerance, doe reſt vpon our owne prouidence, and vpon inferiour cauſes, which are but his inſtruments; like vnto Aſa, who truſted in the Phyſicians for the recouery of his health; for then we ſhal rob God of his glory, and in ſtead of returning the prayſe of our deliuerance vnto him, wee will, with thoſe whom the Prophet Habackucke reproueth, Sacrifice vnto our Nets, and burne incenſe to our Dragge.

Hab.1.16.

And theſe are the cautions, which being obſerued, we may lawfully, yea, wee ought to vſe all good meanes to eſcape afflictions, or be deliuered out of them; ſeeing otherwiſe we ſhal tempt God, offer wrong againſt our own perſons, & not be accepted of God in our ſufferings, ſeeing herein we yeeld no obedience vnto him, theſe not being croſſes of his impoſing; but follow our own wilful phantaſies, in making choice of vnneceſſary afflictions; nor fight his battels againſt the World, ſeeing hee hath not called vs out, nor ſounded the alarme; but (as it were) pick priuate quarrels againſt our owne peace, ſeeking out, & prouoking an enemy, with whō the Lord hath not commanded vs to fight.

THE CHRISTIAN WARFARE.

The third Part.

CONTAINING OVR CONFILCT WITH AFFLICTIONS, WHEREIN IS intreated of Patience in bearing the Croſſe, and the meanes whereby wee may attaine vnto it.

The ſecond Booke.

CHAP. I.

Of patience in afflictions, what it is, and the cauſes and properties thereof.

IN the former Booke I haue ſhewed what preparation is required of vs, before wee enter into this ſpirituall conflict of afflictions. Now we are to ſpeake of the right demeaning of our ſelues when we are entered into the battell, and of the holy and Christian diſpoſition and behauiour, which wee muſt exerciſe and ſhew, both in the bearing of thoſe croſſes, whileſt it ſhall pleaſe God to let them lye vpon vs, and alſo in returning thankes and prayſe vnto God, after we are through his gracious aſſiſtance deliuered from them, and haue obtained full victory in this ſpirituall conflict: vnto the well bearing of the croſſe, is required patience, in all our afflictions, the higheſt degree whereof is, when we beare them with thankeſgiuing, ſpirituall ioy, and rejoycing in the holy Ghoſt. And firſt I will intreate of this grace it ſelfe, and then of the meanes whereby we may attaine vnto it. Concerning the former Patience is our paſſiue obedience, or the obedience of the croſſe, which is a fruite and grace of Gods holy ſpirit, ariſing from the true knowledge of God, and of our ſelues, as alſo from a liuely faith, affiance, hope and vnfained loue of God, whereby we beare our croſſe impoſed vpon vs by God, quietly, conſtantly, and willingly. Where firſt I ſhew the roote, whereof this patience is a branch, namely our obedience vnto God, whereby wee in all things ſubmit our wills vnto his good pleaſure, both for the doing and ſuffering of all which he requireth; ſaying with Eli, It is the Lord, let him doe what ſeemeth good vnto him. And with David, Heere I am, let him doe vnto me as it ſeemeth good in his eyes. And with our Sauiour Chriſt himſelfe, Not as I will, but as thou wilt: and againe, O my Father, if this cup cannot paſſe away from me, but that I muſt drinke of it, thy will be done. And this is that which wee continually begge in that petition of the Lords prayer, Thy will be done, in Earth as it is in Heauen. And therefore if we pray with vpright hearts, and not like hypocrites, we will ſubmit our ſelues to this good will of God, when by the euent it is reuealed vnto vs; whether it be for the doing of that which he requireth, or the ſuffering of that which he impoſeth vpon vs. And thus it appeareth, that our patience is a branch of that obedience which wee owe vnto God; I adde further, that it is a fruit of the Spirit; for Gods Holy Spirit is the chiefe and principall cauſe both of this, and of all other Gods ſanctifying and ſauing graces, as the Apoſtle ſheweth in the Epiſtle to the Galathians, The fruite (ſaith he) of the Spirit is loue, ioy, peace, long ſuffering, gentleneſſe, goodneſſe, faith, meekneſſe, temperance, &c. But becauſe the Spirit of God, as the chiefe and

1.Sam.3.18.

2.Sam.15.26.

Matth.26.39.42.

Gal.5.22.

ſupreame cauſe, doth for the effecting of this grace of patience in vs, vſe certaine other graces as mediate and ſubordinate cauſes thereof; euen as the maine roote doth deriue life and ſappe, firſt to the chiefe boughes, and by them to the leſſer braunches; therefore I expreſſe in this deſcription of patience, theſe ſubordinate, next and immediate cauſes from which it ariſeth and ſpringeth. And firſt the knowledge of God, as of his infinite wiſedome, whereby hee knoweth what is beſt for vs; his al-ruling prouidence, whereby hee diſpoſeth all things for thoſe ends, which in his wiſdome he ſeeth to be beſt; his will which is the rule of all juſtice, and therefore to be obeyed by all his creatures; and finally, his mercy, goodneſſe and loue towards vs, whereby he turneth all things to our good; as being our moſt gracious and deare Father in Ieſus Chriſt. And alſo the knowledge of our ſelues, that wee are moſt wicked and damnable ſinners, who by our manifold and haynous tranſgreſſions, haue deſerued to haue the full vials of Gods wrath to be powred vpon vs; and therefore great reaſon we haue to beare theſe leſſer afflictions with patience and thankſgiuing, ſeeing wee haue juſtly deſerued the greateſt, euen the eternall condemation both of our bodies and ſoules. Vnto this knowledge I adde faith, by which we beleeue and apply vnto our ſelues all we know for our owne vſe and benefit; for beleeuing that God is our gracious Father in Chriſt, and apprehending all Gods gracious promiſes of the Goſpell as due vnto vs; and particularly thoſe which aſſure vs of Gods aſſiſtance, and our deliuerance out of all afflictions, we beare with patience theſe croſſes that are laid vpon vs. The other graces named, as they are the fruites of this faith, ſo are they the | cauſes of our patience, as namely affiance in God, whereby beleeuing his promiſes, we reſt vpon him in all troubles and dangers; and Hope, wherby wee expect and waite for with patience the accompliſhment of them; and finally, Loue of God which proceedeth from the aſſurance of his loue towards vs; the which eſpecially doth worke in vs, confirme, and increaſe our patience, according to the ſaying of the Apoſtle; Loue ſuffereth all things, it beleeueth all things, it hopeth all things, it indureth all things, and doth neuer fall away. And that becauſe wee are aſſured that nothing ſhall bee able to ſeparate vs from the loue of God in Ieſus Chriſt our Lord, and that all things whatſoeuer, euen our croſſes and afflictions ſhall worke together for the beſt vnto them that loue God; for he who is mercifull and gracious to his enemies, will bee infinite in mercy and goodneſſe to his friends, who loue and feare him, and alſo becauſe nothing ſeemeth hard and difficult to him that loueth.

1.Cor.13.7.8.

Rom.8 38.39. & verſ.28.

3. Sect.
That the was neue true patien among the Heathens.

By which it appeareth that all true patience is a fruite of the Spirit, and ariſeth immediately from theſe ſanctifying and ſauing graces: whereof it followeth that it was neuer to be found among the Ethnicks and Pagan Philoſophers, becauſe they were deſtitute of theſe ſauing graces. It is true that they gaue many precepts of patience, which make a faire ſhew at the firſt ſight; as prouerbially it was ſaid among them, that we muſt beare and forebeare; ſo ſome haue taught that felicity conſiſteth not in worldly proſperity, but in the exerciſe and practice of vertue, and conſequently that a vertuous man may be happy though afflicted; yea that by aduerſity we haue occaſion ſo to exerciſe vertue, that it will appeare more beautifull and glorious. The Stoicks taught that there is no euill in affliction, but onely that it is euill to abandon vertue and follow vice; and to the ſame purpoſe the Oratour ſaith, that beſides vice and diſhoneſty, nothing can befall a man whereat he ſhould bee danted and appalled. And the practice alſo of many of them was according to theſe precepts; for ſo we read of Horatius Pulvillus being dedicating of a Temple, and hearing of the death of his Sonne; that he ſeemed not moued with the newes, but without interruption finiſhed that which hee had in hand: and Paulus Æmilius, hearing of the death of his Children, ſaid with vndaunted courage, that the gods had heard his prayer, which was that calamities ſhould rather befall his familie, than the common wealth. And the like magnanimous patience they ſhewed in ſuffering perſonall afflictions: as Ariſtides in his baniſhment: Scipio in thoſe indignities which his vngratefull countrimen offered vnto him; Regulus in his exquiſite torments. But yet this was no true patience, becauſe it flowed not from thoſe ſauing graces of the knowledge of God, faith, affiance and hope; neither was done in obedience to Gods will, and joyned with humility; but did ariſe rather from pride, whereby they deſired to eternize their fame, or at beſt from a ciuill loue of their country, or ſome other worldly reſpects. To which purpoſe one ſaith that the Philoſophers profeſſed that they ſought after patience; but their patience was as falſe and counterfaite as their wiſedome. For how can he be wiſe or patient, who hath not knowne the wiſedome and patience of God? And againe, if their wiſedome was not true, then neither could their patience: for if he alone be patient, who is humble and meeke, and we ſee that theſe Philoſophers were neither meeke nor humble; but ſuch as pleaſed themſelues much in their owne eyes, and that in thoſe things wherein they diſpleaſed God; it plainely appeareth that there was no true patience there, where

Arist. in eth

Cyprian bono pa lib.

Ibid.Ser

there was an inſolent audaciouſneſſe of affected liberty, and a manifeſt appearance of immodeſt boaſting. Finally they did not looke to the hand of God exerciſing them with theſe afflictions, nor yeelded obedience to his will in their ſufferings; but they aſcribed all to fate, chance, and fortune, profeſſing that theſe afflictions were to be borne with patience, becauſe they could not bee auoided; or if at all they acknowledged Gods hand in them, they yeelded vnto it, becauſe it was in vaine to ſtriue; now he that ſubmitteth himſelfe vpon meere neceſſity, and becauſe he cannot chuſe; would reſiſt if he were able, and detract his obedience in his ſufferings, if by any meanes hee could eſcape them. Whereas he who is truly patient obeyeth willingly the good pleaſure God, and meekely ſubmitteth himſelfe to beare the croſſe, not becauſe being neceſſary hee muſt beare it, whether he will or no; but becauſe it is ſinfull to detract his obedience, and to reſiſt the will of God which hee knoweth to be juſt in its ſelfe, and in reſpect of him full of mercy and goodneſſe.

And thus I haue ſhewed the cauſes of patience, & the difference, chiefly ariſing out of them, betweene the patience of Chriſtians and of the heathens and infidels: I further ſet downe the object of patience, namely the croſſe, which is that meaſure and proportion of afflictions, that God hath allotted and ſhared out to euery one of the faithfull, the which is neceſſarily to be borne of euery one who will be Chriſts Diſciple, according the ſaying of our Sauiour, if any man will come after me, let him deny himſelfe and take vp his croſſe daily and follow mee; of which neceſſity the Apoſtle rendreth this reaſon, becauſe afflictions are in Gods eternall decree joyned with our election as a meanes whereby our ſaluation is furthered: for hauing before ſpoken of afflictions, that if we ſuffer with Chriſt, we ſhall alſo raigne with him; that they are not worthy the glory which ſhall be reuealed, and that they ſhall worke together for the beſt vnto them that loue God; hee addeth this as another conſolation, that theſe afflictions are ſignes of our election; for thoſe which he knew before, he alſo predeſtinated to bee made like to the image of his ſonne, that he might be the firſt borne among many brethren.

In the laſt place I ſet downe the manner of ſuffering neceſſarily required to true patience, the which conſiſteth in three things; the firſt is that we beare the croſſe meekly and mildly, peaceably, quietly, and with moderate griefe and ſorrow; and that not outwardly alone, but eſpecially in the mind and heart. So the Lord ſaith by his Prophet vnto his afflicted people; In reſt and quietneſſe ſhall yee be ſaued, in quietneſſe and confidence ſhall be your ſtrength; And what kind of quietneſſe and peace this is, David expreſſeth, where he biddeth vs to examine our owne hearts vpon our owne bed and bee ſtill. Psalm.4.4. Shewing, that our quitneſſe and peace ſhould bee as well priuate, as before company, and as well in the heart and mind, as in the ſpeech and countenance. An example of this quiet peaceſulneſſe, and meeke ſilence, wee haue in David, who was dumb, and opened not his mouth becauſe it was God that did afflict him; Psalm.39.9. and in Iob, who in his great extremities checketh himſelfe for hauing beene too talkatiue in his complaints; and profeſſeth for the time to come, that hee would lay his hand vpon his mouth, keepe ſilence and ſpeake no more. Iob.39.37. But aboue all examples is that of our Sauiour Chriſt, who in his manifold and grieuous afflictions is ſaid not to haue opened his mouth, but was brought out as a ſheepe to the ſlaughter, and as a ſheepe before her ſhearer is dumbe; ſo he opened not his mouth. Esa.53.7. Vnto which quiet meekeneſſe is oppoſed clamorous complainning, crying, howling, and wringing of the hands; murmuring and repining againſt the prouidence and juſtice of God; as though hee were an accepter of perſons, puniſhing vs more greeuouſly than greater offenders, or aboue the quality of our fault, or our ſtrength to indure, as we may ſee in the example of Caine, who complaineth that his puniſhment was greater than hee could beare. Gen.4.13.

But howſoeuer this vnruely vnquietneſſe and vehemencie of paſſion is to be auoided of all thoſe, who would poſſeſſe their ſoules with patience; yet it is lawfull, yea expedient and needfull, that we ſhould in the time of affliction be affected with moderate griefe; yet not ſo much for the affliction it ſelfe, and the ſmart and ſenſe of paine (in which regard we are not to mourne out of our judgement, choyce, and will, but onely ſo much as nature and neceſſity compelleth vs vnto) as for our ſin which is thus chaſtized and corrected: and that not in reſpect of the puniſhment which it deſerueth; but becauſe thereby we haue offended and diſpleaſed our gracious God and mercifull Father. Becauſe all ſorrow which is for any thing, hauing no reference or reſpect to ſinne, is vaine and vnprofitable, yea oftentimes hurtfull and pernicious; or if it doe any good at all; it is not by leſſening of the affliction, but onely as it eaſeth the heart by venting of that griefe, which being retained, would ſuffocate or breake it. In which regard ſorrow is onely to be intertained in reſpect of the outward expreſſing thereof, as a meanes to vnburthen the mind, not to loade it, vpon neceſſity to eaſe nature by giuing ſome iſſue to thoſe floods of griefe, which if they were dammed in, would ouerflow and drowne the heart, and not willingly to continue in it, or to aggrauate it by our conceite, which inuenteth wittily ſuch arguments as will robbe our ſoules of all peace and quietneſſe. For whereas there are ſeuerall medicines which are proper and peculiar for euery diſeaſe, which being rightly applied doe effect the cure; but if contrariwiſe that which is fit for one be applied vnto another, in ſtead of helping, it much hurteth and increaſeth the malignity of the diſeaſe: ſo the medicines that helpe the diſeaſes of the hand, are vnprofitable or pernitious, being applied to the heart; and that which helps the hearing, would, being miſapplied, put out the eyes; ſorrow and griefe is appointed by God to be a medicine proper and peculiar for the curing of ſinne; and being rightly applyed vnto it, and in fit proportion, it doth cure and heale it; but if it be miſapplyed vnto our croſſes and calamities as vnto ſickneſſe, pouerty, death of friends and worldly loſſes, it doth not leſſen or take them away, but rather much aggrauates and increaſeth them, like the worme in the nut, eating the heart in which it is bred; and doing vs more true hurt and damage, than all other miſeries which wee lament and ſorrow for.

Chryſoſt. ſerm. ad populum.5. Tom.4.

§. Sect. 5. That we muſt not with the Stoicks affect ſenſles ſtupidity in our afflictions.

But as there is an exceſſe and diſorder of our ſorrow, when as either we mourne too much, or not for that which wee ought cheefly to bewaile; ſo there is a defect thereof, when we grieue not at all, but like ſtocks haue no ſenſe either of our fault, or of our puniſhment and correction. The which ſenſleſneſſe in bearing afflictions was ſo much commended by the Stoicks, who thought him alone magnanimous and wiſe, who putting off all paſſion and affection (and with it humanity it ſelfe) carried himſelfe at all times alike, both in proſperity, and aduerſitie, not affected with joy in any delights, nor with ſorrow and griefe in any miſery and affliction. But this is to turne a man into a ſtone or ſtocke, and to dreame of ſuch a patience as neuer was or ſhall bee found among men; or if it could, yet hath not in it any magnanimity or Chriſtian fortitude; but dull blockiſhneſſe and ſenſeleſſe ſtupidity. Yea in truth it is not onely an vnreaſonable, but alſo a ſenſles dreame and dotage, contrary to the law of nature, which hath ordered that all liuing creatures ſhould feare affliction and miſerie before it come, and bewaile it when it is inflicted: and ſo farre from true wiſdome, that it is void of ſenſe, and full of ridiculous folly, when with ſome idle rhetoricke, and friuolous ſpeculation a man ſhall be perſwaded to ſmile when hee ſmarteth, and to giue his ſenſe and feeling the lye, when as it telleth him that hee is vexed and tormented. And therefore I would paſſe it ouer, thinking it more fit to bee confuted with a whip, than with waight of argument; were there not many among vs, profeſſing Chriſtianity, that in their practice come neere theſe ſtoicall precepts, who not out of ſpeculation and diſcourſe of Philoſophy, but out of their carnall ſecurity, and ſenſeleſſe ſtupidity, and hardneſſe of heart, are not at all affected either with Gods mercies, or with his judgements; but when Gods hand is heauy vpon them, put off the feeling thereof with deſperate contempt, labouring to outface their griefes, or quite to blot them out of memory, by going into merry company, gaming, ſporting, drinking and ſuch other worldly and carnall delights. In all which they pleaſe themſelues and would blind others with an opinion of their patience, and contentedneſſe to beare with all willingneſſe whatſoeuer it pleaſeth God to inflict vpon them. But let them know that this is not patience, but ſenſeleſſe ſecurity, and hardneſſe of heart; not a vertue, but a diſeaſe of the minde, euen the dead palſie or ſleepy lethargie of ſinne; and (as one ſaith) it is not the ſtrength of health, but ſenſleſſe ſtupidity proceeding from the deſperateneſſe of their ſickneſſe; and their boaſting of it, is not the fruit of patience, but franticke rauing. And ſo farre off are ſuch from being either wiſe or patient, that they are rather like thoſe drunkards, deſcribed by Salomon, who ſleepe ſecurely in the middeſt of the Sea, and on the top of the maſt; and when they are ſmitten feele no ſmart, and beeing beaten doe not know of it; and therefore reſolue to continue in their ſinne; or thoſe demoniacks, who plucked their chaines and fetters aſunder, and could not be tamed by any man, nor kept from offering violence againſt their owne ſenſeleſſe bodies. And therefore ſuch ſtupidity is no fruit of wiſdome, but rather of madneſſe or drunkenneſſe in ſinne, and ariſeth not from knowledge, but from the ignorance or forgetfulneſſe of the cauſes of afflictions. For if they knew or conſidered that they all came from God, they would tremble vnder his corrections, becauſe it is a fearefull thing to fall into the hands of the liuing God; if they vnderſtood or remembred that the deſeruing cauſe is ſin, which hath juſtly meritted not onely theſe lighter chaſtiſements, but euen the moſt fearefull wrath of God, and moſt grieuous and intolerable puniſhments, temporall and eternall; they would lay them more to heart, and grone in the ſight and ſenſe of them. If they did call to minde that the end of theſe corrections is to bring them vnto ſorrow for their ſinne, that ſo they might amend and turne from it, they would not paſſe them ouer with careleſſe neglect, and ſecure ſtupiditie, leſt not being touched and affected with theſe lighter chaſti-

Gloriatur de ribus propri voluntatis, quam de ſan morbi, non d robore ſanita
tis. Inſania iſta gloriatio non eſt patie ſed dementi
Aug. de pati ent. cap. 13.

Pro. 23. 34.

Marke 5. 4.

Heb. 10. 31.

chaſtiſements, they make themſelues lyable to Gods more terrible vengeance and fearefull plagues.

Which ſenſleſſe blockiſhneſſe that wee may auoide in the time of our afflictions, let vs know that the Lord in his Word doth condemne this ſecure indolencie, and ſtupid hardneſſe of heart, when we are corrected by him; for ſo he taxeth the Iſraelites by his Prophet; Thou haſt ſtricken them (ſaith he) but they haue not ſorrowed; thou haſt conſumed them, but they haue refuſed to receiue correction, they haue made their faces harder than a ſtone, and haue refuſed to returne. So the Prophet Eſay condemneth their off-putting from them their ſorrow by feaſting and reuelling: In that day (ſaith hee) did the Lord of hoſts call vnto weeping and mourning, and to baldneſſe and girding with ſackcloth. And behold, ioy and gladneſſe, ſlaying of Oxen, and killing of Sheepe, eating fleſh, and drinking wine, &c. Secondly, let vs conſider that the Scriptures doe not deſcribe vnto vs ſuch a patience, as is without ſenſe of the euils wee ſuffer, and not at all aſſaulted with griefe and ſorrow; but ſuch an one, as in the feeling of ſmart doth keepe vs from burſting out into murmuring and repining, or from ſinking into deſperate ſorrow and deepe deſpaire. Not ſuch an one as is exempted from all dolour and anguiſh; but onely that it moderate this griefe with ſpirituall joy, and meeke ſubmiſſion of our will to the pleaſure of God. Neither doth God require that we ſhould haue a patience, not at all preſſed with any anxietie or ſorrow of minde; but that being tyred with bearing the burthen, we be ſomewhat refreſhed, and eaſed with the conſolations of his Word and Holy Spirit. He would not haue vs vanquiſhed in the combate of afflictions; but yet hee would haue vs fight vnto wearineſſe, and not obtaine ſuch a victorie, as hath had no conflict going before it. In a word, that conqueſt ouer the Croſſe beſt pleaſeth him, when as our naturall ſight and ſenſe, ſeeth, feeleth and abhorreth the afflictions which wee ſuffer, cauſing vs to grieue and grone vnder our burthen; and in the meane time, our obedience and filiall affection to our heauenly Father, ſo farre preuaileth, as that in the middeſt of all difficulties & diſtreſſes, wee can bee content to ſubmit our ſelues to his holy will, and beare the Croſſe with patience, which he hath laide vpon vs, vntill hee vouchſafe vs by lawfull meanes, freedome and deliuerie. And this the Apoſtle Paul affirmeth to bee the eſtate of all the faithfull, namely that in their afflictions they are touched with ſome ſorrow in the ſenſe and feeling of them, but not ſo ouerwhelmed with griefe and heauineſſe, but that being humbled, they riſe againe, and get the victory ouer the violence of their paſſions. We are (ſaith he) afflicted on euery 2.Cor.4. 8. ſide, yet are we not in diſtreſſe; in pouertie, but not ouercome of pouertie; we are perſecuted, but not forſaken; caſt downe, but we periſh not, &c. An example whereof we haue in Peter, vnto whom our Sauiour ſaith, When thou waſt young, thou girdeſt thy Ioh.21.18. ſelfe, and walkedſt whether thou wouldeſt: but when thou ſhalt be old, thou ſhalt ſtretch out thine hands, and another ſhall gird thee, and lead thee whether thou wouldeſt not. By which ſpeach we are not to vnderſtand, that Peter would bee ſimply vnwilling to ſuffer for Chriſt, for then his martyrdome had deſerued no prayſe; but that howſoeuer hee was willing with all readines to lay downe his life for the glory of God; that naturall feare which hee had of death and torment drew him another way; ſo as he was hereby diſtracted betweene a twofold will of grace and nature; the one ſhunning death, the other yeelding obedience to the will of God; that before a ſore conflict he could not put feare to flight, nor get victorie ouer his naturall affection. So Paul profeſſed that he was ready not onely to ſuffer bonds, Act.21.13. but death it ſelfe, for the name of the Lord Ieſus: but yet that naturall deſire of preſeruing his life, and auoiding torments, ſo far preuailed, that he vſeth all good meanes to eſcape affliction and perſecution, profeſſing that he was a Phariſie, and a citizen of Rome, reprouing the high Prieſt, who cauſed him to bee vnjuſtly ſmitten; and auoiding the laying in waite of thoſe who ſought his life. But moſt notably doth this appeare in our Sauiour Chriſt himſelfe, who was exceedingly diſtracted with this double will; the one naturall, whereby hee earneſtly deſired to preſerue his precious life, and to eſcape thoſe fearefull puniſhments which he was to ſuffer, both in his ſoule and body: the other diuine and ſpirituall whereby he deſired to glorifie his Father, by ſubmitting himſelſe in all things to his holy will; and to perfect the worke of mans redemption whom he ſo dearely loued. Whereof it was that he could not without a great conflict ſubmit himſelfe to thoſe grieuous ſufferings, but firſt deſireth; Father if it be thy will, let this cup paſſe from me: and after yeeldeth obedience to his Fathers pleaſure; Neuertheleſſe, not mine, but thy will be done. Matth.26.39. And thus it appeareth, that moderate ſorrow in the time of affliction, may well ſtand and agree with that patience which the Scriptures deſcribe vnto vs. In the third place I adde, that this moderate griefe which is eaſed and refreſhed with diuine conſolation is warranted, yea commanded in the Scriptures. The former is implyed, where the Apoſtle requireth that we ſhould not mourne for them that are departed in the faith of Chriſt, as men without hope; where 1.Theſſ.4.13.

Heb.12.5.11.12.

Ioel 2.12.13.

Iam.4.9.

where hee taxeth and forbiddeth onely heatheniſh mourning, which was exceſſiue and immoderate, and alloweth ſuch a proportion as is fit for a temporarie departure. So alſo where he ſaith, that we muſt not deſpiſe the chaſtening of the Lord, as one the other ſide, wee muſt not faint when wee are rebuked of him; where hee ſpeaketh of induring chaſtening, which argueth ſorrow and vexation, and telleth vs, that no chaſtizing for the preſent ſeemeth to bee ioyous, but grieuous, cauſing the hands to hang downe, and weakning the knees. The other is maniſeſtly expreſſed in the Prophecie of Ioel, where the Lord cryeth out to his afflicted people: Turne you vnto mee with all your heart, and with faſting, and with weeping, and with mourning; and rent your hearts and not your clothes, &c. But moſt plainely by the Apoſtle Iames, Suffer (ſaith he) afflictions and ſorrow yee, and weepe, let your laughter be turned into mourning, and your ioy into heauineſſe. Yea in truth this is the maine end which the Lord propoundeth of our afflictions, that they may ſerue as his chaſtizements, to bring vs to a ſight and feeling of ſinne, true humiliation and vnfained repentance, by ſmart and ſenſe of paine; euen as the louing and wiſe Father doth correct his ſonne, that by the ſenſe and ſmart of the roode, he may be brought to a ſight of his fault and ſorrow for it, and ſo may amend it for the time to come. And as it is a ſigne of an vngracious Childe not to be grieued with his Fathers corrections, and a great preſumption that they will not amend him, if they doe not moue him: ſo doth this make it moue than probable, that ſuch are deſtitute of grace and filiall affection, and farre from reformation and amendement, who haue no ſenſe and feeling of Gods correction, nor are brought by their ſmart to vnfained ſorrow for their fall. Yea ſuch haue juſt cauſe to feare, that they are not at all the children of God, ſeeing they are not affected with his Fatherly chaſtizements; that they are in the lethargie of ſecuritie, ſeeing theſe ſharpe ſtripes will not moue or awake them; that their hearts are brawned and of a flinty hardneſſe, when the hammer of Gods judgements will not bruſe them, nor the ſharpe arrowes of his indignation pearce them, or make any entrance for griefe and ſorrow; yea that they are ſtarke dead in their ſinnes ſeeing like ſenſleſſe blockes they are not moued at all, when God whippeth & ſcourgeth them with theſe ſtinging whippes of miſerie and affliction. Or if they belong vnto Gods election, and haue the life of grace begun in them; if the Lord hath adopted them for his Sonnes, and intendeth to beſtow vpon them that heauenly inheritance of his glorious Kingdome; then let them aſſure themſelues, that hee will not leaue them till hee haue humbled them for their faults, and brought them to a ſight of their ſinne that they may bewaile it. And if his more gentle chaſtizements will not effect it, becauſe the thicke ſkinne of ſecurity keepeth them from feeling the ſmart of his rods, he will take in hand the three ſtringed whippe of his more grieuous judgements, and more ſeuerely correct them, not leauing to redouble his blowes till their ſenſe of paine hath brought them to a ſight of ſinne, to true humility and acknowledgment of their faults; and to an hearty ſorrow, both naturall for the affliction, and ſpirituall for their ſinne. And this the Lord threatneth againſt his people of Iſraell, That if they did walke ſtubbornly againſt him, and would not bee humbled by his more mild corrections, hee would walke ſtubbornly againſt them in his anger, and chaſten them ſeauen times more according to their ſinnes. And at this our Sauiour aimeth when he admoniſhed the man whom he had cured, to ſinne no more, leſt a worſe thing did happen vnto him. And this is juſt with God to double his puniſhments, when as men redouble their ſinnes, adding to their other tranſgreſſions, ſtubborneſſe, impenitencie, hardneſſe of heart, and neglect of Gods more gentle chaſtizements, which he hath appointed to be the meanes of their humiliation and repentance. To which purpoſe one ſaith, that hee is rightly judged worthy ſo much the greater puniſhment, by how much being vicious, he abhorreth the inſtruments of vertue and goodneſſe.

Leuit.26.2
28.

Ioh.5.14.

Tanto recti maiori ſup dignum iu ueris ani quanto m vitioſus a ſtrumenta tutum. Au de patien
cap. 5.

Moreouer, our Sauiour Chriſt foretold not onely the afflictions of his Diſciples, but alſo that they ſhould ſorrow and mourne when they were afflicted. Yee (ſaith he) ſhall weepe and lament, and the world ſhall reioyce: and yee ſhall ſorrow, but your ſorrow ſhall be turned into ioy. Neither did he impute this griefe vnto them as an infirmity, or fruit of puſillanimitie or dejection of minde, but as an action ſo pleaſing and acceptable vnto God, that he vouchaſeth to reward it with eternall happineſſe. Bleſſed (ſaith hee) are they that mourne, for they ſhall bee comforted: and bleſſed are yee that weepe now, for yee ſhall laugh. Finally, it hath beene the continuall practice of all Gods Saints, to ſorrow and mourne in their afflictions; for thus Abraham, the Father of the faithfull, mourned for the death of Sara, Iſaac for Abraham, Iacob for Iſaac, and the ſuppoſed death of Ioſeph, and Ioſeph and his brethren for their father Iacob. Thus was patient Iob affected with moderate griefe when hee heard of the loſſe of his riches and children, although he meekly ſubmitted himſelfe to the will of God, and bleſſed his holy Name in his greateſt extremity; for ſo it is ſaid, that hee aroſe and rent his garment, and ſhaued his head, and

§. Sect.
That mode rate griefe afflictions foretolde b our Sauiou and put in practice b the Saints
Ioh.16.20.

Matth.6.2
Luk.6.21.

Iob.1.20.

and fell downe vpon the ground and worſhipped. And thus holy Dauid profeſſeth that in his afflictions he was ſo much affected with ſorrow, that he fainted in his mourning, and cauſed his bed euery night to ſwim, and watred his Couch with his teares; that hee was bowed and crooked very ſore vnder the waight of his afflictions, and went mourning all the day. That hee was weakened and ſore broken, and roared for the very griefe of his heart. So it is ſaid of good Hezekiah, that being in danger of death, 'hee turned his face to the wall, prayed vnto the Lord, and wept ſore: that he did chatter like a Crane or a Swallow, and did mourne like a Doue. And euen of the whole Church of the Iewes in her captiuity, that together with her affliction remembred her mourning, the wormewood and the gall, and that in remembrance of them, her ſoule was humbled in her. But aboue all exceptions is the example of our Sauiour, who was ſo much affected with the feare of his paſſion, that his ſoule was heauy vnto the death; in ſo much as there was need that an Angell ſhould be ſent to comfort him; and ſo much oppreſſed with the ſenſe of Gods wrath, that hee was brought into a great agony, in ſo much as his ſweat was like drops of bloud trickling downe to the ground, and forced him to cry out in his great diſtreſſe, My God, my God, why haſt thou forſaken me? Neither was hee thus affected with his owne griefes alone, but did ſympathize in his friends ſorrowes, yea, in the miſeries of thoſe who perſecuted him; for ſo it is ſaid, that when he ſaw Mary weepe, he groned in the ſpirit, and was troubled in himſelfe; that he wept when hee was brought to the graue of Lazarus; and that drawing neere vnto Ieruſalem, and beholding the Citie, he wept ouer it, as fore-ſeeing the miſeries which ſhould come vpon it. And in regard of theſe manifold griefes which his ſoule ſuſtained, for his owne and others afflictions, the Prophet calleth him a man full of ſorrow and heauineſſe. And therefore, if not onely all the faithfull, but alſo our Sauiour Chriſt himſelfe, the mirrour of all true patience, was in his afflictions affected with grief & ſorrow; let no man who is not at all touched when the hand of God lyeth heauy vpon him, nor hath ſo much as any conflict with heauineſſe and griefe, when hee is purſued with Gods heauy judgements, ſay and boaſt, that hee doth all this by vertue of his patience and magnanimous fortitude; but rather confeſſe, as the truth is, that it is his carnall ſecurity, and hardneſſe of heart, his blockiſh ſtupidity, and obdurate ſenſleſneſſe, which is the true cauſe of his indolency, and want of grief; vnleſſe he would preferre himſelfe in his patience and fortitude before the Patriarchs, Prophets, and Apoſtles, yea, our Lord and Sauiour Ieſus Chriſt.

§. Sect. 8.
That there can be no true patience where there is no paſſion.

Laſtly, whereas men glory in their patience as being free from all griefe and ſorrow, their words imply a contradiction, for there is no place for patience, where there is no paſſion, ſeeing the very obiect of our patience is griefe and miſery, about the bearing and moderating whereof our patience is exerciſed; ſo that as there is no occaſion of griefe where there are no croſſes and afflictions; ſo there is no occaſion to ſhew our patience, where the heart is not aſſaulted with griefe and heauineſſe; and as there can be no occaſion to manifeſt valour and fortitude, if there be no enemy, nor any victory or triumph, vnleſſe a fight goe before: ſo vnleſſe there be, not onely miſeries and afflictions, as pouerty, infamy, ſickneſſe, death and ſuch like calamities; but alſo a ſenſe and apprehenſion of them, as great enemies to our peace and comfort, there can be no occaſion of vſing patience, which is only exerciſed in moderating our griefes, and bearing our miſeries; nor any prayſe of fortitude, vertue or victory, when as there is no enemy to aſſault vs. But when wee are pinched with ſharpe afflictions, and doe exceedingly abhorre them in our naturall diſpoſition, and are much vexed and turmoyled with griefe becauſe wee cannot ſhake them off, nor be freed from them; then to ſhew fortitude and magnanimity in bearing thoſe bitter and abhorred miſeries, valiantly reſiſting the tentation of murmuring and repining againſt Gods prouidence, of ſorrowing without meane or meaſure, or vſing vnlawfull meanes to be deliuered from theſe euils; to drinke willingly this bitter potion which God hath tempered for vs, to be reſtrained by the feare and loue of God, from burſting out into any intemperancy: and finally to ſubmit our wils with all meekneſſe and humility to the good pleaſure of God trying vs with theſe afflictions, which in our ſenſe and feeling are ſo irkeſome and grieuous; theſe are the fruits of true patience which commend our victory, and increaſe our triumph, and herein our Chriſtian prowеſſe and courage will appeare, when being aſſaulted with ſorrow and heauineſſe, it is confirmed and made inuincible by the ſweet conſolations of Gods holy Spirit, aſſuring vs of victory, and of the Crowne of glory prepared for them which ouercome. Wheras contrariwiſe that is ſtupidity and ſenſleſnes, and not vertue and Chriſtian fortitude, to beare afflictions, when wee doe not feele or apprehend them; neither (as one ſaith) doe they deſerue the prayſe of patience who indure (without complayning) the wounds of aduerſity, when being benummed they haue no ſenſe of paine.

Nulla virtus eſt qua non ſentiat perpeti, Senec. in Sap. non Cad. iniur. cap. 10.

Non habent fortitudinis laudem qui ſtuporem magis vulnerum tulerint quam dolorem. Amb. in Luc. 22.

§. Sect. 9.
That our patience muſt bee ioyned with conſtancy.

And ſo much concerning the firſt thing required in our patience, or manner of bearing the croſſe, which is, that we beare afflictions quietly and meekly, with moderate griefe Patientia eſt honeſtatis aut vtilitatis cauſa rerum arduarum & terribilium voluntaria & diuturna perpeſſio, Cic. in 2. Rhetoric.

griefe and ſorrow: the next thing is that we beare them conſtantly, neither ſeeking to ſhift them off by vnlawfull meanes, nor murmuring and repining againſt the prouidence of God, whileſt wee lye vnder this burthen of miſery. For as it is not ſufficient for a good Pilot to take pains in breaking one dãgerous billow, or in paſſing one ſtorme; but he muſt ſhew the like care and diligence in well gouerning the ſhip, till hee ſafely arriue at the wiſhed Hauen; and as it is not enough for a good Captaine or Souldier to ſhew great valour in the firſt brunt of the battaile, if afterwards he ſhamefully flee, or fight faintly & cowardly; but hee muſt couragiouſly continue fighting, till hee haue vanquiſhed the enemy and obtained victory: ſo it is not ſufficient to the being of Chriſtian patience, that we beare and brooke well one ſtorme of miſery, and through our ſlackneſſe and negligence ſinke or be wrackt in the next, but after one billow of affliction, and tempeſt of trouble is paſt and eſcaped, wee muſt expect and prepare our ſelues to indure an other, vntill we ſafely arriue in the hauen of happines. It is not enough for a Chriſtian Souldier, that he demeane himſelfe wel in the firſt conflict with afflictions, if hee afterwards grow weary of fighting, and flee out of the field by vſing vnlawfull meanes to eſcape; or fight faintly and not without grudging and murmuring againſt his Commander, for bringing him into the troubles and dangers; but he muſt conſtantly continue his courage and reſolution, after one encounter expecting and preparing himſelfe to ſuſtaine another, and neuer ceaſe ſhewing his fortitude and vnwearied magnanimity, till he haue obtained a full and finall victory. And this duty of continuing conſtant in bearing our afflictions with patience, our Sauiour intimateth and implicitely requireth, whereas he ſaith, that if a man will be his Diſciple, hee muſt take vp his croſſe daily, and follow him: & the Apoſtle exhorteth vs not only to begin well, but that we will let patience haue her perfect worke, that we may be perfect and entire, lacking nothing; & the Pſalmiſt, that we ſhould wait patiently vpon the Lord, and hope in him; the which the afflicted Church doth commend as a good thing in thoſe who performe it: It is good (ſaith ſhee) both to truſt, and to wait for the ſaluation of the Lord. An example of which duty we haue in Iob, who after one affliction, patiently endured another, vntill they were exceedingly multiplied in number, and increaſed in waight: as alſo in Dauid who after hee had receiued Gods promiſes of being King, indured manifold afflictions with much patience, & with great conſtancy waited Gods leiſure for the accompliſhment of them. And ſo likewiſe in Paul, who armeth himſelfe to beare all afflictions without fainting, both preſent, and to come; for ſo he profeſſeth, that he was ready, not onely to be bound, but euen to die for the name of the Lord Ieſus: And elſewhere hee ſaith, that therfore we faint not, but though our outward man periſh, yet the inward man is renewed daily, becauſe our light affliction, which is but for a moment, cauſeth vnto vs a farre moſt excellent, and an eternall waight of glory. But of this point I ſhall haue occaſion to intreat more largely, when I come to ſpeak of our perſeuerance in faith and patience, when God deferreth to helpe and deliuer vs out of trouble.

Acts 20.23.
Luke 9.23.
Iam. 1.4.
Pſal. 37.7.
Lam. 3.26.
Acts 21.13.
2. Cor. 4.1

§. Sect.
That our tience ioyned w willingne cheerefu in bearing croſſe,

The laſt thing required in our patience is, that we doe not onely meekly and conſtantly beare our afflictions, but alſo willingly and cheerefully ſubmit our ſelues herein to Gods good pleaſure; not becauſe wee cannot chuſe, and muſt whether we will or not, but with alacrity and readineſſe, as being a thing not onely not hurtfull and pernicious, but through the wiſedome and goodneſſe of God ruling and diſpoſing them, good and profitable. And this our Sauiour implyeth, where he enjoyneth vs to take vp our croſſe; whereby as it is not meant, that we muſt voluntarily draw croſſes vpon our ſelues of our owne making, but our receiuing of thoſe which it pleaſeth God to lay vpon vs; ſo it ſignifieth that wee muſt not vndergoe and beare them as a burthen forced vpon vs whether we will or no, with grudging and repining; but willingly, cheerefully, thankfully and with joy in the Holy Ghoſt. And theſe are the higheſt degrees of patience, which though few attaine vnto in full meaſure, yet all the faithfull deſire and labour after them, vſing all good meanes to attaine vnto this perfection. Yea, will ſome ſay, but before you required, that wee ſhould bee affected with ſorrow in our ſufferings, and moderately mourne in our croſſes and afflictions, and how then can wee at the ſame time rejoyce, ſeeing joy and mourning are oppoſite the one to the other? To which I anſwere that Chriſtian ſorrow and rejoycing may well ſtand together, ſeeing the one maketh way for the other; for therefore we bewaile our ſins, that we may rejoyce in the aſſurance of the pardon of them, of our reconciliation with God, and of our intereſt in all the gracious promiſes of the Goſpell. So that though wee giue the firſt part to be acted by ſorrow, yet we would not haue it to continue alwayes in the heart of a Chriſtian, for ſo it would grow immoderate and exceſſiue: but after this our vnfained repentance for ſinne, and aſſurance of pardon and our peace with God, followeth ſpirituall rejoycing, not onely in the conflučnce of worldly benefits, but alſo in tribulation and affliction, as the Apoſtle ſpeaketh. Againe, oppoſites may agree in the ſame ſubject, at the ſame time in a diuers reſpect, for ſo we may mourne becauſe by our ſinnes we haue crucified the Lord of Life, but rejoyce in that by his death hee hath wrought the worke of our redemption; wee may at the ſame time mourne in the ſight of our ſinnes, becauſe we haue diſhonoured by them our gracious Father; and yet rejoyce, in that our ſorrow aſſureth vs that they are forgiuen, and we receiued into Gods fauour; we may mourne in the ſenſe of our paine and ſmart, but yet rejoyce in it, as it is a ſigne of our adoption, when God correcteth vs as his ſonnes, that we may not be condemned with the World; wee may mourne in the ſight of our miſeries, as being the fruits of ſinne, but rejoyce in them as they are meanes to mortifie the fleſh and our naturall corruptions. Finally, as wee haue juſt cauſe of ſorrowing, in that we haue deſerued that the Lord ſhould depriue vs of all thoſe worldly comforts; ſo to be filled with joy, when we conſider that theſe light and momentany afflictions ſhall cauſe vnto vs a farre moſt excellent and an eternall waight of glory. In which regard it may truly be ſaid, that the Chriſtian ſpendeth his dayes in joyfull mourning, or mournfull joy, and that by theſe two Actors the Comedy of his life is plaid, the one no ſooner entring the Stage, but the other followeth; and interchangeably acting their parts, the one beginning as ſoone as the other endeth, and this beginning againe, when the other hath done. Laſtly, oppoſites may bee in the ſame ſubject in reſpect of diuers parts; now wee are partly fleſh, and partly ſpirit; and as in the one wee doe in time of affliction, grieue and ſorrow, groane and complaine, in the ſenſe and feeling of our ſmart & pain; ſo in the other we rejoyce in the aſſurance of the pardon of our ſins, and that the ſting of afflictions is plucked out; of our reconciliation with God, and that heauenly inheritance which is prouided for vs. And thus by ſenſe of paine the Lord maketh the fleſh to mourne that it may be mortified, reſtrained from ſinne for feare of puniſhment, and ſubdued vnto the ſpirit; and by this ſpiritual joy apprehended by faith he refreſheth the ſpirituall part that it may not faint and yeeld when the fleſh tempteth it to murmuring or deſpaire. And therefore if we ſpeake properly, as we cannot ſay that the fleſh rejoyceth in tribulation with this ſpirituall joy, ſo neither that the ſpirit mourneth with worldly and ſenſuall ſorrow. For as the Apoſtle tels vs, the fruits of the ſpirit are not this worldly ſorrow, griefe and mourning, but loue, ioy, and peace.; only it ſorroweth with godly griefe, in that by our ſinnes wee haue offended God our gracious Father, and moued him in his juſt diſpleaſure to inflict vpon vs theſe chaſtizements and afflictions.

Rom. 5.3.

That wee muſt ſhew our cheerfulnes in thankſgiuing and prayſing Gods Name.

Although therefore we muſt lay our afflictions to heart, that we may not only naturally ſorrow for our ſmart, but alſo ſpiritually for our ſins, yet in the regenerate part we muſt beare them with cheerefulneſſe, conſidering the cauſes and ends for which the Lord chaſtiſeth vs, and the notable fruits and benefits which accompany his corrections. And this our cheerfull willingneſſe and alacrity muſt be ſhewed and expreſſed, firſt, by thankſgiuing vnto God, and prayſing his holy Name; neither are wee bound onely to performe theſe duties in the time of our proſperity, and in the confluence of all Gods bleſſings and benefits, but alſo in our afflictions and troubles; not for the croſſes and calamities themſelues, which are to be ſhunned as the euils of puniſhment; but for the wiſe care, and louing prouidence of our heauenly Father, whereby hee ordereth and diſpoſeth them to our good; as the mortifying of our ſins and corruptions, the inriching of our hearts with his ſpirituall graces, and the furthering and increaſing of our heauenly happineſſe. For if the childe be bound to his Father in all loue and duty, not onely becauſe hee feedeth and clotheth him, but alſo becauſe hee gouerneth and correcteth him; not for the blowes and ſmart which he ſuſtaineth, for theſe his nature abhorreth as ſharpe and bitter, but for his care in reclayming him from his faults, which being nouriſhed would in time juſtly diſable him from receiuing his inheritance: And if being grieuouſly ſicke, we are content to requite the Phyſician and Chyrurgion for their diſtaſtfull and loathſome potions, their ſharpe corraſiues, cutting, lancing, ſearing, not onely with thankes and deſerued prayſe, but alſo with rewards; not becauſe of the things themſelues, which for the preſent increaſe our paine and torment; but becauſe out of their skill and care, they vſe them as meanes for the recouery of our bodily health; then how much more are wee to be thankfull vnto our heauenly Father chaſtiſing vs? ſeeing in his loue and care he doth hereby reforme vs of our ſins, & ſo maketh vs fit to be heires of that euerlaſting patrimony of his glorious Kingdome? How much ſhould wee magnifie this ſpirituall Phyſician of our ſoules? Not for the bitter potions which he maketh vs to drinke; but becauſe he intendeth, and accordingly effecteth our recouery vnto health, and that not the health of our corruptible bodies, which onely reprieueth them to the next Aſſiſes of ſickneſſe, but of our precious and immortall ſoules; not ſuch as is momentany & temporary, but perpetuall and euerlaſting. It is not therefore enough that wee take theſe great benefits, which Gods chaſtiſing hand doth reach out vnto vs with patience, and without murmuring; but wee muſt alſo receiue them with prayſe and thankeſgiuing. For ſo the Apoſtle requireth, If any man

1.Pet.4.16. (ſaith he) ſuffer as a Chriſtian, let him not be aſhamed, but let him glorifie God in this behalfe. And the Apoſtle Paul prayeth, that the Coloſſians might be ſtrengthened with all Col.1.11,12, might through Gods glorious power, not onely vnto patience and long ſuffering, but alſo that it might bee performed with ioyfulneſſe, and with thankeſgiuing vnto God the Father which had hereby made them meet to be partakers of the inheritance of the Saints in light. Of which we haue an example in Iob, who in his grieuous afflictions, ſheweth not onely his patience, but alſo his thankfulneſſe; The Iob 1.21. Lord (ſaith he) hath giuen, and the Lord hath taken; Bleſſed be the Name of the Lord. So the Church being in great tribulation, ac- Lament.3.22. knowledgeth Gods great mercy, in that they were not vtterly conſumed. And the Apoſtles Acts 16.25. Paul and Silas, being caſt into the dungeon, and hauing their feet faſt in the ſtockes, doe not onely patiently beare theſe afflictions, but alſo ſing prayſes vnto God.

§. *Sect.*12. That our patience muſt be ioyned with ioy and ſpiritual reioycing.

Yea, we muſt labour to goe yet further, & not onely with our cheerefull patience ioyne thankeſgiuing, but with them both ſpirituall reioycing and ioy in the Holy Ghoſt; the which our ioy muſt not ariſe from the afflictions themſelues, which were vnnaturall ſenſleſneſſe, and more than brutiſh inhumanity; (for who can laugh when hee feeleth ſmart, and reioyce in his torments and tedious troubles?) but from thoſe notable ſignes of Gods loue, which appeare in his fatherly chaſtizements, and thoſe ſingular fruits, both reſpecting grace and glory, which doe not onely accompany, but alſo follow after them. And in this regard our Sauiour willed his Diſciples, and with them all the faithfull, to reioyce and be glad in their bitter afflictions and cruel preſecutions, becauſe their Matth.5.11,12 reward was great in Heauen. So the Apoſtle Peter willeth thoſe who are exerciſed in this 1.Pet.4.13. fiery triall, not to thinke it ſtrange, but to reioyce, in as much as they are herein partakers of Chriſts ſufferings, that when his glory ſhall appeare, they may be glad and reioyce. And Col.1.11. this Saint Paul prayeth in the behalfe of the Coloſſians, that with their patience and long ſuffering, there might be ioyned ioyfulneſſe. An example whereof we haue in the holy A- Acts 5.41. poſtles, who being afflicted and perſecuted for the profeſſion of Chriſt, departed from the Councell, reioycing that they were counted worthy to ſuffer rebuke for his Name. So the Apoſtle Paul ſaith of himſelfe, that hee reioyced in his ſufferings for the Church of the Coloſſians; and giueth teſtimony to the Col.1.24. Theſſalonians, that they receiued the Goſpell 1.Theſſ.1.6. with much affliction, and with ioy of the Holy Ghoſt. So of the faithfull Hebrewes it is ſaid, that though they ſorrowed with the Apoſtle for his bonds, yet they ſuffered with ioy the Heb.10.34. ſpoyling of their own goods, knowing that they had in Heauen a better and more induring ſubſtance. Neither did he onely thus reioyce in his ſuffering perſecution for Chriſt and the profeſſion of the Goſpell, but in thoſe ſpirituall afflictions which hee indured, in the ſight and ſenſe of his infirmities, when hee knew that in them Gods power and grace was aduanced and magnified: for hauing receiued anſwere, when hee deſired to be freed from them, that Gods grace was ſufficient for him, and that his diuine power was made manifeſt in his humane frailty and weaknes; hee profeſſeth that very gladly hee would re- 2.Cor.12.9,1 ioyce in his infirmities, that the power of Chriſt might dwell in him; yea, that hee did take pleaſure as well in theſe infirmities, as in reproaches, neceſſities, perſecution and anguiſh for Chriſts ſake, becauſe when he was weake in himſelfe, he was ſtrong in Chriſt. Finally, if wee deſire to conforme our ſelues to the doctrine and example of the holy Apoſtles, we muſt not onely be patient, chearfull, ready to giue thankes, or yet reioyce in our afflictions in ſome ſmall meaſure, and (as it were) with ordinary ioy and gladneſſe; but with ioy very great, and as it were, in the higheſt degree; not onely reioycing, but euen triumphing, glorying and exulting in our ioy. And as it is ſaid of the Oſtrich, that ſhee doth not only eate iron, but alſo diſgeſteth and turneth it into her nouriſhment; ſo muſt wee not only be content (as it were) to ſwallow in ſilence and patience the difficulties of afflictions, which the carnall man can by no meanes diſgeſt, without being ſicke vnto the death with ſorrow and heauineſſe; but wee muſt labour alſo to ſucke out of them ſuch wholeſome nouriſhment, as may exceedingly refreſh and comfort vs. And Salamander like we are not onely to liue, but alſo chiefly to reioyce in the fire of affliction and tribulation. For ſo the Apoſtle Iames requireth, James 1.2. that we count it exceeding ioy, when wee fall into diuers tentations, not in the ſight of the afflictions themſelues, but becauſe we know that they ſerue to increaſe in vs Gods ſpirituall graces, and that the trying of our faith bringeth forth patience, which in the end will attaine to ſuch perfection, that it will lacke nothing. And thus the Apoſtle maketh a fruit of that fulneſſe of faith which wee muſt labour after; for after that it hath aſſured vs of the pardon of our ſins, and of our peace with God, we reioyce, yea, glory and triumph, not onely in our hope of heauenly happines, but alſo in affliction & tribulation. Rom.5.3. An example whereof we haue in the faithful Corinthians, who as they abounded in the 2.Cor.8.2 great triall of affliction, ſo their ioy alſo abounded; & in the Apoſtle himſelf, who pro- 2.Cor.7.4 feſſeth that hee was filled with comfort, and was exceeding ioyous in all his tribulations; inſomuch as when he would chiefly glory & 2.Cor.11. ſhew ſuch excellency, wherein hee was to be 16.to th matched with the reſt of the Apoſtles; he ſetteth teth downe a large Bed-roll of his many and grieuous afflictions, and concludeth, that if he muſt needs boaſt himſelfe and rejoyce, hee would rejoyce and glory in his infirmities.

And this is the patience of the Saints, which euery faithfull man muſt labour to attaine vnto, and neuer to bee at reſt vntill in ſome meaſure he be endued with it. It is true, that none can attaine vnto this perfection of patience, but thoſe who are come to fulneſſe of faith; and euen among Gods greateſt Worthies, who had this fulneſſe of perſwaſion, we may obſerue, that when their faith was ſhaken with grieuous tentations, their patience alſo was crazed and much blemiſhed with murmuring and complaining. As we may ſee in juſt Iob, the paterne of true patience, who by the weight of his affliction, is moued to curſe the day of his Natiuity; to complaine that God dealt againſt him by ſtrong hand, and laid puniſhments vpon him which hee could hardly juſtifie; if hee might vpon equall tearmes diſpute with him, or had ſome vmpire betweene them, who would indifferently heare and judge his cauſe. Yea, as deſperately impatient of enduring long miſery he prouoketh God to increaſe his afflictions, to hunt him as a Lion, and to ſhew himſelfe maruellous vpon him. And this was the caſe of holy Dauid, who vpon the occaſion of his grieuous afflictions penned many Pſalmes, full of dolefull complaints, which ſauour of much impatiencie. And alſo of the good Prophet Ieremy, who in the bitterneſſe of his griefe curſeth the day wherein he was borne; and repineth againſt his creation, becauſe hee came out of the wombe to ſee labour and ſorrow. And ſo the Prophet Ionas maketh his light affliction burthenſome, through his owne impatiency in bearing it, and then murmureth, and euen chideth with God for his ouer-much mercy in ſparing Niniueh, and his too much ſeuerity towards him in ſpoyling the Gourd, and cauſing him to bee ſuſpected for a falſe Prophet. And therefore ſeeing Gods chiefeſt Champions haue thus ſhewed their infirmities, let vs who come ſo farre ſhort of them, not dreame of hauing ſuch a patience, as is at all times perfect and free from all imperfection; much leſſe be caſt downe and vtterly diſcouraged, when in the time of tryall we bewray our weakneſſe, growing into rage and impatiency, becauſe wee faile in the degree of our patience: but let vs onely deſire earneſtly, & diligently labour after this heigth of perfection, and when we come ſhort of it, bewaile our imperfection. And foraſmuch, as we haue not this patience of our ſelues, but it is the gift of God, the fountain of all goodneſſe, let vs often haue our recourſe vnto him by feruent and effectuall prayers, laying open our miſeries and afflictions, with our inability to beare and ſuffer them; and crauing that hee will ſtrengthen and increaſe our patience, whereby we may be inabled to indure all thoſe croſſes that he is pleaſed to lay vpon vs, grounding our faith vpon that gracious promiſe, that if we aske his holy Spirit in the Name of Ieſus Chriſt, he will giue him vnto vs. And this the Apoſtle admoniſheth vs to put in practice, If any of you (ſaith he) lack wiſdome, let him aske it of God, which giueth to men liberally; reproaching none, and it ſhall be giuen him. Which words are properly to be vnderſtood of that ſpeciall wiſdome, which teacheth vs to beare our afflictions patiently, as the coherence of the words doth plainly ſhew. Which duty if we conſcionably and diligently performe, it will both increaſe our patience, the Lord being as ready to giue his ſpirituall graces, as wee to aske them; and much leſſen the load of our afflictions. For if we receiue much eaſe and comfort, when wee vnburthen our hearts of our griefes, by laying them open before a deare friend, if he will with patience, though with ſome wearineſſe heare them, and but pitty vs, though hee cannot helpe vs; then how much more eaſe and comfort muſt wee needs feele, if in our afflictions wee often powre out our ſoules before the Lord by feruent prayer, and vnfold vnto him all our griefes, ſeeing hee is neuer weary in hearing our complaints, and hath not onely more pity and compaſſion on vs in our diſtreſſes, than the moſt tender father or mother ouer their beloued childe; but alſo power ſufficient to deliuer vs out of all our afflictions, and either to leſſen our burthen, or to giue vs more ſtrength and patience to beare it with comfort, yea, with thankfulneſſe, chearefulneſſe, and joy in the Holy Ghoſt? And hauing thus commended our cauſe vnto God, let vs by a firme affiance rely our ſelues wholy vpon his prouidence and promiſed aſſiſtance, neither muſt we for the well bearing of our afflictions reſt vpon our owne naturall ſtrength and magnanimity, but labour to furniſh our hearts with that true patience, which is the gift of Gods holy Spirit. Vnto which when we haue attained in ſome good meaſure, let vs not think that we can now ſtand, fight and ouercome, by ſole vertue of his grace receiued, without any further helpe from God; but conſidering that theſe graces are in this life imperfect, and mingled with much infirmity and corruption, let vs not make too bold in reſting vpon our owne ſtrength, but relye our ſelues wholy vpon Gods aſſiſtance, preſuming vpon his promiſed ayde, that wee can thereby ouercome all difficulties and dangers, according to the example of the Apoſtle, who ſaith that hee could doe all things through the helpe of Chriſt which ſtrengthened him.

Luke 11.13.

Iames 1.5.

*Phil.*4.13.

Chap. II.

Of the excellencie, vtilitie and neceſſitie of patience.

§. Sect. 1. Of the excellencie of patience.

HAuing ſpoken of patience it ſelfe, and ſhewed what it is, together with the cauſes and properties thereof; it followeth, that according to our order propounded, wee come to intreat of the meanes whereby it may eyther be wrought in vs, or being begun, may be increaſed and confirmed. And theſe are of two ſorts; the firſt are certaine reaſons and arguments, by which this vertue being commended vnto vs, we may be inflamed with a true and vnfained loue thereof, and anſwerably with all feruency of deſire may vſe all diligence, and bend all our ſtrength for the obtayning of it. For as it is in vaine to preſcribe the meanes of thriuing in eſtate, to him that contemneth riches; or to prouide the daintieſt meate for him, who hauing quite loſt his ſtomacke, will not feed vpon it; ſo is it to little purpoſe to preſcribe meanes for the attaining vnto this rich treaſure, or to prouide this reſtoratiue nouriſhment of patience, which being fed vpon, would ſtrengthen vs for the bearing of the greateſt afflictions; if wee haue no deſire to be thus ſpiritually inriched, nor any appetite to feed on this dainty food for our ſoules; ſeeing wee will make no vſe of this meanes when wee haue them, but careleſly contemne and caſt them behind our backes. The ſecond ſort of meanes are thoſe arguments of comfort and conſolation, which are the food and nouriſhment of our patience, whereby it is ſtrengthened and preſerued from languiſhing and fainting. The former ſort may bee referred to theſe three heads, namely, the excellency, vtility, and neceſſity of this vertue; for if it be in its owne nature moſt excellent, vnto vs moſt profitable, and of ſuch neceſſary vſe, and great and vrgent conſequence, that wee cannot poſſibly bee without it; but that a mortall mayme will follow this defect; then haue we great cauſe to loue it, and out of our affection to a jewell ſo precious, to vſe all good meanes that wee may attaine vnto it. Now the excellency of patience may diuerſly appear vnto vs; for firſt it is ennobled by the Authour, who is God himſelfe; for he alone engraueth this vertue in vs by the finger of his holy Spirit, as an Image and liuely Picture of that infinite patience which is in his owne moſt perfect nature, and a ſmall ſparke of that moſt glorious and mighty flame; for he is oftentimes preſſed with the waight and haynouſneſſe of our ſinnes, as a Cart is preſſed which is full of ſheaues, as the Prophet ſpeaketh, and yet he beareth with vs; hee is content through his infinite patience to ſuffer all thoſe wrongs and injuries which we offer againſt him, till there be no remedie; yea, he not onely beareth with his owne ſeruants which loue him, but alſo with the wicked which are his enemies, ſuffering with long patience the veſſels of wrath, prepared to deſtruction, not preſently puniſhing their outragious ſinnes and high treaſons againſt his Majeſty, but deferring it to the end of the World, and therefore needs muſt this grace be excellent which wee not only haue from God, but alſo communicate with him. To which purpoſe one ſaith, that this vertue of patience is common vnto vs with God, for it taketh its beginning from him; and from him alone as from the fountaine of all goodneſſe, it hath its excellency and dignity; and therfore great cauſe there is, that man ſhould loue that, which is ſo glorious in Gods ſight. Secondly, the perfection of patience is the perfection of Chriſtianity, and they who haue attayned vnto it, haue nothing wanting; for ſo the Apoſtle teacheth vs; Let patience (ſaith he) haue her perfect worke, that yee may be perfect and entire, lacking nothing. And hereof it is, that the act of ſuffering for the Name of Chriſt, is made by the Apoſtle an higher degree of Chriſtian excellency vouchſafed vnto vs by God, than the act of beleeving: Unto you (ſaith hee) is giuen for Chriſt, that not onely yee ſhould beleeue in him, but alſo ſuffer for his ſake; which is not to bee vnderſtood ſimply of all ſuffering for Chriſt, for we may ſuffer whether we will or no, or with much murmuring and repining; but of ſuffering with patience, when as by bearing wee doe ouercome, and get the vpper hand of all our afflictions. In it conſiſteth the chiefe part of our Chriſtian valour and fortitude, which is not ſo much ſeene in doing, as in ſuffering; nor in reſiſting, as in yeelding and patient induring. Neither in truth is it any great matter to ſtruggle, ſtriue and make reſiſtance, when the burthen of affliction doth lye vpon vs. For euen the baſeſt creatures in their greateſt impotency and weakneſſe, are ready in their kind to repell harme; to reuenge themſelues vpon them who hurt them; and to ſtriue and reſiſt when they can neither ſcape by flight, nor defend themſelues] by hiding their heads from the danger of the enemy; and according to the prouerbe, a worme troden vpon will turne againe: but this is the true valour of a Chriſtian, when he can beare his croſſe without murmuring; ouerrule his owne nature, drawing him to reuenge, returne benefits for injuries, and ouercome euill with goodneſſe, according to the example of our heauenly Father: then doth he ſhew his fortitude, and moſt gloriouſly triumph ouer his ſpirituall enemies, when as hee vanquiſheth without ſtriking, and though vnarmed of all offenſiue weapons,

Amos 2.13.

2.Chron.3

*Rom.*9.22.

Eſt nobis cu Deo virtu communis.
patientia pit, inde cla tius & dig caput ſumi Cyprian, de bono p tient.

Iames 1.4.

*Phil.*1.29.

Leue eſt mi rias ferre, ferre eſt gr Senec. in Thyeſt.

Maxima tum patie pugnat in Armatos vincere ſ ros.

weapons, doth couragiouſly march into the field, hauing nothing in his hand, but the ſhield of patience, and by bearing the blowes doth get the victory. Then doth he ſhew his valour and vnmatchable ſtrength, when like a firme rocke hee ſtandeth in a Sea of miſeries, and when the huge billowes of afflictions doe beare againſt him, is not moued, but breaketh them in peeces with their own violence. Finally, then doth Chriſtian proweſſe and magnanimity appeare, when as wee keepe our ſtanding, (as it were) daring afflictions after one aſſault to encounter vs againe; and with vnwearied and inuinciable conſtancy and courage continue the the fight, till our enemies being ouercome, our great Commander the Lord of hoaſts doth ſound the retreat, either giuing vs the warrant of his word for our leauing the field, or calling vs by death to receiue that glorious Crowne of victory, and not when according to that heatheniſh and ſtoicall fortitude, we are ready to ſhift off the burthen of afflictions by violent death: the which in deed was nothing but baſe puſillanimity, which made them chuſe to yeeld as conquered, rather than to indure the paines of the fight; and timerous cowardize, which cauſed them to cut their owne throats, for feare of ſuſtaining ſome greater euill. Neither is it, as one of themſelues confeſſed, a thing hardy and prayſe-worthy, to contemne life in the time of aduerſity, but when wee can with patience indure afflictions, and liue in miſery, and not be miſerable. Moreouer the excellency of patience heerein appeareth, in that it maketh vs according to the degree of our ſufferings, liuing Martyrs. For as thoſe, who are truely ſo called, endured death, that they might giue teſtimony to the truth of Gods Word, ſo thoſe who ſuffer afflictions with patience do giue teſtimony to the truth, prouidence, power, mercy and goodneſſe of God towards them, ſeeing theſe onely are the cauſes which mooue them with all meekneſſe and cheerefulneſſe to beare thoſe tedious and grieuous afflictions, vnder the leaſt part whereof others murmure, yea blaſpheme, who doe not know or beleeue that God is ſuch an one in himſelfe, or at leaſt towards them. To this purpoſe one ſaith, that patience is a kind of Martyrdome; for as to dye by the hand of a cruell perſecutor is Martyrdome in open action, ſo to beare afflictions with patience, to ſuffer contumelies in obedience to God, and to loue him that hateth vs, is Martyrdome in the ſecret intention and cogitation. In which reſpect wee may (as another ſaith) bee Martyrs without eyther fire or ſword, if being afflicted wee doe inwardly in our minds preſerue patience; neither can we preſume with any certainty that ſuch an one is good, who hath not beene tryed and approoued by induring of euill. Laſtly hereby it may appeare of what excellency patience is, in that by vertue thereof euill is turned into good; and that which naturally hurteth and deſtroyeth vs, it maketh to ſerue for our vſe and benefit; for of curſes it maketh bleſſings, and of miſeries mercies; it turneth ſeuere puniſhments into fatherly corrections, whereby our ſpirituall eſtate is much bettered and amended; and ſignes of Gods wrath, into ſignes of his loue. And whereas afflictions in their owne nature are the beginnings of Hell torments by the help of patience, bearing them aright, they become furtherances to the joyes of Heauen, and make our crowne of bleſſedneſſe much more glorious. To this purpoſe one ſaith; perhaps ſome euill doth lye vpon thee, but if thou wilt, though it be euill in it ſelfe, it ſhall not bee euill vnto thee; giue thankes vnto God for it, and thy euill ſhall bee turned into good. And hereof it is, that if a Chriſtian be armed with patience, miſery it ſelfe cannot make him miſerable; ſeeing it maketh medicines of theſe poyſons; tortures the occaſions of triumph; profitable ſalues of tormenting corraſiues, for the curing of the ſores of ſinne, and drawing out the core of our corruptions; and whereas afflictions in their owne nature doe make vs to flee from God, as from the face of a terrible judge, by our patient bearing of them we approach neerer vnto him, as vnto a gracious Father, who correcteth vs for our good, and maketh theſe ſlight and momentany afflictions to helpe vs forward in the obtaining of that ſuperexcellent and eternall waight of glory.

Chryſoſt. in 1. Theſ.5.Hom. 10.

Quemcunq; fortem videris miſerum neges. Senec. in Herc. furente.

§. Sect. 2. Of the vtility and profit of patience. Cyprian de bono patienti Serm.3.

The ſecond argument to commend patience vnto vs, is the great vtility and profit which it bringeth to thoſe that haue it, for it ſerueth for all good vſes, and furthereth vs in all our vertuous indeuours; And (as one ſaith) it both commendeth vs vnto God, and preſerueth vs through his prouidence and protection; it tempereth anger, brideleth the tongue, gouerneth the mind, keepeth peace, ruleth and moderateth diſcipline, and breaketh the violence of luſt; it aſſwageth the ſwelling of pride, extinguiſheth the fire of diſpleaſure, and vnkindneſſe, reſtraineth the power of the rich, and cheriſheth the penury of the poore, &c. It maketh men humble in proſperity, couragious in aduerſity, meeke towards thoſe who offer injuries and contumelies; it teacheth vs quickly to forgiue others offending vs, but if our ſelues bee faulty, to be long and inſtant in crauing pardon; it repelleth tentations, indureth perſecutions, and bringeth our ſufferings and martyrdome to perfection. It is patience which layeth a firme foundation for our faith, and aduanceth on high the progreſſe of our hope; it directeth our actions that wee may hold on in way of Chriſt, whileſt we follow him in his ſufferings, and makes vs to continue the Sonnes of God, whileſt wee imitate the patience of our heauenly Father. More eſpecially this vertue of patience is very profitable vnto vs, both in reſpect of God and of our ſelues. For it tendeth much to the aduancement of Gods glory, as it is a meanes to manifeſt not onely it ſelfe, but alſo the reſt of Gods ſauing graces to the prayſe of him that gaue them, whileſt it inableth vs to beare all manner of afflictions and calamities for his ſake; for as the excellency of the worke or gift doth exceedingly commend the workeman or giuer; ſo theſe graces of patience, faith, hope, loue and the reſt, being the gifts of God and fruits of his holy Spirit, doe magnifie the the power, mercy, and bounty of the Lord, when they are made manifeſt by our ſufferings, and this Chriſtian armour of proofe doth much commend the skill of the workman, when it beats backe theſe fiery bullets of the worlds tentations; as it may appeare in the example of Iob, Dauid, Daniel, the three Children, and the Apoſtles of our Sauiour Chriſt, who were in all things ready to ſubmit themſelues to the good pleaſure of their Lord and Maſter, and to teſtifie their obedience and deſire to glorifie him, euen vnto the death. So alſo it is very profitable vnto vs in reſpect of our ſelues: for firſt this patience doth lighten all our croſſes, and leſſen our paines; and that in a twofold reſpect: firſt as it doth ſtrengthen and inable vs to beare all miſeries and calamities, in which reſpect it may truely be ſaid that there is no burthen of affliction ſo heauy, which may not eaſily and comfortably bee borne vpon the ſhoulders of patience. And in this regard one ſaith, that patience is an impenetrable ſheild and impregnable Tower repelling all manner of euill; and as a ſparke falling into the deep ſea, doth not at all hurt it, but is it ſelfe extinguiſhed; ſo the greateſt euils which can happen, meeting with a patient mind, are themſelues quelled & quenched, and doe not at all amate it, becauſe the ſtrength of patience is able to ouercome all troubles and afflictions. Whereas contrariwiſe when men through impatiencie do ſtruggle and ſtriue againſt their croſſes and calamities, they are, like the bird in the limebuſh, or fiſh in the net, the more intangled; and being caught, are the more diſabled to beare them, or to indure the brunt of their ſharpe encounter; for as this faintnes and weaknes of mind doth diſable them, ſo as they cannot imploy their ſtrength to their beſt aduantage, but at the firſt onſet betake themſelues to flight; ſo doth it adde much ſtrength and courage to their enemies, when as they purſue flying and fainting forces, hauing now no need to fight, but onely to follow, kill, and ſeaſe vpon the pray; whereas it would much ſtay the violence, and pull downe the daring pride of theſe ſpirituall enemies, if they would manfully keepe their ſtanding, or being at the firſt ſomewhat diſordered, would with vndaunted courage recollect the ſcattered forces of their minds, and againe make head againſt them. Neither in truth haue theſe afflictions any force and ſtrength to foyle or ouercome vs, but what through our impatiency, feare, and cowardize wee giue vnto them; for (as one well ſaith) it is with paine, as it is with pretious ſtones, which take either an higher or deeper colour according to the foyle in which they are ſet, ſeeing it holdeth no other place, nor receaueth more ſtrength than that, which in our eſtimate we are content to giue vnto it. Secondly, this patience and meeke bearing of the croſſe doth much leſſen our afflictions in reſpect of God, who like a wiſe and louing Father doth commonly ceaſe further to correct vs, when as he ſeeth vs throughly humbled, and that wee beare his chaſtiſements with patience and meekeneſſe, in all things ſubmitting our ſelues to his good will and pleaſure, without any ſtrugling, murmuring, or repining, whereas contrariwiſe when being corrected for our faults wee ſhew our ſelues impatient, ſtubborne and vnruly, ſtriuing by all meanes lawfull and vnlawfull to eſcape Gods hand, this moueth the Lord to as much diſpleaſure, as the offences themſelues for which wee are chaſtiſed, and cauſeth him to lay on vs more and ſharper ſtripes, till by our ſufferings and ſmart wee haue learned dutifull ſubmiſſion to our heauenly Father, which wee would not practiſe out of our owne obedience. So that by our impatiency wee ſhall get no greater aduantage, than the refractary and vnruly Oxe by his ſtrugling to caſt off the yoke; for the more he ſtriueth, the faſter his Owner maketh it, and whereas his patient bearing of it would make it much lighter and eaſier, by wraſtling and ſtrugling hee doth but gall his necke, tyre himſelfe, and to his other labours getteth ſore blowes and ſtripes for his vnrulineſſe.

Moreouer, patience is exceeding profitable vnto vs, as it maketh vs conſtant, and in all eſtates like vnto our ſelues, not varying and changing with the mutability of our outward condition, but in all alterations continuing one and the ſame; neither yet depending vpon external accidents for peace and contentment, but making all conditions to ſerue our mind, and our mind ſubiect to none; and retaining our owne habituall ſweetneſſe of ioy and comfort, though we runne through (as it were) a ſalt Sea of miſery and affliction. And howſoeuer others who are toſſed with the tempeſtuous ſtormes of worldly miſeries are much inindangered, and euery hand-while are ready to make ſhipwracke of faith and a good conſcience; yet hee who is endued with this vertue of patience, is like one who hath paſſed and eſcaped all theſe dangers, and being now entred into the hauen of reſt, ſitteth there ſecure from all ſtormes and tempeſts, becauſe though they rage neuer ſo much, yet they cannot reach him; and though theſe huge billowes of afflictions appearing in his ſight, threaten to ouerwhelme him, yet when they approach neere, their proud waues fall downe and abate their fury, and either touch him not at all, or beat vpon him as againſt an immoueable rocke which breaketh them, it ſelfe receiuing no damage. And thus doth the Chriſtian man with patience ſettle his heart, as the Apoſtle teacheth vs, making it firme and conſtant againſt all the ſtormes of troubles and calamities; and thus doth hee poſſeſſe his ſoule with patience, as our Sauiour ſpeaketh, keeping it ſafe thereby, as in an impregnable Fort, which may well bee aſſaulted, but neuer ſcaled or ouerthrowne; and though, like the buſh appearing to Moſes, hee ſeemeth to be burnt with the fire of afflictions; and with the three children, to walke in the middeſt of this ſcorching furnace, yet doth hee ſuſtaine heereby no hurt, but by the helpe of patience eaſily ouercommeth all theſe difficulties and dangers. So that it fareth with men endued with this vertue, as with thoſe who being of a ſtrong conſtitution, continue in good plight in all ayres, and enjoy their health as well on Sea as on Land; or as with thoſe who hauing good ſtomacks, are able to digeſt all meates, and to ſucke wholſome nouriſhment out of the courſeſt commons; whereas contrariwiſe thoſe who are enfeebled with the ſickneſſe of impatiency, can (like tender and weake bodies) brooke no hardneſſe, nor agree either with the heat of proſperity, or with the chilling cold of aduerſity and affliction; neither can they well digeſt the wholſomeſt foode which this Earth can yeeld them, but through the malignity of their diſpoſition turne that which ſhould nouriſh them into poyſon, and make heauy croſſes of thoſe things, which are to others their ſweeteſt comforts. Furthermore, this vertue of patience is moſt profitable to defend vs againſt Satans tentations, and ſtrong armour of proofe to preſerue vs from being hurt by his malice and fury. For whereas his maine end is by theſe aſſaults of affliction, to moue vs to leaue our ſtanding, to murmure and repine againſt God, and euen to blaſpheme him to his face; and when hee can in this kinde gaine ground of vs, hee will double and redouble his blowes; patience croſſeth him in all theſe attempts; for when a man ſupported thereby, can with meekneſſe beare all theſe burthens, they will bee of no force to make him deſiſt from his good endeauours, nor to digreſſe out of the right path; yea when he can by vertue of this patience ſucke ſweetneſſe out of the gall of afflictions, and take occaſion out of his croſſes and troubles the more feruently and heartily to giue God thankes, and to prayſe his holy name; then will it weary Satan in this fruitleſſe fight, and make him willing to deſiſt from theſe encounters, which doe but weaken himſelfe, and ſtrengthen his enemie. Finally, this patience in bearing the croſſe doth much benefit vs, as it is a meanes of receiuing comfort from others; for when wee indure Gods chaſtizements with meekneſſe and humility, it is an effectuall argument to moue pity and compaſſion in the beholders, to make them to condole with vs, and to afford vs their beſt meanes of refreſhing and conſolation; all which helpes are ſo many hands, ſupporting vs that wee may not ſinke vnder the waight of our afflictions: whereas if wee with impatiency doe murmure and repine, curſe, ſweare, and ſhew all manner of diſtemper and outrage, wee are liable to the juſt rebukes of all that behold vs; and euery one thinketh that wee are well worthy to continue ſtill in theſe croſſes and calamities, vntill wee haue learned to beare them better. Laſtly, as this vertue of patience is very profitable in reſpect of this life, ſo much more in reſpect of the life to come. For as the Saints of old, ſo wee now doe through faith and patience inherite the promiſes, as the Apoſtle ſpeaketh, and that firſt as it furthereth and aſſureth vs of our ſaluation, For he who indureth to the end ſhall be ſaued; and it is a righteous thing with God to recompence tribulation to them that trouble his ſeruants, and to them that are troubled, eternall reſt at the appearing of Ieſus Chriſt. And ſecondly, as it maketh our crowne of glory much more glorious; for the greater our conflict is, the greater ſhall bee our triumph; and the more wee ſuffer in loue and obedience to God, the more rich ſhall our reward bee; it being juſt with God to crowne his greater gifts and graces, with a proportionable degree of glory and happineſſe. But of this I ſhall haue occaſion to ſpeake more hereafter.

Cedamus; leue fit quod bene fertur onus. Ouid.

Chryſoſt. in 1. Cor. 13. homil. 33.

Heb.6.12.

Matth.10.22.

2.Theſſ.1.6.

§. Sect. 3. Of the great neceſſitie of patience.

Heb.10.36.

Cyprian. de bono patientiæ. lib.

Rom.8.25.

The laſt argument to commend patience vnto vs, is the neceſſitie thereof; for as the Apoſtle ſpeaketh, We haue neede of patience, that after we haue done the will of God, wee might receiue the promiſe: In which regard one ſaith, that as faith is the foundation of Chriſtianity, ſo patience is the roofe and couering; for as this, that wee are Chriſtians, is to bee attributed to our faith and hope; ſo that this faith and hope may come to bee fruitfull, it is neceſſary that wee haue patience. But this neceſſity of patience will further appeare, if wee conſider that God enjoyneth and requireth it of vs, as a part of that ſeruice which we owe vnto him. So our Sauiour Chriſt hauing foretolde the afflictions of the faithfull, doth will them to poſſeſſe their ſoules with patience. And the Apoſtle requireth, that we be patient in tribulation; and that we runne with patience the race that is ſet before vs; neither is it ſufficient that wee haue this vertue in vs in ſome ſmall meaſure, but we muſt let patience haue her perfect worke, that wee our ſelues alſo may be perfect and intire, lacking nothing; as the Apoſtle Iames exhorteth vs. Nor is it enough that wee bee patient by fits, one while meekely bearing the hand of God, and another while ſtorming and raging, but hauing entertained it, wee muſt conſtantly continue in it; vntill wee receiue the fruite of our patience, euen the ſaluation of our ſoules. For ſo the ſame Apoſtle exhorteth vs; to be patient to the comming of the Lord; and as the husband-man waiteth for the precious Fruite of the Earth, and hath long patience for it, vntill hee receiue the former and the latter raine; ſo we muſt be patient and ſettle our hearts, ſeeing this comming of the Lord draweth neere. Againe the neceſſity of patience will appeare if wee conſider our preſent ſtate and condition in this life; for wee are in a continuall Warefare; and patience is a chiefe part of our armour to defend vs from being pearced with the fiery darts of troubles and afflictions, without which wee lye open to their force and violence, and are indangered by their cruell blowes to bee wounded euen vnto death. Our life is a race, wherein wee runne to obtaine the crowne of glory, and patience is a chiefe meanes to make vs well breathed, to keepe vs from fainting and tyring, and to enable vs to hold out vnto the end. It is a tedious pilgrimage, in which wee are often pulled backe with the briars of troubles, and often diſcouraged by the fowleneſſe or roughneſſe of the way; the danger of thoſe mighty enemies which lye in waite for vs, and our hard entertainment which wee find in our Innes; all which difficulties and dangers wee can no otherwiſe helpe, than by poſſeſſing our ſoules with patience, ſuffering with meekeneſſe whatſoeuer it ſhall pleaſe the Lord to lay vpon vs. For when this vertue faileth vs, then preſently we are vtterly diſcouraged, faint in our iourney and ſit ſtill; or haue our hearts hardned by our afflictions and become deſperate; ſo as we are ready to turne backe againe into the World, that we may mitigate our ſorrowes by enjoying carnall delights and the pleaſures of ſinne. Whileſt wee continue heere, it is of neceſſity that wee muſt ſuffer many afflictions; for wee were preordained to be made like to the image of our Sauiour Chriſt, not onely in glory in the life to come, of which the Apoſtle ſpeaking ſaith, that [a] when hee ſhall appeare, we ſhall be like vnto him, but alſo in [b] his afflictions and ſufferings in this life preſent, as St. Paul affirmeth. And as we are predeſtinate, ſo alſo are wee called to ſuffer afflictions, as the Apoſtle Peter ſheweth; where ſpeaking of ſuffering wrongs patiently, hee ſaith that [c] wee are hereunto called; for Chriſt alſo ſuffered for vs, leauing vs an enſample that we ſhould follow his ſteps. Neither is this the lot of ſome few alone, but of all the faithfull. For the Apoſtle telleth vs, that [d] all who will liue godly in Chriſt Ieſus, ſhall ſuffer perſecution: that [e] God correcteth euery Sonne whom he receiueth; and that they are baſtards, and no Sonnes who are not thus chaſtized. And this our Sauiour hath foretolde, [f] And you ſhall (ſaith he) bee hated of all men for my name. And againe, [g] the time ſhall come, that whoſoeuer killeth you, will thinke that hee doth God ſeruice: and a little after, yee ſhall weepe and lament, and the world ſhall reioyce, &c. So he hath taught vs, that it is [h] a narrow way and ſtraight gate, that leadeth to heauenly happineſſe, which is ſo difficult and vnpleaſant to fleſh & blood, that few will bee at the paines to find or enter into it. And the Apoſtle likewiſe telleth vs, that none ſhall [i] raigne with Chriſt in his glory, who doe not participate with him in his ſufferings; and that [k] by many tribulations wee muſt enter into the Kingdome of Heauen. Now from this neceſſitie of ſuffering afflictions, wee may alſo inferre the neceſſitie of patience; for as this is our chiefe ſtay to vphold vs in all our troubles and trials; ſo when we want it, we preſently ſinke vnder their waight; for as the ſhip which hath her ballaſt and burthen equally diſpoſed, is ſpeedy and ſafe in her paſſage, though ſhee bee deeply laden; whereas contrariwiſe, if either through the vnskilfulneſſe of them who fraught it, or the rage and furie of ſome cruell tempeſt, the burthen being toſſed and tumbled from place to place, doth lye all on one ſide, it is eaſily ouerſet with euery blaſt, and ſinketh into the Sea: ſo if the heauieſt burthen of afflictions bee quietly caried with meekneſſe and patience, they will not hinder our paſſage to the Hauen of reſt; but if through impatiencie, frowardneſſe, and murmuring, they be toſſed in our hearts to and fro, we ſhall quickly ſinke in the Sea of ſorrowes; yea ſo farre are wee from well bearing of our afflictions, without the helpe of patience, that without it, the beſt eſtate which this life yeeldeth, cannot giue vs comfort and contentment. But as weake and ſickly bodies agree well with no aire, and are not much bettered by their often remoues and changes of place, becauſe they cary about them their diſtempered

Luk.21.19.
Rom.12.12.
Heb.12.1.
Iam.1.4.
Iam.5.7.8.

a 1.Ioh.3.2.
b Rom.8.29.
c 1.Pet.2.21.
d 2.Tim.3.1
e Heb.12.6.
f Math.10.
g Ioh.16.2
h Math.7.13.
i 2.Tim.2.12.
k Act.14.22.

ſtempered humours, which are the cauſes of their diſeaſe: ſo he who is ſicke of impatiency and peeuiſh diſcontent, agreeth well with no condition, but picketh quarrels as well againſt his proſperity, as affliction, and is well (as we ſay) neither full nor faſting; but (like thoſe who are ſicke of a feauer) bitter and ſweet doe alike diſtaſte him, loathing the very ſight of wholeſome nouriſhment, becauſe his humour maketh euery thing to reliſh of his aguiſh diſtemper. Againe, from the neceſſitie of afflictions, wee may conclude the neceſſity of patience; ſeeing it is our wiſeſt way to beare that burthen with meekneſſe, which wee cannot ſhake off, and to follow the Lord without murmuring and complayning, when hee calleth vs to ſuffer thoſe afflictions, vnto which hee hath preordained vs; for (as one ſaith) hee is a bad Souldier who followeth his Commander with grudging and repining; and (as I adde) a foole too, ſeeing if his paines and dangers, which he muſt vndertake vpon neceſſitie, were voluntary and chearefull, hee might well hope after the conflict for prayſe and reward, whereas his repining ſeruice, is ſufficiently rewarded, if it bee pardoned. And ſo it were not onely faithfulneſſe but wiſdome in vs, to beare with patience and chearefulneſſe the croſſes which God layeth vpon vs; ſeeing though wee grudge and complaine neuer ſo much, wee muſt beare them whether wee will or no, being appointed thereunto; for as one ſaith of fate, I may truely ſay of Gods prouidence, that it leadeth the willing, and the vnwilling it draweth; and therefore we are put to our choice, whether wee will beare the croſſe willingly and joyfully, with prayſe and reward; or elſe whether we will or no, with repining and murmuring; hauing onely our labour for our paines, if at leſt wee eſcape further puniſhment for our impatiency. Finally, this vertue of patience is neceſſary to the well bearing of theſe vnauoydable afflictions, as being a notable meanes to moderate and mitigate all our griefes and ſorrowes; whereas if wee bee deſtitute of this ſingular grace, wee ſhall be as much vexed and turmoyled with our impatiencie, as with all other our afflictions, it being the nature thereof, to make light croſſes heauy and intolerable, whileſt it doth aggrauate them by all circumſtances, and maketh them worſe by a falſe opinion, than they are in our ſenſe and feeling. Now what folly is this to moleſt and diſquiet our ſelues with griefe and impatiencie, when as wee are already too much diſquieted with our ſmart and paine? and wilfully to hurt our ſelues, becauſe againſt our wills we are hurt by others? What is this, but to adde more to our burthen, becauſe it is already too heauie? and in childiſh ſimplicity and peeuiſhneſſe to beate the ſtone vpon which wee are fallen; harming our ſelues more with our impatiencie and fooliſh reuenge, than the hurt it ſelfe would haue done, if wee had borne it patiently? If indeed ſorrow and frowardneſſe would leſſen and lighten our afflictions, though they be vnpleaſant gueſts, there were ſome reaſon why wee ſhould giue them entertainment; but ſeeing contrariwiſe, they much encreaſe the euill which wee ſuſtaine, by adding vnto the torment of the body, the torment of the mind; and doe nothing elſe but vexe our ſelues, offend others and diſpleaſe God from whom we might expect a crowne for our ſuffrings, if wee indured them patiently; what reaſon haue wee to giue way vnto them? neither is it our ſufferings alone that can make vs happy; nor is it the croſſe it ſelfe that will bring vs that glorious crowne, vnleſſe wee carry it meekely and quietly, in loue and obedience to him who hath laide it vpon vs.

le miles qui imperatogemens ſe-Senec.
l.107.

ur volen-a, nolen-unt. ſeneca aſtoc.
l.107.

Non poteſt accipi dolorum & paſſionum Corona, niſi præcedat in dolore & paſſione patientia. Cyprian, de bono patientiæ.

Chap. III.

Of the meanes to worke in vs patience in afflictions, and first of Prayer.

§. Sect. 1. That heathen Philoſophy yeeldeth no ſound comfort in the time of affliction.

AND thus haue I ſet downe ſuch reaſons and arguments, as doe ſufficiently commend vnto vs patience in afflictions, that thereby our hearts may bee inflamed with the loue of ſo excellent, profitable and neceſſary a vertue, and to bee moued with all deſire and indeuour to vſe all good meanes to attaine vnto it; now it followeth according to my order propounded, that I alſo ſhew thoſe meanes whereby this ſingular grace of God, may be either begun where it is not, or confirmed and increaſed where it is. And leſt wee ſhould ſeeke for patience where it is not to bee found, and ſo looſe our labour, wee are to know, that it is no naturall faculty, which hath its beginning in our being; no inherent quality, fortitude or conſtancy, which is borne and bredde with vs; for wee are naturally peeuiſh and impatient, froward and fretfull, complayning and crying out in the leaſt ſenſe of paine; and murmuring and repining againſt the diuine prouidence, when wee are neuer ſo little croſſed of our wils. And therefore they who would find this flower of patience, muſt not looke for it in the barren deſert of corrupted nature where it neuer groweth. Neither is it to be attained vnto by the help of natural reaſon and Philoſophy, which propoundeth vnto vs only ſhadows of comforts, that haue a ſeeming ſhew a farre off, but vaniſh away when we ſeeke to catch them; and offereth vnto vs rotten props for the vpholding of our patience;

ence; which being guilded ouer with humane witte, art and eloquence, doe ſeeme to bee of ſome ſtrength, ſo long as our patience being vnburthened, ſtandeth vpright in its owne ſtrength; but when it is tryed and preſſed with the leaſt waight of afflictions, then they faile, and (as it were) breake in ſitters, bewraying their weakeneſſe and inſufficiency; together with the folly of thoſe who inuented them, and of vs who truſted in them; and like falſe friends they leaue and forſake vs, when needing their helpe we reſort and flye vnto them. For as the heathen Philoſophers were for the moſt part ignorant of the chiefe cauſes of all afflictions; not aſcribing them vnto God, and his wiſe and juſt prouidence, but vnto fate and deſtiny; chance and fortune; not looking vnto the chiefe deſeruing cauſes, which are our ſinnes, and principally the whole corruption of our nature, the ignorance of God, and the neglect and contempt of his true worſhip and ſeruice; but imagining that all hapned by the guidance and direction of blind fortune, which put no difference betweene the good and bad, juſt and wicked: ſo accordingly they applied falſe remedies, and vſed medicines which were as loathſome as the diſeaſe which they ſought to cure. As namely that we muſt beare with patience that which wee cannot auoide; whereas that alone is enough to make a man breake out into all impatience, when as hee conſidereth that his miſeries which are preſently intolerable; are alſo remedileſſe, and not to be auoided for the time to come. That it becommeth not a wiſe man to be paſſionate; and that it is folly to adde to our other miſeries, which are already too heauy, the waight of ſorrow and vexation of mind, that wee beare a burthen which is common to many, and that wee haue innumerable companions in our griefes; finally that all mankind are liable and ſubject to manifold miſeries and afflictions, and therefore wee muſt not take it ill, if we bee not exempted from the common lot. But in the meanetime they make no mention of Gods prouidence diſpoſing all our afflictions, and turning them to our good; they doe not ſhew that they are proportioned to the meaſure of our ſtrength, ſo as they ſhall neuer ouerwhelme vs; nor that they are the chaſtiſements of a gracious Father, and the fruits of his loue; nor that they are by him made profitable for the aduancing of our ſpirituall eſtate, the inriching of vs with heauenly graces, and the furthering of our eternall ſaluation. Finally they put vs in no hope and aſſurance that God is preſent with vs in all our troubles, and in his good time will deliuer vs out of all our afflictions; and therefore they are not to be reſorted vnto by thoſe that lye vnder the croſſe, as being but miſerable comforters, who onely vtter ſome magnifique and glorious ſpeeches, which haue no ſound ground of reaſon to reſt vpon; and require great matters of their Diſciples; but doe not with any waight of argument arme their patience and reſolution, nor inable them to performe that which is required of them.

§. Sect. 2
That we h by nature n true patie but that it i Gods free gift.

But if wee would haue found comfort in all our croſſes and afflictions, wee muſt ſeeke for it in the Word of God and carefully vſe thoſe meanes which are there preſcribed for the ſtrengthening and increaſing of our patience. And theſe may be referred to two generall heads, namely prayer, and meditation. The firſt and chiefe meanes of patience and comfort in all our troubles, is that wee daily haue our recourſe vnto God by feruent & effectuall Prayer, wherein we are to craue, that by his Holy Spirit he will worke in vs theſe gifts and graces, whereby we may be inabled to beare afflictions. For howſoeuer we ſeeme in the time of proſperity ſo conſtant, comfortable and couragious, that nothing can diſmay vs, yet no ſooner is the Sunne of worldly happineſſe ſet, but preſently all our comfort is cooled, and joy quenched; and being nipped and pinched with the froſt of affliction, wee breake out into all impatiency, and paſſe our time in horror and deſpaire; for naturally we abhorre afflictions, and all chaſtiſement is for the preſent grieuous, as the Apoſtle ſpeaketh, ſo that wee tremble when we doe but heare of their approaching; ſhrinke and pull backe the ſhoulder when wee are called to beare the croſſe, and impatiently cry out and complaine when we are but touched. Neither is this feare of afflictions a corruption onely of our natures, but a created quality, which may be without ſinne, as we may ſee in the example of our Sauiour Chriſt, who earneſtly deſired that hee might not drinke of that bitter cup of affliction, and was brought into ſuch an agony that hee ſweat water and blood, ſo as hee needed to haue an Angell ſent to comfort him. And when he was put to drink the dregs of this loathſome potion, he was forced to cry out, my God, my God, why haſt thou forſaken mee. The which abhorring and lothing of the croſſe in Chriſts moſt holy nature was juſt and lawfull, being joyned with patience, obedience and conformity to Gods will, becauſe wee are euen by the Law of nature bound to ſeeke our owne preſeruation, and to ſhunne all cauſes and occaſions which may hinder our happineſſe: but being joyned with our corruption, it becommeth vnlawfull & wicked, making vs to break out into all impatiencie, and to murmure and repine againſt God. So that naturally we haue no patience or comfort in our afflictions, but it is the free gift of God, as the Apoſtle implyeth whereas hee

Heb.12.1

Luk.22.4
44.

Math.27.4

hee ſaith, that it was giuen to the Philippians to ſuffer for Chriſt, becauſe no man can ſuffer as he ought vnleſſe he receiue it of God. So elſewhere hee maketh this patience a fruit of the ſpirit; and affirmeth that it is God alone who doth comfort vs in all our tribulation. And hereof it is, that this is made one of his royall titles; The God of patience and conſolation; and the Father of mercies and God of all comfort. By whoſe power aſſiſting vs, and ſpirit inabling vs, wee who can neither doe not ſuffer any thing of our ſelues, can doe all things, as the Apoſtle ſpeaketh.

In all our afflictions therefore wee muſt haue our recourſe vnto God by earneſt and effectall prayer, that wee may from him receiue this comfort and patience which wee haue not of our ſelues; and in his good time haue helpe and deliuerance out of all our troubles. Which duty that we may performe let theſe reaſons perſwade vs; Firſt, becauſe as the Lord doth at all times require, that we ſhould performe vnto him this duty of his ſeruice, ſo more eſpecially in the time of affliction and tribulation. Call vpon me (ſaith hee) in the day of trouble, ſo will I deliuer thee, and thou ſhalt glorifie me. And againe, is any among you afflicted? let him pray. Is any merry? let him ſing Pſalmes. So hauing foretold the afflictions of his Church for their iniquities, hee willeth them to returne vnto the Lord their God by true repentance, and to call vpon him; and not onely requireth that they ſhould pray, but alſo teacheth them a forme of innocation. Take vnto you words (ſaith he) and turne to the Lord, and ſay vnto him, take away all iniquitie, and receiue vs graciouſly; ſo will wee render the calues of our lips. And thus our Sauiour Chriſt at the approaching of his owne paſſion; and his Diſciples affliction and perſecution, which was to follow thereupon, doth enjoyne them after a more ſpeciall manner, that they ſhould watch and pray, that they did not enter into tentation. And hauing foretold the great miſeries & tribulations which ſhould follow his Aſcenſion, vpon the people of the Iewes, and all the Church before his ſecond comming to judgement, he doth preſcribe this as a ſpeciall and moſt ſoueraigne antidote & preſeruatiue againſt al theſe euils, that they ſhould watch and pray continually, that ſo they might be thought worthy to eſcape all theſe things that ſhould come to paſſe.

Secondly, wee muſt in our afflictions flye vnto God by Prayer, becauſe it is one eſpeciall end wherefore the Lord correcteth vs; for as the louing and kinde mother cauſeth ſtrangers to affright her tender and dearely loued childe, when hee neglecteth her, and taketh delight to ſtray from her, that ſo ſhee may hereby preuent the danger of loſing him, and may cauſe him to returne vnto her for ſafeguard, and to caſt himſelfe into her armes, hereby inflaming his loue more towards her, and increaſing his confidence in her protection: So doth the Lord our gracious Father cauſe theſe bug-beares of afflictions to meete and terrifie vs, when we are ſtraying from him, that wee may flee into his armes for helpe and ſuccour; and ſuffereth vs to bee depriued of other helpes and comforts that wee may with fulneſſe of affiance reſt wholy vpon him; whereas if either wee were not at all afflicted, or had other ſuccours whereunto we might reſort in the time of our diſtreſſe, we would not ſeeke vnto him at all, or at leaſt, after a cold and looſe manner. And this end the Lord expreſſeth, where hee ſaith vnto his people Iſrael, that Aſhur ſhould not bee able to cure the wound of their afflictions; and that he would be vnto Ephraim as a Lion, and as a Lions whelpe to the houſe of Iuda, rending and tearing them with afflictions and miſeries, and that he would ſpoyle, goe away, and take them with him, as a prey which none ſhould reſcue, and that he would goe and returne to his place, clouding from their ſight the beames of his loue and fauour, till they acknowledged their fault, and ſought him diligently. The which his end hee attaineth vnto in all the faithfull, as appeareth by the words following; In their affliction (ſaith hee) they will ſeeke me diligently, ſaying, come and let vs returne vnto the Lord, for he hath ſpoyled, and he will heale vs; he hath wounded, and he will bind vs vp. So the Prophet Eſay ſpeaking of the faithfull in their afflictions, ſaith, O Lord, in trouble haue they viſited thee, they powred out a prayer when thy chaſtning was vpon them.

Hoſ.5.14,15.

Chap.6.1.

Eſay 26,16.

§. Sect. 5. The third reaſon taken from Gods gracious promiſes of hearing vs in the time of trouble.

Thirdly, Gods gracious promiſes of hearing our prayers, and granting our requeſts, may be an effectuall argument to moue vs to the performance of this duty, when we moſt need his helpe. Thus generally hee willeth vs to aske and it ſhall bee giuen vs, to ſeeke and we ſhall find, to knocke and it ſhall be opened vnto vs, for whoſoeuer asketh receiueth, and he that ſeeketh findeth, and to him that knocketh, it ſhall be opened. So our Sauiour hath aſſured vs that, Whatſoeuer wee ſhall aske the Father in his Name he will giue it vs. And the Apoſtle Iohn telleth vs, that we haue this aſſurance in Ieſus Chriſt, that if wee aske any thing according to his will, hee heareth vs. And if we know that hee heareth vs, whatſoeuer we aske, we know that we haue the petitions that wee haue deſired of him. Yea, ſo ready is the Lord to harken vnto the ſuites of thoſe that pray vnto him, that when he ſeeth this diſpoſition in them, hee promiſeth, that before they call, hee will anſwere; and whileſt they ſpeake, he will heare. But as God hath generally bound himſelfe by promiſe to heare and helpe thoſe that call vpon him, ſo more eſpecially ſuch as flee vnto him by prayer in the time of their affliction; according to that of the Pſalmiſt; call vpon me

Matth.7.7.

1.Ioh.5.14,15.

Eſay 65,24.

in Pſal.50.15. and 91.15. Pſal.145.19.

Deut.4.29,30,31.
Iob 8,5,6.
Pſal.119.50.

in the day of trouble, ſo will I deliuer thee, and thou ſhalt glorifie me. And againe, ſpeaking of thoſe that loue God, hee ſaith, Hee ſhall call vpon me, and I will heare him, I will be with him in trouble, I will deliuer him, and glorifie him. And elſe-where; he will fulfill the deſire of them that feare him; he alſo will heare their cry, and will ſaue them. And this promiſe the Lord doth ſpecially fit to his Church and choſen people; namely, that if for their ſinnes they were led into captiuity by their enemies, & if from the land of their captiuity they would ſeeke the Lord their God, they ſhould find him, if they did ſeeke him with all their heart, and with all their ſoule, &c. And particularly it is applyed to Iob by one of his friends; If (ſaith he) thou wilt early ſeeke vnto God, and pray to the Almighty; if thou bee pure and vpright, then ſurely he will awake vp vnto thee, and he will make the habitation of thy righteouſneſſe proſperous. And theſe are the promiſes which are made vnto thoſe who call vpon God in the time of their trouble; which whoſo applyeth vnto himſelfe vpon the performance of this duty, ſhall in the day of his affliction finde ſingular conſolation; and out of the death of ſorrow and deſpaire, ſhall bee raiſed to the life of true joy and comfort. And this Dauid found in his own experience, where ſpeaking of theſe gracious promiſes, he ſaith, that they are his comfort in trouble, and that he is by them quickned, and (as it were) reſtored to life againe.

§.Sect. 6.
The fourth reaſon, becauſe the Lord is our ſole Sauiour and deliuerer, & from him alone wee haue deliuerance from afflictions, or patience to bear them.

Pſal.18.2. & 46.1.
Pſal.48.3.
1.Sam.10,19.
Nahum 1.7.
Philem.
Act.
Eſay 38.
Heb.4.16.
Pſal.6.5.

Fourthly, we muſt in the time of our affliction haue our recourſe vnto the Lord by Prayer, becauſe hee is our ſole Sauiour and deliuerer; for if euery man out of reaſon and diſcretion will reſort vnto thoſe, in their troubles and dangers, of whoſe loue & power they are moſt aſſured; yea, if the bruite creatures by inſtinct of nature will flee thither in their extremities, where their chiefe refuge is; then by the ſame reaſon ought wee in all our tribulation and calamities to flee vnto the Lord for helpe and deliuerance, ſeeing his loue is matchleſſe, and his power infinite. For he is our chiefe ſtrength, our rocke, our fortreſſe, and deliuerer; he is our ſhield, the horne of our ſaluation and our refuge, as Dauid calleth him, hee is our hope and ſtrength, and helpe in troubles ready to be found, as elſe where he ſpeaketh. And he is approued thus to bee by the manifold experience of his Church and choſen people, for in the palaces of Mount Sion God is knowne for a ſure refuge. It is he that deliuereth vs out of all our aduerſities and tribulations, as holy Samuel affirmeth; he is good, and as a ſtrong hold in the day of trouble, and he knoweth them that truſt in him, as the Prophet Nahum teacheth vs. He is our King that protecteth vs, our Father that taketh care for vs, our Husband and Head, who loueth vs as his Spouſe and members; and therefore to whom ſhould we his his Subjects, Children and Spouſes, reſort and flee in the time of our dangers and diſtreſſe, but vnto this our powerfull and glorious King; our carefull Father and louing Husband? Eſpecially conſidering that as the Lord is our chiefe hope and helpe, from whom we may expect deliuerance from afflictions, or patience to beare them; ſo hee hath appointed prayer as the onely meanes for the obtayning of the benefits. For as the louing and wiſe parent hath in himſelfe a diſpoſition to beſtow al things needful vpon his deare child, and ſomtime to pardon his fault when he hath offended him, and ſometime to content himſelfe with the taking of leſſe correction on him than it deſerueth; yet doth he expect that his Sonne in all dutie and humility, ſhould intreat theſe fauours from him; and will neither beſtow his gifts before he ſue vnto him for them; nor pardon the offence committed, before hee humble himſelfe, acknowledge his fault, and craue pardon; nor yet ceaſeth willingly from laying on ſtripes, when hee hath begun to chaſtize him, till hee haue promiſed to amend, and deſireth to be ſpared: Euen ſo our gracious and louing Father is alwayes moſt ready to beſtow his gifts and bleſſings, to pardon our ſinnes, and to ceaſe correcting of vs, becauſe hee taketh no delight in our ſmart and paine; but yet vpon this condition, that wee ſue vnto him for theſe fauours, and (as it were) by the hand of prayer take theſe benefits out of the rich treaſury of his bounty and goodneſſe. And this the Apoſtle Paul implyeth, for though hee were perſwaded that he ſhould be freed out of his impriſonment, ſet at liberty, for the further ſeruice of God and benefit of his Church, yet he requireth the prayers of Philemon and the reſt of the Saints, as the meanes of his inlargement. And thus alſo Peter was freed from his chaines, and (as it were) drawne out of the jawes of death; but it was at the inſtant ſute of the faithfull, as the Holy Ghoſt noteth. So though the Lord were purpoſed to adde fifteene yeers to the life of Ezechias, and to acquit him from the ſentence of death pronounced againſt him, yet he doth not aſſure him of it till he had humbled himſelfe, and powred out his ſoule by feruent and effectual prayer. And therefore if in our wants, miſeries and afflictions, we would haue helpe from God, either for deliuerance or patience; let vs vſe this meanes which he hath ſanctified for this purpoſe; and ſeeing God doth require it at our hands, let vs goe boldly vnto the throne of grace, that wee may receiue mercy, and finde grace to helpe in time of need. Seeing hee doth not deny helpe vnto any that ſue vnto him for it; let vs flee to him for ſuccour in all our wants and dangers, according to that of the Pſalmiſt; Becauſe thou thou heareſt the prayer, vnto thee ſhall all fleſh come. And when wee are aſſaulted by our enemies, and purſued by them that hate vs, let vs with Dauid cry out vnto him: giue vs helpe againſt trouble, for vaine is the helpe of man. And ſay with good Ieboſaphat, O our God, wilt thou not iudge them? For there is no ſtrength in vs to ſtand before this great multitude that commeth againſt vs, neither doe we know what to doe, but our eyes are towards thee. And as prayer is the meanes of deliuerance out of afflictions, ſo alſo of obtayning patience to beare them, ſo long as it pleaſeth the Lord to continue them vpon vs: in which reſpect patience and prayer are by the Apoſtle fitly joyned together. Reioycing (ſaith he) in hope, patient in tribulation, continuing in prayer. Neither in truth can there be a ſtronger prop to vphold our patience, than feruency in prayer; both becauſe it receiueth hereby vertue & increaſe from God, and hath the meaſure thereof doubled by his holy Spirit, according to that of the Apoſtle, if any of you lacke wiſdome, (namely, that ſpeciall wiſdome which enableth vs to beare the croſſe with comfort and patience) let him aske of God, which giueth to all men liberally, and reproacheth no man, and it ſhall be giuen vnto him; and alſo becauſe it much eaſeth vs of our griefe, and lighteneth our hearts of the burthen of our afflictions, when as wee can lay open our grieuances before God, and powre out our complaints into his boſome. For if it be an eaſe to an afflicted mind, when as a man hath ſome ſpeciall and deare friend, to whom he may communicate his griefes, and make knowne his troubles and diſcontents, that at leaſt he may be pitied and bemoned of him, though hee haue no power or ability to releeue and helpe him: then how much more eaſe and comfort ſhall wee finde in laying open the cauſes of our griefes before God our heauenly Father? Who as he infinitely exceedeth all Mankind in tender loue, pitty and compaſſion, ſo hee is able, when as it ſhall be moſt for his glory and our comfort, to free and deliuer vs out of all our miſeries and afflictions.

Fiftly, we muſt in all our troubles haue our recourſe vnto God by prayer, becauſe it is the moſt opportune, fit and ſeaſonable time for this holy exerciſe; and this may appeare, not onely becauſe the Lord, infinite in wiſedome, and knowing what actions beſt ſort with all times and occaſions, doth more eſpecially enjoyne vs to call vpon him when we are in trouble and affliction: but alſo becauſe we are then moſt ready and beſt diſpoſed to the performance of this religious duty; and that with greater efficacy and feruency than at other times. For if euer we will poure out our ſoules before God by prayer, we wil doe it in our miſery and aduerſity; & though we haue neglected it in the time of our peace and flouriſhing proſperity, yet if we haue any ſparke of grace in vs, we will reſort vnto God, when with the rod of affliction we are whipped vnto him; according to the ſaying of the Prophet, O Lord, in trouble they haue viſited thee, they poured out a prayer when thy chaſtening was vpon them. And howſoeuer euen Gods deareſt ſeruants are in the time of their health and worldly welfare, looſe and ſlacke, cold and negligent in their ſuites and ſupplications, rouing in their Prayers at large, and vttering them weakly and remiſſely; like riuers in a large current or ſpacious plaine; yet are they in their afflictions and miſeries, moſt zealous and feruent, vehement and almoſt violent in preferring their ſuites; and then their Prayers like ſtrong ſtreames in narrow ſtraights, iſſue from their troubled ſoules with vnreſiſtable force, and admit of no ſtop and oppoſition. An example whereof we haue in the afflicted Church of Iuda, of whom it is ſaid, that their heart cried vnto the Lord, O wall of the daughter of Sion, let teares runne downe like a riuer day and night; take thee no reſt, neither let the Apple of thine eie ceaſe. Ariſe, cry in the night, in the beginning of the watches, poure out thine heart like water before the face of the Lord, lift vp thine hands towards him for the life of thy young children, that faint for hunger in the corners of all the ſtreets. And the like wee may ſee in the practice of Hezechias, who when his ſoule was afflicted, is ſaid in the feruency of his Spirit, to haue chattered like a Crane or Swallow; and in holy Dauid, who in his greateſt calamities and diſtreſſes, did make his moſt feruent and effectuall Prayers, as wee may ſee in many of his Pſalmes.

Eſay 26.16.

Lam. 2.18, 19.

Eſay 38.14.

§. Sect. 8.
The laſt reaſon taken from the example of Gods Saints.

Laſtly, the example of all Gods ſeruants from time to time, who haue moſt diligently and zealouſly performed this duty of Prayer and inuocation in their afflictions and tribulations, may ſerue as a ſtrong inducement to moue and perſwade vs to follow the like practice. Thus Dauid in all his afflictions fleeth vnto God as vnto his rocke, caſtle and ſtrong hold, by whom alone hee was ſafeguarded from dangers; and as vnto his deliuerer, and mighty Sauiour, who freed him out of all troubles, and plucked him out of the jawes of death. The Lord (ſaith hee) is my rocke and my fortreſſe, and hee that deliuereth mee, my God and my ſtrength, in him will I truſt, my ſhield, the horne alſo of my ſaluation, and my refuge. I will call vpon the Lord which is worthy to be prayſed, ſo ſhall I be ſaued from mine enemies. The ſorrowes of death compaſſed me, and the floods of wickedneſſe made me afraid, &c. But in my trouble did I call vpon the Lord, and cried vnto my God. And he heard my voice out of his Temple, and my cry did come before him, euen into his eares. So Hezekiah when hee was to be beſieged

Pſal. 18.2, 3, 4, 6.

2. Kings 1.2, 14, 15. & 20.2, 3.

with the mighty hoſt of Senacherib, and alſo when the ſentence of death was by the Prophet, as Gods Ambaſſadour, pronounced againſt him, reſorteth vnto God by Prayer, as his onely refuge. The Prophet Ionas likewiſe when he was in the Whales belly, prayed vnto the Lord his God, and ſaid, I cryed in mine affliction vnto the Lord, and hee heard me; out of the belly of Hell cryed I, and thou heardeſt my voice. The like duty was performed by Nehemiah and Daniel when they were in captiuity in the behalfe of themſelues and of their people. So the Diſciples being toſſed with a cruell tempeſt; and now ready to ſinke, flee vnto Chriſt by Prayer, crying out Lord ſaue vs, wee periſh. And the Apoſtle Paul in the behalfe of the Coloſſians, prayeth vnto God, as vnto the onely fountaine of all theſe gifts and graces, that hee would ſtrengthen them with all might, through his glorious power, vnto all patience and long ſuffering with ioyfulneſſe. Neither hath this beene the practice of theſe few alone, whom I haue produced for examples, but of all Gods faithfull ſeruants in all their diſtreſſes; and therefore the Pſalmiſt reckoning vp a nnmber of afflictions, wherewith the Church and people of God were toſſed and turmoyled, maketh this the concluſion of all, and (as it were) the foot of his Song; then they cryed vnto the Lord in their troubles, and hee deliuered them out of their diſtreſſe. But aboue all is the example of our Sauiour Chriſt, who being to drinke of this bitter cup of moſt grieuous afflictions, doth powre out his ſoule before his Father in moſt feruent Prayers; and as the Apoſtle ſpeaketh. In the dayes of his fleſh did offer vp prayers and ſupplications with ſtrong crying and teares vnto him, that was able to ſaue him from death, and was alſo heard in that which he feared. And therefore if he who was the deere and onely Sonne of God, had not thoſe things which he deſired in the time of his afflictions, but by the meanes of frequent and hearty Prayer; how ſhall wee thinke that God will of his owne accord, without our intreating, beſtow vpon vs thoſe gifts and graces which we need, or ſend vs deliuerance out of all our troubles? But if theſe examples ſeeme too high for our imitation, as being taken from the practice of ſuch Saints of God, who had attained to a great meaſure of excellency and perfection; let vs ſet before vs the example of Manaſſes, who though in the time of his proſperity, hee fled from God and forſooke him, committing all outragious wickedneſſe both againſt him and the whole Church; yet when hee was in tribulation hee prayed vnto the Lord his God, and humbled himſelfe greatly before the God of his Fathers, and praying vnto him God was intreated of him, and heard his prayer and brought him againe to Ieruſalem into his Kingdome. Yea, euen the Heathen Mariners though they were ignorant of God and his true Religion, yet by the very light of nature were guided to the performance of this duty in the time of their extremity and danger, crying euery man to his God for helpe and deliuerance. And the Niniuites likewiſe when they heard deſtruction denounced againſt their City by the Prophet of God, faſted, put on ſackcloth, repented of their ſins, and cryed mightily vnto God. And therefore if wee would bee conformable vnto the practice of all the Saints, and our Sauiour Chriſt himſelfe; yea, if wee would not bee worſe than Manaſſes, the moſt outragious ſinner that euer obtained grace and ſaluation; or than the very Heathens themſelues, who being ignorant of the knowledge of the true God, had onely the light of nature to be their guide; let vs in all our troubles and afflictions flee vnto God by feruent and effectuall Prayers, that ſo we may either be deliuered from the burthen of the Croſſe, or haue ſtrength to beare it with patience, comfort and joy in the Holy Ghoſt.

Ion.2.1,2.
Nehem.9.
Dan.9.
Matth.8.25.
Col.1.11.
Pſal.107.6.
Heb.5.7.
2.Chron.33.12,13.
Ionas 1.5.
Chap.3.8.

Chap. IV.

Of the things which God requireth in the perſon of him who is to make an acceptable Prayer, in the time of affliction.

And theſe are the reaſons which may moue vs to performe this duty of Prayer in the time of our afflictions; now that we may pray with aſſurance to haue our ſuites and petitions granted, there are diuers things required; ſome whereof reſpect the perſon of him that prayeth; and ſome the prayer it ſelfe. In reſpect of the perſon, that wee bee regenerate, ſanctified, and the ſonnes of God by adoption and grace; that ſo hauing receiued the Spirit of Adoption, [a] wee may cry in our hearts Abba, Father; for we know not how to pray as we ought, but this Spirit helpeth our infirmities, and maketh requeſt for vs, with ſighes and groanes which cannot be expreſſed, framing our Prayers (not according to the luſts of our owne fleſh, but) the holy will of God. And if we be thus qualified, wee may be aſſured, that we ſhal haue our ſuites granted; for what requeſt can God deny which his holy Spirit inditeth, and maketh? or how ſhall wee not obtaine that grace and mercy from him, which is conſonant to his holy will? Beſides the Lord hath bound himſelfe by his free promiſes, that he will heare the Prayers of his faithfull and righteous ſonnes and ſeruants, and will grant vnto them that loue and feare him, all their ſuits & requeſts; ſo the Pſalmiſt ſaith, [b] the righteous cry and the Lord heareth them, and deliuereth them out of all their troubles, and elſewhere; [c] the Lord will giue grace and glory, and no good thing

§. Sect.
The firſt th required in perſon is, hee be rege rate and ſ
ctified.
a Rom.8.15
b Pſal.34
c & 84.

thing will he with-hold from them that walke vprightly,* ſo by the ſame Oracle the Lord deliuereth this gracious anſwere: [d] Becauſe he hath loued mee therefore will I deliuer him, I will exalt him becauſe hee hath knowne my Name; hee ſhall call vpon me and I will heare him; I will be with him in trouble, I will deliuer him and glorifie him. And againe hee ſaith, that God will [e] fulfill the deſire of them that feare him, hee alſo will heare their cry and will ſaue them. So our Sauiour promiſeth, that [f] if wee abide in him and his words doe abide in vs, then wee may aske what wee will, and it ſhall be done vnto vs. And his beloued Apoſtle teacheth vs, that [g] whatſoeuer we aske, we receiue of him, becauſe wee keepe his Commandements, and doe the things which are pleaſing in his ſight. Yea, this was a receiued axiome among the Iewes, and therefore the blind man herein appealeth to their owne knowledge, [h] we know (ſaith he) that God heareth not ſinners, but if any man be a worſhipper of God, and doth his will, him heareth he. And therefore howſoeuer the Apoſtle attributeth much to Prayer, yet all is limited to the Prayer of a man who is juſt and righteous; the prayer (ſaith he) of a righteous man auaileth much, if it be feruent. So that if we would pray in aſſurance of Faith to be heard, and haue our requeſts granted, wee muſt be ſanctified and purged from our corruptions; and therefore theſe are well joyned together by the Apoſtle, [i] I will (ſaith he) that men pray euery where, lifting vp pure hands without wrath or doubting. For if wee come vnto God defiled and polluted with our naturall corruptions; and ouer-burthened alſo with our manifold and haynous tranſgreſſions and actuall ſinnes; the Lord will not heare vs; neither can wee hope that our prayers and ſuites can be acceptable vnto him, when our perſons are odious in his ſight. Manifold teſtimonies of holy Scripture might be alleaged to this purpoſe; the Prophet Dauid ſaith, that if [k] he ſhould regard wickedneſſe in his heart, the Lord would not heare him. And the Wiſe man telleth vs, that [l] the ſacrifice of the wicked is abomination to the Lord; but the prayer of the righteous is acceptable vnto him; that the Lord is farre from the wicked, but heareth the prayer of the righteous, and that [m] hee who turneth away his eare from hearing the Law, euen his prayer ſhall be abhominable. So the Prophet Eſay telleth the Iewes, that there was in God no want of loue to heare their Prayers, nor want of power, to effect their deſires: but the onely let and impediment was their ſins, which like a wall of ſeparation, or thick and impenetrable cloud, did hinder their prayers from aſcending vnto God, and his bleſſings & benefits from deſcending vnto them. [n] Behold (ſaith hee) the hand of the Lord is not ſhortened, that it cannot ſaue, neither his eare heauy, that it cannot heare, but your iniquities haue ſeparated betweene you and your God, and your ſinnes haue hid his face from you, that he will not heare. The which heauy judgement the Lord had before threatned againſt them, for their hainous tranſgreſſions; [o] When you ſhall ſtretch out your hands (ſaith he) I will hide mine eyes from you, and though you make many prayers I will not heare, for your hands are full of bloud. So the Prophet Ezechiel threatneth them from the Lord, that for their groſſe Idolatry and bloudy cruelty, hee would not heare their [p] prayers in the day of their afflictions though they did cry in his eares with a loud voice. And the Prophet [q] Michah to the ſame purpoſe; Then (ſaith he) ſhall they cry vnto the Lord, but he will not heare them: he will euen hide his face from them at that time, becauſe they haue done wickedly in their works. And therefore if in our afflictions we would make our prayers with any hope to be heard, let vs not approach vnto God in our ſinnes; and according to the exhortation of the Apoſtle, [r] Let as many as call vpon the Name of the Lord, depart from iniquity. For as the Pſalmiſt teacheth vs, the Lord imputeth it as great Preſumption to the wicked, that they take [s] his holy Ordinances into their mouthes, and hee hateth the very ſacrifices of prayer and thankſgiuing which are offered vnto him by impure hands, and vnhallowed lips. There is no man in his right wits would come as a ſuiter vnto his Prince, and bring his accuſer with him, who is ready to teſtifie and prooue to his face his treaſon and rebellion; much leſſe would any preſent himſelfe before ſo great and powerfull a maieſty, to make petition for ſome benefit after he had killed and murthered his Soueraignes only ſonne and heire, hauing ſtill in his hand the weapon wherewith hee committed this wicked act, imbrued and defiled with his bloud: There is no adultereſſe ſo ſhameleſly impudent, who would deſire pardon of her jealous Husband, hauing ſtill her Louer in her armes, with whom ſhe hath often committed filthineſſe in times paſt, and is reſolued againe to commit it for the time to come: or if any be ſo mad to make ſuch ſuites in this odious manner, they are ſure to be repulſed, and to finde wrath and vengeance, where they looke for grace and mercy: but thus doe they behaue themſelues towards God, who remayning polluted with their ſinnes do offer vp their prayers vnto him: for they bring their accuſers, euen their defiled conſciences and crying ſinnes, which continually accuſe and condemne them, and call for that due judgement and puniſhment which they haue deſerued: they bring the weapon into Gods preſence, (euen their ſinnes) whereby they haue crucified and ſlaine the onely Sonne of God; and they preſent themſelues into Gods pre-

Iob 27.9.
Iohn 9.31.

[o] Eſay 1.15.

[p] Ezech.8.18.

[q] Micah 3.4.

[r] 2.Tim.2.19.

[s] Pſal.50.16.

preſence to ſue for grace; imbracing ſtill with ardent loue and affection the World and worldly vanities, with whom they haue often committed ſpirituall whoredome, with a purpoſe to continue ſtill in their former vncleanneſſe; and therefore let not ſuch fondly imagine that the Lord will heare them, and grant their ſuites, but rather expect that in his terrible wrath he will take vengeance on them, and turne their temporary afflictions, into helliſh torments and euerlaſting puniſhments.

§. Sect. 2.
That being in our ſelues ſinners, wee are made righteous by faith in Chriſt, & purged from the corruption of ſin by repentance, and ſo are heard of God when wee pray vnto him.

Yea (will ſome ſay) but this is but ſmall comfort to thoſe who are in affliction, to heare that God onely regardeth the prayers of the righteous, and that he heareth not the prayers of them who come vnto him in their ſinnes; for who is righteous, and ſinneth not daily? And what other cauſe is there of our afflictions, but our ſinnes, which God in his iuſtice correcteth and puniſheth? To which I anſwere, that howſoeuer we are all naturally defiled with originall corruption, & haue the reliques of ſinne remayning in vs, euen to the day of our diſſolution; and though we continually adde hereunto innumerable actuall tranſgreſſions; yet wee may appeare righteous before God, and be as cleane purged from all ſinne, as if wee had neuer falne into it. As firſt when wee lay hold vpon Chriſt by a true and liuely faith, and doe apply vnto vs his obedience and merits; for then our vnrighteouſnes is couered with the rich robe of his perfect righteouſneſſe, and our corruptions are waſhed and cleanſed away in his moſt precious bloud, whereby it commeth to paſſe, that though our ſinnes were as crimſon, they ſhall bee made as white as ſnow; and though they were as red as Scarlet, they ſhall be white as wooll, as the Lord hath promiſed. And this is the purging of iuſtification, whereby God in Chriſt doth freely forgiue all our ſinnes, and reputeth vs as iuſt and righteous. But beſides this, there is alſo a purging away of our ſinne and corruption by ſanctification, when by vertue of Gods Spirit and a liuely faith, we are made partakers of the power of Chriſt's death, which mortifieth the fleſh and the luſts thereof, and the power of his Reſurrection, wherby we are raiſed to holineſſe and newneſſe of life. And hereof it commeth to paſſe, that though ſinne dwell in vs, yet it doth not raigne in vs; though ſome reliques thereof remayne in vs, yet wee are not reputed ſinners before God; not onely becauſe we haue receiued the grace of iuſtification, and ſo haue all our ſinnes forgiuen, and are clothed with the perfect righteouſneſſe of Chriſt, applyed vnto vs by a liuely faith; but alſo the grace of ſanctification, whereby the power of ſinne is abated in vs, and all our corruptions, partly mortified, and partly deputed to mortification, and ſhall at laſt be fully aboliſhed. And therefore ſeeing our ſins haue receiued a mortall wound, and ſtill languiſh vnto death, wee cannot properly be called ſinners, ſeeing it is dead to vs, and we to it; but iuſt and righteous, becauſe righteouſnes and holineſſe is begunne in vs by vertue of Gods Spirit, regenerating and ſanctifying vs, and ſhall daily grow and increaſe, vntill it come to full perfection; neither can ſinne be ſaid to liue in vs, being appointed to death and finall aboliſhment; but rather to bee crucified and deſtroyed, euen as wee commonly ſay of a condemned perſon, that hee is but a dead man, when as hee is condemned and deputed to death, though hee be not as yet brought forth to execution. And in theſe reſpects and no other were the Saints of God in the Scriptures, called righteous and iuſt, & had all the gracious promiſes of the Goſpel applyed and made good vnto them; not that that they were free from ſinne, for there is no man righteous that doth good and ſinneth not, and in many things we ſinne all; nor becauſe there was any perfection in their legall righteouſneſſe, or any full and exact conformity with the Law of God; but becauſe they were iuſtified by Chriſts righteouſnes, applyed by faith, and were ſanctified by his holy Spirit: the which their ſanctification was (like ours) imperfect, conſiſting in a ſight and ſenſe of their corruptions, and an hearty ſorrow for them; and alſo in a ſincere deſire and earneſt endeauour in the vſe of all good meanes appointed by God, to mortifie theſe corruptions, forſake all their ſins and ſerue the Lord with vpright hearts, in the contrary duties of holineſſe and righteouſneſſe. And therefore if we be indued with this liuely faith, and labour in the practice of ſanctification, then ſhall not we be reputed ſinners, but be accepted as iuſt and righteous in Gods ſight; and conſequently haue full right and intereſt vnto all Gods gracious promiſes; and particularly to thoſe which aſſure vs of deliuerance out of all our afflictions, or of ſtrength and patience to beare them with joy and comfort.

Eſay 1.18.

Eccleſ.
Iames 3.2.

§. Se
That wee ſhew our by our re
tance, an repentan the fruit thereof.

But yet it is not enough that we bee perſwaded of our iuſtification by Chriſts righteouſneſſe applyed by faith, and of our ſanctification by his Holy Spirit, vnleſſe wee approue them both to our ſelues and others, by the fruits of vnfained repentance, whereby (as it were by ſenſe and motion) this ſpirituall life is made knowne to the glory of God and our owne comfort. And vnto this God requireth that wee ſhould not only in generall bewaile and forſake all our ſinnes; but eſpecially and principally, thoſe which we thinke to be the cauſes and occaſions of our preſent croſſes and afflictions; and then when the cauſes of our calamities and tribulation are taken away, theſe miſerable effects alſo ſhall ſoone ceaſe and be remoued.

And if wee thus draw neere vnto God by vnfained repentance, he will alſo draw neere vnto vs, heare our prayers and deliuer vs out of all our afflictions; if we will cleanſe our hands, and purge our hearts, and ſorrow and weepe becauſe of our ſinnes, turne our laughter into mourning, and our joy into heauineſſe, and humble our ſelues before the Lord, hee will lift vs vp, as the Apoſtle ſpeaketh. For the Lord is neere vnto them that are of a contrite heart, and will ſaue ſuch as bee afflicted in ſpirit, as the Pſalmiſt telleth vs. And this is his owne gracious promiſe by the Prophet Eſay, that he will looke vnto him, euen vnto him, that is poore and of a contrite ſpirit, who trembleth at his words. From which mercy, the greatneſſe and multitude of our ſinnes cannot exclude vs, ſo that wee turne vnto the Lord by vnfained repentance, as wee may ſee in the example of the Iewes; whom though the Lord had taxed and accuſed by his Prophet to be moſt haynous and notorions offenders, yet hee offereth them mercy vpon the condition of their repentance. Waſh you (ſaith he) and make you cleane, take away the euill of your workes from before mine eyes, ceaſe to to doe euill, learne to doe well, &c. and then, come and let vs reaſon together, ſaith the Lord, though your ſinnes were as crimſon, they ſhall be white as ſnow, though they were red like ſkarlet, they ſhall be as wooll.

And this is that repentance which muſt continually bee renewed when wee preſent our ſelues in prayer before God, euen as wee daily and hourely renew our ſinnes; with which we muſt joyne as an inſeparable companion, an humble confeſſion of all our tranſgreſſions, together with an vnfained acknowledgment, that by reaſon of them, wee are vtterly vnworthy of Gods leaſt mercy, and moſt worthy if he ſhould enter into judgement with vs, not onely of thoſe light and momentany afflictions which lye vpon vs, but alſo of the fearefulleſt of Gods plagues in this life, and of euerlaſting deſtruction, death and condemnation in the life to come; and finally, that it is Gods wonderfull mercy that hee dealeth ſo fauourably with vs, not puniſhing vs according to the merit of our ſinnes, but like a gracious Father with all loue and tenderneſſe for our amendement. Concerning the confeſſion of our ſinnes, whereby wee lay them open before the Lord, wee are encouraged thereunto by Gods moſt gracious promiſes; namely, that if wee confeſſe and forſake our ſinnes, wee ſhall find mercy; and that if wee acknowledge our ſinnes, hee is faithfull and iuſt to forgiue vs our ſinnes, and to cleanſe vs from all vnrighteouſneſſe. And contrariwiſe, we are terrified from the neglect thereof by Gods ſeuere threatnings; for he that hideth his ſinnes, or denieth them, ſhall not proſper; becauſe he maketh God a lyar, who by his Word conuinceth all men of ſinne, as it is in the ſame places. So the Lord threatneth that ſeeing the Iewes ſaid, that ſurely Gods wrath ſhould turne from them, becauſe they were guiltleſſe, therefore hee would enter into iudgment with them, becauſe they ſaid, wee haue not ſinned. In regard whereof Iob profeſſeth; that though he were iuſt, yet hee would not anſwere, but would make ſupplication to his Iudge; and that though hee were perfect, yet becauſe he did not know his owne ſoule, therefore did hee abhorre his life. And of both this diſpleaſure of God threatned againſt thoſe who hide their ſinnes, and of this mercy promiſed to thoſe that acknowledge and confeſſe them, Dauid had experience, for he ſaith, that being in affliction, and hauing Gods hand heauie vpon him, and holding his tongue, his very bones conſumed, though he roared all the day. But then (ſaith he) I acknowledged my ſinne vnto thee, neither hid I mine iniquitie: for I thought I will confeſſe againſt my ſelfe my wickedneſſe vnto the Lord, and thou forgaueſt the puniſhment of my ſinne. And of this wee haue innumerable examples in the Scriptures. As in the Iſraelites, who being afflicted for their ſinnes, doe continually after their repentance, make their humble confeſſion of their wickedneſſe, as an introduction vnto their prayers for helpe and deliuerance, as wee commonly read in the hiſtory of the Iudges and the Kings. Thus alſo in the time of their captiuity, they cry out vnto God; We haue ſinned, we haue rebelled, therefore thou haſt not ſpared. So Iob in the time of his affliction, maketh the like confeſſion vnto God; I haue ſinned (ſaith hee) what ſhall I doe vnto thee, O thou preſeruer of men? And Dauid likewiſe, as appeareth throughout the whole booke of the Pſalmes. Yea not onely theſe and all other the Saints of God, but euen Pharaoh himſelfe, who in the time of his proſperitie, asked who was the Lord; yet in his affliction, maketh confeſſion of his ſinne, and craueth pardon. How much rather therefore ſhould wee lay open our ſinnes before our heauenly Father, who is ready to forget them, when wee remember them; to hide them, when wee diſcouer them; and to forgiue them, when wee confeſſe them? For hee is our ſpirituall Chirurgeon and Phyſition of our ſoules, and therefore to whom ſhould we lay open our feſtered ſores of ſinne, but vnto him, who by applying that ſoueraigne ſalue of his mercy, and the precious balme of Chriſts bloud is able to heale them? To whom ſhould wee make knowne the ſickneſſes and diſeaſes of our ſoules, but vnto him who hath both will and skill to cure them?

Ierem.2.35.
Iob 9.15,21.
Pſal.32.3.5.
Lament.3.42.
Iob.7.20.
Exod.10.16.

But as wee muſt in our afflictions confeſſe our ſinnes before God, ſo muſt we in all humility acknowledge, that we are not worthy of the leaſt of thoſe benefits which we ſtill enjoy, and that if the Lord ſhould enter into judgement with vs, he might as well depriue vs of all his bleſſings that remaine, as of thoſe which for our ſinnes hee hath juſtly taken from vs. We muſt ſay with Iacob, that [a]wee are not worthy of the leaſt of Gods mercies, and of all the truth which he hath ſhewed vnto vs, in fulfilling of his gracious promiſes; but contrariwiſe deſerue much more heauy plagues and puniſhments. And this humiliation the Lord requireth of the People, [b]Then ſhall you (ſaith he) remember your owne wayes, and your deeds that were not good, and ſhall judge your ſelues worthy to haue beene deſtroyed for your iniquities, and for your abominations. An example whereof wee haue in the afflicted Iewes, who in all their great extremities, humbly confeſſed it to bee the great [c]mercy of God that they were not vtterly conſumed, and adiudged themſelues to haue deſerued [d] woe becauſe they had ſinned. As alſo in Ezra who humbling himſelfe in the ſight and ſenſe of his owne and the peoples ſinnes, cryeth out, [e]O my God, I am confounded and aſhamed, to lift vp mine eyes vnto thee my God: for our iniquities are increaſed ouer our head, and our treſpaſſe is growne vp vnto the Heauen. And if we thus [f]iudge our ſelues we ſhall not be iudged of Lord; if we accuſe and condemne our ſelues, he will excuſe and acquit vs; and if [g]wee thus caſt downe our ſelues before the Lord, he will lift vs vp. For [h]hee looketh to him that is poore, and of a contrite ſpirit, who trembleth at his Word. Yea [i]hee dwelleth with him that is of a contrite and humble ſpirit, to reuiue the ſpirit of the humble, and to giue life to them that are of a contrite heart. An example heereof wee haue in Rehoboam and in the reſt of the Princes of Iudah, who [k]humbled themſelues and ſaid, the Lord is juſt; and when the Lord ſaw that they humbled themſelues, the Word of the Lord came to Shemaiah ſaying; they haue humbled themſelues, therefore I will not deſtroy them, but I will ſend them deliuerance ſhortly, &c. As alſo in Manaſſes, who when [l]in his tribulation he prayed to the Lord his God, and humbled himſelfe greatly before him, God was intreated of him, heard his prayer, and reſtored him to his Kingdome. And thus Daniel praying and humbling himſelfe before God, receiued this comfortable meſſage from God, [m]Feare not Daniel, for from the firſt day that thou diddeſt ſet thine heart to vnderſtand, and to humble thy ſelfe before thy God, thy words were heard, &c. Yea ſo much doth the Lord eſteeme of this humiliation, that he would not let that counterfeit humiliation of Ahab goe vnrewarded; but gaue him in regard thereof, a [n]temporary immunity from thoſe judgements and puniſhments, which by his Prophet he had threatned againſt him. If therefore in our afflictions wee would poure forth vnto God ſuch acceptable prayers, as may obtaine comfort in our croſſes, and deliuerance from all our calamities; wee muſt confeſſe our ſinnes, and humbly acknowledge that wee haue not deſerued Gods ſmalleſt benefits, but are worthy to haue the wrath of God to burne more hotly againſt vs, and to bee ouerwhelmed with much more heauy plagues and puniſhments. And ſo the Lord will excuſe vs, when wee accuſe our ſelues; remit our ſinnes when wee remember them; and abſolue vs from puniſhment, when in all humility we acknowledge that wee haue juſtly deſerued the fearefulleſt of his plagues. For if we, who haue but a little mite of mercy, are moued with compaſſion, when either our Sonne or Seruant doe humble themſelues, acknowledge their faults, and of their owne accord offer themſelues to ſuffer that puniſhment which they haue deſerued; then how can wee doubt that God will bee pittifull and ready to forgiue vs, when hee ſeeth vs thus humbled, whoſe loue and mercy towards vs is infinite and incomprehenſible? As therfore a 'man ſkilfull in the Art of ſwimming, being through caſualty caſt into the Sea, and ſtriuing by his ſkill and labour to recouer the ſhore, doth not when hee ſeeth a billow approaching oppoſe againſt it, becauſe it would caſt him further into the maine, his weaker force being farre too feeble to withſtand the violence of the mighty waue; but ſtoopeth and diueth vnder it, and ſo ſuffereth it to paſſe ouer him without receiuing any hurt: ſo when we ſee the huge billowes of troubles and afflictions raiſed by the ſtormy blaſts of Gods wrath and anger, neere approaching, and comming againſt vs; it is both vaine and dangerous to oppoſe againſt them by pride and impatiency, or to imagine that wee can reſiſt and withſtand them with our ſtrugling, murmuring and repining; ſeeing this will rather hinder vs from arriuing at the hauen of ſafety, and caſt vs backe into the depth of miſery; but like thoſe cunning ſwimmers wee muſt diue vnder theſe waues, which it is impoſſible to withſtand; bearing our burthen with patience, meekeneſſe and humility, and acknowledging that farre greater puniſhments are due vnto vs. And of both this confeſſion and humiliation wee haue notable preſidents in thoſe excellent prayers of [o]Ezra, [p]Nehemiah, and [q]Daniel. As alſo in the ſpeech of the prodigall Sonne after his conuerſion, and returning to his Father; [r]Father (ſaith hee) I haue ſinned againſt Heauen, and before thee, and am no more worthy to be called thy Sonne; vpon which humiliation hee was raiſed

[a] *Gen.*32.10.

[b] *Ezech.*36.31.

[c] *Lament.*3.22.

[d] *Cap.*5.16.

[e] *Ezra.*9.6.

[f] 1.*Cor.*11.31.

[g] *Iam.*4.10.

[h] Eſay. 66.2.

[i] and 57.15.

[k] 2.*Chro.*12.7.

[l] 2.*Chro.*33.12. 13.

[m] Dan. 10. 12.

[n] 1.King.

Si ſeruulum videas pecc propria conſ tentem, vltro offerre ſe p in flectis, & ignoſcis; de d mini miſer
one diffidis?
Ambroſ. in
Pſal.37.

[o] *Ezra.*9.

[p] *Nehem.*9.

[q] *Dan.*9.

[r] *Luk.*15.21.

raiſed out of his afflicted eſtate, and receiued both the pardon of his faults, and large teſtimonies of his Father's fauour.

Chap. V.

Of the things required in our prayers in reſpect of their matter, manner, time and continuance.

Sect. 1.
e muſt fi pardon miſſion ſinnes,

AND thus much concerning thoſe things which reſpect the perſon of him that prayeth; In the next place wee are to ſpeake of thoſe which are required vnto the prayer it ſelfe; and theſe either reſpect the matter of our petitions, the manner, or the time and continuance of this holy exerciſe. Concerning the matter of our prayers; we are firſt and principally to deſire the pardon and remiſſion of our ſinnes; for they are the wall of ſeparation (as I haue ſaid) which hinder all our ſuits from aſcending and entring into Gods eares, and his bleſſings from deſcending vnto vs; they are the poyſonous ſting of all our afflictions, which being pulled out, they become harmeleſſe, yea beneficiall and profitable for the aduancing of our ſpirituall good, and the furthering of our ſaluation. They are the cauſes of all our croſſes and calamities, which being taken away, either our afflictions ſhall haue an end, or of croſſes be turned into comforts; and of noyſome euils, become joyfull bleſſings. Whereas contrariwiſe if our ſinnes remaine vnpardoned, euen our freedome from our afflictions, is but a bondage; Gods ſparing of vs, a grieuous puniſhment; and the greateſt miſery, to be freed from miſery; ſeeing we are left of God as a deſperate cure, becauſe the Phyſicke of affliction will doe vs no good, and giuen vp vnto the hardneſſe of our owne hearts, to run on in our wicked courſes which lead to deſtruction, without checke and controlement. And hereof it is that the faithfull being in affliction obſerue this vſuall method in their prayers, firſt to acknowledge their ſinnes, and then to craue pardon for them, and deliuerance from their croſſes and calamities. So Daniel in that excellent Prayer for Gods afflicted Church and people, maketh firſt an humble confeſſion of their ſinnes, and then prayeth for mercy and the turning away of Gods wrath, and for their deliuerance and reſtoring out of the land of their captiuity. And Dauid joyneth theſe together; praying firſt for the appeaſing of Gods wrath and anger, and for mercie in regard of his ſinnes, and then deſireth to be healed, deliuered and ſaued out of his affliction and tribulation. So elſewhere hee deſireth the Lord to looke vpon his affliction and trauell, but becauſe though hee beheld it, yet hee would not pitty him, ſo long as his guilt and faultineſſe remained, therefore he addeth; and forgiue me all my ſinnes. And in the one and fiftieth Pſalme hee laboureth earneſtly for the pardon of his ſinnes, and maketh humble confeſſion of his wickedneſſe, and then beggeth for the comfort and joy of Gods Spirit. Yea this order was obſerued by our heauenly Phyſitian in the curing of bodily infirmities and diſeaſes, firſt to take away the cauſe of their ſickneſſe, Sonne be of good comfort, thy ſinnes are forgiuen thee, and then the ſickneſſe it ſelfe, Ariſe, take vp thy bed, and goe to thine houſe.

Matth.9.2.6.

§. Sect. 2. Whether wee may lawfully pray for deliuerance from afflictions, and after what manner.

And thus hauing craued and obtained the pardon and remiſſion of our ſinnes, in reſpect of their guilt: in the next place we may deſire to bee freed from the puniſhment; for that wee may lawfully pray for our deliuerance out of our afflictions, euen common ſenſe and the inſtinct of nature teacheth vs, mouing vs to flee and auoide whatſoeuer hurteth vs, and to follow and imbrace whatſoeuer is helpefull and profitable. And this naturall appetite of ſhunning euill, and ſeeking our owne good, is further warranted by Gods expreſſe commandement, enjoyning vs in the time of our afflictions to call vpon him for helpe and deliuerance. Vnto which wee may adde the example of the Saints from time to time, who haue prayed againſt theſe croſſes and calamities when they ſaw them approaching; and for deliuerance out of them after they were inflicted; which is ſo common and vſuall in the Scriptures, that it is but loſt labour to produce examples; onely that example of our Sauiour Chriſt aboue all exception is ſufficient in it ſelfe; who as hee vſed all good meanes to preſerue himſelfe from affliction and perſecution; ſo hee earneſtly prayed vnto his Father, that the bitter cup of his paſſion might paſſe from him. But howſoeuer wee may lawfully pray againſt afflictions before they come, or for deliuerance out of them when they are inflicted; yet not abſolutely and without any condition or exception; for thus onely wee muſt pray againſt ſinne which is ſimply euill, and in its owne nature, without any reſpect of good; and for ſpirituall graces and eternall life and happineſſe which are ſimply good, and haue in them no reſpect of euill. But as temporary and earthly benefits are not ſimply good, but being mutable and liable to our abuſe, become vnto vs through our corruption, not onely vaine and vnprofitable, but hurtfull and pernicious; ſo theſe momentanie croſſes and afflictions, are not ſimply and abſolutely euill, but through the infinite wiſdome, goodneſſe and power of God, diſpoſing and ordering them, become come to the faithfull exceeding good and profitable (as wee ſhall afterwards ſhew at large) and that both for the manifeſting and aduancing of Gods glory, and the furthering and aſſuring of our ſaluation. And therefore wee muſt not ſimply pray againſt them, becauſe ſo we ſhould pray againſt Gods glory and our owne euerlaſting good, but onely ſo farre forth as they tend to the hurt or hindrance of either of them. Againe the promiſes of God, which in all our prayers are the onely ground and foundation of our faith, are not in reſpect either of temporary and worldly benefits, or deliuerance from theſe momentany croſſes and afflictions, abſolute and without limitation; but alwayes reſtrained to the condition of his own glory, and our ſpirituall good and eternall ſaluation; and therefore in all our prayers, this condition is either to bee expreſſed or vnderſtood, becauſe wee are no otherwiſe to aske it than hee hath promiſed it. Neither were it in truth a benefit to receiue freedome from our miſery and tribulation, when as it will not ſtand with the glory of God and our owne ſaluation, but rather an exceeding great judgment and puniſhment; and conſequently it ſhould rather be a terrible threatning, than a comfortable promiſe; if the Lord ſhould tell vs that he would thus deliuer vs. And therefore he doth not promiſe vs all things which we deſire, nor to deliuer vs from all things which wee abhorre and feare, for this were the part of an dulgent and cockering parent, who deſireth to pleaſe his Childe in his fooliſh wantonneſſe for the preſent, rather than to ſeeke his profit and good for euer after; but rather like a wiſe, diſcreet, and truely louing Father hee promiſeth, that if wee feare and ſeeke vnto him, nothing ſhall be wanting vnto vs which is good; and that either hee will not afflict vs at all, or elſe that he will by his power and wiſdome conuert all our croſſes and calamities, to our comfort and benefit. And as the learned and faithfull Phyſitian, or skilfull Surgeon, doe not promiſe their patients which are full of corrupt humours, or indangered with old and feſtered ſores, that they will not diſtaſte their appetite, or any way moleſt and trouble them; but onely that they will effect the cure, and to this purpoſe vſe both the beſt and eaſieſt meanes and medicines which they can; and as the wiſe patient is well ſatisfied with this promiſe, being contented rather to ſuffer for the preſent a litle ſmart and paine, than to hazard his life by neglect of the meanes, or to haue his ſore turne to a fiſtula or incurable cancer: So the Lord doth not promiſe, that hee will not at all afflict vs, but that our afflictions ſhall not hurt vs; not that wee ſhall feele no ſmart or paine, but that hee will cure and ſaue vs by the beſt meanes which will ſtand with his owne glory and our good. And therefore like wiſe patients wee are to deſire, not that hee will pleaſe our appetites, but that he will effect a perfect cure; not that he will at our pleaſure pull off the corraſiue or working ſalue of affliction and tribulation, but when it hath drawne out the core of our corruptions, and made vs fit for the healing playſters of his mercies and gracious benefits. For otherwiſe if wee would enlarge Gods promiſes according to our owne luſts and fooliſh fantaſies, and deſire that which is pleaſing to our carnall appetites, and not that which is good and profitable; our carefull Father will not harken vnto vs. And if in the frenſie fit of our diſtempered paſſion, we either deſire things hurtfull for vs (as it were cold water in a burning feauer) or would haue the vnpleaſing plaiſters of tribulation remoued, or the bitter potion of affliction taken from vs, which our wiſe Phyſitian hath appointed for the effecting of the cure; hee will not regard our ſuits, ſeeing he deſireth rather to cure vs, than to pleaſe vs; and regardeth our well grounded requeſt, which out of a ſetled and ſound judgment we made vnto him, namely, that he would vſe the beſt meanes for the purging of our corruptions, the recouery of our ſpirituall health, and the euerlaſting ſaluation of our ſoules; rather than a new motion ariſing from our preſent ſenſe; whereby in a rauing manner we preferre our bodies, before our ſoules; and freedome from preſent and momentanie ſmart and paine, before deliuerance from neuer ending torments, and our euerlaſting ſaluation in the life to come. And therefore, if we would haue our Prayers heard in our afflictions, wee muſt pray for that which God hath promiſed; not abſolutely that croſſes may not befall vs, or that being inflicted wee may bee deliuered out of them; but conditionally, if this our ſuite will ſtand with Gods glory and our ſaluation; not that they may not happen, but that they may not hurt vs; not that wee may bee quite exempted from ſenſe of paine; for this perhaps would hinder the cure, and cauſe vs to rot in our corruptions; but that like a wiſe, faithfull and pitifull Phyſitian, he will handle vs as gently as poſſibly hee may, ſo as in the meane time the medicines vſed may bee effectuall for the purging of our corruptions, and recouery of our health. For thus (as one ſaith) God deliuereth his from tribulation, not that it may not at all befall vs, but that when it happeneth, it may not harme vs, and that wee may remaine vntouched of euill. For euen death it ſelfe, (which in its owne nature is the greateſt and laſt of worldly miſeries) will in the end ſeaze vpon vs; but to thoſe whom God loueth, it ſhall bee a ſleepe, the gate of life eternall, the beginning

Pſal.50.15.

*Pſal.*34.10.
*Rom.*8.28.

Deus ſuos li rat à tribu one, non q dem ne v ſed ne lædat noceat, ne tangat te *&c.*Bern ob.5.in tribulatio
nibus.

ginning of our comfort and refreſhing; and the very ladder whereby we aſcend into the joyes of Heauen. To the ſame purpoſe another ſaith well, that God heard Pauls Prayer, not according to his will, but ſo as it ſtood beſt with his ſpirituall wel-fare. And then inferreth, that it is not a thing much to be eſteemed; to be heard according to our appetite and deſire; but ſo as it may further our profit and benefit: for euen the Diuels themſelues were heard according to their will, when they deſired to enter into the heard of Swine; and the chiefe of them had his ſuite granted, when as he requeſted that he might tempt Iob, but it was to this end, that Iob might bee tryed, and the tempter confounded. And ſo the Iſraelites were heard when they luſted after fleſh; but yee know what followed, whileſt the meate was in their mouthes. And therefore doe not much eſteeme it to bee heard according to thy will; for ſometime God in his anger giueth that which thou deſireſt; and in his mercy denyeth that which thou askeſt. But when thou prayeſt for thoſe things which God commendeth, commandeth and promiſeth in the life to come, thou maieſt aske ſecurely, and intend thy ſuit with all earneſtneſſe, that thou maieſt haue it heard and granted, as being beſtowed by God in his mercy, and not in his anger and diſpleaſure. But when thou askeſt temporall benefits, aske them with moderation and feare, and commit the iſſue of thy ſuit wholy to him, namely that he will giue them if they be profitable, and deny them if they be hurtfull; for the Phyſitian knoweth better than the patient what doth hurt him, and what doth helpe him.

n ergo exaudominus dum ad voatem, quia dit ad sani-
m. &c. Aug.
d Serm. 53.
m.10.

The ſecond thing required in our Prayers reſpecteth the manner how wee are to pray in the time of our afflictions; which is in part touched occaſionally in the former ſection, where I intreated of the matter of our requeſts, namely, that we muſt not pray ſimply and abſolutely for deliuerance, but only ſo farre forth as it will ſtand with Gods glory and our owne ſpirituall good; not that the burthen of our afflictions ſhould at our pleaſure bee taken from our ſhoulders; but that either the Lord would eaſe vs of our load, or giue vs ſtrength and patience to beare whatſoeuer it ſhall pleaſe him to lay vpon vs. And this vertue of patience and ſpirituall wiſdome wee may abſolutely and without condition aske of God, both becauſe it is abſolutely good and therefore liable to no abuſe, but alwayes tendeth to his glory and our ſaluation; and alſo becauſe wee haue an expreſſe promiſe, that if wanting this grace we pray for it, the Lord will giue it vnto vs liberally; and withall a commandement, that we aske it in faith and wauer not; because the Lord hath abſolutely promiſed it, and therfore will vndoubtedly beſtow it. But beſides this there are diuers other things required, which I will briefly touch, becauſe it is not my purpoſe to ſet downe any full treatiſe of prayer, but onely ſo much as is neceſſary for the doctrine of afflictions. As firſt, that we preſent our ſelues before God with all feare and reuerence; for if we bee thus affected when wee come into the preſence of an earthly Prince, though he be but a mortall man like vnto our ſelues, onely becauſe he is Gods deputy, who hath in him but ſome ſmall ſparks of that infinite majeſty, which is in him whom he repreſenteth; then how much more ſhould we be thus affected, when wee come into the preſence of God who is King of Kings, and Lord of Lords? And this reuerence and reſpect of his glorious preſence, the Lord at all times requireth of vs, as he is our Father and Maſter; if (ſaith he) I bee a Father where is mine honour, if a Maſter, where is my feare? But eſpecially when we draw neere vnto him in performing the duties of his ſeruice, in which reſpect the Pſalmiſt willeth vs, to ſerue the Lord in feare, and to rejoyce in trembling. And the wiſe man counſelleth vs that wee doe not performe theſe duties of Gods worſhip raſhly and irreuerently, Be not (ſaith he) raſh with thy mouth, nor let thine heart bee haſty, to vtter a thing before God; for God is in the Heauens, and thou art on the Earth, therefore let thy words bee few. The which argument our Sauiour prefixeth before that perfect forme of prayer, to prepare vs thereby to call vpon God with all reuerence; becauſe hee is not onely a Father, but heauenly and full of all glory and Majeſty. Let vs therefore in the firſt place preſent our ſelues and our prayers before God with all feare and reuerence; and to this end let vs both conſider, what the Lord is before whom wee come, namely, a God infinite in Majeſty, glory, greatneſſe, power, ſeeing all things, euen the ſecret corruptions of our hearts, moſt pure, juſt, holy, the creatour and perſeruer of all things, &c. And alſo what wee are, namely, vile, wretched, miſerable, duſt and aſhes, wormes and no men, defiled with ſinne, and full of all imperfections, with which conſiderations being humbled, wee ſhall bee the better fitted to receiue mercy and helpe from God. For hee giueth his grace to the humble, and dwelleth with thoſe who are of a contrite ſpirit.

Sect. 3.
st thing ired in d of the ra, that nd come Gods prewith all e and re-ence.

1.6.

Mal.1.6.
Leuit,10.3.

Pſal.4.11.

Eccleſ.5.1.

Eſa.57.15.

§. Sect: 4.
The ſecond thing required is that we pray in truth.

Secondly, God requireth that we pray in truth; whereby I doe not onely vnderſtand, that wee muſt indeede deſire the things wee pray for, which is not neceſſary to be ſtood on in this place, becauſe there are few hypocrites in ſuites of this nature, ſeeing all deſire with all their hearts and ſoules to be freed out of their afflictions; but more eſpecially that

*Eſa.*29.13.
*Iob.*4.23.24.

Quomodo te audiri à Deo poſtulas cum te ipſe non audias? vis eſſe deum memorem tui cum rogas, cum tu ipſe memor tui non ſis? Cyprian. de orat. Domin.

*Pſalm.*145.18.

[a] *Leuit.*1.13.

[b] *Pſalm.*25.1.

[c] 1.*Cor.*14.15.

that wee draw neere vnto God in the time of our trouble, not onely with our lips, but alſo with our hearts; that ſo it may bee a Prayer of the heart and ſoule, as well as of tongue and ſpeech, and bee performed not only with the outward geſture of the body, but alſo in ſpirit & truth. For as it is alwaies a thing odious, to bee in our Prayers, diſtracted with wandring thoughts; and to haue our hearts and minds going a roauing after worldly vanities, when our tongues and lips make our ſuits and petitions vnto God; ſo eſpecially when wee fault after this manner in the time of our afflictions, ſeeing the Lord hath purpoſely brought vs into theſe ſtraights, that wee may more ſeriouſly, and with greater attention and intention of our minds call vpon him; and putteth (as it were) theſe pricks in our ſides, that wee may the rather be moued to keepe the right way without any vaine wandring, or wanton digreſſions. And if wee doe not thus call vpon God in truth, with our hearts, as well as with our tongues, we can haue no aſſurance that our petitions ſhall be heard or regarded of God; for (as one ſaith) how can we deſire that the Lord ſhould heare vs, when wee doe not heare our ſelues? Or how can we hope that God will regard our ſuites which wee make vnto him, when wee our ſelues doe not regard them? eſpecially conſidering that the Lord hath reſtrained his promiſe of hearing our Prayers vnto thoſe onely, who doe in truth call vpon him; for as the Pſalmiſt ſaith, the Lord is neere vnto all them that call vpon him; yea to all that call vpon him in truth. As therefore in the time of the Law, when for their ſinnes they were to offer vp vnto God whole burnt offerings, it was not enough, that they offered vp the outward parts alone, but they muſt alſo burne the very [a] intrailes and bowels: ſo when in the time of our tribulation wee offer vp this ſacrifice of Prayer, let vs as well lift vp our [b] hearts and ſoules, as our hands and eyes; and pray as well with the mind [c] and vnderſtanding, as with the tongue and voice; or elſe wee ſhall heare that juſt cenſure, that wee worſhip God in vaine, and haue no aſſurance that he will heare our Prayers.

§. Sect. 5.
The third thing required is that we pray in faith.

1.Iohn 5.14.
*Pſalm.*50.1
& 91.15.&
103.8.9.
Iob 5.18,19.

*Iam.*1.6.7.

*Mark.*11.2

Heb.4.16.

Thirdly, wee muſt pray in faith, whereby we are to bee perſwaded not onely that our perſons are accepted of God as juſt and righteous, but alſo, that our Prayers are heard of him, and ſhall moſt certainely bee granted being framed according to Gods will; more eſpecially we are to beleeue that God in his moſt ſeaſonable and due time will deliuer vs out of all our afflictions, and in the meane time will giue vs ſtrength and patience to beare whatſoeuer it ſhall pleaſe him to lay vpon vs. And this our faith muſt be grounded not vpon our owne workes and worthineſſe, but vpon Gods gracious and free promiſes, namely, that if wee aske any thing of him in the name of his ſonne, according to his will; it ſhall be giuen vnto vs; and more eſpecially that if we call vpon him in the time of our trouble, he will deliuer vs, that wee may glorifie him. That he will bee with vs in trouble, heare, deliuer and glorifie vs, and finally that hee will not alwayes chide nor keepe his anger for euer, as the Pſalmiſt telleth vs. And this ſpeciall faith thus grounded on Gods promiſes, is moſt neceſſary vnto our Prayers in the time of affliction, becauſe the Lord by his holy Apoſtle doth require it; for hauing willed vs, that if wee lacke Wiſedome wee aske it of God, who giueth vnto all men liberally; he biddeth vs to aske in faith and wauer not: for hee that wauereth is like a waue of the Sea, toſt of the wind and carried away. Neither let that man thinke that he ſhall receiue any thing of the Lord. And Secondly becauſe all Gods promiſes of hearing our Prayers are reſtrained to the condition of faith applying them to our owne vſe, for the Lord will not ſtretch out his hand of bountie and grace to giue, if we doe not alſo ſtretch out the hand of faith to receiue. And therefore our Sauiour biddeth vs whatſoeuer wee deſire when wee pray, to beleeue that wee ſhall haue it, and it ſhall bee done vnto vs. And the Apoſtle exhorteth vs in this faith and aſſurance to goe boldly vnto the throne of grace, that wee may receiue mercy, and finde grace to helpe in time of need.

§. Sect.
The fourth thing requi is feruency ſpirit and neſtneſſe.

*Pſal.*62.8.
1.*Theſ.*3.1
Rom.8.26.

Lam.2.18.1

The fourth thing required in the manner of our Prayers is, that wee pray feruently, pouring out our hearts and ſoules with great ardency and earneſtneſſe in our ſuites vnto God; and this is required in all our Prayers at all times according to that of the Pſalmiſt, truſt in the Lord all yee people, powre out your hearts before him, for God is our hope; and practiſed by the Apoſtle, who ſaith that he Prayed vnto God exceedingly day & night, and to this end the Lord giues vnto vs the aſſiſtance of his Holy Spirit for the helping of our infirmities; that wee who know not how to pray as we ought, but are ready naturally to pray with great coldneſſe and negligence, may hereby bee inabled to make requeſt vnto God with ſighes and groanes which cannot be expreſſed. But eſpecially wee are to pray thus feruently and earneſtly vnto God in the time of our affliction; as it is required of the Church of Iudah in her captiuity and miſery. Let teares run downe like a riuer day and night: take thee no reſt, neither let the apple of thine eye ceaſe; Ariſe, cry in the night: in the beginning of the watches powre out thine heart like water before the face of the Lord. Whereby is vnderſtood that likeas water, whoſe courſe and current hath beene long ſtopped in a ſtraight and narrow paſſage doth ſwell aboue its bankes or breaketh downe the damme which ſtoppeth it with vnreſiſtable force and violence: ſo muſt our Prayers haue the like force and vigour to ouercome all oppoſition, when wee are brought into theſe ſtraights of affliction and can find no iſſue out of them. A notable example whereof we haue in Iacob, who being in danger of his brothers rage and violence, is ſaid to haue wraſtled with God all the night vntill hee had preuailed with him; in which contention hee did not onely vſe his bodily ſtrength for the holding faſt of the Angell of the couenant, that hee might not depart from him vntill he had obtained his ſuite, for this would haue beene a ſmall and feeble meanes to haue preuailed with God; but as the Prophet Hoſea expoundeth it, by his ſtrength hee had power with God, and ouer the Angell, and preuailed, when as he wept and prayed vnto him. Thus the Church and people of God, are ſaid in their troubles to haue viſited God, and to haue powred out a Prayer when his chaſtening was vpon them; and that not coldly and remiſſely, but like a woman in trauaile, who being in great ſorrow and diſtreſſe, cryeth out in her paines, as the Prophet there compareth it. A form of which zealous prayer he ſetteth downe elſe where: Looke downe from heauen, and behold from the dwelling place of thine holineſſe, and of thy glory, where is thy zeale and ſtrength, the multitude of thy mercies and of thy compaſſions? they are reſtrained from me, &c. And ſo Hannah being afflicted and troubled in minde, becauſe of her barrenneſſe, and the inſulting prouocations of Peninnah her aduerſary, is ſaid to haue prayed and wept ſore; and as her ſelfe ſpeaketh vnto Eli in her juſt excuſe, to haue powred out her ſoule before the Lord, and of the abundance of her complaint to haue made knowne her griefe vnto God. And this earneſtneſſe in prayer the Prophet Dauid vſed in his afflictions, euen thirſting (as he ſaith) after Gods mercy for the granting of his ſuites, like the thirſty land, which being chopt with drought, ſeemeth to gape continually after raine, neuer ſhutting the jawes till it bee filled and ſatiſfied. Thus alſo the Diſciples being endangered by a tempeſt, flee vnto Chriſt for helpe, and with great earneſtnes cry out vnto him, Maſter, maſter, ſaue vs, we periſh; and as Marke recordeth it, in their feruent heate they expoſtulate the matter with him, ſaying, Maſter, careſt thou not that we periſh? of which kind of expoſtulations vttered to ſhew the feruency of ſpirit, we haue many examples in the booke of Iob, and of the Pſalmes. And thus our Sauiour Chriſt himſelfe in the time of his greateſt affliction, ſheweth alſo his greateſt feruency in Prayer, praying more often and inſtantly than at other times; for he is ſaid to haue prayed thrice, that the bitter Cup of his Paſſion might paſſe from him; and being in his agony to haue prayed more earneſtly, and to haue vttered his Prayers and Supplications with ſtrong crying and teares vnto him that was able to ſaue him from death. Yea, not only the faithfull, but euen the Heatheniſh Nineuites, who in the time of their proſperity were ſo careleſſe and ſecure, that they had need to be awakened with that heauy denunciation of their deſtruction; when they were brought into theſe narrow ſtraights, are ſaid to haue cryed mightily vnto God for deliuerance out of that danger. So that if we would not be vnlike all Gods Saints and ſeruants, yea, if we would not come behind the Nineuites themſelues, we muſt in the time of our afflictions, not onely pray vnto God, but performe this duty with great feruency and earneſtneſſe. For indeed, this is a chiefe end why the Lord afflicteth vs, and why alſo he differreth to deliuer vs at the firſt motion, becauſe he would haue vs more vrgent & inſtant in our prayer; as our Sauiour Chriſt plainly ſheweth vs in the Parable of the two friends, the one awakening and raiſing vp the other to ſupply his wants by his importunity; and of the vnrighteous Iudge, who by the poore widowes inceſſant ſuing and troubling him, was in the end mooued to doe her juſtice. An example whereof wee haue in the Canaanitiſh woman, who receiued from our Sauiour many repulſes, not that hee was vnwilling to hearken vnto her, and grant her petition; but becauſe he would giue her occaſion to ſhew her faith and feruency in following her ſuite. Vnto which feruency, if we do not attaine in the time of our afflictions we cannot hope to haue our requeſts heard and regarded, for if we be ſlacke, cold, and negligent in offering our ſuites vnto God, the Lord will be ſlack and ſlow in granting them; and if through our ſlouthfulneſſe wee fruſtrate Gods end in afflicting vs, he will alſo fruſtrate the end of our Prayers, and will not heare nor deliuer vs out of our afflictions. For although hee hath made many gracious promiſes, that hee will heare and helpe vs, when we call vpon him in the time of our trouble, yet they are reſtrained vnto this condition, if our Prajers be feruent and effectuall. So he promiſeth the Iſraelites, that if being in tribulation, in the land of their captiuity, they did from thence ſeeke the Lord, they ſhould ſurely find him; if they did ſeeke him with all their heart, and with all their ſoule. And the Apoſtle Iames telleth vs, that the prayer of a righteous man auayleth much; if it be feruent or effectuall. And therefore though wee bee neuer ſo eloquent and ample in our Prayers with our tongues and lips, yea though outwardly we howle and cry with our mouth and voice in our ſuites vnto God, yet the Lord will not regard them, if in reſpect of the heart and affection

Heb.5.7.

Ion.3.8.

Luke 11.7,8.

Luke 18.5.

*Matth.*15.

*Deut.*4.29.

Iames 5.16.

*Hoſ.*7,14.

Exod.14.15.
1.Sam.1.16.
Eſay38.14.
Rom.8.26.

fection they be cold and negligent. Whereas contrariwiſe if we powre forth our hearts before God with feruency of ſpirit, then though with Moſes wee ſay nothing at all, yet our prayers will bee lowde and ſtrong cryes to moue his attention; though with Hannah we make our ſuites after ſuch manner, that wee only mooue our lips, and haue no voice heard, and in regard hereof ſeeme vnto men drunke or diſtract of our wits, yet if wee powre forth our ſoules vnto God, hee will looke vpon our affliction and heare our Prayers. Though with Hezechiah wee are not able through the violence of our affliction to vtter a perfect ſentence, but chatter like a Crane or Swallow, our prayers will bee as effectuall to preuaile with God, if they proceed out of hearts inflamed with zeale and feruency, as though they were vttered in the ſmootheſt ſtile, and adorned with all the flowers of Rhetoricke. Yea, if wee cannot ſpeake at all, but onely ſigh and grone; yet this being the language which his owne holy Spirit teacheth vs, wee may be aſſured that he both vnderſtandeth it, and will alſo regard and hearken vnto it.

§. Sect. 7. The fift thing required, is humility, wherby we ſubmit our wils to the will of God.

Pſal.37.
1.Iohn 5.1
Math.

The fift thing required is humility, wherby acknowledging our owne blindneſſe and ignorance, by which it commeth to paſſe, that wee know not what is good for vs, nor what to pray for, but with Zebedeus ſonnes, aske we know not what; and on the other ſide the infinite wiſdome of God, whereby hee knoweth what is beſt for vs; and his boundleſſe bounty and mercy whereby according to his moſt gracious and infallible promiſes, he is alwayes ready to beſtow vpon vs all things which are good and profitable; we doe wholy reſigne vp our ſelues vnto his good pleaſure, ſubmit our wils which are continually ſubject to errour and miſtaking, vnto his moſt holy will, which is priuiledged from theſe infirmities; & wholy refer all our ſuits & petitions vnto his moſt wiſe conſideration, to be granted or denied, as will ſtand beſt with his glory, and the good and ſaluation of our owne ſoules. And this duty our Sauiour Chriſt hath taught vs in that moſt perfect forme of prayer, where next after the aduancing of Gods glory and kingdome, he willeth vs to deſire, that his wil may be done in earth as it is in heauen. Which if we obſerue, conforming our will in all things to the will of God, we are ſure not onely to haue all our requeſts granted, but alſo in ſuch manner and meaſure, as ſhall bee moſt for our ſpirituall profit, and the furthering of Gods glory, and our owne ſaluation; ſeeing God knoweth, when and by what means to effect them better, than wee out of our ignorance can preſcribe vnto him. Yea, in truth wee can haue no aſſurance that any of our prayers which we make according to our owne luſts, and not according to the will of God ſhall bee heard or granted; vnleſſe it bee in Gods diſpleaſure, for our judgement and puniſhment; ſeeing theſe humble Prayers, which wee wholy ſubmit to the will of God, haue the the promiſe of being heard, made vnto them; according to that of the Pſalmiſt, Commit thy way vnto the Lord, and truſt in him, and he ſhall bring it to paſſe. So the Apoſtle Iohn more expreſly telleth vs, that in this conformity vnto the will of God, conſiſteth all our aſſurance of hauing our petitions heard and granted; This (ſaith hee) is the aſſurance that wee haue in him, that if wee aske any thing according to his will, hee heareth vs. A notable example whereof we haue in our Sauiour Chriſt, who though hee did moſt earneſtly deſire to haue the bitter Cup of his Paſſion to paſſe from him, yet doth hee ſubmit himſelfe and his ſuite to the good pleaſure of his heauenly Father. O my father (ſaith he) if it be poſſible, let this cup paſſe from me: neuertheleſſe, not as I will, but as thou wilt. And thus we ſubmit our ſelues and our ſuites vnto Gods will, firſt in regard of the ſubſtance of them, when hauing prayed for deliuerance out of our afflictions, we can be content whether he will deliuer vs or no, leauing it wholy and freely to his choice and pleaſure, whether he will free vs from our croſſes, or ſeeing it good for vs that wee ſhould ſtill lie vnder them, will giue vs ſtrength and patience, ſo as wee may beare them with comfort and contentment. Secondly, when as wee doe not preſcribe any meanes vnto him, whereby wee would be freed from all our afflictions, but leaue it wholy to the diſpoſing of his wiſe prouidence; who with theſe, or other means; yea aboue, without, and contrary to all meanes, is able through his owne omnipotent power, to effect and bring to paſſe whatſoeuer it pleaſeth him. Thirdly, when we doe not limit or reſtraine him to either time or place, but leaue it wholy vnto his good pleaſure, who knoweth beſt when it is moſt ſeaſonable for the effecting of his owne good purpoſes; onely in generall, pray that he will then and not before free vs out of our troubles and afflictions, when as they haue effected thoſe good ends for which he ſent them; that is, enriched vs with his ſpirituall graces, and brought vs neerer vnto him by vnfained repentance. Fourthly, when wee conforme our wils to the will of God in reſpect of our ends, not crauing his bleſſings and benefits for worldly, carnall and ſiniſter reſpects; but that wee may employ them to thoſe vſes and ends, for which he hath beſtowed them; and principally that wee may the better be enabled to glorifie God; and be furthered in the way of our owne ſaluation. And if we doe not thus conforme our wils to Gods will, by propounding theſe ends to our deſires, wee can haue no aſſurance to be heard of God, or to haue our petitions granted, vnleſſe it be in his wrathfull diſpleaſure. And thus the Apoſtle Iames telleth thoſe Hypocrites to whom hee writeth that they asked of God, and receiued not, becauſe they asked amiſſe; that they might conſume Gods bleſſings receiued vpon their owne luſts. Wherein the Lord dealeth graciouſly with his children and ſeruants, ſeeing the abuſe of his benefits would much more hurt and endamage them, than the obtayning and hauing them would doe them good. And therefore, as the wiſe Father doth out of meere loue deny his childe a knife, though he earneſtly beggeth it, when he knoweth that he doth deſire it to play the wanton with it, to the endangering of himſelfe or others: and keepeth him bare of money, when he deſireth it that hee may ſpend it in riot, wantonneſſe, drunkenneſſe, and ſuch other wicked courſes; and would not ceaſe to giue him more ſtripes, if hee ſhould perceiue by his plaine ſpeeches, that hee therefore craued to bee ſpared, that hee might returne to his olde wayes, and againe incurre his diſpleaſure, by commiting wilfully his former faults: ſo the Lord will in loue and mercy deny to heare vs, crying vnto him for deliuerance out of our troubles, when our ſuites haue ill ends propounded vnto them, and not ſuch as are pleaſing vnto him, and agreeable to his reuealed will. For example, the end which he propoundeth of our deliuerance out of affliction is, that being ſet at liberty, wee might thankfully remember ſo great a benefit, and ſo bee mooued to glorifie him by our obedience, and by rendering vnto him deſerued prayſe. Now contrariwiſe, if wee deſire to be freed from our afflictions, that wee may with more pleaſure and delight goe forward in our old worldly and wicked courſes, & not that wee may bee the fitter for his ſeruice; as for example, if we deſire health and ſtrength, that wee may follow our carnall pleaſures, and not that we may the better be enabled to ſerue God in the generall duties of Chriſtianity, and the ſpeciall duties of our callings; if we deſire to be eaſed of our pouerty, and to bee enriched that wee may match or put downe thoſe which are either our equals or ſuperiours; or that we may ſpend theſe bleſſings in gay apparell, ſurfetting and drunkenneſſe; or contrariwiſe, to fill vp bags onely, that we may be counted rich, without any purpoſe to vſe them when we haue them; and not that we may glorifie God in his own gifts, by our wiſe diſpoſing of them for the good of our ſelues and others, in the workes of Chriſtianity, Iuſtice and Mercy; the Lord will not beſtow theſe bleſſings vpon vs, though we begge them neuer ſo earneſtly; or if hee ſhould, they would bee curſes and not bleſſings, and ſignes and pledges, not of his mercy and loue, but of his wrath and heauy diſpleaſure. And therefore if wee would be heard, when wee call vpon God for deliuerance out of our afflictions, let vs propound right ends of our freedome and immunitie; and becauſe we are forgetfull & negligent in performing thoſe good duties, which in the time of our troubles wee propounded as the end of our deliuerance; therefore it were not amiſſe to binde our ſelues hereunto by holy and ſolemne vowes, according to the example of Iacob, Hannah, Dauid, and other of Gods Saints and Seruants.

*Gen.*28.20. 1.*Sam.*1.10,11. *Pſal.*66.13,14. & 32.1,2.

§. Sect. 8. What is required in our prayers in reſpect of their time and continuance, namely perſeuerance.

The laſt thing required in our Prayers, reſpecteth their time or continuance; namely, that wee doe inceſſantly perſeuere in Prayer without diſcouragement, although our ſuites bee not preſently heard and granted; and though after many Prayers we haue neither deliuerance out of our afflictions, nor any ſenſe of comfort, or patience in bearing them. It is true, that it is a dangerous tentation for a poore Chriſtian to cry and call for helpe in his trouble, and not to haue his ſuites regarded. For a man would thinke that if God would heare the Prayers of any, then eſpecially of thoſe who are in affliction, ſeeing they aboue others haue his ſpeciall promiſes; that if he would heare at any time, then after much crying and calling; and if in any thing, then in this ſuite for mercy and deliuerance which himſelfe hath commanded vs to make, with a promiſe to heare vs; but for a man to pray, yea, an afflicted man to pray; and for ſuch an one to pray often, & to pray thus with Dauid, out of the depths of miſery, and that with all feruency and earneſtneſſe, and yet not haue his Prayers heard, nor his ſuites granted; this ſtriketh at the root of faith, and ſhaketh the very foundation, if it be not built ſtrongly vpon the rock. For then wee are ready to deſpaire of helpe, and to conclude, that ſeeing wee haue found our Prayers vaine and bootleſſe; therefore wee will ſaue that labour, and not ſpend our ſtrength to no purpoſe. But the more ſtrong and dangerous this tentation is, the more carefully ought euery Chriſtian to arme himſelfe againſt it. And to this purpoſe let vs conſider, that the Lord requireth not onely that we ſhould make our ſuits known vnto him once or twice, or ſome few or many times, but that we inceſſantly continue in Prayer, and neuer giue ouer till we haue our petitions heard and granted. So the Apoſtle willeth vs to [a] reioyce in hope, to bee patient in tribulation, and to continue in prayer; that [b] we pray continually; and [c] alwayes, with all manner of prayer and ſupplication in the ſpirit, and watch thereunto with all perſeuerance, and finally, that wee [d] continue in prayer, and watch thereunto with thankſgiuing. Yea, thus are we bound to pray, when there is after much ſupplication no helpe ap-

*Pſal.*50.15. and 91.14,15.

*Pſal.*130.1.

[a] *Rom.*12.12.

[b] 1.*Theſ.*5.17.

[c] *Epheſ.*6.18.

[d] *Col.*4.2. Luke 18.2,3. *Chap.*11.6,7.

Luke 18.
Pſal. 77.3.
Math. 15.
Lament. 3.43, 44, 50.
Pſal. 34.17.
Heb. 4.16.

pearing, no ſenſe of comfort for the preſent, nor any outward ground of hope for the time to come; as our Sauiour teacheth vs in the Parable of the Widow, inceſſantly ſuing vnto the vnrighteous Iudge; and of the importunate friend, who would admit of no anſwere till his ſuite was granted; for to this very end the Lord purpoſely differreth to helpe vs, though euen at the firſt call he yearneth in the bowels of his compaſſion towards vs, that he may hereby try, and by trying, exerciſe; and by exerciſing, increaſe our faith, hope and affiance in him; as alſo that wee may be moued more ſeriouſly to repent of our ſinnes, and with more feruency and earneſtneſſe to call vpon him. And therefore when the Lord ſeemeth to ſlacken his pace in comming to deliuer vs, wee muſt not ſlacken ours too in going vnto him, but with more diligence and ſpeed we muſt runne and meete him, and with the greater importunity deſire him to haſten his helpe. An example of which perſeuering in prayer wee haue in Dauid, who neuer ceaſed to cry and call vpon God for mercy and deliuerance, though hee had no ſenſe of comfort, but was much perplexed in his diſtreſſed eſtate. In the day of trouble (ſaith he) I ſought the Lord. My ſore ran and ceaſed not in the night, my ſoule refuſed comfort. I did thinke vpon God, and was troubled; I prayed, and my ſpirit was full of anguiſh. So in the woman of Canaan, who being patient of all repulſes, continued her earneſt ſuite, and would take no deniall. And thus though the afflicted Church complaineth, that the Lord had couered them with wrath, perſecuted, ſlaine, and not ſpared them; & that when they were in this diſtreſſe; he had couered himſelfe with a cloude, that their prayers could not paſſe through; yet ſhe continueth her ſuits and petitions vnto God, till he looked downe from Heauen, and ſent them helpe and deliuerance out of all their miſeries and afflictions. Which examples if we likewiſe will follow, we ſhall aſſuredly haue the like iſſue and ſucceſſe in our praiers and ſupplications; for this gracious promiſe and comfort is common to all the faithfull, that if they cry, the Lord heareth them, and deliuereth them out of all their troubles. And though he hath giuen them no aſſurance that he will heare them at the firſt or ſecond call, nor preſcribed and limited a time or day when he will helpe and deliuer them; yet he exhorteth vs all to goe boldly vnto the throne of grace, aſſuring vs that wee ſhall receiue mercy, and finde grace to helpe in time of need. But of this perſeuerance in faith & patience, when the Lord deferreth to heare and helpe vs, I ſhall haue occaſion to ſpeake more fully hereafter, and therefore I doe here with the greater breuity paſſe it ouer.

CHAP. VI.

Of the comforts which ariſe out of meditation, and firſt from the conſideration of the cauſes of our afflictions; as namely, that God is the chiefe cauſe and principall Authour of all our afflictions.

§. Sect.
That the L is the chief cauſe of al
afflictions, as he doth p ordaine vs
ſuffer them

And thus haue I ſhewed what is required in our Prayers, that they may bring vs comfort and deliuerance in all our troubles and afflictions. Now we will propound ſuch arguments of conſolation, as doe ariſe out of meditation and conſideration, which being well weighed and pondred, may ſtrengthen our patience, and inable vs to beare all our afflictions with much comfort and inward rejoycing. All which for order ſake, I will reduce vnto two heads. The firſt are ſuch as may ſerue to comfort vs in our croſſes and calamities, though we ſhould continually lie vnder them, euen to the day of our death; the ſecond, ſuch as ariſe from the aſſurance which wee haue of Gods gracious and moſt ſeaſonable deliuerance. The arguments and reaſons of the firſt ſort, are either ſpirituall, ariſing and ſpringing out of the holy Scriptures; or elſe ciuill and worldly, grounded vpon ſome earthly meanes, and meere morall conſiderations. The arguments of comfort which are ſpirituall, are either ſimple or comparatiue. The reaſons ſimply to be conſidered do ariſe either from the cauſes & effects, or the ſubject and adjuncts of our afflictions. The cauſes of our afflictions to bee conſidered of, are either efficient or finall; the efficient cauſes, are either the inflicting, or mouing cauſes. The principall cauſe inflicting all troubles and afflictions vpon vs is God himſelfe, and that in a threefold reſpect. Firſt, becauſe he hath predeſtinated and foreordained vs to ſuffer theſe afflictions. Secondly, as hee doth according to this his purpoſe execute his Decree. And thirdly, as he doth by his moſt wiſe and powerfull prouidence, order and diſpoſe of all our croſſes of calamities, with all circumſtances which belong vnto them. That the Lord hath pre-ordained vs to ſuffer afflictions, the Apoſtle ſheweth in the eighth of the Romanes, where ſpeaking of afflictions hee ſaith, that whom God knew before, he did alſo predeſtinate, to be made like to the image of his Sonne, (namely, in ſuffering worldly miſeries, and bearing the croſſe) that he might be the firſt borne among many brethren; and ſo by ſuffering theſe things, might enter into his glory, as our Sauiour Chriſt himſelfe ſpeaketh. To which purpoſe Eliphaz alſo ſaith, that miſery commeth not forth of the duſt, neither doth affliction ſpring out of the earth; namely, as from their firſt fountaine and originall, But man

Rom. 8.29.
Luke 24.
Iob 5.6.

is borne vnto trauaile, as the ſparkes flie vpward. And this conſideration the Apoſtle vſeth as a ſingular conſolation in that place, ſeeing God had not onely appointed vnto them all the afflictions which they did ſuffer, but alſo had herein made them conformable to his deare and onely Sonne; preſcribing vnto them no other way to glory and happineſſe, but that which his beſt beloued had gone before them. So the holy Apoſtle vſeth the ſame argument of comfort vnto the afflicted Theſſalonians, ſaying, that no man ſhould bee mooued with theſe afflictions, becauſe themſelues did know that they were appointed thereunto. And ſurely it is a ſingular conſolation when wee conſider that the miſeries which we ſuffer, come not of themſelues, or by chance or fortune, but by the determinate counſaile and appointment of God; nor are inflicted on vs at the command of ſome cruel Tyrant who hateth vs, or at the diſpoſing of our arch-enemy the Deuill, who ſeeketh our deſtruction; but according to the moſt wiſe and juſt counſaile of our gracious God, from whom we haue our being, and all other bleſſings and benefits which we enjoy.

Secondly, God is the principall efficient, and chiefe Authour of all our afflictions, as he doth execute this Decree both for the correction and triall of his ſeruants, or the juſt puniſhment of the wicked and vngodly. For ſo the Lord himſelfe ſpeaketh; I forme the light, and create darkneſſe; I make peace, and create euill, I the Lord doe all theſe things. And againe, Shall a Trumpet bee blowne in the City, and the people not be afraid? Or ſhall there be euill in a Citie, and the Lord hath not done it? And elſewhere; Behold now, for I am he, and there is no Gods with me; I kill and I giue life, I wound and I make whole; neither is there any that can deliuer out of mine hand. And with this agreeth the Song of Hannah: The Lord killeth and maketh aliue; bringeth downe to the graue, and raiſeth vp, the Lord maketh poore, and maketh rich, bringeth low and exalteth. And the queſtion of the afflicted Church in her Lamentations: Out of the mouth of the moſt high, proceedeth not euill and good? And thus the faithfull (whatſoeuer the inferiour cauſes and inſtruments haue beene of their afflictions) haue ſtill acknowledged the Lord, to be the chiefe agent and principall cauſe of them. So Ioſeph being betrayed by his brethren, ſaith that God had ſent him into Egypt. And Naomi in her afflictions aſcribeth them all to the will and worke of God; The almightie (ſaith ſhe) hath giuen me much bitterneſſe, I went out full, and the Lord hath cauſed mee to returne empty. Why call yee me Naomi ſeeing the Lord hath humbled me, and the Almighty hath brought me into aduerſity. Thus Iob being ſpoyled by the Chaldeans and Sabeans ſaith, that the Lord had giuen, and the Lord had taken away: And holy Dauid being reuiled and curſed by wicked Shemei, acknowledeth that God had ſent him to curſe him. So the afflicted Church ſaith: Come and let vs returne vnto the Lord, for he hath ſpoyled and he will heale vs, he hath wounded vs, and he will bind vs vp. And the Apoſtle Paul giueth it as a generall rule, that whatſoeuer the next cauſes and meanes of our afflictions be, yet when we are thus iudged, we are chaſtened of the Lord, becauſe we ſhould not be condemned with the world. The conſideration whereof ſhould ſerue much to confirme in vs patience and contentedneſſe in all our afflictions and tribulation; firſt becauſe the Lord from whom they come is infinite in glory, power, and majeſty, who hauing created vs of nothing may diſpoſe alſo of vs according to his pleaſure; for why ſhould the clay murmure againſt the potter; the Seruant againſt his Maſter, the Subject againſt his Prince; or ſilly Wormes, yea duſt and aſhes againſt the glorious King of Heauen and Earth? Wee ſee that the ſame man who will not take an hard word from his equall, ſuffereth with patience a blow giuen vnto him by his King and Soueraigne; and ſtandeth not to diſpute with him why hee doth it, being ouer-awed with his power & majeſty: But what are all the Princes of the World in glory, power and majeſty, being compared with the great Iehouah King of Heauen and Earth? Who made of nothing this glorious frame of the World, the Sunne, Moone, and Starres, calling euery one by his Name; with all the huge hoaſt of the Creatures which inhabit the Heauens and the Ayre, the Earth and the great Deepes. Who meaſureth the earth with his ſpan, and poyſeth it as in a ballance, who vpholdeth all things by his Word, and ruleth them at his good pleaſure. In whom we liue, and mooue, and haue our being; ſo that if hee ſuſtaine vs we continue, but if hee blow vpon vs we are preſently deſtroyed, and returne againe vnto our duſt. Who hath in his hand the keyes of Heauen and Hell, of life and death, ſhutting and no man openeth, and openeth and no man ſhutteth. Who ſendeth out of his treaſury the raine, haile and ſnow, the thunder and lightning, and both raiſeth and ſtilleth the boyſterous windes, cauſing at his pleaſure both cruell tempeſts, & pleaſant calmes. Who ruleth the great Behemoth and Leuiathan, and putting his hooke into his noſethrils, turneth him how he will. And this is that argument of power and majeſty which Elihu firſt propoundeth, and God himſelfe more fully inſiſteth vpon, to worke patience in Iob being grieuouſly afflicted, and to keep him from murmuring & repining. Secondly, we muſt with patience bear all our afflictions which come from God, not only becauſe he

2.Sam.16.10.

Hoſ.6.1.

1.Cor.11.32.

Acts 17.28.

Iob c.32. to 42.

*Pſal.*119.137.

*Ex Epiſteti Enchir. cap.*10. *apud Stobæum, ſerm.*108.*T.*2.

Iames 1,17.

1.Tim,6.7.

*Matth.*25.14. Luke 19.12.

Iob 1.21.

*Senec.Epiſt.*76.

*Epiſt.*95.

is in Majeſty glorious, and in power almighty, but alſo becauſe he is juſt in all his judgements, and righteous in all his wayes, as the Pſalmiſt telleth vs. And therefore if he correct vs wee ſhould beare his blowes, becauſe his exact juſtice aſſureth vs, that he inflicteth no more than we haue deſerued. If he taketh any good thing from vs which wee enjoy, Let vs know that he taketh nothing but what he gaue, and that not abſolutely, and for euer, but onely to vſe for a time, till he againe did call for it. And therefore ſeeing God taketh nothing but his owne; wee are not (as one well obſerueth) when we are depriued of any benefit to ſay that wee haue loſt it, but onely that wee haue reſtored it to the right owner. For as the Scriptures teach vs, euery good gift deſcendeth from the Father of light; for as for vs, wee brought nothing into the World, and it is certaine that we can carry nothing out. So our Sauiour Chriſt teacheth vs in the Parable, that all the good things which we enjoy are but talents lent of God, which we muſt not vſe at our owne pleaſure, but to our Lord and Maſters beſt aduantage; the which wee are to giue account of when he calleth vs to a reckoning, and patiently to reſtore them when hee is willing to reſume them. And this made Iob when he was ſpoyled of all his goods to beare it patiently, becauſe the Lord had taken them who before had giuen them. The Lord (ſaith hee) hath giuen, and the Lord hath taken away, bleſſed be the Name of the Lord. Thirdly, we are to beare all our croſſes with patience ſeeing they come from God; not only becauſe hee is powerfull and righteous, and therefore muſt & ought to be yeelded vnto; but alſo becauſe he is the chiefe goodneſſe, from whom there can come no euill, for whatſoeuer God doth, hee willeth, and whatſoeuer hee willeth is therefore good becauſe he willeth it; & what is good ought alſo to be taken in good part; eſpecially of thoſe who would themſelues be reputed good. For as one ſaith, hee onely is to be reputed good, who approueth himſelfe ſo to be, by his piety towards God, namely, by bearing patiently whatſoeuer by his prouidence hapneth vnto him; becauſe he knoweth that it is befalne him by the diſpoſing of that diuine Law by which all is gouerned. To which purpoſe, elſe where hee affirmeth, that it is the firſt part of diuine worſhip to beleeue God, and the next to aſcribe vnto him due Majeſty and goodneſſe, without which there is no Majeſty. To know that hee who ruleth the World, and tempereth and ordereth all things as his owne; and eſpecially taketh care of mankind, yea, of euery particular perſon; neither doth nor hath any euill in him.

§. Sect.3. That this conſideration may much co vs, that al afflictions come fro him who i chiefe fo taine of al good.

Greg. Naz

Yea, much more may we beare all our afflictions patiently, yea joyfully, if wee further conſider that they proceed from God, who is not onely the chiefe goodneſſe in his owne nature, but alſo in reſpect of vs the root and fountaine, from whom all goodnes doth grow and ſpring, in which regard one ſaith, that afflictions are bitter and ſharpe arrowes ſhot from a ſweet and mercifull hand. For he is our gracious Creatour, who hath giuen vnto vs our being when we were not, making vs men, when hee might haue made vs Serpents; and our carefull preſeruer who ſuſtaineth our liues, and miniſtreth vnto vs all the good things which we enjoy, & who may better chaſtize vs, than he who created vs? Who hath more right to correct and nurture vs, than he who feedeth and nurſeth vs? Wee ſee that the moſt ſauage beaſts which will not endure the looke of a ſtranger, take ſtripes from their owner, who feedeth and tendeth them; and ſhall wee, more brutiſh than they, ſnarle and repine when the Lord, who not onely giueth vs food, but alſo maketh it nouriſhment, doth chaſtize vs for our good? He is our Generall and Commander; and euery good Souldier ſubmitteth himſelfe with patience to his Captaines Diſcipline; and with cheerefulneſſe obeyeth all his commands, marching and incamping, watching and labouring, fighting and retiring, according to his appointment; and all for a trifling pay, and in a doubtfull hope of vncertaine victory, and ſhall not we yeeld the like, and greater obedience and ſubmiſſion to the Diſcipline of the great Commander of Heauen and Earth, who aſſureth vs that by following his directions, wee ſhall obtaine a glorious conqueſt, and of common Souldiers become crowned Kings. The Lord is our King and Soueraigne, vnto whom we are to yeeld abſolute obedience; and therefore if earthly Princes puniſhing their ſubjects, judge them inſolent if they repine, and rebellious if they reſiſt, not induring expoſtulation, or to haue their actions called to account though they be vnjuſt, and ayme more at their owne pleaſure, than their profit: how ſhall we be acquitted if being corrected by God we impatiently murmure, and by vſing vnlawfull meanes to free our ſelues, as much as in vs lyeth, reſiſt him in his moſt righteous judgements which are all diſpoſed to our good, if we ſubmit our ſelues vnto them; ſeeing by ruling vs thus on earth, hee fitteth vs to raigne with him in Heauen. He is our moſt skilfull and faithful Chirurgion and Phyſicion, who in all he doth, aymeth at the curing of our ſickneſſe, and the recouery of our health; and therefore when the working of the corraſiue, the ſearing & ſearching of our wounds, the bitter pils and potions, which for the preſent make vs ſick vnto death in our owne ſenſe, would force vs in impatiency to cry out & complaine; let vs beare all with meekneſſe and quietneſſe, conſidering that in all this hee intendeth the cure, and that his loue would ſumus, D rere libert Senec. de beata, cap

Iu regn

would not ſuffer him to vſe theſe rougher and more diſtaſtfull remedies, if thoſe which are more gentle and eaſie were as effectuall for our recouery. Finally, hee is our moſt gracious and louing Father who grieueth at our griefes, and euen earneth in pitty and compaſſion, when contrary to his owne nature, wee by our ſinnes doe moue him to correct vs, and to doe this his ſtrange worke, wherein hee taketh no pleaſure, but onely out of his loue and wiſedome is forced (in ſome manner) to take theſe ſeuere courſes for our amendment, that hee may preſerue vs from deſtruction. And therefore let vs beare with patience that which hee inflicteth, and ſay with our Sauiour, ſhall I not drinke of the cuppe which my Father hath giuen me? Hee is our eternall and heauenly Father, vnto whom we daily pray, that his name may bee hallowed; and how can it, according to our Prayers, be better ſanctified and glorified, than when with patience and meekeneſſe wee ſubmit our ſelues vnto his good pleaſure, both in proſperitie and aduerſity, and by aſſured affiance and reſolued patience reſt vpon his promiſes and prouidence, attending his pleaſure and leaſure for help and deliuerance? So we pray vnto him that his kingdome may come and bee aduanced; and how can this be better done, than when by his fatherly chaſtizements he deſtroyeth in vs the kingdome of ſinne and Satan, and maketh vs tractable and obedient to his Lawes and gouernment? And finally, wee pray that his will may be done; and therefore when wee ſee it performed, why doe wee not willingly, yea joyfully ſubmit our ſelues vnto it? Why doe we murmure and repine, ſtruggle and ſtriue againſt it through our impatiencie, and ſo proclaime our hypocriſie, in crauing that which our judgement approueth not, and vnto which our heart aſſenteth not? Laſtly, the Lord is our husband and Head; by vertue of which communion with him, as wee participate with him in all his graces and goodneſſe, ſo he doth (after a ſort) ſympathize with vs in our ſorrowes; and is more than our ſelues delighted with our wel-fare. Now who hauing a moſt carefull and louing husband would feare to receiue hurt from him? Or what member of the body would doubt of the care and prouidence of the wiſe Head, whereby it is ruled, or would impatiently complaine of hard vſage, though it ſhould inuent and approue of ſome rough and painfull courſes, whereby it might bee cured of ſome infirmities? And how much leſſe ſhould we murmure & repine againſt God, and his prouidence, who infinitely excelleth in wiſedome and loue, all heads and husbands? Or how can wee doubt of receiuing from him helpe, deliuerance, freedome from euill, or fruition of good; whoſe mercy is ſo vnmeaſurable, and goodneſſe vnſpeakable; that hee ſpared not to giue his onely and beſt beloued Sonne to the death, euen the bitter death of the croſſe for vs, when we were ſtrangers, yea enemies vnto him? What will hee deny vnto vs thus neerely allyed, and being now become friends, yea Sonnes, and which is more, ſpouſes, yea members of his glorious body, who gaue his bleſſed ſelfe vnto vs and for vs, when we were ſo much eſtranged, and ſo farre at odds? And theſe and ſuch like were the meditations, which moued the Saints in former times to beare their afflictions with patience and comfort, ſeeing they looked not ſo much to their croſſes, as to the hand of God by which they were impoſed. So Ezechias looking to the Lord from whom his affliction came, cryeth out, What ſhall I ſay? for he hath ſaid it to me, and hee hath done it. And David profeſſeth, that he was dumbe, and opened not his mouth, becauſe he ſaw that the Lord had done it. So looking rather to Gods righteous judgement, than to his Sonnes wicked malice, purſuing him; and eſpying Gods juſt diſpleaſure, through proud Abſalons vnjuſt and rebellious fury; hee ſubmitteth himſelfe with patience to bee afflicted at his good pleaſure; But if (ſaith he) hee thus ſay, I haue no delight in thee; Behold here am I, let him doe to me, as ſeemeth good in his eyes.

Eſa.38.13.

Pſal.39.9.

2.Sam.15.26.

§. Sect. 4.

That if wee would haue patience in afflictions, we muſt not looke only to inferiour cauſes, but principally vnto God the ſupreame cauſe of them.

Vnto which meaſure of patience if wee would attaine, wee muſt learne to imitate this example; not looking to the inferiour cauſes and ſubordinate meanes, by which our croſſes are immediatly impoſed; but vnto the Lord our God, who is the chiefe and ſupreame cauſe of all our afflictions. For if wee haue no eye to God, who is the firſt mouer and principall agent; but looke onely to the inferiour and next meanes; there will bee no place for patience, ſeeing the malignitie of the inſtruments will poyſon our ſores of impatiencie and repining, and ſo make them the more to feſter and ranckle, not ſuffering the wholeſome ſalues of afflictions, which is ſoueraigne and profitable, as it commeth purely from Gods hand to be effectuall for our humiliation, and the cure of our corruption: But will cauſe vs to fret and fume more at the circumſtances, which wee are ready wittily to aggrauate for our owne greater torment and vexation, than at the matter and ſubſtance of the afflictions themſelues. Thus ſometime when we could well beare the croſſe it ſelfe, as it is ſent from God, wee make it intolerable, and ſo fall into moſt impotent impatiencie, when being inflicted vpon vs by the meanes of ſome worldly enemie, wee looke vpon his malice, cruelty, and proud inſolencie in the cariage of the matter, and not vnto the Lord, who therein aymeth at our good, humbling vs by his chaſtizements, and by theſe tryals enriching vs with his ſpirituall graces. And much more doe wee aggrauate the burthen when it is laide vpon vs by the treacherie, neglect, or vnkind dealing of ſome friend of whom wee haue deſerued well, and therefore leaſt of all ſuſpected to haue receiued from him ſuch hard meaſure. Or when it befalleth vs through our owne default, negligence, or want of prouidence; in which caſe wee adde vnto it the waight of many criminations, and oftentimes falſe accuſations againſt our ſelues, as though it were not heauie enough in it ſelfe to preſſe vs downe, vnleſſe wee added thereunto the loade of bitter inuectiues againſt our owne negligence, and of ſharpe cenſures for our owne faultineſſe, as being the cauſe which hath brought vpon vs theſe croſſes and calamities. All which motiues and enticements vnto impatiencie if we would auoide, wee muſt not looke to inferiour cauſes and meanes whereby our croſſes are impoſed; for this is all one, as if wee ſhould regard onely the ſtaffe which giueth vs the blow, and neglect the ſmiter who ruleth it; and like the fooliſh curre to bite at the ſtone which hit and hurt vs, not regarding him who threw it at vs; but wee muſt lift vp the eyes of our mind aboue the Earth vnto Heauen, and conſider that the Lord is the chiefe cauſe of all our afflictions, and like a juſt judge vſeth wicked enemies, falſe friends, the dumbe creatures, as alſo our owne improuidence and negligence, as the executioners of his righteous judgements, and inferiour inſtruments, whereby hee ſerueth his moſt wiſe prouidence, effecting by theſe meanes, his owne purpoſes for the aduancing of his glory, and the good and ſaluation of the elect and faithfull. And thus did Ioſeph arme himſelfe with patience, when paſſing by the malice of his brethren, who ſold him into Egypt; hee looketh to the ſupreame cauſe, and conſidereth that God for his owne glory, and the good of his Church, had ſent him thither. Whereas if he had looked no higher but to their wicked treacherie and cruell ſpite, hee could neuer haue vſed that meekeneſſe and moderation; but rather hauing gotten opportunitie would in ſtead of comforting, haue inſulted ouer them, and onely thought of taking ſharpe reuenge. So Iob retaineth patience in his grieuous affliction, becauſe he had an eye to the chiefe cauſe, which was the hand of God correcting him; the Lord (ſaith he) hath giuen, and the Lord hath taken away, bleſſed bee the name of the Lord. Whereas if his thoughts had mounted no higer than thoſe inferiour inſtruments which the Lord vſed, as the malice of his enemies, and the theft and violence of the Chaldeans and Sabeans, hee would wholy haue beene tranſported with deſire of reuenge, and burſt out into all impatiencie, if being ſhortned of meanes, hee could not attaine vnto his will. And Dauid likewiſe being exceedingly prouoked by wicked Shemei, doth with admirable reſolution beare all his outragious injuries meekely and patiently, and when but by ſpeaking the word, hee might haue had all his wrongs reuenged, looking not ſo much to this wicked inſtrument, as to the juſt hand of God, who vſed him for the correcting of his ſinne, hee would not yeeld to his owne paſſion, and his friends prouocations enciting him to giue way to the deſerued puniſhment of his malicious enemie, but rather reproueth them for making the motion: What (ſaith he) haue I to doe with you, you Sonnes of Zeruiah? for he curſeth euen becauſe the Lord hath bidden him to curſe Dauid. Who dare then ſay, wherefore haſt thou done ſo? Whereas if hee had onely regarded the malice, inſolencie, and notorious outrage of this lewd perſon, he would haue beene impatient of theſe indignities, and the firſt man that would haue laide hands vpon him for the reuenging of theſe wrongs. Finally, our Sauiour Chriſt himſelfe doth not in thoſe intolerable injuries which were offered vnto him, looke vnto the treachery of Iudas, the malice of the Prieſts and Phariſies, nor to the corruption and injuſtice of Pilate and Herod, but hee conſidereth of all his afflictions, as of a cup put into his hand to drinke by his heauenly Father, and ſo forbidding his Apoſtles to take reuenge, he doth with meekeneſſe and patience ſuffer all, and without grudging and repining drinketh vp the very dregs of this bitter potion. Which notable preſidents, if wee propound vnto our ſelues for our imitation, then will we not in diſtempered paſſion and vnbridled fury, ſtorme and rage againſt the meanes and inſtruments of our croſſes and afflictions, nor in burning deſire thirſt after reuenge, ſeeking to eaſe our griefes by requitall of thoſe wrongs vpon our enemies, which they haue offered vnto vs; but rather with our Sauiour, wee will pray for them that perſecute vs, ſaying, Father, forgiue them, for they know not what they doe; for whileſt they onely aime at their owne deſignes, and to atcheiue their malicious ends; they vnwittingly and vnwillingly ſerue the prouidence of God in executing his righteous judgements, and correcting the faults of his children and ſeruants; yea in truth they ſerue alſo the faithfull themſelues, euen whileſt they ſeeme to inſult and tyrannize ouer them, being vſed by God as bug-beares, to make his children to flee vnto him, as fires to purifie them from their droſſe; as files to ſcower them from the ruſt of their corruptions; and as rodds to correct their faults, and to reclaime

*Gen.*45.5,8. 50.20. *Pſal.*105.17.

Iob 1,21.

2.*Sam.*16,10.

*Ioh.*18.11.

pr.Mo- lib.10, p.11.

claime & amend them for the time to come. To which purpoſe one ſaith, that the wicked man, as a foole euen in ruling doth ſerue the wiſe and vertuous, and whileſt he preſſeth him downe, aduanceth him to a better ſtate, herein like vnto ſeruants, who being made ouerſeers and teachers to their yong maſters in their none-age for their inſtruction and education, doe keepe them vnder and correct them; and yet notwithſtanding all this, they are their ſeruants ſtill; becauſe they are ordained to this vſe, that they may ſerue their young maſters, whileſt they profit them by their beating: and therefore, becauſe the tyrannie and ill vſage of the wicked towards the good, doth purge them whileſt they afflict them, euen their power doth ſerue for the profit of the juſt. In which reſpect wee haue little cauſe to be furious in our anger againſt theſe inſtruments of our afflictions, ſeeing they are ſo ouerruled by God, that wee haue by them great profit and benefit; all the hurt redounding to themſelues; for whileſt like rodds they ſerue our heauenly Father to chaſtize and amend vs themſelues are torne in peeces, worne to ſtumpes, and being no longer fit for this vſe are caſt into the fire. In which reſpect one ſaith, that when traps are laid for vs by our enemies, and injuries offered; wee doe not ſuffer injury, but they that do it. For the Lord hath ſaid, that the ſoule that ſinneth, ſhall die; and he hath ſinned, who hath done the euill, and not hee who hath borne and ſuffered it; and therefore let vs not reuenge theſe injuries; for then (like them who hurt vs) wee ſhall with the ſeely Bees, by ſtinging them looſe our owne liues. And as we muſt not bee enraged againſt theſe inſtruments of our griefe; ſo much leſſe muſt wee in our troubles and afflictions ſue vnto them for eaſe and deliuerance; for as the malefactour doth not ſue vnto the executioner, but onely vnto the Iudge, who hath ſole power to pardon, repriue or hang him; ſo muſt not we put vp our petitions and ſupplications to theſe executioners of Gods righteous judgements; but haue our recourſe by humble prayer to the Lord chiefe-Iuſtice of heauen and earth, who hath power in his hand to reſtraine their power, and to bridle their malice that they cannot hurt vs.

ld.in.1. ſ.Ho-

CHAP. VII.

That all our afflictions are ruled and diſpoſed by Gods most wiſe, juſt and gracious prouidence; and of the comfort which ariſeth from this conſideration.

ſect. 1. God by prouidence ruleth all creatures, and eſpecially man, ſo as nothing happeneth vnto him but by his appointment.

AND thus haue I ſhewed that the Lord is the principall and chiefe authour of our afflictions, both as hee doth ordaine vs vnto them; and alſo as he hath the chiefe hand in executing this decree. But beſides both theſe, the Lord is the chiefe authour and agent in all our afflictions, as hee doth by his wiſe and powerfull prouidence rule and diſpoſe of them, maugre the malice and might of all our enemies, ſo as they ſhall all turne to his owne glory, and our ſpirituall and euerlaſting good. Neither are wee fondly to imagine that the Lord created his creatures, and then left them to the ordering and ruling either of themſelues, or vnto fate, chance and blind fortune; but he doth by the ſame wiſedome and power gouerne and diſpoſe them according to his owne good pleaſure; ſo that howſoeuer they oftentimes tranſgreſſe and violate his will reuealed; yet they neuer croſſe or hinder his ſecret will and counſaile, but in all things, notwithſtanding their malice and oppoſition, he maketh them ſerue his prouidence, directing them vnto thoſe ends for which they were created. Nor doth the Lord only thus rule his chiefeſt creatures, or thoſe which are inferiour, at ſome times, or vpon ſome waighty occaſions, but this all-ſeeing and all-ruling prouidence of God, doth extend it ſelfe to the ruling and gouerning of the meaneſt, euen of the ſeely ſparrowes, yea of a worthleſſe haire, ſo as without his direction and appointment they cannot light or fall vpon the ground, as our Sauiour ſpeaketh. From which conſideration ariſeth ſingular comfort vnto all the faithfull; for if nothing befalleth the moſt contemptible creatures, but by the wiſe guidance and appointment of their creatour; then how much leſſe vnto men (the nobleſt peece of this worldly workmanſhip) who are worth many thouſands of them, yea vnto his faithfull ſeruants and children, who exceed in his valuation many thouſands of other men? and this is that argument of conſolation which our Sauiour vſeth to comfort his diſciples, and to arme their patience againſt thoſe perſecutions, croſſes and calamities, which ſhould afterwards betide them for the profeſſion of his name. Are not two ſparrowes (ſaith hee) ſould for a farthing, and one of them ſhall not fall to the ground without your Father, yea and all the haires of your head are numbred. Feare yee not therefore, yee are of more value than many ſparrowes. But as Gods prouidence doth extend it ſelfe in more eſpeciall manner vnto the faithfull aboue all other men, ſo aboue all other times, in the time of their afflictions, according to his gracious promiſe; he ſhall call vpon mee, and I will heare him, I will be with him in trouble; I will deliuer him and glorifie him. And thus the Lord taketh ſpeciall knowlegde of the afflictions of his people that hee might deliuer them; I haue ſurely ſeene (ſaith he) the trouble of my people which are in Egypt, and haue heard their crie becauſe of their taskemaſters; for I know their ſorrowes; therefore I am come downe to deliuer them. With which medication the afflicted Church comforteth her ſelfe in all her troubles and miſeries: O Lord (ſaith ſhee) thou haſt ſeene my wrong, iudge thou my cauſe. Thou haſt ſeene all their vengeance, and all their deuiſes againſt me, &c.

Matth.10.29. 30.31.

Pſalm. 91.15.

Exod.3.7.

§. Sect. 2. That Gods prouidence doth rule all the inferiour cauſes of our afflictions; and firſt ſuch as are vnreaſonable.

Yea the Lord doth in his wiſe prouidence, not onely looke vnto, rule and diſpoſe of the afflictions themſelues which befall the faithfull, but of all the cauſes and circumſtances, their ends and iſſues, manner, meaſure, and time of their continuance. For as for the cauſes of all afflictions, they are all ſubordinate vnto him who is the ſupreame and principall cauſe, and ſerue but as inferiour meanes and inſtruments to effect his will and pleaſure. For the better vnderſtanding whereof, wee are to know; that there is in nature a concatenation, interlincking and chaining of cauſes together, whereby inferiour cauſes are ſo ſubordinate one to another, as that they all hold their ſubordination vnto God, who is the firſt and principall cauſe; whereof it commeth to paſſe, that as one of them cannot worke and moue without the helpe of the next cauſe vnto which it is ſubordinate, as for example, fruites cannot nouriſh vs, vnleſſe the Earth nouriſh them, neither can the Earth bring them forth, vnleſſe the Sunne ſhine and the raine fall vpon them: ſo none of them can moue or worke, but by that vertue which they receiue from God, the firſt and chiefe cauſe, whereby they are inabled to produce all their actions and operations. In regard whereof all the effects and actions of ſecondary cauſes (being conſidered ſimply in themſelues without their poyſon and malignity of ſin) are not ſo properly the effects, of them, as of that cauſe which is firſt and principall. As for example wee cannot ſo properly ſay, that our meate doth nouriſh vs, or clothes keepe vs warme, or that the Sun doth lighten vs, or our friends prouide for vs; as that God doth all theſe things by them, namely as the chiefe cauſe working by his inſtruments. And although theſe effects be properly and fitly attributed to their next and immediate cauſes; yet more fitly and properly may wee ſay, that God doth by them nouriſh, warme, lighten and prouide for vs, ſeeing from him alone they haue all their vertue and efficacy, without which they could doe nothing. For as the Scribe is more properly ſaid to write, than the Pen, and hee that maketh and keepeth the clocke is more properly ſaid to make it goe and ſtrike, than the wheeles and peyzes that hang vpon it, and euery workman to effect his worke, rather than the tooles which he vſeth, as his inſtruments: So the Lord who is the chiefe agent and firſt mouer in all actions, may more fitly and properly bee ſaid to effect and to bring to paſſe all things which are done in the Earth, than any inferiour or ſubordinate cauſes, ſeeing they are all but his tooles and inſtruments, which cannot moue of themſelues, but as they are ruled and guided by the power and prouidence of this heauenly workeman. And thus the Lord vſeth all his creatures both vnreaſonable and reaſonable to ſerue his prouidence in the afflicting and chaſtizing of his Children. Of the former ſort the examples are innumerable like vnto the huge hoaſt of the creatures themſelues; for thus the Lord vſeth the Fire and Water, the infection of the ayre, the barrennes of the Earth, the windes and weather, raine, drought, froſts and mildeawes; the wild and bruite creatures; and that not onely the ſauage Beaſts which excell in ſtrength, and are armed by nature to doe hurt; but euen the ſeely flyes, graſhoppers, cankerwormes, and caterpillers as the Lord threatneth, and the Prophet Ioel ſheweth. In which regard, howſoeuer theſe croſſes inflicted by theſe vnreaſonable creatures are of all others moſt vncomfortable, becauſe, as it is ſaid of Fire and Water, ſo may it of the reſt, that they haue no mercy, ſeeing their fury is not mitigated by yeelding, their pitty not moued by complaining, nor their deſtroying force ſtayed by our intreating and perſwading; yet in this haue the faithfull ſufficient conſolation, when they conſider, that theſe no leſſe than the other are Gods inſtruments for the effecting of his will, and but as rods in the hand of our heauenly Father, which are content (as it were) to bee tawed and torne in peeces in vexing and tormenting vs, if it bee the pleaſure of him that made and ruleth them; yet cannot of themſelues giue vs one blow or ſtripe, but as they are moued by Gods will and power, as wee may ſee in the preſeruation of the Iſraelites from the plagues of Egypt, and from being ouerwhelmed by the mercileſſe Sea; in the preſeruing of the three Children in the fiery furnace, Daniel, in the Lyons den, and of Paul from the mortall ſting of the cruell Viper.

Deut. 28.
Ioel. 1.

§. Sect. That Gods prouidence doth rule th inferiour cauſes whic are reaſon ble, and fi th good euill Angel

The like alſo may be ſaid of the reaſonable creatures, which howſoeuer they may ſeeme at their owne will and pleaſure to afflict and puniſh vs; yet is both their will and power ſo ouerruled, limited and ouermaſtered, by the al-gouerning power and prouidence of God, that they cannot goe one foot beyond their tether, but when they are come to the vtmoſt bonds of their permitted liberty, there, will they, nill they, they muſt make a ſtand, and howſoeuer they may fling and kicke to ſhew their will and malice, yet their power is ſo curbed and re-reſtrained, that they cannot beyond their allowed limits doe vs any harme. And thus the Lord ruleth, as his inſtruments in our afflictions, both Angels and men; and that both good and bad. For howſoeuer the good and holy Angels are Gods willing miniſters, to watch ouer and guard the faithfull in all dangers, and his ready meſſengers to conueigh vnto them his bleſſings and benefits; yet when the Lord their Maſter and commander is pleaſed to vſe them as his inſtruments in afflicting and correcting them, they are preſt to doe his will. Howbeit they haue their commiſſion which they muſt obſerue, their time appointed when to begin, and when to make an end, and the very number and meaſure of their blowes that they are to giue, which they neither can nor will exceed. An example whereof wee haue in the deſtroying Angell ſmiting the Iſraelites with the plague and peſtilence; who continued the execution of Gods judgements till the Lord reſtrained him, but no ſooner doth the Lord command him to ceaſe, but preſently he ſheatheth his ſword of vengeance, and deſiſteth from doing any further harme. So the Lord, intending to plague Ieruſalem by the miniſtery of an Angell, firſt giueth commiſſion to another Angell that he ſhould ſet a marke vpon the foreheads of them that did mourne, and cry for all the abhominations that were done in the middeſt thereof; and then biddeth the deſtroying Angell to goe through the Citie and ſmite, neither ſparing nor pitying any, olde or young, maids or children, but with all chargeth him not ſo much as to touch a man, who by his marke was exempted from the common calamity and deſtruction. And thus the fower Angels who had power giuen them to hurt the Earth and the Sea, are reſtrained from the execution of their commiſſion, till the ſeruants of God were marked in their foreheads. Neither doth the Lord thus order and diſpoſe by his wiſe and powerfull prouidence the good Angels only, who being his Seruants take their chiefe delight in doing his will; but alſo he doth often vſe, and by the ſame wiſe prouidence diſpoſe of, the wicked Angels and Diuels, as his inſtruments for the afflicting of his faithfull Children. And when they thinke of nothing leſſe than of doing his will, glorifying his name, or doing good to his Saints and Seruants; but contrariwiſe wholy ayme at Gods diſhonour and their deſtruction: euen then he ouerruleth them by his powerfull prouidence, and maketh them (maugre their malice) to effect his will, and to ſerue him vnto thoſe ends for which he imployeth them. In which reſpect one well ſaith, that though the will of Sathan bee alwayes wicked, yet his power is neuer vnjuſt, becauſe hee hath his will from himſelfe, but his power from God, and therefore what hee vnlawfully affecteth to doe, that God will not ſuffer to bee done but juſtly and lawfully. And this is the cauſe why the ſpirit which vexed Saul is called the euill ſpirit, and the Spirit of the Lord; namely the Spirit of the Lord, in reſpect of that juſt power which was granted vnto him by God; and the euill ſpirit in regard of the deſire of his vnjuſt and malitious will. And thus hee vſed Satan in afflicting Iob for the triall of his patience, that it might bee crowned with the greater glory; when as the Deuill aimed at nothing leſſe, but onely ſought to cauſe Iob by theſe afflictions to blaſpheme God vnto his face. And thus hee gaue him from time to time his commiſſion which hee could not paſſe. And ſo the Lord telleth the Angell of the Church of the Smyrnians, that the Deuill ſhould caſt ſome of them into priſon; but willeth them to be of good comfort becauſe it was not at his owne pleaſure, but at Gods appointment, who foretold them of theſe afflictions; not as long as he liſt but onely for tenne dayes, which was the time limited by God: not that hee might hereby attaine vnto his owne malitious end; which was, that they might be deſtroyed, but that he might further and aduance Gods end, namely that being tryed and found faithfull they might obtaine the crowne of life. And therefore, howſoeuer there can be nothing more terrible and fearefull than to know that Satan who hath beene a murtherer from the beginning, and an ancient enemy of mankind, exceeding vs ſo much in power, and hauing his power ſo much exceeded by his malice, ſhould be the next and immediate cauſe of our afflictions; yet when we conſider with all, that he is but a bare inſtrument in the hand of God, which by his power and prouidence he turneth and windeth at his good pleaſure; and alwayes forceth him, whether he will or no, to ſerue for the aduancing of his owne glory, and the ſpirituall good and euerlaſting ſaluation of his elect, there is in this meditation ſufficient cauſe to expell all feare and horror, and matter enough of patience and conſolation.

*Apoc.*2.10.

§. *Sect.*4.
That Gods prouidence ouerruleth the actions and intentions of wicked men: and of the cōforts which ariſe from this conſideration.

Finally the Lord thus ruleth and ouerruleth all the intentions and actions of wicked men, when he vſeth them as his inſtruments for the the afflicting of his Seruants; ſo as they cannot begin to hurt them but by his permiſſion; nor continue to vexe and moleſt them longer than the appointed time. And when they ayme at nothing elſe but the diſgorging of their ſpite, the inlarging of their rule and ſoueraignty, and the inriching of themſelues with the ſpoyle; the Lord aymeth at the good of the faithful, and with theſe chaſtiſments humbleth them by vnfained repentance, that they may not bee condemned with the World. And thus the Lord vſed the Chaldæans and Sabæans as his inſtruments for the afflicting of Iob; Saul, Shemei and Abſalon, for the chaſtizing of Dauid; Nebuchadnezer, the Babilonians and Aſſyrians for the correcting of his people Iſraell. In which regard hee calleth him his ſeruant whom hee had appointed to this worke; and affirmeth that hee was but as a rod in his hand, wherewith hee did viſit their ſinnes, and execute his righteous judgements. O Aſhur (ſaith hee) the rod of my wrath: and the ſtaffe in their hands is mine indignation; I will ſend him to a diſſembling nation, and I will giue him a charge againſt the people of my wrath to take the ſpoile, and to take the pray, and to tread them vnder feete like the mire in the ſtreete. And not to inſiſt vpon more examples; thus he vſed the Scribes, Prieſts and Phariſies, Iudas, Caiphas and Pilate, for the afflicting and killing of his onely Sonne, that his death might be the price of our redemption. In which reſpect our Sauiour is called the Lamb ſlaine from the beginning of the World, namely, in Gods eternall decree and purpoſe; and the Apoſtle Peter plainely affirmeth, that he was deliuered into their hands by the determinate counſell and foreknowledge of God to bee crucified and ſlaine. And howſoeuer theſe wicked inſtruments which the Lord vſeth for the chaſtizing of his Seruants, ayme at nothing leſſe than the effecting of his will and aduancing of their good; yet doth hee by his wiſe prouidence alwayes ſo ouerrule them, that they ſerue for theſe purpoſes; and though they intend their ruine and euen thirſt for their deſtruction; yet when they haue, as Gods inſtruments effected his worke he curbeth and reſtraineth their power and malice, ſo as they cannot goe one jot further than hee hath appointed them. Though at all times they are alike ſet vpon miſchiefe, and continually vpon all occaſions breath out their malice and reuenge; yet onely then they haue power to touch the children of God, when hee permitteth them for his owne glory and their good. As wee may ſee in the example of Laban, who implicitely confeſſeth that hee purſued Iacob to doe him miſchiefe, but could not becauſe God by a dreame had forbidden him. In Senacherib, who came purpoſely to deſtroy Ieruſalem, but could not effect his will, becauſe the Lord put his hooke in his noſethrils, and led him backe from whence hee came. In Saul, who oftentimes practiſed to take away Dauids life, yet was neuer able, not that hee wanted worldly power to effect his will, but becauſe the Lord ouerruled him by his prouidence, ſo as he could not hurt him. By all which and innumerable other examples it appeareth that wicked men are but the Lords inſtruments, who correct his Children when he pleaſeth, but cannot ſo much as touch them till he permitteth them. And with this argument the Lord by viſion encourageth Paul to the worke of the miniſtrie. Feare not (ſaith he) but ſpeake and holde not thy peace; for I am with thee, and no man ſhall lay hands on thee to hurt thee. The conſideration whereof ſerueth for the ſingular conſolation of the faithfull in their affliction; for when (as it vſually commeth to paſſe) they are more vexed with the ſight of their enemies pride, tyrannie and cruell inſolencie, than with the ſenſe of the euils which they ſuffer from them; and are more troubled and frighted with the apprehenſion of thoſe dangerous effects, which their malicious rage may produce for the time to come; than with all their miſeries either paſt or preſent; then they are to remember, that theſe wicked men can doe nothing by their owne abſolute will and power; but that they are wholy at Gods diſpoſition, as being inferiour inſtruments of this ſupreame and chiefe cauſe, by whom hee correcteth them, not according to their malicious luſts, to their ruine and deſtruction; but according to his owne wiſe and judicious pleaſure, for their ſpirituall good, and the eternall ſaluation of their ſoules. Then they muſt call to minde that theſe impious worldlings are but the ſlaues and Seruants of our heauenly Father, whom he hath appointed to correct vs for our faults; and although they much maligne and be at enmitie with vs; yet wee ſhall receiue no hurt hereby; ſeeing our gracious Father ſtandeth by and will not ſuffer them to torment vs at their owne wils, but appointeth the number of ſtripes, and the meaſure of our correction, which notwithſtanding all their malice, they cannot exceed, nor enlarge their crueltie aboue that which is permitted vnto them.

Eſa.10.5,6.

Act. 2.23.

Gen.31.29.

Eſa.37.29.

Act.18.9,10.

9. Sect.
Why God rather vſeth theſe wicked inſtruments than correcteth vs by his owne hand.

Yea but why doth not the Lord correct his Seruants rather by his owne hand, than by the hand of a ſtranger, or an enemie? And why doth he not let his chaſtizements come purely from himſelfe, or by the meanes of innocent creatures, or righteous men, executing his juſt judgements by juſt inſtruments, rather than by wicked and vngodly men; who infuſe into them the poyſon of their maliciouſneſſe, embitter them with their gaule and ſpleene, and pollute and defile them with their corruption? To which I anſwere; that the execution of puniſhment in it ſelfe, being a ſeruile thing, doth not ſo fitly agree with the nature of God, who being the chiefe goodneſſe, taketh his chiefe delight in doing good, and in communicating himſelfe vnto his creatures; neither doth hee willingly puniſh vs, but that wee inforce it vpon his juſtice by our ſins; whereof it is, that when the Lord doth execute his his judgements, he is ſaid by his Prophet, to doe his ſtrange worke, and his ſtrange act. And therefore, becauſe it is not familiar and delightfull vnto his nature, he doth it not by himſelfe, but commonly allotteth it to the Deuill and wicked men, who are the fitteſt to be his executioners, as being naturally diſpoſed to hurt and deſtroy. Euen as among men it is an vſuall thing for the righteous Iudge to vſe wicked and baſe wretches, for the executing of his juſt ſentence vpon malefactors, who haue deſerued puniſhment; with whom notwithſtanding hee doth not, at all communicate in their bloudy cruelty and ſpitefull malice, which they ſometimes exerciſe towards the perſons executed. Neither doth it all diſparage, or any whit detract from Gods juſtice and goodneſſe, that the wickedneſſe of ſinfull and vngodly men is intermixed with the execution of his righteous judgements; but doth rather magnifie his wiſdome and power, in that hee can bring good out of euill, and light out of darkneſſe; effecting his juſt deſignes by wicked inſtruments, contrary to their nature and intention. For as it doth much commend the exquiſite skill of the workman, when as hee can worke curiouſly with bad tooles; and the art of the Phyſician, who of the fleſh of the Viper can make ſoueraigne Methridate, and change this malignant poyſon into an wholſome preſeruatiue and counterpoyſon; and as the power & wiſdome of ſome great Commander doth glorioully ſhine; when as hee cannot only vanquiſh his enemies; but alſo make them fight on his owne ſide, and become his inſtruments of conferring good vpon his owne Souldiers: So what can more magnifie the wiſdome, goodneſſe and power of God, than that he ſhould be able to perfect the faire and ſtraight works of his righteous judgments, by theſe crooked and crabbed inſtruments? Than to make the viperous generation of wicked men to ſerue for wholſome preſeruatiues, which keepe his ſeruants from the contagious infection of ſinne? And ſo to conquer theſe enemies of his glory and our ſaluation with his diuine power, and ouer-rule them by his wiſdome, as that they ſhall in deſpite of all their pride and malice, ſerue his children for their ſpirituall vſe and benefit; and being themſelues wicked and euill, helpe to aduance them to a higher degree of grace and goodneſſe? And this is one cauſe why the Lord thinketh it fitter to ſerue his owne prouidence of wicked men, that hee may bring good out of euill, than not to permit any euill at all.

Lamen.3.33.

8.21.

in infectio-de malis befacere, quam mala per-
, Aug.

Sect.6.
God by theſe inſtrumaketh for the feſtation iuſtice

And vnto this wee may adde, that as the Lord by vſing theſe wicked inſtruments for the chaſtizing of his children, doth manifeſt his mercy and goodneſſe, in making them ſerue for the aduancement of their good; ſo doth he make way for the manifeſtation of his juſtice, whileſt hee giueth theſe wicked men vp to the exerciſing of their owne malicious and cruell luſts in the chaſtizements of his ſeruants, whom they vnjuſtly hate and maligne; that ſo hee may after hee hath puniſhed one ſinne with another, make way for deſerued vengeance, and take occaſion juſtly to increaſe their puniſhments in this life, and their more fearefull condemnation in the life to come. For as the wiſe and louing Father hauing reformed his childe by correction, and made him reſpectiue and carefull in the performance of all good duties; doth to giue him contentment, and aſſurance of his loue and clemencie, vpon the continuance of his good courſes, caſt the worne rod which is paſt vſe into the middeſt of the fire: So doth the Lord caſt theſe wicked inſtruments, which are (as hee calleth them) the rods of his wrath, into the fire of deſtruction, when hee hath no further vſe of them for the chaſtizement of his children, that ſo they may the more ſecurely rejoyce in the aſſurance of the loue of their heauenly Father, and in the ruine and ouerthrow of his & their enemies. So the Lord threatneth that when he had accompliſhed all his worke vpon Mount Sion and Ieruſalem, he would viſit the fruit of the proud heart of the King of Aſhur, and his glorious and proud lookes, ſending among his fat men leanneſſe, and kindling vnder his glory a burning, like the burning of fire. The like judgement is denounced againſt proud Babylon, that becauſe when the Lord being wrath with his people, did pollute his inheritance, and giue them into their hand, ſhee did ſhew no mercy vnto them, but did lay her very heauy yoke vpon the ancient, therefore hee would bring vpon her ſuddenly in one day, the loſſe of children and widowhood, that is, deſolation, and ſhamefull diſhonour. And thus the Lord profeſſeth, that he was greatly angry with the careleſſe Heathen, in that when hee was angry with his people but a little, they helped forward the affliction.

in their deſtruction, when there is no further vſe of them.

Eſay 10. 12, 16.

Eſay 47.6.

*Zach.*1.15.

Yea, but how can the Lord in juſtice ſo ſeuerely puniſh wicked men for afflicting of his children, ſeeing they are but his inſtruments, which haue done that onely which he appointed them? I anſwere, that this ſerueth nothing for their excuſe, nor doth any thing at all extenuate their faultineſſe; for howſoeuer they in afflicting Gods ſeruants doe the ſecret will of God, which no crea- in Heauen or Earth is able to withſtand; this maketh nothing for them, ſeeing this hidden will was neuer propounded as a rule vnto which they ſhould conforme their actions: but the Lord hath giuen vnto vs the knowledge of his will reuealed in his Word, vnto which hee requireth conformity and obedience. And by this they are enjoyned to loue the faithfull aboue all others, and by all good meanes to ſeeke the aduancing of their good; whereas contrariwiſe they doe hate them ſo much

§. Sect. 7.
How it will ſtand with Gods iuſtice to puniſh wicked men, for hauing beene his inſtruments in executing his iudgements.

Eſay 10,7,8.

2.Sam.12.

much the more, afflicting and perſecuting them euen for this thing aboue all others, becauſe they are of the houſhold of faith, and of Gods own Family; who make conſcience of their wayes, and will not run with them into the ſame exceſſe of riot. Neither do they at all ayme at Gods end, or euer thinke of effecting his counſailes and ſecret wil; but they only labour to effect their owne malicious deſignes, and to accompliſh their owne wils, whereby they deſire to glut their cruelty, and to aduance themſelues out of the ruine of Gods ſeruants. So the Lord ſaith, that wheras in his ſecret counſaile, he ſent the King of Aſhur againſt his people to afflict them for their ſins, He thought of nothing leſſe; neither did his heart eſteeme it ſo; but he onely imagined to deſtroy and cut off not a few Nations; that he might make all his Princes Kings; and ſo himſelfe a mighty Monarch. Thus it was the will of God to afflict Dauid by wicked inſtruments, as hee alſo reuealed it vnto him by his Prophet; but they neuer once dreamed of doing that which God had decreed; for Abſalon aymeth at the ſatisfying his ambition by vſurping the Kingdome; Achitophel at the making of the people more bold and reſolute in following of Abſalon againſt his Father, when by his abominable fact all hope of reconciliation betweene them, ſhould be quite cut off; and Shemei aymed at nothing but at the eaſing of his ſpleene, and diſgorging his malice by his rayling and reuiling. Finally, it was the will of God that his Son ſhould die for the redemption of mankinde; but thoſe wicked inſtruments which were vſed for that purpoſe, neuer ſo much as thought of accompliſhing this will of God. But the Prieſts, Scribes, and Phariſies ſought in all their proceedings to eſtabliſh their owne eſtates, to maintaine their reputation among the people, and withall to reuenge themſelues and ſatisfie their malice againſt our Sauiour, who by diſcouering their hypocriſie blemiſhed their glory, and wrought them out of the fauour of the people. And ſo Iudas aymed at a little gaine, and to enrich himſelfe with the price of bloud. And Pilate feared the loſſe of his place by offending Cæſar, or to haue in it thoſe inconueniences which might befall him by diſpleaſing the people. In all which reſpects, as the ſinne of theſe wicked inſtruments towards God is not at all extenuated, by their executing of his hidden counſell, ſeeing they doe it not in obedience vnto God, but (being ouer-ruled by his prouidence) whether they will or not: ſo doth it nothing at all leſſen their wrongs and injuries againſt the faithfull, in that they are but bare inſtruments, and the Lord the ſupreame and principall cauſe of all their afflictions, ſeeing whereas he aymeth in them at their ſpirituall good and ſaluation, theſe wicked men doe all they doe out of malice and hatred, and that to the end, that they may hereby bring them to ruine.

9. Sect.
That wee ot vtterly negl & the feriour c of afflict

And in this regard as they are not to look wholy vnto them who are but the inſtruments, nor to reſpect onely their malicious purpoſes and deſignes; but to haue their eyes fixed principally vpon God who is the ſupreame cauſe, and vpon thoſe excellent ends at which hee aymeth in theſe their chaſtiſements and corrections; ſo neither are they wholy to neglect them; but as in receiuing benefits we do ſo acknowledge the Lord to be the principall author and fountaine of them; as that we do not forget to render due thanks and reſpect vnto thoſe, whom he vſeth as the inſtruments of our good: ſo in all our afflictions which are impoſed vpon vs by the meanes of theſe wicked men; as wee are to looke vnto the Lord, the ſupreame cauſe of them, that hereby humility and patience may be wrought in vs; ſo we are alſo to looke vnto the wicked men themſelues, as inſtruments and meanes of our croſſes and miſeries; hating (though not their perſons yet) their malice, rage and cruelty; and vſing all good and lawfull meanes, which either the Word of God or ſpirituall wiſdome can ſuggeſt vnto vs, whereby wee may croſſe them in their wicked purpoſes, and free our ſelues from their injuries and oppreſſions; hauing herein the Word of God for our warrant, which enjoyneth vs to vſe all honeſt courſes for our preſeruation, the repelling of injuries and the aduancing of our owne good; as alſo to hate all euill and injuſtice whereſoeuer we find it; whether it be directed againſt our ſelues or any other: and the Saints of God for our precedents, as Moſes, Dauid, Ezechias, the Apoſtles, yea, our Sauiour Chriſt himſelfe, as might be ſhewed by many inſtances, if it were not in it ſelfe cleere and euident. So that howſoeuer in diuers afflictions we are to looke only to the hand of God, which doth vſe inferiour cauſes as meanes and inſtruments to inflict his judgements and chaſtiſements, hauing in themſelues no malignity nor will to hurt vs, as when hee cauſeth the Aire to infect vs, the water to drowne vs, the fire to burne vs; in which caſes wee are not to blame the creatures which are priuiledged from malice and ſinne, and are but Gods bare inſtruments for the effecting of his will: yet when hee vſech wicked men for his inſtruments, as wee are chiefly to looke vnto the hand of God, ſo we are to haue ſome reſpect vnto them in regard of that malignity and ſin which is in them, whereby they deſire our hurt and deſtruction. For in all afflictions wee are to conſider not onely the action and worke as it is ſimply naturall, and the diſpoſition of them to the manifeſtation of Gods glory, and our good, in which reſpect God is the chiefe Authour of them; but alſo an accidentall confuſion & malignity of the action; which is wholy to be aſcribed to mans corruption by whom it is performed; the former whereof being good and juſt wee are to like, loue and imbrace; the other wee are to hate and flee as being vnjuſt, corrupt and wicked.

ect.9. the Lord diſpoſeth of ends of in- cauſes hee ma- them for his ends; glory, the ſalua- of the

And thus it appeareth that the Lord who is the chiefe & ſupreame cauſe of all our afflictions, doth ſo gouerne & ouerrule all ſecondary & inferiour cauſes & means by his moſt wiſe and powerfull prouidence, that when they ſeeme moſt to oppoſe againſt him, they doe but effect that which hee willeth and hath purpoſed to be done. Whereupon it alſo followeth that as he diſpoſeth at his pleaſure of the cauſes themſelues, ſo alſo of all their ends, making them all ſerue to the furthering of his ends, which are the ſupreame & chiefe of all, as namely his owne glory, and ſaluation of his Elect, and that when they ſeeme to looke another way, and to bee not onely oppoſite to his purpoſes, but alſo infinitely contrary one vnto another. And as the Planets haue euery one their owne motion in their proper Orbe differing from all the reſt, and moſt of all from the motion of the primum mobile, or that which is firſt mooued, but yet contrary to their owne motion are ouer-ruled and daily carried with it; and as a man walking on the top of the hatches a contrary way to the motion of the ſhip, doth notwithſtanding goe that way which it goeth, becauſe he is moued with it: ſo when the motion of our wils doth exceedingly vary the one from the other, and all ſeeme to driue to a contrary end than that at which God aymeth; yet are they all ſo ouer-ruled by his power and prouidence, in whom wee liue, mooue and haue our being; that at laſt wee meete together, and bend that way whether he intendeth. All which is brought to paſſe after an vnknowne manner and by ſuch hidden courſes, that we know not whither wee goe, much leſſe are wee acquainted with the motions of others, carrying them to the ſame mayn end; like vnto many riuers, which by diuers and contrary wayes, run naturally and freely in their owne current vnto the mayne Ocean, and yet neuer thinke whither they goe, and much leſſe of their meeting in the ſame Sea. And thus all the ends of the King of Aſhur, and all his army were by God directed to that mayne end of chaſtiſing his people and puniſhing the wicked and rebellious; although (as the Lord plainly affirmeth) he neuer ſo much as thought ſo, or euer aymed at this end. So the Deuils end in caſting the Saints into priſon, was, that being tormented they might bee brought to make an Apoſtaſie from the faith; but the Lord maketh Sathans end and action ſerue to further the end which hee had propounded; namely, that by theſe afflictions they might be tried, and being approued might be crowned.

ſay 10.

It was his end in afflicting Iob to bring him vnto deſtruction, by cauſing him to curſe God vnto his face: but God maketh the Deuils action and end to further his, which was, that hee might be glorified in the triall of his graces, the faithfull edified by his example, and that Iob himſelfe might be fitted and prepared to receiue a greater meaſure of his bleſſings here, and of glory and happines in the life to come. But this will more plainly appeare in the afflictions of Ioſeph, wherein as there were many Agents, ſo likewiſe many ends. His brethren being full of enuy, ſought to haue him remooued, whom their father (as they ſuppoſed) ouer-loued. The Iſmaelitiſh Merchants reſpected their gaine, his Miſtris aymed firſt at the ſatiſfying of her filthy luſt, and after at the reuenge of her ſcorned loue; his Maſter in his wrong conceiued jealouſie, at the puniſhment of ſo great an injury as hee thought hee had receiued; the jaylour at his eaſe and ſafetie; the vngratefull Butler thought of nothing but pleaſing the King; the King ſought to eaſe his troubled minde by vnderſtanding the meaning of his dreame; the Deuil to bring, by the ſinne of many, innocent Ioſeph vnto deſtruction. But all theſe ends ſo diuers and oppoſite one to another, the Lord ſo ouer-ruled by his wiſe and powerfull prouidence, that hee made them all concurre to the effecting of his owne ends, which were the triall of Ioſephs graces to the glory of him that gaue them; which Ioſeph in modeſty paſſeth ouer; and the preſeruing of his Church in the time of extreame famine, by ſending him into Egypt to make prouiſion for them. The like may alſo be obſerued in the death and paſſion of our Sauiour Chriſt; wherein Iudas out of his couetouſneſſe betrayeth him to gaine the ſiluer pieces; the Scribes and the Phariſies out of their malice and enuy perſecute and accuſe him, to vphold their ſtate and honour by remouing their enemy; Pilate condemneth him out of feare and flattery to keepe his grace with Caeſar, and to pleaſe the people; the Souldiers crucifie him out of barbarous greedineſſe to receiue a reward, and to benefit themſelues with the ſpoyle of his garments; the Deuill vſeth them all as his ſlaues and vaſſals out of his malice to mankind, that hee might hinder our ſaluation by deſtroying our Sauiour. But God ouer-ruleth by his gracious & wiſe prouidence both him and them; making all their ends and actions to ſerue for the furthering of his moſt louing and mercifull end, euen when they moſt oppoſed againſt it, namely, the redemption and ſaluation of all his Elect, by the precious death, and al-ſufficient ſacrifice of his innocent Sonne. By all which it appeareth, that whileſt the Deuill and wicked men purſue their owne ends, the Lord attaineth his, and whileſt in afflicting Gods ſeruants, they wholy ayme at their deſtruction; the Lord by his prouidence ouer-ruling all their purpoſes and endeauours, maketh them when they thinke of nothing leſſe to ſerue for, the glorifying of his holy Name in the manifeſting of his graces, and the ſaluation of the ſoules of his afflicted children. So that they are in his hand in this reſpect, like the arrow in the hand of a cunning Archer, which fleeth to the marke, and yet knoweth not whether it is going; for though they be well acquainted with their owne malicious ends, and purſue with all greedineſſe their owne intentions; yet oftentimes fayling of them, they neuer faile the furthering of thoſe ends which God hath propounded vnto all their actions although they goe blindfold to them, and neuer ſo much as thinke of them. The conſideration whereof may greatly comfort vs in all our afflictions impoſed on vs by wicked men); for when wee ſee our ſelues aſſaulted by them on euery ſide, all of them ayming at our hurt and deſtruction in the generall, but yet carried thereunto by their particular ends; one out of malice to our perſons, another out of deſire to reuenge miſconceiued wrongs and ſuppoſed injuries; this man out of couetouſneſſe hunting after a prey in our ſpoyle; and another out of pride and ambition ſeeking our downe fall, that he may lay the foundation of his own glory and honour, in the ruines of our eſtate; hee out of enuy and hatred, thinking that hee is better, if he make vs worſe; and another out of his greedineſſe labouring to make vs worſe, that hee may make himſelfe better; then are we to remember there is a ſupreame prouidence, wiſdome and power, which ouerſeeth & ouerlooketh all their actions & ends, & when they are moſt eager in purſuing their deſignes, doth make them, when they thinke leaſt of it, to ſerue him for the effecting of all his counſailes and purpoſes, and the furthering and aduancing of thoſe his mayne ends, euen his owne glory and the ſaluation, as of all the faithfull, ſo alſo of vs among the reſt.

Apoc.2.10.

Gen.45.7.

§. Sect. 10
That Gods prouidence ordereth and diſpoſeth of all our afflictions, both in reſpect of their manner, meaſure and continuance,

And thus doth Gods prouidence ſhew it ſelf in the ends of our afflictions, and of them that do afflict vs, diſpoſing of them all for his own glory & our good: The like alſo may be ſaid of the manner, meaſure, & time of our afflictions; all which he ſo ordereth & ouer-ruleth, that nothing befalleth vs in the manner, meaſure, or continuance of them, but by the wiſe guidance of his al-ſeeing prouidence. For he hath as wel appointed how we ſhal come into afflictions, as what we ſhall ſuffer; & though there be in them a thouſand ſtrange circumſtances, and ten thouſand vnthought of accidents, and vnexpected caſualties; much confuſion and diſorder in reſpect of ſecondary meanes, and innumerable errours and miſtakings; yet is there nothing in them all vnto him caſuall and accidentall, but all foreſeene and fore-ordained long before; neither any confuſion or errour, but all in a direct order and method, one cauſe producing and drawing on another, like the diuers linkes of the ſame chaine, as may plainly appeare if we doe examine the former examples. So doth hee by the ſame prouidence ſhare out vnto vs the meaſure of our afflictions, giuing vnto vs a conuenient draught of this bitter potion, according to the proportion of our ſtrength and patience. Neither doth hee let looſe the Deuill and wicked men to aſſault vs all at once, according as their fury would carry them; but like the maſter of the maſteries he ſitteth by, and appointeth ſuch aduerſaries to contend & wraſtle with vs, as may onely exerciſe our patience, and not wholy vanquiſh and ouercome it. And as hee appointeth the manner and meaſure, ſo alſo the time of our afflictions, which all the malice and fury of onr enemies cannot any jot lengthen or prolong. As we may ſee in the foure hundred yeares appointed to the Iſraelites in the Egyptian ſeruitude, which being expired, they came out, maugre all the malice of their enemies, the ſame day; in the ſeuenty yeares of the Babyloniſh captiuity, at the expiring whereof Daniel prayeth for deliuerance, and hath preſently his ſuite heard and granted; and in the afflictions and perſecutions of the Church of Smyrna, raiſed by Satan, which is reſtrained to a determinate time of ten dayes. And thus the Lord ordereth our afflictions, both in reſpect of the cauſes, manner, meaſure and end, (as I ſhall haue occaſion to ſhew more fully hereafter) in regard whereof hee is ſaid to correct vs in jndgement for our amendement, and not in wrath to cut vs off. Which argument the Lord vſeth to comfort his afflicted Church in her captiuity; Feare not (ſaith hee) O my ſeruant Iacob, for I will deliuer thee, &c. I am with thee (ſaith the Lord) to ſaue thee, though I vtterly deſtroy all the nations where I haue ſcattered thee, yet I will not vtterly deſtroy thee, but I will correct thee by iudgement, and not vtterly cut thee off. The which conſolation let vs apply vnto our ſelues in all our croſſes and afflictions, and conſidering on the one ſide, that the Lord is the chiefe cauſe and authour of them, and alſo ordereth and diſpoſeth them by his wiſe and powerfull prouidence; that Satan and wicked men are but his bare inſtruments whom hee ruleth at his pleaſure, and that whatſoeuer they intend and ayme at, he maketh all their purpoſes and deuices to ſerue his owne ends; and finally, that he appointeth both the manner, meaſure, and time of our conflict and triall; and on the other ſide, that hee who doth all this, is vnto vs no ſtranger or enemy but our moſt deare and gracious Father, who hath ſo loued vs, that hee hath not ſpared to giue his onely and beſt beloued Sonne to the death

Exod.12.41.
Dan.9.2,21.
Apoc.2.10.
Ier.30.11.

for our redemption, who can, becauſe hee is able, and will, becauſe he ſo much tendereth vs, turne all our croſſes into comforts, and make them ſerue as meanes to further our ſaluation; let vs not onely with patience and comfort, but euen with thankſgiuing and reioycing hold out in all our trials and ſuffer with meekneſſe and quiet contentedneſſe whatſoeuer it ſhal pleaſe him to lay vpon vs.

Chap. VIII.

Of the meritorious and deſeruing cauſe of our afflictions, which is our ſinne: and of the comforts which ariſe from this conſideration.

Sect. 1.

WE haue ſeene what are the efficient cauſes of all our afflictions; as alſo the comforts and conſolations which do ariſe from the conſideration of them; now wee are to proceed vnto the cauſes mouing and inciting the Lord to lay vpon vs theſe afflictions: and theſe are of two kindes; the firſt is in vs, which is the meritorious cauſe of all our croſſes; the other is in God, which is his loue inclining him thus to chaſtize vs, that we may not be condemned with the World. Firſt, therefore (as order requireth) we will intreat of the meritorious and deſeruing cauſe of all our miſeries and calamities, that out of the meditation thereof wee may lighten the burthen of our croſſes, and make them more eaſie to be borne vpon the ſhoulders of patience. The cauſe meriting and deſeruing affliction is ſin, which is that ſtrong cart-rope or cable, whereby wee draw vpon vs all afflictions and miſeries, whether wee conſider them as the puniſhments of a righteous Iudge; or the chaſtizements and corrections of a gracious Father. And this the Lord plainly ſheweth vnto vs in the eight and twentieth Chapter of the Booke of Deuteronomy; where hauing promiſed all bleſſings and benefits, and alſo protection and exemption from all miſeries and euils, to thoſe who keepe the Commandements of God; he afterwards annexeth a ſeuere threatning to the tranſgreſſours thereof, namely, that if they did not obey the voice of the Lord their God, to keepe and doe all his commandements, then all his curſes, ſhould come vpon and ouertake them; and ſo expreſſeth a large catalogue of them, from the fifteenth Verſe to the end of the Chapter. And thus the Pſalmiſt ſpeaking of thoſe that are in priſon and captiuity, ſaith that they dwell in darkneſſe and in the ſhadow of death, being faſt bound in miſery and iron; becauſe they rebelled againſt the words of the Lord, and deſpiſed the counſell of the moſt high. And a little after he affirmeth, that fooles (he meaneth ſinners) by reaſon of their tranſgreſſion, and becauſe of their iniquity are afflicted: and that God turneth a fruitfull Land into deſart barrenneſſe for the wickedneſſe of them that dwell therein. Verſe 17.34. So the Wiſe man maketh affliction to be (as it were) the ſhadow of ſinne, which doth alwayes attend vpon it; affliction (ſaith hee) followeth ſinners; but vnto the righteous God will recompence good; Prou. 13.21. and the fruit and haruest which commeth of the ſinners ſeed time, for as he ſaith, Hee that ſoweth iniquity ſhall reape affliction, and the rod of his anger ſhall faile. Prou. 22.8. And moſt plainly the Church in the Lamentations, affirmeth ſinne to be the cauſe of all our ſufferings; man (ſaith ſhe) ſuffereth for his ſinne. Lam. 3.39. In regard of which neere neighbour-hood, and inſeparable vnion betweene ſinne and puniſhment, linked together with the bond of Iuſtice and Gods righteous judgement, they are confounded in their names, and puniſhment is ſignified by the name of ſinne, for ſo the Lord ſaith vnto Caine; If thou doeſt not well, ſinne lyeth at the doore; Gen. 4.7. that is, due puniſhment deſerued by this ſinne, and contrariwiſe whereas it is ſaid, that his puniſhment was greater than he could beare, it may be alſo rendred, that his ſinne was greater than could bee pardoned. Verſe 13. And as this truth appeareth directly by the former teſtimonies; ſo alſo both by the examples and confeſſions of thoſe who haue beene afflicted. Concerning the former the Lord ſaith vnto the people of Iſrael, that their ſinne was the cauſe of their diuorcement from him; and that for their iniquities and tranſgreſſions they were ſold into captiuity, and their mother (that is their Church and nation) was forſaken. Eſay 50.1. So the Prophet Ieremy in the name of the Lord ſaith thus vnto them; thy wayes and thine inuentions haue procured thee theſe things, ſuch is thy wickedneſſe. And againe, I haue ſtricken thee with the wound of an enemy, and with a ſharpe chaſtiſement, for the multitude of thine iniquities; becauſe thy ſinnes were increaſed. Why cryeſt thou for thine affliction? Thy ſorrow is incurable, for the multitude of thine iniquities. Becauſe thy ſinnes were increaſed, I haue done theſe things vnto thee. Ier. 30.14,15. And this the Prophet acknowledgeth in his Lamentations, in the name of his Church and people; The Lord hath afflicted her for the multitude of her tranſgreſſions, and her children are gone into captiuity before the enemy, Ieruſalem hath grieuouſly ſinned, therefore ſhee is in deriſion, &c. Lam. 1.5,8. Finally, our Sauiour implyeth this truth in his ſpeech to the man whom he had cured of his grieuous diſeaſes; Behold (ſaith hee) thou art made whole, ſinne no more; leaſt a worſe thing come vnto thee. John 5.14. And to the ſame purpoſe, one of the Ancients vpon the example of Ionas, ſpeaketh fitly. As ſoone as Ionas (ſaith he) entred into the ſhip, God cauſed the ſurging waues to riſe and ſwell, to teach vs hereby, that where there is ſinne, there alſo is a tempeſt, and after diſobedience followeth a ſtorme. But being deuoured of a Whale, he notwithſtanding liueth; to learne vs hereby, that as to him that liueth in ſinne, a ſhip is no ſafeguard; ſo to him who by repentance hath put it off, neither Sea nor beaſts are hurtfull or pernicious. And hereof it is, that being to cure one ſicke of a palſie, he firſt taketh away his ſin, before he taketh away his diſeaſe. Sonne (ſaith hee) be of good comfort, thy ſinnes are forgiuen thee; and then, Ariſe, and take vp thy bed, and goe to thine houſe. And ſo the afflicted Church hauing affirmed that man ſuffereth for ſinne, perſwadeth to repentance as the onely means to remoue their croſſes and calamities, becauſe thereby ſin which is the cauſe of them is remoued, Let vs (ſaith ſhe) ſearch and try our wayes, and turne againe to the Lord. By all which it appeareth that ſinne is the onely deſeruing cauſe which mooueth the Lord to ſend afflictions; the which is moſt conſonant with Gods moſt infinite Truth and Iuſtice; and that whether wee conſider them as puniſhments inflicted vpon the wicked; or chaſtiſements whereby hee correcteth his owne ſeruants and children. For what can be more righteous, than that hee ſhould inflict thoſe judgements and puniſhments vpon wicked men, which he hath denounced in his Law, againſt the tranſgreſſors thereof, whether they concerne this life or the life to come, ſeeing all both by right of creation and continuall preſeruation, are bound to obedience vpon condition of reward and puniſhment, as being the vaſſals and ſubjects of this great King of Heauen and Earth? And what can be more juſt, yea and full of mercy than for the Lord to chaſtize the faults of his children and ſeruants, that he may reclaime them from their ſinnes, and withhoulding them from the broad way which leadeth to deſtruction, may draw them by this afflicted and ſtraight path, vnto that happines which they formerly loſt by following the delights of ſinne? To which purpoſe one ſaith, that it is iuſt with God to ſcourge euery ſonne whom hee receiueth, that we who were baniſhed out of the joyes of Paradiſe for our rebellious deſiring vnlawfull delights, ſhould againe be reſtored and receiued, by our meeke ſuffering of ſorrowes and croſſes, and being runawayes by doing euill, ſhould be brought againe and repoſſeſſed of our happineſſe by ſuffering euill; doing there againſt juſtice, and ſuffering here for juſtice. In which regard wee are to juſtifie God in all his judgements, and beare with patience that which he ſendeth, not onely becauſe it is vnlawfull to repine and ſtriue againſt them; but becauſe the Lord herein willeth nothing but that which is lawfull and expedient. For which wee haue the Prophet Dauid for our example, who approueth Gods judgements; not onely in generall crying out, righteous art thou, O Lord, and iuſt are thy iudgements; but alſo particularly in thoſe which himſelfe ſuffered; I know O Lord (ſaith hee) that thy iudgements are right, and that thou haſt afflicted mee iuſtly or in truth.

Chryſoſt.ſerm. ad pop.5.Tom.4

Math.9.2,6.

Lamen.3.40.

Aug.de patient. lib.4.cap.24. Tom 4.

Pſal.119,13

Verſe 75.

§.Sect. 2

That though God doe no alwayes a vs for ſin: y this is the b vſe which w can make of afflictions t aſcribe the to our ſinne

Yea but the Scriptures teach vs, that our ſinnes are not alwaies the only cauſes of our afflictions, and that there are diuers other ends which moue the Lords to lay vpon his children theſe croſſes and calamities: for thus the Lord afflicted Abraham whileſt he required obedience to that difficult and grieuous commandement of ſacrificing his ſonne, not for the puniſhment of his ſinne, but for the triall of his faith; and thus Iob endured many croſſes and calamities, not for any ſinnes committed by him, but for the tryall and approuing of his loue, faith, patience, obedience, and other of Gods graces, againſt the calamities and wicked ſlanders of the Deuill. And our Sauiour ſaith directly of the blind man, that he was not puniſhed with that great infirmity, either for his owne ſinne or the ſinne of his parents; but that the workes of God might be made manifeſt in him. To which I anſwere that in truth God doth by afflictions as well make tryall of his graces in vs, as chaſtize vs for our ſinnes, and that beſides our iniquities, and tranſgreſſions, there are in Gods ſecret counſels other cauſes of our croſſes and calamities, but ſeeing the Lord hath in his Word denounced theſe miſeries and afflictions againſt vs, as puniſhments and chaſtiſements for our iniquities and tranſgreſſions; and doth not reueale vnto vs when he tryeth vs, and when he correcteth vs; therefore leauing Gods ſecrets vnto himſelfe, we are not to looke vnto his hidden counſels, but vnto his will reuealed, and according thereunto wee are alwayes to make this vſe of our afflictions, that when wee are iudged we are chaſtened of the Lord, & juſtly corrected and puniſhed for our ſins? Neither ſhall wee need to feare any great errour in this behalfe, ſeeing beſides all our other tranſgreſſions we brought enough ſinne and corruption into the world with vs, to deſerue all the puniſhments of this life, and the life to come; and euery man hath in him ſufficient fuell for the fire of vengeance and puniſhment, if Gods Iuſtice and wrath doe once inflame it. Yea, rather let vs know, that this is the beſt and ſafeſt courſe to aſcribe our croſſes to our ſinnes deſeruing them, becauſe (though wee erre in reſpect of Gods ſecret purpoſe, in ſending this affliction which wee preſently ſuffer) we ſhall take occaſion thereby the better to humble our ſelues vnder the hand of God, to approoue and juſtifie his righteous judgements, and to renew our repentance by ſorrowing for our ſinnes, as being the cauſes of all our ſmart, and labou-

Iohn 9.2.

1.Cor.11,32.

ring to mortifie and forſake them for the time to come. Whereas contrariwiſe the errour of not aſcribing our afflictions to our ſins deſeruing them, when they are in truth for this onely cauſe inflicted by God, is moſt dangerous and pernicious; ſeeing it continueth vs in our wickedneſſe, and hindreth our repentance; according to that complaint of the Lord by the Prophet. They gaue themſelues to deceit, and would not returne; I hearkened and heard, but none ſpake aright, no man repented him of his wickedneſſe, ſaying, what haue I done? euery one turned to their race, as the horſe ruſheth into battell. And therefore the Saints of God in all ages, leauing Gods ſecret counſels to himſelfe, haue euermore inſiſted in their ſinnes, as the onely cauſe of all their afflictions; ſo holy Dauid complaineth; There is nothing ſound in my fleſh, becauſe of thine anger; neither is there reſt in my bones, becauſe of my ſinne; and the Prophet cryeth out in his Prayer for the people, Behold thou art angry, for wee haue ſinned; and thoſe three famous worthies, Daniel, Ezra and Nehemiah, in thoſe excellent Prayers which they make in the behalfe of themſelues and their people, acknowledge their ſinnes to be the cauſes of all their calamities. Yea euen Iob himſelfe who was in truth afflicted chiefly for the triall of his ſpirituall graces; howſoeuer he defendeth his innocencie againſt his three friends, to maintaine his vprightneſſe and ſinceritie from their falſe calumninations and aſperſions; yet hauing to deale with God, he acknowledgeth his ſinne to be the cauſe of all his calamities. I haue ſinned (ſaith hee) what ſhall I doe vnto thee, O thou preſeruer of men? &c. And why doeſt thou not pardon and take away mine iniquitie?

Whoſe example we muſt imitate, labouring in all our afflictions to bee brought vnto the ſight of our ſinnes, that wee may bewaile and forſake them. And conſidering that God doth not onely in generall correct vs for ſinne; but viſiteth our ſpeciall ſinnes with ſpeciall judgements and afflictions; therfore let vs not content our ſelues to haue in ſome generall manner aſcribed our croſſes to our iniquities as the cauſes of them; but let vs alſo ſearch out our ſpeciall and particular ſinnes, which are the cauſes and occaſions of thoſe miſeries which wee preſently endure and ſuffer: that taking more particular notice of them; wee may in more eſpeciall manner repent of them, and more effectually labour in ſubduing and mortifying them. And for our direction herein, let vs conſider of certaine ſignes, whereby we may know when the Lord correcteth a particular ſinne with ſome ſpeciall puniſhment or chaſtizement. Whereof the firſt is, when being afflicted with ſome ſpeciall judgment, after examination we find that in the Scriptures ſuch a puniſhment is denounced againſt ſuch a ſinne; as when affiance in the creature is puniſhed with their inſufficiencie and impotency whereby they cannot, or infidelity and treacherie, whereby they will not affoord vnto vs that helpe which we expect from them. When pride is puniſhed with dejection and contempt; whoredome with barrenneſſe or want of poſterity; idolatry with adultery, and ſuch like. Secondly, when as our ſinnes are puniſhed by Law of requitall like for like; as when hauing diſhonoured God by ſcandalous ſinnes, the Lord in the very ſame doth diſhonour vs; when hauing commited ſpirituall adultery, we or ours are left of God, to commit corporall filthineſſe; when hauing neglected our duties to our Parents, our Children doe neglect theirs vnto vs; and when hauing oppreſſed our inferiours, wee our ſelues are oppreſſed by our ſuperious. And thus did God fit Dauids chaſtizement to his offence, in the ſinne againſt Vriah; and becauſe hee tooke his neighbours wife to commit adulterie with her, the Lord tooke his and gaue them to one of his owne houſe, yea vnto his owne Sonne, his deare darling Abſalon, 2.Sam.12.10, 11.
to bee abuſed by him in filthy inceſt. And becauſe he had ſlaine Vriah with the ſword; therefore the ſword did not depart from his houſe, but the ſame Abſalon doth firſt ſlay his Brother Ammon, for that inceſtuous 2.Sam.13.
rape committed with his Siſter Tamar, wherein there was a double puniſhment of Dauids double ſin; and afterwards rebelling againſt him, neuer reſted till he had expelled him out of his Kingdome, and ſeated himſelfe in his royall Throne. So when the people of Iſraell enquired in the land of their captiuitie, wherefore the Lord did bring vpon them thoſe afflictions of bondage and cruell ſeruitude; the Prophet is commanded by the Lord to giue them this anſwere; Like Ier.5.19.
as yee haue forſaken me, and ſerued ſtrange Gods in your land; ſo ſhall yee ſerue ſtrangers in a land that is not yours. Thirdly, when as we are taken in the very act, and our ſin preſently is attended by our puniſhment; as Dauids numbring of the people with that fearefull peſtilence; Ionas his fleeing from God with that dangerous tempeſt; and Pauls cruell perſecution with ſuddaine blindneſſe and aſtoniſhment. Fourthly, when as our owne conſciences doe judge and condemne vs, as hauing brought vpon our ſelues ſuch a puniſhment by committing ſuch a ſinne; for the conſcience is Gods deputie to conuince vs, being guilty, as worthy of ſuch judgements; and to put vs in mind that ſome ſpeciall ſinnes committed, haue brought vpon vs ſuch ſpeciall puniſhments; as wee may ſee in the example of Ioſephs Brethren, who adjudged themſelues as worthy of all the miſeries which they ſuffered, becauſe they ſo little regarded the cry and intreaty of their Brother in his afflictions. Laſtly, when as our ſinne in its owne nature bringeth forth ſuch a puniſhment as the fruite thereof; as when beggerie followeth idleneſſe or waſtfulneſſe; weakneſſe and ſickneſſe, the ſinnes of vncleanneſſe; and double plagues doe accompanie impetentencie and hardneſſe of heart.

§. Sect. 4.
That much comfort ariſeth from the conſideration of the meritorious cauſe of afflictions, which is our ſins. Firſt, becauſe we haue no iuſt cauſe of murmuring, ſeeing Gods iuſtice and truth is manifeſted, and we receiue no wrong.

And thus haue I ſhewed, not onely that our ſinnes in generall are the cauſes of all our croſſes and calamities; but alſo our ſpeciall ſinnes, of our more ſpeciall miſeries and afflictions: of which truth when our judgements are throughly informed; after wee haue made vſe of this knowledge for the renuing and increaſing of our repentance, both for our ſinnes in generall, and thoſe which more eſpecially preſſe the conſcience with their guilt, and the whole perſon with their puniſhment; we may in the next place make vſe alſo thereof for the ſtrengthening of our patience: and that in diuers reſpects. Firſt, becauſe wee haue no juſt occaſion of murmuring and repining; ſeeing God, as his juſtice neceſſarily requireth, doth juſtly execute his righteous judgements vpon vs for our ſinnes, and according to his reuealed truth inflicteth thoſe puniſhments which he had in his word formerly threatned; and if hee ſhould not thus doe; puniſhing ſinne whereſoeuer hee findeth it, and ſhewing his deteſtation of it in whomſoeuer it is, hee might bee eſteemed partiall, and his juſtice and truth would receiue impeachment. When therefore the Lord acquitteth and cleareth himſelfe from ſuch imputations, and manifeſteth his juſtice & truth by correcting and chaſtizing vs for our tranſgreſſions; there is no cauſe of ſorrow and mourning (but onely for our ſinnes, whereby we haue vrged God vpon the neceſſity of ſhewing his truth, and juſtice to take theſe courſes with vs) vnleſſe we would be found enemies vnto God, and aduerſaries to theſe excellent attributes, whileſt we grieue becauſe hee is righteous in his judgements, and true of his word. Neither is there any cauſe of impatiencie, yea rather in this reſpect wee haue juſt cauſe of joy and comfort; in that Gods juſtice and truth are magnified in our afflictions; for better it were that Heauen and Earth were vtterly deſtroyed yea both men and Angels damned vnto Hell, than that the glory of God, who is the chiefe goodneſſe and ſupreame end of all the creatures, ſhould in the leaſt degree bee dimmed and blemiſhed. But eſpecially haue wee cauſe of rejoyceing and thankſgiuing, if we conſider that in all theſe our afflictions the Lord doth not ſo much puniſh vs for ſinne, as ſinne in vs, mortifying and ſubduing it, that by the death and ſubjection thereof, wee may liue and raigne with him. Euen as the Surgeon in applying of the corraſiue, hath no quarrell to his patient, nor aymeth at his torment; but onely ſeeketh to abate the ſwelling tumour, and to draw out of the ſore the core of corruption that it may bee cured. Secondly, as this conſideration may worke in vs patience in reſpect of God, ſo alſo in regard of vs, ſeeing wee are not at all wronged in our puniſhments, nor haue any injuſtice offered vs by God, but doe onely ſuffer thoſe miſeries and croſſes which wee haue juſtly deſerued, and haue pulled vpon vs by our owne ſinnes. And therefore when wee are exerciſed with any affliction, we haue no more reaſon to complaine of God, nor to repine againſt his righteous judgements, than the malefactour hath to cry out againſt the righteous Iudge, or to grudge againſt the juſt ſentence pronounced by him; nor haue more cauſe when wee are in ſickneſſe, priſon, pouertie or baniſhment, to bend all our anger and malice againſt Gods miniſters and inferiour inſtruments, exclaiming againſt the oppreſſions of our magiſtrates, the falſity of our accuſers, the ilneſſe of the aire or vnwholſomeneſſe of our dyet; than the condemned perſon hath to maligne the priſon walls that incloſe him, the fetters and bolts that bind and clogge him, the Scheriffe and officers that lead him to execution, or the hang-man who by authoritie is appointed to execute the ſentence which the juſt Iudge hath worthily pronounced. But if there bee any cauſe at all of complaining and exclaiming, it is at our ſinnes which haue cauſed the Lord our righteous Iudge to take theſe ſeuere courſes againſt vs, for his owne glory, in the maniſeſting of his juſtice, and our euerlaſting good, by reforming vs of our ſinnes. If there be any reaſon of grieuing and mourning; it is becauſe we haue deſerued theſe judgements, and not becauſe the Lord hath juſtly inflicted them. In which regard the afflicted Church demandeth, wherefore the liuing man is ſorrowfull, ſeeing he ſuffereth for his ſinne. Vnleſſe wee had rather vnderſtand the laſt words as an anſwere to the queſtion, namely that there is no other cauſe of ſorrowing but that his ſinnes deſerued to be thus puniſhed. And in another place ſhee ſaith, that ſhee will beare the wrath of the Lord, becauſe ſhee had ſinned againſt him. To this purpoſe one ſaith, that by a right knowledge of the waight of our ſinne, wee doe much lighten the waight of our puniſhment. And that the griefe of the whip is much tempered and mitigated, when the fault deſeruing it is duely acknowledged, euen as euery patient doth more quietly ſuffer the launcher of the ſurgeon, by how much more corrupt the ſore is which he cutteth.

Lament.3.3

Micah.7.9

Per hoc qu culpæ pon cognoſcitur ctionis pæ migatur. G gor Moral 10.cap.5.

§. Sect.
Their ob on anſwe

Yea but it may be that the party afflicted may truely object, that he is innocent of the fault which is made the occaſion of his puniſhment;

niſhment; that he is wrongfully ſlandered, vnjuſtly oppreſſed; and hardly intreated for his kind vſage; and what place can there then bee for patience? or how can he make vſe of the former comforts, ſeeing he ſuffereth thoſe puniſhments which hee hath not deſerued? I anſwere with the Apoſtle, who art thou O man that diſputeſt with God. And with Eliphaz, I demand; ſhall man be more iuſt than God? or ſhal a man be more pure than his maker? Behold hee found no ſtedfaſtneſſe in his ſeruants, and laid folly vpon his Angels; how much more in them that dwell in houſes of clay, whoſe foundation is in the duſt, which ſhall be deſtroyed before the moth? But if thou wilt yet further reaſon the matter, then know; that howſoeuer thou art innocent in reſpect of the ſinne, which is the occaſion of thy croſſe, yet the Lord doth not puniſh thee vnjuſtly and before thou haſt deſerued it; for thou waſt borne the ſlaue of ſinne and Sathan, the child of wrath, and enemy vnto God; and therefore art deſeruedly lyable to puniſhment; thy body and ſoule were wholly polluted with originall corruption; and therefore are juſtly the ſubjects of croſſes and calamities; for where ſinne pleadeth full poſſeſſion, there puniſhment alſo may of due, chalenge admiſſion and entertainment. Beſides what a numerous of-ſpring of actuall trangreſſions, hath ſprung out of the wombe of this fruitfull mother? and of how many grieuous ſinnes doſt thou ſtand accuſed and condemned before the tribunall of Gods juſtice by the verdict and teſtimony of thine owne conſcience; for euery one whereof the Lord may juſtly inflict vpon thee this and farre greater puniſhments, although thou be innocent of that fault which being imputed vnto thee is the cauſe of thy affliction? But thou wilt further object that though being guilty of many ſinnes againſt God thou art deſeruedly puniſhed, and therefore haſt great reaſon to beare it with patience; yet thou art innocent in reſpect of men; and therfore being by them vnjuſtly puniſhed and vexed; thou haſt juſt cauſe of impatiency and complaining. To which I anſwere, that we haue little cauſe to ſtand much vpon the ſecondary cauſes and inferiour inſtruments, when as we conſider that God the ſupreme and principall cauſe of all our afflictions doth puniſh vs juſtly; nor ſo much to inſiſt vpon our righteouſneſſe towards men, when as our conſciences are guilty of many ſinnes againſt God, which haue iuſtly deſerued theſe and farre greater puniſhments, eſpecially conſidering that the former worketh in vs rage and impatiency, wherby we are made vtterly vnfit to beare our burthen; whereas the latter being duly thought on, maketh vs to beare with humility and meekeneſſe all croſſes and miſeries which by theſe inferiour inſtruments doe happen vnto vs. For (as one ſaith) he patiently ſuffereth wrongs and injuries, who religiouſly remembreth that hee hath in himſelfe ſins and corruptions which in reſpect of God doe neede toleration; and then with meekeneſſe wee indure railings and reuilings, when in our conſciences and ſecret cogitations we look backe to our euils committed; an example whereof wee haue in David who patiently heard Shemei, railing againſt him, becauſe though he were iunocent in reſpect of him, yet hee found himſelfe guilty of many ſinnes againſt God, which had juſtly deſerued farre greater puniſhments.

Patienter iniuriam illatam tolerat qui piè meminit quod fortaſſe adhuc habeat in quo debeat ipſe tolerari. Tunc illata conuitia benè toleramus cum in ſecreto mentis ad malè perpetrata recurrimus. Gregor.

2.Sam.16.10.

And ſecondly I anſwere that as it is a meanes of patience to conſider that wee ſuffer juſtly deſerued puniſhments from the hand of God (ſeeing it is moſt vncomfortable once to imagine that the chiefe judge of Heauen and Earth, ſhould deale vnrighteouſly, becauſe there is no limits in doing where the power is infinite) ſo is there great cauſe of patience and comfort when we ſuffer vniuſtly at the hands of men, both becauſe it is a ſingular mercy of God, in that when we are guilty of ſo many ſins for which we might iuſtly haue all the afflictions of this life impoſed vpon vs, he paſſeth by them all, and is content that wee ſhould ſuffer in our innocency and righteouſneſſe; and alſo becauſe ſuch ſufferings are very beneficiall and fruitfull vnto vs, as hauing the promiſe of euerlaſting happineſſe; For bleſſed are they (as our Sauiour hath pronounced them) which ſuffer perſecution for righteouſneſſe ſake, for theirs is the Kingdome of Heauen. And bleſſed are yee when men reuile you and perſecute you, and ſay all manner of euill againſt you for my names ſake falſely; Reioyce and be glad for great is your reward in heauen. So the Apoſtle Peter ſaith, wee are bleſſed if wee ſuffer for righteouſneſſe ſake, and in this regard, we haue no cauſe to feare their feare, neither to bee troubled. And affirmeth it to be much better (if the will of God be ſo) that we ſuffer for well doing, than for euill doing; ſeeing herein wee be like our Maſter Chriſt, who ſuffered for ſinners, the iuſt for the vniuſt, that hee might bring vs to God. And therefore he exhorteth that none of vs ſuffer as a murtherer, or as a theefe, or an euill doer, or as a buſie body in other mens matters. But if any man ſuffer as a Chriſtian, let him not be aſhamed; but let him glorifie God in this behalfe. Of which precept, himſelfe and the Apoſtle Iohn are good precedents and examples, who being beaten for a good cauſe euen for preaching in the name of Chriſt; depart from the councell reioycing that they were counted worthy to ſuffer rebuke for his name. Whom wee are to imitate, comforting our ſelues, when like the Apoſtles wee may ſuffer in our innocency for a good cauſe, rather than when like offenders

Gen.18.25.

Matth.5.10,11

1.Pet.3.14.
Verſ.17,18.

1.Pet.4.15.

Act.5.41.

ders and malefactors, vnto the heauineſſe of the puniſhment is added the waight of faultineſſe and the guilt of ſinne. For as the Apoſtle ſaith, this is thankſworthy, if a man for conſcience towards God endure griefe, ſuffering wrongfully. For what prayſe is it, if when being buffeted for your faults yee take it patiently? but and if when yee doe well, yee ſuffer wrong and take it patiently, this is acceptable vnto God.

1.Pet.2.19.20.

§. Sect.6. That God inflicteth on vs farre lighter puniſhments than our ſins deſerue.

And thus may wee ſtrengthen and confirme our patience in the conſideration of Gods iuſtice, puniſhing and correcting vs for our deſerts and demerits; but much more may we comfort our ſelues in the conſideration of his mercy and goodneſſe whereby he is moued gratiouſly to ſpare vs, inflicting vpon vs farre lighter and leſſer puniſhments than our ſinnes haue deſerued. For hee doth but lightly touch vs, when he might iuſtly cruſh vs in peeces; and (as it is ſaid of the Perſian nobles) when we offend againſt our Prince and ſoueraigne; in ſtead of tormenting our bodies hee doth but beate our garments, depriuing vs of the trifles of this life, and correcting vs either by ſome corporall infirmity, or in our outward eſtates when our ſinnes haue deſerued the fearefulleſt of his plagues. So that in our greateſt afflictions, wee haue iuſt cauſe to confeſſe, and thankfully to ackowledge, with the Prophet Dauid, that hee hath not dealt with vs after our ſinnes, nor rewarded vs according to our iniquities. For hee doth not correct vs in the rigour of his iuſtice, but (as he ſaith) in iudgement, not looking what our ſinnes haue deſerued, but what wee are able to beare; and knowing whereof we be made, and remembring that we are but duſt, full of frailty and infirmity, he proportioneth our afflictions, not to our ſinnes, but to our ſtrength, which being ſo feeble that we cannot indure much, hee doth lay vpon vs light chaſtizements for haynous ſinnes, and but ſeldome correcteth vs for our innumerable offences. Hee doth not puniſh vs as a judge according to the quality of our offences, but he ſpareth vs as a man ſpareth his owne Sonne that ſerueth him; and as a Father hath compaſſion on his Children, ſo hath the Lord compaſſion on them that feare him.

Pſal.103.10.
Ier.30.11.
Mal.3.17.
Pſal.103.13.

§. Sect.7. The hainouſneſſe of ſinne in its owne nature, ſhewed firſt by the perſon who is thereby offended.

All which mercy and pitty ſhewed vnto vs by God in our chaſtizements, will more euidently appeare, if we conſider on the one ſide, both how hainous and capitall ſinne is in its owne nature, and alſo how deteſtable, odious, and abhominable it is in his ſight, and on the other ſide in what monſtrous manner, and meaſure, wee are defiled with it. The hainouſneſſe of ſinne will appeare if wee conſider the perſon againſt whom it is committed, or the puniſhment which by the iuſtice of God is allotted to it. The perſon againſt whom it is committed is the Lord himſelfe, the ſole King and Monarch of Heauen and Earth, who is in his owne nature infinite in glory, maieſty, power, mercy, goodneſſe and all perfection; and in reſpect of vs moſt worthy to be ſerued and obeyed, as being obliged vnto him in that treble band of creation, preſeruation, and redemption; whoſe will and Law is violated and tranſgreſſed by euery ſinne, and ſuch a contempt and outrage offered by the ſinner againſt his crowne and dignity, that as much as in him lyeth he taketh away his rule and gouernement, defeateth him of his Kingdome and ſoueraignty, and denying ſubiection and allegeance vnto him, yeeldeth obedience vnto his arch-enemy the Deuill, & acknowledgeth him as his Prince & King. Now if a fault bee to bee aggrauated either by the dignity of the perſon againſt whom it is committed; or by the vngratitude of the party who doth commit it, as offending againſt ſuch an one as hath well deſerued of him; then how infinite is the guilt of our ſin, committed againſt ſo infinite a Maieſty, the King of Heauen and Earth, in whom, we liue, moue, and haue our being, and from whom wee haue receiued whatſoeuer good thing we doe inioy; and that by vs who are not onely ſo baſe and contemptible, but alſo infinitely indebted and behoulding vnto him.

Act.17.28.

§. Sect. The haino neſſe of ſin ſhewed by conſideratio of the puni ments whic Gods iuſtic allotteth to

Secondly the hainouſneſſe of ſinne appeareth by the puniſhments which the iuſtice of God hath allotted vnto it; the which may be conſidered either as they are denounced in Gods word, or inflicted in his workes; the one being the ſentence of condemnation, the other the execution. In reſpect of the former wee find that the leaſt ſinne, and but once committed, and that in thought onely doth make him who committeth it lyable & ſubiect to the curſe of the Law, according to the ſentence pronounced by God, and repeated by the Apoſtle: Curſed is euery man that continueth not in all things which are written in the Booke of the Law to doe them; vnder which curſe is contained and compriſed all the fearefull plagues and puniſhments which are incident vnto this life, as all ſickneſſes, diſeaſes and ſores of the body, which are ſo many that they would require a great part of our liues to number them; and ſo grieuous and intolerable, that the very naming of them would appall and terrifie vs: all diſaſtrous accidents which impoueriſh and ruine our eſtates; all ſhame, contempt, diſgrace and infamy, wrongs and iniuries, whereby our names are blemiſhed and blotted, and our perſons oppreſſed; ſcorned and troden vnder foote: all terrors and troubles of mind, horror of conſcience, doubting and deſpaire; with that vnſpeakeable griefe which doth accompany them; a large catalogue of which miſeries we haue

Deut.27.26.
Gal.3.10.

ſet downe by Gods owne direction in the eighth and twentieth chapter of the Booke of Deuteronomy. All which though they bee incomparably more and greater, than any one man indureth in this life, yet are they without all compariſon leſſe than thoſe helliſh and euerlaſting puniſhments, which the Lord hath threatned againſt wicked men in the life to come. For as one ſaith, the damned ſuffer in Hell an end which hath no end; a death without death, a continuall conſumption without waſting, becauſe their death euer-liueth, their end is alwayes in beginning, and their decay neuer decayeth; but they are daily healed that they may be wounded, and repayred a freſh that they may bee deſtroyed, they are euer dying, but neuer dead, euer conſuming but neuer conſumed, alwayes burning and broyling, but neuer quite waſted and burnt vp. But that we may not thinke theſe terrible threatnings of iudgement and puniſhment denounced againſt ſinne in the Booke of God, to be but paper-ſhot, which by the ſound thereof onely affrighteth, but hurteth not: let vs looke into the iuſt execution of this dreadfull ſentence in this life; where we ſhall finde how haynous ſin is in Gods ſight by thoſe fearefull puniſhments, which he hath inflicted on thoſe who haue committed it. And to paſſe by the examples of Gods vengeance executed vpon ſinners in all ages, recorded in heatheniſh and humane Hiſtories; and thoſe which euery man hath obſerued in his owne experience, let vs onely looke into the holy Scriptures, and ſet before our eyes ſome few examples of many, which wee finde there regiſtred for our vſe. And there wee ſhall behold the whole World drowned ſauing eight perſons; and all that goodly beautie of the Earth defaced and neglected; all her gay ornaments ſtripped off and caſt away, becauſe they were ſtained and blemiſhed with mans ſinne. There we ſhall ſee Sodome and Gomorrah flaming and ſmoking with Fire and brimſtone, that the Land might bee vnburthened and purged from theſe filthy inhabitants; and (as it were) aired and freed from the noyſome ſtinke of their ſinnes: And Egypt plagued with great variety of grieuous puniſhments, becauſe vnto the huge multitude of their other ſins, they added outragious oppreſſion, and malicious cruelty againſt the people and Church of God. Yea there wee ſhall ſee the Iſraelites themſelues after they were choſen for Gods peculiar, ennobled with ſo many royall titles, and ſpeciall fauours from God, endowed with ſo many priuiledges and prerogatiues aboue all the nations of the Earth, and made famous by the deſtruction of their enemies, and their meruailous and miraculous deliuerance; yet for all this expoſed to Gods wrath, and deſtroied by his fearefull plagues, when they tranſgreſſed his commaundements and ſinned againſt him. Among theſe wee ſhall finde Corah, Dathan and Abiram, men noble and great in their families and tribes, and much aduanced in ſpeciall fauours from God aboue the common ſort, yet when they ſinned by their rebellion, ſwallowed aliue by the Earth, and deſcending quicke into the pit. Yea when the Lord had choſen againe out of this choyce, and rejecting the ten tribes of Iſraell for their ſinnes, retained in his ſpeciall fauour the people of the Iewes; yet when they likewiſe ſinned againſt him, wee ſhall finde them, firſt grieuouſly plagued at home, and afterwards by their enemies ouerthrowne, led into captiuitie, and afflicted with much miſery; and being reſtored vpon a ſecond triall, for their ſinne in rejecting and crucifying Chriſt our Sauiour, finally caſt off, their Cities ſacked and ruined, their Land made deſolate, innumerable numbers deſtroyed by the ſword and famine, and the remnant reſerued to be ſcattered among all nations, that they may be vnto them a ſcorne and hiſſing, and daily ſpectacles of Gods wrath, examples of his hatred vnto ſinne, and continuall remembrancers to put them in minde what they are to expect for the like ſinnes, who being wilde branches, were grafted into the true Oliue tree, when the Lord hath left ſuch a fearefull teſtimonie of his hatred againſt all impietie and vnrighteouſneſſe, in breaking off and deſtroying the naturall branches for bearing and bringing forth theſe fruits of wickedneſſe. But aboue all examples of Gods wrath in the ſeuere puniſhing of ſinne, are thoſe of the firſt and ſecond Adam. The former of which for tranſgreſſing one onely commandement, by eating the forbidden friute, and that but once onely, was caſt out of Paradiſe, and that which was worſe, out of Gods fauour diſpoiled of all his former happineſſe, depriued of all thoſe excellent gifts and graces, and diſrobed (as it were) of thoſe rich ornaments wherewith he was endowed and beautified in his creation; and contrariwiſe was ſubiected both in his ſoule and body vnto all afflictions & croſſes, torments and tortures, terrours and feares in this life, and to eternall deſtruction, death and condemnation in the life to come. Neither was hee alone thus fearefully puniſhed for this one onely ſinne committed by him, in his owne perſon alone, or next heires; but in all his poſterity from the firſt beginning, to the end of the world, becauſe they fell with him and ſinned in his loynes. In which regard we may truely ſay, that all the euils of this life, either the euils of ſinne, or the euils of puniſhment, all the Atheiſme, Paganiſme, idolatrie, blaſphemie, murthers, whoredomes, rapes, inceſt, ſodomie, buggery,

Num.16.30.

gery, robbing, oppreſſing, ſlandering and all manner of outragious wickedneſſe; and alſo all plagues, warre, famine, ſickneſſes and diſeaſes, all leproſies, conſumptions, agues, gouts, apoplexies, palſies, and the reſt; all want, pouertie, ſhame, reproach, with all other miſeries of this life; yea all the dreadfull torments of Hell Fire, and the euerlaſting condemnation of thoſe innumerable millions of reprobate and wicked men, are all of them the deſerued puniſhments but of this only ſin. So the ſecond Adam our Lord and Sauiour Ieſus Chriſt, is a notable example of Gods ſeuere iuſtice in puniſhing of ſinne; who though hee were moſt pure and innocent in his owne nature, and no corruption found in his heart, nor guile in his mouth, yet becauſe as our ſuretie hee vndertooke to make ſatisfaction for our ſinnes, by ſuffering thoſe puniſhments which wee had deſerued, indured innumerable miſeries and afflictions in the whole courſe of his life, as pouertie, hunger, wearineſſe, ſlanders, reproaches, the tentations of the Diuell and the World, conſpiracies and layings in waite of his malicious enemies, treacherie and treaſon, hard cenſures and forſaking of his neereſt friends; falſe accuſations, vniuſt condemnation, mockings and ſcornings, buffeting, whipping, and crowning with thornes; and laſtly, a bitter agony, cauſing him to ſweat blood; the crucifying of his bleſſed Body, and which was aboue all the reſt, the horrible and intolerable burthen of Gods fearce and fierie wrath, due vnto vs for our ſinnes. By all which it appeareth of what vnconceiuable guilt ſinne is, and what infinite torments and plagues it iuſtly deſerueth, ſeeing God hath thus fearefully puniſhed it from time to time; eſpecially conſidering that all theſe puniſhments were inflicted by him, whoſe iuſtice is ſo perfect and exact, that it is impoſſible hee ſhould do the leaſt vniuſtice, iniury, or cruelty aboue the deſert of ſinne; yea in whom there alſo eternally reſideth infinite mercy and goodneſſe; which vpon all due occaſions, are ready (if there were cauſe) to temper and qualifie this ſcorching heate of Gods furie, and rigour of his iuſtice.

§. Sect. 9. That ſinne is moſt odious vnto God, ſhewed firſt by the perſons whom he hath puniſhed for it.

And thus haue I ſhewed how haynous and capitall ſinne is, both by conſidering it in its owne nature, and in the puniſhments which by Gods iuſtice are allotted vnto it. Now further wee are to ſhew that it is alſo vnto God moſt odious and abhominable: the which as it doth already in part appeare by that which hath beene ſaid concerning thoſe fearefull puniſhments which hee inflicteth vpon the offenders; ſo will it bee more manifeſt if wee conſider the perſons vpon whom hee hath inflicted theſe puniſhments, and the contrariety which is betweene ſinne and his moſt holy nature. The firſt vpon whom God inflicted his heauie iudgments for ſinne, were the Diuell and his Angels; who before ſinne committed were highly in Gods fauour, as being his moſt glorious and excellent creatures, endowed with a rich and vnvaluable dowrie and portion of his ſingular gifts and graces, as purity and ſimplicity of nature, wiſdome, power, beauty, iuſtice, and ſuch like; but yet when by committing ſinne they fell from him, they became hereby more odious and loathſome than the vileſt of his creatures, and are ſtill, and ſhal be for euermore purſued by his wrath, and ſubiect to his moſt heauie iudgements and helliſh torments. If therefore ſin could make ſuch louely and excellent creatures, aboue all others moſt loathſome and vgly in Gods ſight, then how loathſome, monſtrous and miſhapen is it when it appeareth in its owne nature, and receiueth no grace from the excellency of Gods workemanſhip in the creatures who commit it? And how bitter is it in its ſelfe, when it is quite without any mixture of their ſweetneſſe? when wee would to the full ſet forth the vglineſſe and euill of any thing, we vſually ſay, that it is as blacke or bad as the Diuell himſelfe; but yet as blacke and bad as he is, he is nothing ſo euill and vgly as any ſinne; ſeeing this onely deformed and corrupted him, who was before glorious and beautifull; and if it were poſſible for him to waſh himſelfe cleane from this pollution and filthineſſe, hee would againe appeare louely and gracefull, like the Sunne in his brighteneſſe, or as an Angell of light, glorious and beautifull. The next whom God puniſhed for ſinne were our firſt parents, who alſo were before their tranſgreſſion moſt deare vnto God and amiable in his ſight, as being the moſt excellent part of this earthly workmanſhip, and not much inferiour to the Angels themſelues, ſeeing they were created according to his owne image, in wiſdome, righteouſneſſe and holineſſe. But yet when they ſinned againſt God by breaking his Commandement, hee caſt them out of fauour, baniſhed them his preſence, ſtripped them of all his gifts, and adiudged them to ſuffer all the plagues and miſeries of this life, and hell torments and eternall condemnation in the World to come. From which iuſt ſentence few are acquited, notwithſtanding that all-ſufficient price of redemption payed by our Sauiour, but remaine ſtill (for want of applying Chriſts merits by faith) reprobated and adiudged to euerlaſting puniſhments with the Diuell and his Angels. But aboue all the reſt, the hatred of God againſt ſinne, appeareth moſt fully and clearely in the example of Chriſt himſelfe; who though hee were his onely begotten and moſt dearely beloued Sonne, of his owne nature and eſſence, and therefore of more worth than all men and Angels, with all other creatures of heauen and earth; and though hee were his immaculate Lambe free from the leaſt ſpot or blemiſh of ſinne and corruption in his owne moſt pure nature; yet when hee found ſin vpon him, though it were not properly his owne, but the ſins of the Elect, for which as our Surety hee did vndertake to ſatisfie his Fathers iuſtice; hee ſo much abhorred ſin aſſumed by him, that hee ſpared him no more than if he had beene a meere ſtranger or vtter enemy, but made him to drinke vp the full Vials of his wrath, vntill by his ſufferings he had fully ſatisfied for ſin, and waſhed it cleane out of Gods ſight; both from himſelfe and all the faithfull, in the pure ſtreames of his precious bloud.

Sect. 10.
hatred, contra-that is it & and ho-

Secondly, the odiouſneſſe of ſinne vnto God appeareth in that contrariety which is betweene it and his moſt holy nature; neither are fire and water, light and darkneſſe, Heauen and Hell, God and the Deuill, ſo oppoſite and contrary the one to the other, as the euill of ſin is to this chiefe goodnes. In reſpect whereof, though Gods infinite power can do all things, yet he cannot ſin; though Gods eſſence being incomprehenſible be in al things, & all things in it, yet can neither ſin be in it, nor it in ſin; though his goodneſſe and loue in ſome kind and meaſure be extended to all his creatures, for he cauſeth his Sun to ſhine, and raine to fall vpon the euill and vpon the good, yet doe they not in any reſpect extend vnto ſin, but hee purſueth it whereſoeuer hee ſeeth it with mortall and implacable hatred; neither can the beauty, excellency or louelineſſe of any creature in whom hee findeth it, any whit mitigate or abate it; but as the infuſion of Coloquintida doth make all things bitter which are mixed with it, and is it ſelfe made ſweet by nothing; ſo ſinne doth make the moſt ſweet things bitter, the moſt beautifull things vgly, and the creatures which are amiable and louely, to become moſt loathſome and odious in Gods ſight; it ſelfe in the meane time being not made by any thing in which it ſubſiſteth more ſweete, beautifull, or amiable, or any whit leſſe bitter, vgly, or odious. As therefore we would account that a moſt palpable and miraculous darkneſſe, which the brighteſt beames of the Sun could not penetrate and enlighten; that moſt bitter which nothing can ſweeten; and that moſt hard, which nothing can molifie or make ere the ſofter: So muſt we needs confeſſe ſin aboue all things in the world to bee moſt vgly and deformed, ſeeing beauty it ſelf can in no degree beautifie it; moſt exorbitant and execrable, which omnipotency cannot doe; moſt euill, which cannot be bettered by the chiefe goodneſſe, and moſt odious and abominable, ſeeing God who is loue it ſelfe, cannot chuſe but deteſt and hate it.

§. Sect. 11. That we are guilty of all manner of ſin.

And thus haue I ſhewed how hainous ſin is in it owne nature, and alſo how it is vnto God moſt odious and abhominable: now we are further to conſider how farre forth wee are guilty of it, and ſo lyable to that wrath and vengeance, which is due vnto it. Where after vnpartiall examination, wee ſhall find, that we are euery way moſt ſinfull and wicked; for we are not onely guilty of the ſinne of our firſt parents in whoſe loynes wee alſo tranſgreſſed; but wee haue deriued from them that contagious Leproſie of originall ſin, which hath infected and corrupted; defiled and diſabled all the powers and faculties of our ſoules, and all the members and parts of our bodies. Our vnderſtandings are blinded with ignorance, our imaginations onely euill and that continually, our wils peruerſe to any good duty, and chearefull in imbracing ſin; our memories regiſters of wicked ſayings, ſights, examples and actions, for our ſinfull imaginations and concupiſcence to worke and ruminate vpon, till they haue conceiued the like wickedneſſe, and offered it to the will, to bee borne and brought forth by conſent and fact: our conſciences ſeared, ſenſleſſe and benummed, not performing their duty in admoniſhing and accuſing vs for our ſins; our hearts and affections are the fountaines of all corruption, and the filthy forges wherein all concupiſcence and ſin is hammered and forged, till it come to its vgly ſhape and faſhion. Our bodies which ſhould be vndefiled Temples for the Holy Ghoſt to dwell in, are filthy Stewes and brothell Houſes, wherein our ſoules and Sathan commit together ſpirituall whoredome and vncleanneſſe, our eyes are full of adultery and open paſſages, whereat the Deuill at his pleaſure ſendeth into vs whole troupes of tentations to beſiege and ſurprize our ſoules; our eares like two wide gates giue free admittance to all filthy and ſinfull diſcourſes which defile and corrupt the heart; and all the reſt of our ſenſes, what are they but Panders to the pleaſures of ſinne; continually betraying and expoſing our ſoules to be defiled and abuſed by them. Vnto which originall corruption of our whole natures wee haue added actuall tranſgreſſions, which as they haue beene hainous in their quality, ſo they haue matched and farre exceeded the haires of our heads, and the ſtarres of Heauen in their number and multitude; the which we haue committed through the whole courſe of our liues, both in our childhood, youth and riper age, before and after our conuerſion, and that not only through ignorance and infirmity, but alſo againſt knowledge and conſcience, deliberately and wilfully; preſumptuouſly and with an high hand againſt God.

§. Sect. 12. That the ſmal-

By all which it appeareth that as ſin is hainous and of infinite guilt, and conſequently de-nes of our afflictions being compared with the greatneſſe of our ſins ſhould much increaſe our patience and comfort.

deſerueth infinite puniſhment, ſo wee are infinitely guilty of this guilt, and innumerably culpable of all kindes of wickedneſſe: now further (that we may apply that which hath bene ſaid to our preſent purpoſe) we are to conſider that the knowledge hereof ſerueth much for the ſtrengthening of our patience in our greateſt croſſes and calamities; and that whether wee compare our afflictions with our ſins; or with thoſe croſſes and miſeries which God hath juſtly inflicted vpon others, who notwithſtanding haue not ſo grieuouſly offended. In reſpect of the former we are thus to meditate and reaſon with our ſelues; I am indeed grieuouſly afflicted, but what is my puniſhment in compariſon of my ſin? For if the leaſt tranſgreſſion of the Law deſerueth the curſe and wrath of God, his mortall hatred, all the plagues of this life, and eternall condemnation, Hell and deſtruction in the life to come, then to how many curſes, to how much wrath and hatred, to how innumerable and fearefull plagues, to what and how great condemnation and helliſh torments am I worthily lyable and ſubject, who haue committed ſins innumerable in their number, and in their quality and quantity hainous and grieuous? Seeing therefore the Lord for his Chriſts ſake is content to remit ſo much of the extremitie of his juſtice and my deſerued puniſhment, as that he is willing to forgiue and free mee from thoſe euerlaſting torments of Hell fire, and contenteth himſelfe with inflicting on me temporall chaſtiſements, and that to this end that I ſhould not bee condemned with the World, ſurely I haue great cauſe to beare his hand with patience, and meekly and quietly to ſubmit my ſelfe vnto his will, though it ſhould be his pleaſure to inflict vpon mee all the plagues and miſeries which are incident vnto all mankind, and not onely with patience, but alſo with thankfulneſſe to acknowledge in my greateſt miſeries with the afflicted and captiued Church, that it is the great mercy of God that I am not vtterly conſumed. For if euery malefactour quietly and patiently ſuffereth his leſſer puniſhments, when he deſerueth farre greater, and thankfully acknowledgeth the mercy of the judge, when by adjudging him to the whip, hee acquitteth him from the gallowes; Then how much more patiently and gratefully ſhould I endure all temporall afflictions? Seeing my Judge freeth me from thoſe which are euerlaſting, although my ſins haue juſtly deſerued them; and then how much more, ſeeing he remitteth the moſt of theſe worldly miſeries alſo? And in ſtead of all inflicteth but ſome few, and that not thoſe which are the greateſt of all, with which neuertheleſſe hee graciouſly mixeth many benefits and comforts, whereby their ſmart may be mitigated, and their ſowerneſſe ſweetned. I am indeed grieuouſly ſicke, but alaſſe I haue deſerued the death of the ſoule; I haue many croſſes lying vpon me, but if I had my due, I ſhould haue farre more and greater, euen all the miſeries of this life and the life to come. I am tortured with ſores, aches and paines, but what is all this in compariſon of the merit of my ſins, which haue juſtly deſerued the terrours of conſcience & torments of Hell? I am by death depriued for a time of my children & friends, but my ſins haue deſerued to be depriued of the preſence of God, and his Saints & angels, where is fulnes of joy for euermore; my earthly delights are taken from mee, I haue loſt my riches, and my worldly honours haue left and forſaken me; but if the Lord ſhould deale with me according to his righteous judgement, I might juſtly for my ſins looſe all my intereſt in the joyes and treaſures reſerued for me in Heauen, and bee ouer-whelmed with ſhame and confuſion among the damned ſpirits. I am in priſon, but if I had my due I ſhould be in Hell; I am baniſhed my Country, but if the mercy of God were not farre aboue my deſert, I ſhould euerlaſtingly bee exiled from the preſence of God and from the heauenly Canaan. I am now ſubject to the pangs of death, but it is ſuch an one, as endeth all my miſery, and beginneth my glory and felicity; whereas my ſins ſo grieuous and innumerable haue juſtly merited the euerlaſting death of body and ſoule. And therefore ſeeing the Lord dealeth with me not according to my deſerts, but his owne infinite mercies, inflicting vpon mee ſhort and light afflictions, in ſtead of helliſh and euerlaſting torments, and (as it were) doth but pricke me with a Pin to awaken me out of the ſleepe of ſin, whereas I haue deſerued to be mortally wounded and ſtabbed to the heart; I will not only with patience and meekneſſe, but alſo with thankſgiuing and joy, prayſe and magnifie his infinite mercies in the middeſt of thoſe afflictions which hee layeth vpon me.

Lamen. 3.22.

§. Sect.

That the d.ration of thers grea puniſhme who haue l offended, c pared with lighter a ons ſhould make vs p tient and c fortable in troubles,

And thus may we ſtrengthen our patience, if we compare the ſmalnes of our affliction with the greatneſſe of our ſin: the like helpe we may haue, if wee will compare our light croſſes with others more heauy puniſhments, though (for ought wee can ſee) their leſſer offences are farre exceeded by our more haynous ſins: for how many may we behold (if ſelfe-loue and impatiency blinde vs not) whoſe afflictions ſo farre exceed ours, that if they be compared, will make vs confeſſe that our heauieſt croſſes are but fatherly fauours, in compariſon of their fearefull puniſhments? Thou haſt loſt thy riches; yet ſome friends regard and take care of thee; but how many haue there been, who hauing had farre greater wealth, haue with it loſt their friends too, and ſo haue beene enforced to begge from doore to doore, and yet notwithſtanding haue miſerably ſtarued for want of reliefe? Thou art pinched with pouerty, but thou haſt thine health, or wanting this, thou haſt ſome wealth to procure thy comfort: but how many haue beene depriued of both at once, and being as well Beggars as Lazers and diſeaſed perſons, would haue thought it a great happineſſe if being admitted into a Spittle, they might haue had any hope of helpe, and in the meane time begged by priuiledge? Thou art hated and oppreſſed by thine enemies from whom thou couldeſt expect no better; but how many ſuffer far greater euils from thoſe whom they eſteemed their deareſt friends? Thou art tormented with paine in thy body; but how many feeling no leſſe outward ſmart, are alſo inwardly afflicted with the ſickneſſe of the ſoule, the terrors of conſcience, and ſorrowes of mind? Thou art afflicted in thy conſcience with the burthen of ſin, and the tentations of Sathan, but thou haſt ſome wiſe and faithfull friends vnto whom thou mayeſt boldly vnfold thy doubts and griefes, and ſo receiue ſome comfort for the refreſhing of thy fainting ſoule; but how many are there as deeply perplexed and ſtrongly aſſaulted, ouer whom Satan obtaineth an eaſie victory being vtterly forſaken of God and men, and ſo left deſtitute of all meanes of recouery? Finally, thou art aſſaulted with afflictions, but others are ouercome; thou art ſhaken, but many are ouerthrowne. Thou haſt time and reſpite granted thee by God, not onely to take breath & gather ſtrength, but alſo to make good vſe of thy afflictions for the beginning or renuing of thy repentance aud ſtrengthening of thy faith, that ſo they may indeed bee vnto thee chaſtiſements and fatherly corrections, which reforme thee of thy ſins and preſerue thee from condemnation; but how many haſt thou heard of who haue ſuddenly beene cut off with Gods vengeance, and preſently deſtroyed in the very act of ſin, whoſe judgements might euen in the cenſure of charitie be intitled to the name puniſhments, which are not inflicted for the good of the party who ſuffereth them, but for the example of thoſe who ſee them? Wherein thy ſtate reſembleth Gods faithfull people, and theirs the curſed Nations; of both which God thus ſpeaketh by his Prophet; I am with thee (ſaith the Lord to his people) to ſaue thee, though I vtterly deſtroy all the Nations where I haue ſcattered thee, yet I will not vtterly deſtroy thee, but I will correct thee by iudgement, and not vtterly cut thee off. But though it were imagined, that thou canſt not truly apply vnto thee any of theſe conſolations, becauſe thy afflictions doe exceed all other mens. And though it were ſuppoſed that thou haſt no comforts to allay thy croſſes, but haſt with thy riches loſt thy friends, and ſo art brought to extreame penury; that with thy pouerty is joyned ſickneſſe; and that thou art alike wronged and oppreſſed with thy friends and enemies; that thou art both tormented in body and mind, and haſt no friend vnto whom thou mayeſt impart thy griefes; yet conſider that there are many whoſe ſins haue beene fewer and leſſe haynous, who after all the miſeries of this life, doe now ſuffer the euerlaſting torments of hell fire, in compariſon whereof all theſe worldly puniſhments are no more than ſmoke to the ſcorching flame, and a painted fire, to one which truly burneth. For how many children and fooles are (for ought wee know) in the ſtate of condemnation, and in the place of the damned; whom wee vſually call Innocents, and that not vnfitly if we compare their leſſer ſins with our enormous crimes, many of them hauing neuer committed any actuall ſin, but ſtanding onely guilty of that originall corruption in which they were conceiued and borne. How many Hypocrites haue their portion with the Deuill and his Angels, who haue ſeemed to ſerue God religiouſly in their whole liues, and haue kept themſelues vnblameable to the World, of many haynous faults and great crimes, of which if we were arraigned, we muſt needs plead guilty? How many Pagans and Ethnick Infidels are in the ſame condemnation, who haue beene excellently adorned with morall vertues, and haue carried themſelues juſtly in all their wayes, ſo as no man could accuſe them of any notorious fault and groſſe crime of which our conſciences tell vs we are not innocent? And finally, how many of them broyle in theſe helliſh torments, who had they ſeene and heard that which we heare and ſee, euen the ſound and light of the Goſpell, ſounding and ſhining in their eares and eyes, would haue truly repented in ſack-cloth and aſhes, and haue brought forth better fruits of this their conuerſion than we, in their liues and conuerſations? If therefore we who by our more haynous ſins haue better deſerued theſe helliſh tortures and euerlaſting condemnation, are notwithſtanding through the mercies of God, and faith in Chriſt (for vnto beleeuers onely theſe comforts belong) deliuered and freed from them, whereas they periſh in their infidelity for their leſſer ſinnes, then ſurely haue wee great cauſe to beare not onely with patience, but alſo thankſgiuing, all the croſſes and afflictions which are incident vnto this life; ſeeing notwithſtanding our demerits, wee haue obtained ſo great a deliuerance, eſpecially if wee conſider that we receiue this mercy and ſpeciall fauour, of Gods meere grace, and free bountie & goodneſſe, hauing done nothing more to merit Gods loue, nor deſerue better reſpect by any thing which wee haue performed vnto him, than thoſe who are plunged into the deepeſt condemnation. And this the Lord himſelfe profeſſeth, that in beſtowing his benefits and with-holding his puniſhments, hee hath reſpect to his owne glory, name and couenant, and not to his peoples deſerts and merits. For my Name ſake (ſaith he) will I deferre my wrath, and for my prayſe I will refraine it from thee, that I cut thee not off. For mine owne ſake, for mine owne ſake will I doe it. And although in his juſtice he might (as he ſaith) deale with them as they had done, when they did deſpiſe his oath in breaking his couenant; neuertheleſſe, he promiſeth to remember his couenant, made with them in the dayes of their youth, and to confirme vnto them an euerlaſting couenant. So elſe-where he ſaith, Yee ſhall know that I am the Lord, when I haue reſpect vnto you for my Names ſake, and not after your wicked wayes, nor according to your corrupt works, O yee houſe of Iſrael. The which ſhould bee an effectuall argument to arme our patience, and a ſtrong motiue to ſtirre vs vp to prayſe and thankſgiuing in our greateſt afflictions. For as when two malefactours are alike guilty of the ſame crime, if the Iudge ſhould inflict vpon the one the full puniſhment which his fault deſerueth, and mitigate the rigour of his juſtice to the other, adjudging him to ſome light chaſtiſement in compariſon of thoſe exquiſite tortures, which his fellow ſuffered, and he alike deſerued; he who is thus fauoured and ſpared, would neuer murmure againſt ſo gracious a Iudge, nor beare his correction with impatiency and complayning, but rather would thinke himſelfe much obliged by ſo great a fauour, and be alwayes ready to acknowledge it, to his Iudges prayſe; ſo wee haue the like, yea, much greater cauſe of patience and thankfull acknowledgement of Gods infinite mercy and goodneſſe towards vs; in that being alike guilty with many others of innumerable and grieuous ſins, and conſequently obnoxious vnto equall puniſhments; the Lord inflicting vpon them thoſe torments and tortures which their ſins deſerued, doth of his meere grace & loue ſpare vs, inflicting vpon vs the ſhort and momentany afflictions of this preſent life, in ſtead of thoſe paines of Hell and euerlaſting condemnation, which our ſinnes deſerued as well as theirs.

Eſay 48.9,11.

*Ezech.*16.59.

*Chap.*20.44.

§. Sect. 14.
Their objection anſwered, who affirme that they are more grieuouſly afflicted, than others who haue more hainouſly offended.

But yet one objection may ſeeme to deſerue an anſwere, whereby ſome doe juſtifie their impatiency and complayning; namely, that howſoeuer they cannot deny, but that they haue deſerued far greater puniſhments than God hath inflicted on them; yet they are more grieuouſly afflicted than many other, who haue more haynouſly offended, and deſerued farre greater croſſes, by their far greater ſinnes. Of whom I would aske, how many likewiſe they might obſerue, whom in their owne conſciences they acknowledge to haue beene leſſe Sinners than themſelues, and yet haue beene ſubjected to farre more and greater croſſes. For are they as juſt as Iob, as holy as Dauid, as full of grace, & free from ſinne as the Apoſtles of Ieſus Chriſt; and yet how much did the afflictions of theſe holy men exceed theirs, if they were compared? But hee hath deſerued more puniſhment than thou, and yet ſuffereth leſſe: Yea, but doeſt thou ſuffer more than thou haſt deſerued? If not, then why is thine eye euill becauſe God is good? or if thou wouldſt haue a proportion equally obſerued, then what can priuiledge thee from the euerlaſting torments of the damned, ſeeing thou haſt no leſſe, yea, much more deſerued them, than many of thoſe who doe now ſuffer them. Againe, why doeſt thou judge another mans ſeruant, who ſtandeth or falleth to his owne maſter? It may be thou haſt more haynouſly ſinned, did not helliſh pride and partiall ſelfe-loue blind thine eyes, cauſing thee to put thine owne ſins in the hinder part of the wallet, and thy Neighbours in the former; and to looke vpon thine owne faults vnder the cloud and vaile of falſe excuſes, which will ſcarce ſuffer them to be diſcerned, or at leaſt not to appeare in their naturall greatnes and ſcarlet die; but vpon others offences through the ſpectacles of hatred, enuy or hard conceit, which maketh them ſeeme farre greater than they are. Yea, it may be alſo (though thou thinkeſt the contrary) that they are much more grieuouſly afflicted; ſeeing the heauieſt puniſhments are for the moſt part vnſeene; and that being wicked (as thou judgeſt them) they doe not eſcape a meaſure of puniſhment according to the proportion of their ſinne. For, for ought thou knoweſt they may be purſued with thoſe helliſh furies, the terrours and horrours of an euill conſcience, and daily tormented with the ſcorching flames of Gods fearefull wrath due to their haynous ſin. Or, though they be free from all theſe preſent euils, yet are they but like the Oxe fatted to the Shambles of deſtruction, and rocked in the cradle of worldly proſperity, that being brought into the deepe ſleepe of carnall ſecurity, they may more quietly be carried into Hell. And therefore let vs not judge before the time, but reſting aſſured that, howſoeuer it fareth with the wicked, it ſhall goe well with thoſe that feare the Lord, let vs beare with patience that portion of affliction which God hath allotted vs, knowing that it is moſt fitting for vs, if we be in this number, ſeeing our draught is meaſured out vnto vs by the hand of juſtice and direction of wiſdome, and qualified and mitigated when it exceedeth our ſtrength, by an infinite mercy and compaſſion; which wil not lay more vpon vs than wee are able to beare.

Chap. IX.

That our afflictions are not ſignes of Gods hatred, nor the puniſhments of a righteous Iudge, but the chaſtiſements of a gracious Father.

§. Sect.1. the for- conſola- are not fortable vs, nor in vs patience, wee be aſſured all our af- ions doe from fountaine Gods loue.

AND thus haue I ſhewed the firſt cauſe mouing the Lord to inflict vpon vs theſe croſſes and calamities, namely, our ſins which are the meritorious cauſe of all our afflictions; as alſo how we may arme our ſelues with patience by this conſideration, ſeeing our ſinne doth exceed our ſmart, and our puniſhments are farre leſſe than wee haue deſerued: Now we are to proceed to the other cauſe mouing the Lord thus to chaſtiſe & correct vs, which is out of our ſelues in him, namely, his infinite loue and boundleſſe mercy, which moueth him to apply theſe wholeſome, though ſharpe medicines, for the curing of our deſperate diſeaſes; and to vſe theſe profitable, though vnpleaſant meanes for the purging of our ſins, the enriching of vs with the vnualuable treaſures of his ſpirituall graces, and the furthering of our eternall happines. From whence ariſeth our chiefeſt conſolation in all our diſtreſſe and miſery, and not onely patience in troubles, but alſo contentedneſſe, thankfulneſſe, and joy in the Holy Ghoſt. It is true, that the former conſiderations, of Gods prouidence appointing, ruling and diſpoſing all our afflictions, and of his juſtice mixed and moderated with his loue and mercy, which layeth nothing vpon vs but what our ſins haue deſerued, yea, farre fewer and lighter puniſhments than we haue juſtly merited with our innumerable offences, and moſt haynous rebellion, may well perſwade vs to patience in our greateſt calamities; but yet if we ſtay heere and goe no further, our patience will be but vnpleaſant and forced hauing in it no comfort, ſweetneſſe or ſpirituall joy; for our fleſh being ſenſible of nothing but of preſent paine, and being hopeleſſe either of deliuerance, or of future profit by our ſufferings; will make vs eaſily to forget Gods moderation in puniſhing, and the haynouſneſſe of our ſins deſeruing far greater puniſhments; and neuer comparing our faults with the euils which we feele, but onely looking vpon the miſeries which wee indure, and our owne weakneſſe and inability to beare them any longer, will cauſe vs in all impatiency to murmure and repine againſt Gods prouidence, which hath inflicted on vs more heauy puniſhments than others ſuffer, who (as ſelfe-loue perſwadeth vs) haue more offended. Or if our conſciences tell vs that our ſins haue juſtly deſerued theſe and greater puniſhments; yet (howſoeuer this may juſtly cauſe vs to beare with more outward patience that which we haue deſerued) it will not much abate our inward griefe, or increaſe our comfort, vnleſſe wee bee aſſured that God meaſureth out vnto vs this proportion of affliction by the ſtandard of his loue, and will in the end conuert it to our good, bringing ſweetneſſe out of bitterneſſe, and joy out of mourning. Yea, rather the waight of ſin being added to the waight of our puniſhment; our euill of doing, concurring with our euill of ſuffering, and both joyned with ſelfe-guiltineſſe, and the apprehenſion of Gods inflamed wrath, will but the more oppreſſe vs with griefe; when as wee cannot ſo much as with any ſhew of reaſon eaſe our ſelues by expoſtulation, nor vent out any part of our ſorrow by juſt complayning, ſeeing wee are the onely cauſes of our owne harmes. And looke how much it addeth to our patience in reſpect of God, whom wee juſtifie in his righteous judgements; ſo much it increaſeth our impatiency in reſpect of our ſelues, who haue incenſed and inflamed ſo juſt a wrath, and ſo mercifull a juſtice to our ruine and deſtruction, and whileſt it emptieth our hearts of grudging and repining, and our mouthes of murmuring and exclayming againſt Gods wiſe prouidence, which ſelfe-guiltines cauſeth vs to juſtifie in all the euils which are inflicted on vs: it filleth them with fretting indignation, quarrelſome complaints, and impatient inuectiues both againſt our ſelues, who haue beene the chiefe cauſes; and alſo againſt all ſecondary and inferiour meanes, which the Lord hath vſed as his inſtruments for the execution of his judgements. Neither is it likely that wee ſhould ſtay here, but if we doe not labour to ſee Gods Fatherly affection euen in his frownes, and to diſcerne the beames of his loue and fauour through the cloud of our miſeries and afflictions, we will in ſhort time like malefactours fal out with juſtice it ſelfe, becauſe it maketh againſt vs, hate the vnpartiall vprightneſſe of our judge, as though it were the extreameſt cruelty, and flye from his ſight and preſence as though he were our greateſt enemy.

§. Sect.2. That the world judgeth of Gods loue and hatred towards men by their outward eſtate.

That therefore thoſe who are exerciſed in this irkeſome combat of afflictions may haue not onely quiet patience, but alſo ſweet comfort and contentment in all their croſſes and troubles, we will in the next place ſhew, that the cauſe mouing the Lord to afflict the faithfull is, not his wrath and diſpleaſure, much leſſe any malice or hatred which hee beareth them, but his meere mercy, loue and goodneſſe, which moueth him thus to chaſtize and correct them, that they may not run on in the pleaſing courſe of ſin, and ſo be condemned with the World. The which point and paſſage I hold the more neceſſary in this Diſcourſe, becauſe both the world and our owne fleſh are alwayes ready to judge of Gods loue and fauour, and of his hatred and diſpleaſure, by the outward eſtate; and therefore as they thinke thoſe moſt bleſſed and happy, vpon whom God multiplyeth, and (as it were) ſhowreth, his earthly benefits; ſo they judge them moſt miſerable and forlorne, who are in aduerſity and affliction, as being men rejected and forſaken of God, becauſe (whatſoeuer ſhew they haue made in the world to the contrary) they haue more grieuouſly offended him by their ſins than any other. An example whereof wee haue in the Iewes, who judged thoſe vpon whom the tower of Siloam fell greater ſinners than other men, becauſe they were oppreſſed with this heauy judgement; and in the Barbarians, who condemned Paul as a murtherer, or ſome notorious ſinner, becauſe they ſaw him indangered by a Viper; and contrariwiſe magnified him as a God, becauſe hee had eſcaped this bodily harme. Yea, ſo faſt doth this corruption cleaue vnto vs, that as long as we carry this fleſh about vs, wee are ſubject to be ouertaken by this falſe and deceiuing judgement, though wee bee in ſome meaſure inlightened and ſanctified by the Spirit of God. As we may ſee in the example of Iobs friends, who being otherwiſe wiſe, religious and worthy men, yet when they ſaw the greatnes of his afflictions, they paſſed vpon him a moſt vncharitable cenſure; and when they could not with any probability judge him a prophane and notorious ſinner, becauſe his life had beene vnblameable and vnſpotted, they condemned him for a cunning and ſecret Hypocrite, who had made ſhew of thoſe vertues which were not in him; yea, euen holy Dauid himſelfe was much ſhaken with this tentation; for as himſelfe confeſſeth his feet ſlipped, and were almoſt gone out of the path of godlines & integrity, when on the one ſide he ſaw the proſperity of the wicked, & on the other the afflictions vnto which himſelf, & other of the faithfull were daily ſubject; yea, ſo was the eye of holy reaſon dazeled, and the light of the Scriptures clouded and (as it were) ecclypſed from him, with the interpoſition of worldly and carnall tentations, that following onely the judgement of ſenſe, hee acknowledgeth that hee was become fooliſh and ignorant like a beaſt, judging of all things by the outward ſhew; vntill hauing recourſe vnto the Sanctuary, the light of Gods Word againe appeared and diſpelled thoſe miſts and fogs of earthly and carnall errours which before blinded him. And howſoeuer being inlightned with Gods Word and aſſiſted with his holy ſpirit, he ſtill got the victory ouer this tentation, yet how often regaining ſtrength by new afflictions doth it returne vpon him, and encounter him afreſh as though it had beene neuer foyled. For if we look into the Booke of the Pſalmes we ſhall find, that being exerciſed with afflictions he complayneth, that God hid his eies, and would not ſee his miſeries, and ſtopt his eares and would not heare his prayers, that hee was corrected in Gods wrath and anger, and that his jealouſie did burne againſt him like fire: and finally that God had forgotten and forſaken him, that his fauour was cleane gone, that hee would be no more intreated, and that hee had ſhut vp his tender mercies in diſpleaſure. Thus alſo Ieremy was ſo farre tranſported with the violence of this tentation grounded vpon the proſperity of the wicked, and afflictions of the faithfull, that though hee durſt not diſpute with God becauſe he knew him juſt & righteous in all his wayes, yet he dareth to offer a parley and conference about the adminiſtration of his judgements. And the Diſciples themſelues though they were inured to afflictions, yet when they ſaw an heauier judgement than ordinary inflicted vpon the blind man, were ready to judge that it was either for his owne ſins or the ſins of his parents. Yea, this is not the errour of ſome few men alone, but euen of the whole Church in her afflictions; for euen Sion ſaid the Lord hath forſaken me; and my Lord hath forgotten me.

Luke 13.1,2.
Acts 28.4.

Iob 11.6.

*Pſal.*73.2.17,22

*Pſal.*13.1. and 22.1. and 79.5. and 77.7,8,9.

*Ier.*12.1.

Iohn 9.2,3.

Eſay 49.14.

§. Sect. 3
That the fo mer conceit the ground o a most dan rous tentat on.

And therefore ſeeing this tentation is ſo ſtrong and dangerous, it behoueth vs, to arme our ſelues againſt it, leſt in the time of triall we likewiſe be ſurprized and ouercome, and that the rather, becauſe it maketh way for another tentation much more pernicious then it ſelfe, namely, for hopeleſſe deſpaire, and helliſh prophaneneſſe which attends vpon it, for euen Dauid himſelfe being preſſed and pinched with the waight of his afflictions, was ready to conclude that hee had cleanſed his heart and waſhed his hands in innocency in vaine, becauſe whileſt the wicked flouriſhed, hee was daily puniſhed and chaſtened euery morning. But the violence of this tentation more plainly appeareth when thoſe are tryed with it, who being wholy carnall haue no grace to make reſiſtancee, for the fleſh being preſſed with the burthen of the Croſſe, is ready to conceiue, that the afflictions which it beareth are the ſignes of Gods wrath, and implacable anger, and that there is now no hope of receiuing any good by ſeruing of God, being ſo much diſpleaſed, nor of freedome from theſe euils, though there ſhould be a ſurceaſing from the courſe of ſinning; and therefore in this deſperate caſe being tempted by the Deuill or the World, to leaue the ſeruice of God, wherein there is no profit, and to runne on in a headlong courſe of ſinne, wherein for the preſent there is pleaſure and delight, it doth with all readineſſe giue way vnto this tentation. An example whereof we haue in the ſtiff-necked Iewes, who becauſe for their outward and formall ſeruice of God, they had not for their reward that worldly proſperity which

*Pſal.*73.13.

they expected, but rather were exerciſed with troubles and afflictions, they burſt out into theſe deſperate ſpeeches; It is in vaine to ſerue God; and what profit is it that wee keepe his commandements, & that we walke humbly before the Lord of hoasts? therfore we count the proud bleſſed. Euen they that worke wickedneſſe are ſet vp, yea and they that tempt God are deliuered. So elſe where, when the Lord by the ſummons of afflictions did call them to weeping and mourning, to baldneſſe and girding with ſackcloth, they ſpent their time in ioy and gladneſſe, in feaſting and drinking, reſoluing to take their pleaſure whileſt they might haue it, becauſe on the morrow they ſhould dye. And in another place they profeſſe that they thought it bootleſſe to repent, becauſe being puniſhed in Gods wrath for their ſinnes, they had no hope of mercy and deliuerance, though they ſhould forſake their wicked wayes; If (ſay they) our tranſgreſſions and our ſinnes be vpon vs, and wee are conſumed becauſe of them, how ſhall we then liue? And therefore being at this deſperate point, the Lord is faine to admoniſh them by his Prophet, that he thus corrected them in his loue and mercie for their conuerſion, and not in wrath and anger for their deſtruction: Say vnto them (ſaith the Lord God) as I liue, I deſire not the death of the wicked, but that the wicked turne from his way and liue. Turne you, turne you, from your euill wayes, for why will yee dye O yee houſe of Iſrael?

3.14.15.

22.14.

33.10.

§. Sect.4.

That therefore theſe and ſuch like tentations may not foile our faith, and cauſe vs to make ſhipwracke in the tempeſtuous ſtorme of troubles and afflictions; let vs firſt generally know, that as worldly proſperitie is no certaine ſigne of Gods fauour; nor of his ſinceritie, piety and righteouſneſſe who hath it, (the which I haue in the former part of this treatiſe plainly proued) ſo contrariwiſe worldly aduerſity, croſſes and calamities, are no infallable tokens of Gods diſpleaſure; nor of his impiety and wickedneſſe who is toſſed and turmoyled with them. For theſe things fall out alike to all, and as the Lord doth in mercy and goodneſſe giue theſe temporall benefits vnto his Children, whoſe godlineſſe hath the promiſes of this life and the life to come; ſo doth hee giue them oftentimes to the wicked and reprobate as their portion in this life, and that in his wrath and heauie diſpleaſure, onely to encreaſe the bills of their account and fearefull reckoning at the day of iudgement, and to aggrauate the dreadfull waight of their condemnation. And ſo in like manner as hee doth ſometimes lay theſe temporary croſſes and calamities vpon his owne Children and faithfull Seruants, for their triall or chaſtiſement, that hereby hee may further and encreaſe their eternall happineſſe; ſo doth hee ſometimes inflict them vpon carnall worldlings and deſperate ſinners, that hee may begin their hell in this life, and whileſt they remaine on Earth, may enter them into the poſſeſſion of thoſe neuer ending torments of Hell Fire. To this truth the wiſe man giueth a plaine teſtimonie, where ſpeaking of theſe earthly benefits and croſſes, he ſaith that no man knoweth either loue or hatred by all that is before them. All things come alike to all; and the ſame condition is to the iuſt and to the wicked, to the good and to the pure, and to the polluted: and to him that ſacrificeth, and to him that ſacrificeth not; as is the good, ſo is the ſinner; hee that ſweareth, and hee that feareth an oath. This is an euill among all that is done vnder the Sunne, that there is one condition to all, &c. So our Sauiour Chriſt ſheweth in the parable of Diues and Lazarus, that neither worldly proſperitie is a ſigne of Gods loue, nor aduerſitie of his hatred, and correcteth this peruerſe iudgement, both in his diſciples cenſuring the blinde man, or his parents as enormous ſinners, becauſe of this puniſhment which God inflicted on him; and in the Iewes, who thought, that the eighteene vpon whom the tower of Siloam fell, and the Galileans, whoſe blood Pilate mingled with their ſacrifices, were greater ſinners than other men, becauſe they were ouertaken by theſe great and ſuddaine iudgements; ſhewing that the former croſſe was inflicted, not for the ſin of the party or his parents, but that the workes of God might bee manifeſt in him; and that the other were not thus puniſhed becauſe they were greater ſinners than other men, but that they might bee examples vnto others, of Gods anger againſt ſinne, that they might bring thē to repentance. But I ſhal not need to illuſtrate this truth by examples, ſeeing they are ſo ordinary in the Scriptures, that a man ſhall not lightly read any page in the hiſtory of the Bible, where hee ſhall not find both afflictions and temporall benefits (as it were) in common caſt out to the good and bad, ſometimes the one, and ſometimes the other flouriſhing in proſperitie, or deiected and caſt downe into miſerie and aduerſitie.

Eccleſ.9.1.2.

Luk.16.

Ioh.9.2.3.

Luk.13.3.

§. Sect.5. In what ſenſe God is ſaid to be angry with the faithfull, and to puniſh their ſinnes.

But though this which I haue ſaid generally, may iuſtly take away all ſecure preſumption from carnall worldlings, whereby they perſwade themſelues of Gods loue, becauſe they flouriſh in outward proſperity, and alſo all cauſe of horrour and deſperation from them who are in miſery and affliction, becauſe there is no certaine iudgement by this externall eſtate, all things falling out alike to all: yet ſeeing no man out of this generality can gather vnto himſelfe any ſound comfort, ſeeing hee may bee as well one of them whom God puniſheth in his anger and wrath, as of them whom hee correcteth in loue and mercie: therefore in the next place I will more ſpecially ſhew, that euery faithfull man, who feareth God, both in his mercies and iudgements, and deſireth to profit by his chaſtiſements and corrections, may to his comfort bee moſt certainely aſſured, that the afflictions which hee ſuffereth are not the fruites and effects of Gods wrath and hatred towards him, but of his fatherly loue and goodneſſe; not the deſerued puniſhments of his ſinnes, but gentle chaſtiſements and profitable trials, which ſhall tend to the aduancing of Gods glory, in the further enriching him with his ſpirituall graces in this life, and in the euerlaſting ſaluation of his body and ſoule in the life to come. For the clearing of the former point, namely that the afflictions of the faithfull are not the fruits of Gods anger, nor impoſed vpon them as puniſhments for their ſinnes, wee are to know that theſe words, wrath, anger and puniſhment, are either taken largely, or ſtrictly and properly. In a large ſignification God is ſaid to bee angry with his Seruants and Children, when hee doth afflict them, but not as a ſeuere Iudge out of the rigour of juſtice to puniſh the perſon for the ſinnes ſake, but as a gracious Father out of meere loue that hee may deſtroy ſinne for the perſons ſake; neither hath hee any quarrell to the party, but onely to the ſinne; and therefore in loue to his Childe, and in hatred to his faultineſſe, hee doth by affliction mortifie the ſinne which he abhorreth, that by the death therof he may preſerue his Son whom hee loueth vnto euerlaſting life and happineſſe. And ſo hee may bee ſaid to bee angry, not with the perſon for his hatred to the ſinne, but with the ſinne, for the loue of the perſon. Hee is not angry with his Children in truth, becauſe hee alwayes looketh vpon them in his Sonne Chriſt in whom hee is well pleaſed, nor correcteth them in wrath after they are in Chriſt reconciled vnto him, ſeeing the cauſe of reconciliation for euer remaineth, euen the merit of Chriſts death and blood-ſhed, whereby his juſtice is ſatisfied, and his wrath appeaſed; but onely in ſemblance and ſhew, hee (like a wiſe Father) frowneth vpon them, that they may bee more watchfull ouer their wayes for the time to come, and not runne on in ſuch a courſe of ſinne as would juſtly deſerue his wrath and diſpleaſure. Hee is not angry in juſtice, becauſe we haue ſinned, but in mercy, that wee may ſinne no more; nor in his owne affection and diſpoſition, but in our feeling and apprehenſion, becauſe our guilty conſciences tell vs what wee haue deſerued; and becauſe the corrupt humours of ſinne adhere and cleaue ſo faſt vnto vs, that our ſpirituall Phyſitian is faine to giue vs theſe bitter potions of afflictions to purge them away, which for the preſent making vs ſicke, in our ſenſe doth cauſe vs to conceiue & complaine of him as an enemie who hateth and hurteth vs, if wee looke to our preſent feeling, and not to his end, which is our ſpirituall cure and the recouery of our health. The like alſo may bee ſaid of puniſhment, for if wee take it in a large ſignification, it comprehendeth both the afflictions of the godly and the torments of the wicked: firſt becauſe if wee reſpect the matter of them, and the euils themſelues which are ſuffered both by the faithfull and the wicked, they are all one. Secondly, becauſe in the law they are threatned as puniſhments of ſinne againſt euery one who offendeth. And thirdly, becauſe in the ſenſe and feeling of the outward man, they are both alike; euen as there is no difference betweene the ſmart of the ſtripes felt by a ſlaue and by a Sonne, ſauing that theſe are ſome time inflicted by a more light and gentle hand. But if wee take it in a ſtrict and proper ſenſe, then is puniſhment ſo appropriated and peculiar to the wicked, that it is no way incident to the faithfull and righteous. For puniſhment is inflicted vpon enemies, and not vpon friends; by a juſt Iudge and not by a gracious Father; to ſatisfie juſtice by ſuffering that puniſhment which the fault hath deſerued, though it bee to the vtter deſtruction of the party offending; and not out of loue to preſerue him from greater harme by reclaiming him from his faultines; becauſe hee hath offended already, and not that hee may take heede of offending for the time to come. Finally the cauſe of puniſhment is the fault of the party, and not deſire of his amendment; and the end of the puniſher is to reuenge and hurt the malefactor for the good of others, to whom he ſerueth for an example of juſtice; and not to ſeeke his profit and benefit by reclaiming him from his fault; for juſtice in puniſhing will haue its courſe for ſinne already committed, though the offender could giue aſſurance of his amendment for the time to come.

§. Sect. 6. The firſt reaſon to proue that the afflictions of the faithfull are not puniſhments but fatherly chaſtiſements. 1.Pet.2.24. Eſa.53.5.6.

But that the afflictions of the faithfull are not the fruits of Gods anger, nor puniſhments for their ſinnes, it may further appeare by theſe reaſons; firſt becauſe Chriſt our Sauiour bore all our ſinnes in his body vpon the tree, as the Apoſtle Peter ſpeaketh, and ſuffered the puniſhment which was due vnto them, that wee might be freed from it, according to that of the Prophet: Surely hee hath borne our infirmities, and carried our ſorrowes, &c. Hee was wounded for our tranſgreſſions, hee was broken for our iniquities, the chaſtiſement of our peace was vpon him, and with his ſtripes we are healed. But I demand to what purpoſe did hee beare our infirmities and ſorrowes, if we muſt ſtill beare them? to what end was he wounded and broken for our ſinnes, if they ſtill wound and breake vs? or finally how haue we peace by his ſufferings, or how are we healed with his ſtripes, if we are ſtill at warre with Gods iuſtice, and ſtill receiue ſtripes and wounds in this conflict? Againe had not Chriſt freed vs from all the puniſhment due vnto our ſinnes, hee were not a perfect Sauiour, nor did not offer vnto his Father a full and all-ſufficient price for our redemption; for if he did perfectly deliuer vs from all enemies, then from leſſer ſins as well as from greater; if hee did perfectly ſaue vs, then from temporall puniſhments, as well as from eternall; if his ſacrifice were all-ſufficient for the ſins of the whole world, then need wee not (as the Papiſts affirme) to haue the ſacrifice of our owne ſufferings ſtill offered to make ſatisfaction for our veniall ſinnes. But the Scriptures euery where, and eſpecially in the epiſtle to the Hebrewes, teach vs, that Chriſt is a perfect Sauiour that hee hath deliuered vs from all our enemies, and hath offered vnto his Father an all-ſufficient ſacrifice, and full price for our redemption; and therefore there remaineth vnto the faithfull, who apply Chriſt and his ſufferings vnto themſelues, no more puniſhments, nor ſatisfaction thereby to bee made vnto God: for Chriſt hath fully ſatisfied for vs by his all-ſufficient ſacrifice of himſelfe, and the precious bloud of Ieſus Chriſt hath cleanſed vs from all our ſins, as the Apoſtle teacheth vs. Now if it haue cleanſed vs from all ſinne, then alſo from veniall ſinnes (as the Papiſts terme them) and conſequently from all puniſhment; for where there is no guilt, there puniſhment hath no place, and if we be freed from tranſgreſſion of the Law then alſo from the curſe. It is true indeed that the afflictions which the faithfull ſuffer, are in their owne nature the puniſhments of ſinne, and as puniſhments are denounced againſt the tranſgreſſours of the Law; but Chriſt by his ſufferings hath changed their nature, and as by reconciling vs vnto God, he hath made him of a ſeuere judge, a mercifull Father, ſo he hath made our ſufferings to become the chaſtiſements of a gracious Father inflicted for our good, and not the puniſhments of a righteous judge impoſed for the ſatisfying of his juſtice, and the deſtruction or hurt of him who ſuffereth them, neither is it materiall, that in matter the ſufferings of the faithfull and wicked bee the ſame, that is, the ſame ſickneſſe, pouerty, impriſonment and the like; for euen the Sonne and the ſlaue doe often ſuffer the ſame ſtripes, but yet theſe are puniſhments, being inflicted by the hand of an angry Maſter, for the fault committed; thoſe, the chaſtiſements of a louing Father correcting his Childe for his good and amendment. And ſo though the afflictions of the faithfull and the puniſhments of the wicked are of the ſame nature in reſpect of themſelues, yet their nature being changed by the ſufferings of Chriſt, they doe now much differ both in reſpect of their agent, and their end, the one comming from a Father; the other from a judge, they to profit and doe good, and theſe to hurt and bring to deſtruction. And though theſe waters of Meribah bee all alike bitter to the Canaanitiſh ſinner, and the true Iſraelite in whom there is no guile, in reſpect of their naturall taſt, yet the wood of Chriſts croſſe doth make theſe bitter waters ſweete; and purifying them from the coliquintida and gall of ſinne, doth make them wholeſome drinke and profitable potions, which will quench our thirſting after the pleaſures of ſinne, and the poyſonous cups of worldly vanities.

§. Sect. 7.
The ſecond reaſon taken from the full payment of our debt by Chriſt our ſurety.

Secondly, Chriſt taking vpon him to bee our ſurety hath paid our debt to the vttermoſt farthing, fully ſatisfied Gods juſtice, and appeaſed his wrath towards vs by taking away our ſinnes which were the cauſe thereof. For ſtanding in our ſtead and taking vpon him to diſcharge our debt, hee was arreſted by death at the ſuit of Gods juſtice, and caſt into the priſon of the graue, till hee had diſcharged our debt to the vttermoſt farthing, but now he hath broken the bands of death, and being deliuered out of this priſon is riſen againe; and gloriouſly aſcended; whereby hee hath certainely aſſured vs that hee hath ſatisfied Gods juſtice by full paiment of our debt, and therefore hath left nothing vpon the ſcore for vs to ſatisfie; yea hee hath cancelled the hand-writing of ordinances and the obligation of the Law by nailing them to his croſſe, and hath taken away the penalty of the curſe, by bearing it himſelfe. And therefore ſeeing Chriſt hath fully ſatisfied by his ſufferings the juſtice of God; hee will not require a new ſatisfaction by our ſufferings and puniſhments; ſeeing hee hath fully diſcharged our debt to the vtmoſt farthing, he will not vnjuſtly require from vs a ſecond paiment or though it could bee imagined, (as bee it farre from vs that wee ſhould ſo imagine) that the Iudge of Heauen and Earth could vſe this rigorous ſtrictneſſe; yet hee hath nothing to ſhew if he ſhould commence ſuite againſt vs, ſeeing our ſurety vpon the diſcharge of our debt, hath cancelled all the writings whereby wee were obliged to his juſtice, either to make payment or to ſuffer puniſhment. Neither is that of any force which is objected by our aduerſaries; namely, that hee ſuffered to ſatisfie Gods juſtice for our greater ſinnes, and ſo hath freed vs from eternall puniſhments; but hath left our veniall ſinnes to bee ſatisfied for by our ſelues, from the which wee are freed, whileſt wee ſatisfie Gods juſtice by our temporarie puniſhments: For the word of God hath taught vs, that hee is a perfect Sauiour, that in him wee haue full redemption, and that his blood purgeth vs from all our ſinnes, without any exception or limitation. Againe, as the ſatisfaction which Chriſt made for vs was all-ſufficient, and the price which hee offered for our redemption of infinite merite and value; ſo both the juſtice and mercy of God, whereby hee accepted them for full payment, are alſo infinite. Whereas, if (as our aduerſaries affirme) we are to ſatisfie by our temporary puniſhments for our veniall ſinnes, then muſt it needs follow, that either Chriſts ſatisfaction was imperfect, and his ſufferings ſo inſufficient, that they needed to bee patched vp with our puniſhments; or that being perfect and all-ſufficient, God ſhould be, not onely vnmercifull but injuſt alſo, in not accepting of this full diſcharge, but requiring payment of a debt by vs, which our ſurety hath already diſcharged: either of which were blaſphemous to ſpeake or thinke. For he that ſuffered for vs was not man onely, but God alſo, and therefore needs muſt his ſufferings bee all-ſufficient and of infinite value and merit; and the mercies of God being infinite, and farre aboue all his workes, doe make him ſo farre off from puniſhing, where his juſtice being ſatisfied, willeth him to ſpare, that when hee doth afflict his Church and people for their ſinnes, hee is ſaid to doe his ſtrange worke, vnto which out of his owne nature hee is auerſe and indiſpoſed; to haue his ſoule grieued for the miſery of Iſraell; and to make ſtay of the execution of theſe judgements, till by reaſon of the multitude of their ſinnes joyned with impenitencie, there be no remedie. But as in theſe reſpects this aſſertion ſauoureth of impietie; ſo alſo of extreame follie, vnleſſe they will with like impietie ſhift it off themſelues by imputing it vnto their Creatour: For who can imagine that God infinite in wiſedome and bountie ſhould frankly, for the merites of his Son, forgiue our enormous and grieuous ſinnes, and puniſh vs for theſe which are ſmall and veniall? that his loue ſhould enlarge it ſelfe to the remitting and releaſing vs from the euerlaſting torments of Hell fire; and bee ſtraightned in forgiuing vs thoſe ſins which are ſmall, and (as they call them) veniall: as if a King ſhould out of his great liberality forgiue his poore and miſerable ſubject tenne thouſand talents; and afterwards miſerably exact a baſe reckoning of ſome few pence; or as though a Iudge ſhould pardon a malefactour for his horrible treaſons or cruell murthers, and ſhould puniſh him for ſome pettie theft. But it is further objected, that the iniquity of Ieruſalem is pardoned, becauſe ſhe had receiued double of the Lords hands for all her ſins. Vnto which I anſwere that this is not the ſpeech of a Iudge puniſhing malefactours for their ſinnes, and ſu[r]ceaſing from puniſhment after that his juſtice is ſatisfied; but of a moſt gracious and compaſſionate Father, who hauing ſeuerely corrected the faults of his Sonne for his amendement, earneth in his bowels of loue and tender mercie, when hee knoweth his ſmart and paine, and ſeeth him humbling himſelfe before him by true repentance. For that it cannot with any probability of truth be vnderſtood of the ſatisfying Gods juſtice by their ſuffering of puniſhment, it hereby appeareth in that hee ſaith, that they had ſuffered double for their ſinnes; the which muſt needs haue relation to the compaſſion of a tender Father, the greatneſſe of whoſe loue moueth him to thinke that a few ſtripes inflicted on his humbled Childe, are enough and too much for his great faults; and not to the juſtice of a Iudge, proportionating his puniſhment according to the demerit of the offence; ſeeing the leaſt of our ſinnes being committed againſt the infinite Majeſtie of God, deſerue the euerlaſting torments of Hell fire, and therefore cannot bee truely ſaid to bee puniſhed double, though all the plagues of this life were inflicted vpon vs. Beſides, if we ſhould vnderſtand theſe words of puniſhments inflicted to ſatisfie for ſinnes, how will it ſtand with Gods juſtice, and much leſſe with his mercie and goodneſſe, to inflict vpon his Seruants twice as much puniſhment as their faults haue deſerued?

Col. 2.14.
Gal. 3.13.

Act.20.28.

Eſa.28.21.

Iud.10.16.

1.Chro.36.16.

Eſa.40.2.

§.Sect.8 The conclu ſion of the former rea ſons.

And thus it appeareth that the afflictions of the faithfull are not puniſhments for their ſinnes to ſatisfie the juſtice of God, ſeeing our Sauiour hath borne all the puniſhments due vnto our ſinnes, fully ſatisfied Gods juſtice and diſcharged our debt, by offering himſelfe vnto his Father, as a ſacrifice for ſinne, and by paying a price of infinite value and merit for our redemption. And therefore, wee are not puniſhed as ſlaues, but chaſtiſed as Sonnes, not ſo much becauſe we haue offended our heauenly Father, as becauſe wee ſhould, being in awe and vnder diſcipline, offend no more. For if an earthly Parent doth not correct his Sonne, to take reuenge for the fault committed, but to keepe him from running into the like fault for the time to come; and taking no pleaſure, but rather griefe and compaſſion in his ſmart and torment, would willingly pardon his fault and remit his puniſhment, if he were fully aſſured, that he would offend no more, vnleſſe it be in regard of the reſt of his Children, whom hee would not haue encouraged to commit the like fault through this conniuencie and impunity; then how much leſſe will the Lord who is loue, mercy, and goodneſſe it ſelfe, puniſh his Sonnes to ſatisfie his juſtice in taking reuenge by their paine and torture? eſpecially conſidering that his juſtice is ſatisfied, and their faults pardoned

iendo pa-& non ſuſri ex-& culpam & pa-Auguſt.
erb. dom.
37. Tom.

Dei carpeccati ſuſ-& pœnam , et in peccati, ſoluepœnæ.
de bap-paruul.
cap. 31.

pardoned by the ſufferings and obedience of Ieſus Chriſt. For ſo one ſaith, that Chriſt by taking vpon him our puniſhment, and not being guilty of our faults, hath quite done away both fault and puniſhment. And againe, the Sonne of God hath taken vpon him the fleſh of ſinners, and the puniſhment without the fault, that in the fleſh of ſinners both the fault and puniſhment ſhould bee diſcharged and remitted. And therefore our afflictions are no puniſhments for ſinne paſt, but are inflicted by our heauenly Father to preuent ſinne for the time to come, either in vs, after we haue felt the ſmart of it, or in other of our Brethren, who ſeeing ſin corrected in vs, are warned to take heed of it by our example.

Sect. 9.
third rea-from free for-of ſinnes.

The third argument, to proue that the afflictions of the faithfull are onely chaſtiſements of a Father, and not puniſhments of a Iudge may be this; where there is no ſinne, there is no place for puniſhment; but in the faithfull there is no ſinne, becauſe it is not imputed vnto them, for firſt all their ſinne is waſhed and purged away by the blood of Chriſt; and they being iuſtified for his righteouſneſſe and obedience are accepted as righteous in Gods ſight. So the Apoſtle Paul ſaith, that wee haue redemption through his blood, that is, the forgiueneſſe of ſinnes; and againe, yee which were dead in ſinnes, and in the vncircumciſion of your fleſh, hath hee quickned together with him, forgiuing you all your treſpaſſes. To the ſame purpoſe the Apoſtle Iohn ſaith, that, hee hath waſhed vs from our ſinnes in his blood: and elſe where, that the blood of Chriſt cleanſeth vs from all ſinne. In which reſpect hee is called by Iohn the Baptiſt, the Lambe of God which taketh away the ſinne of the World. Secondly, all the faithfull are in the couenant of grace, this being the onely condition which God requireth, that wee doe beleeue; but it is one ſpeciall branch of this couenant, that God will forgiue their iniquity, and will remember their ſinnes no more: and therefore if God ſo remit the ſinnes of the faithfull, that he will not ſo much as remember them, how farre is he from puniſhing them when they are thus forgiuen? So when the Lord would expreſſe this couenant of grace by the ſimilitude of mariage, he promiſeth to marry the faithfull vnto himſelfe in righteouſneſſe and iudgement; and becauſe on the one ſide, it was vnfit to beate and puniſh his ſpouſe, becauſe of this neere vnion betweene them; and becauſe on the other ſide, ſhee was ſo full of faults and infirmities, that by her ſins ſhee would deſerue to bee puniſhed, therefore he addeth, that hee will marry her alſo in mercy and in compaſſion, whereby in and for his Sonne Ieſus Chriſt, he would remit and pardon her ſinnes, and not inflict theſe iudgements and puniſhments, though ſhee did deſerue them. Finally, the places of Scripture where the Lord promiſeth forgiueneſſe of ſinnes, doe plainely euince that God doth ſo pardon them, that hee doth neuer call them into iudgement, neither in this world to puniſh them with temporall puniſhments, nor with euerlaſting condemnation in the world to come. So he promiſeth the Iewes, that if they would turne from their ſinnes by true repentance, though they were as crimſon, they ſhould bee made white as ſnow; though they were red like ſcarlet, they ſhould be made like vnto wooll. So the Lord ſaith by the Prophet Ieremie that he would ſo pardon the iniquities of his people, that though one ſhould diligently ſeeke them, yet he ſhould by no meanes find them. In thoſe dayes, and at that time (ſaith the Lord) the iniquities of Iſrael ſhall bee ſought for, and there ſhall be none; and the ſinnes of Iudah, and they ſhall not bee found; for I will bee mercifull vnto them whom I reſerue. Now how can they bee thus cleane purged and waſhed, if ſome part of the puniſhment doth ſtill remaine? Or how are they not to be found, if hee who committeth them bee puniſhed for them? Againe, the Lord ſaith by the Prophet Eſay, that hee would put away the tranſgreſſions of his people like a cloude, and their ſinnes like a miſt: and by Micah; that he would caſt all their ſinnes into the bottome of the Sea. And Dauid, to ſignifie the forgiueneſſe of ſinne, vſeth the phraſe of couering, and not imputing them; but if the Lord looketh vpon our ſinnes to puniſh them, how can he bee ſaid to put them away as a cloud? If in this life he bring them into iudgement, how doth hee caſt them into the bottome of the Sea? And if by puniſhing hee bring them to an account, how can hee bee ſaid to couer, or not impute them? Finally the contrary phraſes vſed in the Scriptures being truly expounded, may ſerue as a comment to ſhew what theſe meane, for if to ſeale vp iniquity in a bagge, to write and regiſter vp the ſinne of the people with a pen of iron, and the point of a diamond, to bind vp iniquity, and to keepe it in ſtore, doe ſignifie that God will bring them to iudgement, by puniſhing them in the wicked, and correcting them in the faithfull, then contrariwiſe not to remember ſin, to waſh it away, to hide it out of ſight, and caſt it into the bottome of the Sea, muſt needs ſignifie, that God will neuer lay it to the charge of the faithfull, nor inflict any of that puniſhment on them which they haue deſerued.

Eſa. 1. 18.
Ier. 50. 18.
Eſa. 44. 22.
Mica. 7. 19.
Pſal. 32. 1.
Iob. 14. 17.
Ier. 17. 1.
Hoſ. 13. 12.

§. Sect. 10.
The fourth reaſon is, becauſe our afflictions tend to the aduancing of our good.

The fourth argument, which proueth that the afflictions of the faithfull are not puniſhments, is becauſe they doe tend to our good, euen to the mortifying of our ſins, the multiplying and encreaſing of Gods ſpirituall graces in vs, and the furthering of our

Rom.8.28, 28.
1.Cor.11.32.
Heb,12.10.11.
2.Cor.4.17.
Pſal.119.71.
Lam.3.27.

our euerlaſting happines. And this argument the Apoſtle purpoſely vſeth to comfort thoſe who are vnder the croſſe, not only becauſe our preſent afflictions ſhall be ouerwaighed with an incomparable waight of future glory, but alſo becauſe all things whatſoeuer, and they among the reſt, worke together for the beſt vnto them that loue God. So elſewhere he telleth vs, that when wee are thus iudged wee are chaſtened of the Lord becauſe we ſhould not bee condemned with the world; that he chaſteneth vs for our profit, that wee might bee partakers of his holineſſe; that though for the preſent it bee grieuous to the ſenſe, yet it bringeth the quiet fruit of righteouſneſſe vnto them which are thereby exerciſed, and that theſe ſhort and light afflictions ſhall cauſe vnto vs a farre moſt excellent and an eternall waight of glory. And this good and ſingular profit which commeth to the faithfull by their afflictions the Prophet Dauid out of experience confeſſed that hee had receiued; It is good (ſaith hee) for mee that I haue beene afflicted, that I may learne thy ſtatutes; and the Church in the lamentations affirmeth, that it is good for a man that hee beare the yoake in his youth. By all which it plainely appeareth that theſe afflictions are not puniſhments vnto the faithful, ſeeing they are inflicted for the hurt, and not for the good of the party, to ſatisfie iuſtice, and not out of any loue, to take vpon them due reuenge for the euill they haue committed, though it be to their vtter deſtruction, and not to confer and deriue vnto them any temporall benefit, and much leſſe that maine benefit of their euerlaſting joy and happineſſe.

§. Sect. 11.
The fifth reaſon is, becauſe our afflictions are a meanes of eternall bleſſedneſſe.

Pſal.94.12.13.
Pſalm.23.4.
Pſalm.16,11.
Pſalm.119.67.

Laſtly that cannot be a puniſhment which is either a cauſe or meanes of eternall bleſſedneſſe; but by the teſtimony of the holy Ghoſt they are pronounced bleſſed who are thus afflicted and corrected, the Lord vſing it as a meanes to keepe them in his feare, and to inſtruct them in the way of his commandements, which leadeth vnto this euerlaſting bleſſedneſſe and happineſſe in his Kingdome, according to that of the Pſalmiſt; Bleſſed is the man whom thou chaſtiſeſt O Lord, and teacheſt him in thy Law: that thou maieſt giue him reſt from the dayes of euill, whileſt the pit is digged for the wicked. And heereof it is, that he receiued comfort; not onely from Gods ſtaffe ſupporting and defending him, but alſo from his rod correcting and chaſtiſing him, becauſe it was a meanes to containe him in the way of righteouſneſſe, which is the path of life, bringing vs into Gods preſence, where is fulneſſe of ioy and pleaſures for euermore; and to reduce and bring him back into this way when through frailty and infirmity hee erred and digreſſed out of it, as hee alſo confeſſeth in another place, before I was afflicted (ſaith he) I went aſtray, but now I keepe thy word. But what bleſſedneſſe, or what comfort and conſolation could there be in afflictions, if they were puniſhments, ſeeing they are fruits of the curſe, and tend not to aduance the happineſſe of the party puniſhed, but to his hurt and ruine? neither are they the cauſes or ſignes of bleſſedneſſe, but the forerunners of his euerlaſting deſtruction; ſeeing God by them, euen in this life, doth begin to ſhew his anger, and to ſatisfie his iuſtice by inflicting on him thoſe tortures and torments which his ſinnes haue deſerued.

§. Sect.
Their obie anſwered w affirme th Dauids aff ons were pu niſhments his ſinnes.
Arminius
ad 31. arti
*Art.*9.

2.Sam.12,1
1.Sam.12.

And thus it appeareth that the afflictions of the faithfull are not the puniſhments of a righteous judge, but the gentle chaſtiſements of a louing Father. Againſt which too maine objections are made, not onely by our common aduerſaries, but alſo by ſome amongſt our ſelues: the firſt is taken from the example of Dauid, who though his ſinne was pardoned, yet hee was not freed thereby from temporall puniſhments; and though his fault was remitted ſo far forth as it merited eternall condemnation; yet it was reſerued by God to bee puniſhed with ſuch puniſhments as were corporall and temporary. But vnto this obiection the anſwere is eaſie, if wee doe but remember what hath beene deliuered all-ready; for the rule generally holdeth, that where ſinne, which is the cauſe, is taken away, puniſhment, which is the effect, ceaſeth; but preſently vpon the confeſſion of Dauids ſinne the Prophet aſſureth him from God, of the forgiueneſſe of it, though before hee had denounced thoſe temporall afflictions againſt him and his houſe. And therefore ſeeing the forgiueneſſe of ſinne is (as hath beene ſaid) the not imputing, couering, hiding, not remembring, caſting of it into the bottome of the Sea, and (as it is there ſaid) the putting of it away; it is manifeſt that Dauids ſinne thus before remitted, was not afterwards brought into judgement, and hee puniſhed for it; but that theſe afflictions were the chaſtiſements of a gracious Father, inflicted vpon Dauid, not in hatred and reuenge, or for the puniſhment of the ſin committed, but out of meere loue, to bring him heereby to more ſerious and ſound repentance, that he might with more bitter griefe bewaile his ſinne paſt, and bee more watchfull and carefull to preuent it for the time to come. Vnto which end of Dauids good, wee may adde another end reſpecting the glory of God, which by theſe afflictions, whereby hee corrected Dauids ſinne, was vindicated from the ſlanderous blaſphemies of the heathen; for whereas if Dauid vpon his repentance had not beene thus corrected and afflicted, they would haue beene ready to haue accuſed the Lord of partiality, ſeeing howſoeuer he puniſhed ſuch hainous ſinnes in others with rigour and extremity, yet hee liked them well enough in his owne ſeruants, and could bee content to winke at their faults, ſuffering them with impunity to liue in enormous crimes; all this occaſion of ſlander was taken away, when as God did thus beginne judgement in his owne houſe, and with ſuch ſeuerity corrected the faults of his ſeruant, vpon whom his Name was called. But yet with Gods glory was joyned Dauids good; neither did God puniſh him as a Iudge, but chaſtiſe him as a Father, not to ſatisfie juſtice, or to reuenge his fault vpon him to his hurt, but out of his meere loue and mercy to bring him hereby to an hearty ſorrow for his ſin paſt, and to make him abhorre and flee from the like for the time to come. For (as one ſaith) when God forgiueth ſin, he couereth and forgetteth it; and if he couereth it, hee will not obſerue it, and if hee doe not obſerue it, hee will not reſerue it in memory with a purpoſe to puniſh it; Hee will not acknowledge it, but rather pardoneth it. To conclude this point with the words of that excellent and worthy ſeruant of God; it is ſtrange (ſaith hee) that they ſhould ſo caſt their eyes vpon this one example of Dauid to prooue thereby that the faithfull are puniſhed for their ſins, as that they are nothing mooued with ſo many other examples, wherein they may cleerely behold the free forgiueneſſe of ſinne without any temporary puniſhment; for wee read of the Publicane, that hee departed out of the Temple juſtified, and no puniſhment followed; Peter alſo obtained the pardon of his ſin, and (as Ambroſe ſaith) we read only of his teares, but not of his ſatisfaction. So Chriſt ſaith to the ſicke of the Palſie: Thy ſins are forgiuen thee, but he doth not withall impoſe any puniſhment.

The ſecond objection is, that the bodily death of the faithfull is a puniſhment to the body, becauſe though the ſoule paſſe after the ſeparation into joy and happineſſe, yet the body is puniſhed for the time; ſeeing it corrupteth in the graue, and is not actually deliuered from death, vntill the time of the reſurrection. The right indeed of holding vs vnder his dominion is taken away from death by Chriſt, but from the actuall dominion thereof wee are not freed till we riſe againe. To which I anſwere that death is to be conſidered in it owne nature, or as it hath relation to the faithfull. In it owne nature it is indeed a puniſhment of ſinne; but to the faithful the nature thereof is changed, and of a curſe it is turned into a bleſſing. For Chriſt hath taken away the ſting thereof which is ſin, and where there is no ſin, there can be no puniſhment. It was indeed a deadly ſtinging Serpent which deſtroyed vs, but ſince ſinne was take away, like a Serpent without a ſting it cannot hurt vs. And there cannot be any puniſhment where there is no hurt or damage. Neither hath now death (as hee affirmeth) actuall dominion ouer vs, ſeeing in Chriſt we haue gotten the victory ouer it; ſo as we need not to crouch vnto it, as captiues to thoſe who haue dominion ouer them, but as Conquerours after victory obtained by Chriſt, we may triumph ouer it, ſaying, with the Apoſtle, O death where is thy ſting, O hell where is thy victory. Heretofore it held vs like priſoners vnder his arreſt till Gods juſtice was ſatisfied, but this being done, this arreſt is turned into a reſt, death into a ſleep, and the graue is become to the bodies of the faithfull, as a bed of downe, wherein they quietly reſt without all ſenſe of euill, vntill the day that they are raiſed by vertue of Chriſt their Head to be glorified with him. Neither is there now any hurt in death, (which hurt neuertheleſſe alwayes accompanieth puniſhment) but much fruit and benefit; and that not onely in reſpect of the ſoule, which by this ſeparation is joyned with God, and enjoyeth fulneſſe of joy and pleaſures at his right hand for euermore; but alſo in regard of the body. For hereby it is freed from all miſeries and afflictions wherewith in this life it is turmoyled, as heate, colde, hunger, nakedneſſe, ſickneſſe, paine, with many ſuch calamities; it is eaſed and reſteth from thoſe painfull labours, wherewith it was ſpent and wearied, it is deliuered both from the oppreſſions and injuries of wicked Worldlings, yea, euen from their ſociety and company which was in this World ſo irkeſome and cumberſome. To which purpoſe one demandeth, how it commeth to paſſe, that we ſee the good and euil periſh together? and then anſwereth, that they periſh not, but make an eſcape out of their miſeries, who are freed from the company and perſecutions of wicked men: but they truly die and periſh, whom the paine and puniſhment of a more fearefull judgement doth attend after they depart this life. And laſtly (which is a benefit aboue all the reſt) it reſteth from the workes of wickedneſſe, being no more ſubject to our ſinfull ſoules to bee abuſed by them, as their inſtruments for the committing of iniquity. Finally, the Apoſtle reckoneth death among the chaſtiſements wherewith the Lord corrected the Corinthians for their vnworthy receiuing the Lords Supper; for this cauſe (ſaith hee) many are weake and ſicke among you, and many ſleepe, that is, are dead; and then addeth that when they were thus iudged, they were (not puniſhed but) chaſtened of the Lord, becauſe they ſhould not be condemned with the world. And therefore if death to them were onely a chaſtiſement of a gracious Father, and that out of meere loue to preſerue them from euerlaſting condemnation, it was a benefit, and not a puniſhment, proceeding from ſo gracious an authour, to ſo good an end.

Arminius.

1.Cor.15.55.

Pſal.16.11.

Auguſt. de vita Chriſtian. lib. c.4

1.Cor.11.30,32.

§. Sect. 14.
The former obiection further vrged and anſwered.

1.*Cor.*15.36.

1.*Cor.*15.26.

Yea, but by death the body is made ſubiect to corruption, and therefore it is a bodily puniſhment. I anſwere, that though this argument holdeth in reſpect of meere naturall men, yet not in regard of the faithfull, the corruption of whoſe body is but a preparation to their glorification; for they are ſowne in corruption, that they may bee raiſed in incorruption; they are ſowne in diſhonour, that they may be raiſed in glory, they are ſowne in weakneſſe that they may bee raiſed in power; in which which reſpect they haue no more hurt, and conſequently no more puniſhment by this temporary corruption, than the corne hath, which muſt firſt die that it may be quickned, as the Apoſtle likeneth it; or than the gold hath which is melted, that, being purified from the droſſe, it may be framed into glorious veſſels fit for the Kings Table. Neither is it a puniſhment to be corrupted, when the corruption tendeth to perfection, but onely when it tendeth to deſtruction; ſeeing in naturall reaſon it is neceſſary that the worſer forme muſt firſt be loſt by corruption before a better and more excellent can be acquired and obtained. Yea, but death is called an enemie, which is to be deſtroied, and therfore vntill it be brought to this finall deſtruction, it is a puniſhment. I anſwere, that it followeth not; that becauſe death is an enemie, therefore it is a puniſhment, ſeeing puniſhments haue their name and nature, not from the enimity and malignity of the ſecondarie cauſes and inſtruments, but from the chiefe author who inflicteth them, from the end of their impoſing, and the effects and fruites which they worke in the partie that ſuffereth them. As namely, when they proceed from an angry Iudge, and not a gracious father, to ſatisfie iuſtice, and not to reforme and benefit the partie; and when accordingly they hurt and profite not, they damnifie & deſtroy the offender who ſuffereth them, and doe not by his reformation make way for his ſaluation. And therefore though death be an enemie, and in its owne nature full of malignitie, yet ſeeing it is an inſtrument, and as it were a rodde in the hand of our heauenly father, which he vſeth for our benefit, and maketh it to ſerue as a meanes for the deriuing much good, not only to our ſoules, but alſo to our bodies, the enimity and malignity thereof doth no more proue it to be be a puniſhment vnto the faithfull; then the enimitie and malice of a ſlaue, who is commanded by a louing father to to chaſtiſe his ſonne according to his appointment and no otherwiſe, doth make it ceaſe to be a fatherly correction, and to become a puniſhment when as the father doth it out of meere loue to his childe, and notwithſtanding the malignitie of his inſtrument or deputie, intendeth and powerful effecteth the good of his ſonne by this his chaſtiſement. Neither doth this proue it to bee a puniſhment becauſe it is an enemie which is to bee, and therefore is not, yet deſtroyed; ſeeing heereby is meant the vtter deſtruction & full aboliſhing of it at Chriſts ſecond comming. For euen now death is deſtroyed, as hee is, who hath the power of death, the Diuell, and the reſt of our ſpirituall enemies; namely, not that they ſhould not aſſault vs, but that they ſhould not hurt vs. It is true, that at Chriſts ſecond comming wee ſhall haue full redemption and perfect deliuerance from the hands of our ſpirituall enemies, when as they ſhall, not only, not ouercome vs, and hold vs in their captiuitie, but not ſo much as moleſt vs, or diſturbe our peace; but in the meane time their poyſon, ſting and ſtrength is taken away, ſo that though they aſſault and tempt vs, yet they ſhall neuer be able to hurt vs, ſeeing the Lord ſo directeth vs with his wiſdome, and aſſiſteth vs with his power, that we ſtill obtaine the victory, and receiue much profit and benefit by their encounters. And as this is true of all the reſt, ſo eſpecially of death, who in it ſelfe is an enemy, which is wholy to be aboliſhed at Chriſts appearing; but in the meane time, the poyſon, and ſting thereof is taken away by the death of Chriſt, and the nature thereof is quite changed, ſo as it is no longer a Tyrant, which holdeth vs to our hurt vnder his dominion, but as to the ſoule it is a paſſage to glory and happineſſe; ſo to the body it is but a ſleepe a little longer than ordinary, whereby it reſteth from labour and ſinne, that when the day of glory breaketh, and the Sunne of righteouſneſſe appeareth, wee may lay aſide corruption, and put on incorruption, and hauing our mortall ſwallowed vp of immortality, may riſe with full ſtrength, beauty and vigour, to ſerue and prayſe God without paine or wearineſſe.

*Heb.*2.14.

1.*Cor.*15.5

§. Sect.
Of the ma fold diffe ces betwe the afflicti of the faith and the pu ments of t wicked.

And thus haue I ſhewed, that none of the afflictions of the faithfull, no, not death it ſelfe, the greateſt and laſt of temporall euils, are vnto the faithfull puniſhments for ſinne, but onely the chaſtiſements of a louing Father, inflicted for his glory and their good; for howſoeuer the puniſhments of the wicked, and chaſtiſements of the godly bee in matter and in outward appearance, yea euen in reſpect of bodily ſenſe, and the apprehenſion of naturall reaſon all one; yet is there great and manifold difference between them to be obſerued by the eye of ſpirituall iudgement, enlightened by the bright beames of Gods Truth ſhining in his Word. As firſt the chaſtiſements of the faithfull and puniſhments of the wicked doe differ in their efficient cauſes who inflict and impoſe them. For they come from the hand of a gracious Father reconciled vnto vs in Chriſt; theſe from a juſt Iudge, and from a powerfull and incenſed enemy. They are inflicted in loue and fatherly compaſſion, which cauſeth his bowels to yearne, and his heart to relent, ſo as he cannot caſt off his children like the wicked, but receiueth them againe into his former fauour, after that they are humbled vnder his chaſtiſing hand; according to that of the Prophet Hoſea, How ſhall I giue thee vp Ephraim? How ſhall I deliuer thee Iſrael? How ſhall I make thee as Admah? How ſhall I ſet thee as Zeboim? Mine heart is turned within me, my repentings are rowled together. As if he had ſaid, though your ſins are ſo many and grieuous, that I might juſtly deſtroy you with fire and brimſtone, as I did thoſe Cities adjoyning to Sodome and Gomorah; yet in regard of my couenant, and my loue which in Chriſt I beare you, I cannot deale with you as I did with thoſe curſed Nations; but when your ſinnes enforce mee to correct you, I doe compaſſionate your griefes, and am ready to repent and ſurceaſe your afflictions, when you repent of your ſinne againſt me. And with this agreeth Gods promiſe made to Dauid concerning his ſonne Salomon. If he ſinne, I will chaſten him with the rod of men, and with the plagues of the children of men; but my mercy ſhall not depart from him, as I took it from Saul, whom I haue put away before thee. So that the Lord in correcting his children, doth (as the Prophet Habakkuc ſpeaketh) In wrath remember mercy, and hee doth chaſtiſe them in his iudgement, not in his anger to bring them to nothing, and vtterly cut them off. But contrariwiſe, the puniſhments of the wicked are inflicted vpon them in Gods wrath and heauy diſpleaſure; neither doth hee take any compaſſion on them in their miſeries, but rather delighteth himſelfe in the exerciſing his juſtice and judgements vpon them for their vtter ruine and deſtruction.

Secondly, they differ in their impulſiue or mouing cauſe; for the cauſe mouing the Lord to chaſtiſe the faithfull, is his loue and goodneſſe, whereas his wrath and juſt diſpleaſure conceiued againſt the wicked for their ſinnes, moueth him to inflict deſerued puniſhments vpon them.

Thirdly, they differ in their end; for the Lord chaſtiſeth the faithfull, that hee may manifeſt his mercy in their conuerſion, but he puniſheth the wicked, that he may manifeſt his juſtice in their confuſion. He chaſtiſeth them in loue for their amendement, that they may not ſin; he puniſheth theſe in wrath to ſatiſfie his juſtice, because they haue ſinned. Hee chaſtiſeth them that they may like Gold be purified in the fire of affliction from their droſſe and corruption, and ſo be made fit for Gods heauenly treaſury; he puniſheth theſe that like chaffe or ſtubble they may bee conſumed with the fire of his wrath. He chaſtiſeth them that they may not be condemned with the World; he puniſheth theſe that their earthly miſeries may be the beginning of their condemnation, and (as it were) their firſt ſtep into Hell. He chaſtiſeth them to try them, that in tryall they may bee approued; he puniſheth theſe to vex and torment them, by bringing vpon them that vengeance which their ſinnes haue deſerued.

James 1.3.

Fourthly, they differ in their effects; for the afflictions of the faithfull doe much profit them, and further their ſaluation; but the puniſhments of the wicked doe much hurt them and further their condemnation. They ſoften and mollifie their hearts, and make them to humble themſelues before their heauenly Father, imploring mercy and forgiueneſſe; theſe doe make them more hard and obdurate, & in fury and deſperate madneſſe to blaſpheme, murmure and repine againſt their Iudge, becauſe hee doth execute vpon them his righteous judgements. They not onely helpe to increaſe in them all ſpirituall graces, but alſo manifeſt them to Gods glory and their owne comfort; theſe both multiply and manifeſt the ſinnes and corruptions of the wicked to their euerlaſting horrour and confuſion. They beating, and (as it were punning) the faithfull, doe make them like odoriferous Spices to ſmell the more ſweetly, the more they are bruiſed; theſe vexing the wicked doe make them like filthy ſinkes and puddles to ſtinke the more noyſomely the more they are troubled. Finally, they ſerue as an vnpleaſant, yet ſtraight and direct way which bringeth the faithfull into the Kingdome of Heauen; but theſe are (as it were) the porch and firſt entrance of Hell, and a ſtormy and tempeſtuous Sea, which ſplitteth and ſinketh the wicked on the ſands of deſperation, and maketh them to wrack their ſoules on the rockes of deſtruction. To which purpoſe one ſaith, that to the damned and reprobate tribulation begetteth puſillanimity, puſillanimity perplexity, perplexity deſperation, and deſperation confuſion and condemation.

Idiotâ inter orthodoxogr. de patient. vera contemplat. cap 20.

Fiftly, the afflictions of the faithfull, and the puniſhments of the wicked doe differ, in reſpect of their ſeuerall ſubjects, or the perſons vpon whom they are impoſed; for they are inflicted on ſonnes, theſe on ſlaues, they on friends, theſe on enemies; they on Gods faithfull and couragious Souldiers, whom after the victory he will crowne with glory; theſe on malefactours and offenders, whom it is his purpoſe to puniſh according to their demerits.

Sixtly, they differ in time and continuance; for the afflictions of the faithfull are ſhort and momentany; but the puniſhments of the wicked are endleſſe and euerlaſting; for as the happineſſe of the Elect and their glorification, is inchoate and begun euen in this life, when they haue attained vnto ſome meaſure of ſanctification, vnto peace with God, peace of conſcience and joy in the Holy Ghoſt; ſo contrariwiſe the torments of the reprobate, are euen begun in this world, when as they ſuffer for their ſins temporall plagues and puniſhments, ſeeing they are the earneſt of their condemnation, and the very flaſhing of that infernall fire.

this

Seuenthly, they differ in their meaſure and quantity. in which reſpect the afflictions of the faithful are that gentle rod, whereby like children they are louingly corrected by their heauenly Father; but the puniſhments of the wicked are that three ſtringed whip, whereby the wicked are ſcourged and tormented like ſlaues and malefactours, at the appointment of their Iudge: they tending to correct in judgement for the good of the party, and theſe to deſtroy and vtterly cut off, as the Prophet ſpeaketh. And though there ſeeme to bee no difference in outward appearance betweene the ſtripes of the ſonne, and the laſhes of the ſlaue; yet is there great difference in their inward feeling, ſeeing they haue much internall joy, and comfort from the aſſurance which they haue of the loue & fauour of their heauenly Father, euen whileſt he correcteth them, whereby they are aſcertained that all their afflictions ſhall haue a joyfull and happy iſſue; whereas theſe conceiuing God to be a ſeuere Iudge, and an incenſed enemy, doe with horrour and feare ſuffer the euils which lie vpon them, as the deſerued puniſhments of their ſins, hauing no better hopes for the time to come, but rather a terrible expectation of helliſh condemnation after all their worldly miſeries, and calamities. To this purpoſe one ſaith, that there is great difference betweene the chaſtizements of a ſonne and the puniſhments of a ſlaue. For the ſonne is beaten, and ſo is the ſeruant, but he like a ſeruant who hath offended, but the other as free-borne, and as a ſonne vnto whom diſcipline is neceſſary. Neither doe their like ſtripes proue them to bee of like honour, nor doth it hereupon follow, that becauſe the wicked and godly ſuffer the ſame things, therefore they are of the ſame condition; but correction is inflicted vpon the ſonne, for his humilation or triall; vpon the ſlaue, for his torment and puniſhment. And therefore Dauid knowing theſe differences, ſaith of the iuſt, that many were their tribulations, but preſently addeth, that the Lord deliuereth them out of all: ſhewing the cure and remedie as ſoone as the diſeaſe and maladie. But ſpeaking of the wicked, he ſaith, that many are the torments of the ſinner, but addeth no comfort [illegible] helpe and deliuerance. Finally, as there are theſe and many ſuch like differences betweene the chaſtiſements of the faithfull, and the puniſhments of the wicked, for the preſent in this world; ſo farre greater ſhall the difference be betweene them in that which followeth in the life to come; for the afflictions of the godly in this preſent life are not (as the Apoſtle ſpeaketh) worthy the glory which ſhall be reuealed. Seeing as he ſaith in another place, Theſe light and momentany afflictions ſhall cauſe vnto them a farre moſt excellent, and an eternall waight of glory. Whereas the temporary puniſhments of vngodly men, working in them no reformation and amendement, but rather (as hath bin ſhewed) encreaſing and multiplying their haynous ſins, are accompanied with euerlaſting torments, and helliſh condemnation in the World to come.

1.Cor.11.32.

Ier.30.11.

Chryſoſt. de fide & lege naturæ, ſerm. tom.3.

Pſal.34.19, Verſe 21.

Rom.8.18.

2.Cor.4.17.

§.Sect.15

That there were no comfort in affli-ons, if they were puni-ments.

And thus haue I proued that the afflictions of the faithfull, are not puniſhments of their ſins, inflicted by an offended Iudge, for the ſatisfying of his juſtice; but the chaſtiſements of a gracious Father, by which he correcteth his children for their profit and amendement; and haue alſo ſhewed the manifold and greater differences betweene the puniſhments of the wicked and the afflictions of the godly, vpon the which I haue the longer inſiſted, becauſe the contrary opinion of the aduerſaries, oppoſed againſt this truth, ſtriketh at the very root of all true and ſound comfort. For as it is the chiefe ſtay, to vphold fainting ſoules oppreſſed with the heauy waight of grieuous afflictions, to know, and to be aſſured that all which they ſuffer are the chaſtiſements of a gracious Father, wherby he correcteth them out of meere loue, for their owne profit and benefit, and not for any pleaſure which hee taketh in their ſmart and paine, but vpon meere neceſſity to reclaime them from their ſins, and to fit them for his Kingdome: ſo when this ſtay is taken away, and the afflicted party is perſwaded, that the miſeries which he endureth are deſerued puniſhments of an angrie iudge, inflicted for the ſatisfying of his iuſtice, beeing robbed of all conſolation, hee fainteth vnder his burthen, and ſinketh into the bottomleſſe gulfe of deepe deſpaire. For if he were vnable to beare the burthen of his afflictions when they were alone, what will become of him when the double load of Gods wrath and diſpleaſure is added vnto it? Or whether ſhould he flee for comfort, when he ſeeth, that he who is onely able to relieue him is an incenſed enemy? How ſhould he haue any hope to haue his afflictions lightened or ſhortned, which are inflicted to ſatiſfie juſtice, whenas his owne conſcience telleth him that his leaſt ſinnes are of infinite guilt in reſpect of that infinite Maieſty which is offended? Or what ſhall ſtay him from fleeing out of the preſence of God, when like a righteous Iudge hee purſueth him in wrath to take due vengeance on him for his wickedneſſe? Finally, how ſhall a faithfull man conclude with Dauid, that it is good for him to be afflicted, if his afflictions be the fruits aud effects of Gods wrath and the deſerued puniſhments of his ſinne, which hurt and profit not? Or how ſhall hee pronounce them bleſſed whom God correcteth, if they be ſtill vnder the curſe, ſuffering thoſe puniſhments which the Law threatneth? Whereas contrariwiſe if wee bee perſwaded that the Lord is ſtill our gracious Father, wee will flee into his boſome for refuge againſt all euils, and humble our ſelues vnder his mighty hand whom wee haue offended, hoping to receiue vpon our ſubmiſſion, mercy and forgiueneſſe: if we conceiue that hee correcteth vs for our profit, our future hopes wil ſtrengthen our patience to indure preſent ſmart. If we be aſſured that God loueth our perſons, and in all his corrections aymeth at nothing but the mortifying of our ſins, and our reformation; this will make vs alſo labour to ſubdue them, and to amend what is amiſſe, that ſo wee may be freed from our paine and ſmart. Which a malefactour who is puniſhed for his fault neuer aymeth at, ſeeing he knoweth that the end of his ſuffering is not to amend him, but ſatisfie juſtice, which will haue its courſe, and not remit any of the puniſhment vpon the repentance of the party.

Pſal.119.71.

al.94.12.

Chap. X.

That all afflictions are impoſed vpon the faithfull out of Gods meere loue. And that this loue plainely appeareth in the meaſure of their afflictions; and firſt in regard of themſelues, whether we reſpect their quantity, which is but ſmall, or their time, which is but ſhort.

§. Sect. 1.
at God loth his chil-truly and ubſtantially a Father to fit them & fondly and eminately a fooliſh ther to aſe them.

And thus haue I ſhewed the firſt branch & main ground of the Chriſtians comfort in the time of trouble and affliction, conſiſting in the knowledge and aſſurance of this point; that the croſſes and calamities which he indureth are not puniſhments inflicted for the ſatiſfying of Gods juſtice: now the other point propounded followeth to be proued, namely, that they are to the faithfull the chaſtiſements of a gracious Father, wherewith out of meere loue he correcteth them as his children, not for any diſpleaſure conceiued againſt their perſons, or for any pleaſure which he taketh in their ſmart and paine, but onely for their profit and benefit, both heere; and in the life to come. For the cleering whereof wee are to know, that there is a two-fold kinde of loue to bee obſerued in earthly parents, the firſt a fond and cockering loue commonly incident to the weaker ſexe, whereby in all things they indeauour to pleaſe their children by following their fooliſh appetite and luſts, and let their owne will be the rule of all their actions; and therefore if ſo it pleaſe them, they are content to let them languiſh in idleneſſe, or to run riotous courſes, which in all likelihood will bring them to perdition. But this is nothing elſe but with the Ape to kill their yong with clipping, to play the enemy vnder the vizard of a friend; and to make them drinke the poyſonous dregs of all miſchiefe becauſe it is ſugred with loue, and ſweetned with the fond affection of an ouer-tender mother. The other kinde of loue, though it make not ſo plauſible a ſhew, is not in truth weaker, but much wiſer; not leſſe intire and hearty, but much more diſcreet and profitable, as wholy ayming at the good of the party beloued; not caring much whether it pleaſe or diſpleaſe, whether the things which it enjoyneth be eaſie or difficult, tedious or delightfull, ſo they be importantly behoouefull, and greatly beneficiall to him who is to vndertake them. And this is the profitable loue of a wiſe and diſcreet Father, who ſometimes with-holdeth neceſſaries from the ſonne whom hee loueth, not becauſe hee grudgeth to giue them, but becauſe hee would inure him to hardneſſe, and make him more ſecurely enjoy his plenty, when hee knoweth how to want; ſometimes alſo hee croſſeth him of his will, to teach him humility, and inureth him to ſuch painfull labour, as doth often preſſe forth of him ſweat, and ſometimes teares. But eſpecially this wiſe and fatherly loue doth ſhew it ſelfe, in keeping his ſonne vnder a ſtraight and ſeuere diſcipline, in reſtrayning him of his liberty, in contayning him within the bonds of modeſty, temperance and ciuility, in keeping him from running into licentious courſes, and in reclayming him from ſuch vices and faults by due correction which being continued in without amendement, would fruſtrate the fathers expectation, and make him together with his comfort and joy to loſe his ſonne; and cauſe the childe together with his Fathers diſpleaſure to incurre the danger of looſing his inheritance. Now that witleſſe and worthleſſe loue of a fond Mother, as it deſerueth not to bee reſpected and eſteemed, ſeeing it tendeth to the hurt and deſtruction of the party beloued; ſo it is not to bee expected of Gods children, from ſo wiſe and worthy a Father, who in all things aymeth at their good, and chuſeth rather to profit than to pleaſe them. For hee knowing the corruptions of our nature, how eaſily wee are puffed vp with pride, when we enjoy worldly proſperity, and made fooliſhly wanton with a little cockering; how ready wee are to languiſh in idleneſſe, and to become effeminate with earthly delights; how prone wee are to diſhonour him in his gifts, and how vſuall it is with vs to abuſe theſe remembrances of his loue, as occaſions to make vs both neglect and forget our benefactour; and finally how liberty bringeth vs to licentiouſneſſe, wantonneſſe to wilfulneſſe, and want of due correction to all diſſoluteneſſe and diſorder; like a wiſe Father out of meere loue hee keepeth vs vnder ſeuerer diſcipline; and though he ſuffereth wicked Worldlings and damned reprobates to flouriſh in their impiety, to liue with impunity in all manner of wickedneſſe, and to reuell and ruffle it out in all pompe and pleaſure, becauſe hee intendeth to giue them their portion in this life and to let them fatte themſelues againſt the day of ſlaughter: yet ſuch is his loue and care ouer his owne ſonnes and children, that they no ſooner begin to wax proud and wanton, but hee preſently humbleth and keepeth them vnder, and no ſooner doe they enter into a courſe of ſinning, but hee forthwith reclaymeth them from their wicked wayes by his chaſtiſements and corrections. For (as one ſaith) he granteth vnto his child worldly felicity to comfort and not to corrupt him; and when he ſeeth it thus abuſed, hee doth ſcourge him in this World for his amendement, and not for his condemnation; and therefore we muſt ſuffer him with patience, correcting vs like a Father; leaſt wee ſhould feele him hereafter puniſhing vs as a Iudge.

Qui dedit tibi fœlicitatem huius ſaculi, ad conſolationem tuam dedit non ad corruptionem &c. Auguſt. in Iohan. tract. 12 Tom. 9.

§. Sect. 2. That God ſheweth his fatherly loue in correcting his children.

And this truth is manifeſt vnto vs in the Scriptures, both by teſtimonies and examples. So the Lord ſaith, that hee will begin to plague the Citie where his Name is called vpon. And the Apoſtle telleth vs, that iudgement muſt begin at the houſe of God. So by the Prophet Amos the Lord thus ſpeaketh to the people of Iſrael: You onely haue I knowne of all the families of the earth; therefore I will viſite you for all your iniquities. The Wiſe man alſo vſeth this argument to perſwade vs with patience to beare the chaſtening of the Lord, and not be grieued with his correction, becauſe hee correcteth him whom hee loueth, euen as the father doth the childe in whom he delighteth. To which place the Apoſtle alluding ſaith; My ſonne deſpiſe not the chaſtening of the Lord, neither faint when thou art rebuked of him; for whom the Lord loueth he chaſteneth, and hee ſcourgeth euery ſonne that he receiueth. Finally, the Lord himſelfe profeſſeth, that hee doth rebuke and chaſten as many as he loueth, and vſeth it as an argument to perſwade vnto repentance and zealous reformation, becauſe whoſoeuer eſcape, yet they ſhall be ſure to be corrected (if they offend) whom he loueth and reſpecteth; that they may hereby be reclaimed from their wicked courſes, and ſo bee deliuered from the condemnation of the world. And this alſo appeareth by the examples of the faithfull from time to time, for who more in Gods fauour than Abraham the Father of the Faithfull, and yet how many croſſes did hee indure? as the leauing of his friends and countrey, and the leading of his life, as it were, in a voluntarie baniſhment among a ſtrange people; the offering of his beloued Iſaac, and feare of his owne life? Who more deare vnto God than Iacob, of whom hee ſaid, before hee was borne Iacob haue I loued? And yet ſo many were his afflictions that hee affirmeth, his dayes to haue beene few and euill, Who more reſpected of God than Iob, whom he pronounced to be the iuſteſt man vpon earth? And yet who more dejected and loaded with afflictions? Who more gracious with the Lord than holy Dauid, whom he affirmeth to haue beene a man according to Gods owne heart? And yet hee complayneth that when his wicked enemies wallowed in worldly delights hee was afflicted daily, and puniſhed euery morning. So it is ſaid of Salomon his ſonne that by Gods appointment he was called Iedidiah, becauſe the Lord loued him: and that Dauid receiued this promiſe from God in his behalfe, that he would be his Father, and he ſhould be his ſonne; and yet the Lord addeth, that if hee did ſinne hee would chaſten him with the rod of men, and with the plagues of the children of men; notwithſtanding his mercy ſhould not depart from him as he tooke it from Saul. Yea, of all his Church and people the Lord ſaith, that if they did breake his ſtatutes, and would not keepe his Commandements hee would viſite their tranſgreſſion with the rod, and their iniquitie with ſtrokes, but yet his louing kindneſſe he would not take from them, nor falſifie his truth by breaking his couenant. But of ſuch examples I ſhall haue occaſion to ſpeake more hereafter, and therefore referre them to their place: onely for the preſent let vs both by theſe teſtimonies and examples be perſwaded of this truth, that the Lord correcteth theſe who are moſt deare vnto him, out of meere loue for their profit and benefit; and that Gods loue, and theſe ſeeming fruits of his anger in our croſſes and afflictions may well ſtand together; according to that of the Pſalmiſt; Thou heardeſt them, O Lord, our God: thou waſt a fauourable God vnto them, though thou diddeſt take vengeance for their inuentions. And therfore when we are in the middeſt of our afflictions notwithſtanding theſe croſſes and calamities, we may triumphingly cry out with the Apoſtle, Who ſhall ſeparate vs from the loue of Chriſt? Shall tribulation or anguiſh, or perſecution, or famine, or nakedneſſe, or perill, or ſword? &c. I am perſwaded, that neither death nor life, nor Angels, nor principalities, nor things preſent, nor things to come, nor height, nor depth, nor any other creature, ſhall be able to ſeparate vs from the loue of God which is in Chriſt Ieſus our Lord.

Ier. 25. 29.
1. Pet. 4. 17.
Amos 3. 2.
Prov. 3. 11, 12.
Heb. 12. 5, 6.
Apoc. 3. 19.
1. Cor. 11. 32.
Gen. 47. 9.
1. Sam. 12. 25.
2. Sam. 7. 14.
Psal. 89. 31, 32, 33.
Psal. 99. 8.
Rom. 8. 35, 3

But

Sect.3.
God in haue ap-eth to y one of faithfull ildren a taine meae of afflicti-s for them ch cannot exceeded.

But let vs not content our ſelues with the generall knowledge of this truth, that the Lord out of his infinite and endleſſe loue doth chaſtiſe the faithfull for their good; but let vs further conſider how this loue of God is manifeſted vnto them in their afflictions, by inſiſting in ſome particulars. To which purpoſe wee are to know that Gods wonderful loue appeareth vnto his children, both in the meaſure of their afflictions, and in his ends which moue him to lay vpon them his Fatherly corrections; the which his ends being ſecret in himſelfe, hee maketh knowne vnto vs by thoſe fruites and effects, which by theſe his chaſtiſements he powerfully produceth and worketh in vs. Concerning the former, Gods loue appeareth in the meaſure of our afflictions, firſt generally in that hee is content to afflict vs in ſome meaſure; for ſeeing our ſinnes haue beene without meaſure both in their greatneſſe and number; and haue beene alſo committed againſt an immenſe, infinite, and incomprehenſible Majeſtie; therefore if the Lord ſhould deale with vs according to his juſtice and righteous judgements, we haue deſerued that our puniſhments ſhould bee without meaſure, number or end. But God infinite in mercy and goodneſſe doth not deale with vs according to our deſerts; but as hee hath graciouſly turned the puniſhments of ſlaues, inflicted by a righteous Iudge, into chaſtiſements of Sons inflicted by a louing Father: ſo according to this loue and mercy he hath meaſured out ſuch a certaine ſtint and proportion of theſe afflictions vnto euery one of his Children, as in his wiſedome he knoweth to bee fitteſt for them, and that both in reſpect of their quantitie, what and how much they ſhall beare, and alſo in reſpect of their time and continuance, when and how long they ſhall endure them. In which reſpect wee may truely affirme, that as there is no croſſe, calamity or affliction, which is not fore-appointed of God; and ordered, ruled and diſpoſed by his moſt wiſe and all-ruling prouidence; ſo the quantitie how much, and the time how long, is alſo by the ſame wiſedome, and prouidence ordained and appointed, in ſuch an exact and ſtrict manner, that as it is impoſſible for any man to free himſelfe, in whole or in part, from any of that meaſure which is ſhared and alloted vnto him; or to preuent it from comming, or to eſcape from it, being come before the appointed time; ſo is it alike impoſſible, that all the power of Diuels or men ſhould adde one dramme to the waight, or one minute to the time of our afflictions, more than that proportion which God by his powerfull wiſdome hath meaſured out vnto them. For as hee hath ſaid to the waters of the Sea, ſo alſo to theſe floods of affliction, Hitherto ſhall ye come, but no further, and here ſhall yee ſtay your proud waues. To this purpoſe the Pſalmiſt ſaith, that God had fed his people with the bread of teares, & giuen them teares to drinke with great meaſure. So the Church in her afflictions groundeth her Faith vpon this truth in her Prayers vnto God for helpe and deliuerance. Be not angry, O Lord, aboue meaſure, neither remember iniquitie for euer: and againe, Wilt thou hold thy peace, & afflict vs aboue meaſure? As though ſhe ſhould ſay, I am aſſured that thou wilt not do it, ſeeing it is contrarie to thy nature, word and vſuall cuſtome. For the Lord hath expreſly promiſed that hee will correct his people in meaſure. And with this agreeth the book of wiſdome, where it is ſaid, that the Lord wanted not meanes, to haue corrected his people with much more grieuous afflictions, than thoſe which they indured, but yet hee had not done it, becauſe hee had ordered all things in meaſure, number and waight. As alſo the ſaying of our Sauiour Chriſt himſelfe, who affirmeth, that not onely our greater afflictions, but the leaſt and lighteſt, euen to the falling of an haire from our heads, are ordered by Gods prouidence, ſo as they cannot without his appointment happen vnto vs. An example whereof wee haue in Iob, for as Satan at the firſt could not touch him till he had receiued a commiſſion from God; ſo neither could he adde any thing vnto his firſt afflictions, till his commiſſion was renewed. And as the Lord meaſureth out vnto vs our afflictions, in reſpect of their quantity, ſo alſo in regard of their time; as wee may ſee in the Egyptian bondage, which was appointed by God to continue 430. yeares, which being expired, the people of Iſrael were in the very ſame day deliuered out of it. And alſo in the captiuitie of Babylon, which was to continue by Gods decree 70. yeares, which being expired according to Gods promiſe made vnto them by his Prophet, they were deliuered out of their captiuitie. And thus the Lord appointeth a certaine time for the afflictions of the Church of Smyrna, It ſhall come to paſſe, that the Diuel ſhall caſt ſome of you into priſon, that yee may be tryed, and yee ſhall haue tribulation tenne daies. And alſo to the whole Church militant, where it is ſaid, That the woman (that is the Church) fled into the wilderneſſe, where ſhee had a place prepared of God, that they ſhould feed her there a thouſand, two hundred, and threeſcore dayes. By all which it appeareth that the Lord doth not chaſten his Children raſhly and in his furie, but with great wiſedome and deſcretion, and vpon mature deliberation appointing before hand both the quantitie of their afflictions, and the time of their continuance. And no meruaile, for if (as the authour of the Booke of Wiſedome ſpeaketh) the Lord doth puniſh the enemies of his Children, and the condemned to death with ſuch deliberation, giuing them time and

ſ.11.
*Pſal.*80.5.
*Eſa.*64.9.12.
*Ier.*30.11.& 46.28.
*Wiſ.*11.17.20.
*Matth.*10.30.
*Luk.*21.18.
*Iob.*1.12.& 2.6.
*Exo.*12.40.41.
*Ier.*25.11.
*Ier.*29.10.
2.*Cor.*36.21.22.
Apoc 2.10.
*Chap.*12.6.
*Wiſd.*12.20.21.

place, whereby they might be deliuered from their malice; with how great circumſpection will he iudge his owne Sonnes? Now the conſideration of this truth, that God doth not lay vs open to afflictions, nor leaue vs to Satan and our ſpirituall enemies to be loaded with miſeries at their pleaſure, as our ſinnes which are without number or end haue juſtly deſerued; but doth in his fatherly wiſedome meaſure out vnto euery one of vs ſuch a proportion of afflictions as is fitting for vs; as it doth ſufficiently ſhew the greatneſſe of Gods mercy and loue, ſo it may ſtrengthen our patience in the time of our afflictions, and repleniſh our hearts with joy and conſolation. Seeing we ſtand not to the cruell curteſie of the enemies of our ſaluation, to endure what pleaſeth them to lay vpon vs; but onely haue ſuch a meaſure allotted vnto vs, as God in his infinite loue and goodneſſe knoweth beſt; and howſoeuer they are oftentimes the inſtruments of our calamities, and are vſed by our heauenly Phyſitian as his Apothecaries to miniſter vnto vs theſe vnpleaſant potions, for the purging away of our corrupt and ſinfull humors, yet doth hee ſtrictly preſcribe ſuch an exact bill of the ingredients, and carrieth ſuch a watchfull eye ouer them, whileſt they are making theſe confections, that they are not able to adde one ſcruple vnto his proportions, nor to giue vs a graine more of theſe loathſome drugges than is fit for the effecting of the cure, and the recouery of our ſpirituall health.

§. Sect. 4.
That our afflictions are in their quantity ſmall & light.

And thus it generally appeareth that God ſheweth great loue and mercy vnto vs in that he doth afflict vs in meaſure, ſeeing our innumerable and moſt hainous ſinnes haue deſerued, and the enemies of our ſaluation are willing and ready to inflict on vs all his plagues and puniſhments: in which reſpect we haue juſt cauſe to thinke that we are well dealt with, if wee eſcape any of them, and to acknowledge in our greateſt afflictions with the diſtreſſed Church, that it is the infinite mercy of God that we are not vtterly conſumed: ſeeing it is not to be attributed vnto any of our deſerts, whoſe ſinnes haue pulled downe Gods iudgements vpon vs, nor to want of will or power in Sathan and the world who are alwaies able and deſirous to doe vs miſchiefe, but onely to Gods infinite loue and mercy in Ieſus Chriſt, which pardoneth all our ſinnes, and to his almighty power & prouidence, whereby he preſerueth and defendeth vs from the malice & might of all theſe our enemies, ſo as they cannot puniſh vs at their owne pleaſure, but onely as Gods inſtruments afflict and correct vs in ſuch a manner and meaſure as hee preſcribeth. Now let vs deſcend to a more ſpeciall conſideration of the meaſure of our afflictions, and take a more cleare view of Gods loue and mercy brightly ſhining therein, and that both in reſpect of the croſſe it ſelfe which wee beare, and alſo in regard of vs who indure and beare it. The loue and mercy of God appeareth in the meaſure of our afflictions, both in reſpect of their quantity which is but ſmall, and in their time which is but ſhort; for either they are light, or they are not long, and if they bee great in quantity, they are but momentany in their continuance; or if they bee tedious in time, they are eaſie in waight; and therefore may be borne with patience; either in regard of our ſenſe, becauſe they doe not trouble vs much, being themſelues light and ſmall, or in reſpect of our hope, becauſe they will not trouble vs long, ſeeing they are but ſhort and momentany: yea in truth wee may well joyne both together, and affirme with the Apoſtle that they are both light in their load & waight, & alſo ſhort and momentany in their time and continuance. And therefore well may we beare them not only with patience, but alſo with joy and thankfulneſſe; eſpecially if we conſider, that through the infinite mercies of God and merits of Chriſt, wee are corrected with theſe ſmall and ſhort chaſtiſements, that wee may be freed from intolerable torments and euerlaſting condemnation, and doe therefore indure theſe light and momentany afflictions, that through the bleſſing of God, they may cauſe vnto vs a farre more excellent and an eternall waight of glory. First then Gods mercy and loue towards vs doth appeare in the meaſure of our afflictions, in that they are but light and ſmall: for whereas our ſinnes haue deſerued the vnſupportable waight of Gods wrath and the intolerable torments of the damned in Hell Fire; the Lord hath graciouſly ſpared vs, and cauſed his onely deare Sonne in our ſtead to beare our iniquities, together with the puniſhment due vnto them: hee hath withheld it from lighting and lying vpon vs, whom it would haue ouerwhelmed, and preſſed downe to the bottome of Hell, and hath laide it vpon the ſhoulders of our Sauiour who was able to beare it, and in bearing alſo to aboliſh and take it away. And now he hath fitted another burthen for vs, not according to the meaſure of our ſinnes but of our ſtrength: not that intolerable burthen of ſinne and puniſhment, which would oppreſſe vs, and cauſe vs to ſinke into the gulfe of deſperation, but a ſweet, light and eaſie burthen of afflictions, as our Sauiour calleth it, to keepe vs who are light vpon the ballance (as the Pſalmiſt ſpeaketh) from being puffed vp and blowne away with the wind of worldly vanities. And this he layeth vpon vs, not to toyle and tyre vs but that it may ſerue as an eaſie yoke to keepe vs in obedience, and to inable vs the more fitly to draw and labour in the way of Gods Commandements,

Lamen.3.22.

1.Cor.11.32.

2.Cor.4.17.

Math.11.30.

Pſal.62.9.

mandements, which in the end will bring reſt to our ſoules: not to ouer burthen and ſinke vs in this Sea of miſeries; but rather to ballaſt vs, that we be not ouer ſet with the boiſterous blaſts of Sathans temptations; and to keepe vs in a right courſe that wee be not wrackt vpon the rockes of ſin. So the author of the Booke of Wiſedome ſaith; Therefore thou chaſteneſt them by little and little that offend; and warneſt them by putting them in remembrance wherein they haue offended, that leauing their wickedneſſe they may beleeue in thee O Lord. And this ſmall meaſure of affliction which the Lord hath prepared for vs, is ſignified in the Scriptures by the name of a cup, which by our heauenly Father is mingled and prouided for our drinking; for it is not ſaid that wee muſt drinke a Sea of ſorrowes, or an infinite meaſure of puniſhment, as our ſinnes haue deſerued; no nor yet a barrell or great veſſell, but onely a little cup. The which wee muſt not drinke alone, for the Lord hath cauſed his Sonne our Sauiour to drinke the very dregs thereof, euen to the bottome, and hath onely left a little pittance for vs to taſt and ſip of, which by the death of Chriſt is ſo corrected and purified from the poyſon of Gods wrath, and ſo ſugred and ſweetned with his merits and obedience, that not onely the chiefe loathſomneſſe thereof is taken away, but alſo it is made hereby, of a mortal poyſon which would haue killed vs, a wholſome preſeruatiue to keepe vs from the contagion of ſinne, and a profitable potion to purge vs from our corruptions. In regard whereof our afflictions and griefes are but ſhadowes and reſemblances, rather than ſubſtantiall euills, and are rather vizards to fright Children in Chriſt, than true enemies which intend vs hurt. And therefore the Apoſtle ſpeaking of them ſaith, As dying and behold wee liue, as chaſtened, and yet not killed, as ſorrowing, and yet alway reioycing, &c. Whence one obſerueth that our ſorrow hath a quaſi, as though, or as it were added to it; but ſo hath not our reioycing, becauſe in hope it is moſt aſſured. And why is it ſaid, not ſimply that wee ſorrow, but as it were are ſorry? becauſe like a ſleepe or dreame it vaniſheth away, and the iuſt ſhall triumph ouer it in the morning, &c. And howſoeuer theſe ſhadowes of euill which are inflicted vpon vs, doe at their firſt appearing and approaching, ſeeme fearefull, and terrible, yet doe they vpon ſome ſmall acquaintance, grow ſo familiar with vs, that wee doe not much auoid their company. For as the Child ſeeing euen his friend and familiar acquaintance approching towards him, diſguiſed with ſome vgly vizard, is at firſt ſight much affrighted, and ready to cry out, and runne away; but when the vizard is laid aſide, returneth to himſelfe, and being freed from feare, doth take knowledge of the party, and turne all his feare into ieſt, and merriment: ſo our afflictions like a vizarded friend, do at the firſt appearing much amate vs, but when the vizard is remoued, and wee vpon better acquaintance find, that they are not enemies that hurt vs, but friends, from whom wee receiue much good and benefit, then doe we grow familiar with them, and notwithſtanding that their company is vnpleaſant to our ſenſe, yet doe wee not with any great earneſtneſſe deſire to bee freed from it, becauſe wee find it ſo neceſſary and profitable. And thus it appeareth that our afflictions are both light and ſmall, not that our ſinnes haue not deſerued more ſharpe chaſtiſements; but becauſe a little correction ſeemeth enough, vnto our moſt deare and louing Father, who ſo tenderly affecteth vs, that when hee hath giuen vs ſcarce the hundreth part of the ſtripes which our faults haue deſerued, hee earneth and relenteth in the bowels of his compaſſion, and thinking our correction more than enough, yea double to our ſinnes, hee pardoneth our iniquities, and graciouſly receiueth vs into his former fauour. Eſay 40.2.

§. Sect. 5.

That our afflictions are momentany, and but of ſhort continuance.

But as our afflictions are in their quantity, ſmall and light: ſo are they in their time ſhort and momentany: for though our ſins haue deſerued eternall condemnation in Hell Fire; yet God of his infinite mercy and goodneſſe, doth for the death and obedience of Ieſus Chriſt, freely remit vnto vs all thoſe euerlaſting puniſhments; and contenteth himſelfe to viſit our iniquities with ſome temporary chaſtiſements in this life, and with the rods of the children of men; not for our hurt and puniſhment, but for the amendment of our liues, and the ſaluation of our ſoules. And thus the Lord ſaith that hee will afflict the ſeed and poſterity of Dauid, but not for euer; and particularly of Salomon, that if he ſinned, he would chaſtiſe him with the rod of men, and with the plagues of the children of men; yet his mercy ſhould neuer depart from him. 1.King.11.39. 2.Sam.7.14. Yea this gracious promiſe hee maketh to his whole Church, that hee would not contend with her for euer, nor bee alwayes wroth; becauſe ſo the ſpirit would faile before him, and all mankind ſhould be deſtroyed in his diſpleaſure. Eſay 57.16. The which truth the Church by faith layeth ſure hold of, for her comfort, in her great afflictions; The Lord (ſaith ſhe) will not forſake for euer, but though he ſend affliction, yet he will haue compaſſion, according to the multitude of his mercies. Lam.3.31.32. And that not becauſe our ſinnes are few in number, or light in waight, and therefore deſerue but gentle chaſtiſements; but becauſe being a gracious Father, hee doth not puniſh willingly, nor afflict the children of men with pleaſure and delight; but rather taketh his chiefe pleaſure in exerciſing his Verſ.33.

owne nature, and in extending his mercy and goodneſſe towards repentant ſinners. And in this regard the Church cryeth out: Who is a God like vnto thee, that taketh away iniquity, and paſſeth by the tranſgreſſion of the remnant of his heritage? he retaineth not his wrath for euer, becauſe mercy pleaſeth him.

Micha.7.18.

But moſt notably doth the Pſalmiſt ſet forth this truth, of Gods moderating and ſtinting our afflictions, in his loue and mercy without any reſpect to our deſeruings.

Pſal.103.8.to 5.

The Lord (ſaith he) is full of compaſſion and mercy, ſlow to anger, and of great kindneſſe; hee will not alway chide, nor keepe his anger for euer. Hee hath not dealt with vs after our ſinnes, nor rewarded vs according to our iniquities; for as high as the Heauen is aboue the Earth, ſo great is his mercy towards them that feare him. As farre as the Eaſt is from the Weſt, ſo farre hath he remoued our ſinnes from vs. As a Father hath compaſſion on his Children, ſo hath the Lord compaſſion on them that feare him. For he knoweth whereof we be made, he remembreth that wee are but duſt. The daies of man are as graſſe, as a flower of the field, ſo flouriſheth he, &c. To the ſame purpoſe is that of the Prophet Malachi, where the Lord promiſeth to ſpare his Church and people, as a man ſpareth his owne Son, that feareth him.

Mal.3.17.

For as the louing Father accepteth of the weake endeauours, and imperfect obedience of his Childe; and when hee offendeth him, doth not long continue in his anger and diſpleaſure, but after that hee hath corrected him for his faults, that hee may not continue in them to his diſtruction, he receiueth him into his wonted fauour, that hee may not by ouermuch and too long ſeuerity become hopeleſſe and deſperate: ſo dealeth the Lord with his Children, neither cockring them in their faults, which would make them wanton and diſſolute; nor yet for euer frowning vpon them, and correcting them as their ſinnes deſerue: but moderating his iuſtice with mercy, he doth, after that by his chaſtiſements hee hath humbled them, and brought them to an hatred, and acknowledgment of their faults, withdraw his hand, lay his rod aſide, and manifeſt vnto them the wonted ſignes of his mercy and loue. In which reſpect one compareth the Lord to a skilfull muſition, who in tuning his inſtrument doth neither too much ſtretch his ſtrings, leaſt they ſhould breake, nor let them remaine too looſe and ſlacke, becauſe it would quite dull and dead their ſound and ſweetneſſe, and ſo ſpoile their muſicall harmony:

Chryſoſt. ad pop. Antiochen. homil.4. de pænitentia.

for ſo the Lord dealeth with vs; neither ſuffering vs to languiſh in continuall remiſſeneſſe, nor to bee broken, and worne out with tedious tribulation; leaſt too much eaſe ſhould make vs ſluggiſh, or too much trouble faint or deſperate.

Ier.30.11.

Yea in truth ſo farre off are our afflictions from being irkeſomely tedious, and of long continuance, that they are exceeding ſhort and momentany. For ſo the Pſalmiſt telleth vs, that God indureth but a while in his anger, but in his fauour is life. Weeping may abide at euening, but ioy commeth in the morning.

Pſal.30.5.

And with this aſſurance of hope, the people of God incourage one another to the practiſe of repentance. Come (ſay they) and let vs returne vnto the Lord; for he hath ſpoiled, and hee will heale vs, he hath wounded vs, and hee will bind vs vp. After two dayes will hee reuiue vs, and in the third day hee will raiſe vs vp, and wee ſhall liue in his ſight.

Hoſ.6.1.2.

Yea ſo ſhort is the time of theſe temporary afflictions; that the Lord reputeth it but as a moment; For a moment (ſaith he to his people) in mine anger I hid my face from thee for a little ſeaſon, but with euerlaſting mercy haue I had compaſſion on thee.

Eſay 54.8.

In regard whereof, wee may fitly ſay with the Pſalmiſt, that God hath ſhewed vs great troubles and aduerſities, but will returne and reuiue vs, ſeeing the time of their continuance is ſo ſhort, that they are rather ſhewed, than truely ſuffered: euen as the louing Father maketh ſhew only of his rod, and ſtriketh therewith his childrens coates, when his tender loue will ſcarce ſuffer him to touch their skinne.

Pſal.71.20.

§. Sect.6.
Their obie on anſwere who affirme that their a flictions ha beene long and tediou

But here ſome will ſay, To what purpoſe doe wee heare words of the breuity of our afflictions when in our owne ſenſe and experience they are long and tedious? or what comfort is this to tell vs that the afflictions of Gods Children laſt but for a moment or little ſpace, when as wee may hence conclude that wee are not in this number, ſeeing wee haue paſſed a great time in ſickneſſe, pouerty, and ſuch other miſeries? To which I anſwer, that our ſhort liues will not ſuffer vs to indure long afflictions; for they are momentany and but a ſpan long, as the Pſalmiſt ſpeaketh, and yet hee who is moſt afflicted, hath in part of this moment, ſome comfort and refreſhing.

Pſal.36.5.

If therefore wee complaine with Iacob, that our dayes are euill, in regard of the miſeries which wee haue endured, let vs acknowledge with him, that they are few alſo: and if with the Church wee complaine that all our dayes are paſt in Gods anger, and waſted away in labour and ſorrow, let vs alſo confeſſe with her, that our yeeres haue beene ſpent as a thought that our life is cut off quickly and we flie away.

Gen.47.9.

Pſal.90.9.10

It is true that in the ſenſe and feeling of our fraile fleſh theſe our ſhort afflictions doe ſeeme long and tedious; but vnto the ſpirituall man who liueth not by ſenſe but by faith, and in the expectation of euerlaſting happineſſe, his afflictions, though they ſhould laſt his whole life, would ſeeme but ſhort and momentany: ſeeing he doth not compare the time of their continuance, with the reſt of his life, which he leadeth in this World in joy and delight; but with that eternall glory, and neuer ending bleſſedneſſe which he is to inherit in the World to come. Neither doth he number the dayes of his affliction according to the preſent ſenſe and apprehenſion, of the fleſh, (which expecteth no other joy or comfort, but what it hath in the pleaſures of ſinne, and in the fruition of worldly vanities ſeeing it is deputed to mortification, and is to be wholly deſtroyed and aboliſhed by death; and therefore thinketh all this time loſt which is not ſpent in earthly delights, and euery day a yeere which bringeth with it any croſſes and afflictions, (becauſe though it bee ſhort in its ſelfe, yet in truth it is long being compared with the momentany continuance of our life vpon Earth whereof it is a great ſhare) but the faithfull man numbreth his dayes according to Gods arithmeticke, in whoſe eſtimation a thouſand yeeres are as yeſterday when it is paſt, and as a watch in the night; becauſe hee compareth this finite time with that which is infinite and euerlaſting. And therefore conſidering on the one ſide, that all his whole life is but a moment, and leſſe than the winckling of an eye, in reſpect of that eternall life and happineſſe which is to follow; and on the other ſide, that in this momentany life, he hath many comforts and refreſhings, both in regard of his outward relaxtaion from troubles, when being freed from his afflictions, hee enjoyeth the comforts of this life, and alſo in reſpect of his inward feelings through his future hopes, and the preſent conſolations of Gods Spirit and joy in the holy Ghoſt; hee is ready to conclude, that his longeſt afflictions are but very ſhort, euen a moment of a moment, ſeeing they laſt but a part of this life, which altogether is but ſhort and momentany.

CHAP. XI.

That God ſo meaſureth our afflictions vnto vs, as that they doe not exceed our ſtrength to beare them.

Sect. 1.
at our afions ex-d not our ngth prod by Scrips, and ilated by ltudes.

AND thus doth Gods loue appeare in the meaſure of our afflictions, being conſidered in themſelues both in reſpect of their quantitie and time; but yet this loue and goodneſſe of God will ſhine much more cleerely, if wee further conſider how hee meaſureth them vnto vs; firſt in that he doth not ſuffer the meaſure of our afflictions to exceed the meaſure of our ſtrength; and ſecondly, in that he proportioneth them according to the ſcanteſt meaſure of neceſſity, laying no more vpon vs, than hee is neceſſarily inforced to [illegible] impoſe, hauing herein reſpect to his owne glory and our benefit and ſaluation. Concerning the former, the Lord doth not meaſure out our afflictons according to our faults but according to our ſtrength, and looketh not what wee haue deſerued, but what wee are able to beare; for as the Prophet ſaith, in his anger hee doth remember mercy, which maketh him in all our chaſtiſements to intend our profit, and not our puniſhment. Neither doth he giue vnto all his Seruants a cup of the like ſize, or a burthen to beare of the ſame waight; but either fitteth their afflictions to the meaſure of their ſtrength, or their ſtrength to the meaſure of their afflictious, abating of the burthen becauſe it is too heauie, or adding to their power who beare it, becauſe they are too weake. Hee doth not obſerue in ſharing of afflictions an Arithmeticall proportion, giuing to all indifferently the ſame number and meaſure; but like a wiſe Geometrician hee doth proportionate and fit them to the ſtrength of the bearers, alotting a greater burthen to the ſtrongeſt, and a leſſe to the weakeſt. In which reſpect hee is ſaid to correct vs, in judgement, becauſe he wiſely diſcerneth (not only who deſerueth moſt correction, but alſo) of their ſtrength and abilitity who are to beare his chaſtiſements; which not being obſerued, in ſtead of loading them, he ſhould ouerwhelme them, and in ſtead of amending them, he ſhould deſtroy them. But this truth will more manifeſtly appeare, both by the Scriptures, and by reaſon it ſelfe grounded vpon them. For in the Word of God wee haue an expreſſe promiſe, made by him who is faithfull and true, and neither can nor will deceiue vs, that the Lord will not ſuffer vs to be tempted aboue that wee are able, but will giue the iſſue with the temptation, that we may be able to beare it. And euen reaſon it ſelfe inlightned by the Scriptures will teach vs, that it can bee no otherwiſe, if we conſider who is the author of our afflictions. For firſt they proceed from God our heauenly Father, whoſe wiſedome is infinite, and whoſe loue is incomprehenſible; and therefore if earthly parents out of their ſmall modell of loue, and little pittance of affection, guided and directed with their ſhallow judgement, and diſcretion, doe not giue vnto all their children the like meaſure of chaſtiſement, though they bee alike guilty of the ſame fault; but haue reſpect to their age and bigneſſe, giuing leſſe to the yongeſt and weakeſt, and more to thoſe who are older & of greater ſtrength: becauſe if they ſhould receiue theſe greater ſtripes, they would (exceeding their ſtrength) make them dull or deſperate; and if theſe ſhould haue their lighter chaſtiſements, they would hereby grow careleſſe and negligent; how much more then will the Habac.3.2.

Ier.10.24. 30.11.

1.Cor.10.13.

Lord, ſo farre exceeding them in loue and wiſedome, thus proportionate his chaſtiſements to the ſtrength of his Children; not puniſhing his babes in Chriſt, and thoſe of riper age in the ſame meaſure; but correcting them with ſuch gentleneſſe, that they may bee amended and not oppreſſed, and theſe with ſuch ſeuerity that they may lay them to heart, and not for their lightneſſe ſcorne and contemne them; ſeeing he doth not in his chaſtiſements ayme at the ſatisfying of his juſtice by puniſhing the fault, but doth all out of meere loue for the reformation of the offender? Againe the Lord is our heauenly Phyſition, who hath vndertaken to cure vs of our corruptions; and afflictions are the potion which hee hath prepared for the effecting of the cure; and therefore if wee ſo farre truſt earthly phyſitions whom wee thinke faithfull and skilfull, that for the recouery of our bodily health, wee dare aduenture to drinke the potions which they haue appointed, being perſwaded that they will haue reſpect to our conſtitution and preſent condition, and not giue vs a medicine aboue our ſtrength; notwithſtanding that common experience telleth vs, that they themſelues for want of skill are often deceiued, and ſomtime for want of care or honeſty are ready to deceiue: then how much more willingly ſhould wee for the health of our ſoules, receiue this potion of afflictions prepared by our heauenly Phyſition, ſeeing wee can make no queſtion either of his skill, loue or faithfulneſſe; and therefore may bee aſſured that in making this medicine he will haue reſpect to our ſtrength and ability, and will ſo correct this poyſon of affliction before hee doe giue it, that it will cure and not kill vs; and though it make vs ſicke for the preſent euen to the death, as we imagine, yet wee ſhall finde in the euent, that it will not hurt vs, but onely by working thus effectually, will purge away the noyſome humors of ſinne. Hee is alſo our King, and Emperour, who hauing preſſed vs to the ſpirituall Warfare, guideth and directeth vs in all our wayes, and allotteth vnto euery of his Souldiers their office, place, imployment and enterpriſes; and therefore if euen earthly commanders both in their diſcretion and loue to their ſouldiers, fit their imployments according to their abilities, appointing the ſtronger and valianter for attempts of greateſt difficulty and danger, and the weaker and fainter to more eaſie ſeruices; how much more will the great Commander of Heauen and Earth, out of his infinite wiſdome, loue and care, appoint vnto euery of his Souldiers whom hee hath preſſed out to fight in this battaile of afflictions, a fit taske for their vndertaking; and allot fit imployments both in reſpect of labour and danger for the ſtrength of thoſe which are deſigned to them? To conclude, if wee ſee all who are wiſe and juſt, to haue this regard, not to oppreſſe their inferiours with labors, but to fit their imployments according to their abilities, if no good ſchoolemaſter will appoint his ſcholar longer or hardor leſſons than they can learne, nor correct them with more or greater ſtripes than is fit for their age; but obſerue a proportion and meaſure, both in their inſtructions and corrections, according to their ſeuerall capacities to conceiue or ſtrength to beare and endure; if no good Maſter will appoint his Seruants a greater burthen than they can cary, but allot the heauieſt to the ſtrongeſt, and the lighteſt to the weakeſt; yea if a good man be mercifull to his beaſt fitting his load to his ſtrength, and not oppreſſing him with more than hee can beare; how much more may we be aſſured that the Lord will be more carefull ouer his owne Children, in proportioning their burthen to their ſtrength, that they may not ſinke vnder the waight of their afflictions, eſpecially conſidering that hee perfectly knoweth their power and ability, and can as eaſily adde to their ſtrength, as detract from their burthen.

2.Pet.2.9.

§. Sect.

That Chri

Ieſus tempe

reth our c and there we may be a ſured that will fit it to ſtrength.

Secondly God the Father hath committed the tempering of our cup vnto Chriſt our Sauiour, who as hee hath manifeſted his loue vnto vs in giuing his life as the price of our redemption; and in not thinking thoſe precious dainties too deare for vs, euen his body to bee our meate and his blood our drinke, that by them wee may be nouriſhed to euerlaſting life; ſo hath hee no leſſe skill in tempering a cup fit for our ſtrength, and the curing of our ſpirituall diſeaſes, not only as being our creatour who knoweth whereof we bee made, and remembreth that wee are but duſt; but alſo as being our mediator, hee had experience both of the cup which he tempereth for vs, and of our weakneſſe and infirmities who are to drinke it. For himſelfe hath begun to vs of this cup of afflictions, as it was tempered for him by his heauenly Father, and did not onely taſt or ſip of it, but drinke it off to the very bottome: and herein alone the difference is betweene his cup and ours, in that his was farre bigger, and the potion much more bitter and diſtaſtfull, ours leſſer, and leſſe vnpleaſant and loathſome; his was giuen vnto him in anger for the purging away of our puniſhment in reſpect of ſinne paſt, but ours in loue, either to bee a profitable potion to purge and cleanſe our bodies and ſoules from their preſent corruptions, or to bee a preſeruatiue to preuent the contagious diſeaſes of ſinne for the time to come. And as hee hath good experience of our medicine, ſo alſo of our weakneſſe and frailty: for as he hath drunke of our cup, ſo likewiſe alſo hee hath borne our infirmities, and carried our ſorrowes, and being ſicke of our ſins which as our ſurety he tooke vpon him, he was alſo ſmitten with our plagues, wounded for our tranſgreſſions, and broken for our iniquities. Neither haue we an high Prieſt which cannot be touched with the feeling of our infirmities, but hee was in all things tempted in like ſort, yet without ſinne, as the Apoſtle ſpeaketh. And therefore as thoſe who are pitifull and mercifull in their owne nature, doe take the greateſt compaſſion, and doe moſt commiſerate them who are afflicted with thoſe griefes and diſeaſes vnto which themſelues haue beene formerly ſubject: ſo may we aſſure our ſelues, that our Sauiour Chriſt, who hath had the feeling of our ſickneſſes and infirmities, and hath taſted ſufficiently of theſe loathſome drugs of affliction, which are now miniſtred vnto vs, doth compaſſionate our griefes, and hath a fellow-feeling in our miſeries: and therefore hauing the mixing of our cup committed vnto him, hee will haue regard to our ability, and not make it ſo loathſome, but that we may well take it: and hauing all power committed alſo vnto him, hee will helpe our infirmities, and giue ſuch ſtrength vnto vs in our greateſt weakneſſe, that wee ſhall bee able to take ſo much of this vnpleaſant Phyſicke, as is fit for the recouery of our ſpirituall health. And hereof it is that the Apoſtle hauing taught vs that Chriſt our High Prieſt was touched with our infirmities, and tempted like vnto vs, maketh this the ground of our faith in all our troubles, and encourageth vs hereby to goe boldly vnto the throne of grace, that we may obtaine mercy, and find grace to helpe in time of need. So elſewhere hee telleth vs, that it behoued our Sauiour to be like vnto his brethren, that hee might be a mercifull and faithfull high Prieſt, &c. for in that himſelfe hath ſuffered, being tempted, hee is able to ſuccour them that are tempted, and that now hee can haue compaſſion on the ignorant, and on them that are out of the way, becauſe he himſelfe alſo hath beene compaſſed with infirmity. And therefore we need not now to feare either to bee oppreſſed with an ouer-heauy waight of troubles and afflictions, or that we ſhould be tempted aboue our power, in regard of our frailty and infirmity, ſeeing he who maketh the wounds, hath alſo power to cure them, & he that mixeth our cup, can alſo giue vs ſtrength to drink it, according to the ſaying of Eliphaz vnto Iob, Hee maketh the wound, and he bindeth it vp, he ſmiteth and his hands make whole. Hee ſhall deliuer thee in ſixe troubles, and in the ſeauenth the euill ſhall not touch thee, &c. And hee hath alſo bound himſelfe by his moſt gracious promiſe, that hee will not breake the bruiſed reed, nor quench the ſmoaking flax, till hee bring forth iudgement vnto victory.

Pſal. 103.1

§. Sect. 3. That the holy Ghoſt is preſent with vs & powerfully aſſiſteth & comforteth vs in al our afflictions.

Thirdly, God the Holy Ghoſt is alwayes preſent with the faithfull in all their afflictions and tribulations, ſupporting their impotency with his might, and manifeſting his greateſt ſtrength in their greateſt weakneſſe; ſo that though their tentations are grieuous and manifold, yet are they alwayes enabled both to beare and ouercome them. It is true indeed that the Lord ſuffereth the faithfull to run into deſperate dangers, and in the ſenſe and feeling of the fleſh, to be almoſt ouer-whelmed with the vnſupportable waight of their afflictions: as wee ſee in the example of Dauid, Iob, Elias, the Diſciples of our Sauiour, who were almoſt couered with waues before they were freed out of danger; and in the whole Church grieuouſly afflicted in Egypt, and in moſt deſperate danger at the Red Sea, the former making them cry out in ſenſe of paine, the other in expectation of greater euils; but moſt plainly in the example of Chriſt himſelfe, who was ſo loded with afflictions, that drops of bloud were preſſed out of him, and ſo oppreſſed with the vnſupportable waight of the euils which he ſuffered, that ſpeaking according to his preſent ſenſe and feeling, he complayneth in agony of ſpirit, that he was left and forſaken of God. And all this may well ſtand with the truth of Gods Word; for hee hath promiſed, not that wee ſhall not be ſorely loaden with an heauy waight of affliction; but only that we ſhall not be oppreſſed and ouer-whelmed; not that wee ſhall eſcape the aſſaults of terrible enemies, or neuer be foiled in the fight, but that in the end wee ſhall obtaine the victory; not that wee ſhall be freed from tentations of any kinde, yea, euen of the higheſt and moſt dangerous nature, but that we ſhall not be tempted aboue our power, but ſhall haue a good iſſue with the tentation, ſo as wee ſhall be able to beare it. And thus the Lord is as good as his promiſe, when as loading vs with the greateſt waight of afflictions, he giueth vnto vs an anſwerable meaſure of ſtrength, whereby wee are enabled to beare and ouercome them; the which he neuer faileth to doe vnto his faithfull children who truſt and depend vpon him. So that in their greateſt afflictions they may ſay with Dauid: The Lord hath chaſtned me ſore, but he hath not deliuered me to death; & with the Apoſtle Paul, we are afflicted on euery ſide, yet are we not in diſtreſſe; in pouerty, but not ouercome of pouerty, we are perſecuted but not forſaken, caſt downe but we periſh not. Not that wee haue any ſtrength in our ſelues to endure the fiery tryall, or to reſiſt the violence of theſe cruell enemies, but becauſe in our greateſt weakeneſſe wee are ſupported with the power of Gods might, and held ſo faſt by the hand of Chriſt, that the ſtrongeſt afflictions inforced with all the violence of Sathans temptations, are

Matth. 8.24.
Exod. 2.23. & 14.10.
1. Cor. 10.13.
Pſal. 118.18.
2. Cor. 4.8, 9.
Iohn 10.28.

are not able to pull vs from him. So that notwithſtanding our greateſt calamities, and little ſtrength, wee may reſt perſwaded with the Apoſtle, that neither tribulation, anguiſh, perſecution, famine, nakedneſſe, perill, ſword, nor any thing elſe, ſhall be able to ſeparate vs from the loue of Chriſt.

Rom. 8. 35.

For firſt the Spirit of God dwelling in vs doth according to the greatnes of our outward afflictions, giue vs an anſwerable meaſure of inward conſolation; ſo that where there are great croſſes, there alſo are great comforts: and when God ſendeth an extraordinary meaſure of worldly miſeries, which in reſpect of our owne ſtrength would, in trying, tire vs, he ſendeth alſo an extraordinary meaſure of ſpirituall refreſhings, and comfortable feelings of his loue, which make our intolerable burthen to become light and eaſie; of which the Apoſtle ſheweth that he had good experience, where he ſaith, that as the ſufferings of Chriſt abound in vs, ſo our conſolation aboundeth through Chriſt.

2. Cor. 1. 5.

Whereupon hee profeſſeth his hope that the afflicted Corinthians ſhould bee made partakers of the ſame comforts. And our hope is ſtedfaſt (ſaith he) concerning you, knowing that as you are partakers of the ſufferings; ſo ſhall yee be alſo of the conſolation.

Verſe 7.

The like experience of theſe inward conſolations had the Prophet Dauid, In the multitude (ſaith he) of my thoughts within me, thy comforts delight my ſoule.

Pſal. 94. 19.

All which inward comfort and conſolation wee haue from the holy Spirit of God dwelling and raigning in vs, whileſt it doth apply vnto vs the mercies of God, and merits of Chriſt, and ſo aſſuring vs that wee haue our part and intereſt in all the gracious promiſes of the Goſpell, which either concerne this life or the life to come, doth repleniſh our conſciences with ſuch peace as paſſeth all vnderſtanding, and with ſuch vnſpeakable joy and gladneſſe, as none conceiue but they who feele it.

Iohn 4. 14.
Iohn 7. 38.

For it is the water of the Spirit which like a liuing fountaine euer ſpringeth in vs vnto euerlaſting life, and like a cleere riuer floweth with the heauenly ſtreames of ſweet conſolation, wherein being bathed and waſhed, in the ſcorching heat of afflictions and perſecutions, we are preſently cooled and refreſhed, and ſo filled with joy and delight, according to that of the Pſalmiſt, There is a riuer whoſe ſtreames ſhall make glad the Citie of God, the holy place of the Tabernacles of the moſt high.

Pſal. 46. 4.

It is this ſpirituall anointing and heauenly Oile, which preſerueth vs from being conſumed in this fiery furnace of affliction, and wherewith being anointed after we are ſcorched with theſe flames, our ſores are ſuppled, and the fiery heate of the burning ſo extracted and drawne out, that wee receiue no more hurt thereby, than Moſes buſh, which in burning was not conſumed; or the three children in the fiery furnace, whoſe very haires were not touched with the violence of the flames. So that though we were depriued of all worldly comforts, yet haue we no cauſe to be faint in our afflictions; or to ſhew impatiency in our greateſt griefes, as long as wee haue this inward comforter to refreſh and cheere vs: for the conſolations of God ſhould not ſeeme ſmall vnto vs as Eliphas ſpeaketh, ſeeing they ſo farre exceed all earthly delights; neither ſhould wee be dejected in our minds though wee want theſe earthly ſhadowes, when as wee are repleniſhed with this heauenly ſubſtance.

Iob 15. 11.

§. Sect. 4. That Gods Spirit gi vnto vs ſtrength to beare our a flictions.

But as the afflictions of the faithfull, though neuer ſo vnſupportable, are made tolerable with the conſolations of Gods Spirit, ſo alſo by that vigour and ſtrength which it miniſtreth vnto them: for this holy Spirit which is the ſtrong power of God, doth ſo comfort by ſtrengthening, and ſo ſtrengthen by comforting them, that though they are in themſelues moſt weake and feeble, yet being ſupported with this diuine might, the heauieſt waight of troubles and calamities ſhall not oppreſſe and ouerwhelme them. And this the Prophet Eſay plainly teacheth vs. He giueth ſtrength (ſaith hee) to him that fainteth, and to him that hath no ſtrength he increaſeth power: ſo that though young men who are in their chiefeſt vigour, being weary doe ſtumble and fall, yet they who waite on the Lord ſhall renew their ſtrength; they ſhall mount vp with wings as Eagles, they ſhall run and not be weary, and walke and not be faint.

Eſay 40. 29, 30, 31.

So the Pſalmiſt pronounceth him bleſſed who conſidereth the poore, becauſe the Lord will either deliuer him in the time of trouble, or elſe at leaſt wil ſtrengthen him vpon the bed of languiſhing, & wil make all his bed in his ſicknes.

Pſal. 41. 1. 2.

And the Apoſtle aſſureth vs, that becauſe the Lord is faithfull in keeping his promiſes, hee will ſtabliſh vs, when wee are ready to ſtagger, and keepe vs from euill, either that it may not touch vs, or may not hurt vs.

2. Theſ. 3. 3.

According to that of the Pſalmiſt; Thou ſhalt walke vpon the Lion and Aſpe, the young Lion and Dragon ſhalt thou tread vnder thy feet. Becauſe hee hath loued me therefore will I deliuer him, &c. Hee ſhall call vpon mee, and I will heare him, I will be with him in trouble, I will deliuer and glorifie him.

Pſal. 91. 13. 1

In regard of which helpe and aſſiſtance which wee haue from God, he would haue vs to lay aſide all feare and cowardize, and to bee bolde and couragious in all our dangers and diſtreſſes. Feare thou not (ſaith hee) for I am with thee, be not afraid for I am thy God: I will ſtrengthen and helpe thee, and will ſuſtaine thee with the right hand of my righteouſneſſe. And againe, I the Lord thy God will hold thy right hand, ſaying vnto thee, feare not, I will helpe thee. Feare not thou worme Iacob, and yee men of Iſrael, I will helpe ſaith the Lord and thy Redeemer, the holy one of Iſrael. And vn-

Eſay 41. 10, 13, 14.

to this ſtrength of confidence and vndaunted feare, the faithfull doe attaine, as we may ſee in the example of Dauid, who profeſſeth, that though hee ſhould walke through the valley of the ſhadow of death, he would feare no euill, becauſe God was with him, and his rod and ſtaffe did comfort him: neither could he be dejected with the rod of his corrections, ſo long as he was ſtrengthened and vpheld with the ſtaffe of his conſolations. And thus the whole Church and people of God profeſſe, that being by faith, and their manifold experience aſſured, that God was their hope and ſtrength, and helpe in troubles, ready to be found, therefore they would not feare, though the earth were remoued, and though the mountaines ſhould fall into the middeſt of the Sea, though the waters thereof ſhould rage and ſwell, and the Mountaines ſhake with the ſwelling thereof, &c. By all which it appeareth, that God dealeth with his children in their afflictions, as with Iacob in wraſtling with him; for as in outward ſhew hee did ſeeme to contend and ſtriue with him, as though hee deſired to foyle and ouerthrow him, ſo indeed and truth hee gaue vnto him all that ſtrength whereby hee was enabled to ſtand, and in the end to ouercome: for ſo no ſooner doth the Lord by ſending afflictions ſeeme to contend with vs, and to deſire to ouerthrow and caſt vs downe, but preſently he inableth vs with the ſtrength and aſſiſtance of his holy Spirit to ouercome in this conflict; and as ſoone as we are ready to ſtagger he ſtayeth vs from falling, and when we haue receiued a foyle, he rayſeth vs vp again, till at laſt we preuaile in the conflict and obtayne his bleſſing. Neither can our weaknes be any hinderance to our victory ſeeing wee ſtand not by our owne ſtrength, but by the power of God aſſiſting vs, which is more manifeſted in our weakneſſe, and magnified in our frailty and infirmity. And as the tender mother teaching her yong or ſicke child to goe doth oftentimes ſeeme to leaue him to his owne ſtrength, when as in truth he goeth by her helpe ſupporting him; and to let him alone to his own care and prouidence, when as in the meane time ſhe hath a watchfull eye ouer him, ſo that hee is no ſooner ready to fall, but with nimble ſpeed ſhee catcheth hold of him, and preuents his danger: ſo doth the Lord deale with vs his children, whilſt in our nonage & greateſt weaknes, he teacheth vs to go in this rough path of afflictions, which leadeth to his Kingdom; for when he ſeemeth to neglect vs, he watcheth ouer vs: & when in our ſenſe & feeling hee leaueth vs to our ſelues, euen then hee ſtayeth vs by his ſtrength; & when we are in greateſt danger of ſinking & falling, he ſtretcheth out with ſpeed his powerfull hand, & preſerueth vs from receiuing any harme. An example whereof we haue in Dauid: who profeſſeth that if the Lord had not holpen him, his ſoule had almoſt dwelt in ſilence, but when (ſaith he) I ſaid, my foot ſlideth, thy mercy, O Lord, ſtayed me vp.

23,4.

46,1,2,3.

32.

12,9.

94,17,18.

§. *Sect.*5.
That God mingleth comforts and benefits with our afflictions and croſſes.

And thus are wee both comforted and ſtrengthened, with Gods holy Spirit, ſo as our afflictions cannot oppreſſe and ouerwhelme vs, though they bee neuer ſo great and manifold, and wee neuer ſo weake and impotent in our owne ſtrength. Vnto which we may further adde, that the Lord in his infinite loue towards vs, doth not content himſelfe to haue giuen vnto his children, this inward ſtrength and comfort in their afflictions; but alſo in their greateſt extremities, he giueth them the fruition of many outward benefits, joyning comforts with his croſſes, bleſſings with miſeries, blandiſhments with chaſtiſements, and good things with euill; ſo that in our greateſt mourning, wee neuer want matter of joy, and thankſgiuing. For as the Lord in his infinite wiſedome hath made ſuch a mixture of things in this life, that as there is no man ſo aboundeth and flouriſheth in worldly proſperity, but that he hath ſome croſſes and afflictions in his greateſt jollity; ſo there is no man ſo dejected and ouer-whelmed with troubles and calamities, but he hath ſome comforts and refreſhing. As no man is ſo loaded with benefits, as that he is in all reſpects happy, without any taſte of miſery; ſo there is none ſo oppreſſed with afflictions, that he is euery way miſerable, without any taſte of this earthly happineſſe. And this mixture the wiſe Iudge of Heauen and Earth hath made, to keepe vs in a meane, who are too prone to run into extreames; and becauſe wee would bee too much exalted with continual proſperity, and too much dejected if wee ſhould feele nothing but miſery, and affliction; the Lord neuer ſuffereth vs ſo to abound with worldly happineſſe, but that we haue ſomething to humble vs, nor ſo to bee plunged in miſery and affliction, but that wee haue ſome cauſe of preſent comfort, or future hope. And like a wiſe Father he doth not too much dandle vs, which would make vs wantons; nor alwayes beate vs, which would make vs deſperate; but he judiciouſly mingleth the one with the other, not letting vs haue our wils in all things, leſt wee ſhould neglect him; nor yet alwayes croſſing vs in them, leſt wee ſhould hate and rebell againſt him; nor alwayes cockering vs, leſt wee ſhould grow proud and inſolent, nor alwayes correcting vs, leſt wee ſhould become baſe and ſeruile; but hee giueth gifts, that wee may loue him, and ſtripes, that wee may feare him. Yea oftentimes he mixeth frowns with his fauours, when they make vs malepart; and kind ſpeeches with his rebukes and chaſtiſements, to ſhew in the hatred of our faults, his loue to our perſons, when he ſeeth vs humble and penitent, that ſo he may make vs in all things to re-

Nil adeò fortuna grauis, miſerabile fecit, vt minuant nulla gaudia parte malum, Ouid.4 Pont, Eleg.4.

reuerence him, and no leſſe to feare him in his fauours, than to loue him in his chaſtiſements. And as the wiſe Captaine and Commander doth not alwayes tire and weare out his Seruants, with long marches, weariſome watchings, & fierce skirmiſhes and aſſaults; but after their tedious labours bringeth them into Garriſons, that taking their reſt and repoſe, and refreſhing themſelues with wholſome diet, good lodging, and pleaſant recreations, they may renew their ſtrength and courage, and afterwards be more fit for ſeruice and imployment: ſo dealeth our great Commaunder with vs, in this ſpirituall warfare, giuing vnto vs a breathing time after our fight, reſt after our labours, recreation after ſorrowes, and after troubles and afflictions, comforts and refreſhings; that ſo hauing recouered our ſtrength, and taken new courage vnto vs, wee may the better bee inabled to doe him further ſeruice. Yea hee doth not onely interchangeably let one of theſe ſucceed the other, but like a prudent generall hee intermixeth them together, giuing vnto them in the time of their greateſt labours, ſome reſt, and in their ſharpeſt conflicts and encounters with afflictions, ſome breathing, and refreſhing; euen as contrariwiſe hee doth not, when they are in the garriſon of proſperity ſuffer them to languiſh in idlenes, and to ſpend their whole time in eating, drinking, pleaſure, & delight, which would effeminate their mindes, and make them vnfit for ſeruice; but ſometimes inureth them to labour, watching, and warlike exerciſes, for the preſeruing of their ſtrength, and manlike courage. To this purpoſe one ſaith, that God in gouerning the World, doth now ſend one thing, and then an other, and doth not at all times grant proſperity, nor alwaies inflict trouble, and aduerſity; but as there is in nature a viciſſitude, and intercourſe of all things, Day following Night, and Night Day; Summer Winter, and Winter Summer: ſo euen in vs, ſorrow, and pleaſure, ſickneſſe, and health, haue their turnes, and changes. And therefore wee ſhould not thinke ſickneſſe ſtrange, for then by the ſame reaſon we ſhould think it ſtrange alſo when we haue our health; nor bee much moued when ſorrow commeth; for then wee ſhould be alike troubled at the approach of joy: becauſe, in courſe of nature, theſe doe follow one the other, &c. Neither now ſay, that this is no comfort vnto thee, who alwayes liueſt in miſery, and affliction, ſeeing hereby thou ſhalt but bewray thy vnthankfulneſſe, and forgetfulnes of Gods bleſſings; for no man can be alwayes in griefe, neither will our nature beare it: but becauſe wee deſire to ſpend all our time in pleaſure and delight, therefore we think the ſhorteſt griefes, to be (as it were) an age of ſorrow. Beſides, thoſe things which are good and delightfull, doe when they are paſt, eaſily ſlip out of memory, but that which is euill and grieuous maketh ſuch a deepe impreſſion, that though it be paſt, yet it is neuer forgotten. Euen the weary hireling, and the idle Gentleman, the King, and Captiue haue both their comforts, and their croſſes. For hee oftentimes in his priſon, hath his pleaſures, laughing, leaping, and playing to expreſſe his mirth; and the other, vnder his Crowne hath his cares, and many a pang vnder his purple robe, ſorrowing, ſhaking, carking, and dying, for feare of dying. So that there is no mans life, eyther without paine, or pleaſure, matter of mirth, or cauſe of mourning, the which mixture, the Lord hath made for our profit and benefit, if wee had eyes to ſee it, or grace to acknowledge it; for we could neuer well relliſh theſe diſhes of proſperity, vnleſſe they were ſeaſoned with afflictions, and made pleaſing to our palates, with theſe ſharpe ſawces; we would take no delight in the day of joy, vnleſſe the darke night of ſorrow went before it; nor eſteeme of health, if we were neuer ſicke; nor thinke plenty a benefit, vnleſſe we were ſometimes pinched with want and penury. Neither is the value of any of Gods benefits knowne in the fruition, but in their want. Delicates would not delight vs, if they were not dainty; neither do we account any thing rare in excellency; vnleſſe withall it be rare in vſe. Euen continuall pleaſure would diſpleaſe vs, and ſweetneſſe it ſelfe without change, or mixture, would become as lothſome as gal or wormewood. Perpetuall eaſe, is worſe than weariſome labour; and according to the Prouerbe; Hee had need to haue ſtrong bones that beareth the waight of continuall proſperity. For it is a kind of miſery, neuer to haue taſted miſery; and no more delight to abound alwayes in pleaſure, and plenty, than it is to haue alwayes a ful ſtomack: ſeeing we ſurfet of this ſaciety, & are more dangerouſly ſicke, being pampered with theſe worldly dainties, than when wee vſe the moſt ſpare diet. And therefore it is in mercy, that the Lord mingleth our proſperity with aduerſitie; ſeeing by the want of earthly benefits, he doth but whet our ſtomackes, and ſharpen our appetites, that after when we haue them, we may feed on them with more delight. For our health is ſweetned, and endeared by our ſickneſſe, our plenty with our want, our liberty by our reſtraint, our reſt by our labour, and the hauing our wils, by our ſometimes wanting of them.

Chryſoſt. in Matth. 16. Homil. 54.

Oportet oſſ robuſta, qu rant dieb

§. Sect. 6
Their obie on anſwered,
who affirme,
that their croſſes doe exceed thei comforts.

But here ſome will ſay, that howſoeuer there might be ſome pleaſure or profit in an equall mixture of proſperity, and affliction; or when wee haue a little ſowre to relliſh all our ſweet; yet there is no great comfort, when the ſawce exceeds the meat; neither can I find any place for patience in mine afflictions, flictions, ſeeing I haue ſo many croſſes; for ſo few comforts, and a pound of miſery, for a dramme of delight. To whom I anſwere, that theſe complaints ariſe from the corrupt fleſh, which is ſo wholly intent vpon that preſent ſmart which it feeleth, that it vtterly forgetteth all Gods bleſſings, and benefits, which wee either haue formerly enjoyed in time paſt, or doe enjoy, in and after our afflictions; and through impatience, robbeth vs of thoſe comforts which God hath giuen vs; which if they were duly pondred in the ballance of an vnpartiall judgement, they would not only counterpoyſe, but euen much ouer-weigh the cauſes of our griefes. Wherein we are not vnfitly compared vnto flies, who leaue all the ſound fleſh, though of farre greater quantity, and ſeeke out only ſores to ſucke in; or vnto little children, who if any of their many delights be taken from them, in their peeuiſhnes and diſcontent caſt away all the reſt, and fall a crying: for ſo in our frowardneſſe and impatiency, if we haue not all we can deſire, we thinke that we haue nothing; and if God croſſe vs in any one benefit, by taking it from vs, wee are ready to croſſe our ſelues in all the reſt; caſting them away by contempt, or careleſſe neglect, when as they ſhould ſerue as comforts to moderate our griefe. And being reſolued to torment our ſelues with exceſſiue ſorrow, wee voluntarily forget all the good things which wee enjoy, and imploy all our wit to inuent and find out arguments, to juſtifie our griefe; that ſo wee may haue ſome reaſon for our madneſſe; and to aggrauate the cauſes of our diſcontent with many circumſtances, that according to the greatneſſe thereof, we may alſo inlarge our ſorrowes, and haue ſome pretext for our exceſſiue mourning. Like vnto thoſe who being foule by nature, do paint their faces, that they may be faire by art, and ſo may be liked of others, who are deceiued with their falſe beauty; or (if the deceit being diſcerned, they appeare hereby more vgly to their judgement, than amiable to their eye) they may at leaſt pleaſe themſelues, who are willing to be deceiued, with theſe adulterate, and adulterous colours, that they may increaſe their loue and liking to their owne perſons: for ſo theſe paſſionate mourners, being in loue with their ſorrowes, and knowing that they are vgly and monſtrous when they are immoderate, they paint and ſet them out with falſe colours, that therby they may procure others approbation of them, or elſe fit them for their owne liking. And remouing out of ſight all Gods bleſſings and benefits they ſtill enjoy, which would be ſo many arguments to conuince them of folly, in their impatient ſorrow; and ſo many blots and aſperſions to blemiſh the counterfeite beauty of their painted griefe, they doe by all meanes amplifie, and aggrauate their croſſes, and if they bee not heauy enough of themſelues to preſſe them downe, they will increaſe their waight by calling to remembrance all their miſeries paſt, and by feare will anticipate all that are to come.

§. Sect. 8. That wee muſt comfort our ſelues in afflictions, by conſidering what benefits we do ſtill enjoy.

Such fondlings, it is hard to weane from this lothſome loue; becauſe they wilfully ſtop their eares againſt all conſolations, and therfore muſt for a time haue leaue to whip themſelues, with theſe rods of their own making; till ſenſe of paine haue brought them out of this fit of frenzie, and made them more capable of reaſon and perſwaſion, and till being wearied with their owne waywardneſſe they become wiſer, & more deſirous of their owne good. But if we haue any deſire in the time of our afflictions to haue our ſorrowfull ſoules refreſhed with true comfort, and to endure Gods fatherly chaſtiſements with patience and thankefulneſſe: let vs not fixe our eyes only vpon our preſent troubles, and turne them away from all causes of comfort, which God offereth vnto vs in the middeſt of our miſeries: neither let our minds be only intent vpon the euils which afflict vs, to aggrauate them in our conceite and apprehenſion, that with them we may increaſe our ſorrowes; but let vs rather exerciſe them in meditating vpon the manifold & great bleſſings which wee haue receiued from God in time paſt, vpon thoſe alſo which we preſently enjoy, and vpon ſuch as we expect in the time to come. For, there is no faithfull man, though for the preſent neuer ſo miſerable, who hath not had the fruition of many of Gods fauours in former times; the which he may to his comfort enjoy by a gratefull remembrance, not taking occaſion thereby to aggrauate his griefes, by calling to minde what hee hath loſt, but rather to renew his joy in himſelfe and thankfulneſſe towards God, by thinking how long hee did enjoy them. As wee may ſee in the example of Iob, who in his greateſt extreamities armed his patience, with the rememremembrance of thoſe manifold bleſſings which hee had receiued from God in former times; Shall we (ſaith he) receiue good at the hand of God, and not receiue euill? Yea there is no man ſo ouer-whelmed with miſeries, but that if it would pleaſe him to number them, hee might find as many of Gods mercies to ſet againſt them, which might ſerue to counterpoyſe the weight of his afflictions, and as much raiſe him with joy and comfort, as hee is dejected with griefe and heauineſſe. Thou art troubled with ſickneſſe; but thou haſt ſufficient wealth to prouide diet, phyſicke and other neceſſaries. Thou art weake and of a tender nature, but thou enjoyeſt ſuch a competency, as may maintaine thee without any great labour. Thou art poore in eſtate; but thou haſt thine health & ſtrength, whereby thou art inabled to take ſuch paines as may earne thy liuing. Thou haſt a troubled minde; but thou haſt a ſtrong body, or many friends which refreſh thee with their comforts. Thou haſt a weake body; but thou haſt a couragious heart. Thou haſt no goods nor meanes of getting them; but thou haſt ſome friends which take care of thee. Thou art deſtitute of friends; but thou art able to liue of thy ſelfe without their helpe. Thou haſt ſome bad children which grieue thee; but thou haſt ſome other good which do delight thee: or, thou haſt a vertuous wife which may ſupply the defect of all other comforts. Thou art vexed with miſeries all the day, one griefe purſuing another; but thou haſt reſt in the night, and when ſleepe commeth thy ſorrowes vaniſh. In a word, God vexeth vs not with a continuall feauer of afflictions, but onely with ſome Ague fits, which haue a good day as well as a bad; or at leaſt haue many intermiſſions, if they be quotidian. He doth not ſuffer theſe ſpirituall enemies ſo continually to aſſault vs, but that hee granteth vnto vs many breathing times to recouer our ſtrength; and if hee ſuffer them to giue vs great blowes, he giueth vs alſo ſtrong armour to beare them off. Hee will not depriue vs of all his benefits at once, but if he cauſe the Sunne of our chiefe joy to ſet, hee will make it to riſe againe (as it were) the next day, and in the meane time he will ſupply the abſence of this our great light, with the innumerable ſtarres of leſſer comforts. Yea (as I ſaid) hee ſo intermixeth comforts with our croſſes that wee neuer haue ſuch cauſe of griefe, but that wee haue as much cauſe of gladneſſe. Thus hee taketh away a good mother from Iſaac, but hee comforteth him in his loſſe by giuing him a vertuous wife: thus when Leah was deſpiſed he made her fruitfull; and when Rachel and Hannah were barren, hee comforteth them in their Husbands loue. Thus Dauid, when he ſerued a malicious King who ſought his life, was recompenced in the loue of a gracious Prince, who was as carefull to preſerue him, as his father violent in ſeeking his deſtruction; and when he was vexed with vngracious ſonnes, he was comforted in the loue of moſt faithfull ſeruants. And therefore, when as wee ſtill enjoy from God ſo many benefits with our croſſes, let vs not ſo wholy be taken vp in thinking on our afflictions, as that we neuer meditate vpon Gods bleſſings joyned with them: for this is but like the Leach, to feed vpon corrupted bloud, and to leaue that which is pure and ſound; or like the fooliſh Merchant of whom Plutarch ſpeaketh, who reſerued all his good Wine for the vſe of others, and drunke himſelfe that which was palled, & no better than vineger: but let vs think vpon that which is left, as wel as vpon that which is loſt, and not vexe our ſelues for that which we haue not, but enjoy with comfort that which we haue. For otherwiſe though wee profeſſe Chriſtianity, wee ſhall come ſhort of the wiſdome which was in the Heathen Philoſopher, who hauing loſt one of his foure goodly Mannours, ſaid vnto one who ſeemed much to condole his loſſe; Doeſt thou not know, that whereas thy ſelfe haſt but one little Farme, I haue three faire Mannors ſtill remayning? Which being acknowledged by the party, he further demanded: why then he ſhould not rather condole with him, for hauing but one, than the other with him, who was Lord of ſo many. Finally, as we haue had, and haue, many good things before and in the time of our afflictions, which may ſerue as comforts to lighten our calamities: So may wee alſo refreſh our fainting minds, in aſſurance of hope, & in the certaine expectation of future bleſſings; when as reſt ſhall follow our labour, and matter of mirth our cauſes of mourning. For, though weeping may abide at the Euening, yet ioy commeth in the Morning: though we haue a dropping ſeed time, yet our harueſt ſhall be faire and dry; for as the Pſalmiſt ſaith: They that ſowe in teares ſhall reape in ioy; and whereas they went weeping carrying precious ſeed, they ſhall returne with ioy and bring their ſheaues. And well this agreeth with the loue of our heauenly Father, to turne his terrible frownes into gracious ſmiles, and to giue ſome comfort to his children, after that by correction, hee hath throughly humbled them; well doth it befit the skill and grace of our wiſe Phyſician, to miniſter the cordials and reſtoratiues of conſolation, after the vomits and purges of affliction, that as by the one we are clenſed from the groſſe humours of ſinne and corruption, ſo by the other wee may be ſtrengthened and inabled, to leade a new life, and to performe with comfort and incouragement all holy and Chriſtian duties both to God and our neighbours.

Iob 2.10.

Gen.24.67.
1.Sam.1.chap.
29.31.

Plutarch. de tranqu. animi.

Plutarch. ibid.

Pſal.30.5.

Pſal.126.5,6.

§. Sect.
That God
deraeth griefe for worldly croſſes, by giui vnto vs ſpirituall comfo

But though it were ſuppoſed that our whole life were full of miſeries, and that we had no taſt of earthly comfort, nor had euer ſpent a day in worldly contentment, yet haue all the faithfull ſo many ſpirituall conſolations, both in reſpect of their preſent feelings and future hopes, that they are ſufficient to out-countenance all their croſſes, and to ſweeten all their afflictions in their greateſt bitterneſſe. For hauing the aſſurance of the pardon of their ſinnes, and reconciliation with God, there followeth this peace with him, ſuch peace of conſcience, as paſſeth all vnderſtanding, and ſuch inward conſolation and joy in the holy Ghoſt, as maketh them to rejoyce, not only in their proſperity, but alſo in their greateſt miſeries and afflictions, as the Apoſtle ſpeaketh. Neither doe they make any reckoning of all the croſſes and calamities which this World can inflict vpon vpon them : ſeeing all the miſeries and euils which are to be found vpon the whole Earth are but as one little droppe, in compariſon of that infinite Ocean of woe and helliſh condemnation, from which through Chriſt they are deliuered. Beſides, they haue aſſurance by a liuely Faith, that in all their troubles and dangers, they haue the guard of Gods holy Angels attending on them, who hauing taken charge ouer them, doe keepe them in all their wayes that they hurt not their foote againſt a ſtone; and that though they haue many and great enemies to aſſault them, yet they haue more and mighty friends who daily ſtand in their defence, to protect them from all their fury. Yea, they know that Gods owne holy prouidence watcheth ouer them; which as it ſendeth, ſo it ordereth, moderateth, and mitigateth all their afflictions, conuerting and turning all to their good, and the euerlaſting ſaluation of their ſoules. Finally, by faith they haue aſſurance that this vnpleaſant way of earthly tribulations, doth conduct them to their heauenly country, where they ſhall haue pleaſures at Gods right hand for euermore: and that theſe ſhort and momentany afflictions ſhall cauſe vnto them a farre most excellent and eternall waight of glory: and this maketh them to beare, whatſoeuer croſſes God layeth vpon them, with patience, ſeeing they know that the afflictions, of this preſent life, are not worthy the glory which ſhall bee reuealed. For if that Troaine Captaine thought it a ſufficient incouragement, to comfort and hearten his ſouldiers in all their difficulties and dangers when as he could giue them ſome hope, that after all theſe cruell tempeſts and toileſome labours, they ſhould at length arriue in a pleaſant countrey, where they ſhould take their reſt and plaſure, and delight themſelues in the remembrance of their paſſed troubles; how much more ſhould wee with patience and courage paſſe through this Sea of worldly miſeries, who haue farre better aſſurance of farre better hopes; euen that we ſhall after theſe our painful labours, ſafely arriue at the hauen of euerlaſting reſt, where it ſhall not be poſſible for all our enemies, ſo much as to interrupt our happineſſe, or diſturbe our ioy. And thus was Elias comforted, when being forſaken of men, he had the Angels of God to miniſter vnto him: Thus was Elizeus faint-hearted ſeruant incouraged, when as being be-ſet with enemies, hee had his eyes opened, and ſaw more on his ſide than were againſt him. Thus was the Martyr Steuen repleniſhed with joy and gladneſſe in all his perſecutions, by looking into heauen, where he ſaw his Sauiour, and that vnſpeakable joy and happineſſe, which was there reſerued for him; and this made him when the ſtones flew about his eares, to forget his owne paine, danger, and death, and in moſt feruent charity to pray for his enemies, that their ſinnes might not bee laid to their charge, and ſo debarre them of all theſe ioyes. And finally, this made Moſes chooſe rather to ſuffer aduerſity with the people of God, than to inioy the pleaſures of ſinne for a ſeaſon; eſteeming the rebuke of Chriſt greater riches than the treaſures of Egypt, becauſe hee had reſpect to the recompence of reward. To this purpoſe one ſaith well, that the minde of man ſo much the more grieuouſly apprehendeth the miſeries of this life preſent, by how much it neglecteth to ponder the good that followeth; and becauſe he will not meditate on the rewards which are reſerued for him, hee thinketh euery trifle burthenſome which he beareth: whereof it is, that his blind cogitation cauſeth him to murmur and complaine, when he feeleth but the blow of a whip, and thinketh that an intolerable calamity, which is daily ended with the courſe of ſliding time. But if a man once contemplate thoſe joyes which are eternall, & fixe the eye of his heart vpon thoſe things which do for euer continue without change, he thinketh all that to bee nothing which is ſtill running towards an end, and beareth the afflictions of this preſent life ſo lightly, as though he thought all that nothing which ſlideth ſo faſt away. For the more deeply thoſe inward joyes are rooted in him, the more ſlightly he apprehendeth all theſe outward griefes, &c. In which reſpect Zophar fitly compareth the miſeries of this preſent life, to waters which runne and paſſe away; becauſe theſe ſliding calamities doe not with their violence oppreſſe the minde of a faithfull man, but onely giue him a little touch of ſorrow as they paſſe by; and though hee be moiſtned with the bloud of his wounds, yet hee is not rent and plucked away from the aſſurance of his ſaluation.

Rom.5.3.

Pſal.91.11.

14.22.

Cor.4.17.

8.18.

ſan & hec meminiſ-iuabit.
rios ca-ſus ut diſmina rerum dimus in Latium, ſedes fata quie-as, Oſtendunt.
Æneid 1.

King.19.5.

King.6.16.17
7.56.

Heb.11.25.26.

Mala vitæ præſentis tantò durius animus ſentit, quanto penſare bonum quod ſequitur negligit.&c. Gregor.Moral. lib.10.cap.12.

Iob 11. 16.

§. Sect. 9.
That Paul was not afflicted aboue his ſtrength, as his words ſeeme to portend.

And thus haue I ſhewed, that the Lord afflicteth none of his faithfull Children aboue their ſtrength, but when he ſendeth any aduerſity or tribulation, hee withall ſendeth the comforter, his holy Spirit, who refreſheth them with inward conſolations, and both outwardly and inwardly mingleth many good things with their euils, and his gracious benefits with their afflictions, that by all theſe helpes hee may ſupport their weakneſſe, and inable them to beare all their corrections with patience and comfort. Againſt which may bee objected the example of the Apoſtle Paul, who affirmeth that in his afflictions which he ſuffered in Aſia, hee was preſſed out of meaſure, paſſing ſtrength ſo that hee doubted of his life. Vnto which I anſwere, that the Apoſtles end is not there to ſhew the vnmeaſurableneſſe of his afflictions, but hee doth onely aggrauate them, that hee may the more amplyfie Gods mercy in deliuering him from ſuch great euils. To which purpoſe hee ſaith, that hee was preſſed out of meaſure and aboue ſtrength, that is, beyond his owne ability and naturall power, which was farre vnable to beare ſo great afflictions; that ſo hee might magnifie the greatnes of Gods mercies, who had ſtrengthened him aboue nature, and when all naturall ability fayled, had ſupported him by his Spirit, and raiſed him to health and ſtrength when all worldly and naturall helpes and hopes failed and forſooke him, as though he ſhould haue ſaid, I was in reſpect of my fraile nature ſo vnmeaſurably preſſed with grieuous ſickneſſe, that there was no poſſible meanes for me to haue continued in this extremity, had not Gods power ſupported mee, and raiſed mee to life, who was euen but a dead man in mine owne apprehenſion. And that this is the meaning of the words, it plainely appeareth, both by that which goeth before, and that which followeth. For before, hee affirmeth that God comforted him in all his tribulations, and that as the ſufferings, which hee indured for the name of Chriſt, abounded, ſo his conſolation did abound through Chriſt. And the words following alſo, ſhew that hee ſpeaketh of the greatneſſe of his ſickneſſe, which was out of meaſure, not in reſpect of that power which he had from God, but of his owne naturall ſtrength: for ſo he ſaith, that he receiued the ſentence of death in himſelfe, becauſe hee ſhould not truſt in himſelfe, but in God which raiſeth the dead, and deliuered him from this great death. So afterwards ſpeaking of his afflictions, he ſaith: Wee are troubled on euery ſide, yet not diſtreſſed; we are perplexed, but not in deſpaire, or without hope of helpe, wee are perſecuted but not forſaken, caſt downe but wee periſh not.

2.Cor.1.8.

Verſ.4.5.

Verſ.9.10.

2.Cor.4.8.9.

§. *Sect.*10.
A ſecond Obiection, anſwered taken from the example of diuers of the faithfull.

Yea but the faithfull doe in their afflictions fall into impatiencie, and make grieuous complaints like men for-lorne, and forſaken of God, which they would not doe vnleſſe their afflictions were aboue their ſtrength. Many ſuch complaints we find in the Booke of Iob. For he crieth out: O that my griefe were well weighed, and my miſeries were laide together in the ballance, for it would bee heauier than the ſand of the Sea, &c. O that it would pleaſe God to deſtroy me, that he would let looſe his hand and cut me off; what is my ſtrength that I ſhould hope, or mine end that I ſhould prolong my life? Is my ſtrength the ſtrength of ſtones, or my fleſh of braſſe? Thus alſo Dauid complaineth, that God had forſaken him, that hee had forgotten to be mercifull, and ſhut vp his tender mercies in diſpleaſure, that hee fainted in his mourning, that hee was weakned and ſore broken, and roared for the very griefe of his heart, that his heart panted, and his ſtrength failed him, and that the light of his eyes was gone away from him. And the whole Church in her lamentations cryeth out with great paſſion: Haue yee no regard all yee that paſſe by this way. Behold and ſee if there be any ſorrow like vnto my ſorrow, which is done vnto mee, wherewith the Lord hath afflicted me in the day of his fierce wrath? To which I anſwere, that all theſe are the complaints of the weake and fraile fleſh, out of the preſent ſenſe and feeling of Gods heauie judgements, joyned with a ſight of its owne infirmitie and inability to beare and indure them by its owne ſtrength, vnto which the ſpirituall and regenerate part conſenteth not, hauing in the middeſt of all extreamities ſome taſt of ſpirituall comfort, and ſome aſſurance of Gods preſence and power aſſiſting and ſtrengthening it; but reſiſteth theſe tentations of the fleſh, and neuer ceaſeth oppoſing and labouring againſt them, vntill it haue ouercome them and confirmed the Chriſtian with patience and comfort. Yea, euen when the fleſh moſt doubteth and deſpaireth, in regard of its owne ſtrength, fayling, and fainting in the time of trouble, becauſe reſting wholly vpon its ſelfe, it is forſaken of all hope, when it ſeeth this ſtrength infeebled, and the affliction increaſing in waight and violence: then doth the ſpirituall part labour and indeuour to reſt ſecurely vpon God, knowing that we ſtand not by our owne power, but by the power of his might; that when wee are weakeſt, then he is ſtrongeſt, and taketh delight to manifeſt his great power, in our greateſt infirmities: and finally that he hath bound himſelfe by his moſt gracious promiſes neuer to faile vs nor forſake vs, but will aſſiſt and hold vs vp in all tentations vntill at the laſt wee obtaine the victory. It is true indeed, that the Chriſtian is diuerſly affected in this ſpirituall conflict, in reſpect of theſe diuers parts, which like mortall enemies fight one againſt the other, ſometime ſighing and groaning, and ſometime ſinging and rejoycing; one while complaining as one forſaken of God, and ouerwhelmed with his heauy judgements, and another while refreſhed and comforted in his inward feelings, when as the loue of God breaketh out and appeareth vnto him, through theſe clouds of trouble and affliction; now murmuring and repining in ſenſe of paine, and vtterly deſperate and deſtitute of all hope and helpe; and ſoone after rejoycing in tribulation, and triumphing ouer all his miſeries in aſſurance of Gods loue, whereby hee reſteth perſwaded, that God will turne all to his good, and in the meane time neuer ceaſe to aſſiſt him in all difficulties and diſtreſſes. And all this will well ſtand, both with the truth of Gods word and promiſes, and alſo with this Chriſtian conſolation; that

*Iob.*6.2,3,8,9,11.12.

*Pſa.*22.1.
*Pſal.*77.9.& 6.6.& 38.8,10.

Lam.1.12.

that God meaſureth vnto the faithfull ſuch a proportion of affliction, as befitteth their ſtrength, laying vpon no man more than hee is able to beare. For the Lord hath not promiſed that wee ſhall not be foiled in this conflict, but that we ſhall not be ouercome, not that wee ſhall not bee preſſed and pinched with the weight of afflictions, but that wee ſhall not bee oppreſſed and periſh in them; not that we ſhall not ſorrow and ſigh, lament and weepe in our miſeries, but that our ſorrow ſhall bee turned into ioy, and all teares ſhall bee wiped from our eyes; that our mourning ſhall end in mirth, and our impatient murmurings, ſhall be changed into cheerefull thankſgiuings and ſongs of deliuerance: hee hath not promiſed that wee ſhall alwayes feele power ſufficient in our ſelues to indure all tentations, for where is alwayes feeling, there is no place for faith; but that in our greateſt weakneſſe his power ſhall bee ſufficient for vs, and that when wee are moſt feeble in our ſelues, wee ſhall bee ſtrong in him. Finally, hee hath not ſtinted himſelfe to any number or waight of afflictions, nor promiſed that wee ſhould bewray no impatiency and infirmities in the time of our trials, whileſt this heauy waight doth lye vpon vs, but that hee will in the end turne all to our good, and not ſo ſuffer vs to be tempted, but that at the length he will giue a good iſſue vnto our tentations, that we may be able to beare and ouercome them.

.16.20.
21.4.

1.28.
10.13.

Sect. 11.

Yea but we ſee many, who haue formerly made profeſſion of religion, and ſeemed to make ſome conſcience of their wayes, who are quite ouerthowne in this combate of afflictions, falling into extreame impatiency, murmuring and repining againſt Gods prouidence, and vttering fearefull blaſphemies againſt his Majeſty; and that which is worſt of all, doe continue in theſe deſperate courſes vnto the end. To which I anſwer, that what ſhew ſoeuer ſuch haue made, they were at the beſt but meere hypocrites, vnto whom Gods promiſes of not tempting aboue power, and afflicting aboue ſtrength are not made, ſeeing they are appropriated onely to true beleeuers. And therefore it is no maruaile, if this chaffe which before did lye quietly with the wheate, is ſcattered abroad when the wind and fanne of triall commeth; no maruaile if this droſſe bee conſumed in the fiery triall, though, before it was put into the furnace, it made ſome glittering ſhew. Neither ſhould it ſeeme ſtrang vnto vs, that theſe greene blades, which for want of ground neuer tooke roote, doe wither away when the Sunne of tribulation and affliction ariſeth, ſeeing our Sauiour Chriſt hath long agoe giuen vs warning of it. Neither doth this befall them becauſe God laieth vpon them intolerable affliction; but becauſe through their weakneſſe and naturall corruption, they are able to beare nothing; nor is their deſtruction to bee imputed to the greatneſſe and grieuouſnes of their miſeries, but to their infirmneſſe and impotency in enduring any triall. For if a man through the weakneſſe of his ſtomacke doe not receiue or retaine a profitable potion, which would purge him from his corrupt humours and reſtore him to health, becauſe it is vnpleaſant and bitter to his taſt, and ſo dieth for want of helpe, his death and deſtruction is not to bee aſcribed to the phyſicke, but to his indiſpoſition who would or could not take it: So the ruine and ouerthrow of Hypocrites is not to bee aſcribed to their bitter potions of afflictions, which if they were taken according to the preſcript of our wiſe Phyſicion, would purge them of their corruptions and recouer their ſtrength; but to their owne impotency and ſinfull imbecillity, which cannot beare nor profit by them. And of theſe we may truly ſay with that auncient Father; That if they are ouerthrowne with tribulation, they would much more haue come to the like deſtruction by pleaſures and proſperity, reſt and idleneſſe. For, if being bound, and (as it were) faſt tyed vnto God by the cords of tribulation, they notwithſtanding fall away from him; how much more would they haue fallen if they had beene looſe and left to their owne libertie. And to the ſame purpoſe hee ſaith elſe where, that if tribulation do ouerthrow and deſtroy any, it is not to be imputed to the ſtrength of theſe aſſaylants, but vnto their owne ſloth and cowardiſe. For if being ſober and watchfull wee pray vnto God, that hee will not ſuffer vs to bee tempted aboue our power, if wee alwayes adhere and cleaue vnto him by faith and affiance, ſtand to it valiantly, prepare our armour and ſet our ſelues to fight, we ſhall alwayes find him to be our helper and defender; and although tentations come ruſhing vpon vs like a furious tempeſt, yet they ſhall bee vnto vs as light as ſtubble, and like a leafe that is carried in the ayre.

.10,11.

Chryſoſt. in Rom. 5. ſer. 9. Nulla infælicitas frangit, quem nulla fælicitas corrumpit. August. in ſenten.

Chryſoſt. in Epiſt. ad Hebraeos. cap. 12. Homil. 28.

§. Sect. 12. That the former conſideration is full of comfort.

Now this doctrine whereby wee are aſſured, that God meaſureth our afflictions according to our ſtrength, and neuer tempteth vs aboue our power (but alwayes giueth a good iſſue to our troubles and tentations) is ſo full of chriſtian comfort, that if there were no other argument beſides to perſwade vs, to beare all our croſſes and calamities with patience and comfort, this alone were ſufficient. For who would not be content to beare a burthen of Gods owne impoſing, when as hee is ſure hee ſhall not bee ouerloaded? who would refuſe to bee tried in this furnace of affliction, if hee certainely know that it will not conſume, but onely purge and purifie him from the droſſe of ſin?

Who being preſſed into Gods ſeruice would not couragiouſly fight againſt ſuch enemies, as being inferiour in ſtrength, hee is ſure to ouercome? and who would refuſe to receiue a portion prepared by this moſt heauenly and wiſe Phyſicion, though it be bitter and vnpleaſant vnto the taſte, if hee bee aſcertained, that the poyſon of affliction is corrected with ſo many preſeruatiues of his loue, and teſtimonies of his fauour, and ſo mingled with innumerable numbers of Gods bleſſings and benefits, and fitted to his conſtitution and ſtrength who is to take to it, that howſoeuer whileſt it worketh vpon his groſſe humors, and purgeth away thoſe tough corruptions which naturally adhere vnto him, hee is for the preſent ſicke in his ſenſe and feeling, yet he ſhall thereby be recouered and reſtored to his health? To this purpoſe one ſaith, that it is a ſingular comfort in the time of affliction, to call often to mind Gods bleſſings and benefits; neither will our griefes breake and depreſſe vs, if wee vphold and comfort our fainting and ſinking ſoules, by calling to remembrance the gifts of God beſtowed on vs. And therefore it is well ſaid: In thy good dayes be not vnmindfull of the euill, and in thy euill dayes be not forgetfull of the good: For whoſoeuer daily receiueth giftes, and feareth not correction, through too much joy hee periſheth in his pride; and contrariwiſe hee who is worne out with chaſtiſements, and doth not comfort himſelfe in the gifts which he hath receiued, is deſtroyed through deſpaire. And therefore both theſe are to be joyned together, that one may helpe to ſupport the other; in as much as the remembrance of the gift doth temper and mittigate the griefe and ſmart of the rodde; and the ſuſpition and feare of the rodde, doth temper and moderate the joy of the gift. And to the ſame effect another ſaith, that the faithfull are mindfull of their good things in the day of aduerſitie, leſt they ſhould bee faint hearted and impatient; and in the day of proſperity they are not mindfull of euils and affliction, leaſt being exalted and lifted vp, they ſhould ſay, wee ſhall neuer bee remoued. As therefore when our eyes are dimmed and dazeled by looking vpon hurtfull objects, or by too much intention of the ſight, wee doe againe refreſh and repaire their ſtrength and vigour, by beholding of greene colour: ſo when our hearts and minds are tyred and vexed by conſidering the good things wee want, or the euils and miſeries which lie vpon vs; wee muſt not ſuffer them to bee wholly intent vpon theſe hurtfull and pernicious objects, but exerciſe them in meditating vpon thoſe manifolde bleſſings which God ſuffereth vs preſently to enjoy, for the mitigating of our ſmart, and moderating, and (as it were) ſweetning the bitterneſſe of our griefe; and alſo vpon that future happineſſe which wee enjoy in hope, and that euerlaſting and incomprehenſible joy and glorious bleſſedneſſe, which we ſhall receiue in the Kingdome of Heauen, when our courſe is ended, and our conflict finiſhed.

Gregor. moral. lib. 3. cap. 7.

Eccleſ. 11.

Bernard. In ramis palmarum. ſerm. 2.

Pſal. 30. 6.

CHAP. XII.

That God afflicteth vs no more than is neceſſary for his owne glory, and our ſaluation.

§. Sect. 1. That our fl of corruption neceſſarily requireth affli on.

AND thus Gods loue and mercy appeareth in meaſuring our afflictions, according to our ſtrength: the other point propounded is, that God ſheweth the like loue vnto vs, by meaſuring the ptoportion of afflictions, according to the ſcanteſt meaſure of our neceſſity, laying no more vpon vs than is neceſſary for the magnifying of his owne glory by our ſanctification in this life, and our ſaluation in the life to come. For the Lord is chiefly delighted in exerciſing his loue, mercy, and goodneſſe towards his Saints, and Seruants; & would not willingly afflict and correct vs, if we did not vrge him thereunto by a kind of neceſſity. For ſuch is our naturall corruption, that wee are eaſily cockred, and made wonton, with the fruition of Gods bleſſings, and grow to ſuch pride, and inſolency through his continuall fauours, that wee are ready to forget, and contemne him, who is the authour of all our good; and to runne into all exceſſe, and riot, with the wikced of the world, turning our liberty into looſe licentiouſneſſe, and abuſing our plenty of Gods bleſſings, as a meanes of maintayning vs in our luxurious, and wicked courſes. And therefore the Lord is after a ſort enforced to correct vs, that by ſorrow and ſmart, he may bring vs to know our ſelues, and to remember him, of whom eaſe and proſperity haue made vs ignorant, and forgetfull; and by theſe ſharpe whippes and rods, hee reclaimeth vs from our lewd courſes, wherein if he ſhould let vs alone, we would ruune on with headlong haſt vnto our endleſſe perdition and condemnation. And as the wiſe and faithfull Phyſition is conſtrained, vpon the neceſſity of recouering his patients health, to preſcribe vnto him faſting after feaſting, ſabſtinence after ſurfeting and exceſſe, and bitter potions and purges when hee findeth his body diſtempered with corrupt humors, and ouermuch fulneſſe: ſo vpon the like neceſſity of recouering our ſpirituall health, the Lord is faine, when we ſurfet on his bleſſings, to withdraw them from vs, and to appoint vs abſtinence, or a ſhorter diet; and when hee ſeeth our ſoules full of ſinfull corruptions, to giue vnto vs theſe bitter potions of afflictions, to purge vs from them. And when we haue pampered our ſelues by feeding on the forbidden fruits of ſinfull pleaſures, and haue greedily drunke of the poyſonous cuppes of exceſſe, and rapine, of whoredome, and fornication, and the wine of violence and oppreſſion, wherewith our natures being tainted and infected, the life of our ſoules is hazarded and indangerd: the Lord out of his loue and care is enforced to prepare another cup for vs, and to make vs drinke of the antidote, and counterpoyſon of afflictions, that the poyſon of ſinne may bee purged, and expelled, and we freed from the danger of euerlaſting death. And as in theſe regards there is neceſſity of ſending theſe afflictions in reſpect of euery particular faithfull man, ſo alſo in regard of the whole Church in generall. For as it is neuer more ſpiritually poore and leane, than when it is pampered in worldly pompe, and proſperity; ſo it is neuer richer, or in better liking, than when it is outwardly pinched with miſery, and affliction. And as by too much fulneſſe it falleth into a conſumption, and by being too ranke, is eaſilier laid, and caſt downe with euery ſtorme of tentation, whereby it is indangered to rotting, and periſhing: ſo it groweth fatter by faſting, proſpereth better when it is bitten and nipped, nor euer thriueth ſo well, or groweth ſo faſt, as when it carrieth the croſſe on the ſhoulder. To which purpoſe one ſaith, that it is moſt neceſſary for the catholicke Church, to bee exerciſed, and tried with continuall tentations: becauſe in the middeſt of tentations it liueth, flouriſheth, conſtantly indureth, and commeth to perfection: vnto which, when it hath attained, reſt ſucceedeth labour, and the tentations departing, the bleſſing remaineth.

ug. in Ho-
57.10.

§. Sect. 2.
the Lord
h no det in our rt, but vd meanes euent our iſment.
1.13.

Neither doth the Lord take any delight in our ſmart, or maketh any haſt to inflict his chaſtiſements, but with great patience, and long ſuffering, he expecteth our repentance, that he may haue mercy vpon vs; and doth not take his rod of correction into his hand, till hee bee preſſed with the waight of our ſinnes, as the Cart is preſſed which is full of ſheaues, as the Prophet ſpeaketh, and till there bee no other remedy. And euen then when wee haue vrged him with a kind of neceſſity to chaſtiſe vs, becauſe otherwiſe we would goe on in the wayes of wickedneſſe to our perdition, & euerlaſting condemnation, hee doth not puniſh vs willingly, as one that taketh delight in our ſmart, and torment; but performeth it as an action, which is rather fit for vs to ſuffer, than for him to do, it being vnto him, as the Prophet ſpeaketh, his ſtrange worke, and not familiar vnto his nature, which is full of loue, mercy, and goodneſſe, and is moſt delighted and pleaſed in ſhewing and extending grace and compaſſion to thoſe who are in miſery. And therefore in all his courſes and proceedings, hee auoideth as much as will ſtand with his glory, and our euerlaſting good, all hard, and rigorous courſes towards vs. For firſt like a gracious Father he louingly acquainteth vs with his will, and informeth vs in the duties which wee ought to performe vnto him, alluring vs to obedience, and incouraging vs to ſerue him, with innumerable benefits in preſent poſſeſſion, and with many gracious promiſes of beſtowing much more excellent things vpon vs in time to come. And if wee bee ſo forgetfull of him, and our ſelues, that notwithſtanding all his fauours, wee neglect our duty, and abuſe his mercies, as occaſions and meanes of ſinne; hee doth in the next place after a fatherly manner admoniſh vs, in the miniſtry of the Word, of the neglect of our dutie, and putteth vs in minde of our faultineſſe, that wee may amend it, which if wee doe, hee ſtayeth here, and goeth no further: but if we perſiſt in our euill courſes, hee doth by the ſame his holy Word, ſharply rebuke and reproue vs for our ſinnes; and threatneth his judgements and chaſtiſements, if by gentler meanes wee will not be reformed. And if he yet preuaile with vs, hee ſtayeth his hand, and proceedeth no further againſt vs. But if all this will not reclaime vs from our wicked wayes, and bring vs to repentance; then is hee forced to let vs feele the ſmart of the rod, and though in his fatherly affection hee much pitieth vs, and tendreth our griefes, yet both in his wiſedome and loue, he ſeeth it neceſſary that wee ſhould rather preſently bee vexed with ſome momentany affliction, than that we ſhould runne a courſe through impunity, and want of correction, which in the end would plunge vs into euerlaſting condemnation.

m.3.33.
28.21.
g.18.

1.Cor.11.32.

§. Sect. 3.
That the meaſure of our afflictions exceedeth not neceſſity.

And yet hee doth not preſently deale with vs in that ſtraight and juſt ſeuerity, which our ſinnes haue deſerued hee ſhould vſe towards vs, but at firſt, doth correct vs lightly, and gently, with all tenderneſſe and compaſſion; with which ſmall chaſtiſement if wee bee amended, hee ſtayeth his hand, hauing attained vnto that which hee deſired and intended; but if fewer ſtripes will not reforme vs, hee is neceſſarily vrged to lay on more; and if wee be ſo ſtubborne, as to contemne his rodds, whereby he gently correcteth vs, hee is conſtrained to ſcourge and beate vs with the whippe and cudgell of of more grieuous afflictions; being reſolued out of meere loue, and fatherly affection, to vſe towards vs any preſent rigour & extremity, than hee will ſuffer vs by perſiſting in our ſinnes, to fall into euerlaſting perdition, or to become ſo deſperate in our wickedneſſe, as that hee ſhould bee forced to diſinherit inherit vs of our heauenly inheritance. So that if wee endure grieuous afflictions, and doe finde that our heauenly Father doth correct vs ſharply, and with great ſeuerity, we are not to impute it vnto any want of loue in him, as though hee tooke any pleaſure in our paine, but are to lay the fault wholly vpon our ſelues, who are ſo ſtubborne, and vndutifull, that more gentle corrections would not reclaime vs. For if there bee ſuch loue and tenderneſſe in earthly parents (which notwithſtanding is but a little droppe diſtilled into them, from this fountaine, or rather Ocean of mercy and compaſſion) that they deſire, and chiefely delight in ſhewing their kind affection to their Children, and in giuing vnto them all teſtimonies and ſignes of loue; and are loth to correct them for their faults, if any admonitions and rebukes will reforme and amend them; neuer thinking ſtripes ſeaſonable, but when they ſee them neceſſarie, in regard that other meanes will not reclaime them from their faults, and bring them to good: yea, if their loue bee ſuch, and ſo great, that according to the ſame neceſſity, it meaſureth out the number of their ſtripes, and quantity of their correction, ſo as they are not willing to giue them one blow more, than they thinke neceſſary for their amendment: then how much leſſe will the Lord exceed this meaſure of neceſſity, ſeeing hee both infinitely excelleth all earthly parents in loue, and goodneſſe, as being not onely gracious, but the God of grace, and not onely louing, but loue its ſelfe, as the Apoſtle ſtileth him; and is alike infinite in wiſedome, and therefore cannot (like earthly parents) bee deceiued in the proportion of his chaſtiſements, but juſtly knoweth how much is neceſſary, and neither too much, nor too little, for the amendement of his children? Yea, if there be ſuch loue, and care in an honeſt, faithfull, and learned Phyſician, that according to his skill, hee will take for the eaſe of his patient the gentleſt, and moſt pleaſing courſes which he thinketh ſufficient for the effecting of the cure; and will neuer vſe ſharper and more painfull remedies than the neceſſity of the ſore or ſickneſſe doth require: as for example, hee will not mixe a greater quantity of poyſon in the purgation, than by the rules of art he findeth neceſſary for ſuch a patient, and ſuch a diſeaſe; hee will not appoint a Corraſiue, Launcher or Burning Iron, where a healing playſter will effect the cure: he will not preſcribe violent purgatiues, when gentle potions are ſufficient; nor giue vnto his patient bitter and loathſome drugges, which he hateth as much as his diſeaſe, when as he ſeeth that he may as well recouer him by pleaſant electuaries, and comfortable reſtoratiues: how much more may we bee aſſured, that our heauenly Phyſition, who neuer faileth for want of skill, and is alſo infinite in loue and goodneſſe towards his diſeaſed patients, will neuer for the curing of our ſpirituall diſeaſes vſe ſharper meanes than our ſickneſſe requireth, nor euer giue vs more of the bitter medicines of afflictions and miſery, than is fit for the recouery of our ſpirituall health? And therefore if wee with patience and contentment, reſigne our-ſelues ouer to the skill and fidelity of our earthly Phyſitions, though ſometime they faile in both; and doe not limit them, either in reſpect of the quantity, or quality of their phyſicke, but refer it wholy to their diſcretion, and onely deſire that they will vſe the eaſieſt, ſpeedieſt, and ſafeſt meanes, for the effecting of the cure: then how much more ſhould wee wholy rely vpon the Lord, who is aſwell a Father in loue, as a Phyſition in skill; neither preſcribing vnto him what wee muſt take, or how long wee muſt bee vnder cure, ſeeing wee are aſſured that hee will not vnfaithfully protract it for his owne profit, for hee needeth nothing, and expecteth no reward, but thankes, nor yet put vs to more paine than is profitable, yea neceſſary for our recouery, ſeeing hee is not delighted in our torments, but taketh much more pleaſure in hearing vs ſing Pſalmes and ſongs of deliuerance, than in our ſighing, and ſorrowing, crying, and complaining?

1. Iohn 4. 8.

§. Sect. 4.
That wee are by Gods corrections and medicines to gueſſe at the greatneſſe of our faults, an grieuouſneſſe
of our diſeaſe

When therefore we ſee that our heauenly Phyſition hath prouided diuers kindes of medicines for his diuers patients; for one a greater and more bitter purge, for an other a leſſe and more pleaſant potion; for this man a corraſiue, and for that an healing plaiſter; Let vs not wonder at it; for either their diſeaſes are diuers, or they are diuers in their temperature, and conſtitution; and it beſeemeth not the skill of our heauenly Phyſition, like the ignorant Empericke to apply one ſalue for all ſores, and the ſame medicine for all kinde of maladies and diſeaſes, but to fit the remedy according to the nature of the infirmity, and condition of the party. And if wee haue a potion of the largeſt ſize, and loathſome in taſt, appointed for vs, let vs not thinke it too much, and murmur againſt our Phyſition, who knoweth better than wee, what medicine is fitteſt for the curing of our diſeaſes: neither let vs ſay that others haue worſe ſoares, and more gentle ſalues; more dangerous ſickneſſes, and more eaſie remedies; for if wee are often miſtaken in our bodily diſeaſes, and thinke that wee are in no perill, when the Phyſition ſeeth that our ſickeneſſe is almoſt deſperate, and in this regard, reſt not vpon our owne feeling, but vpon his skill, and willingly take that which hee preſcribeth; then how much more may wee bee deceiued in the ſickneſſes of our ſoules, thinking our dangerous diſeaſes, eaſes, to be but ſmall infirmities; and deepe conſumptions in grace but ſome litle diſtemper, and faint languiſhing; and therefore how much rather ſhould wee referre our ſelues wholy to the skill and wiſdome of God, who cannot erre for want of judgement, becauſe he knoweth all things, nor for want of care, becauſe his loue is infinite, patiently drinking a more bitter potion, than wee ſee prouided for others, who outwardly ſeeme more dangerouſly ſicke, becauſe we may be aſſured, that either our Phyſician ſeeth our diſeaſes inwardly to be more perilſome, and therefore need ſharper medicines; or that we are of greater ſtrength, and therefore better able to brooke their bitterneſſe? And when wee finde and feele that our heauenly Father doth diuerſly chaſtiſe his children, ſome with fewer and lighter, and others with more and harder ſtripes; and that wee haue our part among thoſe who haue the greateſt meaſure, let vs know that hee correcteth diuers faults, and that in thoſe who are of a diuers nature. Some faults are leſſer, either in themſelues, or as they are extenuated with circumſtances, and are with little adoe left and amended; ſome are greater, either in their owne nature, or as they are by circumſtances aggrauated, and are not forſaken without great difficulty. Some ſinnes are like the cloake or vpper garment, eaſily ſhaken off, without any trouble to him who layeth them aſide, and ſome cleaue to our corrupt nature like the skin to the fleſh, or the fleſh to the bones, and cannot bee parted from vs without great paine in the parting: of thoſe wee may bee reformed with the leaſt word or lighteſt correction, but of theſe not without many ſtripes and bitter paine. Againe, the children of God whom he chaſtiſeth, are of diuers natures and diſpoſitions: one is milde and gentle, and is eaſily rebuked with an angry word, another is ſo ſturdy and ſtomackfull, that hee will not be reformed with many blowes; one needeth no more but the ſhadow or ſhaking of the rod, and hee is preſently humbled, and beggeth pardon with promiſe of amendment; but vnto another the ſmart of the rod is not ſufficient, but hee needeth alſo a whip to pull downe his ſtomacke, and to make his ſtout heart to yeeld and relent. And therefore ſeeing there is ſuch great diuerſity both in faults committed, and natures who offend, it is no great maruaile if Gods chaſtiſements be alſo diuers. Neither doth it follow hereupon, that the greateſt meaſure or hardeſt ſtripes exceed neceſſity, or bee more then needs. For our moſt wiſe Father, in his corrections reſolueth to reforme al his children, and to free them from the greateſt, as well as from the leaſt ſins, as well from thoſe which they are moſt in loue with, and loatheſt to leaue, and from which they part with greateſt paine and difficlty, as from them with which being in leaſt league and liking, they are willing to leaue at the firſt admonition. And when hee taketh vs in hand, hee will maſter the proudeſt heart and ſtouteſt ſtomacke, as well as that which is milde and gentle; and for this end if fewer and lighter ſtripes will not ſerue the turne, hee will inflict more and harder, neuer ceaſing till hee haue throughly humbled vs, brought vs vpon our knees, and made vs to promiſe reformation and amendment; becauſe if he giue ouer before hee haue attained vnto his end, wee ſhall be but hardned in our ſtubbornnneſſe, and all the ſtripes which wee haue formerly ſuffered ſhall be in vaine.

§. Sect. 5. That our great afflictions argue our great ſins, either in their owne nature, or as they are aggrauated by circumſtances.

From whence wee may conclude, that if wee haue great or tedious afflictions lying vpon vs, either we haue great faults or great ſtomackes; or if wee be not guilty of haynous ſinnes in their owne nature, yet wee make them haynous vnto vs by diuers circumſtances; as by committing them willingly againſt knowledge and conſcience; by continuing in them after we are admoniſhed of them, and perſwaded to leaue them, both by Gods promiſes and threatnings: and finally, when wee are in ſuch loue and league with them, that no ordinary chaſtiſements will moue vs to forſake them. Neither let any man here ſay, that he hath humbled himſelfe already vnder Gods chaſtizing hand, and hath long agoe reſolued to forſake his ſinne, and many times promiſed amendement; and yet the Lord continueth to correct him, and therefore inflicteth ſtripes more than neceſſary: For thus not only the naturall child, but the child of God likewiſe, when they are vnder the rod, doe ſeeke to deceiue their Parents, to eſcape further correction; yea are euen themſelues oftentimes deceiued. For though in ſenſe of preſent ſmart they reſolue to amend, and haue ſome purpoſe to bee as good as their word; yet being not throughly ſetled in their reſolutions, they are vncōſtant in them; and together with their paine forget their promiſes. But though we may be deceiued and deceiue others, yet we cannot our heauenly Father, becauſe hee ſearcheth the heart and reines, and knowing when our reſolutions of amendement are flickring and vnſetled, and when they are well grounded, firme and conſtant, hee doth accordingly continue his chaſtiſements, till he hath fully confirmed them; vnleſſe vpon our faire promiſes he ſometimes ſpareth vs for a time, that we may vpon our owne experience, ſee how little credit is to be giuen to them; but no ſooner doth hee ſee vs throughly ſetled in our good reſolutions, and ſtedfaſtly purpoſed to forſake our ſinnes, but preſently hee caſteth away his rodde, and not giuing one blow more, doth eaſe and releaſe vs from all afflictions.

inherit vs of our heauenly inheritance. So that if wee endure grieuous afflictions, and doe finde that our heauenly Father doth correct vs ſharply, and with great ſeuerity, we are not to impute it vnto any want of loue in him, as though hee tooke any pleaſure in our paine, but are to lay the fault wholly vpon our ſelues, who are ſo ſtubborne, and vndutifull, that more gentle corrections would not reclaime vs. For if there bee ſuch loue and tenderneſſe in earthly parents (which notwithſtanding is but a little droppe diſtilled into them, from this fountaine, or rather Ocean of mercy and compaſſion) that they deſire, and chiefely delight in ſhewing their kind affection to their Children, and in giuing vnto them all teſtimonies and ſignes of loue; and are loth to correct them for their faults, if any admonitions and rebukes will reforme and amend them; neuer thinking ſtripes ſeaſonable, but when they ſee them neceſſarie, in regard that other meanes will not reclaime them from their faults, and bring them to good: yea, if their loue bee ſuch, and ſo great, that according to the ſame neceſſity, it meaſureth out the number of their ſtripes, and quantity of their correction, ſo as they are not willing to giue them one blow more, than they thinke neceſſary for their amendment: then how much leſſe will the Lord exceed this meaſure of neceſſity, ſeeing hee both infinitely excelleth all earthly parents in loue, and goodneſſe, as being not onely gracious, but the God of grace, and not onely louing, but loue its ſelfe, as the Apoſtle ſtileth him; and is alike infinite in wiſedome, and therefore cannot (like earthly parents) bee deceiued in the proportion of his chaſtiſements, but juſtly knoweth how much is neceſſary, and neither too much, nor too little, for the amendement of his children? Yea, if there be ſuch loue, and care in an honeſt, faithfull, and learned Phyſician, that according to his skill, hee will take for the eaſe of his patient the gentleſt, and moſt pleaſing courſes which he thinketh ſufficient for the effecting of the cure; and will neuer vſe ſharper and more painfull remedies than the neceſſity of the ſore or ſickneſſe doth require: as for example, hee will not mixe a greater quantity of poyſon in the purgation, than by the rules of art he findeth neceſſary for ſuch a patient, and ſuch a diſeaſe; hee will not appoint a Corraſiue, Launcher or burning Iron, where a healing playſter will effect the cure: he will not preſcribe violent purgatinos, when gentle potions are ſufficient; nor giue vnto his patient bitter and loathſome drugges, which he hateth as much as his diſeaſe, when as he ſeeth that he may as well recouer him by pleaſant electuaries, and comfortable reſtoratiues: how much more may we bee aſſured, that our heauenly Phyſition, who neuer faileth for want of skill, and is alſo infinite in loue and goodneſſe towards his diſeaſed patients, will neuer for the curing of our ſpirituall diſeaſes vſe ſharper meanes than our ſickneſſe requireth, nor euer giue vs more of the bitter medicines of afflictions and miſery, than is fit for the recouery of our ſpirituall health? And therefore if wee with patience and contentment, reſigne our ſelues ouer to the skill and fidelity of our earthly Phyſitions, though ſometime they faile in both; and doe not limit them, either in reſpect of the quantity, or quality of their phyſicke, but refer it wholy to their diſcretion, and onely deſire that they will vſe the eaſieſt, ſpeedieſt, and ſafeſt meanes, for the effecting of the cure: then how much more ſhould wee wholy rely vpon the Lord, who is aſwell a Father in loue, as a Phyſition in skill; neither preſcribing vnto him what wee muſt take, or how long wee muſt bee vnder cure, ſeeing wee are aſſured that hee will not vnfaithfully protract it for his owne profit, for hee needeth nothing, and expecteth no reward, but thankes, nor yet put vs to more paine than is profitable, yea neceſſary for our recouery, ſeeing hee is not delighted in our torments, but taketh much more pleaſure in hearing vs ſing Pſalmes and ſongs of deliuerance, than in our ſighing, and ſorrowing, crying, and complaining?

1. Iohn 4. 8.

§. Sect. 4.
That wee ar
by Gods corrections and medicines to gueſſe at the greatneſſe o our faults, a grieuouſneſſe
of our diſeaſe

When therefore we ſee that our heauenly Phyſition hath prouided diuers kindes of medicines for his diuers patients; for one a greater and more bitter purge, for an other a leſſe and more pleaſant potion; for this man a corraſiue, and for that an healing plaiſter; Let vs not wonder at it; for either their diſeaſes are diuers, or they are diuers in their temperature, and conſtitution; and it beſeemeth not the skill of our heauenly Phyſition, like the ignorant Empericke to apply one ſalue for all ſores, and the ſame medicine for all kinde of maladies and diſeaſes, but to fit the remedy according to the nature of the infirmity, and condition of the party. And if wee haue a potion of the largeſt ſize, and loathſome in taſt, appointed for vs, let vs not thinke it too much, and murmur againſt our Phyſition, who knoweth better than wee, what medicine is fitteſt for the curing of our diſeaſes: neither let vs ſay that others haue worſe ſoares, and more gentle ſalues; more dangerous ſickneſſes, and more eaſie remedies; for if wee are often miſtaken in our bodily diſeaſes, and thinke that wee are in no perill, when the Phyſition ſeeth that our ſickeneſſe is almoſt deſperate, and in this regard, reſt not vpon our owne feeling, but vpon his skill, and willingly take that which hee preſcribeth; then how much more may wee bee deceiued in the ſickneſſes of our ſoules, thinking our dangerous diſeaſes, eaſes, [to be but ſmall infirmities; and deepe conſumptions in grace but ſome litle diſtemper, and faint languiſhing; and therefore how much rather ſhould wee referre our ſelues wholy to the skill and wiſdome of God, who cannot erre for want of judgement, becauſe he knoweth all things, nor for want of care, becauſe his loue is infinite, patiently drinking a more bitter potion, [than wee ſee prouided for others, who outwardly ſeeme more dangerouſly ſicke, becauſe we may be aſſured, that either our Phyſician ſeeth our diſeaſes inwardly to be more perilſome, and therefore need ſharper medicines; or that we are of greater ſtrength, and therefore better able to brooke their bitterneſſe? And when wee finde and feele that our heauenly Father doth diuerſly chaſtiſe his children, ſome with fewer and lighter, and others with more and harder ſtripes; and that wee haue our part among thoſe who haue the greateſt meaſure, let vs know that hee correcteth diuers faults, and that in thoſe who are of a diuers nature. Some faults are leſſer, either in themſelues, or as they are extenuated with circumſtances, and are with little adoe left and amended; ſome are greater, either in their owne nature, or as they are by circumſtances aggrauated, and are not forſaken without great difficulty. Some ſinnes are like the cloake or vpper garment, eaſily ſhaken off, without any trouble to him who layeth them aſide, and ſome cleaue to our corrupt nature like the skin to the fleſh, or the fleſh to the bones, and cannot bee parted from vs without great paine in the parting: of thoſe wee may bee reformed with the leaſt word or lighteſt correction, but of theſe not without many ſtripes and bitter paine. Againe, the children of God whom he chaſtiſeth, are of diuers natures and diſpoſitions: one is milde and gentle, and is eaſily rebuked with an angry word, another is ſo ſturdy and ſtomackfull, that hee will not be reformed with many blowes; one needeth no more but the ſhadow or ſhaking of the rod, and hee is preſently humbled, and beggeth pardon with promiſe of amendment; but vnto another the ſmart of the rod is not ſufficient, but hee needeth alſo a whip to pull downe his ſtomacke, and to make his ſtout heart to yeeld and relent. And therefore ſeeing there is ſuch great diuerſity both in faults committed, and natures who offend, it is no great maruaile if Gods chaſtiſements be alſo diuers. Neither doth it follow hereupon, that the greateſt meaſure or hardeſt ſtripes exceed neceſſity, or bee more then needs. For our moſt wiſe Father, in his corrections reſolueth to reforme al his children, and to free them from the greateſt, as well as from the leaſt ſins, as well from thoſe which they are moſt in loue with, and loatheſt to leaue, and from which they part with greateſt paine and difficlty, as from them with which being in leaſt league and liking, they are willing to leaue at the firſt admonition. And when hee taketh vs in hand, hee will maſter the proudeſt heart and ſtouteſt ſtomacke, as well as that which is milde and gentle; and for this end if [fewer and lighter ſtripes will not ſerue the turne, hee will inflict more and harder, neuer ceaſing till hee haue throughly humbled vs, brought vs vpon our knees, and made vs to promiſe reformation and amendment; becauſe if he giue ouer before hee haue attained vnto his end, wee ſhall be but hardned in our ſtubbornneſſe, and all the ſtripes which wee haue formerly ſuffered ſhall be in vaine.

§. Sect. 5. That our great afflictions argue our great ſins, either in their owne nature, or as they are aggrauated by circumſtances.

From whence wee may conclude, that if wee haue great or tedious afflictions lying vpon vs, either we haue great faults or great ſtomackes; or if wee be not guilty of haynous ſinnes in their owne nature, yet wee make them haynous vnto vs by diuers circumſtances; as by committing them willingly againſt knowledge and conſcience; by continuing in them after we are admoniſhed of them, and perſwaded to leaue them, both by Gods promiſes and threatnings: and finally, when wee are in ſuch loue and league with them, that no ordinary chaſtiſements will moue vs to forſake them. Neither let any man here ſay, that he hath humbled himſelfe already vnder Gods chaſtizing hand, and hath long agoe reſolued to forſake his ſinne, and many times promiſed amendement; and yet the Lord continueth to correct him, and therefore inflicteth ſtripes more than neceſſary: For thus not only the naturall child, but the child of God likewiſe, when they are vnder the rod, doe ſeeke to deceiue their Parents, to eſcape further correction; yea are euen themſelues oftentimes deceiued. For though in ſenſe of preſent ſmart they reſolue to amend, and haue ſome purpoſe to bee as good as their word; yet being not throughly ſetled in their reſolutions, they are vncōſtant in them; and together with their paine forget their promiſes. But though we may be deceiued and deceiue others, yet we cannot our heauenly Father, becauſe hee ſearcheth the heart and reines, and knowing when our reſolutions of amendement are flickring and vnſetled, and when they are well grounded, firme and conſtant, hee doth accordingly continue his chaſtiſements, till he hath fully confirmed them; vnleſſe vpon our faire promiſes he ſometimes ſpareth vs for a time, that we may vpon our owne experience, ſee how little credit is to be giuen to them; but no ſooner doth hee ſee vs throughly ſetled in our good reſolutions, and ſtedfaſtly purpoſed to forſake our ſinnes, but preſently hee caſteth away his rodde, and not giuing one blow more, doth eaſe and releaſe vs from all afflictions.

To

Chryſoſt. Homil. ad pop. Antioch. 4. de patientia.

To which purpoſe one ſaith, that God could, if hee pleaſed, euen in the very day that wee firſt call vpon him, lighten vs of all our load, but hee deferreth to doe it, till hee ſee vs throughly humbled and amended; and till hee know that our conuerſion and repentance bee conſtant, and without danger of flitting, he will not remoue our tribulation; but as the Gold-ſmith which draweth not his Gold out of the melting furnace, till hee perceiueth it be throughly purified from the droſſe, and when hee ſeeth it purified to his minde, will by no meanes ſuffer it to ſtay there any longer, becauſe it would but waſte and looſe of its waight: ſo doth the Lord ſuffer vs to remayne in the furnace of affliction till we be purged from our droſſe of ſinne, by renewing our faith and repentance; but no ſooner are wee according to his purpoſe purified, but he pulleth vs out, and will not ſuffer vs to waſte and conſume our ſelues with ſorrow, and heauineſſe. And therefore let vs with patience indure our tryall; ſeeing he who putteth vs into the furnace, knoweth when it is fitteſt time to take vs out; let vs with comfort and thankfulneſſe beare all our chaſtiſements; ſeeing we haue aſſurance, that wee ſhall not haue one ſtripe more than our heauenly Father in his infinite wiſdome ſeeth neceſſary, for the amendement of our liues and the ſauing of our ſoules.

CHAP. XIII.

That Gods loue appeareth in the ends of our afflictions in that hee vſeth vs as inſtruments in them to ſet forth his glory.

§. Sect. 1. That God is glorified in vs both as his ſouldiers fighting his battaile, and as his children corrected for our faults,

And thus haue I ſhewed how Gods loue appeareth in the meaſure of our afflictions: now wee are to intreate of their ends, wherein the like mercy and loue of God cleerely ſhineth. The ends which God propoundeth to himſelfe in our afflictions are his owne glory, and our good. For howſoeuer the Lord is in himſelfe ſo infinite and abſolute in glory and Majeſty, that nothing can be added thereunto, yet ſuch is his grace and goodneſſe, that he is content to vſe vs, poore ſinfull creatures, for his inſtruments, to manifeſt and declare to all the World his glory and prayſe by thoſe things which hee worketh by and in vs. The which as hee powerfully effecteth in many other reſpects, ſo eſpecially by our troubles and afflictions; for as when a Souldier behaueth himſelfe valiantly in the fight againſt his enemies, with inuincible courage incountring, foyling and putting them to flight, the honour of his fortitude and proweſſe, redoundeth alſo to his Captaine and Generall, vnder whom he ſerueth: ſo when in this Chriſtian Warfare we are aſſaulted with the enemies of our ſaluation, and namely with the world fighting againſt vs, and ſeeking to ouercome vs, ſometimes with the politicke ſtratagems of proſperity, and ſometimes with the downe-right blowes of aduerſity and affliction; God the great Generall of our Army is glorified in our Chriſtian valour and couragious magnanimity, when we doe with patience, fortitude and reſolution, endure all theſe encounters and beare the brunt of this battaile, and not only vndauntedly ſuſtaine the aſſaults of our enemies, but alſo doe foile and put them to flight, vſing their owne weapons againſt themſelues, and their force and violence for their owne ouerthrow and deſtruction. And that the rather, becauſe as wee fight vnder his conduct; ſo the weapons, armor, ſtrength and policy which wee vſe in this warfare, and whereby we are inabled to ouercome are not our owne, but ſuch as hee our grand Captaine hath imparted vnto vs. But that this point may be the better cleered, we may more ſpecially conſider, that God is glorified in our afflictions, whether we conſider them as the chaſtiſements of our ſins, or as tentations and tryals of the gifts and graces which we haue receiued from God. Hee is glorified in our chaſtiſements; for as the ſins which are committed by vs, who draw neere vnto him, and are of his houſe and family, doe aboue all other diſhonour him: ſo when he correcteth theſe ſinnes in vs by troubles & afflictions, he vindicateth his honour from the blaſphemies of Infidels and carnall Worldlings, in that hee is ſo juſt and vnpartiall, that he will not winke at ſinne in them who are ſo neere and deere vnto him, but rather (when he goeth his circuit of viſitation and aſſiſes) he beginneth firſt with his owne children and ſeruants; that by their chaſtiſements, whoſe ſinnes are pardoned in his Son, he may teach his profeſſed enemies, who remayne ſtill in their guilt, what they are to expect, both in this quarter Seſſions, on earth, and at the generall Aſſiſes at the day of Iudgement. And thus the Pſalmiſt ſaith, that the Lord is knowne by executing iudgement, and that both in the puniſhing of the wicked and chaſtening of his own ſeruants. So the Prophet Eſay hauing denounced Gods plagues againſt his people of Iſrael for their ſinnes, ſaith, that the Lord of hoaſts ſhall be exalted in iudgement, and the holy God ſhall be ſanctified in iuſtice. An example whereof wee haue in the ſonnes of Aaron, Nadab, and Abihu, who were chaſtened with that ſeuere correction of a temporary death, God giuing this reaſon hereof, by the mouth of Moſes; I will be ſanctified in them that come neere mee, and before all the people I will be glorified: As alſo in Dauid, who becauſe he had diſhonourd God among the Nations, in cauſing

1. Pet. 4. 17.

Pſal. 9. 16.

Eſay 5. 16.

Leuit. 10. 3.

cauſing them to blaſpheme his Name, by his hainous ſinnes, was therefore chaſtened by the death of his childe, that the aſperſion and ſtaine which his crimes had caſt vpon the glory of God, might by his ſharpe correction be wiped away. Againe, God is glorified in the chaſtiſements of his children, when as they profit and amend by his gracious corrections, not flying from him as an angry Iudge, or purſuing enemy, or deſperately contending againſt him by multiplying their ſinnes; but running vnto him as vnto a mercifull Father, in hope and aſſurance to receiue pardon and forgiueneſſe. For, the more God ſcourgeth his children, with the greater readineſſe they runne vnto him, humbling themſelues vnder his chaſtening hand, by vnfained repentance for their ſins, wherby they haue offended him; and crauing by feruent praier, mercy & pardon, according to that of the Prophet: O Lord in trouble they haue viſited thee, they haue powred out a praier when thy chaſtening was vpon them.

am.12,14.

ſa.26.16.

Sect. 2.
Gods glory is magnified in the manifeſtation of his power and goodneſſe ſhewing vs in afflictions.

Moreouer, Gods glory is magnified in the manifeſtation of his power and goodneſſe, when as we who are weake in our ſelues, are ſo ſupported and vpheld by the power of Gods might, that we are able to beare and ouercome the greateſt tentations; and when as being in our ſelues cowardly and fearefull, feeble and impotent, wee are ſo ſtrengthened and incouraged by his ſpirit aſſiſting vs, that we are able to ſtand againſt all the malice and might of Sathan, the world and wicked men, and notwithſtanding all the afflictions which we endure, and perſecutions which they raiſe againſt vs, doe put them to flight & obtaine the victory. Neither is this power and goodnes of God ſo manifeſted or magnified in our proſperity, either by others or by our ſelues; for then we ſeeme to ſtand in our owne ſtrength, & to haue little need of Gods aſſiſtance, when as wee haue in outward appearance no enemies to aſſault vs, but are walled and fenced in, on euery ſide with abundance of wordly benefits, as honors, riches, friends, health, ſtrength, liberty and the reſt: but when wee are aſſaulted with theſe mighty and terrible enemies, and haue an heauie and ſenſible weight of tentations laide vpon vs; and withall feele and finde in our ſelues nothing but feebleneſſe and faintneſſe, terrour, and cowardiſe; if wee beare this inſupportable burthen without fainting, and valiantly reſiſt theſe our enemies, vntill wee haue put them to flight and obtained victory; then is Gods power manifeſted in our infirmity; whoſe treaſures of grace, faith, patience, ſtrength and Chriſtian courage, are carried in vs as in earthen veſſels, that the excellency of theſe vertues and power, might be of God and not of vs, as the Apoſtle ſpeaketh. Finally, when with the ſame Apoſtle we can ſay, that we are afflicted on euery ſide, yet wee are not in diſtreſſe; in pouerty but not ouercome of pouerty; perſecuted but not forſaken, caſt downe but periſh not, and yet are vnable of our ſelues to beare the leaſt waight, or to ſuſtaine the aſſaults of our weakeſt enemies; then are we neceſſarily driuen to giue all the glory vnto God, and to cry out, that it is not our owne arme that ſaueth vs, but Gods right hand and arme and the light of his countenance, becauſe he had a fauour vnto vs. And againe, through thee haue we thruſt backe our aduerſaries, by thy name haue wee trodden downe them that roſe againſt vs. For I doe not truſt in my bow, neither can my ſword ſaue me. But thou haſt ſaued vs from our aduerſaries, and haſt put them to confuſion that hate vs. Therefore will we praiſe God continually, and will confeſſe his name for euer. Then will he that glorieth and reioyceth, reioice and glory in the Lord, and ſay with the people of God, not vnto vs o Lord, not vnto vs, but vnto thy name giue the glory. Yea then will others alſo acknowledge to Gods glory, that it was his power alone which ſupported vs in our weakneſſe and inabled vs with patience to beare ſo great tentations. According to that of the Prophet, Therefore ſhall the mighty people giue glory vnto thee, the city of the ſtrong nations ſhall feare thee, for thou haſt been a ſtrength vnto the poore, euen a ſtrength to the needy in his trouble; a refuge againſt the tempeſt, a ſhadow againſt the heat, &c. And as Gods mercy and power is magnified by ſupporting vs in our afflictions; ſo alſo when being oppreſſed with their vnſupportable waight, and brought into deſperate dangers, he aboue all hope & ſtrength, granteth deliuerance. For then we acknowledge with Hannah, that the Lord killeth and maketh aliue, bringeth downe to the graue and raiſeth vp, and are ready according to the example of Gods ſaints to ſing vnto his praiſe ſongs of deliuerance. And this is the end why the Lord doth chaſtiſe our ſinnes by troubles and afflictions, that we might glorifie him by our prayers and praiſes, and he might glorifie himſelfe in our maruellous deliuerance, according to that of the Pſalmiſt, call vpon me in the day of trouble, ſo will I deliuer thee, and thou ſhalt glorifie me. An example whereof we haue in the people of Iſraell, who being in grieuous bondage cried vnto the Lord for helpe and freedome: and the Lord not onely glorified his loue and mercie in hearing their crie and mone, and deliuering them out of their ſeruitude and miſery, but alſo his power and iuſtice in plaguing and ouerthrowing their enemies and oppreſſors. And ſo likewiſe the people glorified God, both in flying vnto him by prayer in their diſtreſſe, as vnto their only refuge; and alſo being freed, by ſinging vnto him ſongs of thankſgiuing for their great deliuerance. Thus our Sauiour ſaith of the blind man in the Goſpell, that this judgement lip.6.

Cor.4.7.
8.9.

Pſal.44.3,5,6,7,8.

2.Cor.10.17.

Pſal.115.1.

Eſay 25.3,4.

1.Sam.2.6.

Pſal.50.15.

Exod.2.23,24.
& 9.16,14.4.
& 15.1.

ment was laid on him, not for the puniſhment either of his owne or parents ſinne, but that the works of God ſhould be ſhewed on him, both in his temporall triall or chaſtiſement, and by the miraculous reſtoring of his ſight. And thus he ſpeaketh of Lazarus, that his ſickneſſe was not vnto death, but for the glory of God and that the ſonne of God might be glorified thereby, when as it ſerued as an occaſion to manifeſt the infinite power of his diuine nature, by raiſing him from death to life. Finally Gods wiſedome, power and goodneſſe, are manifeſted and magnified in our afflictions, when as contrary to their owne nature he turneth them to our good, euen the confirming and increaſing in vs of all his ſpirituall graces and the euerlaſting ſaluation of our ſoules. For what doth more ſhew and extoll the infinite wiſedome and omnipotency of God, than to be able to bring good out of euil, light out of darkneſſe ſweetneſſe out of bitterneſſe, and bleſſings out of curſes? than to make of a deadly poiſon a wholeſome medicine, to turne the puniſhments of ſinne into meanes of furthering vs vnto the rewards of righteouſneſſe, and of the path of perdition which led vnto hell, to make a direct and plain way vnto the kingdome of heauen?

Iohn 9.3.
Iohn 11.4.
Acts 14.22.

§. Sect. 3.
That God is glorified in our afflictions as they are tryals of his ſpirituall graces.
Iohn 21.19.

Thus alſo is the Lord glorified in our afflictions as they are trialls of our graces, and vertues which wee haue receiued of him; for ſeeing hee is the authour of them all, therefore when being tried they appeare and ſhine in vs, the glory of their excellencie chiefly redoundeth to him that gaue them. And as the excellencie of the worke doth manifeſt the skill of him that made it: ſo theſe vertues and graces being not our owne, but the excellent workmanſhip of Gods holy ſpirit, doe much magnifie the author of them when being tried, their worth is diſcouered. And therefore after the Lord hath made for vs an excellent armour of his ſpiritual graces, which is high proofe and ſufficient to beare and beate backe all the fiery darts of ſathans temptations, the piercing bullets of worldly proſperity, and theſe ſwords and ſpeares of outward croſſes and afflictions; and hath buckled this armor cloſe vnto vs by his holy ſpirit; then doth he exerciſe vs in his warfare againſt the enemies of his glory and our ſaluation, and ſuffereth them to bend againſt vs all their ſtrength, and to aſſault vs with all their weapons, darts and ſhot, that ſo our armour being tried and in triall approued, he may haue the honor that made it, and put it on vs. Againe whilſt we enioy worldly proſperity, and haue all things according to our hearts deſire, we doe with Iob lie open to the ſlander of ſathan and wicked men, who are ready to ſay that we doe not ſerue the Lord, and yeeld obedience to his commandements, becauſe of any goodneſſe and excellency which is in himſelfe; or for any conſcience of our duty, or any loue which wee beare vnto him for his owne ſake, as being our chiefe happines, and the ſupreame end of vs and all his creatures; but becauſe he hath hedged vs in on all ſides, multiplied on vs earthly benefits and (as it were) hired vs, to ſerue him with the preſent wages of wordly things, not out of any loue to him, but out of ſelfe-loue, to attaine vnto ſome preferment which we ambitiouſly aſpire vnto, or to obtain ſome temporary profit or pleaſure which we deſire; therefore doth the Lord ſtrip vs of theſe worldly bleſſings, and loadeth vs with troubles and afflictions for the triall of our faith, loue and obedience, to the end that it may appeare that wee ſerue him freely, for that excellency and goodneſſe which we ſee in himſelfe, and not for ſelfe loue and outward reſpects, by which our ſeruice he is chiefly glorified; for when being ſtripped of all worldly benefits, we can with Iob bleſſe the Lord; when with him we can ſay, though he kill me yet will I truſt in him; when we can profeſſe with the people of God, that not for our own, but for Gods ſake are we killed all the day long; & with the Apoſtles reioyce, becauſe he thinketh vs worthy to ſuffer for his name any miſery or affliction: then doe wee giue glory vnto God by acknowledging his owne worth and excellency, when wee thinke nothing too much which wee ſuffer for him; then doe we confeſſe him to bee the chief goodneſſe, when as we are glad, euen by our miſeries to manifeſt and magnifie his glory and maieſty.

Iob 1.9.
Iob 1,21. & 13,15.
Pſal. 44.22.
Acts 5.41.

§. Sect. 4.
That it is a great conſ in our affli ons to conſid that, God is glorified by them.

Now the conſideration hereof, that God is glorified in our afflictions, may ſerue as an effectuall argument to make vs beare them, not only with humility and patience, but alſo with ioy and thankfulneſſe; ſeeing wee may ſay with the people and Church of God, that we do ſuffer not for our ſinnes, but principally for Gods ſake, that he may be magnified and glorified in our afflictions. An example wherof we haue in the holy Apoſtles, who reioyced in their afflictions and perſecutions, becauſe they were thought worthy to ſuffer for the name of Chriſt. And eſpecially in the Apoſtle Paul who intending ſomwhat to boaſt himſelfe for the gracing of his Apoſtleſhip, doth chiefly glory in his afflictions, becauſe in them God was glorified; euen as elſewhere he reioyceth in his infirmities & afflictions of mind, that the power of Chriſt might be magnified in his weakneſſe; and taketh pleaſure in his infirmities, reproches, neceſſities, perſecutions and anguiſh for Chriſts ſake, becauſe in his greateſt weakneſſe he was ſtrong in him. Which examples we are bound to imitate for diuers cauſes: for firſt the Lord is our creator who gaue vs our being and made vs of nothing, that we might ſerue as inſtruments for the ſetting forth of his

Pſal. 44.22.
Acts 5.41.
2.Cor. 11.16,
Chap. 12.9,10

his glory, according to that of the Prouerbs; The Lord hath made all things for his owne ſake, yea, euen the wicked for the day of euill. If therefore we can by any meanes aduance his glory, though it be by our own ſmart and paine, we haue iuſt cauſe of comfort and reioycing, ſeeing whilſt we glorifie our creator we attaine vnto the end of our creation. Secondly he is our redeemer and Sauiour who hath bought vs with the precious price of himſelf; that not being our owne, but his that bought vs, we might glorifie him both in our ſoules and bodies, as the Apoſtle ſpeaketh. And in this reſpect he alſo telleth vs, that none of vs liueth to himſelfe, neither doth any die to himſelfe, for whether we liue we liue vnto the Lord, or whether we die we die vnto the Lord; and that whether we liue or die, we are the Lords. Seeing therefore we are the Lords, by a double right, both becauſe hee hath created vs of nothing, and hath alſo bought vs, who had ſold our ſelues to ſinne and ſathan; and that to this end that wee ſhould become his ſeruants, and in all things ſeeke the aduancement of his glory, great reaſon we haue to reioyce when any occaſion is offered whereby wee may glorifie him our Lord and redeemer, whether by proſperity or aduerſity, honour or diſhonor, ſickneſſe or health, impriſonment or liberty, life or death; and that whether we conſider the greatneſſe of the price which he gaue for our redemption, namely himſelfe for vs; or the euils and miſeries from which he hath deliuered vs, to wit, the wrath of God, the curſe of the law, and eternall death and condemnation of body and ſoule in the fire of hell. For well may we with comfort and patience yea with ioy and thankſgiuing ſuffer afflictions that his holy name may be glorified; ſeeing he hath been content to ſuffer much more grieuous puniſhments in the whole courſe of his life, as hunger thirſt, wearineſſe perſecution, the wrath of God and death it ſelfe, that he might by his ſufferings procure our glory; well may we reioice and triumph in our momentany & light afflictions which aduance the glory of our redeemer, who hath deliuered vs by his death and obedience from the intolerable and euerlaſting torments of hell fire: eſpecially conſidering, that this was the end of his paying ſo great a price for vs, that being bought, we might become his ſeruants, & he our Lord, whom we are to glorifie in all we doe or ſuffer. For ſo the Apoſtle ſaith, that Chriſt therefore died and roſe againe and reuiued, that he might be Lord both of the dead and the quicke, and that we are predeſtinate vnto eternall happineſſe in Chriſt, that truſting in him we ſhould be to the praiſe of his glory, and finally that he purchaſed the poſſeſſion of heauenly felicity for vs, not only to glorifie vs, but that we alſo might aduance his praiſe and glory. To conclude this point, the Lord is our ſummum bonum, and chiefe happineſſe, and his glory is the ſupreme end of al things. In regard whereof we are to reioice in our afflictions which tend to the manifeſtation of his glory, ſeeing thereby we attaine vnto our chiefe end. Yea we ſhould deſire rather in this reſpect to be excluded out of the joyes of Heauen, and to periſh euerlaſtingly; than that Gods glory vnto which all things are deſtinated, as vnto their chiefe end, ſhould be blemiſhed or impaired: as we may ſee in the example of Moſes, who rather than he would haue the Name of God diſhonoured among the Nations in the deſtruction of the people of Iſrael, deſired to be raſed out of the booke of life. As alſo in the Apoſtle Paul, who in penning of the holy Scriptures by the immediate inſpiration of Gods holy Spirit, which priuiledged him from erring through blinde and prepoſterous zeale, did earneſtly wiſh to bee an Anathema, or one ſeparated from Chriſt, and the euerlaſting joyes of his Kingdome, on this condition that God might be glorified in the ſaluation of the people of the Iewes. And therefore if we ought to be content, though we ſhould be depriued of euerlaſting ſaluation, and be ſubjected to euerlaſting puniſhments, that God may be glorified in vs; then how much more ſhould we endure with patience and comfort the loſſe of wordly joyes, and the ſmart of theſe ſhort and light afflictions when Gods glory is hereby manifeſted; although wee ſhould neuer haue further benefit of our ſufferings nor reward of our patience? But yet much more haue we cauſe of rejoycing and glorying in theſe our afflictions, if wee further conſider, that if wee thus honour God in ſuffering for his glory, he will eternally honour vs; if we glorifie him on earth, in the quiet and comfortable bearing of our croſſe, he will glorifie vs in his heauenly kingdome and crowne our patience with endleſſe happineſſe. If wee honor our ſauiour in our ſuffering with him, he will honour vs in our raigning with him. And finally if with comfort and ioy we doe for Gods ſake bear our croſſe which he laieth vpon vs, then ſhall theſe light and momentany afflictions cauſe vnto vs a far moſt excellent and an eternall waight of glory, as the Apoſtle ſpeaketh.

1. Cor. 10, 31.

Exod. 32. 32.

Rom. 9. 3.

1. Sam. 2, 30.

2. Tim. 2. 12.

2. Cor. 4. 17.

CHAP. XIV.

That God by our afflictions doth much aduance the good of our neighbours.

§. Sect. 1. That our neighbours haue good by our afflictions, as they learne by them to

THe other end of our afflictions is our owne good, or the good of the elect; and that whether we conſider our neighbors, or our ſelues. For the Lord our great King and commander reſpecteth vs, not only as we are pri-feare God in his iudgments.

Plato in Gor.

1.Pet.4.17.

uate and particular men, but as we are ſubiects of the ſame kingdome, and members of the ſame body: and therfore as he doth communicate his benefits vnto vs not for priuate vſe alone, but for the good of the whole christian common wealth; ſo alſo he inflicteth his chaſtiſements vpon the particular members of this body and ſociety, that they may redound to the vſe and benefit of all the reſt. And this the heathen man could diſcerne by the light of nature; calamities (ſaith he) and puniſhments are very profitable both to thoſe that ſuffer them, and thoſe that ſee them; for both by them are made better, they by paine, and theſe by example. As therefore the skilfull Muſitian doth ſtrain his ſtrings not to breake them, but to bring them to their perfect ſound, that not only himſelfe, but alſo all the ſtanders by may take delight in their melodious harmony; ſo the Lord doth, as it were, ſtretch and ſtraine vs with troubles and afflictions, not to cracke our patience, or to breake vs with their ſtreſſe, but to bring vs to our beſt perfection, that not only he may delight in vs, when we ſound out vnto him the harmonious muſick of his praiſes, but alſo may make all our neighbours the better with the ſweetnes of our melodie. But this will better appeare if we inſiſt in ſome particulars; for firſt others receiue benefit by the afflictions of the faithfull, in that they learne hereby to feare God, when as they ſee his righteous iudgements, ſeeing he winketh not at ſinne in thoſe who are deareſt vnto him, but whippeth and chaſteneth them for their amendment; and therefore if he ſo ſeuerely correct the ſlips and infirmities of thoſe whom he ſo tenderly loueth, how grieuouſly will he puniſh the hainous crimes of wicked men who are as yet at enmity with him; vnleſſe they preuent their deſtruction by vnfained repentance? according to that of the Apoſtle; If iudgement begin at Gods owne houſe and family, what ſhall be the end of them that obey not the Goſpell? If he deale ſo ſharpely with thoſe whom he iuſtifieth & acquitteth; what rigour are they to expect who ſhall appeare before him in their guilt of ſinne at the laſt iudgement? If hee make them thus to ſmart for their ſinnes whom he loueth, and in whom his ſoule delighteth; what torments hath he prepared, for thoſe whom he hateth and abhorreth? But eſpecially they receiue fruite and benefit by their afflictions, who are of the ſame ſociety and houſhould of faith; for as in the ſame familie, when one of the children or ſeruants are iuſtly corrected for their faults, it moueth all the reſt (if they haue any grace in them) to reuerence the father and maſter of the family, and to carry themſelues ſo, as they may auoide his diſpleaſure; and as ſchollers in the ſame ſchole, when they ſee one of their fellowes whipped for their negligence, doe (being warned by his example) become the more diligent in learning their leſſon: ſo the children and ſeruants of God, and diſciples of Ieſus Chriſt, when they ſee any of their company chaſtened by the hand of God they are moued hereby to feare and reuerence him, ſeeing hee is ſuch an one as will not bee dallied with, but expecteth and requireth obſeruance and duty of all whom he admitteth into his houſe, and family.

§. Sect. 2.
Secondly, o afflictions benefit others, they ſerue to reſtraine the from commi ting the ſam ſinne which they ſee pu ſhed in vs.

Secondly, others take profit by the afflictions of the faithfull, whileſt by their example they are reſtrained from the committing of ſinne, eſpecially of thoſe faults which they ſee corrected in their fellowes, leſt they alſo taſte of the ſame cup: and that the rather, becauſe if they take not warning by their chaſtiſements, they are juſtly to expect double payment, both becauſe they are culpable of the ſame faults, and becauſe they are not reformed by their example. For as the wiſe Commander, finding a great part of his army guilty of ſuch faults, as are by no meanes to go vnpuniſhed, and yet is ſo gracious, that he wil not haue al ſuffer the ſame puniſhment who are guilty of the ſame offence, as not ayming at their ſmart and pain, but at their reformation and amendement, doth decimate, or cull out the tenth perſon of the delinquents, whom hee chaſteneth, for the example of all the reſt: ſo our Lord of Hoaſts, and Captaine Generall, ſeeing many in the Church Militant guilty of the ſame faults, and on the one ſide, knowing that conniuency would embolden his ſouldiers in ſinne, worke neglect of duty, and bring all diſorder and confuſion in his Royall army; and on the other ſide, being in his owne nature ſo gracious, that he will not let his corrections exceed neceſſity, either in their meaſure, or extent; doth vſually chaſten one, of many that offend, that by his example the reſt may be brought to amendement. But if any vntouched, take no warning by others corrections, and continue in his faultineſſe, though God hath giuen him this meanes to reforme him, then is he like to haue his puniſhment doubled, and to ſuffer both for his ſinne, and his ſecure neglect of Gods ſeuerity to others, and mercy to himſelfe. And thus God chaſtened ſeuerely Moſes and Aaron for their diffidence and diſtruſt in his prouidence, that others might beware of the like infidelity: thus hee ſharply corrected Dauid for his adultery, and murther, that others by his example might flee vncleannes, and the ſhedding of innocent bloud. So hee turned Lots Wife into a Pillar of Salt, that others by her example might take heed of too much worldlineſſe, and loue of earthly things: to which purpoſe our Sauiour bids vs to remember Lots wife, that being warned by her puniſhment, wee doe not as wee are trauelling out of this Sodome of ſinne, for the

Luke 17.32.

the ſafegard of our ſoule, looke backe to the baits of worldly vanites, which will but allure vs to thinke of returning. For to what end (as one ſaith) was ſhee turned into a piller of ſalt, but that being ſeaſoned with her example, wee might become the wiſer? and therefore her ill example becommeth good vnto thee, if thou takeſt warning by it. But moſt plainely is this expreſſed by the Apoſtle Paul, who hauing ſpoken of many ſins committed by the Iſraelites in the wilderneſſe, and withall of thoſe great croſſes and calamities which the Lord for theſe offences inflicted on them; ſaith, that all theſe things came vpon them for enſamples, and were written to admoniſh vs, vpon whom the ends of the world are come, to the intent that wee ſhould not luſt after euill things, as they alſo luſted.

quid enim ſtatuam ſalis
...ſa, ſi non
...nes condit ſapiant? ex-exemplum
...ndium,
...ſit bonum ſi
...ri. Aug. in
...13. enar.

...o.10.6.11.

Thirdly, others are much benefited by the afflictions of the faithfull, becauſe in their fiery triall, Gods graces and gifts clearly ſhining in them; they are made vnto them notable examples and preſidents for their imitation. For the Lord pitying our ignorance in the way of vertue, eſpecially when it lieth through the deſerts of afflictions, and knowing how vncouth in it ſelfe it is vnto vs, doth cauſe others whom hee hath taught this way, to goe before vs (euen as he cauſeth vs alſo when we haue learned it, to go before others, who follow after vs) that the path being beaten and made plaine, may more eaſily bee found of thoſe who are to trauaile it. For example, thus doth the Lord by afflictions make manifeſt the faith, affiance, hope, loue, patience, obedience, and ſuch like graces, which hee hath beſtowed vpon others, that wee admiring and louing them, may ſeeke and labour after them, and ſo carry our ſelues alike vertuouſly when wee come into the like trials: and as a man hauing lighted a candle, doth not hide it in a hole, or as our Sauiour ſpeaketh, nor put it vnder a buſhel; but ſetteth it in a candleſtick, that by the light thereof, they of the family may bee giuded and directed; ſo the Lord hauing put into theſe choſen lampes, the oile of his graces, which being kindled with the fire of afflictions, doth giue a great and glorious light, he would not haue them to ſhine to themſelues alone, or to the Lord, who delighteth in their brightneſſe, but hee placeth them like lights on a hill, which giue direction to all paſſengers, or like candles on a table for the vſe and benefit of the whole family. And thus God tried Abraham when hee willed him to ſacrifice his Sonne, that wee by his example might learne faith and obedience, if wee ſhould bee called to the ſame triall. Thus hee tried Moſes, both with the proſperity, & afflictions of Egypt, that we might learne to make his election, chuſing rather to ſuffer aduerſity with the people of God, than to enjoy the pleaſures of ſinne for a ſeaſon; and eſteeme the rebuke of Chriſt, greater riches, than the treaſures of this earthly Egypt, becauſe wee haue reſpect to the recompence of reward. Thus was Dauid afflicted, that wee might learne by his example, when wee are in our greateſt diſtreſſes, and forſaken of all worldly helpe, to comfort our ſelues in the Lord our God; and when we are in moſt deſperate dangers, to humble our ſelues before him, and to ſubmit our wills and ſtates vnto his good pleaſure, ſaying, Behold here I am, let him doe to mee as ſeemeth good in his eye. Thus God afflicted Iob, that hee might bee vnto vs a patterne of patience, and that wee might learne by his example to prayſe God in all our loſſes, and though hee ſhould kill vs, yet to put our truſt in him. As alſo that by ſo gracious a deliuerance of him out of ſuch great troubles & miſeries, we may be aſſured that God who is euer one, & the ſame, without change or ſhadow of change, will alſo deliuer vs if we waite and depend vpon him. To which purpoſe the Apoſtle Iames propropoundeth his example vnto vs. Behold (ſaith hee) wee count them bleſſed which endure. Yee haue heard of the patience of Iob, and haue knowne what end the Lord made; for the Lord is pittiful and mercifull. Finally, thus was Steuen perſecuted to the death, that by his example, wee might learne to giue our liues for the name of Chriſt; and the Goſpell; and to pray for our perſecutors and tormentors. And thus Peter, Iohn, and Paul, were perſecuted, and euen loaded with miſeries and afflictions, that wee might by their example learne to rejoyce in all our tribulations, to triumph ouer all worldly miſeries, and in reſpect of the manifold benefits, which we receiue by our croſſes and afflictions to boaſt and glory in them. And that this vſe and benefit is to bee made of the afflictions of theſe holy Seruants of God, it may appeare in that not onely the Scriptures propound their example to this end; but exhort alſo vs to imitate & follow them. So the Apoſtle Iames perſwading to patience in afflictions, biddeth to take vp the Prophets for an example of ſuffering aduerſity, and of long patience, which haue ſpoken in the name of the Lord: and our Sauiour Chriſt willeth vs to rejoyce in our ſufferings for his ſake, not onely becauſe our reward is great in heauen, but alſo becauſe wee haue Gods holy Prophets, who were ſo dearely beloued of him, copartners with vs in ſuch like perſecutions. And thus doth the Apoſtle propound the manifold examples of Gods Saints, who indured many tryals, afflictions and perſecutions of all kinds, that wee who follow in theſe after ages, being compaſſed with ſo great a cloud of witneſſes, ſhould caſt away euery thing that preſſeth downe, and the ſinne which doth ſo eaſily beſet

...Sect. 3.
...ly, our afflictions pro-
...t our neigh-
...urs, as they
...ue to ma-
...feſt Gods graces in vs, and make vs examples of ...ty vnto
...

...n. 22.

...b. 11. 25.

1. Sam. 30. 6.

2. Sam. 15. 26.

Iob 1. 21. and 13. 15.

Iam. 5. 11.

Act. 5. 41.

2. Cor. 11. 16. 7.

Iam. 5. 8. 10.

Matth. 5. 12.

vs,

Heb.11.35.36. & 12.1.
2.Cor.1.6.

Gregor. Moral. lib.3.cap.2.

Niſi Satan Iobi corpus plagis perforaſſet, radij intrinſecus non renituiſſent &c.
Chriſoſt. ſerm. ad pop 5. To. 4
Aug. de Gen. ad literam. lib. 3. cap. 15.

Phil.1.13.14.

vs, and notwithſtanding all worldly hinderances, runne with patience the race that is ſet before vs. So the Apoſtle Paul ſaith, that whether he were afflicted, it was for the Corinthian conſolations and ſaluation, which was wrought in the enduring of the ſame ſufferings which hee ſuffered, or whether hee was comforted it was for their conſolation and ſaluation. By all which it appeareth, how behouefull the afflictions of ſome of the faithfull, are for the vſe and benefit of all the reſt, ſeeing they become patterns and examples for their imitation, and haue their vertues and graces by theſe trials diſcouered, that whereas before they were profitable onely to themſelues, and enioying alone the comfort of their owne light, now they ſhine alſo vnto others, and incourage them to vſe all good meanes that they may attaine vnto the like brightneſſe and perfection. To which purpoſe one ſaith, that it was neceſſary, that holy Iob who was onely knowne vnto God and himſelfe, how much hee excelled in vertue and pietie, ſhould by his afflictions bee knowne vnto all the faithfull that he might bee a preſident for their imitation. Neither could hee haue beene an example of vertue vnto others, if hee had continued in his proſperous eſtate without any trial or tentation. And another affirmeth, that if Sathan had not pierced, and (as it were) bored holes through his body with all thoſe plagues and puniſhments which hee inflicted on him, the bright beames of his graces would haue beene hidden within him, and would not haue ſhined vnto vs; if hee had neuer ſate downe in the aſhes, wee had neuer come to the knowledge of his ſpirituall riches. And another ſaith, that the faithfull are afflicted to this end, becauſe they are to bee propounded as examples of patience for the benefit of all the reſt: and as other of the faithfull are thus by their afflictions profitable vnto vs, ſo are we in ours alike profitable vnto others, if in the fiery tryall, Gods graces, and the good vertues which we haue receiued doe ſhine vnto them. For, if like ſpices we bee punned is this morter of afflictions, the odoriferous ſmell of our ſpirituall graces, which before were ſcarce diſcerned, doth now ſpread a broad, to the comfort and refreſhing of all that ſtand about vs; and whereas if like roſes we grow vntouched, we doe but for the preſent ſend forth ſome ſweet ſmell to thoſe who are next vnto vs: contrariwiſe, if wee bee diſtilled with the fire of afflictions, wee ſhall yeeld ſweet waters of durable comfort, euen to thoſe who are farre diſtant, and ſuch as liue in after-ages, when by report this ſweet odour of our fame ſhall come vnto them. And thus the Apoſtle ſaith of himſelfe, that his bonds of Chriſt were famous throughout all the iudgement hall, and in all other places, inſomuch that many of the brethren in the Lord, were imboldned by his bands, ſo that they durſt more frankly ſpeake the Word.

§. Sect. 4.
That we benefit our neighbours in our afflictions, a they are patterns of humane frailty.

Yea, not onely haue the faithfull much benefit by the afflictions of others of the ſame family; as they are vnto them notable examples for their imitation, when as they ſee the beames of Gods graces ſhining in them; but alſo as they are patterns of humane frailty, whileſt in their afflictions they bewray their impatience and infirmities; for what comfort could any man now haue in bearing his croſſe with ſo great weakneſſe and imperfection, if he did not diſcerne that Gods dearely beloued ſeruants and great Worthies had ſhewed the like frailty? Whereas when we ſee in Iob (the patterne of patience) ſo much weakneſſe and impatiency, by fits, when he was moſt pinched with his waight of affliction oppreſſing him; when as wee behold Dauid (an example of pietie, and a man according to Gods owne heart,) in his great afflictions as a man forlorne, forſaken of God, and in a deſperate condition; Elias deſiring by death to be freed from a troubleſome life; Ionas fretting, fuming and euen chiding with God, becauſe he thought himſelfe impeached in his credit and reputation; and Ieremy a worthy Prophet, curſing the day of his natiuity, becauſe he came forth of the wombe to ſee labour and ſorrow, that his his dayes ſhould bee conſumed with ſhame; then are wee comforted after we haue in the like croſſes bewrayed our infirmities, if with them, when the conflict is ouer, we returne vnto our ſelues, and bewaile theſe ſlips and falls by true repentance. And as wee haue this conſolation by others, ſo haue our poore weake brethren the like by vs, when being adorned and well furniſhed with Gods gifts and graces, we doe notwithſtanding in our afflictions bewray our weaknes and frailty, whereas if they had only experience of their owne infirmities and imperfections, and could not obſerue the like in other of Gods Seruants, whom they acknowledge indued richly with his graces, and notable inſtruments of his glory, they would eaſily conclude, that they are not in the number of the faithfull, but in the ranke of the damned and reprobate; and ſo the waight of their ſinnes and an euill conſcience, being added vnto the already-heauy burthen of affliction, would ouerwhelme and preſſe them downe into the bottomleſſe gulph of deſperation and perdition.

Ier.20.18.

§. Sect. 5.
That our affli
ctions benefit our neighbous when b them they a brought to ſe Gods perfe ons in our i perfections,

Moreouer others of the faithfull haue much profit and benefit by our afflictions as they are occaſioned hereby to acknowledge, prayſe and magnifie Gods power appearing in our weakneſſe, his wiſedome in our ſimplicity and ſeelineſſe, and his goodneſſe and the vertue of his graces, in our frailty and naturall corruption; for when as they plainely y may glo-ſie in 3.11

plainely ſee, that wee who are weake and impotent of our ſelues, and ready to faint and fall vnder the lighteſt burthen, do neuertheleſſe ſtand ſtoutly and couragiouſly in the greateſt tentations, & vnder the heauieſt waight of afflictions, they are forced to aſcribe the glory to God, by whoſe power we are ſupported; and when they behold vs deliuered out of all our troubles, who in reſpect of all outward helpes, were in a deſperate condition, they are neceſſarily hereby moued to giue God the prayſe, by whoſe wiſedome and might we are deliuered. And as when wee ſee one of our friends and companions, whom we knew weake, impotent and vnskilfull in all feates of actiuity, wraſtling with a mighty and cunning aduerſary, wee preſently giue him ouer in our thoughts as foyled, ſhamed and ouerthrowne; but if contrary to our expectation, hee foyle and caſt downe his ſtrong and skilfull enemy, we ſo triumph in his victory, as that wee giue the chiefe prayſe vnto the Maſter of the maſteries, from whom he hath had his ability and cunning: ſo when we behold any of our brethren, whom we know to be naturally weake, impotent and impatient of the leaſt paine, combating and wraſtling with our puiſſant enemie the World, who ſtriueth might and maine to ouerthow them, (with thoſe powerfull forces of miſeries and afflictions, as we cannot but giue them ouer for vanquiſhed, if we reſpect their owne skill and ſtrength; ſo when contrary to expectation wee ſee them get the victory, and ouerthrew their enemy; as we haue juſt cauſe to applaude them and to rejoyce in their conqueſt; ſo moſt of all, to prayſe and magnifie the Lord, from whom alone they haue receiued all their ſtrength and skill.

Sect. 6.
ly our afions we are de compaſte and ready d able to fort os.

Finally, others haue fruite and benefit by our afflictions, both becauſe our hearts are made tender by them, and apt to pittie thoſe whom wee ſee ſubject to the like miſeries; and alſo becauſe after wee are deliuered, we are able out of our owne experience to comfort them with thoſe conſolations wherewith wee our ſelues haue beene comforted. For, in the former reſpect it may truely bee ſaid of pitie and mercy, as of loue and charity, that they begin at home; neither is euer a man ſo pitifull and mercifull vnto thoſe whoſe caſe is miſerable, as when himſelfe hath beene pinched with the like miſeries; nor is there any place in his heart for compaſſion of others griefes, till paſſion and ſuffering of the ſame euils haue beene there before. And for the other it may bee affirmed with like truth, that there is no man ſo fit to comfort others, as hee who ſpeaketh out of his owne experience, raiſing vp their dejected minds with thoſe conſolations, wherewith himſelfe hath formerly beene comforted and refreſhed. For, as in the body, the ſame ſalue ſerueth for the ſame ſore, and the ſame medicine for the ſame diſeaſe, though they be applyed to diuers perſons, ſo that reſpect bee had to fit them to their ſtrength, conſtitution, and temperature; and therefore no Phyſition is more able to cure another man, than hee who hath firſt cured himſelfe of the ſame diſeaſe; becauſe vnto his art is joyned experience, whereby it is made perfect: ſo in the minde, the ſame conſolations are moſt fit for the ſame croſſes, ſo that there bee a wiſe conſideration of the diſpoſition and ſpiritual conſtitution of the parties to whom they are applyed. And therefore when wee comming to comfort others, can out of our owne experience ſay, I my ſelfe haue beene thus afflicted; and thus, and thus did I receiue conſolation, and was ſtrengthened in patience to beare my croſſes: Theſe and theſe great things did the Lord for mee in the time of my trouble, thus did hee ſtrengthen mee in my greateſt weakneſſe, and thus did he ſupport mee with his might, when being feeble in my ſelfe I was ready to faint and fall; thus was I refreſhed with ſpirituall conſolations and the inward feelings of Gods loue and mercy, and thus did he powerfully deliuer mee, (when in reſpect of all outward meanes my caſe was deſperate: theſe comforts, as they will be in all likelihood more effectuall to cure a diſeaſed mind, becauſe they are, approued by experience; ſo will the ſicke patient more willingly take them, when he knoweth that his Phyſition doth not try new concluſions out his art and theory, but doth practiſe out of of his owne experience, preſcribing the ſame medicine to his patient, where with himſelfe being ſo affected was lately cured. And thus doth Dauid, being deliuered from his troubles comfort others out of the experience which hee had of Gods mercies. I ſought the Lord (ſaith he) and he heard mee, yea hee deliuered me out of all my feare: and how effectuall this would bee for this vſe, hee ſheweth in the words following; they ſhall looke vnto him and runne vnto him, and their faces ſhall not bee aſhamed, ſaying; this poore man cryed and the Lord heard him, and ſaued him out of all his troubles. So the Apoſtle Paul ſaith plainely, that God comforted him in all his tribulations, that he might be able to comfort them who are in any affliction, by the comforts wherewith himſelfe was comforted of God; and that he was afflicted for the conſolation and ſaluation of the Corinthians, which was wrought in the induring of the ſame ſufferings which he alſo ſuffered. Yea, thus was the great Phyſition of our ſoules, Ieſus Chirſt, the better inabled to raiſe vs, fainting in our infirmities, with the cordials of comforts, by hauing firſt in himſelfe experience of our griefes and miſeries:

Pſal. 34.4.5.6.

2. Cor. 1.4.

Heb.2.18.

ries: for as the Apoſtle ſaith, in that he ſuffered and was tempted, he is able to ſuccour them that are tempted. And therefore if Chriſt himſelfe, as he was man and our Mediatour, though hee were moſt exquiſite in skill, had need for the full perfecting of it, to haue experience of our trialls and tentations, that ſo he might be the better inabled to relieue and comfort vs in all our afflictions & diſtreſſes; how much more neede haue wee of this experience that we may be fitted to giue conſolation vnto others, ſeeing wee come infinite degrees ſhort of him in skill and wiſedome?

§. Sect.7.
That the good of our brethren by our afflictions ſhould much comfort vs in ſuffering them.

And thus it appeareth that our neighbours and brethren who are of the ſame houſhold of faith, children of the ſame heauenly Father and fellow members of the ſame Head Ieſus Chriſt, doe receiue many ſingular benefits by our troubles and afflictions, & that when we are like fruitfull grapes preſſed with the waight of tribulation, they doe drinke from vs the pleaſant wine of conſolation, whereby their fainting hearts are cheared and refreſhed. The conſideration whereof ſhould much comfort vs in all our croſſes and calamities, becauſe they not onely tend to the aduancement of Gods glory, but alſo redound to the vſe and benefit of thoſe who are ſo neere and deere vnto vs. For if wee are bound by the law of charity to loue our neighbours, as wee loue our ſelues; and if wee come into the world that we ſhould not liue for our owne benefit, but for the good of euery one of that Chriſtian ſociety, whereof wee are parts and members; then ought we as much to rejoyce when wee haue any occaſion of aduancing the benefit of euery one who liueth in the Church, as if it tended to our owne priuate profit, and did much further vs in our owne particular. We ſee that euery true member of the body doth ſuffer much with all cheerefulneſſe for the good of a fellow member, and is content to indure any torture and torment, euen to the ſeparation of it ſelfe from the reſt, for the good and preſeruation of the whole body; and wee may perceiue that the ſame affection and loue is in the ſpirituall members of the myſticall Body of Ieſus Chriſt, as wee haue ſhewed in the example of Moſes and Paul, who as they indured much with patience for particular members, ſo they wiſhed to be cut off and ſeparated for the welfare and ſaluation of the whole Church. Wee heare alſo the ſame Apoſtle teaching vs, that it is the nature of true charity not to ſeeke her owne things, but ſuffereth all, and indureth all, for their ſakes whom it loueth & affecteth. And therefore wee muſt be ready to ſeeke others good as well as our owne: and with patience and cheerefulneſſe to indure croſſes and afflictions, which we ſee ſo much to aduance their profit and benefit, or elſe we muſt conclude that wee are deſtitute of charity, and conſequently of all ſauing grace, and that we are no true members of Ieſus Chriſt. But with much more comfort and ſpirituall rejoycing may wee beare our croſſe, when as we further conſider that it doth aduance the good, not of one alone, but that our ſingle ſufferings are fruitfull vnto many; and that not in any equality of proportion, ſeeing our bodily ſufferings redound to the good of their ſoules, our corporall tribulations tend to the inriching of them with ſpirituall graces, and our temporary, light and momentany afflictions doe further them in attaining vnto that farre moſt excellent and eternall waight of glory. Wherein we haue our Sauiour Chriſt an example for our imitation, who with all alacrity and joy ſuffered for vs all the miſeries of a wretched life, and the vnſpeakeable torments of a curſed death, that by his miſeries hee might aduance our happineſſe, and by the torments of his death might procure for vs heauenly joyes and euerlaſting life. Or if we thinke him a precedent and patterne aboue our pitch and reach, let vs ſet before vs the example of his holy Apoſtle, who joyned in his afflictions which hee endured for the Churches ſake. Now I reioyce (ſaith he) in my ſufferings for you and fulfill the reſt of the afflictions of Chriſt in my fleſh, for his bodies ſake whith is the Church. Whereby the reſt, or that which is behind of the afflictions of Chriſt, we are not to vnderſtand the remainder of Chriſts ſufferings, which hee ſuffered for the redemption of the Church and the ſatisfaction of Gods juſtice for ſin: for theſe ſufferings Chriſt himſelfe alone indured and perfectly finiſhed: but whereas there are two kinds of the ſufferings of Chriſt, the one borne by himſelfe alone, as our Head for the redemtion of his body, which was his owne peculiar part, allotted vnto him by the decree of his Father, for the ſatisfying of his juſtice for our ſinnes: the other to be borne by his Chruch and faithfull people, who are his myſticall Body, of which ſufferings euery particular member hath his part and ſhare appointed vnto him by the ſame decree of God; this place is to bee vnderſtood of afflictions of this latter kind, and not of the former; in which regard the Apoſtle calleth them here the afflictions of Chriſt, and not the ſufferings: ſo that the meaning is, that as Chriſt himſelfe ſuffered thoſe firſt and chiefe afflictions for the redeeming his Church, which was his owne part appropriated vnto him: ſo the Apoſtle ſuffered his part in the remainder of theſe afflictions which were to bee ſuffered in his body, that it might bee conformable to him the Head in ſufferings, vnto whom it was afterwards to bee conformable in glory. The which afflictions are called the afflictions of Chriſt, becauſe he

1.Cor.13.4.7.

Col.1.24.

Rom.8.17.29.

ὑστερήματα τῶν θλίψεων τοῦ χριστοῦ.

Act.9.4.

he ſuffereth with euery member, as being the Head of the whole Body, as appeareth by thoſe his owne words Saul, Saul, why perſecuteſt thou me? And the Apoſtle here ſaith that he ſuffereth them for the Churches ſake, not to redeeme it in whole or part, or to ſatisfie Gods juſtice for ſinne (which had beene blaſphemous) but for the Churches vſe and profit, namely as his afflictions were the meanes of deriuing vnto all the faithfull all thoſe excellent benefits of which I haue already ſpoken.

CHAP. XV.

That afflictions doe not hurt the faithfull, nor bring vnto them any great euill.

§. Sect. 1.
n though ctions be ll in their e nature, their na-is changed the faithfull.

HAuing already proued that God out of our afflictions aduanceth and manifeſteth his owne glory, and alſo furthereth by them the good of our neighbour: it now followeth that I alſo ſhew, that the Lord in our croſſes aymeth at, and accordingly powerfully effecteth our owne good. Neither doth the Lord inflict them as puniſhments of ſinne to ſatisfie his juſtice by our harmes, but as chaſtiſements of a gracious Father inflicted out of meere loue for our ſingular vſe and great benefit. The former of theſe two points is firſt to bee proued, as being a paradox to the world and our corrupt fleſh, who feare and fly from afflictions as the greateſt euils, and doe in no other reſpect miſlike this life, but becauſe it is obnoxious and ſubject vnto them. And ſurely it cannot bee denied but that theſe afflictions (as before I haue ſhewed) are in their owne nature euill, and that to wicked men they are exceeding hurtfull, ſeeing they thruſt them into many tentations, and cauſe them to fall into many ſinnes: they much vex and torment them both in their ſoules and bodies, and are vnto them the beginnings, and (as it were) the firſt flaſhes of their helliſh tortures: but vnto the Child of God and true beleeuer, their nature is changed, their ſting of ſinne is taken away, and ſo though in themſelues they bee harmefull they become harmeleſſe vnto them. For as one ſaith, aduerſity hurteth not, where iniquity raigneth not. And this commeth to paſſe chiefly and principally through the infinite wiſedome and power of God, who taketh away the ſtrength from this poyſon, and the hurtfull ſting from this Serpent; and alſo through the vertue of the precious death of his Son Ieſus Chriſt, who is the true braſen Serpent lift vp vpon the croſſe, vpon whom whoſoeuer looketh with the eye of Faith, after they feele thẽſelues ſtung with theſe fiery Serpents of afflictions, they are preſently cured and find no harme at all by theſe wounds. And partly they become harmeleſſe through the inward vertue of their ſpirituall graces receiued from God, which as ſingular preſeruatiues diſpell the poyſon of afflictions; and ſo alter their nature through that right vſe which they make of them, as that they become not only harmeleſſe but alſo good and profitable. To which purpoſe one ſaith, that as wicked men doe wickedly vſe, not onely euill things, but alſo thoſe which are good: ſo they who are juſt doe vſe well, not good things alone, but alſo thoſe which are euill. Whereof it is that they abuſe the Law of God, although it be good; and theſe doe die well, although death it ſelfe be euill. And this may well be, becauſe (as I haue ſhewed) no worldly thing is of ſimple and abſolute goodneſſe, and therefore is ſubject to bee abuſed vnto euill; neither is there any thing in the Earth (ſinne onely excepted) ſimply and abſolutely euill, and therefore it may be vſed vnto good. So, one ſaith, that it is not euill to ſuffer euill; but to doe euill, that is euill. And therefore the patient enduring of euils aſſureth vs of the Kingdome of Heauen; but the committing of euils threatneth vs with the torments of Hell Fire.

dis nocebit ſitas, ſi la dominaur iniquitas
ard. in pi habi.
ap. 3.

Auguſt de ciuit. dei lib. 3. cap. 5.

Malum pati malum non eſt: malum facere malum eſt &c. Chryſoſt. de prodit. Iudæ.

§. Sect. 2.
Reaſons why worldly afflictions cannot hurt the faithfull.

There is no hurt therefore in afflictions to them that can make aright and holy vſe of them; neither can all the miſeries of the world make a faithfull man miſerable; both becauſe as his happineſſe conſiſteth not in earthly things, but in ſpirituall and heauenly; ſo he cannot be made vnhappy, either with the want of the beſt things that the world can brag of, or with the preſence and feeling of the worſt things which it can threaten: and alſo becauſe that grace and goodneſſe which he hath receiued from God as a little ſparke of that infinite flame, is (like vnto fire) of ſuch a quality, that it turneth and changeth euery thing which toucheth it into its own nature, and by a predominant vertue, and powerfull working conuerteth euill into good, and curſes into bleſſings. But chiefely and principally this commeth to paſſe thorough the infinite wiſedome, power, and goodneſſe of God, who is able to bring good out of the greateſt euill, and ſo to order and diſpoſe of our moſt grieuous afflictions, as wee ſhall receiue no hurt by them, but like the three Children remaine vntouched, euen when we are in the middeſt of this fiery furnace.

Sapiens poteſt miſer dici, non poteſt eſſe. Sen. de prouident. lib. cap. 3.

§. Sect. 3.
That afflictions doe not depriue vs of bleſſings which are of greateſt worth, but rather encreaſe them.
Rom. 8. 38. 39.

The which will the better appeare, if wee further conſider, that the afflictions of this life, doe neither depriue vs of any of thoſe things which are of cheifeſt excellency; nor bring vpon vs any of thoſe euills, which are principally to bee auoided. As for example, they do not, nor cannot ſeparate vs from the loue of God, as the Apoſtle witneſſeth, in whoſe fauour is life in death, and happineſſe in in the greateſt miſery; yea rather, to thoſe who vſe them well, they are teſtimonies and pleadges of his loue, ſeeing whom he loueth, hee correcteth, and ſcourgeth euery ſonne whom hee receiueth. They doe not extinguiſh nor diminiſh in vs Gods ſanctifying and ſauing graces; but rather their heate is intended and increaſed, when as they approach and come neere vnto this fire of afflictions. They doe not make vs more ſlacke and negligent in the duties of Gods ſeruice, in hearing the word, prayer, and all holy and religious exerciſes; yea rather the fire of afflictions is a chiefe helpe for the offering of thoſe ſacrifices; and if wee be not ſometimes warmed with the heate thereof, we quickly grow cold in our deuotions, performing either no ſeruice vnto God at all, or elſe with great careleſneſſe, ſloth, and negligence. Finally they doe not at all hinder our heauenly happineſſe, but further haſten, and increaſe it. In which reſpect we may ſay of all afflictions, as one ſpeaketh of perſecution; whatſoeuer rageth againſt the name of Chirſt is tolerable, if it may bee ouercome; and if it cannot, it haſteneth the receiuing of our glorious reward; for the faithfull man in the end of his temporall euils, paſſeth into the fruition of his eternall good.

Heb.12.6.

Aug.in ſenten.

Sect.4.
That afflictions bring not vpon vs the chiefeſt euils that are to be feared and auoided, but rather the contrary good.

And as they doe not depriue vs of thoſe chiefe bleſſings and benefits which are to be chiefely deſired and eſteemed; ſo they doe not bring vpon vs thoſe greateſt and moſt capitall euils which are principally to be feared and auoided. They doe not impaire our ſpirituall eſtate or make vs worſe; but contrariwiſe, bring more good to our ſoules, than hurt to our bodies; for as by them the outward man decayeth, the inward man is renewed daily; and as they are notable meanes to mortifie the fleſh, ſo alſo to make the ſpiritual man more ſtrong and vigorous. They doe not defile the faithfull man with ſin, nor make him in himſelfe more vitious, & in his life and conuerſation more lewd and licencious; but rather ſerue as fire and files, to purge and ſcoure him from the droſſe and ruſt of ſinne, as profitable corrections to reforme him of his vices, as bridles to reſtraine him from running into licentious courſes; and as hedges of thornes to keepe him from pampring his fleſh in the paſtures of ſinful pleaſures or if he bee fallen into any ſinne, they are not incouragements heartning him to liue and continue in it; yea rather they warne him from wickednes, when as hee findes this gall and wormewood mingled with ſinfull delights; and ſerue as ſtrong cords and cables to pull him out of the ſinke of ſinne, and to draw him vnto God by vnfained repentance. They doe not ſubiect vs to the curſe of the law, the wrath of God, the torments of Hell, and euerlaſting condemnation: but rather they helpe to bring vs to a ſight of ſinne, and to a ſenſe of our owne miſery, and ſo driue vs out of our ſelues vnto Chriſt, hungring after his righteouſneſſe and reſting vpon him by a liuely faith for iuſtification and ſaluation. The which being the onely condition of the couenant of grace, wee are aſſured by it, that wee haue our part in Chriſt his righteouſneſſe and obedience, and all the gracious promiſes of the Goſpell made in him: and conſequently that hee hath freed vs from the curſe of the Law, by being made a curſe for vs; appeaſed Gods wrath, by ſatisfying his iuſtice; and deliuered vs from Hell and condemnation, by ſuffering the puniſhments which wee had deſerued. So that our afflictions are not vnto vs (as they are vnto the wicked) the puniſhments of ſinne, and firſt beginnings of Hell torments: but rather when wee are thus iudged, we are chaſtened of the Lord, that we might eſcape this helliſh condemnation. They will not hurt vs in the day of death, but by being inured to ſuffer them, death becommeth much more tolerable, and we bid it welcome with far greater cherefulneſſe; becauſe wee know that it will put an end vnto all theſe earthly miſeries. Neither will they cauſe any euill vnto vs in the day of iudgement, ſeeing then we muſt anſwere for the euill which wee haue done, and not for the euill which we haue ſuffered: but contrariwiſe if wee haue borne theſe afflictions with patience, and profited in grace by theſe corrections; then ſhall wee receiue the crowne of our patience and for our ſhort and momentany afflictions, a farre moſt excellent and eternall waight of glory. Yea ſo farre are they from plunging vs into theſe intolerable and euerlaſting euils, that they do not ſubiect vs to the greateſt of thoſe miſeries which this life affordeth, for God ſendeth them to trie vs, and not to deſtroy vs, that they may purifie vs, and not bring vs to vtter perdition; for (as hath beene ſhewed) hee ſuffereth vs not to be tempted aboue our power, but ſtill giueth a good iſſue vnto the tentation; and though he caſt vs into this fiery furnace of afflictions, yet euen when (like the buſh appearing to Moſes) wee ſeeme to burne, we are not conſumed: though he bring vs into many miſeries, yet he doth not ſuffer vs to periſh in them. For though great bee the troubles of the righteous, yet the Lord deliuereth him out of all; though for a time hee ſeeme to embondage them to afflictions, yet at laſt, the Lord redeemeth the ſoules of his Seruants, and none that truſteth in him ſhall periſh. Though he ſeemeth to giue them ouer to the cruelty of their enemies, yet he ſo continually protecteth and watcheth ouer them with his power and prouidence, that they may alwayes ſay with the Church, They haue oftentimes afflicted me from my youth but they could

1.Cor.11.3

Nemo frang
tur aduerſ moleſtia; q proſperitat dilectione capitur. Au de ſerm. in monte lib.
1.Cor.10.13

Exod.3.1.2.

Pſal.34.19.

*Verſ.*22.

Pſal.129.1.2.

could not preuaile againſt mee. The plowers haue plowed vpon my back and made long furrowes: but the righteous Lord hath cut the cords of the wicked. And with the Apoſtle Paul; wee are afflicted on euery ſide, yet are we not in diſtreſſe; in pouertie, but not ouercome of pouertie; perſecuted, but not forſaken; caſt downe, but wee periſh not. For though we be weake in our ſelues, yet are wee ſtrengthened with the power of Gods might; though wee are faint and feeble, and our enemies mighty and many, yet being built vpon Chriſt the Rocke of our ſaluation, the gates and power of Hell ſhall not preuaile againſt vs.

And thus it appeareth that the afflictions of the faithfull doe not hurt them, eſpecially in thoſe things which are chiefly pernicious: but I may adde further, that it much hurteth them, not to be thus afflicted; that it is a miſerable thing neuer to haue beene in miſery; and a great vnhappineſſe to haue alwayes enjoyed wordly happineſſe. For want of correction maketh vs to become, (like cockred children) contemptuous towards our heauenly Father, forgetfull of his mercies, negligent in all duties which we owe vnto him, diſſolute and licentious in all our courſes, ſecure in wickedneſſe, and ſo wanton in following our owne wils, that wee are ready to be diſpleaſed, becauſe nothing diſpleaſeth vs, and to grow fooliſhly diſcontented, becauſe wee haue no cauſe of diſcontentment. To which purpoſe one ſaith well, that Impunity is the Mother of Security, and Negligence; the Step-mother of Vertue, the poyſon of Religion, and Moath of Holineſſe. For ſuch is the corruption of our nature, that we neuer come to good, if wee haue free leaue to be as bad as we will; neither is the bare commandement of our heauenly Father enough to make vs yeeld ſimple obedience, vnleſſe it be ſtrengthened and made powerfull in our minds, both by rewards and puniſhments. And although vertue and goodneſſe bee in themſelues ſo louely and beautifull, that they are moſt worthy of entertainment, though they ſhould come alone, hauing no other to ſolicite for them: yet are we ſo carnally poreblind and owle-ſighted, and ſo wholy wedded to the things of this life, that we are not willing to admit them, vnleſſe wee haue the hire of ſome earthly reward. And ſo contrariwiſe; though ſinne be in it owne nature ſo vgly and hatefull, that we haue great cauſe to abhorre it, and flee ſuch loathſome company, though nothing ſhould diſcommend it, but its owne deformity; yet doth our carnall appetite ſo tranſport vs, that like filthy Swine we would take delight to wallow our ſelues in this loathſome puddle, if wee were not beaten out of it, with theſe rods of correction, and made to forſake it with ſenſe of paine.

CHAP. XVI.

That God aduanceth the good of the faithfull by their afflictions, and firſt as they are trials of their ſpirituall graces.

§. Sect. 1. That God in our afflictions aymeth at our good.

BVt if this be not ſufficient to make vs beare our afflictions with patience and comfort, becauſe in them God neither intendeth vs any harme, nor in effect bringeth by theſe euils any euill vpon vs, either in this life or the life to come: Let vs now further conſider that in all our croſſes he aymeth at, and accordingly doth by them powerfully effect our good, being of ſuch infinite wiſdome, power, and goodneſſe, that he can bring ſweetneſſe out of this gall, bleſſings out of theſe curſes, and wholſome nouriſhment out of theſe deadly poyſons. So the Apoſtle telleth vs, that all things (and namely afflictions of which he there ſpecially intreateth) worke together for the beſt vnto them that loue God, euen to them that are called of his purpoſe; and elſe-where he ſaith, that the Lord giueth (not only a harmeleſſe, but alſo) a good iſſue to all our tentations. Thus the Lord himſelfe affirmeth, that he brought the Iſraelites into the Wilderneſſe, where they indured much affliction, to humble them, and proue them, that hee might doe them good at their latter end. And the Church in the middeſt of her greateſt calamities out of her own feeling and experience ſaith, that it is good for a man that hee beare the yoke from his youth. And Dauid for his owne particular ſaith; It is good for me that I haue beene afflicted, that I might learne thy ſtatutes. Yea, not only doth the Lord alwayes aduance by afflictions the ſpirituall and euerlaſting good of the faithfull, but ſometimes alſo turneth them to their greater benefit euen in the things of this life; as wee may ſee in the example of Ioſeph, who was ſold as a ſlaue that he might be made a great Commander, and loſt his patrimony at home, that he might receiue a much more large inheritance in a ſtrange Country; and therefore he profeſſeth that when his Brethren intended euil againſt him, God diſpoſed it to the good, not of himſelfe alone, but of many others. And thus alſo Iob by his afflictions was not only aſſured of heauenly glory; but alſo got endleſſe fame on earth, and was not alone enriched much more with Gods ſpirituall graces, but alſo had a two-fold increaſe in his worldly eſtate. Neither ought this to ſeeme ſtrange, that God through his infinite wiſedome and power, ſhould bee able to bring happineſſe out of miſery, comfort out of croſſes, and ſo much good out of theſe afflictions, which both to the fleſh and the world do ſeeme ſo euill; ſeeing it is a familiar courſe with earthly Phyſitions, by medicines to make men weaker, that they may recouer

Rom.8.28.

Deut.8.16.

Lam.3.27.

Pſal.119.71.

Gen.50.20.

ſtrength, and ſicker for the preſent, that they may be more healthy euer after; and with Surgeons to cut, lanch, ſeare and torment their Patients with torturing corraſiues, that they may cure their wounds, and giue them perfect eaſe for the time to come.

§. Sect. 2.
That our afflictions are ſometimes tryals of Gods graces, & not chaſtiſements for our ſins, in reſpect of their maine and chiefe end.

But becauſe the knowing and acknowledging of this point is the chiefe fountaine of all true comfort and conſolation, and the want of this aſſurance is the cauſe of all impatience, murmuring, and complayning; I will the more largely inſiſt vpon it; and will plainly proue, and by cleere euidence of truth demonſtrate, that in all our afflictions and chaſtiſements, the Lord both intendeth our good, and alſo doth accordingly by his wiſdome, power & prouidence, effect and bring it to paſſe. To which purpoſe let vs conſider, that God by our afflictions intendeth, and powerfully worketh our good, both in reſpect of this life and the life to come. In this life wee haue much good by our afflictions whether we conſider them as tryals, or as fatherly chaſtiſements and corrections. Concerning the former we are to know, that the afflictions which wee ſuffer are not alwayes chaſtiſements for our ſinnes, if wee reſpect Gods mayne end at which he aymeth in inflicting them, but ſometimes gracious tryals wherewith he trieth and tempteth vs for his owne glory and our good. And this may appeare both by teſtimonies of Scriptures and by examples: For thus the Lord ſaith, that he led his people forty yeeres in the wildernes, for to humble them and prooue them, to know what was in their heart, whether they would keepe his Commandements or no. So ſpeaking of the remaynder of his people, whom hee did not vtterly cut off in judgement, he ſaith by the Prophet Zachary: I will bring that third part through the fire, and will fine them as ſiluer is fined, and will try them as gold is tried. And the Apoſtle Peter comforting the faithfull in their afflictions, would not haue them aſtoniſhed and diſmayed with them; for though they were hot and fiery, yet they were but tryals to proue, and in prouing to purifie them, that when they came to the touchſtone, they might alſo be approued and allowed. Dearely beloued (ſaith hee) thinke it not ſtrange concerning the fiery tryall, which is among you to prooue you, as though ſome ſtrange thing were come vnto you: but reioyce, in as much as yee are partakers of Chriſts ſufferings, that when his glory ſhall appeare, yee may be glad and reioyce. So the Authour of the booke of Wiſedome ſpeaking of the afflictions of the faithfull ſaith, that God proued them, and found them worthy for himſelfe, as gold in the furnace hath hee tryed them, and receiued them as a burnt offering. And of this wee haue many examples in the Scriptures: For thus the Lord exerciſing Abraham with that great affliction of offering vp his owne Sonne euen his Iſaac, ſo dearely beloued, and the joy of his heart, is ſaid herein not to haue corrected Abraham for his ſins, but only to haue proued him, that his faith and obedience might be manifeſted and approued, to the glory of him who gaue them, to his own comfort who had receiued them, and that he might be a notable example vnto all the faithfull who were to follow him. Thus the Lord tryed Iob that by his afflictions, his faith, affiance and patience might bee manifeſted, and that it might appeare to bee a ſlander, which Sathan laid to his charge; namely, that hee ſerued God for rewards, and not for loue: to which purpoſe Iob himſelfe ſaith, God knoweth my way and tryeth mee, and I ſhall come forth like the gold. Thus alſo ſometimes was Dauid tryed, not for the chaſtiſement of his ſinne, but that his innocency and righteouſneſſe, faith and holineſſe, might be more manifeſt. Thou haſt proued (ſaith he) and viſited my heart in the night; thou haſt tryed me, and foundeſt nothing; for I was purpoſed that my mouth ſhould not offend. So the whole Church ſpeaking of her afflictions ſaith, Thou O God haſt proued vs, and haſt tryed vs as ſiluer is tryed. Thou haſt brought vs into the ſnare and laid a ſtraite chaine vpon our loynes. But moſt plainly doth this appeare in the example of our Sauiour, who being free from ſin, was notwithſtanding tempted and tryed by Satan and the World, that his heauenly and diuine vertues, and the infinite wiſedome, power and goodneſſe of his holy nature might appeare.

Deut.8.2.
Zach.13.9.
1.Pet.4.12,13.
Wiſd.3.5,6.
Gen.22.1.
Iob 1.9,10,
Chap.23.10.
Pſal.17.3.
Pſal.139.1,
Matth.4.1.

§. Sect.
That God eth vs not better his o knowledge but to ma knowne b to our ſelu and others.

Now thus the Lord tryeth the faithfull by croſſes and afflictions, not becauſe hee himſelfe is ignorant of their eſtate and condition, and needeth theſe tryals and experiments, that hee may come to a more perfect knowledge of them; for, as the Scriptures teach vs, He knoweth all things, and there is nothing hid from him, hee ſearcheth our hearts and reines, and vnderſtandeth our thoughts long before we thinke them. Yea, as the Apoſtle ſaith, there is not any creature which is not manifeſt in his ſight, but all things are naked and open vnto the eyes of him, with whom we haue to doe: But God is ſaid, after the manner of men, by theſe tryals and afflictions to know vs, when by them hee diſcouereth and maketh knowne, both vnto our ſelues and others, either his hidden graces, or our ſecret infirmities, of which before we were ignorant, or not ſo well aſſured. And thus hee ſayth vnto Abraham, now I know that thou feareſt God, ſeeing for my ſake thou haſt not ſpared thine only Sonne; that is, by this tryall I haue made known and diſcouered thy faith and obedience, that I may haue the glory, thou the comfort, and others the benefit of thine example. For otherwiſe, God himſelfe knoweth all before he tryeth them; & therefore

Iob 42.2.
Ier.17.10.
Heb.4.13.
Gen.22.12.

fore Iob placeth knowledge firſt, and tryall after: Hee knoweth my way, and tryeth mee, and I ſhall come forth like the Gold. And this tryall of the faithfull by afflictions is moſt neceſſary, for the rectifying, both of their owne and others judgements in the true vnderſtanding of their eſtate and condition. For either wee are ſo blinded with naturall pride and ſelfe-loue, that wee ouer-weene our graces and good parts, thinking that we are ſtrong, when wee are weake and feeble, conſtant and couragious, when as wee are cowardly and faint-hearted; inuincible and fully aſſured in our faith & affiance, and that our patience is come to ſuch perfection, that we can with ioy and contendneſſe beare all, which God ſendeth, when as we are full of doubting and infidelity, diffidence and diſtruſt, impatience, murmuring and repining; like the Angell of the Church of Laodicea, who thought himſelfe, rich and increaſed in goods, and needed nothing, when as hee was wretched and miſerable, poore, blind and naked; or like the Apoſtle Peter, who imagined that he was ſo furniſhed with faith, courage and loue towards Chriſt, that though all the World ſhould deny and forſake him, yet hee would not; whereas he was ſo feeble, infirme and faint-hearted, that he was ready before any other to make this Apoſtaſie in his outward profeſſion: or contrariwiſe, when we are dejected with the ſight of our naturall infirmities, wee are ready to make our eſtate deſperate, to thinke that wee are deſtitute of all grace, and vnable to ſtand in the leaſt tentation. And therefore the Lord bringeth vs into theſe tryals, that we may come to a true eſtimate of that which is in vs, and neither ouer-weene and magnifie our gifts and good parts, to be therby puffed vp in pride, through a conceit of our owne excellency; nor too much vilifie and vnder-value the gifts and graces which we haue receiued of him, and ſo rob him of that glory and prayſe which is due vnto him. So that as one ſaith of Chriſts righteous judgements, ſo may I ſay of his tryals, that hee doth by them ſearch and examine vs, not ſo much that hee may know how to judge juſtly, as that man himſelfe may know that he is iuſtly judged, his owne heart and conſcience approuing his righteous ſentence, according to that which is written: Their conſciences alſo bearing witneſſe, and their thoughts accuſing one another or excuſing: for ſo in like manner God tryeth vs, not that he may know vs, but that wee may know our ſelues, and may rightly conceiue both of his graces and our owne infirmities; that our own weakneſſe may humble vs, and his ſtrength ſhining therein ſo much the more, when we are tryed, may moue vs with greater ardency of affection to prayſe and magnifie him. And this knowledge of our ſelues, ariſing from our afflictions is ſo profitable, that euen the Heathen Philoſopher pronounceth him miſerable who had neuer beene in miſery, becauſe paſſing his life without an aduerſary, no man could know, no not he himſelfe, what was in him: for that we may attaine vnto this knowledge, it is needfull that we haue ſome experience what wee are able to doe, and this experience is not learned, vnleſſe we haue been tryed; In which reſpect magnanimous ſpirits rejoyce no leſſe in their afflictions, than valiant Souldiers do in the warres.

Miſerum te iudico quod nunquam fuiſti miſer, tranſiſti ſine aduerſario vitam. Nemo ſcit quid potueris; ne tu quidem ipſe, &c. Senec. de prouid. cap. 4.

§. Sect. 4.
That God by our afflictions maketh vs better knowne vnto others.

So alſo the Lord by theſe tryals doth make vs knowne vnto others, either diſcouering by them our graces or infirmities: For nothing is more common than to erre groſly in our judgements, whileſt wee cenſure others vertues and good parts, wee being eaſily deceiued, either by their outward ſhewes, becauſe our weake and dull ſight cannot pierce their ſecrets and inward parts; or by our owne affections, according as we ouer-much like, or diſlike the parties of whom wee judge. And thus doe we judge ſome to haue little or none of Gods ſauing graces, becauſe they make no glorious ſhew in their outward profeſſion, that in truth doe much exceed others, who by externall flouriſhes and formalities, haue not only drawn from vs exceſſiue prayſes, but brought vs into a kind of admiration of their vertue and excellency. Thus wee judge ſome who are in their nature and diſpoſition mild and gentle, to haue little or no zeale of Gods glory, or of the good of his Church; whereas herein they farre exceed others, whom, being naturally hot and violent in their paſſions and affections, wee admire as moſt feruent and zealous; though when they are brought to the tryall, their naturall affections and paſſions which gaue ſo faire a blaze quickly going out (as not induring long the heate of this fiery furnace because they are but blazing ſtraw, or crackling thornes, which are no ſooner kindled than extinguiſhed) doe leaue them ſcarce luke-warme in their chiefeſt heate. So we vnder-valew ſome as cowardly, faint-hearted, and vnable to beare any thing for the name of Chriſt, becauſe they are of a ſtill and quiet diſpoſition, yea it may be timorous, in reſpect of that ſenſe which they haue of their owne naturall frailty and weakneſſe, who when they come to the fiery tryall, doe proue more conſtant and couragious than others, who by their great brags and confident ſpeeches, haue poſſeſſed vs with an opinion of their vndaunted magnanimity, and immoueable conſtancy. Finally, we are apt to judge ſome deſtitute of all patience, becauſe in their naturall diſpoſition they are inclined to anger and choller; when as comming to this touch-ſtone of tryall, they beare with much more meekneſſe and contentedneſſe all their croſſes and calamities, than others whoſe vntryed patience we haue prayſed and extolled, whereas indeed they had neuer the true grace of patience, but ſome naturall mildneſſe and quietneſſe, which though it made a glittering and golden ſhew, yet (like droſſie braſſe) it flieth all into fitters, when it is brought to be tryed vpon this anuile of afflictions. And therefore, that falſe ſhewes and naturall ſhadowes, may not rob his ſubſtantiall vertues and ſauing graces of their due eſteeme and deſerued commendation, God bringeth all to the touch-ſtone, and by putting all into the fiery furnace of tribulation, hee maketh vs eaſily to diſcerne, his true golden gifts, from the counterfeit Copper, and impure droſſe of our naturall faculties & abilities, which through our ignorance wee could neuer diſtinguiſh the one from the other.

§. Sect. 5.
That God tryeth vs by afflictions, whether wee are true Chriſtians indued with ſauing graces, or no.

Now the Lord thus tryeth vs with afflictions, firſt, to make it knowne, whether wee are true and ſound Chriſtians or no, indued with his ſanctifying and ſauing graces; or whether wee deceiue both our ſelues and others with ſhewes and ſhadowes only: and ſecondly, if we be ſincere Profeſſors of Religion, he tryeth hereby, how much we haue profited, what progreſſe we haue made, and how rich wee are growne in theſe ſpirituall treaſures. Concerning the former, our Sauiour hath taught vs in the Parable, that there are ſome hearers like vnto the ſtony ground, who receiue the ſeed of the Word with joy, and bring forth a faire green blade of an outward profeſſion, but yet hauing no root in themſelues they endure but for a ſeaſon, and when the hot Sunne of affliction and perſecution ariſeth and ſhineth vpon them, they wither and fall away. And therefore that theſe time-ſeruing Hypocrites may be knowne and diſcerned from true Profeſſors and ſincere Chriſtians, hee cauſeth this Sunne of tribulation to ariſe, that theſe may be tryed and approued, and they diſcouered and rejected. Wee all make profeſſion that we are the children of God, though many in truth remayne ſtill the ſeruants of ſinne and ſlaues of Sathan; and therefore the Lord, like the Eagle, taketh all his yong Eaglets, after that hee hath for a time fed and nouriſhed them in the neſt of the Church, and maketh them to looke vpon the piercing beames of this Sunne of affliction; that he may diſcouer and ſeuer the baſtard brood whoſe weak ſight indureth not this blazing brightneſſe, from thoſe who being true bred are able to behold it with vndazeled eyes. We profeſſe our ſelues to be Gold fit for Gods treaſury, and pure Corne meete for the Graners of eternall Bleſſedneſſe: and yet there is among vs more Droſſe than Gold, and more Chaffe than Wheat: and therefore the Lord caſteth vs into the fiery furnace of affliction, that the pure Metall may be tryed, and in tryall purified, and the droſſie ſubſtance may be ſeuered, and in the ſeparation burned and conſumed: and fanneth and winnoweth vs with the ſtrong winde of tribulation, that the Chaffe may be blowne away, and the pure Corne remayne for his owne vſe. We profeſſe our ſelues trees well planted by Gods owne hand in his Garden of grace, and that we are houſes fit for his owne dwelling, which haue a good ground and ſure foundation, euen the Rocke Ieſus Chriſt: whereas in truth there are many plants of the Deuils ſetting, which haue no other hold but the weake and ſhort roots of carnall ends and worldly reſpects: which are there planted by Sathan, to hinder the growth, to ſucke away the nouriſhment, and to ſhade and annoy, diſorder and diſgrace thoſe fruitful and choice trees of Gods owne grafting; and many houſes which are not built vpon the Rocke Chriſt, but vpon the ſands of humane inuentions and traditions, vpon the examples of their Superiours, or their owne good meaning and vngrounded ſuperſtition: and therefore the Lord cauſeth the winds to blow, and the tempeſtuous ſtormes of tryals and troubles to ariſe; that his owne trees may be approued, and take the more deepe rooting, by how much the more they are toſſed and ſhaken; and that thoſe plants of Sathans ſetting may be ouerturned and rooted vp; and maketh theſe boyſterous blaſts of trouble to blow, and theſe billowes of tentations to beate vpon theſe buildings, that the Temples of his owne erecting, for the habitation of his holy Spirit, may by their ſtanding in all theſe ſtormes, approue the skill of the workmaſter and the excellency of the work, and that theſe chappels of the Deuill, which being gilt with hypocriſie, make no leſſe glorious a ſhew; may be ouer-turned and vtterly ruinated, hauing no other foundation but the ſandy reſpects of worldly vanities, which faile and ſinke when theſe waues of affliction doe beat vpon them. Finally, wee profeſſe our ſelues to be ſouldiers in the Church Militant fighting vnder the Standard of the Lord of Hoaſts, and we haue in our Baptiſme (as it were) taken our oath, receiued the preſſe-money, and taken vpon vs the colours and cogniſance of our great Commander and chiefe Captaine Ieſus Chriſt: And therefore the Lord ſuffereth Sathan and the World to aſſault vs with afflictions and perſecution, to try vs whether we be Traytours, who vpon the firſt encounter will joyne with the enemy, or true-hearted Souldiers, who will liue and die in our Lords quarrell; whether we be ſuch cowards and daſtards as will preſently yeeld at the firſt on-ſet, though before wee haue made many brags of our ſtrength and valour: or of ſuch couragious and magnanimous ſpirits, as will not flie back one foot to ſaue our liues. And thus our Sauiour tryed the yong man in the Goſpell, who though hee ſeemed at

Mat. 13. 5, 6.

Marke 10.

at the firſt ſight, a great worthy, of vndanted courage, yet when our Sauiour did but ſpeak of thoſe two enemies, pouerty and the croſſe, at the very naming of them he was diſcomfited and did run away.

Sect. 6.
God by afflictions tryeth vnto measure grace wee attained.
firſt of the meaſure of our ith and af-ance.

And as we are thus tried with afflictions whether we be true chriſtians and indued with any grace or no; ſo alſo thereby hee ſheweth what progreſſe wee haue made in chriſtianity, and vnto what meaſure of grace we haue attained. For as when wee are winnowed with the wind of afflictions euery ſmall blaſt is ſufficient to ſeparate and driue away the chaffe from the Wheat, ſo when a ſtronger gale bloweth, there is a ſecond diuiſion made; for howſoeuer the weaker and ſtronger Chriſtians remayne together in the ſame Church and communion, (as it were) in the ſame floore and heape, yet when any ſtrong blaſt of tentation bloweth, thoſe that are weaker in grace like the lighter Corne, ſhake, ſtagger and flie ſomewhat backe, whereas the ſtronger are not moued, but keepe their place, like the purer Wheate and waightier Graine, with great conſtancy and vndaunted courage. And thus doth the Lord try our faith, and by theſe afflictions ſhew vs vnto what degree and meaſure of aſſurance we haue attained; for when it is weake and but of ſmall growth, though wee imagine with Peter, that wee can walke vnto Chriſt vpon the deep waters, yet if but a ſmall waue of affliction ariſe and come againſt vs, wee are through infidelity ready to ſinke and periſh, if Chriſt did not catch hold of vs; howſoeuer in ſelfe confidence and conceit wee are ready to boaſt with him, that though all the World ſhould forſake Chriſt, wee will not: yet when we come to the tryall, the voice of a poore Damſell is enough to quell all our courage, and to make vs ſhamefully flie back and forſake our Maſter. But when wee are come vnto fulneſſe of perſwaſion, then are we ready to ſay with Paul, vnto thoſe who diſſwade vs from bearing the croſſe which God layeth vpon vs; what doe you weeping and breaking my heart, for I am ready not only to be bound, but alſo to ſuffer death for the Name of Chriſt; and to profeſſe with him in another place, that neither tribulation, nor anguiſh, nor perſecution, nor famine, nor nakedneſſe, nor perill, nor ſword, nor death, nor Deuill, ſhall be able to ſeparate vs from the loue of God which is in Chriſt Ieſus our Lord. So by this fiery tryall appeareth the meaſure of our affiance, for when it is weak, then if God withdraw from vs viſible and outward meanes, and thruſt vs into ſome danger not ſhewing vs an euaſion, nor putting a thred into our hands which may guide vs out of this labyrinth, wee are preſently diſmayde, and without courage or comfort; and be ready to thinke of vnlawfull meanes for our ſafety or deliuerance; but when wee haue attained vnto ſome high degree of confidence and affiance, then can we firmely relie our ſelues vpon the power and prouidence of God, with comfort and aſſurance, as well when we are weake in ſecundary helpes, as when we are ſtrong; yea, when in outward appearance we are deſtitute and abandoned of them, as when they guard and compaſſe vs about, offering vpon all occaſions their aide and aſſiſtance: neither do we only confeſſe our confidence in God when as wee are hedged in on all ſides with Gods bleſſings and benefits, but in our greateſt miſeries and extremities, in aſſured affiance, we are ready to cry out, with holy Iob, though hee kill mee yet will I truſt in him.

11.13.

8.35,38.

Iob 13.15.

§. Sect. 7.
That God by our afflictions maketh tryall of the meaſure of our loue, patience, humility, and obedience.

Thus alſo doth the Lord by theſe afflictions make tryall of our loue. And as the tender mother ſometimes withdraweth and hideth her ſelfe from her childe, to try how he will brooke her abſence, taketh againe the things which ſhee had giuen him to try his loue and obedience; and vpon fit occaſion correcteth him, not only to mend him of his faults, but to make an experiment of his nature, how louing he is vnto her: & if in al theſe tryals he approueth himſelfe, bewayling her abſence, patiently parting with his delights for the loue he beareth her, and increaſing in loue and fondneſſe after his chaſtiſement; it doth notably inlarge her affection towards her ſonne; whom ſhe now loueth, not only out of motherly duty, but with much comfort & delight: euen ſo doth the Lord make tryall of our loue by withdrawing himſelfe and his gifts; and by inflicting vpon vs his fatherly corrections; that our loue and obedience being approued by experience, hee may increaſe his fauours towards vs, and entirely loue vs with more pleaſure. For to ſhew our affection towards him, when being in proſperity wee abound with his bleſſings, is no great matter; ſeeing we are hyred thereunto with the wages of worldly benefits, and doe therefore loue God becauſe wee firſt loue our ſelues, not for his owne ſake, but becauſe of his gifts and rewards: but if our loue continue in its wonted heat, when as God withdraweth this fuell of earthly plenty, and we imbrace him with ardent affection, when (as it were) he ſtoppeth our wages, or reſumeth into his hands that which formerly hee beſtowed on vs: then will it plainly appeare, that we loue the giuer, better than his gifts, and that wee find cauſe enough in God himſelfe to vnite our hearts vnto him, though all theſe bands of earthly beſſings be broken or taken away. Yea, if the fire of affliction doe not leſſen, but much intend and increaſe the heat of this our loue, and no danger ſeeme difficult into which God thruſteth vs, no burthen heauy which hee layeth vpon vs; if (as it fared with Iacob, being in loue with Rachel) many yeeres miſeries doe ſeeme but

Cant. 8.6,7.

Chryſoſt. Matth. cap. 3. Homil. 3.

Acts 20.19.

2. Cor. 6.4,5.

2. Sam. 15.26.

Marke 14.36.

a few dayes, becauſe wee ſuffer them for his ſake; yea, if we are glad being aſſaulted with theſe enemies, to indure many wounds, to receiue many foyles, and ſuſtain much griefe and labour, that by theſe tryals wee may ſhew our affection, and that loues triumph may be more glorious, after it hath obtained victory ouer ſo great forces; then are our hearts throughlily warmed with this heauenly flame, and our loue is ſtrong, yea, (as the Wiſe man ſpeaketh) ſtronger than death, ſeeing theſe waters of worldly miſeries cannot quench it, nor theſe flouds of afflictions coole or drowne it. And as the Lord by theſe afflictions ſheweth how great the meaſure of our loue is towards him, ſo becauſe the loue of him and the World are quite contrary, he doth by the ſame means diſcouer, how much wee haue profited in the contempt of the World, and are weaned in our affections from doting vpon it. For as the graine of Corne which is full and ripe, is no ſooner touched with the flayle, but it preſently flieth from the ſtraw and empty eare; and if it bee ſmall and light is not beaten out, vnleſſe it be with much more difficulty; but if it be altogether empty and vnripe, it cannot with much threſhing be ſeuered, but remayneth ſtill in the ſtraw, and is caſt out or burnt with it: ſo thoſe who adhere vnto worldly delights like the Corne to the chaffe and eare, if they be full of grace and ripe in godlineſſe, are with the leaſt touch of this flayle of afflictions ſeuered from the loue of the World; and being vnited in their heart and affection vnto God, they flie vnto him; whereas if hauing begun to imbrace vertue and holineſſe, they haue made as yet but ſmall progreſſe, they are not weaned from theſe worldly vanities except they be much beaten with many croſſes and calamities; but if they bee quite empty of all grace and goodneſſe, then doe they in their heart and affections ſticke ſo inſeparably faſt vnto the things of this life, that though they be neuer ſo much beaten with afflictions and tribulations, yet they cannot be diſioyned and parted, and ſo are caſt out and rejected of God, periſhing together with theſe tranſitory vanities, becauſe they will not be diuided from them. Finally, God by theſe afflictions doth try the meaſure of our patience, obedience and humility; for where there is no paſſion and ſuffering, there is no place for patience; where there is no difficulty, danger or burthen to be vndergone, there is no tryall of obedience; and when Gods will doth not croſſe ours, euery man can ſhew humility and ſubmiſſion; but then our patience is manifeſted and magnified, when being vnder heauy croſſes and calamities, we beare them with meekneſſe and cheerefulneſſe, without any murmuring and repining; then are wee truly obedient, when with the Apoſtle, wee can ſerue the Lord with all modeſty, and with many teares and tentations, in reſpect of the miſeries which accompany our ſeruice, and the dangers which attend vpon it; and (as elſe-where he ſaith) when wee can hold on a conſtant courſe in godlineſſe and righteouſneſſe, and in all things approue our ſelues as the ſeruants of God. In much patience, in afflictions, in neceſſities, in diſtreſſes, in ſtripes, in priſons, in tumults, in labours, by watchings, by faſtings, &c. by honour and diſhonour, by euill report and good report, &c. then is our humility ſhewed and approued, when in our greateſt diſtreſſe and danger, wee can ſay with Dauid, Behold, here am I, let him doe to mee as ſeemeth good in his eyes, and with our Sauiour Chriſt, not my will but thine be done. In a word, all ſanctifying and ſauing graces, both in their truth and meaſure, are then much better tryed and knowne, in the time of trouble and affliction, when they are enfolded and wrapped vp in the rich furniture of plenty and abundance. For as the ſtarres doe not appeare in the day time; but ſhine moſt brightly in the darkeſt night; ſo theſe glorious ſtars of Gods ſauing graces, which were hardly diſcerned in the day of proſperity and worldly happineſſe, doe ſhine cleerely, and (as it were) in their full ſtrength, in the dark night of troubles and afflictions. And as in Maſteries, men healthfull, ſtrong, and of good habitude and proportion of limbs, doe not plainly appeare ſo to be, when hauing their garments on, they come marching in all their brauery: but when they haue ſtript themſelues, and appeare naked on the Theater, then are the beholders moſt rapt with admiration, when nothing ſhadoweth or hideth the excellent proportion and ſtrong making of all their parts and limbs: euen ſo the inward graces and good parts of a Chriſtian, are not ſo well diſcerned, when the ornaments of proſperity, the riches, honours and delights of this life doe ſhade and couer them, but when they are ſtript of all, and are with Iob brought to the Theater to contend and ſtriue with the Aduerſaries of our ſaluation, that they obtayning the victory, may be crowned with the Garland of glory and happineſſe; then all veiles and ſhadowes being taken away, the gifts and graces receiued from God doe appeare in their naked beauty, and then are the beholders rauiſhed, when they view their worth and excellency, which were neither diſcerned nor regarded whileſt they were hid and couered.

§. Sect. 8.

That God tryeth vs principally for his own glory:an in the next place for the aduancing

And thus the Lord tryeth, and by tryall diſcouereth, both his gifts and the meaſure of them; chiefly and principally for his owne glory from whom wee haue receiued them: for as the art of the Ship-wright appeareth when the ſhip brooketh all weathers, continueth firme and ſtrong in all ſtormes and tem-

ur credit al eſteeme, ugh the ifeſtation his graces
m.

tempeſts, and ſayleth well with all windes and in euery Sea; and as the cutlers and armorours skill is made manifeſt, not whileſt the ſword hangeth by the ſide in a veluet ſcabberd; or whileſt the armour is cleane kept and well oiled in the armorie; but when the one is tryed in fight, or by ſmiting the anuile or barre of iron; and the other in the field with the caliuer or musket ſhot: ſo theſe workes of Gods Spirit, theſe ſanctifying and ſauing graces, doe then moſt commend their workemaſter, when they come to be tryed in the ſea of miſeries, and with theſe bullets of tentation; for if they then hould out, and neither leake nor ſinke, and being neither peirced, nor much battered, doe preſerue vs from all outward violence in this combate againſt our ſpirituall enemies, then the wiſedome and skill, power and bountie of God, who both made and gaue them, doth cleare-ly ſhine and manifeſtly appeare. And as the Lord the donor of theſe gifts and graces is glorified in the tryall of them, ſo wee the owners, comming by theſe meanes to the knowledge and ſight of them, haue in our ſelues much more joy and comfort, and are more highly valued and eſteemed in others judgements, when theſe rich treaſures and vnualuable Iewels of Gods ſauing graces are diſcouered vnto them: which if they were not thus tryed would be obſcured, and lye hid, both to them and vs. To this purpoſe one ſaith, that to be alwayes in a proſperous eſtate: and to paſſe all a mans time without any vexation of mind, is to remaine ignorant of the one halfe of nature and humane affaires: thou mayeſt be a man of magnanimous Spirit, but how ſhall I know it, if thou neuer haue occaſion to ſhew thy vertue? thou commeſt into the Theater to ſtriue for maſteries: but there commeth no aduerſarie to contend with thee, thou maiſt well haue the prize, but not the victorie. And againe; how ſhall I know with what patience thou canſt beare pouertie, if thou doeſt alwayes abound in riches? how ſhall I diſcerne what heart and courage thou haſt to indure ſhame, infamie, and popular hatred, if thou wax old in vulgar applauſes, and the ſtreame of their fauours flow vnto thy graue? how ſhall I know with what conſtancie and contentedneſſe thou couldeſt ſuſtaine the loſſe of thy Children, if all, which haue beene borne vnto thee, are ſtill in thy ſight? well may I heare thee whileſt thou art comforting others: but then onely I truely ſee and diſcerne thee, when thou giueſt comfort vnto thy ſelſe, and commandeſt thy griefes to auoide thy preſence. He that would know the skill of the Pilote muſt not looke on him lying quietly on his bed in a ſafe port: nor ſayling in a faire Sea, with a proſperous wind: but when he is in the middeſt of ſyrts and ſands, toſſed and indangered with boyſterous ſtormes and cruell tempeſts, then to quit his ſhip and ſelfe out of theſe perils, and to bring it ſafe into the wiſhed hauen, argueth the greatneſſe of his skill, and gaineth him the reputation of a cunning mariner. The proweſſe, fortitude, and vndaunted courage of a Souldier is not diſcerned whileſt hee ſecurely reſteth in the garriſon without feare of foe: but in the fight and skirmiſh, when as he is in the throng of enemies, beſet with dangers; and (as one ſaith) his ſtrength is more approued, who fighting is not vanquiſhed; than his, who is not at all aſſaulted: and whereas vntried valour is very doubtfull and queſtionable, that fortitude is moſt aſſured which ouercommeth in all incounters. So the ſweet odour of the precious oyntment, whileſt it is kept in the glaſſe, ſafe and cloſe, is ſcarcely ſented; but being ſtirred and powred out, it perfumeth all the roome, and is highly commended of all that haue the benefit of this fragrant ſmell. The gold is accounted (of thoſe who judge by outward appearance) baſe and of ſmall worth, whileſt it lyeth in the oare, but when it is purified in the fierie furnace, and tried by the touchſtone, then is it valued and eſteemed. And therefore the Lord bringeth vs into a Sea of miſeries, and toſſeth vs with the tempeſt of tentations, that by well acquitting our ſelues in theſe perils, our skill, wherewith he hath indued vs, may be manifeſt and approued. Hee ſuffereth vs not in this Chriſtian Warfare to lye at eaſe in garriſon, but bringeth vs into the field, and ſuffereth many and ſtrong enemies to incounter vs; that demeaning our ſelues manfully in this fight, hee our graund captaine may haue the chiefe glory, and we that due approbation and prayſe, which of right belongeth to our courage and fortitude. He will not let the ſweete ointment of his ſpirituall graces to bee kept cloſe, and ſo to become vnprofitable both to our ſelues and others, but rather battereth and breaketh theſe glaſſie, and earthen veſſels of our bodies, that they may ſend out a ſweet perfume to the great comfort of others and joy of our owne hearts. Finally, hee will not ſuffer vs to lye in the oare of our earthly corruptions, but caſteth vs into the fierie furnace, that being purified from our droſſe, we may bee approued in the touch, and bee eſteemed and prized, as well beſitteth our worth and value; according to that of the Prouerbs: As the fining pot for ſiluer, and the fornace of gold: ſo the Lord trieth the hearts.

a.&Prou.
4

Senec. in ſap. non cad. iniur. lib. cap. 3.

Prou. 17. 3.

§. Sect. 9. That God alſo diſcouereth by afflictions our corruptions & infirmities for our humiliation.

Yea the Lord thus trieth vs, not onely for the diſcouery of his graces to his glory and our comfort; but alſo of our infirmities and corruptions, for our humiliation, and others inſtruction. For naturally we haue an ouerweening opinion of our owne worth, an high conceit of our owne gifts; and preſume too much vpon our owne ſtrength; and like freſh-water Souldiers wee thinke our ſelues, before wee come into the field, ſo ſtrong and valorous, that no enemie is able to withſtand vs: whereas contrariwiſe there oftentimes lyeth hid in vs much infirmitie and weakeneſſe, many imperfections, and ſuch a huge maſſe of groſſe corruptions, that no ſooner are wee aſſaulted, but we preſently yeeld or runne away; or if wee ſtand to it, we are either foiled by our enemies, or taken captiue, and led a way in the fetters of ſinne; ſhewing our impatiencie and murmuring againſt our graund-captaine who by his prouidence hath brought vs into this fight. Now to bee thus conceited of our abilities, is exceeding dangerous and pernitious; for it puffeth vs vp with pride, it maketh vs to reſt and rely vpon the broken ſtaffe of our owne ſtrength, and not vpon the Lords aſſiſtance; it maketh vs negligent and cold in prayer for helpe and ſuccour from God, and in prayſes and thankſgiuing, when he hath ſupported vs. And therefore the Lord, to preuent theſe great miſchiefes, bringeth vs into the field to bee incountred by our ſpirituall enemies; and as he ſometimes ſtrengtheneth vs with the power of his might, that hee may haue glory, and wee comfort, and incouragement by the victory: ſo ſometimes hee leaueth vs to our weake abilities, and ſuffereth vs to receiue many foiles and wounds; that wee may be truely humbled in the ſight of our infirmities, flee out of our ſelues, as wholy diſtruſting in our owne ſtrength, craue his aide and aſſiſtance, and that, hauing obtained it, and with it victorie ouer our ſpiritual enemies, we may not rob him of his glorie by attributing any part of the prayſe vnto our ſelues, but aſcribe all the honour vnto him onely; by whoſe power alone wee know that we haue ouercome, ſeeing we finde by experience that we are in our ſelues ſo weake and impotent, that when we are left vnto our owne ſtrength, we are in euery ſmall tentation eaſily ouercome. An example whereof wee haue in Iob, who was no ſooner left of God in that grieuous conflict of affliction, but he curſeth the day of his birth, repineth againſt Gods prouidence, and is ready to vtter blaſphemies againſt his iuſtice; and no ſooner againe is he ſupported by Gods aſſiſting Spirit, but hee is humbled in the ſight of his infirmities, giueth glory to God, and eaſily ouercommeth all thoſe tentations, which formerly finding him in his naturall weakeneſſe, did with greater eaſe giue him the foile. And thus alſo the Lord tried the people of Iſrael at the waters of Meribah, when as leauing them to the frowardneſſe of their own diſpoſition, they preſently forgate what great things hee had done for them, and began to murmure and repine againſt his prouidence. And the Apoſtle Peter likewiſe was thus tried by God, that being foiled after all his bragges, with the voice of a ſilly Damoſell, he might bee humbled in the ſenſe of his infirmitie, boaſt no more of his owne ſtrength, and that ouercomming afterward, in farre more dangerous conflicts, he might aſcribe nothing to himſelfe, but giue the whole glory vnto God, by whoſe might alone hee obtained victorie.

Pſal. 81. 7.

Math. 26. 70. 71.

CHAP. XVII.

That the former conſideration, to wit, that our croſſes are trials of Gods graces in vs, may much comfort vs in all our afflictions.

§. Sect. 1
That we oug to reioyce i our afflictio in that by theſe tryals
God is glori fied; and we aſſured of o adoption.

And thus haue I ſhewed that our afflictions are not alwayes chaſtiſements for our ſinnes, but ſometimes gracious trials, whereby God trieth vs as Children, what and how much wee haue profited in his ſauing graces, that hereby hee may be glorified, and we comforted in the manifeſtation of them; as alſo with what infirmities and corruptions wee are ſtill ſtained, that wee may bee humbled in the ſight thereof, and labour after more grace, and the mercifull aſſiſtance of Gods holy ſpirit. Now this conſideration may juſtly moue vs to beare all our croſſes and afflictions, not onely with patience and humilitie, but alſo with thankſgiuing and ſpirituall rejoycing: firſt, becauſe God is glorified in the manifeſtation of his graces beſtowed vpon vs by theſe trials of affliction; and nothing ought to ſeeme too difficult and dangerous to be attempted, nothing too grieuous and heauie to be borne or ſuffered, if it tend to the furthering and aduancing of his glory, which is the ſupreame end of all things, & the chiefe marke at which wee muſt aime in all that we doe or ſuffer. Secondly, becauſe hereby wee may gather aſſurance, that we are Gods Children and of the houſhould of faith; for the Lord tryeth and in trying purifieth vs, that wee may be veſſels of glory, choſen for his owne vſe, according to his word by the Prophet; Behold I haue fined thee, but not as ſiluer, I haue choſen thee in the furnace of affliction. So the Pſalmiſt ſaith, that God will trie the righteous; but the wicked man, and he that loueth iniquitie, doth his ſoule hate. And therefore as they with Ahaz refuſe to make triall of his mercie, goodneſſe and truth of his promiſes, that they may reſt and relie vpon him, ſo he will not trie them, but giueth them ouer to bee tempted and carried headlong by Satan into all euill, that when the meaſure of their ſinne and iniquitie is full, hee

Eſa. 48. 10.

Pſal. 11. 5.

Eſa. 7. 12.

hee may powre out vpon them the full viols of his wrath, and (as it followeth in the Pſalme) may raine vpon theſe wicked ones ſnares, fire and brimſtone, and ſtormie tempeſt; that this may bee the portion of their cup. And hence it is that the ſonne of Syrach willeth vs, to beare with alacritie all afflictions which God layeth vpon vs, becauſe it is a ſigne when wee are thus tried that wee are accepted. Whatſoeuer is brought vpon thee (ſaith hee) take cheerefully, and be patient when thou art changed to a low eſtate: For gold is tried in the fire, and acceptable men in the furnace of aduerſitie. And the Apoſtle Iames perſwadeth vs to count it exceeding ioy when wee fall into diuers tentations; becauſe they are but the trials of our faith, which worke patience, and after it is begun, doe bring it to perfection.

6.

2.4.5.

1.2.

Sect. 2.
we may when afflictions tryals, and chaſtiſe-for ſin.

Yea but how ſhall wee know that our afflictions are trials, and not either puniſhments or chaſtiſements for our ſinnes? I anſwere, that wee may bee aſſured that they are not puniſhments, when by them we are purified, from our droſſe, and ſhine glorioully in the ſight of God and men, through the brightneſſe of thoſe ſanctifying and ſauing graces which are manifeſted by them; and when wee are not ouerthrowne in the conflict, and moued by theſe ſharpe encounters to repine and murmure againſt God, who hath preſſed vs to this warfare, but doe ſhew our Chriſtian courage, valour and magnanimous fortitude, in withſtanding and ouercomming all theſe aſſaults. And further wee may know them to be trials and not chaſtiſements, when we haue effectually profited by them, truely humbled our ſelues, vnfainedly repented of our ſinnes, and earneſtly by prayer haue ſought reconciliation from God, and freedome from thoſe afflictions, and yet notwithſtanding, after all this, wee ſtill remaine vnder the burthen without finding any eaſe: for howſoeuer our ſinnes are the meritorious cauſes of all afflictions and chaſtiſements yet wee may be aſſured that God doth not ſtill correct faults already amended, but rather vſeth theſe croſſes as trials for the manifeſtation of his graces, to his owne glory, and our ſpirituall good, as hath beene ſhewed. But whether they bee trials of Gods gifts, or chaſtiſements for ſins, we haue no cauſe of impatience or exceſſiue ſorrow, yea, rather in both reſpects there is great cauſe of joy and gladneſſe. To which purpoſe one ſaith; let the righteous man rejoyce in his troubles and afflictions, becauſe he is either proued if hee be juſt; or amended if hee be a ſinner: But let them breake their hearts with griefe, whom the ſtripes of this diuine hand doe torment, but not correct and make better; let them juſtly feare future puniſhments, who haue contemned, and not profited by theſe preſent remedies of our gracious Father.

Hom.
Tom.10.

§. Sect. 3.
We may bee comforted in our tryals in that they haue alwaies a good iſſue, and tend to our great profit.

Thirdly, wee haue juſt cauſe to rejoyce in theſe trials, becauſe they haue alwaies a good iſſue, and tend to our great profit and benefit, both in this life and the life to come: For howſoeuer, it is the end of wicked men, who are the inſtruments and inferiour meanes, to bring theſe croſſes vpon vs that they may ſatisfie their malice and cruelty in doing vs hurt and miſchiefe; and though Sathans end in ſetting them on, be to bring vs into theſe euils, that wee may ſinne in ill-bearing them, or in ridding our ſelues out of them by wicked meanes; and ſo bee brought into the eſtate of condemnation, and paſſe out of theſe temporarie miſeries, into euerlaſting torments: yet God doth not propound theſe ends vnto his trials: for hee tempteth no man with euil, as the Apoſtle ſpeaketh: but hee thus trieth vs, that hee may doe vs good in the latter end (as himſelfe ſpeaketh) and that the triall of our faith being much more pretious than gold that periſheth (though it be tryed by the fire) may bee found vnto our prayſe, honour and glory, at the appearing of Ieſus Chriſt. Hee tryeth vs, that being in this tryall approued, we may receiue after our conflict and victorie the crowne of bleſſedneſſe and eternall glory. In regard whereof the Lord exhorteth the angell of the Church of Smyrna to feare none of thoſe things which hee ſhould ſuffer, becauſe hee was but tryed with theſe tribulations, that continuing faithfull vnto the death, hee might beſtow vpon him the crowne of life. So the authour of the Booke of Wiſedome ſaith, that the faithfull hauing beene a little chaſtiſed ſhall bee greatly rewarded; for God proueth them and findeth them worthy for himſelfe; as the gold in the furnace hath he tryed them, and receiued them as a burnt offering. And Iob out of his owne experience ſaith: Hee knoweth my way and tryeth mee, and I ſhall come forth like the gold. In reſpect of which happy iſſue giuen by the Lord vnto all our trials, wee haue juſt cauſe to beare them all with patience and comfort, yea with joy and thankſgiuing. For if we be not counterfeit mettall, but good gold, why ſhould wee feare the furnace of affliction, ſeeing it will not conſume vs like ſtrawe or chaffe, but onely trie vs, and in trying purifie vs; that comming to the touchſtone we may be approued, and ſo be reſerued for euer in Gods treaſurie of bleſſedneſſe? If we bee good grapes, why doe wee feare the preſſe of tribulation, which will not deſtroy vs, but bring vs to perfection, making vs fit wine for Gods owne vſe? If wee be good wheate, why ſhould we be grieued to come vnder the flayle or fanne, ſeeing it will not hurts vs, but onely ſeperate and cleanſe vs from the ſtraw and chaffe, that we may bee

Iam.1.13.

Deut.8.16.

1.Pet.1.6,7.

Apoc.2.10.

Wiſd.3.5.6.

Iob.23.10.

layed

ſayed vp for Gods owne ſtore in the graners of heauenly happineſſe? Finally, if wee be Gods ſouldiers in the Church militant, why ſhould wee not with joy and Chriſtian courage skirmiſh with the world aſſaulting vs daily with troubles and afflictions, ſeeing by this conflict our valour is tryed, that being approued it may be crowned; and we aſſured of Gods continuall aſſiſtance, which will defend vs in the fight, and in the end giue vs victory? Let vs therefore leaue feare and horror, murmuring and repining, to falſe diſſemblers and faithleſſe men, to whom alone theſe miſeries are hurtfull and dangerous. Let counterfeit and droſſie Chriſtians feare the fierie tryall, ſeeing in it they are ſure to be conſumed. Let hypocrites, which like faire greene leaues make a goodly ſhew, but yeeld no ſweete iuyce of holineſſe, feare the winepreſſe and vintage, becauſe their preſſing will bring no profit, but they ſhall bee caſt away or trodden vnder foote: let the chaffe and ſtraw feare the flayle and fanne, becauſe being thereby ſeparated from the good wheate, they ſhall bee either burnt with fire, or caſt vpon the dung-hill. Let daſtards and cowards, traytors and enemies, tremble and greiue, when they are incountred by afflictions, ſeeing in this fight they are led captiue of ſinne, and afterwards for euer embondaged in the priſon of Hell and deſtruction. As for Gods faithful ones, let them indure all theſe trials with patience, comfort and rejoycing; ſeeing they doe by exerciſing, manifeſt Gods graces, that hee may bee glorified in his gifts, and his gifts crowned in them.

§. Sect.4. They anſwered who obiect the greatneſſe of their tryals, and ſmalnes of their ſtrength.

Yea wilt thou ſay, but my afflictions are great, and my ſtrength ſmall; ſo that in my tryals I ſhew ſo many infirmities and corruptions, that hee who tryeth me will neuer approue mee. Fond man, doſt thou thinke that the Gold-ſmith hath skill enough ſo to proportion the heate of the fire to the mettall, that it may bee purified and not conſumed; and canſt thou imagine that the Lord knoweth not how to fit his tryals to thy ſtrength? Or if hee haue knowledge and wiſedome enough, canſt thou doubt of his will, ſeeing hee hath bound himſelfe by a moſt gracious promiſe, that hee will not ſuffer vs to bee tempted or tryed aboue our power and ſtrength, but will giue a good iſſue with the tentation? Yea, but in the meane time thou art preſſed with ſuch an heauy waight, that thou bewrayeſt thine infirmities and corruptions. And happily it is neceſſary and profitable for thee ſo to doe, that by this tryall thou mighteſt come to the ſight and ſenſe of theſe corruptions and imperfections which before were in thee, though hidden and vnknowne; to the end, that now beholding them, thou maiſt be truely humbled, brought to vnfained repentance, and to an hearty indeuour in vſing all good means to be cleanſed and freed from them. And thus it is neceſſary that the droſſe of our corruptions ſhould bee diſcerned, that it may bee purged away, and we purified; and that our ſecret diſeaſes ſhould bee diſcouered, that wee might be cured and freed from them. It may be alſo, that the Lord letteth thee bewray in theſe tryals of afflictions, thy leſſer corruptions of immoderate griefe and impatiencie, to free thee from ſuch ſinnes as are much more hainous and enormous; as from pride, ſelfe-loue, and carnall confidence, whereby we robbe God of his glory to magnifie our ſelues, and our ſoules of all ſound comfort, ſeeing our greateſt ſtrength being weaknes and impotencie, muſt needs faile vs when wee moſt rely vpon it. In wonderfull mercy and loue therefore doth the Lord deale with thee, if by theſe tryals he cauſeth thee to bewray thy ſmaller infirmities, that hee may free thee from groſſer ſinnes, mortifie thy helliſh pride, and decke thee with that excellent ornament of humility; and taking away all ſelfe confidence in thine owne ſtrength, doe cauſe thee with full affiance to reſt vpon him, who will neuer fayle thoſe who truſt in him.

1.Cor.10.13.

§. Sect.5. That our greateſt tryals ſhould bring greateſt comfort, becauſe they are ſignes of greateſt grace beſtowed vpon vs.

Finally, wee haue juſt cauſe to beare our greateſt afflictions with patience, comfort and rejoycing, if wee conſider that God doth proportionate our tryals according to our ſtrength, and the meaſure of grace which he hath beſtowed vpon vs; for hereupon it will follow, that if our croſſes bee exceeding great, then alſo wee abound in vertue, grace and ſpirituall ſtrength; if the huge water-flouds of affliction doe ariſe and ſwell ſo high, that they drowne and ouerflow the high towers, and lofty turrets of humane ſtrength; then ſhall our ſpirituall graces (like thoſe in the Arke) ariſe and mount vp with them, triumphing ouer theſe ſeas of miſerie with comfort and rejoycing, which ouerwhelme and drowne others, who ſticke faſt vnto earthly helps, with ſorrow and heauineſſe. Neither is it to bee imagined, that the Lord who beſt knoweth our ſtrength, becauſe hee made vs, and hath approued his infinite loue towards vs, becauſe hee hath with ſo ineſtimable a price redeemed vs, will in trying deſtroy vs, or lay vpon vs a burthen which will ouerwhelme vs; yea rather wee may aſſure our ſelues, that where he hath laid the heauieſt loade, there hee hath giuen the greateſt ſtrength, and where there is aboundance of afflictions, there hee beſtoweth abundance of patience, faith and other graces, whereby they may be inabled to beare and ouercome them. Wee ſee that the wiſe commander imployeth his ſouldiers, according to that opinion which hee hath of their worth and valour; and when he hath ſome dangerous and hie exploit to be atchieued, he doth not make choiſe of freſh-water and white-liuerd ſouldiers, but of ſuch as are of moſt magnanimous ſpirits and fulleſt of courage, valour and approued fortitude. The diſcreet Shoolemaſter doth giue the longeſt and hardeſt leſſons to bee learned, not vnto thoſe who are of ſmalleſt capacity and dulleſt conceipt; but vnto his beſt ſchollars, who are of ripeſt wit and readieſt apprehenſion. The skilfull armourer doth not trie common armour with musket-ſhot, for ſo he ſhould by tryall ſpoile it, and with his paines looſe the reputation of his cunning; but firſt he is aſſured that he hath made it high proofe, and then he tryeth it with theſe piercing bullets. And finally, the wiſe lapidary bringeth not his tender chriſtall, or ſofter ſtones, to bee tryed by the ſtithy and hammer, but the hard Adamant which will rather bruiſe the iron and ſteele, than bee broken by their blowes. And therefore, if there be this wiſedome and care to bee found in men, let vs certainly conclude that the Lord, infinite in wiſedome and loue, doth much more fit his tryals to the ſtrength of his Children, whoſe good and wel-fare hee ſo much tendereth, chooſing out his moſt valarous ſouldiers, for the ſtrongeſt incounters, his beſt ſchollars, for the hardeſt leſſons, his choiſeſt armours for the higheſt proofe, and hammering none vpon the Anuile of afflictions, but ſuch as hee hath made of adamantine hardneſſe, to beare without breaking all theſe blowes. Thus Abraham, the father of the faithfull, hauing attained vnto fulneſſe of perſwaſion and aſſurance, was exerciſed with the ſtrongeſt tentation euen the ſacrificeing of his deare Iſaac with his owne hands. And Iob, the juſteſt man vpon the Earth, and indued with greateſt patience, was accordingly tryed with the greateſt afflictions, and (as it were) caſt into the fiery furnace by the Tyrant Sathan, being heat ſeauen times hotter, than for other ordinary men. Thus Dauid, a man according to Gods own heart excelling all others in piety and religion, had anſwerably an exceeding maſſe and multitude of afflictions, laide vpon him for the tryall of his graces. And the Apoſtle Paul, abounding in the riches of Gods ſpirituall gifts, and going beyond all the reſt of his ranke, in care and labours for the glory of God, and good of his Church did as farre exceed them all in croſſes and tryals. And as thoſe are aſſaulted with the ſtrongeſt forces, who haue greateſt valour and fortitude beſtowed vpon them; ſo thoſe who are weake in Gods ſauing graces, doe anſwerably ſuſtaine weake incounters, as we may ſee in the example of the Iewes, whom God ſaith he had fined, but not as ſiluer; because hauing in them more droſſe of corruption, than pure mettall of grace and vertue, they would haue beene conſumed in this fiery tryall. And finally where is no grace or goodneſſe, there may well bee inflicted deſerued puniſhments of ſinne, but no tryall in this conflict of afflictions. Neither may we thinke that thoſe who are not exerciſed with theſe croſſes, are more highly in Gods fauour than other men, ſeeing the Apoſtle telleth vs, that God ſcourgeth euery ſonne whom he receiueth, and they who are exempted from theſe corrections, of which all are partakers, are baſtards and not ſonnes. Nor may we imagine that our wiſe Commaunder in loue ſpareth theſe men whom he neuer calleth out to the fight; but rather rejecteth & excludeth them out of his campe, the Church militant; either becauſe hee knoweth them to be ſuch daſtardly cowards, as will flee from, or yeeld to the weakeſt enemies; or ſuch rebels and traytors, as either profeſſedly or in their hearts joyne with Sathan, and the world, againſt him and his holy army. And this the heathen man diſcerned by the light of nature; When (ſaith he) thou ſhalt ſee men which are good and acceptable vnto God, take paines, ſweate and labour againſt the hill with great difficulty; and contrariwiſe, wicked men playing the wantons and wallowing in delights: thinke with thy ſelfe that euen wee are delighted in the modeſty of ſonnes, and in the licentiouſneſſe of ſlaues; and that they by a ſtricter diſcipline are kept in good order, whileſt the audacious boldneſſe of theſe is nouriſhed, and then know that God taketh the ſame courſe, for hee doth not cocker him that is good, but by trying and hardning he fitteth him for himſelfe.

8,10.

Heb.12.6.

Senec. de prouid. cap. 2.

§. Sect. 6. That God much honoureth vs in theſe fiery tryals.

When therefore wee are exerciſed with great and grieuous afflictions, let vs not murmure and repine againſt him that inflicted them, as though ſome great euill had befallen vs; but let vs beare all with patience and comfort, yea with joy and thankfulneſſe: For ſo we may aſſure our ſelues, that as we much glorifie God by our ſufferings, ſo by theſe tryals he vouchſafeth vnto vs treble honour; for firſt hee honoureth vs by enriching vs with his graces, and then by trying of them, whileſt thereby their worth and excellency is manifeſted vnto all that behold vs in theſe conflicts. And laſtly, he will honour vs by crowning his graces in vs, when as by tryall they are approued: Euen as the skilfull Armourer, firſt graceth his armour by good workmanſhip; then by bringing it to the proofe; and laſtly by cauſing it to be employed in the Princes ſeruice; or as the Generall honoureth the ſouldier, firſt, by trayning him to the wars, and making him expert in all feates of chiualry, then by giuing him a place of imployment fit for his giftes and good parts; and finally by rewarding and crowning his victories, cauſing him to ſit with himſelfe in his chariot of triumph.

tryumph. As therefore the valiant ſouldier murmureth not againſt his Captaine, when hauing an high opinion of his worth and magnanimous fortitude, he appointeth him to high attempts and ſeruices full of danger and difficulty, but accounteth himſelfe much honoured, in that hee thinketh him worthy of ſuch imployments: and contrariwiſe, thinking his valour and abilities vnderualued, is full of diſcontent, if hee ſhould be appointed vnto baſe and eaſie ſeruices, which any coward or freſh-water ſouldier could atchieue without difficulty or danger: So, much leſſe haue wee any cauſe of repining, when our great Commander, who beſt knoweth our abilities, doth imploy vs in ſeruices of an high nature; yea rather wee haue cauſe of thankſgiuing and rejoycing, ſeeing hee hath firſt honoured vs with gifts fit for theſe attempts, and now honoureth vs by giuing vs opportunity of employing them, and approuing them in the tryall, and will hereafter crowne vs with victorie; neither doth any of his ſouldiers periſh in their magnanimous attempts, ſeeing hee protecteth them in all dangers, and neuer matcheth them with any enemy, but ſuch as hee inableth them to ouercome. Thus alſo the couragious Champion, or expert and ſtrong wraſtler, thinke themſelues much graced, when as fit aduerſaries are matched with them, and being thus fitted prouoke them, with whom they contend, to doe their beſt, and vſe all their skill; that ſo they likewiſe may haue the better opportunity to ſhew all their courage and cunning, and obtaine the greater glory and prayſe, after they haue got the victory: and contrariwiſe, hold themſelues much diſparaged in their honour and eſteeme, when they are called to contend with ſuch an aduerſary, as is contemptible through weaknes & want of skill; or elſe with ſuch an one, as being of ſome abilitie, doth but dally with them; becauſe it is a diſgracefull combate and contention, where there is no grace or honour accruing vnto him who obtaineth the victory. Thus the learned ſcholler taketh great delight when he is poſed in high and difficult queſtions, according to the meaſure of his knowledge and gifts, that hee may approue his ſufficiency both to his maſter and fellowes: and contrariwiſe, thinketh himſelfe wronged and diſreputed, if hauing read the beſt Authours, hee bee examined in the firſt rudiments of Grammer, or in the A.b.c. And finally, thus the hardeſt Adamant is moſt commended, when it is tryed with the hammer and Anuile; but much diſgraced in the eſteeme of all, if hee who oweth it, will try it no otherwiſe than with the blow of a cudgell: And ſo in like manner we are much honoured by God, when hauing receiued from him many & great vertues, he doth alſo bring vs into great and many tryals; ſeeing as our vertue and ſtrength are fitted, according to the power of our enemies which doe encounter vs; ſo ſhall our crowne bee fitted to our graces, and the glory of our crowne to the greatneſſe of the victorie. But on the other ſide, we haue juſt cauſe of mourning and diſcontent, if we bee neuer exerciſed with any tryals, ſeeing it is a ſigne that the Lord eſteemeth vs, to be at the beſt, ſuch weakelings as are fit to beare nothing; or men vtterly deſtitute of all grace and goodneſſe, and therefore caſſiereth vs out of his campe the Church militant, as being vtterly vnworthy to fight his battailes, or to doe him any ſeruice. So one ſaith, that a Souldier is in all his brauery, when being in his armour hee marcheth valiantly; but is contemptible, when he idlely ſitteth ſtill, hauing no exerciſe for his vertue, whereby hee might bee knowne vnto himſelfe or others, then hee wanteth prayſes, hee wanteth rewards, and therefore thoſe dangers are not to bee ſhunned as hurtfull which bring rewards with them. Yea rather, he is miſerable in his felicity, who neuer was thought worthy to wraſtle with miſeries, by which contention honour is obtained. Yea euen the heathen man could ſay, that whom God loueth and approueth, them he hardneth, tryeth and exerciſeth; but whom he ſeemeth to cocker and ſpare, hee reſerueth them as effeminate cowards for the euils to come.

Ignominiam indicat gladiator cum inferiore componi; & ſcit cum ſine gloria vinci, qui ſine periculo vincitur. Senec. de prouiden. lib. cap. 3.

Sua infelici te miſer eſt, qui cum inſ licitatibus, bus gloria g natur, nun-quam meru habere conſi ctum. Hyer epiſt. ad a cum ægrot
Tom. 4.

Chap. XVIII.

That God vſeth our afflictions as an effectuall meanes to further our conuerſion.

BY that which hath beene ſaid it may plainly appeare, that God ſheweth in the afflictions of the faithfull his great mercy and loue towards them, as they are tryals: Now according to my order propounded, wee are to ſhew, that the Lord manifeſteth the like mercy and loue in theſe croſſes, as they are fatherly chaſtiſements and corrections; for the cleering whereof wee are to know, that in all our afflictions thus conſidered, the Lord intendeth and accordingly powerfully effecteth the good and benefit of his Children, and that both ſpirituall and alſo earthly. The Lord by theſe croſſes and calamities which he ſendeth, much aduanceth our ſpirituall good, in that hee ordinarily vſeth them as powerfull helpes and meanes, for the furthering of both our effectuall calling, and ſound conuerſion, and alſo our ſanctification and regeneration. For, whereas naturally Gods elect doe in their hearts and affections adhere vnto the world and the things of this life, like the good graine to the chaffe and ſtraw;

§. Sect.
That our a flictions fu ther our co uerſion, pro by teſtimo of Scripture

ſtraw; and, if they were not ſeuered, would periſh with them; the Lord by theſe croſſes doth weane them from theſe earthly vanities, and with the flayle and fanne of afflictions doth make a ſeparation betweene them, chooſing, culling, and ſetting apart his Elect for his owne ſeruice, that they may be ſaued, and leauing the reſt like light & refuſe Corn, to adhere ſtill vnto their carnall delights, till they periſh in them. Whereas (like young Prodigals) whileſt wee haue the World at will, we runne away from our heauenly Father, and abuſe the portion of his gifts in wanton and riotous courſes, to his diſhonour, and our owne vtter ruine and deſtruction: When wee are brought into miſery and affliction, and deſire, at leaſt, to comfort and relieue our ſelues with the huskes and ſwill of worldly and carnall pleaſures, but cannot haue them, then are wee brought to make a ſtand in our former looſe courſes, & begin to think of returning to our Father. And this purpoſe of God, in afflicting his looſe and diſſolute children, that hee may conuert and turne them from their wicked wayes vnto himſelfe, hee doth notably ſet forth vnto vs in the Prophecy of Hoſea: I will goe (ſaith hee) and returne to my place, (that is, I will withdraw all the ſignes and teſtimonies of my loue & fauour from them) till they acknowledge their fault and ſeeke me: In their affliction they will ſeeke mee diligently, the which was accordingly verified in the euent, as hee ſheweth in the next wordes, where hee bringeth them in, ſpeaking thus in their afflictions. Come and let vs returne to the Lord, for hee hath ſpoyled, and hee will heale vs; he hath wounded vs, and he will bind vs vp; after two dayes will he receiue vs, and in the third day hee will rayſe vs vp, and wee ſhall liue in his ſight. So the Lord ſaith by the Prophet Eſay, that when he had brought vpon his people Iſrael a common deſtruction for their ſinnes, and had reſerued and pulled out of thoſe miſeries, ſome few of many, like the remaynder of the Grapes after the Vintage, and of the Oliues after the tree is ſhaken, then ſhould a man looke to his Maker, and his eyes ſhould haue reſpect to the holy one of Iſrael. And in this regard the Pſalmiſt out of a ſpirituall Charitie towards his enemies, preferring their eternall ſaluation before their worldly eſtate, prayeth thus in their behalfe: Fill their faces with ſhame, that they may ſeeke thy Name, O Lord. For it fareth with vs as it doth with fooliſh children; for if our heauenly Father ſhould continually cocker vs, and neuer croſſe vs of our wils and earthly deſires, wee would in wantonneſſe and inſolency forget and neglect him, caſting his Commandements with proude contempt behind our backes; whereas when hee intermixeth ſeuerity with loue, frownes with ſmiles, and chaſtiſements with his benefits, then no ſooner doth he eſtrange himſelfe from vs abuſing our liberty to licentiouſnes, & his gifts to his diſhonour, but we preſently returne, labour to amend our former errours, and ſeeke his face and fauour, with the continuance or renuing of his bleſſings and benefits. To this purpoſe one ſaith, that God Almighty doth two wayes wound thoſe whom hee purpoſeth to ſaue and cure; for ſometimes he ſmiteth the fleſh, and mollifieth the heart with his feare, he woundeth vs that hee may recall vs, (when wee goe aſtray) into the way of ſaluation, and outwardly afflicteth our bodies, that our ſoules may inwardly liue, &c. He killeth that hee may quicken them, and hurteth that he may heale them: for therefore hee inflicteth externall ſtripes, that hee may inwardly cure their wounds of wickedneſſe. And ſometimes ceaſing to ſcourge vs outwardly, he doth inwardly afflict vs in ſoule and ſpirit, correcting and croſſing the hardneſſe of our hearts with it owne deſires, and vnruly paſſions; but by wounding hee healeth them, whileſt piercing them with the dart of his feare, hee inlighteneth them with the vnderſtanding and knowledge of the right way, &c.

Greg. Moral. lib.6.cap.18.

§. Sect. 2.
The former point illuſtrated by examples, out of the Scriptures.
Pſal 78. 34,35.
Eſay 26.16.

An example hereof wee haue in the Iſraelites of whom the Pſalmiſt ſaith, that when the Lord ſlue them, they ſought him, and they returned and enquired early after God, &c. And the Prophet Eſay ſaith thus of them; O Lord, in trouble they haue viſited thee, they haue powred out a prayer when thy chaſtning was vpon them. And this is vſuall to be obſerued in the Hiſtory of the Iudges & Kings, that when this people abounded in worldly proſperity, they forſooke the Lord and ſerued Idols; but when he afflicted them ſharply for ſuch Apoſtaſie, then they were brought to a ſight of their ſins, they turned vnto the Lord, and repented and humbled themſelues before him. Thus the Nineuites, who by their ſinnes, committed in their proſperity, deſerued an vniuerſall deſtruction, when God threatned his judgements againſt them, turned vnto the Lord with faſting, weeping, and prayer. So Manaſſes, who in his flouriſhing eſtate had forſaken the Lord, when he was in tribulation prayed to the Lord his God, and humbled himſelfe greatly before the God of his Fathers. And Saul, who raged againſt Gods Saints, when he was throwne downe to the earth and depriued of his ſight, he doth in the time of his blindnes, ſeeke and finde the Lord, who ran away from him whileſt hee had the vſe of his eyes, when blinded inwardly with an ignorant zeale, he thought to approach neereſt vnto him. To this purpoſe one ſaith, that God hath choſen them whom the World deſpiſeth, becauſe commonly when men are contemned of the World they come hereby to the ſight and knowledge of themſelues. Hee that left his Father,

2.Chron.33.12.

Acts 9.8.

Gregor. Homil. 36. in Luc.14.

Father, and ſpent his portion in riotous courſes, returned vnto him when he was pinched with hunger, and if he had not hungred he had not returned, for when hee felt the want of earthly things, then he began to thinke of his ſpirituall loſſes. So when thoſe who had Oxen, Farmes, and Wiues, refuſed being inuited to come to the Supper; the poore, weake, blinde, and lame became willing gueſts at the firſt call, becauſe thoſe who are impotent and deſpiſed in the World doe ſo much the more cheerefully heare the Word of God, becauſe they haue no earthly delights to diſtract and hinder them. Beſides, the fleſh which as a notable pul-backe hindreth our conuerſion and turning vnto God, whileſt wee enjoy the World at will, and proſper in our euill courſes, doth giue way vnto the part regenerate, when it is pinched with croſſes and afflictions, that it may by this meanes be freed from preſent ſmart, and as the reſty Horſe, or the refractory and ſturdy Oxe, doe not only, not draw themſelues, but alſo pull backe and hinder their yokefellow, gauling and hurting them with their ſtrugling and ſtriuing; but when they feele the ſmart of the whip, or the pricke of the gaode, they goe on forward, and helpe in the draught: ſo our fleſh and vnregenerate part, doth hinder the ſpirituall man in all religious courſes, gauling and vexing it, when it would goe forward in the wayes of godlineſſe; but when it is whipped and pricked for this reluctation and backwardneſſe, to bee freed from paine, it is content to yeeld to an outward reformation, to turne vnto God, and to performe that ſeruice vnto him, in formality and hypocriſie, which the regenerate part performeth in ſincerity and truth. Yea, it ſelfe alone is ready to make a fained conuerſion, to auoid ſmart and puniſhment, euen when there is no dram of Gods Spirit to help it forward, meerly out of ſelfe-loue, and not the true loue of God: as wee may ſee in the fained humiliation of Ahab, when he heard Gods judgements denounced againſt him: how much rather therefore will theſe afflictions driue a man vnto God, when beſides theſe prickes and goades in the ſides of the fleſh, the ſpirituall part doth drag him forward.

Math.22.

1.Kings 22.27, 29.

§. Sect.3. That God by afflictions fitteth and prepareth vs for the hearing of his Word.

But this will better appeare if we conſider the meanes of our conuerſion. The firſt and chiefe whereof is the ſauing hearing of Gods Word, of which as the Spirit of God is the principall cauſe, ſeeing hee boareth the eare, and openeth the heart, that wee may attend vnto it and receiue it; ſo an eſpeciall meanes which hee vſeth for the fitting and preparing of our hearts hereunto, is affliction and tribulation: for when our former Husband the world hath dealt churliſhly with vs, rejected and diuorced vs from him; then are we more ready to hearken vnto the motion of Ieſus Chriſt, when by his Ambaſſadours in the preaching of the Goſpell, hee ſueth for our loue; and the match and vnion betweene vs and him, is in a good forwardneſſe, when by rough and vnkind vſage, wee are in our hearts and affections alienated from the World. And therefore the Lord, when wee doate vpon theſe earthly Idols, and will not be eſtranged from them, doth ſet betweene vs and them the thorny hedge of afflictions, (as he ſpeaketh by the Prophet) that being by this forcible means ſeparated from them, and pricked with tribulations, when we ſeek after them to renew our loue, we may at laſt returne vnto him our true and firſt Husband, becauſe, when we ſerue him, our condition will be much better, than whileſt wee adhered to the World, when we heare from it nothing but threatnings, and terrours; and wee are more willing to harken vnto Gods ſweet and gracious promiſes. And when with Elias we haue heard and ſeene, yea, alſo haue felt and had our ſhare, in the ſtormy tempeſt of troubles, and haue beene ſhaken with the earthquakes of dangers, and euen ſcorched with the fire of affliction and tribulation, then are wee well prepared to heare the ſtill and ſoft voice of the Lord, ſpeaking comfortably vnto vs in the Miniſtery of the Goſpell. And thus Elihu ſaith, that God openeth the eares of men euen by their correction; which hee had ſealed: that hee might cauſe man to turne away from his enterpriſe, and that hee might hide the pride of man; and keepe backe his ſoule from the pit, and that his life ſhould not paſſe by the ſword. And againe, hee deliuereth the poore in his affliction, and openeth their eare in trouble. To which purpoſe one ſaith, that tribulation openeth the eare of the heart, which the proſperity of this World vſually ſhutteth, making it deafe vnto all good admonitions. Yea, not only doe afflictions further our conuerſion, as they prepare and fit our eares for the hearing of the Word, but alſo as themſelues are a reall Sermon, whereby God inuiteth vs vnto repentance; for as we heare him ſpeaking to vs by his Ambaſſadours in the publike Miniſtery; ſo we may ſee his wil in his works and judgements, namely, how vgly and lothſome ſin is vnto him, and how much hee is diſpleaſed with thoſe that commit it.

Hoſ.2.6,7.

1.King 19.11, 12.

Iob 33.16,17. & 36,15.

Aurem cordi tribulatio aperit quam ſæpe huius mundi proſperitas claudit, Greg. Moral.lib.2 cap.23.

§. Sect. 4. That God by afflictions worketh in v contrition a humiliation.

The other meanes of our conuerſion is our contrition and humiliation, of which, as the chiefe cauſe is Gods holy Spirit, applying vnto vs the threatnings of the Law, ſo another principall meanes which hee vſeth are croſſes and afflictions. For when the Oyle of ſpirituall grace will not mollifie our iron and braſſie hearts, then doth hee melt them and make them ſoft and liquid in the fiery furnace of tribulation; when as they are ſuch ſtiffe and ſtubborne grounds, that they are not fit for the ſeed of the Word, then doth he breake vp, plough, and harrow them with croſſes and afflictions, that ſo they may become fruitfull. And whereas naturally wee are ſo blinded with ſelfe-loue, that wee doe not ſee our ſins, and ſo puffed vp with pride, that we will not caſt downe our ſelues before God, and acknowledge and confeſſe them; when our eyes are anointed with this ſharpe eye-ſalue of afflictions, we eaſily diſcerne all our former wicked courſes; and when our lofty hearts are preſſed downe with the waight of tribulation, then doe wee humble our ſelues before God, and acknowledge our ſins; ſaying with Dauid, Behold, here I am, let him doe vnto mee as it ſeemeth good in his eyes. And is it not I that haue commanded to number the people? It is euen I that haue ſinned, and haue committed euill, &c. and with the Church in the Lamentations, It is the Lords mercies that we are not conſumed. To this purpoſe one ſaith, that it is the higheſt degree of vertue, not to commit, but to flie ſin; and the next vnto that is to repent of it, when it is committed. But vſually wee neither auoid ſin when wee are tempted vnto it, not willingly acknowledge it when we haue done amiſſe. And ſo much the more deſperately is the mind of ſinfull man blinded, by how much the leſſe he diſcerneth the damage of his blindneſſe. Whereof it commeth to paſſe through the bounteous mercy of Almighty God, that puniſhment attending vpon the fault, doth open the eyes of the offender, which ſecurity made blinde; ſo as hee could not diſcerne his manifold ſins. For the ſlothfull and ſluggiſh mind is awakened and rowſed vp with the ſmart of ſtripes; and whereas being carnally ſecure it loſt its ſtate of innocencie and integrity; being afflicted it conſidereth whither it is declining and falling.

Sam.15.26.
hron.21.17.
am.3.22.
mmavirtus peccari sed vi-peccata, ſeſtatem tus con-
,&c.
Moral.
cap.17.

ect. 5.
t afflicare the meanes d God orily viſith eert ob-ſinners.

By all which it appeareth, that afflictions ſanctified by Gods holy Spirit for this end, are a moſt powerfull and effectuall meanes for the furthering of our conuerſion; for when neither the Oyle of Gods gracious bounty will ſoften and ſupple our ſtony hearts; nor his Word, which is the Sword of the Spirit, pierce them; and when neither the ſweet ſound of his gracious promiſes will allure vs to obedience, nor the terrible thunder of his fearefull threatnings will reſtraine vs from ſin: then in the laſt place he viſiteth our iniquities with the rod, and our ſinne with ſcourges; knowing that if our caſe be not vtterly deſperate, wee who haue neglected his Word, will at leaſt be reclaymed and reformed with his chaſtiſements and corrections. And this the Lord implyeth where hee ſaith that Ieruſalem, after that hee had dealt with her not only by his Word but by afflictions and chaſtiſements, did notwithſtanding continue in a perpetuall rebellion, and would not returne. I hearkned (ſaith he) and heard, but none ſpake aright, no man repented of his wickedneſſe, ſaying, what haue I done? euery one turned to their race, as the horſe ruſheth into the battell. So by the Prophet Amos he intimateth, that they were in a deſperate condition, ſeeing they would not be reclaymed from their euill wayes, neither by his Word, nor by afflictions; for though hee had grieuouſly puniſhed them with Famine, Peſtilence and the Sword, yea, had ouerthrowne them as hee ouerthrew Sodome and Gomorrha, and had only reſerued a remnant from the common deſtruction, as it were a fire-brand pluckt out of the burning; yet for all this, they had not returned vnto the Lord. The conſideration whereof ſerueth firſt for the exceeding terrour of thoſe, who doe not in their afflictions draw neerer vnto God, forſake their wicked wayes, nor any whit profit by their corrections; for this diſcouereth the deſperatneſſe of their eſtate, ſeeing if any thing would conuert and turne them vnto God, then would theſe afflictions and corrections; which becauſe they doe not, therefore are they daily in danger to be giuen ouer of God as a hopeleſſe cure, and to haue theſe fatherly chaſtiſements turned into vtter deſtruction and helliſh puniſhments. The former the Lord threatneth againſt the people of the Iewes. Wherefore (ſaith hee) ſhould you be ſmitten any more, ſeeing you fall away more and more, and the latter likewiſe elſewhere. The people (ſaith he) turneth not vnto him that ſmiteth them, neither doe they ſeeke the Lord of hoaſts. Therefore will the Lord cut off from Iſrael head and taile, branch and ruſh in one day. To which purpoſe one ſaith, that our preſent puniſhment, if it turn and conuert the heart of the afflicted, is the end of foregoing faultineſſe, but if it doe not worke in vs the true feare of God, it is the beginning of following puniſhments. And therefore wee are carefully to take heed that in our afflictions we rent our hearts and turne vnto the Lord, with weeping and mourning, leſt we change from bad to worſe, and paſſe out of earthly puniſhments into helliſh torments.

16.

Amos 4.6.12.

Eſa.1.5.&9.13

Pœna præſens ſi animum afflicti conuertit, finis eſt culpæ præcedentis: ſi autem ad timorem Domini minimè conuertit, initium eſt pœnæ ſequentis, &c. Greg.Epiſt.lib.12.cap.25.

§. Sect. 6. That theſe afflictions bring much comfort which further our conuerſion

Secondly, it ſerueth notably for the comfort and refreſhing of all, who make profitable vſe of their afflictions, and are moued by them to forſake their former euill courſes, and to draw neere vnto God by repentance and amendment of life. For how happy may they thinke themſelues in their croſſes and calamities, when as God thereby doth but clip their wings, that they may not flie from him; and caſt theſe thornes, briars and blockes in their way, that they may not goe forward in that plaine and eaſie paſſage which leadeth to deſtruction, but may leaue this courſe and returne vnto him? How much may they thinke themſelues bound to their heauenly Father, if when they are going like fooliſh children towards the pit of deſtruction, and ready to fail into a gulfe of dangers, he ſetteth theſe Bug-beares in the way to deterre and hinder them from going on, and to cauſe them to returne vnto him, in whoſe preſence and protection they haue all their ſafety? And if when they are ſnorting in the ſpirituall lethargie of carnall ſecurity, which, if they were let alone and left to their eaſe, would bring them to death and deſtruction, they be nipped and pinched with troubles and vexations, that ſo being awakened, the life of their ſoules may be preſerued, and their health recouered, What cauſe is there of murmuring and complayning? yea, what cauſe haue wee of thankſgiuing and rejoycing, if being (with Lot) loath to leaue this Sodome of ſinne, we be pulled out of it with ſome violence, and be pricked in our ſides with theſe goades of affliction, to haſten our ſpeed towards Gods heauenly mountaine, where we ſhall be ſafe from the common deſtruction? How happy may wee thinke our ſelues, if the pricks of tribulation doe further our conuerſion; if the thornes of affliction pricking our bodies, doe worke true compunction in our ſoules, and pricke our hearts and conſciences with a ſight and ſenſe of ſin, that ſo we may ſeeke to haue our wounds cured with the precious Balſome of our Sauiours bloud, and by feeling this temporary puniſhment, may amend our faults and be freed from that guiltineſſe which is accompanied with euerlaſting death? And how are we bound to bleſſe that neceſſitie which driueth vs vnto God, not ſuffering vs to goe on in ſuch licentious courſes as would in the end bring vs vnto deſtruction?

Bene ſentibus tribulationis confixus, qui conuerſus exinde eſt, benè pungeris ſi compungeris. Multi eum ſentiunt pœnam, corrigunt culpam, Bern. Serm. 48.

CHAP. XIX.

That God vſeth our afflictions as an effectuall meanes to preuent vs from falling into ſinne, as alſo to mortifie and ſubdue our corruptions.

§. Sect. 1. That it is one mayn end why the Lord afflicteth vs, to preſerue vs from falling into ſins when we are naturally inclined to commit them.

Heb. 12.10.

ANd thus Gods loue appeareth in our afflictions, as hee vſeth them for meanes of our vocation and effectuall conuerſion. The like loue and mercy hee ſheweth vnto vs by them, in that hee vſeth them as his powerfull inſtruments, for the furthering of our ſanctification; for at this end God alſo aymeth in his corrections, as the Apoſtle witneſſeth, where hee ſaith, that he chaſteneth vs for our profit, that wee might be partakers of his holineſſe. And this the Lord effecteth by our afflictions, whileſt he vſeth them as meanes to free vs from ſinne, and alſo to furniſh vs with all ſanctifying and ſauing graces, whereby wee are inabled to bring forth the fruites of obedience, and to walke before him in newneſſe of life. He doth by our afflictions free vs both from the outward and inward corruption of our ſins, not only by preuenting them, that vve doe not entertaine or fall into them, but alſo by mortifying them, vvhen vvee are already tainted and infected with them. Concerning the former, vve are (through our naturall corruption) ſo prone vnto ſinne, that if we be left vnto our owne courſes, we are apt to abuſe our liberty vnto licentiouſneſſe, to turne aſide out of the path of holineſſe and righteouſneſſe, and like vnbridled Horſes to run in the wayes of wickedneſſe (as it vvere) vvith a full careere: and therefore the Lord in great mercy by ſending afflictions, doth put a bridle into our mouthes, vvherewith he raineth and pulleth vs backe, that we may not ſtumble and fall into ſinne, and ſo maſtereth and ruleth vs, that vvee are faine to trauell in the right way, which will bring vs vnto happineſſe, and cannot ſatisfie our carnall deſires by running into the by-wayes of ſinne, vvhich vvould leade vs to deſtruction. We are ready like vvanton Oxen to leape into the forbidden paſtures of carnall pleaſures, becauſe they are delightfull to our fleſhly appetite; but the Lord ſetteth theſe thorny hedges of troubles and afflictions in our vvay to reſtraine vs from entring into them, and that out of meere mercy & loue, ſeeing howſoeuer theſe paſtures are for the preſent, pleaſing to corrupted nature; yet, euen now they lye open to the thunder and lightning of Gods fearefull vengeance, and for the time to come, will but fatten and fit vs for the ſhambles of deſtruction. And as they are an Hedge of Thornes to keepe vs from companying and feeding with the Buls of Baſhan, euen wicked Worldlings in the fields of iniquity; ſo alſo are they Hedges and Wals of defence, to preſerue vs from the aſſaults of our ſpirituall enemies, and to keep them aloofe, when as otherwiſe they would encounter vs with their tentations. For, whereas wicked Worldlings would haunt vs with their company, and corrupt vs with their euill example, and filthy communication, if wee enjoyed Worldly proſperity, and had ſuch fulneſſe of earthly things, that they might ſucke from vs any profit and aduantage: theſe troubles and afflictions doe make them to loath our company, (as Moths doe leaue the garments that are imbittered with gall) and to flee our fellowſhip, ſeeing neither our ſelues, nor any thing about vs is pleaſing and delightfull to their carnall appetite. And ſurely this is a mayne end why God afflicteth vs, not becauſe wee haue formerly ſinned, but that we may not ſinne for the time to come; not to puniſh vs becauſe we haue committed it, but to preuent vs, that we be not againe ouertaken by it. So Elihu ſaith, that God openeth the eares of men by their corrections, which he had ſealed, that he might cauſe man to turne away from his enterpriſe, and that he might hide the pride of man, and keepe backe his ſoule from the pit, and that his life ſhould not paſſe by the ſword. And thus the Lord himſelfe ſaith, that hee would ſtop his peoples way with Thornes, that they might not goe on in their Idolatry, but returne vnto him. To this purpoſe one ſaith, that God fore-ſeeing, that ſome of his ſeruants would (if they were let alone) fall into grieuous ſinnes, doth for their ſoules health afflict their bodies to preſerue them from it; becauſe it is more profitable for them to be weakned with diſeaſes, that they may be ſaued, than to remayne ſtill in health and be condemned: For that is pernicious health, which leadeth vs to diſobedience; and that is wholſome ſickneſſe, which being inflicted by God as the chaſtiſement of our ſinnes, doth bruiſe our ſtony hearts, and make them to become meeke and humble. An example whereof we haue in Ionas, who when hee intended to flye from Gods preſence, with full purpoſe to neglect the ſeruice which hee had in charge to performe, was ſwallowed by a Whale, that ſo he might flie vnto God, when hee could goe no whither elſe, and execute his Commiſſion with boldneſſe (hauing learned that God was able to deliuer him out of the very jawes of death) the neglect whereof had beene a grieuous ſinne. And thus the Lord taketh away from his children Worldly Honours, vvhen hee ſeeth that they would by them bee puft vp with pride, and become inſolent and vain-glorious: thus hee depriueth them of riches, when they would be vnto them Thornes, to choake and hinder the growth of his heauenly graces, or prouocations, and incitements vnto ſinne, or the meanes and inſtruments to further them in wicked actions, or like Camels bunches hinder them from entring into the ſtrait gate, which leadeth vnto happineſſe. Thus he taketh, from vs parents, children, and deare friends, when as (if wee ſhould ſtill enjoy them) wee would make them our Idols, ſetting our hearts vpon, louing, or truſting in them, more than in God himſelfe. So he depriueth vs of our earthly pleaſures, vvhen he ſeeth that we would preferre them before heauenly joyes; and cauſeth vs to find many troubles, croſſes and afflictions in the World, becauſe he knoweth, that if it ſhould ſmile and fawne vpon vs, we would make a Paradiſe of the place of our pilgrimage, ſet our hearts and affections vpon theſe tranſitory trifles, and neuer care to trauell in the way of holineſſe and righteouſnes which leadeth to our heauenly Country. As therefore the vviſe and skilfull Phyſician, doth not only apply medicines for the curing of diſeaſes, when men are falne into them, and reſtoratiues to repaire their decayed ſtrength, and to recouer their health; but alſo in time of infection, and when they ſee ſome diſtemper in them through the abounding of humours, do giue wholeſome preſeruatiues, and preuenting purges, to maintaine health, and to driue away the approaching diſeaſe: ſo doth our heauenly Phyſician vſe theſe potions of afflictions, not only to recouer and cure vs of the diſeaſes of ſinne, when vvee are falne into them; but alſo to purge avvay our inward corruptions, and ſo to preuent theſe deadly ſickneſſes of the ſoule, before they haue ſeaſed vpon vs, and to free vs from all cauſes and occaſions which would otherwiſe bring vs into this dangerous condition. For, as if vvee be left vnto our ſelues, and be neither terrified from ſinne by ſenſe of our owne chaſtiſements, nor the terrour of others puniſhments, the vnregenerate part vvill grow ſo carnally ſecure, and proudly inſolent, that it vvill tempt, yea, pull and drag vs into much vvickedneſſe (to which purpoſe the Wiſe man ſaith of profeſſed Worldlings; that becauſe ſentence againſt an euill worke is not executed ſpeedily, therefore the heart of the children of men is fully ſet in them to doe euill.) So when wee feele the ſmart of our former ſinnes, and vvhen our fleſh loſeth all the pleaſure it hath taken in theſe ſweet meates, by the after-taſte of theſe ſharpe and bitter ſawces of afflictions, which it is forced to feed vpon, vvhether it vvill or no, then it is leſſe licorous for the time to come, or at leaſt doth not vvith that boldneſſe giue way to its carnal appetite, in ſwallowing theſe ſinfull delicates, when it knoweth that they will vpbraide it, with ſuch a loathſome after-relliſh of ſmart and puniſhment. For as the ſpirituall man feareth only ſpirituall puniſhments, and contemneth carnall; as namely, the curſe of the Law, the wrath of God, the laſt Iudgment, and Hell torments; but not Famine, Sword, the Rack or Gibbet; So the fleſh and part vnregenerate feareth only theſe corporall puniſhments, and neglecteth thoſe which are ſpirituall and eternall: whereof it is that they who are wholly carnall, doe vtterly deſpiſe all threatnings of ſpirituall judgements, and run on in a head-long courſe of ſinne, vnleſſe they be bridled and reſtrained with bodily puniſhments. And therefore the Lord knowing this, inflicteth vpon his ſeruants theſe outward croſſes, that thereby hee may curbe in their carnall concupiſcence from luſting after euill, from which if the vnregenerate part were throughly ſecured, it would be ſo importunate, and audacious in aſſaulting & tempting them vnto ſinne, that if it did not wholly vanquiſh them, yet it would often foile them with theſe encounters, or at leſt continually trouble them and diſturbe their peace.

Iob 33.16,1

Eccleſ.8.11.

Chryſo.in Math. 3.Homil.3.

The conſideration whereof ſhould mooue vs to beare all our afflictions with much patience and comfort. For if a valiant Souldier is willing with all cheerefulneſſe to runne through a World of miſeries, rather than he would be vanquiſhed, and led captiue by his enemies; if with patience he beare his heauy Armour, indure hunger and thirſt, heate and cold, ſpend the night in watching, and the day in fighting, not reckoning of his reſt, nor regarding wounds, that hee may in the end put his enemies to flight: and if the wiſe patient is content not onely to ſuffer, but to reward his Phyſician, when he goeth about by bitter pils and loathſome potions, by long abſtinence and ſtrict diet to preuent diſeaſes when they are approching: then how much more cheerefully and willingly ſhould wee vndergoe all the miſeries and troubles of this ſpirituall Warfare againſt Sin, Sathan, and the enemies of our ſaluation, when as they ſerue as meanes and helpes, whereby we are inabled to vanquiſh theſe deadly foes, and to obtaine a glorious victory? With how much more patience and comfort ſhould wee at the appointment of our heauenly Phyſician take theſe bitter pils and potions of croſſes and afflictions, ſeeing he vſeth them as ſoueraigne preſeruatiues to keepe vs ſafe and ſound from the contagion and poyſonous infection of ſinne, and from falling into theſe dangerous diſeaſes, which would bring body and ſoule vnto euerlaſting death.

§. Sect.2. That the former conſideration ſhould worke in vs patience in afflictions.

§. Sect. 3. That God firſt vſeth meanes for the preuention of ſin; and then for the mortifying and ſubduing it.

And thus it appeareth that the Lord in our afflictions, aymeth at the preuenting of thoſe things, which otherwiſe if we were left vnto our ſelues, we would readily fall into: it followeth now further to ſhew, that he vſually by the ſame meanes mortifieth our corruptions, wherewith wee are already defiled, and euen ſeparateth and diuorceth vs from thoſe ſinnes vnto which our carnall affections are wedded and vnited. For as the wiſe and faithfull Phyſician ſheweth his firſt care in preuenting the ſickneſſe of his patient, and in preſeruing him from falling into dangerous diſeaſes; but if through the abundance of corrupt humours, externall accidents, and eſpecially his owne ill diet and diſorder, hee be already falne into them, then his ſecond care is to apply fit medicines to cure him, and recouer his health: ſo the Lord our ſpirituall Phyſician in the firſt place giueth vs wholeſome preſeruations, to keepe vs in health, and to repell theſe diſeaſes of the ſoule, that they doe not ſeize vpon vs, but if through the inward corruption of our nature, the outward tentations of the World, or through our own diſorder and miſ-diet, neglecting our ſpirituall food, which would nouriſh vs vnto life eternall, and ſurfeiting vpon carnall pleaſures, and worldly delights, wee be already falne into the ſickneſſe of ſinne; then doth he by fit (though not toothſome medicines) ſeeke to heale vs, and to recouer againe our ſpirituall health, wherein like a moſt wiſe and louing Phyſician hee doth not labour to pleaſe our appetite, and delight our taſte, but to cure our diſeaſes which in their owne nature are moſt deadly, and to preſerue our ſoules from euerlaſting death. To which purpoſe he preſcribeth vs a long faſt, after fulneſſe, and appointeth vs a ſtrict diet, cauſing vs to vſe ſparingly, or totally to abſtaine from worldly delicates, whereon formerly we haue ſurfeited; or becauſe we cannot rule our appetite, he doth out of his loue and care take them from vs, and (as it were) locketh them out of our ſight. Yea, if this be not ſufficient for our recouery, hee doth vnto theſe priuatiue remedies, adde poſitiue Medicines, purging away our corrupt humours of wickedneſſe, which haue beene bred in vs by our greedy feeding vpon delicious pleaſures and ſweet delights with the bitter pils and lothſome potions of troubles and afflictions, and lanching our ſoares & impoſtumes of ſin and corruption, with theſe ſharpe Razours and keene Kniues of outward calamities and tribulations, which haue beene bred and gathered in vs through idleneſſe and exceſſe. And thus the Prophet ſaith, that the Lord ſhall waſh the filthineſſe of the daughter of Sion, and purge the bloud of Ieruſalem out of the middeſt thereof, by the ſpirit of iudgement, and by the ſpirit of burning. And that by the fire of afflictions he will melt, and ſo by melting purifie the filthineſſe, and conſume the ſcumme of the people of Iſrael. So the Authour of the Booke of Wiſdome ſaith, that therefore the Lord chaſtened them by little and little, that offend; and warned them by putting them in remembrance wherein they had offended; that leauing their wickedneſſe, they might beleeue on him.

Eſay 4.4.

Ezek.24.11.

Wiſd.12.2.

§. Sect. 4. That afflictions effectually moue vs to forſake ſin, and to leaue our former wicked courſes.

And ſurely theſe afflictions and calamities are a moſt powerfull and profitable meanes to pull vs with violence out of our ſinnes, and to purge and cleanſe vs from our ſpirituall filthineſſe. According to that in the Prouerbes: The blewnes of the wound ſerueth to purge away euils; and ſo doe ſtripes the inward parts of the belly. For in the time of our proſperity wee hearten our ſelues in our wicked courſes, ſuppoſing that God liketh and approueth, or at leſt is not much offended with our euill conuerſation, becauſe all things goe well with vs, and no inconuenience accompanieth our ſinnes, (the which conceits bring vs to carnall ſecurity, and to ſuch hardneſſe of heart, that we ſhut our eares againſt all admonitions and reprooſes, and neglect Gods terrible threatnings, as though they were a vaine ſound, and, as it were, but paper ſhot) but when wee are brought into afflictions, and not onely ſee our ſinnes accompanied with ſenſe of preſent ſmart, but alſo expect the continuance and increaſe of our calamities; then doe wee begin to examine our wayes, and to call call our ſelues to a rekoning : and when our conſciences tell vs, that it is our ſinnes which haue brought vpon vs all theſe miſeries, and that there is no meanes to bee eaſed of our ſmart, vnleſſe wee leaue and forſake our former wickedneſſe, and betake our ſelues to a new courſe of life; then doe wee begin to loath theſe ſweete meates of ſinfull delights, when they are thus diſtaſted with the ſowre ſawce of trouble and affliction; and though heretofore there hath beene a league and friendſhip betweene our ſinnes and vs; yet now (like malefactours when they are apprehended) we beginne to accuſe and exclaime againſt them, as the authors of all our miſeries; and are content to bring them out before our judge to bee condemned, mortified, and crucified, that wee by their ruine may eſcape puniſhment. In our proſperity we doe not only grow cold and negligent in holy duties, but alſo lie open to the tentations of Sathan and the world, alluring vs vnto ſinne, by caſting before vs the baits of earthly vanities; and though the pure gold of Gods graces remaine in vs, yet it is much dazeled, if not quite couered with the droſſe of our corruptions: and therefore the Lord is faine to caſt vs into this fiery furnace of afflictions, that hereby hee may trie vs, and by trying purifie vs, burning and conſuming away the droſſe of our ſins, that wee may ſhine againe in our wonted beauty. So hee ſaith by the Prophet to his ſinfull people, I will turne my hand vpon thee, and purely purge away thy droſſe, and take away all thy tinne. With which conſideration one comforteth himſelfe, becauſe his tribulation was but his purgation, whereby he was freed from the droſſe of ſinne. For which purpoſe the Lord like a skilfull gold-ſmith vſeth the world for his furnace, the diuell and wicked men as ſtraw and fewell to maintaine this fire of affliction, which doe but conſume themſelues whileſt they purifie Gods elect (like good gold) from the droſſe of their corruptions. In the time of our proſperity, though wee be Gods good graine, yet is our ſpirituall part mixed and joyned with the chaffe and ſtraw of our corruptions, and therefore our heauenly Husbandman doth (as it were) thraſh vs with the flaile of affliction, and fanneth and winnoweth vs with tryals and tribulations, that being purged and made cleane, wee may be fit for his owne ſtore. Whileſt wee lie at eaſe and are not mooued, we become, like ſtanding waters, corrupt and noiſome, and are fit to breed and bring forth nothing, but thoſe ougly toades and venemous Serpents of ſinne and wickedneſſe which viper-like kill and deſtroy them, from whom they haue their exiſtence and being; but when we are ſtirred and troubled, or haue a paſſage and current ouer the ſands and ſtones of affliction and miſery, then are we purified from the ſlime of corruption, and doe attaine vnto chriſtalline purity. Wee are ready in our proſperity like iron vnuſed, to ruſt in our corruption; and therefore the Lord vſeth theſe files of affliction to ſcoure away this ruſt and canker of ſinne, that we may become bright and ſmooth in our integrity and holineſſe; and when like clothes wee are ſoiled, and become fowle with the filth of iniquity, then doth hee waſh and rinſe, beate and wring vs in thoſe waters of tribulation, that ſo we may bee made cleane from this ſpirituall pollution. By all which, Gods loue appeareth in our afflictions, ſeeing they tend not at all to our hurt and deſtruction, but onely to purifie and cleanſe vs from the loathſome filth of ſin, and from thoſe foule corruptions which make both our bodies and ſoules ougly in Gods ſight; and fit for no place, but that darke blacke dungeon of Hell and deſtruction. So that as one ſaith, he doth by wounding vs outwardly cure vs inwardly, he is angry for the preſent, that he may bee mild and mercifull for euer after, hee afflicteth vs that he may ſpare vs, and caſteth vs downe that hee may more highly aduance vs. Neither doe wee in our part regenerate receiue hereby any hurt and dammage, but rather much profit and benefit; for whileſt the outward man decayeth, the inward man is renewed daily, whileſt the droſſe of our corruption is conſumed, the golden graces of Gods holy Spirit are purified, and ſhine more gloriouſly in the ſight of all men: whileſt the fleſh with the luſts thereof are mortified and ſubdued, the ſpirit is reuiued, ruleth and reigneth; and the more fiercely our old man is encountred with croſſes and afflictions, the more weake aſſaults it giueth to the new man and part regenerate. Nor neede wee, whileſt we are thus purified, to feare that the ſmall ſcruples and few graines of Gods graces in vs will be loſt, and periſh in the huge heape of out droſſe and chaffe; for (as one ſaith) in another caſe, the leaſt graine of this ſpirituall gold cannot miſcarie vnder the hand of ſuch an excellent artiſan: and ſo skilfull and carefull is this heauenly workeman, that in our purging wee can neuer periſh.

Prou.20.30.

Exteriori vulnere ſanatur plaga interior. Sic enim iraſceris vt manſueſcas, affligis vt parcas; proſternis vt erigas. Idiota inter orthodoxgor. de patien. veræ contempl. cap. 18.

Sub manu tanti artificis auri mica in maſſa palea perire non poteſt. Quanta ibi palea? quam modicum aurum? ſed noli timere, tantus eſt artifex vt purgare poſſit, perdere non poſſit. Aug. ſerm. 284. Tom. 10.

§. Sect. 5.

That afflictions cauſe vs carefully to vſe all good meanes for the mortifying our of ſins,

And vnto this efficacy and vertue of afflictions freeing vs from our ſinnes and corruptions, when they are inflicted on vs, wee may further adde, that they are of neceſſary vſe, as they worke in vs a care and deſire of applying vnto vs both theſe and all other good meanes, that we may be freed from them; for though wee be in our ſoules ſicke in ſinne to the very death, yet naturally wee are ſo in loue with our diſeaſes, that we neuer ſeeke to be cured of them, but rather this ſickeneſſe ſeemeth health, and our ſpirituall health is ſhunned as a diſeaſe. And therefore (as one ſaith) ſeeing when our ſoules are grieuouſly ſicke, we haue no ſenſe of paine, nor deſire of remedie, but with great diligence ſeeke to eaſe the body of the leſt infirmitie: therefore God for the ſinne of the ſoule doth afflict the body, that by the puniſhment and paine of the worſer part, the better and more noble may bee moued to ſeeke after the curing of its ſpirituall diſeaſes. Though wee are much indangered by our inward impoſtumes of ſin and corruption, ſo long as we are at eaſe, and in our outward eſtate in good plight and liking, we neuer looke for helpe and remedy; but when rankling and feſtring in our terrified conſciences and afflicted Spirits, they put vs to grieuous paine and intolerable torments, then doe wee ſue and ſeeke vnto our heauenly Surgeon, and are content that he ſhould not onely apply vnto vs, the healing plaiſters of his mercies, but alſo the ſharpe corraſiues of croſſes and afflictions; yea, that hee ſhould cut and launch, binde and ſeare vs, that by this preſent paine, wee may bee freed from euerlaſting torment. Finally, though our ſinnes and corruptions, like filthy Sodomites, do vexe our righteous ſoule and regenerate part dwelling with them, through their impiety; yet ſo are wee made drunken with their ſweete delights, and allured with the bewitching pleaſures which doe accompany them, that wee are loath, euen when God commandeth vs, to leaue their ſociety, if wee were not pulled from them with a diuine violence, and (as it were) forced to flee from them, by this fire of afflictions.

Chryſoſt. in Ioh. Hom.

§. Sect. 6. That God by afflictions mortifieth our pride, carnall concupiſcence, and ſelfe-loue.

But as our croſſes and calamities ſerue notably for the mortifying of all ſinnes, ſo more eſpecially theſe ſinnes of pride, carnall concupiſcence, ſelfe-loue, and loue of the World; for whereas in the time of our proſperity, we are apt not onely to magnifie our ſelues, and to haue a great opinion of our worth and excellencie, but haue alſo the applauſe of others to puffe vs vp, which maketh pride to goe with full ſayles, hauing got ſo faire a gale of vulgar breath and the wind of vaine glory to blow it forward: when wee are in aduerſity and affliction, wee are as much humbled and caſt downe in our owne conceit, as in the opinion of others, who now as much neglect and contemne vs, as they did before extoll and magnifie vs, and when theſe tempeſts of troubles blow, wee ſtrike all the ſayles of pride, comming then to a true ſight and vnpartiall valuation of our ſelues, when as being ſtripped of worldly ornaments we appeare in our ſelfe-nakednes. And thus Elihu ſaith, that God openeth the eares of men by their corrections, that hee might cauſe them to turne from their enterpriſe, and hide the pride of man. So alſo our carnall concupiſcence and luſts of the fleſh, are exceedingly mortified with troubles and afflictions; for whereas eaſe and proſperity is the fuell of this fire, affliction and miſery is the water wherewith it is extinguiſhed and quenched; whereas that is the dainty foode and plentifull nouriſhment, wherewith the fleſh with the luſts thereof are fed, and the old man made ſtrong and vigorous, this bread of affliction and water of tribulation, doth pine and weaken it, ſo as it is eaſily maſtered and ſubdued by the ſpirituall part: wheras that affordeth plentiful matter of tentations, and miniſtreth in this ſpiritual warfare weapons and munition vnto this enemy of our ſaluation; this diſarmeth him of all his ſtrength, pulleth out of his hand his preuailing weapons, and ſo maketh him eaſie to bee ouercome. And therefore, if when our houſes bee a fire, wee are much much comforted, if ſtore of water be brought whereby it may be quenched; how much more ſhould we bee filled with comfort and conſolation, when our ſoules inflamed with the fire of concupiſcence, haue this fire extinguiſhed with the water of afflictions? And if, when a pernitious and bloody enemy maketh warre aginſt vs, we exceedingly reioyce, if wee can by any meanes weaken him, famiſhing him for want of victuals, and intercepting his prouiſion of armour, weapons and munition: then ſurely we haue no cauſe of exceſſiue ſorrow in our afflictions, but rather in this regard may juſtly tryumph with joy; ſeeing by this meanes thoſe mortall enemies, the luſts of our fleſh, which continually fight againſt our ſoules, are weakned of their chiefe ſtrength, famiſhed for want of foode, and ſpoiled and diſarmed of their moſt preuailing weapons. The like alſo may bee ſaid of ſelfe-loue, the heate whereof is exceedingly cooled and abated with troubles and afflictions; for howſoeuer, when we are adorned with worldly ornaments, and curiouſly painted with the falſe colours of proſperity, like vaine women we admire our counterfait beauty, and like the young fondling, wee dote vpon the deceiuing ſhadow of a lying complexion, as though it were naturall and affixed vnto vs by God, and not accidentall and aduentitious, acquired and gotten by our deceiuing art and induſtry: yet when by outward calamities we are diſ-robed of all our glittering brauery, and haue our falſe colours waſhed away with the waters of affliction; when we are weather-beaten with the tempeſts of tribulation, and appeare no better than we are, in our owne fauour and complexion, then as the loue of others is weaned from vs, who affected vs onely for our counterfait beauty and outward brauery, ſo doe wee begin to loath our ſelues, when looking in the glaſſe of the law, wee ſee that all outward helpes haue failed and forſaken vs, and that wee are left in our owne fowleneſſe and deformity. An example whereof wee haue in Iob, who though hee were but too much in loue with his owne worth and excellency in his proſperity, as may appeare by his diſcourſes in the time of his afflictions, wherin hee complaineth that his ſmart exceeded his ſin, and juſtifieth himſelfe with ſome impeachment to Gods infinite righteouſneſſe; yet when at length hee was throughly humbled, his ſelfe-loue is turned into loathing; and abhorring himſelfe, he repenteth in duſt and aſhes.

Iob 33.17.

ob.42.6.

§. Sect.7. ...at we would ...oderately ...e the world ...e were not ...eaned from ...y afflicti- ...ons.

But aboue all other ſinnes theſe afflictions are moſt powerfull and profitable, for the mortifying of the loue of the world and worldly vanities, vnto which naturally we are ſo much addicted. For howſoeuer theſe earthly things are moſt vaine and momentany, and the loue of them not onely fooliſh and fruitleſſe, but alſo dangerous and pernitious; yet is there ſuch an inſeparable league and liking betweene them and our corrupt fleſh, that the child doth not with greater fondnes cling to the mothers breaſt, than our affections doe naturally adhere vnto theſe tranſitory trifles. Yea ſo are we fixed and faſtned, and (as it were) glued, nailed and riuetted vnto them, that whileſt we ſecurely enjoy our carnall loue, and haue the full fruition of our worldly deſires, wee might as eaſily be perſwaded, to pull the skin from our fleſh, or the fleſh from our bones, as to weane our affections from this bewitchiug ſtrumpet. Now this worldly loue is ſuch a dangerous ſickneſſe, that if wee were not cured of it, it would bring vs at laſt to a deſperate conſumption in all grace and goodneſſe, and to euerlaſting death both of body and ſoule; for faith in God, and confidence in earthly things, will not ſtand together, wee cannot ſerue God and Mammon, wee cannot loue the Lord and loue the world: for, (as the Apoſtle ſaith) the amity of the world, is the enmity of God, and whoſoeuer maketh himſelfe a friend to the one, hee thereby maketh himſelfe an enemy to the other. For though our heart bee a veſſell which is capable of the liquor of loue, yet that which is heauenly and ſpirituall will not be mixed in it with that which is worldly and carnall; and the more full it is of the one, the more deſtitute and empty it is of the other. And therefore if we would be repleniſhed with the diuine loue of God, wee muſt powre and caſt out our vnprofitable loue of earthly things. To which purpoſe one ſaith; Thou art a veſſell, but ſuch an one as is already full; empty out that which thou containeſt, that thou mayeſt receiue that which thou deſireſt, caſt out the loue of the world, that thou mayeſt be filled with the loue of God. Againe, it is the nature of loue to make louers like, and to transforme the party louing, as much as may be, into the party beloued; and therefore whoſoeuer loueth the World, and in his heart and appetite adhereth vnto it, he becommeth carnall and worldly, if by ſome croſſes and afflictions hee bee not weaned from it. And as the milke or meate, if it be not moued and ſtirred, adhereth and ſticketh to the veſſell in which it is boyled, and looſing its owne ſweetneſſe and ſauour, receiueth from it a loathſome ſent; ſo if wee be not often toſſed and troubled with croſſes and afflictions, wee will eaſily in our affections ſticke faſt vnto the world, and looſing the ſweet reliſh of vertue and piety, wee will ſauour of this ſtinking veſſell, and ſo become noiſome in the noſtrils of God. Yea, if wee alwayes enioyed the world at will, and had continually our fill of earthly delights, then would wee neuer care for the joyes of Heauen, nor vſe any meanes to come vnto them; if our earthly houſe were ſafe and pleaſant, and neither tottering and ruinous, nor haunted with theſe Spirits and bugbeares of miſery and affliction, wee would neuer bee willing to flit and change our habitation, but after one leaſe of life were expired, we would deſire aboue all things to haue another renued, and neuer care to come into thoſe heauenly manſions which our Sauiour Chriſt hath prepared for vs. If this our pilgrimage in the world were full of pleaſures and delights, and had in it no croſſes or dangers; if wee had alwayes faire way and eaſie iourneies, ſtill paſſed through ſweete fields & flowrie meddowes, if we had merry company and faithfull friends in all our trauailes, and had not onely dainty fare, ſoft lodging, and kinde entertainment at our Innes, but alſo had wealth at will to defray all charges; then ſurely would wee make a paradiſe of our pilgrimage, and neuer thinke of going forwards towards our heauenly country. As wee may ſee by plentifull experience in the world, where it is hard to finde any which are noble, rich, and abounding in earthly pleaſures, who would not bee content to ſet vp here their reſt, if ſo they might; and neuer deſire heauenly happineſſe and eternall glory. Yea contrariwiſe, they abhorre death which ſeparateth them from their earthly delight, as the greateſt euill, and therefore are neuer ſo grieuouſly ſicke, but that they would ſtill bee content to endure their paine, that they may ſtill enjoy the world, and are patient of all thiugs but of parting with their loue.

4.4.

...tas, ſed vas ...num; eua- ...quod te- ...ut recipi- ...id quod ...es, eua ...mores ...d, vt re- ...re amore ...ris ...is ſalis.

Sicut cibus adhæret vaſi in quo coquitur niſi moueatur, & perdit ſaporem debitum, debitumque colorem: ſic cor hominis adhæret iſti mundo niſi moueatur per afflictiones. Idiota in orthodox. de patien. veræ contempl. cap.3.

§. Sect.8. That the Lord in great mercy ſendeth afflictions to weane vs from the loue of the World.

And therefore the Lord in infinite mercy and goodneſſe towards vs, doth cauſe vs to meete with many croſſes and calamities, that they may weane vs from this fond loue, and make vs more ardently affect the joyes of his kingdome. Hee cauſeth vs in our pilgrimage to paſſe through the thorns and briars of troubles and afflictions, to bee aſſaulted with enemies, and endangered by theeues, to find in our trauels fowle weather and filthy wayes, to be pinched with wants, and tyred with labours, to haue rude entertainment, hard lodging, and courſe fare in theſe our Innes; and in a word, hee afflicteth vs with ſickneſſe and pouerty, with toyle and trauell, hunger and thirſt, cares, feares and troubles of minde, oppreſſions of ſuperiours, and iniuries of our equals, that ſo we may loath the world where wee haue ſuch hard meaſure offered vs, and long to arriue ſafely in our heauenly country, where we ſhall be freed from all theſe miſeries, and enjoy perfect happineſſe. For, though with Iacob we were ſpent with cares, and worne with labours, yet wee could be content to dwell ſtill with this worldly Laban for the baſe hire of earthly vanities; and though he often deceiue vs of our wages, and promiſe that which hee neuer mindeth to pay, yet ſo long as hee ſpeaketh vs faire and fawneth vpon vs, wee neuer thinke of leauing his companie; and therefore the Lord cauſeth this Churle to change his countenance, to turne his ſmiles into frownes, his flattery into ſurly menaces, and vnjuſt oppreſſion, that ſo we may bee moued to loath his baſe ſeruitude, and haue a deſire wrought in vs of returning into our countrie. We are farre in loue with this earthly Egypt, and take ſuch pleaſure in the garlike and onions of worldly profits, and ſo glut our ſelues with the fleſh-pots of carnall delights, that if with ſome peace and eaſe wee might ſtill enjoy them, and haue Ioſephs honour and eſteeme joyned with our plenty, wee would neuer deſire to come out of this ſeruitude, nor make any haſt towards our heauenly Canaan. And therefore the Lord ſuffereth the ſpirituall Pharaoh and theſe worldly Egyptians to rage againſt vs, to ſpoile vs of our goods, rob vs of our children, and to oppreſſe and weare vs out with vnrewarded labours, that we may groane and cry vnto the Lord for deliuerance, earneſtly deſire that glorious liberty of the ſonnes of God, and trauell more cheerefully towards the holy Land. We adhere to the world with our hearts and affections, like the wheate in the eare, to the chaffe and ſtraw, and if wee were let alone, would neuer part with it, till we were both conſumed in the furnace of Gods wrath; and therefore the Lord in loue and mercy towards vs thraſheth vs with afflictions, that hee may ſeparate vs from it, and preſerue it from periſhing. And as the nurſing mother, being with childe, deſireth to weane her ſucking infant from her hurtfull and vnholſome milke; and for the effecting of it, thinketh it in vaine, in reſpect of the childs fondneſſe and ſmall vnderſtanding, to vſe onely reaſons to diſſwade it from the breaſt, or to tell it, that her milke is vnholſome and will breed diſeaſes, but rather layeth muſtard or worme-wood vpon the teate, the bitterneſſe whereof hee no ſooner taſteth, but hee beginneth to loath his former loue, and though he wanteth the vſe of reaſon, yet is taught by ſenſe to leaue that which is ſo diſtaſtfull: ſo the Lord intending to weane vs fondlings from worldly delights, and ſeeing it is not enough (in regard of our childiſh dotage, fond affection and ſmall wit) to tell vs by his word what manifold miſchiefes accompany our fooliſh loue; hee doth therefore embitter theſe pappes of pleaſure with the wormewood of afflictions, and ſo intermixeth with miſeries our carnall delights, that though reaſon will not rule vs, yet at leaſt by our ſenſe and taſt, wee may be moued to loath theſe earthly vanities. To which purpoſe one ſaith, that our afflictions in the world befal vs through the diſpenſation of Gods moſt wiſe and gracious prouidence, that whileſt God by his word and truth, out of meere loue, calleth vs out of the world; the world alſo at the ſame time ſhould by the tribulations which it inflicteth, alienate our hearts, and euen thruſt vs from it: for the mind doth ſo much the more eaſily eſcape and come out of the labyrinth of worldly loue, by how much the more forcibly it is thruſt forward when God calleth it. For, then doe wee moſt earneſtly deſire to leaue the world, & to goe into our heauenly country, when with Elias we are perſecuted by it and flee for our liues. Then do we with Paul deſire to be diſſolued & to be with Chriſt, when the world eſteems vs the off-ſcouring of all things & inflicteth on vs moſt grieuous afflictions; then doe we long after the glorious crowne of victory, vvhen vve are toyled and tyred, foyled and wounded in the ſpirituall war-fare; then doe wee heartily wiſh to arriue in the hauen of eternall reſt, when as we are indangered with boyſterous tempeſts, and toſſed and turmoiled with the waues of miſery: then doe wee deſire the end of our iourney when we are tired with weary trauaile, paſſe many dangers, and finde hard entertainment in this ſtrange country. And in a word, then doe wee onely with ardency of affection, ſeeke after the fruition of God and the ioyes of his kingdome, when being in ſickneſſe and pouerty, contempt and diſgrace, forſaken by friends and oppreſſed by enemies, wee cannot enjoy any worldly comforts.

Gregor. epiſt, ex regiſt. indict. 4. cap. 70.

1 King. 19.4.
Phil. 1. 23.

§. Sect. 9.
That we dote on the world though it bee miſerable, and therefore much more fondly would we affect it, if wee

And ſurely happy is our eſtate, if at leaſt, afflictions can moue vs to loath the World, and to long after true happineſſe, vſing all good meanes to attaine vnto it; for though in themſelues they bee a moſt powerfull meanes to weane vs from the loue of earthly vanities; yet ſo doe our hearts naturally cleaue

...d in it no-
...g but pro-
...y.

cleaue to the World, and ſo are they not only glewed, but euen pinned and nailed vnto it, that the Water of afflictions cannot diſſolue and ſeuer them, but like the Iſraelites, after we haue long been oppreſſed in this grieuous ſeruitude with innumerable miſeries, and through Gods mercy being deliuered out of it, haue ſet our faces toward the heauenly Canaan, with a purpoſe to trauell towards the place of our reſt, wee are ready to forget all our oppreſſions and calamities, our toyleſome labours and tormenting ſtripes inflicted vpon vs by the vnjuſt world our former maſter, and onely remembring the fleſh-pots of carnall pleaſures, and the tranſitorie benefits which wee enjoyed in the land of our captiuity, we are weary of our journey, and thinke of returning into our former bondage, that ſo wee may re-gaine our ſinfull delights. The which wee would accordingly put in practice, if the Lord ſhould leaue vs vnto our ſelues, and ſhould not onely draw vs forward by his Word and holy Spirit, and allure vs to goe on by his gracious promiſes, and by ſetting before vs, as in a mappe, the pleaſantneſſe and excellency of our heauenly country: but alſo cauſe the World to renew daily our troubles and afflictions, to purſue and perſecute vs with freſh rage and malice, and (as it were) to follow vs at the heeles, and whippe vs forward with new calamities. By all which it may appeare that the Lord in great mercy and loue doth ſend vpon vs theſe croſſes & calamities, that he may hereby weane vs from the loue of the world, which is ſo dangerous and pernitious, vpon which wee would vnmeaſurably dote to our deſtruction, if our affections were not ſomewhat cooled; yea, euen pulled from it by theſe violent meanes. For if the world being bitter to our taſt, is not for all this loathſome and diſtaſtfull to our carnall appetite, how vnmeaſurably would wee affect it, if it were ſvveet and toothſome? If theſe earthly habitations being tottering, ruinous, and ready euery day to ouerwhelme vs with their fall, wee neuertheleſſe deſire to dwell in them, how loath would wee bee to leaue them if they were ſtrong and ſtately, durable and permanent? If vve delight ſtill to ſayle in this ſea of worldly miſeries, being obnoxious to ſtormes and tempeſts, vvrackes and piracies, and neuer care to come into the hauen of happineſſe; what would wee doe, if we had at pleaſure quiet calmes, and proſperous windes; a faire paſſage and ſafe from all dangers? If we take contentment in our pilgrimage, and make no haſt vnto our heauenly country, when as our way is ſo fovvle and full of thornes, our iourney ſo painefull and dangerous, and our intertainment among theſe worldly Cannibals ſo bad and barbarous; what a paradiſe would wee eſteeme it, and what little account would wee make of our euerlaſting manſions, if wee had a pleaſant paſſage, an eaſie iourney, and kinde vſage in this ſtrange country? If wee bee fond on this worldly harlot being ſo vgly and deformed, how would wee dote on it, if it were faire and beautifull? This falſe World deceiueth vs, and yet vve truſt it, how then vvould wee reſt and rely vpon it, if it were faithfull & neuer failed vs? It frowneth vpon vs and yet wee affect it, how fond therefore would we be on it, if it ſmiled and fawned? It croſſeth and afflicteth vs, and yet we hugge and imbrace it, O then! how would our hearts cling and cleaue vnto it, if it made vs his darlings, and did cocker vs with fauors? The Lord hath filled it with miſeries, and yet vve are loath to exchange them for ioy and bleſſedneſſe: what cart-ropes then or cables could pull vs from it, if it were full of comforts without croſſes, and had no gall mingled with its ſweetneſſe? It is full of troubles, wars, and contentions, ſecret traitors, open enemies, and falſe friends, and yet we grieue when we thinke of leauing it: hovv vvould wee therefore ſurfeit of ſorrow, if injoying quiet peace, ſvveet concord, and faithfull friendſhip, we ſhould bee forced to forgoe it? vvee are ſtill, vvhileſt vve continue in it, tormented with cares and feares, ſubject to innumerable dangers, and haue ſtill in ſight terrible tragedies, expecting daily when we ſhall be called out to act our part, and yet we cannot with patience thinke of our departure; O! what a death then would departing be, if we were quiet and ſecure, hauing all that we could deſire, and not fearing to be robbed of any of our delights? wee are, whileſt wee remaine in this vale of teares, ſubject to ſickneſſe and pouerty, contempt and diſgrace, and yet wee doe not ſigh and groane after our full redemption, when as we ſhall bee freed from all theſe miſeries: how farre therefore would wee be from the leaſt deſire of exchanging our eſtate, if wee were healthy and wealthy, highly honoured, and in all vvee doe applauded with mens prayſes? In a vvord, the world perſecuteth and killeth vs and yet wee loue it as our liues, vvhat an idoll then vvould wee make of it, and hovv farre would wee preferre it before the ſaluation of our ſoules if it did like and loue vs, cheriſh and defend vs? Moſt gratiouſly therefore doth our good God deale with vs when ſeeing vs beſotted with this pernicious loue, he cauſeth the World to deale roughly with vs, that ſo by ſmart and ſenſe of paine, our minds may bee ſomewhat alienated and weaned from it. And thrice happy are wee in our greateſt afflictions, if Gods Spirit working with them, they become meanes to make vs contemne the World, as being in it ſelfe vile and of no worth, and vnto vs a dangerous

...warest
...is & ta-
...mutur;
...an est &
...inhabi-
...Quid au-
...i mundus
...ultis &
...a?
...immun-
...n despi-
...s a-
...cui non
...ert, si
...dulcis?
...lib. de
...ulo.

Quamuis inæſtimabilis ſit cœleſtis patriæ dulcedo quæ trahat, multi tamen in hac vita dolores ſũt qui ad amorem cœleſtium quotidiè impellunt; qui mihi in hoc ipſo ſolum vehementer placent, quia placere in hoc mundo aliquid non permittunt. Gregr. epiſt. ex Regiſter. lib 4 Indict. 13. cap.

dangerous and mortall enemie; or at leaſt doe ſo moderate and qualifie the heate of our loue, that it doe not exceede the loue of God and joyes of his kingdome, nor hinder vs from vſing any good meanes vvhereby wee may attaine vnto the fruition of them.

§. Sect. 10. That the loue of the world if it were not mortified in vs would betray vs to the temptations of the diuell.

And thus doe afflictions not onely mortifie our carnall luſts, but alſo our worldly loue, preſeruing vs from luſting and longing immoderately after theſe earthly vanities, and conſequently from many ſnares of the Deuill with which we ſhould eaſily bee intangled, if wee were in loue with theſe alluring baits. For if wee were left to our owne liberty, wee would lie open to innumerable dangers, and like ſilly birds hungring after our worldly prey, wee would bee ready to ſtoope to euery baite which Sathan, like a cunning fowler, layeth before vs, and ſo bee catched in his nets of perdition. From which dangers the Lord preſerueth vs whileſt hee vſeth afflictions as a cage to keepe vs from our hurtfull liberty, and to reſtraine vs from the ſeeing, deſiring, or preying vpon theſe baites of deſtruction. To which purpoſe one ſaith, that God in his infinite wiſedome doth threaten, correct and keepe vnder with painefull labours his moſt faithfull and beſt deſeruing ſeruants, becauſe he ſeeth that if they injoyed eaſe and liberty, they would lye open to the wounds of their ſpirituall enemies. And therefore hee exerciſeth them outwardly with ſtripes and labours, that they may not bee pearced inwardly with the fierie darts of the Deuils tentations. Whileſt wee injoy the proſperity of the World, wee are eaſily lulled ſleepe in carnall ſecurity; and then as wee may be eaſily wounded with Sathans tentations, when we doe not ſtand vpon our owne defence; ſo are wee eaſily robbed by this ſubtill theefe of the riches of Gods graces; for then they are pulled from vs at vnawares with the leaſt ſtrength of tentations, yea (as it fareth with them who ſleepe ſoundly and ſecurely) forgetting what iewels wee hold in our hands, we let them fall of our ſelues, though no outward violence ſhould plucke them from vs: But when we are kept waking with troubles and afflictions, then wee watch ouer theſe ſpirituall treaſures, and neither ſuffer Sathan to ſpoile vs of them by his theeuiſh ſleights, nor to pull them away by force and violence, but the harder the Diuel draweth, the faſter wee hold; the more earneſtly hee indeuoureth to diſraobe and ſtrip vs of theſe rich ornaments of ſpirituall gifts, the more carefully wee wrap them about vs, and the more feruently we implore the Lords aide, when wee finde our ſelues vnable to withſtand his might.

Greg. moral. lib. 33 cap. 17.

§. Sect. 11. That we are much to reioyce in afflictions, ſe God vſeth them as me to mortifie our ſinnes.

By all which it appeareth, that the afflictions of the faithfull are vſed by God as a notable meanes, to ſtrengthen and defend vs from the ſpirituall enemies of our ſaluation, and to heale thoſe grieuous wounds of ſinne which wee get in this ſpirituall conflict. The conſideration whereof ſhould make vs beare all our croſſes and calamities with patience and comfort, yea with ioy and thankſgiuing, ſeeing by ſuffering theſe ſmaller euils of preſent ſmart, we are freed from thoſe greater euils of ſin and corruption, which if they ſtill continued and liued in vs, would make vs obnoxious, not onely to Gods temporary plagues and puniſhments, but to euerlaſting condemnation of body and ſoule. For are wee vexed with ſickneſſe, and pained with outward griefs? let vs beare them with patience, ſeeing God by the ſickneſſe of the body, doth cure the ſoule of more deſperate diſeaſes: and much better it is to burne with the heate of a feauer, than with the heate of ſinfull concupiſcence, which will inflame againſt vs Gods fearefull wrath, and euerlaſtingly burne vs in the fire of Hell. Are we in painefull ſeruitude and ſubjection, and miſuſed and oppreſſed by thoſe who rule ouer vs? let vs beare all with comfort, ſeeing God hereby doth free vs from the ſeruitude of ſinne; and much better it is to bee ſeruants vnto men, than to bee ſlaues to our owne vices; for that is temporary and will ſoone haue an end; but the ſlauery of ſinne, maketh vs to become alſo Sathans bond-men, out of whoſe thraldome if we eſcape not in this life, by true repentance, we ſhall by this tyrant be for euer embondaged in the priſon of Hell. Are wee ſpoiled and diſpoſſeſſed of our worldly riches, and are wee pinched with pouerty, and want earthly neceſſaries? let vs be well contented with Gods good pleaſure, ſeeing by theſe worldly wants he preſerueth vs from ſpirituall penury, and taketh away from vs theſe momentany trifles, that Satan may not rob vs of our heauenly treaſures. When vve haue in our bodies wounds or deepe feſtered ſores, wee voluntarily ſend for the Chirurgeon, and yeeld our ſelues into his hands to be vſed at his diſcretion, for the effecting of the cure; we are content that hee ſhould not only apply healing playſters, but tormenting corraſiues. And that hee ſhould ſearch our ſores to the bottome, launch and ſeare, yea cut off a member for the preſeruation of the whole body: And fearing leſt we ſhould not haue courage & ſtrength enough to endure theſe tortures, wee are willing to be bound, that we may not by our ſtrugling & ſtriuing hinder him in his courſes: So when wee are diſeaſed wee craue the helpe of the learned Phyſician, and are content for the curing of our ſickneſſe, to follow his direction, to ſwallow bitter pils and loathſome potions, to vſe ſtrict diet or totall abſtinence, and to eate, drinke, ſleepe and labour, not ac-according to our appetite and naturall diſpoſition, but according to his direction and preſcription; yea, all this wee not only patiently endure, but are ready to gratifie their paines with thankfulneſſe and reward. And therefore if in vncertaine hope to recouer the health of our body, which can laſt but for a moment, and is ready preſently after the cure to languiſh againe, falling into a relapſe of the olde griefe, or into other diſeaſes more dangerous than they, wee are content to endure all theſe miſeries at the appointment of mortall men, who often are vnfaithfull, ſeeking more their owne gaine than our health, and often vnskilfull; neither truely knowing the nature of our diſeaſe, nor the meanes how to cure it: How much more ſhould wee with all alacrity and cheerefulneſſe, endure any croſſes and afflictions, when they are vſed as medicines and ſalues by our heauenly Phyſician and Chirurgeon, for the curing and healing our ſoules of the dangerous diſeaſes and ſores of ſin, which would bring vs in the end vnto euerlaſting death; ſeeing we are certainly aſſured that hee will by this meanes recouer vs vnto perfect and neuer-decaying health; as being moſt faithfull and carefull ouer vs, and in his wiſdome and skill infinite and all-ſufficient for the effecting of the cure. Let vs not therefore looke ſo much to our preſent ſmart as to our future health; not to the paine wee feele, but to the eaſe and comfort which wee aſſuredly hope for, and conſidering that the Lord woundeth to the end hee may heale vs, and killeth our bodies with a temporary death, to preſerue body and ſoule from death euerlaſting: Let vs joyfully ſubmit our ſelues vnto his will, crying out with one: O Lord, here launce and ſeare me, ſo that thou wilt be pleaſed hereafter to heale mee. Our Phyſician doth make theſe outward bliſters in our bodies, to draw out the poyſonous corruption that is in our ſoules, and doth trouble vs a little (as it were) with ſome ſmall itch or bleach in the skin, that hee may free vs from the inward putrefaction of ſin, and allay the heat of our inflamed concupiſcence: And therefore let vs endure that which he impoſeth with patience, and neuer murmur againſt him for effecting his cure; knowing that it is but childiſh folly to abhorre the medicine more than the diſeaſe, and that we count them mad men which rage againſt the Phyſician, who intendeth their recouery. Let vs rather rejoyce that the Lord is contented to miniſter vnto vs, becauſe, ſeeing he vndertakes to cure vs by theſe medicines, it is a ſigne that wee are not paſt recouery; for when in our diſeaſes our eſtate is deſperate, he leaueth vs to our owne appetite, to haue what our hearts can deſire, and to take our fill of the pleaſures of ſinne: whereas hee giueth bitter potions, and preſcribeth a ſtrict diet, launceth and ſearcheth, cauterizeth and cutteth thoſe who are curable and likely to recouer. And better it is (as one ſaith) to ſuſtaine vnder the hands of our Phyſician a tranſitory torment, than forſaking him and refuſing the meanes of our recouery, to incurre ſuch a puniſhment as will euerlaſtingly vex vs with helliſh tortures. For theſe medicines of afflictions put thoſe to paine whom our Phyſician in loue intendeth to cure, who by grieuing vs freeth vs from our griefes, &c. and by hurting cureth vs, that our health may be endeared by our former heauineſſe.

…fratres
… in iſtis lan…
… corpo-
…, quanta bo-
… tolerent,
… dies
… morian-
…, & hos pau-
… dies inter-
…, &c. Aug.
… Vol. 10.
…erat.

… Domine
… vt ſa-
…, & ac-
… ne mo-
… abſte.

… hic
…, vt

Hieron. in Epiſt. ad ægrotum amicum. Tom. 4.

§ Sect. 12.

That our grieuous afflictions argue our grieuous ſins.

But thou wilt ſay that thy affliction is ſo grieuous and intolerable, that there can bee no place for patience in the bearing of it. To which I anſwere, that if thy affliction bee grieuous, ſo likewiſe is thy ſin; for the Lord our heauenly Phyſician & Chirurgeon, fitteth his medicines and meanes of curing, according to the nature and quality of our diſeaſes and ſores. And as earthly Phyſicians vary their remedies, according to the ſtate of their patients and nature of their ſickneſſes, giuing vnto one gentle potions, and to another ſtrong purgations; and as Surgeons out of their skill and diſcretion apply vnto ſmall cuts healing playſters, but when they meete with an impoſtume or deepe feſtered wound, they cauterize and launch, ſeare and burne: ſo the Lord for the curing of leſſer corruptions inflicteth leſſer croſſes, and for thoſe ſins which are hainous and enormous, more grieuous miſeries and more heauy calamities. An example whereof wee haue in the people of Iuda, who for their outragious ſinnes had heauy puniſhments inflicted on them. I haue ſtricken thee (ſaith the Lord) with the wound of an enemy, and with a ſharpe chaſtiſement for the multitude of thine iniquities, becauſe thy ſinnes were increaſed: Why cryeſt thou for thine affliction? thy ſorrow is incurable, for the multitude of thine iniquities, becauſe thy ſins were increaſed, I haue done theſe things vnto thee. Looke not therefore ſo much to the greatneſſe of thy ſmart, as to the hainouſnes of thy ſin; not to the bitterneſſe of the medicine, or the torture of the corraſiue, but to the deſperateneſſe of thy diſeaſe, and to the deepneſſe of thy feſtered wounds; for (as one ſaith) the griefe of affliction is much qualified, when as wee ſee and acknowledge the greatneſſe of our ſin; euen as euery one doth more patiently endure the Launcher of the Surgeon, the more rotten and feſtered he ſeeth the ſore to be, which is cut & ſearched; and the heauier wee feele the burthen of ſin, the more light wee ſhall find the burthen of affliction. Yea, (wilt thou ſay) but my ſins are not ſo great, nor my ſores ſo incurable, that I ſhould need ſuch ſharpe remedies and grieuous afflictions to be freed from them. I anſwere, that thy Iudge is able to diſcerne of

Ier. 30. 14, 15.

Dolor flagelli temperatur, cum culpa cognoſcitur, quia tantò quiſq; ferramentum medici patientius tolerat, quantò magis putridum conſpicit eſſe quod ſecat, &c. quia per hoc quod culpæ pondus agnoſcitur, afflictionis pœna leuigatur Gregor. Moral. lib. 10. cap. 5.

of the greatneſſe of thy faults, and thy Phyſician of the diſeaſe, better than thy ſelfe who being a party and Patient, art blinded with ſelfe-loue and partiall in thy judgement. Either then thy ſinnes are in their owne nature hainous, or [illegible] aggrauated by circumſtances, being committed againſt knowledge and conſcience, or exemplary to the ſcandall of others; they are great in themſelues, or through the hardneſſe of thy heart, hard to be cured, or being ſmall alone, they are not ſmall to thee; ſeeing thou wilt by no meanes part with them, but reſolueſt ſtill to continue in them. For, as a man holdeth faſt in his hand a ſmall ſtaffe, when as a great poſt is eaſily pulled from him: So do we oftentimes retaine our leſſer ſins with greater pertinacy, than our more hainous offences, and ſo make them grieuous by our perſiſting in them, which were more light in their owne nature. Neither is there any thing that doth more aggrauate our ſins in the ſight of God, than when they are joyned with impenitency, and anſwerably nothing doth more incenſe him vnto wrath, or draw downe vpon vs more heauy judgements; according to that ſentence, ſo often in the ſame Chapter repeated: If yee walke ſtubbornly againſt me, and will not obey me, I will then bring ſeuen times more plagues vpon you, according to your ſinnes. Yea, (will ſome ſay) but mine afflictions are not only grieuous, but alſo in their continuance long and tedious. I anſwer, that as thou makeſt them heauy through thine impatiency, ſo thou makeſt them long by continuing in thy ſin; for, our afflictions are light, or they are not long, either they may be borne with ſome eaſe, or elſe they are ſoon taken from vs. Howſoeuer it is, aſſure thy ſelfe that whether they are light or heauy, they continue vpon thee, not for want of mercy in God to eaſe thee, but for want of grace in thee which might make thee fit to find eaſe. For, if thy ſores of ſin were healed, there would be no need further to apply theſe ſalues of afflictions; If thy wounds were open and the core of corruption drawne out, thine heauenly Surgeon would not lay vpon them ſtill theſe corraſiues of calamities. If thou were throughly cleanſed from theſe corrupt humours of ſinne which ouerthrow thy ſpirituall health, thy Phyſician would not vexe thee with any more ſtrong and loathſome medicines. But though theſe ſalues haue beene often applyed, yet thy ſores are ſtill feſtered in the bottome; though thou haſt already drunke many potions of trouble and afflictions, yet the melancholicke humours of ſinne, are ſo tough, and ſticke ſo faſt in the inward parts, that they are not yet purged away. And therefore though thou calleſt and cryeſt to haue the corraſiues remoued, and to haue no more of theſe loathſome purges of tribulation and miſery miniſtred vnto thee: yet thy heauenly Surgeon and Phyſician hauing vndertaken to cure thee, and not to pleaſe thee; continueth ſtill the vſe of theſe meanes till thy ſickneſſes and ſores of ſin be ſufficiently healed, and therefore though thou cryeſt and calleſt for eaſe, yet hee heareth thee not, according to thy will, but ſo as it will agree with the recouery of thy health.

Leuit.26.21.

Sub medicamentis poſitus vreris, ſecaris, clamas, non audit medicus ad voluntatem ſed ad ſanitatem. Aug. In Pſal. 21. enarrat.

Whatſoeuer then our afflictions be, and how long ſoeuer they continue vpon vs, let vs labour to beare them with patience and comfort, ſeeing we are naturally ſicke in ſin, and he that made vs, beſt knoweth how to cure vs. Hee vnderſtandeth our ſecret infirmities and inward diſeaſes, and well knoweth how to apply fit meanes for our recouery, and when it is beſt for vs to haue them taken away. We truſt earthly Phyſicians, though they commit many errours: for (as one ſaith) they that goe about to cure vs, did not make vs: How much more then ſhould wee commit our ſelues into the hands of God who hath made our ſoules and bodies; and therefore well knoweth how to re-create that which he hath created, and to re-forme that which he hath formed? We ſuffer vnder the hands of men certaine torment for vncertaine health, and many, whileſt they are drawne on with falſe hopes, die vnder the hands of their Surgeons and Phyſicians; or if they recouer, their liues are but reprieued for a few dayes longer: what therefore ſhould we be content to ſuffer at the appointment of our heauenly Phyſician, for the euerlaſting health and ſaluation of body and ſoule. Seeing he is ſo infinitely wiſe, that he can neuer be deceiued, and ſo al-ſufficiently skilfull, that he neuer miſtaketh our diſeaſes, or his medicines, nor euer faileth in effecting his cure? Though wee much eſteeme our Gold yet we willingly commit it to the Finer, that he may caſt it into his Furnace and purifie it from its droſſe; and yet his skill may faile either in not throughly purifying the mettall, that it may abide the touch, or elſe in refining it more than enough, & ſo waſting it in ſtead of purifying it: much more then let vs commit theſe treaſures of our ſoules and bodies into the hands of this heauenly workman; for though hee caſt vs into his Furnace of afflictions, it is not to hurt vs, but to purifie vs from the droſſe of our corruptions. And hee that is not purged in this fire, but burnt and conſumed with the heat of impatiency, hee is to be eſteemed Chaffe and not Gold, and hath juſt cauſe to feare, leaſt after hee is conſumed in this temporary blaze of tribulation, hee ſhall with the Chaffe, that the Baptiſt ſpeaketh of, be caſt into that vnquenchable fire of Hell. The Lord now judgeth vs for our ſinnes in this life, and his judgements are heauy and diſtaſtfull to fleſh and bloud; but let vs not be diſcouraged, for the §. Sect.

That if we dure much with patien to be eaſed temporall much more ſhould wee beare to bee freed from thoſe which are euerlaſt Aug, in Pſal.
101. Enarr

Vbi me pon artifex toler iubet ego to rare, non it purgare, Aug
in Pſal.61.
Enarrat.

Math.3.12.

or.11.32.

the end of them is, that being chaſtiſed for our ſins of the Lord, we may vnfainedly repent of them, and ſo may receiue pardon and forgiueneſſe, and not come into condemnation with the world. In regard whereof wee haue juſt cauſe to account it the heauieſt judgement, not to bee at all thus judged of the Lord; for our heauenly Phyſician miniſtreth this Phyſicke of afflictions to all his patients ſicke in ſinne, ſauing to thoſe whoſe diſeaſes are deſperate. Our gracious Father chaſteneth euery ſonne whom he receiueth, and leaueth none to proſper in their wickedneſſe, but thoſe baſtards whom he purpoſeth to diſinherit of that heauenly patrimony, reſerued in ſtore for his owne children. Our Lord and Maſter correcteth in the Family the faults and hainous crimes which are committed by his Seruants, or elſe his purpoſe is to turne them away, and to reſerue their ſins to be puniſhed at his great Aſſiſes. And therfore God threatneth it as an heauy judgement againſt the Iſraelites, that hee would not correct them for their ſinnes. I will not (ſaith he) viſit your daughters when they are harlots, nor your ſpouſes when they are whores; namely, to reclayme them by fatherly chaſtiſements, that they might not run on in a head-long courſe which would lead to deſtruction. In regard whereof, the eſtate of ſinfull man is then moſt wretched, when continuing in his ſin hee is exempted from puniſhment. For as thoſe who are ſicke of the Gout and Dropſie, are then in the moſt miſerable condition, when they vſe exceſſiue diet & haue plenty of delicate wines, and pleaſant drinkes to pleaſe their vnſatiable appetite, becauſe by all theſe dainties their diſeaſes become more deſperate; whereas contrariwiſe, they are mitigated and cured by hunger and thirſt, ſtrict diet and vnpleaſant Phyſicke: So, if being infected and tainted with ſin and corruption, we notwithſtanding proſper in our wickedneſſe, & ruffle it out in worldly pleaſures, our caſe is ſo much the more dangerous and deſperate, becauſe theſe worldly allurements doe but increaſe our ſins, and ſo ſettle and harden vs in our euill courſes, that we can hardly by any meanes be cured and recouered. But if God admitteth vs into his Hoſpitall, and miniſtreth vnto vs the Phyſicke of afflictions, reſtraining our gluttonous appetite, and withholding from vs theſe earthly vanities which doe but feed and increaſe the diſeaſes of our ſoules; then haue wee great cauſe of thankſgiuing, ſeeing we are hereby put into aſſured hope of recouering our ſpirituall health, and of continuing ſtill in the life of grace, vntill we be admitted into the life of glory.

…pius quæſu- …tur, in ſine …ſeruan- …, Gregor.

ſ.4.14.

…ſtit… …prope- …ſit …quan- …diſcipli- …tur …, Greg.

CHAP. XX.

That God by afflictions increaſeth in vs all his ſpirituall graces, and firſt thoſe which are ſeated in the vnderſtanding.

§. Sect. 1. That afflictions exerciſe & by exerciſing preſerue in vs Gods ſauing graces.

WE haue ſhewed how the Lord vſeth afflictions as a notable meanes to free vs from our ſins: It now followeth that I alſo ſhew, that hee doth by them exerciſe and ſtrengthen, multiply and increaſe in vs all Chriſtian vertues, and the ſanctifying and ſauing graces of his holy Spirit. To which purpoſe wee are to know, that as the Maſter of the Maſteries will not ſuffer his Scholars to ſpend their time in idleneſſe, but keepeth them in continuall exerciſe, as running, wraſtling, leaping, fencing, and accuſtometh their bodies to painfull labours, to keepe them in breath, & not only to preſerue their ſtrength and agility, but alſo to increaſe it: ſo doth the Lord exerciſe the faithfull in this World, as in a Schoole of Maſteries, making them to wraſtle and ſtriue with troubles and afflictions, that he may hereby both confirme and preſerue the ſtrength of his ſanctifying graces in them, and alſo increaſe and multiply them by this ſpirituall exerciſe; whereas they would languiſh and grow faint with ſloth and idleneſſe. For as it fareth with the ſtrength of the body, ſo alſo with the vertues and powers of the mind; the more they are diſuſed from labour, and reſt at their eaſe without an enemy, the more weak & impotent they daily grow, but the more they are exerciſed and aſſaulted, the more they are ſtrengthened and confirmed. And as the trees which are toſſed in the Winter with tempeſtuous ſtormes, doe thereby take the deeper rooting, ſo Gods graces are not ouerturnd with theſe boyſterous blaſts of trouble & affliction, but are the more firmely rooted in vs; and the more that the fleſh is weakned by them, the more ſtrong we grow in the ſpirituall part; and though hereby our outward man periſheth, yet the inward man is renewed daily. It is true that whileſt wee are in this combat of afflictions, wearied with labours, and tyred with reſiſting; this ſpirituall ſtrength doth not ſo ſenſibly appeare, but rather ſeemeth to be abated and weakned (euen as it alſo befalleth vs in the exerciſes and contentions of the body) but yet after the conflict is ended, our ſtrength vpon a little reſt is preſently renued, and becommeth much more able and actiue than it was before. Yea, ſometimes it commeth to paſſe, that afflictions like a cloude do hide out of our ſight the bright beames of theſe ſpirituall graces, and theſe miſeries and calamities, like aſhes, couer theſe ſhining and burning coales of Gods ſauing gifts, ſo as neither their heat nor light is diſcerned by the outward ſenſe, but whileſt Torpeſcit virtus vbi certamen deſuerit, & facilè hoſtis malitia coaleſcit, ſi pigreſcat animus repugnantis, Chryſoſt. de interdict. arboris ſerm.

2. Cor. 4.16.

Nauigium vita noſtra agitationibus gaudet; ſola tranquillitate turbatur. Stupet enim curſus ceſſantibus ventis, periclitatur ſi periculis non probetur, Hieronym. ad ægrotum amicum Epiſt. Tom. 4.

they hide them, they alſo preſerue them; which otherwiſe would be more ſubject to waſting and going out, if they did lie open to the outward ayre of worldly proſperity.

§. Sect. 2. That afflictions doe not only preſerue and confirme, but alſo increaſe & multiply in vs Gods ſauing graces.

Yea, theſe troubles and calamities doe not only confirme and preſerue in vs Gods ſpirituall graces, but alſo doe (as I ſaid) increaſe and multiply them. For theſe holy ſeeds of Gods ſauing gifts doe become moſt fruitfull when as they are pinched with the froſt of afflictions; and this heauenly fire of ſanctifying grace doth much increaſe both in heat and brightneſſe, when the winde of tribulation doth blow vpon it. And this commeth to paſſe, both becauſe the Lord is then moſt willing to beſtow vpon vs theſe rich treaſures of grace and ſanctification, when by theſe croſſes and calamities wee are fitted to receiue them, and alſo becauſe we then aboue all times, moſt earneſtly deſire to bee thus ſpiritually inriched, when as we are impoueriſhed in worldly comforts, and vtterly ſpoyled of all earthly delights. For the Lord will not caſt the ſeed of his graces into the ground of our hearts, before they are prepared to receiue them. And as the wiſe Huſbandman will not hazard his wheat by ſowing it in all kindes of Land, but maketh choiſe of that which is fitteſt, and then ploweth, falloweth, and harroweth it, that it may bee the better prepared to receiue the ſeed: ſo much leſſe will the Lord ſow that much more precious graine of his ſauing graces, in the ſtony and thorny hearts of wicked worldlings, but maketh choice only of his elect, which being made good grounds by his alone goodnes, and the ſole Sun-ſhine of his grace and fauour; hee firſt prepareth them for this holy ſeed by plowing, breaking vp and harrowing of their hearts full of naturall hardneſſe, with troubles and afflictions, and then caſteth it into them with a liberall hand. Hee will not giue his graces to the proud and lofty, who would contemne and deſpiſe them, but to the humble and lowly; and becauſe our hearts are naturally haughty and exalted aboue meaſure, therfore the Lord firſt humbleth and preſſeth them downe with the waight of affliction, before hee will giue vnto them this ſpirituall aduancement. Hee vouchſafeth theſe precious gifts vnto none, but them whoſe hearts are inlarged to receiue them, becauſe ſuch alone wil eſteeme them when they haue them; and whereas they are naturally ſtreight, and haue this narrow roome, filled with carnall, and worldly loue, therefore he firſt emptieth them of this earthly traſh by taking it from them, and then ſtretcheth and inlargeth the heart in holy deſires with troubles and afflictions, and ſo ſatisfieth and filleth them with his heauenly treaſures. He will not giue theſe ſpirituall dainties to be fed vpon by full ſtomackes, ſeeing they would loath this diuine ſweetneſſe and be cloyed with it: but he filleth the hungry with theſe good things; and becauſe we naturally want this appetite, hee vſually getteth vs a ſtomacke and ſharpneth our hunger, by with-holding from vs all worldly delicates, and by appointing vs to feed on the bread of affliction and water of ſorrow. And as the Lord moſt willingly giueth his ſpirituall graces to thoſe, who are by afflictions and tribulations fitted to receiue them: ſo doe they who are in this afflicted eſtate, aboue all others, eſteeme theſe precious gifts, and accordingly deſire, and with all diligence vſe the meanes to attaine vnto them: for when by our afflictions wee are ſo humbled that wee become nothing in our ſelues, then doe wee moſt earneſtly deſire, that God by his grace and holy Spirit may be in vs all in all; when by calamities we are emptied of all earthly conſolations, then doe we moſt eagerly hunger after theſe ſpirituall comforts: when we are diſpoyled of worldly riches, honours, pleaſures, health, ſtrength and the reſt; then doe we moſt couet to be inriched with that chiefe riches of Gods ſauing graces which can neuer be taken from vs, and with great diligence ſeek them from God by Prayer, hearing the word, and vſing all other good meanes for the ſatisfying of our holy deſires with vnwearied cheerefulneſſe. And thus doe the faithfull, like painfull Bees, gather the greateſt ſtore of this ſweet hony of Gods graces, out of the bitter Thyme of trouble and affliction; and grow moſt rich in God when they are moſt impoueriſhed in the World. In regard whereof one calleth affliction the Mother of Chriſtian vertues, becauſe as in a fruitfull wombe, ſhe breedeth, nouriſheth and increaſeth them to their perfect growth and full ſtrength. The which is not to bee vnderſtood of it, being conſidered in its owne nature, but as it is ſanctified by God for this vſe and purpoſe; for in her ſelfe this mother hath a barren wombe and dry breaſts, or is only fruitfull in bringing forth ſinne, vnleſſe the Spirit of God, the Father of all Grace and goodneſſe, doe make it fruitfull by infuſing vitall power and ſtrength into it; and theſe waters of affliction in themſelues are ready to drowne vs, if they were not ſcattered with the breath of Gods Spirit, whereby they become like fruitfull ſhowers fit to water vs, that theſe fruits of Gods ſauing graces, may ſpring and grow in vs.

Tribulatio eſt virtutum omnium mater, Chryſoſt. in Math. 3. Homil. 29.

§. Sect. 3. That God by afflictions increaſeth in vs ſauing knowledge and ſpirituall wiſdome.

But let vs deſcend to ſome particulars, and for orders ſake, conſider theſe graces as they reſpect God, or elſe our Neighbours and our ſelues: The graces which reſpect God, are either ſeated in the vnderſtanding, mind and intellectuall part, or in the heart, will and affections, or in both together; or elſe the fruits of them all, appearing in our vnfeined repentance and new obedience; all which are either confirmed and preſerued, or elſe increaſed and multiplyed by our troubles and afflictions. The graces which are ſeated in our mind and vnderſtanding, are knowledge and remembrance of God and his wil, which in his Word is reuealed vnto vs. The firſt grace is ſauing knowledge and ſpirituall wiſdome, the which is notably preſerued, and exceedingly increaſed by croſſes and calamities: for this fire of afflictions doth giue great light to the vnderſtanding; and this ſharpe eye-ſalue, though it doth for the preſent dazle the ſight, yet afterwards it doth ſingularly cleere the eyes of the mind, ſo as they are much fitter to ſee ſpirituall things, and to diſcerne the wayes of God. And whereas proſperity, vſually making men drunke with worldly pleaſures, doth ſo take away the heart, intoxicate the braine, and infatuate the vnderſtanding, that it is not capable of the knowledge of God and ſpirituall things: when by a faſt of afflictions wee are freed from this ſurfet, and by long abſtinence haue theſe intoxicating fumes of worldly vanities taken away, then doe wee come vnto our ſelues, and recouer our vnderſtanding, wherby wee are inabled to judge and diſcerne of ſpirituall things, and to conceiue of God and his will, as they are reuealed vnto vs in his Word. So the Wiſeman ſaith, that the rod and correction giue wiſdome. m.29.15. And the Prophet telleth the people, who were growne deſperate in their wickedneſſe, that ſeeing they did not regard Gods Word and terrible threatnings, to be reclaymed by them from their ſins; and nothing but feare, proceeding from ſenſe of Gods judgements, would work vpon their hard hearts; therefore the Lord would inflict vpon them plagues and calamities, that theſe puniſhments might cauſe them to feare him, and this feare might make them ſo attentiue to his Word, that they might vnderſtand it and profit by it; and there ſhall be only feare 28.19. (ſaith he) to make you vnderſtand the hearing; that is, the Word of the Lord, ſounding in your eares by the miniſtery of his Prophets, which in your ſecurity cauſed by proſperity, you would not vnderſtand, but ſcorned and contemned. Thus the people of Iſrael being in great afflictions, are brought in by the Prophet ſaying, one to another: ſ.6.1,3. Come and let vs return to the Lord: for he hath ſpoyled and hee will heale vs, &c. then ſhall we haue knowledge, and indeauour 8.2. our ſelues to know the Lord. So afterwards hee ſaith, that being in great ſtraights, by reaſon of their mighty enemies preuailing against them, they ſhould cry vnto the Lord; My God we know thee. That therefore which Solomon ſpeaketh of naturall children, may be truly ſaid of the children of God; m.22.15. fooliſhneſſe is bound in their heart, but the rod of correction ſhall driue it away from them. And as experience teacheth vs, that cockered children are ſeldome wiſe, becauſe the Parents indulgence and fondneſſe maketh the Childe wanton, and wantonnes is the cauſe of much fooliſhneſſe; and contrariwiſe, that thoſe, who are kept vnder a ſeuere diſcipline, doe moſt excell in knowledge, diſcretion & vnderſtanding, becauſe they are made hereby more watchful ouer their words and wayes, powdring them with wiſdome, before they dare offer them to be taſted by their Gouernours: So likewiſe, when our heauenly Father ſuffereth vs to abound in earthly delights, and to haue the world at will, we become wanton through proſperity, and fooliſh through our wantonneſſe: but when he nurtereth vs in the ſchoole of afflictions, we labour to informe our ſelues in thoſe things which pleaſe or diſpleaſe him, and ſo accordingly we frame our words and actions. An example whereof we haue in Nebuchadnezzar, who being in proſperity, was blind in his vnderſtanding, and ignorant of the true God, from whence proceeded his fooliſh boaſting and vain-glorious bragging: Is not Dan.4.27,31. this great Babell, which I haue built for the houſe of the Kingdome, by the might of my power, and for the glory of my Maieſty? But when he was humbled by a grieuous affliction, then his vnderſtanding was reſtored vnto him; and hee doth not fooliſhly magnifie himſelfe, but giueth thankes vnto the moſt high, and prayſeth and honoureth him that liueth for euer. Whereby it appeareth, that as the Sun-ſhine of proſperity doth ſo dazle our ſpirituall ſight, and ſo dimme the eyes of our vnderſtanding, that wee are not capable of the knowledge of God and heauenly things, ſo the darkneſſe of afflictions doth notably recouer and cleare them, inabling them to diſcerne the will of God, when the light of the Word appeareth to them. And this commeth to paſſe firſt, becauſe in our afflictions we are made more diligent in harkning vnto thoſe admonitions & inſtructions, which wee haue contemned in the time of proſperity, and are more induſtrious and laborious in learning thoſe ſpirituall leſſons of wiſdome, when as wee feare the rod of correction, and doe feele the ſmart of our negligence and ignorance. So Elihu ſaith, that Iob 33 16. & Chap.33.15. God openeth the eares of men by their corrections, and cauſeth them to hearken vnto his word in the time of trouble. An example whereof we haue in Dauid, who profeſſeth that it was good for him to haue been afflicted, Pſal.119.71. that hee might learne Gods Statutes. So the Iewes when they were troubled in conſcience, and afflicted in mind, through the ſenſe which they had of their ſins, doe exceedingly hunger after this ſauing knowledge, crying out, Men and brethren what ſhall wee Acts 2.37. doe? And the Iaylour, being in great feare and aſtoniſhment, and throughly humbled in the ſight of ſinne, came trembling, and fell downe before Paul and Silas, ſaying: Sirs, what muſt I doe to bee ſaued? Secondly, theſe afflictions doe notably increaſe ſpirituall wiſdome and ſauing knowledge, as they doe ſeaſon our naturall wit, and that knowledge which wee haue attained vnto by the light of Gods Word, making them which are vnſauoury and fruitleſſe in themſelues, to become ſauoury and profitable. For, by our afflictions we haue experience, and by experience wiſdome; in which reſpect it is truly ſaid, that afflictions doe make fooles wiſe; for whereas almoſt none can make any vſe of that knowledge which they haue by their owne wit and naturall vnderſtanding (in regard whereof it is truly ſaid, that wit is nothing worth, vntill it be dearely brought) no nor yet by the experience, which they haue by others euils: when their knowledge is ſeaſoned and approoued by their owne experience, then they make vſe of that they know, and euery notion in their vnderſtanding thus confirmed, becommeth a principle to informe their judgements, and a rule to reforme and direct their liues. And thus in our afflictions wee haue experience of Gods wrath and anger againſt ſin, ſeeing he doth chaſtiſe and correct it euen in his owne children; and ſo hauing felt the ſmart of our former folly in committing it, we become wiſer for the time to come, and will not eaſily bee allured to ſwallow this hooke againe, after we haue beene once pricked with it, though it bee couered with the inticing baits of worldly vanities; or to feed on the dainty meats of ſinfull pleaſures, when wee by experience finde what a bitter and loathſome after-taſte they haue left behind them. Thus alſo we haue experience in our afflictions of Gods infinite wiſdome, whereby he bringeth good out of euill, light out of darkneſſe, bleſſings out of curſes, and maketh the fruits of ſin the meanes of ſaluation, cauſing vs to find a ready way into the joyes of Heauen, by the gates of Hell, and the firſt flaſhes of helliſh fire. And alſo of his omnipotent power, whereby he mightily effecteth all this which hee hath in his wiſdome purpoſed, ſupporting vs in our greateſt weakneſſe, and defending vs when wee are moſt vnable to helpe our ſelues, againſt all the furious aſſaults of our malicious enemies. Thus we haue experience of his wiſe and powerfull prouidence, when as wee perceiue that all our afflictions, with whatſoeuer circumſtances belong vnto them, are ruled by it; and though in themſelues they are euill and hurtfull, yet that they are ſo wiſely diſpoſed, that in the end they turne to our good, and doe much further the ſaluation of our ſoules; of his infinite mercy and loue, whereby hee moderateth and mitigateth all our afflictions, ſo as they may not exceed our ſtrength, and ſweetneth them by the inward comforts of his Spirit, and the taſte and feeling of his grace and fauour, that we haue more true joy in them, than Worldlings in the fruition of all their pleaſures: And finally of his truth, both in inflicting thoſe chaſtiſements which he hath threatned, and in performing of all his promiſes, both in ſtrengthening and ſupporting vs whileſt we are vnder the burthen of the Croſſe, and in deliuering vs from all our afflictions, in ſuch time as is moſt conuenient and ſeaſonable, both for his owne glory, and the aduancing of our ſpirituall good. Yea, not onely doe we by afflictions attaine to the knowledge of Gods excellencies and perfections, but alſo of the Worlds mutability and vanity. For howſoeuer looking vpon men in their flouriſhing proſperity we thinke their eſtate ſo excellent that it cannot be matched, and ſo permanent that it cannot be changed; when wee ſee our health turned into ſickneſſe, and ſtrength into weakneſſe, our riches into pouerty, and our honours into diſgrace and contempt, our mirth into mourning, and our liberty into impriſonment, then do we plainly diſcerne that worldly felicity is but a ſmoake or dreame which ſodainly vaniſheth and leaueth nothing behind it; and therefore we will not, when we enjoy it, put our confidence in it, nor ſet our hearts vpon it, and as wee will not much rejoyce when it befalleth vs, ſo will we not vnmeaſurably mourne when it departeth.

Chap.16.29.

§. Sect. 4. That the benefit of ſpiri all wiſdome much exceedeth our hur by afflictions.

And therefore, ſeeing theſe worldly afflictions doe ſo much increaſe ſauing knowledge and heauenly wiſdome, this conſideration ſhould mooue vs to beare them with patience and comfort, and in as much as our earthly loſſes, are farre exceeded by our ſpirituall gaine; and our outward grieuances are abundantly recompenced with inward benefits. For this wiſdome is better than precious ſtones, and all pleaſures are not to bee compared vnto her, her fruit is better than gold, euen than fine gold, and her reuenewes better than fine ſiluer. It is more precious than pearles, and all things that thou canſt deſire, are not to be compared vnto her. It is that by which we haue our very eſſence, and being in Chriſtianity; for as by naturall reaſon and vnderſtanding we are men, ſo by ſanctified reaſon, ſpirituall wiſdome, and ſauing knowledge wee are Chriſtian men; and (as our Sauiour ſaith) this is that life, wherby wee muſt liue for euer, to know the only true God, and whom he hath ſent Ieſus Chriſt. It is the fountaine and foundation of all true Religion, and the only ſure ground of all other ſauing graces: for as they all ariſe from faith, ſo faith it ſelfe from this ſauing knowledge. In all which reſpects holy Dauid is ſo farre from thinking a man miſerable that is afflicted with worldly croſſes that hee accounteth him happy, when as he profiteth by

Prou.3.11,19 & 3.15.

Iohn 17.3.

it in wiſdome and knowledge. Bleſſed is the man (ſaith he) O Lord whom thou chaſtiſeſt, and teacheſt him in thy Law.

al.94.12.

Sect. 5. e afflicti- re nota- meanes to vs in re- mbrance of od.

The other grace ſeated in the intellectuall part of the ſoule, is the remembrance of God and his will, which is alſo much increaſed and renewed by afflictions. For whereas plenty and proſperity make vs to looke vnto, and reſt in our owne prouiſion, in ſecondary cauſes and inferiour meanes, forgetting in the meane time God, who is the author of all our good, becauſe wee are ſo ſupported with outward helpes, that we doe not ſenſibly feele any neede of his aſſiſtance: when wee are forſaken of theſe worldly ſuccours, and are left of theſe falſe friends in our greateſt neede, then doe wee begin to remember him, who neuer forſaketh thoſe that truſt in him, and is alwayes willing, able, and ready to comfort vs, when we flee vnto him in our diſtreſſe. An example whereof we haue in the prodigall child, who whileſt hee had goods in his owne hands, ſpent all his time in reuelling and riot, in banqueting and whoring, and neuer thought of his gracious Father, from whom hee had receiued theſe guifts, which hee thus abuſed, till (all being conſumed) hee was brought into extreame pouerty and miſery; and then hee remembred him, and thinketh of returning. And as in our afflictions wee are put in remembrance of God himſelfe by ſtanding in need of helpe and comfort from him; ſo alſo of his word and commandements, and thoſe profitable admonitions, inſtructions, and conſolations, which wee haue formerly heard out of them. And whereas in the time of our proſperity, wee careleſly forget them, and negligently caſt them behinde our backs; when wee are pinched with miſeries and croſſes, wee doe not onely diligently hearken vnto thoſe profitable leſſons which are preſently deliuered vnto vs, but alſo for our comfort, recall that which we haue formerly heard, and is now through ſloth and neglect careleſly caſt (as it were) into ſome by-corner of the memory. And as the ſeede in time of drought, lyeth long after it is ſowen buried vnder the clods, and ſeemeth loſt and periſhed becauſe it appeareth not: ſo the ſeed of Gods Word being ſowen in the furrowes of our hearts doth lie buried oftentimes vnder the heauy clods of worldly incumbrances, appearing neither to our ſelues nor others: but when it is ſoaked and ſteeped in theſe waters of tribulation, then it ſprouteth, ſpringeth vp, and bringeth forth abundant fruits to the ioy of others, and comfort of our ſelues. And as ſlothfull truants, whileſt their play dayes laſt, caſt their bookes careleſly vnder the cupbord, and for want of care and meditation quickly forget that which they haue beene long in learning; but when they are conſtrained to come to the ſchoole, and doe feele the ſmart of their former negligence, then they labour to recall to minde their loſt leſſons, and recouer that which was ſlipt out of memory; ſo it vſually fareth with vs; for whileſt the world affoordeth vnto vs the play dayes of proſperity, wee reuell and play the wantons, ſecurely caſting all thoſe inſtructions, which wee haue learned in the ſchoole of Chriſt, behind our backs, as though we ſhould neuer haue further vſe of them; but when our heauenly Schoolemaſter putteth an end to our play, and with the rodde of affliction whippeth vs for our former ſloath, then doe wee take paines to regaine our loſt learning, and to recall to minde thoſe fruitfull leſſons which haue beene taught vs in this ſpirituall Schoole. In which reſpect afflictions are of ſingular profit; in that by an vrgent neceſſity they make vs to eſteeme and treaſure vp in the cloſet of our memories theſe treaſures of knowledge, which we would otherwiſe vilifie and caſt out of doores: for ſo are wee ruled by the ſenſes, which onely apprehend preſent objects, that we value euery thing according to preſent and carnall vſe, and doe not care for the glad tidings of the Goſpell, and the ſweete conſolations of Gods Spirit before we be brought into miſerie and diſtreſſe. And as he who is in perfect health contemneth the Phyſitian, and is ready to caſt his drugs and medicines out of dores; but being viſited with ſome grieuous ſickneſſe, doth honour and reward him, and thinketh the beſt roome in his houſe not to good for his potions and cordials; and as in the time of ſecure peace, we let the ſword ruſt in the ſcabberd, and our armour vpon the wall; but in time of warre doe highly value them, and doe rub, ſcoure, and gird them to vs: ſo whileſt in the time of proſperity wee haue no ſenſe and feeling of our ſpirituall diſeaſes, wee careleſly caſt at our heeles the phyſicke of our ſoules, and neuer gratefully remember our ſpirituall Phyſitians, becauſe wee doe not finde any neede of them; wee let the ſword of the ſpirit ruſt in the ſcabberd, and the booke of God to lye moulding vnder our cup-bords, and neuer thinke of preparing and fitting our ſpirituall armour, that wee may haue it in readineſſe, becauſe, though wee bee in the greateſt danger, yet we can diſcouer no enemy which is ready to aſſault vs: but when wee are diſeaſed in our worldly eſtates, and feele the ſmart and paine of miſeries and calamities; when afflictions like mighty enemies doe aſſault and vexe vs, and wee finde our ſelues ſo weake, that wee cannot in our owne ſtrength, make reſiſtance; then doe wee highly eſteeme, and accordingly thinke vpon, both our ſpirituall Phyſitians, and that phyſicke of our ſoules, which they prouide for the procuring of our eaſe, and the recouery of our health; then doe wee thinke of drawing the ſword of the ſpirit, and buckling vnto vs the armour of Gods graces, that wee may bee inabled to withſtand the violence of our enemies, and obtaine the victory in this dangerous conflict.

Chap. XXI.

That God by our afflictions doth much confirme, ſtrengthen and increaſe our faith.

§ Sect. 1. That afflictions ſtrengthen our faith by making vs more carefull in the vſe of the meanes; and by exerciſing it with theſe tryals.

THe next grace is faith, which is ſeated both in our head and heart, in our vnderſtanding and alſo in our wil & affections, for it is not only a perſwaſion which is an act of the vnderſtanding ariſing from knowledge, but alſo a willing aſſent and application of that we beleeue vnto our ſelues for our owne vſe; vpon which followeth our voluntary cleauing vnto the Lord, and our repoſing and ſole reſting vpon his power, prouidence and gracious promiſes in Ieſus Chriſt. And this faith is exceedingly ſtrengthned and increaſed through our troubles and afflictions; firſt becauſe we are then moſt carefull in the vſe of the meanes for the increaſing and confirming of it, as hauing in our ſenſe and feeling much more vſe of it, than in the time of our proſperity. For whilſt we liue in ſecure peace, and doe not find our ſelues moleſted with any enemy, wee caſt the ſhield of faith aſide, and count it but a burthen, if wee ſhould beare it: but when Sathan and the world daily caſt againſt vs the fiery darts of trouble and affliction, which as ſoone as they hit vs do in a ſenſible manner burne and torment vs, then doe wee make pretious account of this impenetrable ſhield, and are neuer at reſt, but whilſt we find it faſt buckled vnto vs. Secondly our faith is ſtrengthned and increaſed by afflictions, as they are vnto it a ſpirituall exerciſe, wherein all the vertue and powers thereof are tryed and imployed. For as when our bodies are inured to ſloth and idleneſſe, their ſtrength doth languiſh and decay; but when they are in daily exerciſe, they increaſe much in vigour and ability; ſo when our faith hath no ſpirituall exerciſe, it is in ſhort time enfeebled and groweth faint and weake; but when wee are in aduerſity and affliction, vexed with ſickneſſe, pinched with pouerty, forſaken of friends, blemiſhed and defamed for our loue to goodneſſe, and ſubject to innumerable dangers; then our faith hauing enemies to reſiſt and aduerſaries to ſtriue and wraſtle with, doth ſtirre vp its owne vigour, gather all its ſtrength and powers together; and finding it ſelfe too weake to make reſiſtance, doth earneſtly ſeeke to haue its ſtrength encreaſed and renued. And to this end it firſt wreſtleth with God by prayer, inſtantly imploring and beſeeching him to perfect the good worke which he hath begun, and ſo to ſtrengthen and confirme it, that it may not be deſtroyed and troden vnder foot in this ſpirituall conflict; and alſo meditateth in Gods gracious promiſes, whereby he hath aſſured all thoſe that beleeue in him, that hee will neuer leaue and forſake them, but will heare them in the day of trouble, deliuer them out of all their dangers and giue a good iſſue to all their tentations. And thus our faith is exerciſed and by exerciſe increaſed in our afflictions; the which is one of the moſt ſpeciall ends, why the Lord doth bring vs into theſe troubles and calamities. For whilſt wee haue the world at will, and are on all ſides hedged in with the bleſſings of proſperity, our faith may ſeeme both to our ſelues and others a meere ſpeculatiue vertue, whereof there is little vſe, and like an vntryed armour which doth not aſſure vs of defence in the day of danger; but when we are in the middeſt of afflictions, it is tryed with the bullets of tentations, and the more it is tryed the more it is approued, and the more it is approued, the more it is ſtrengthned againſt the next incounter. And in this manner was Abrahams faith exerciſed: for after that the Lord had made his gracious promiſe vnto him of multiplying his poſterity, and that in his ſeed all the nations of the earth ſhould bee bleſſed, hee long exerciſed his faith with that great affliction of his wiues barrenneſſe, which ſeemed directly to croſſe Gods promiſe and ouerthrow all his hopes; and gaue him no child till he and his wife were growne ſo old, that in naturall reaſon the promiſe ſeemed impoſſible to bee performed. With which exerciſe his faith was ſo ſtrengthened and increaſed, that after hee had his promiſed ſonne, and was commanded for his further tryall to ſacrifice him with his owne hands, he became alſo victor ouer this tentation, becauſe by the former tryall hee had learned that God was able to raiſe him to life againe, ſeeing in reſpect of the deadneſſe of Saraes wombe, he had before after a ſort (as the Apoſtle ſaith) receiued him from the dead. Thus alſo after he had promiſed to giue vnto the poſterity of Abraham the land of Canaan, he long exerciſed their faith, firſt by bringing them into a cruell bondage in the land of Egypt, and after their deliuerance by afflicting them with ſo many calamities in the wilderneſſe, that they ſeemed, not to haue eſcaped, but onely to haue exchanged their miſerie and tribulation. And ſo the Lord after hee had promiſed Dauid the crowne and kingdome, did exerciſe his faith with innumerable afflictions, and by this exerciſe did wonderfully confirme and increaſe it, as appeareth by the hiſtory of Samuel, and that ſingular booke of the Pſalmes, the moſt part whereof was penned in the time of his trouble and perſecution.

Heb. 11:9

§. Sect. 2. That our faith is ſtrengthened afflictions hrough the perience hich we then ne of the uth both of Gods threatings and racious promiſes.

Thirdly our faith receiueth much ſtrength and power in our afflictions, becauſe in them wee haue experience of Gods truth, both in his threatnings, in that for our ſinnes he hath inflicted thoſe chaſtiſements and judgements which in his word he hath denounced; and alſo in his promiſes; ſeeing he performeth all which hee hath vndertaken, not onely in aſſiſting vs in our afflictions, but alſo in deliuering vs in due time; in both ſhewing his infinite wiſedome, omnipotent power, and all-gouerning prouidence, whereby he hath diſpoſed of all things to the beſt. For when by experience wee find, that the Lord hath ſhewed vs great mercy in croſſing of our moſt earneſt deſires, hath brought vnto vs much comfort out of our greateſt calamities, turned our feares and dangers into ſafe ſecurity and joyfull tryumph, and hath made the Whale, which in ſwallowing ſeemed to deuour vs, to bee a meanes of our ſafety and deliuerance: then is our faith by this experience maruellouſly ſtrengthned and increaſed, and wee thereby are inabled to indure the next afflictions with much more patience and contentment. And as the Pilot hauing eſcaped out of many ſtormes, and the ſouldier out of many dangerous conflicts, are ſo heartned hereby that they are maruellous confident and couragious when they are toſſed with tempeſts, and aſſaulted with their enemies; whileſt vnexperienced paſſengers and freſh-water ſouldiers tremble and feare in the leaſt danger: ſo thoſe who haue beene exerciſed in afflictions, and haue had manifold experience of Gods mercy, power and loue, both in aſſiſting them in their troubles, and in deliuering them out of their greateſt dangers, haue their faith in God hereby ſo ſtrengthned and increaſed, that they are much more patient in afflictions, and more couragious in perils, than thoſe who were neuer exerciſed with theſe tryals; becauſe they know that God is immutable in his goodneſſe, and is now as ready and willing to helpe and deliuer them as hee was before. So Dauid concludeth that becauſe he had found God merciful and powerfull in deliuering him from the Lyon and the Beare; therefore he would aſſuredly deliuer him in like manner from the vncircumciſed Philiſtine, and make him to become as one of them. And Paul being raiſed by God, when the ſentence of death by the verdict of nature, had paſſed againſt him, by this experience confirmeth his faith for the time to come in this aſſurance, that the Lord would againe deliuer him, if ſo bee he were ouertaken by the like danger.

m.17.36.

r.1.9.10.

§. Sect. 3. That afflictions do ſtrengthen our faith by cauſing vs to renew our repentance; and aſſuring vs that our ſins thus corrected ſhal not come into condemnation.

Fourthly, afflictions confirme and increaſe our faith as they are notable meanes of working or renuing our repentance; for as ſinne doth wound and weaken our faith, making vs to doubt of Gods fauour by reaſon of ſelfe guiltineſſe; ſo repentance doth cure and ſtrengthen it, becauſe by it (through Gods mercy and free promiſes made in Chriſt) ſinne is done away, as though it had neuer beene committed, and ſo wee are aſſured that wee are reconciled vnto God and receiued againe into his former fauour. And fifthly our faith is ſtrengthned by our afflictions, as they giue aſſurance vnto thoſe who are exerciſed with them and profit by them, vnto amendment and newneſſe of life; that their ſinnes which are here in this world thus corrected, ſhall neuer appeare to their condemnation in the world to come. For as they who proſper and flouriſh in their wicked courſes, haue juſt cauſe to feare, that they are in Diues his eſtate, who had all his good in this life, and was reſerued to torment in that life which is endleſſe and euerlaſting: ſo they who haue no ſooner ſinned but they are preſently corrected for it, and by their chaſtiſement reclaimed and amended, may aſſure themſelues, that as now they are like vnto Lazarus in his paines, ſo they ſhall hereafter be made like vnto him in his ioyes and comforts, and not ſuffer both now and then too, ſeeing (as the Apoſtle plainly telleth vs) wee are purpoſely chaſtened with theſe afflictions, that we may eſcape the condemnation of the world.

Luk.16.25.

1.Cor.11.32.

§. Sect. 4. That afflictions ſtrengthen our faith as they are ſignes of our election.

But moſt notably is our faith ſtrengthned and increaſed by our afflictions, as they are vnto thoſe who profit by them in newneſſe of life, infallible ſignes and notes of their election, vocation and adoption. They are ſignes of our election, for as the Apoſtle teacheth vs, thoſe whom God hath predeſtinate to be made like vnto his Sonne in glory, hee hath alſo predeſtinate to be made like vnto him in afflictions; and as by this holy decree his naturall Sonne was firſt to ſuffer, and then to enter into his glory; ſo wee, who are adopted in him, muſt follow him in the ſame way to our heauenly home, firſt ſuffering, and then raigning with him as the Apoſtle ſpeaketh. This alſo appeareth in the Lords owne ſpeech to the people of Iſrael, you onely (ſaith he) haue I knowne (or choſen) of all the families of the Earth, therefore I will viſit you for all your iniquities. And to Ananias concerning Paul: Goe thy way, for he is a choſen veſſell vnto me, &c. and I will ſhew him how many things hee muſt ſuffer for my name ſake. The conſideration whereof ſhould much comfort vs in all our afflictions and perſecutions which though to thoſe who are the inſtruments of our euil, they are tokens of perdition, yet vnto

Rom.8.29.

Luk.24.26.

2.Tim.2.12.

Amos.3.2.

Act.9.15,16.

Phil.1 28.

to vs who patiently ſuffer them they are ſignes of our ſaluation through the grace of God, as the Apoſtle telleth vs. In regard whereof the ſame holy Apoſtle doth not onely beare with patience and comfort his troubles and grieuous afflictions, but being to maintaine his credit againſt the falſe Apoſtles, he maketh choiſe of his ſufferings to glory and rejoyce in them, rather than of thoſe excellent graces of Gods holy Spirit wherewith he was ſo richly adorned.

2.Cor.11.23. to 31.& ca.6.4.

§. Sect. 5.
That afflictions ſtrengthen our faith as they are ſignes of our effectuall calling:
2 .Tim.3.12.

Thus alſo our afflictions are notable ſignes of our effectuall calling, whereby wee are ſeuered from the world, and admitted into Gods Church and family. For they are Gods liuery and cogniſance which he giueth all to weare who will bee his ſeruants; for, as many as will liue godly in Chriſt Ieſus ſhall ſuffer perſecution, and our Sauiour telleth vs, that if any man will come after him, and waite vpon him as his ſeruant and diſciple, he muſt deny himſelfe, and take vp his croſſe daily and follow him. Neither may we liue like libertines when wee are intertained into his family, and runne on in wicked courſes without correction: but wee muſt make account that our wiſe Lord and maſter will keepe vs vnder a ſeuere diſcipline, chaſtiſing vs for our ſinnes, that we may bee reclaimed from them, and not ſuffering vs to goe on in euill wayes without checke and controulement, to his diſhonour and our deſtruction: and howſoeuer hee ſuffereth others that are without to proſper in their wickedneſſe, and without any puniſhment to adde ſin vnto ſin, yet he will be honoured of thoſe who draw neere vnto him, and as the Prophet and Apoſtle ſpeake, he will cauſe iudgement to begin at his owne houſe, and firſt plague the Citie where his name is called vpon. As therefore when the Maſon and and Carpenter poliſh their ſtones, and ſquare their timber with their tooles and axes; it is a ſigne that they haue choſen them for the vſe of buliding, whereas that which is vntouched is left as refuſe, fit for nothing but to bee caſt into the high-way, and to bee burned in the fire: So when the Lord doth poliſh, ſquare and plaine vs with troubles and afflictions from the knots and knobs of ſinne and corruption, it appeareth hereby, that hee hath made choiſe of vs to be ſtones in the building of his ſpirituall Temple; whereas thoſe which are let alone, and not hammered and ſquared by this heauenly workman, are rejected as refuſe ſtuffe, which is altogether vnfit for this holy building. Againe the world onely loueth its owne, and therefore when our Sauiour Chriſt by the preaching of the Goſpell hath choſen and culled vs out of the world, then preſently it beginneth to maligne and hate vs, and to vſe all meanes whereby it may bring vpon vs miſery and affliction. In regard whereof we may conclude, that when we are hated of the world we are beloued of God; when it baſly eſteemeth vs and cruelly vſeth vs, as though wee were the very outcaſts and off-ſcouring of all things, then may we bee aſſured (if we make good vſe of theſe afflictions, by contemning the world which contemneth vs, & drawing neerer vnto God by repentance and hearty prayer) that the Lord highly valueth vs, and hath choſen and ſeuered vs like pure gold and good graine, out of this maſſe and heape of droſſe and chaffe.

Luk.9.23.

1.Pet.4.17.
Ier.25.29.

Ioh.15.19.

§. Sect.6.
That afflictions ſtrengthe our faith as they are ſigne of our adoption.
Gal.4.1.

Finally as our afflictions are notable ſignes of our calling & admiſſion into Gods family, ſo alſo of our adoption whereby wee become ſonnes of God and heires of his promiſes. For (as the Apoſtle ſpeaketh to another purpoſe) the heire as long as he is a child differeth herein nothing from a ſeruant, though he be Lord of all, but is vnder tutours and gouernours vntill the time appointed of the father; and is ſubject to the like chaſtiſement and correction: yea oftentimes our heauenly Father (according to the cuſtome of men) when his ſonne and ſlaue doe both offend, correcteth his child, but letteth the other eſcape vnpuniſhed, becauſe he is purpoſed to thruſt him out of doores, and to take no further care of him; whereas he intendeth to make his ſonne his heire, and therefore keepeth him vnder diſcipline, that he may be found worthy to receiue the inheritance. And this the Apoſtle plainly expreſſeth, ſaying, whom God loueth hee chaſteneth, and hee ſcourgeth euery ſonne whom he receiueth: If then yee indure chaſtening, God offereth himſelfe vnto you as vnto ſonnes; for what ſonne is it whom the father chaſteneth not? If therefore yee bee without correction, whereof all are partakers, then are yee baſtards and not ſonnes. Thus alſo God promiſeth Dauid, that he would chooſe Salomon for his Son, and approue himſelfe to bee a Father vnto him, by correcting him for his ſinnes, and continuing his loue vnto him. I will bee (ſaith he) his father and he ſhall be my ſonne: and if he ſinne I will chaſten him with the rod of men, and with the plagues of the children of men, but my mercy ſhall not depart from him, &c. And therefore we muſt not doubt of our adoption, and imagine that wee are not the children of God, becauſe wee indure ſuch grieuous and tedious afflictions; for though Salomon was Gods choſen child, and was called Iedidiah, becauſe hee was beloued of him; yet hee ſaith, that if hee ſinned hee would correct him, but in the meane time, would not take his mercy from him. So though Iſrael were choſen for Gods firſt borne ſonne, and were as much more precious in his eyes than all other nations in the Earth, as the pureſt gold than the baſeſt droſſe, or the wheat than chaffe; yet were this

Heb.12.6.8.

2.Sam.7.14.15.

2.Sam.12.25.

this beloued people grieuouſly afflicted in a miſerable bondage and captiuity, whileſt Pharaoh and the Egyptians their cruell enemies, inſulted ouer them as their lords and maſters, in all proſperity; and whileſt the curſed Cananites liued in voluptuous pleaſures, hauing all thoſe delights and comforts, which the land of promiſe could yeeld vnto them. And thus alſo before the flood, the wicked Caynites, and after the flood, the filthy Sodomites, had all the pleaſure and glory of the world, whileſt the poſterity of Shem, and the worthy Patriarches, paſſed their time like pilgrimes and ſtrangers, and were turmoyled with innumerable afflictions. Yea the Lord not only ſpareth the bondman and ſlaue, when hee ſcourgeth his beloued ſonne; but oftentimes correcteth his child by the hand of his ſeruant: according to that of the Apoſtle. He that was borne of the fleſh, perſecuted him that was borne after the ſpirit: the which is ſo euident by the innumerable examples of all ages, that it were but loſt labour to ſtand vpon it. The conſideration whereof as it may keepe vs from enuying the impunity and felicity of worldly wicked men, and from grudging and repining againſt Gods prouidence, becauſe they who ſinne more, ſuffer ſo little, and we who ſinne leſſe ſuffer ſo much; they who rebell againſt God and deſpite him with their abominations, haue plenty of worldly bleſſings, and all things at their hearts deſire, and we who ſerue and feare him ſuffer miſeries and want neceſſaries; ſo may it much confirme our patience and increaſe our comfort when we are vexed with afflictions, and feele the bitter ſmart of Gods chaſtiſing hand: ſeeing it is a ſigne that they are rejected as ſlaues, and are therefore left to their owne liberty; and wee adopted as ſonnes who are kept vnder ſeuere diſcipline that wee may bee reclaimed from our ſinnes, incited to the performance of all good duties, and ſo bee prepared and fitted to receiue our patrimony. Neither haue they herein any more priuiledge than the Oxe, who being appointed to the ſhambles, is freed from the yoke, and ſuffered to runne at liberty and take his pleaſure in faire greene paſtures; or wee more hurt than the Oxe inured to labour, who indureth the yoke, ſuffereth more paines and feedeth vpon bare fields, becauſe his maſter louing him, is purpoſed to reſerue him for his owne vſe. In regard whereof as wicked men haue no juſt cauſe of glorying and rejoycing in their worldly proſperity, whereby they are but fatted aganiſt the day of ſlaughter; ſo the faithful haue little cauſe of ſorrow and impatiencie in their afflictions, ſeeing their preſent ſmart increaſeth their future hopes, and theſe corrections which they ſuffer and profit by, are vnto them vndoubted ſignes of their adoption, and that God is their louing father in that he taketh ſuch care for their amendment? For as when a man, taking two children as they are committing the ſame fault, doth correct the one and let the other goe vntouched, wee ſeeing it, are ready to conclude, that he is a father or gouernor to him that is chaſtened, and but a ſtranger to him that eſcapeth, ſeeing hee taketh no care for his reformation: ſo when wee ſee and feele that God correcteth ſharply thoſe ſinnes in vs which others commit & eſcape vnpuniſhed, let vs not grieue ſo much in our ſmart and paine, as rejoyce to haue this aſſurance of our adoption. And this an holy father illuſtrateth and inforceth by this ſimilitude. A man (ſaith he) hath two ſonnes; the one he chaſteneth, the other hee leaueth to his owne courſes. This faulteth haynouſly and is not corrected by his father; the other can ſcarce looke awry but hee is rebuked or ſcourged. But why is hee let alone, and this beaten? ſurely becauſe he intendeth to make this his heire and to put the other from the patrimony, ſeeing he conceiueth no poſſible hope of his amendment. Now he that is kept vnder this ſeuere diſcipline, out of his childiſh folly judging all things according to preſent ſenſe, thinketh his brother happy becauſe he is not beaten, and lamenting his owne eſtate is ready to ſay: My brother hath done ſuch and ſo great euils, and at his pleaſure tranſgreſſeth the commandements of my Father, and for all his faults hath not ſo much as a hard word giuen him; but I am beaten if I but ſtep awry. Wherein hee bewrayeth his folly and want of wiſdome, ſeeing hee onely looketh to that which hee ſuffereth, and not vnto the inheritance reſerued for him &c. And therefore (as hee ſaith in another place) patiently beare the hand of thy heauenly father vpon thee, and though thou bee a good ſonne doe not refuſe his diſcipline; for hee correcteth vs that hee may not take his mercy from vs. If thou be contumacious let him beate thee, that hee may not in juſt diſpleaſure diſinherit thee &c. for why ſhould the adopted ſinfull ſon grudge to be corrected when he ſeeth Gods onely and innocent Sonne to bee whipped and ſo ſeuerely handled? Let him in rage flie vpon thee, yet hee is thy father: Let him whip, afflict and breake thee (as it were) in pieces; yet he is thy father. If therefore thou cryeſt, cry as vnder the hand of a father with humility and meekeneſſe and not with pride and indignation. Thy ſufferings which thou bewaileſt are a medicine and not a puniſhment, correction and not damnation: doe not put backe the rod, if thou wouldeſt not be put backe from the inheritance. Doe not regard what ſmart thou haſt by thy ſtripes but what place thou houldeſt in thy fathers teſtament.

Auguſt. enarrat. in Pſal. 93.

Auguſt. in Pſal. 88. Concione 2.

Noli repellere flagellum ſi non vis repelli ab hæreditate. Noli attendere quam pœnam habeas in flagello, ſed quem locum in teſtamento. Auguſt. in pſal. 102. enarrat.

Heb.12.9.10.

teſtament, For if (as the Apoſtle reaſoneth) wee haue had the fathers of our bodies which corrected vs and haue giuen them reuerence: ſhould we not much rather be in ſubiection to the father of ſpirits that wee may liue? For they verily for a few dayes chaſtened vs after their owne pleaſure: but he chaſteneth vs for our profit that wee may bee pertakers of his holineſſe.

Chap. XXII.

That God by our afflictions confirmeth and increaſeth in vs our affiance, hope, loue, feare, and humility.

§.Sect. 1. That by afflictions our affiance in God is confirmed and increaſed.

AND thus it appeareth that our faith is much confirmed by afflictions, as in other reſpects ſo eſpecially as they are to thoſe who profit by them, notable ſignes of their election, vocation, and adoption. The like alſo may bee ſaid of other graces, which are chiefely ſeated in the heart, as affiance, hope, loue, feare of God, humility, and the reſt. For firſt our affiance and confidence in God is notably ſtrengthned and increaſed by our afflictions, when as being forſaken of all humane helpe and inferiour meanes, he by his owne wiſedome and power ſaueth and deliuereth vs. And this is one ſpeciall end why the Lord in mercy and loue, bringeth vs into tribulation and diſtreſſe, that wee may not truſt in ſecundary cauſes and worldly helpes, when wee haue experience of their weakeneſſe and inſufficiency, but may put our whole affiance in him, hauing made tryall of his all-ſufficiency, and omnipotent power, whereby he helpeth and deliuereth vs, when as they forſake and faile vs. For naturally wee put our affiance in outward and inferiour meanes, becauſe they are ſubiect to our ſenſes, and truſt in any thing neere at hand, rather than in God, who alone is able to releeue and ſuccour vs, becauſe hee ſeemeth farre off to carnall reaſon, and is onely beheld and apprehended by the eye and hand of Faith. And as thoſe who are ready to fall into ſome deepe pit, being aſtoniſhed with ſuddaine feare, doe not conſider what is ſufficient to ſtay them; but catch hold of that which is next vnto them, and ſo oftentimes pull that vpon them which they hoped would haue held them vp: ſo we no ſooner fall into any danger, but we preſently lay hold vpon worldly helps, and truſt to bee deliuered by earthly meanes, as by our owne wiſedome, ſtrength, and riches, or by the aide and ſupport of our friends, and the arme of fleſh; and therefore the Lord in mercy doth often times withdraw them from vs, becauſe they are but weake reeds and broken ſtaues, which would faile and deceiue vs, when we moſt reſted on them; to the end that being forſaken of theſe vaine ſuccours and ſupports, wee might with full affiance rely vpon him, who is alone able to helpe and ſaue vs. And thus when the people of Iſrael being ouertaken with dangers, did not put their truſt in God for their deliuery, but did flee for helpe to the Aſſyrians and Egyptians; the Lord cauſed them not onely to forſake them in their greateſt need, but alſo to bee vnto them the meanes of their great miſery and calamity, by inuading their country ouercomming and leading them captiue, and miſerably vexing and afflicting them, in the land of their captiuity. By which experience, comming to a ſight of their vaine and ſinfull confidence, they preſently leaue and forſake it, and putting their whole affiance in God, cry out vnto him; There is none like vnto thee O Lord: thou art great, and thy name is great in power. And after the ſame manner wee, herein no better than they, truſt in worldly helpes rather than in God, thinking that our wiſedome and power ſhall deliuer vs from dangers, our friends from pouerty and want, and that our Phyſitions, ſhall preſerue vs in health, or recouer vs out of ſickneſſe; and therefore the Lord bringeth theſe things wherein we truſt vnto the touch-ſtone of tryall, cauſing vs to fall into perils, pouerty, and diſeaſes, that wee may haue experience of the weakeneſſe and vanity of theſe earthly ſuccours, and then finding our wiſedome to be ſo infatuated, that in ſteede of freeing, it doth the more intangle and inſnare vs in the net of dangers; that our friends do not only forſake vs in our neede, but alſo further oppreſſe vs with fraud and violence; and that our Phyſitions doe rather increaſe our paines, than eaſe vs of them; wee leaue theſe vaine helps, and flee vnto the Lord, reſting vpon his ſole power and promiſes for comfort and deliuerance. And being releeued by him in our greateſt diſtreſſe, by this experience our confidence and affiance in him is exceedingly ſtrengthened and increaſed for the time to come; for as wee are confident in the aſſiſtance of ſuch a friend, who hath often helped vs in our greateſt dangers; as wee truſt much vnto ſuch a Phyſition, who hath in former times recouered vs out of many deſperate diſeaſes; and boldly rely in the ſtorme vpon the approued skill of ſuch a pilot, as hath formerly brought vs ſafe out of many dangerous tempeſts into the deſired hauen: ſo when the Lord hath deliuered vs out of many tribulations, and hath beene our helpe and comfort in our grieuous miſeries, when as being forſaken of all worldly ſuccour, our eſtate ſeemed vtterly deſperate; then is our truſt and affiance in God ſo ſtrengthned and increaſed, that wee are ready to ſay with Dauid, that though wee ſhould

Ier.10.6.

ſhould walke through the valley of the ſhadow of death, wee will feare no euill, becauſe God is with vs, and his rod and ſtaffe doe comfort vs; and with the Church to ſing that Song of Thankſgiuing; God is our hope and ſtrength, and helpe in troubles ready to be found. Therefore will we not feare though the earth be moued, and though the Mountaines fall into the middeſt of the Sea. An example whereof wee haue in the Apoſtle, who hauing receiued the ſentence of death in himſelfe, becauſe hee ſhould not truſt in himſelfe, but in God, which rayſeth the dead, and being deliuered through the power and goodneſſe of God from this deadly danger, doth hereby confirme his affiance in him for the time to come, concluding, that becauſe he already had experience of Gods might and mercy in deliuering him, therefore hee would truſt in him, that yet hereafter hee would deliuer him. As alſo in holy Iob, who hauing had manifold experience of Gods loue and aſſiſtance in his miſeries and afflictions, groweth hereby ſo confident and couragious that hee profeſſeth; though God ſhould kill him, yet he would ſtill truſt in him.

23,4.
46,1,2.
Cor.1.9,10.
13,15.

§. Sect. 2.
God by flictions ngtheneth hope in

And thus alſo doth the Lord by our afflictions exerciſe, ſtrengthen, and increaſe our hope; for then is our ſpirituall hope in the full tide, when our worldly hopes are at their greateſt ebbe; then doe we with all feruency and patience waite vpon God for the accompliſhing of his promiſes, when wee are fruſtrated of all earthly expectation; and then we fixe this ſure anchor vpon Gods neuer decaying Truth, looking for comfort & ſtay from him alone, when our worldly hopes appeare falſe and deceiuable, leauing vs deſperately forlorne in our greateſt miſeries, when as they promiſed vnto vs greateſt ſecurity. Vnto which our ſpirituall hopes when God anſwereth according to his Word and Truth, and hath often giuen vnto vs that helpe and deliuerance which wee expected from him, then doth this experience worke hope (as the Apoſtle ſpeaketh) ſtrengthening and aſſuring vs in our expectation, that the Lord will helpe and deliuer vs, as in former times. And this hope maketh vs not aſhamed, in our greateſt miſeries; becauſe though we wait long, yet are we ſure at length to be ſatisfied in our expectation. And though helpe and deliuerance out of afflictions ſeeme as impoſſible to naturall reaſon, as for olde Sara to haue a ſonne, yet if by manifold experience wee haue found, that our hope in God did neuer faile vs, then will wee learne with Abraham, as to beleeue aboue beliefe, ſo alſo to hope aboue hope, being fully aſſured that hee who hath promiſed, is able to effect it.

5,4.
4,18,21.

§. Sect. 3.
God by flictions increaſeth and confirmeth our loue towards him.
Cant.8.6,7.

So our loue of God is exerciſed, confirmed, and increaſed by our croſſes; for this loue towards God (as the Spouſe in the Canticles ſpeaketh) is ſuch a vehement flame, and (like wild-fire) ſo vnquenchable, that much waters of affliction cannot extinguiſh it, nor whole flouds drowne it. Yea rather theſe waters of tribulation, being caſt vpon it, doe (like the water in the forge) adde much heat to this holy affection, when withal, the Lord with the breath of his Spirit doth blow vpon it. And this will manifeſtly appeare, whether wee reſpect the inſtruments of our corrections, the world, and wicked men, or the chiefe and principall cauſe, which is our gracious God, and mercifull Father. For the more the world maligneth and perſecuteth vs, the more our loue is weaned from the world, and the leſſe that we loue the world, the more is our affection inflamed towards God. And therefore the Lord being iealous of our loue, and deſiring to haue our whole hearts without corriuall, or copartner; doth ſuffer the World to vſe vs roughly and vnkindly, that our loue being withdrawne from it, may be fixed wholy vpon him. And as the louing mother when ſhee ſeeth her childe fond on her ſeruant, and to neglect her who ſo much affecteth him, doth cauſe the ſeruant when the ſonne offendeth to correct him, and to vſe him hardly, that being eſtranged in his affection from him, of whom he receiueth ſuch hard meaſure, his whole loue may be ſet on her: ſo when we dote vpon the World with exceſſiue fondneſſe, and neglect our heauenly Father, who deſerueth all our loue; he maketh it, as being his ſlaue, to correct all our faults, and to vſe vs harſhly and vnkindly, not only to bring vs vnto amendment, but alſo to weane our hearts from this pernicious loue, to the end that hee may haue the whole intereſt in our affection. Yea, our loue towards God is increaſed, not only in regard of theſe inferiour cauſes & inſtruments of our afflictions; but alſo, if lifting the eyes of our mindes higher, wee doe take knowledge of the chiefe and ſupreame cauſe of our chaſtiſements, and diſcerne that it is the hand of our heauenly Father, who vſeth theſe rods and ſcourges to correct vs for our ſinnes. For as we find by worldly experience, that cockering in the parent, breedeth contempt in the childe; and that contempt and loue doe neuer match together; whereas ſeuerer diſcipline worketh in his heart awfull reuerence, which is a true mixture of feare and loue, and maketh him to ſhew all affectionate duty to his parent, that he may obtaine his fauour; and ſo by continuall inuring of him in theſe duties of loue, it is at laſt made hearty and habituall, though happily feare and formality did firſt begin it: ſo if our heauenly Father ſhould cocker vs with pleaſure and proſperity, his kindneſſe would cauſe contempt, and contempt would like a fretting Canker eate out the heart of loue, and make vs neglect all filiall reſpect: but by keeping vs vnder ſtrict gouernment, correcting vs when wee doe amiſſe, hee worketh in our hearts an awfull reuerence, whereby wee are incited to the performance of all filiall duties, and to ſhew all loue towards him, that ſo wee may gaine ſome aſſurance of his loue and fauour towards vs, of which we make higheſt accompt, when as it is endeared by the difficulty of obtayning it. Beſides our loue towards God is much increaſed in our afflictions, when as in his ſharpeſt chaſtiſements, wee plainly diſcerne his fatherly loue and goodneſſe towards vs, and that not only in regard of their end, which is the amendement of our liues, and ſaluation of our ſoules, but alſo in reſpect of his whole courſe and carriage in the inflicting of them. For looking into our afflictions with a ſpirituall eye, we ſhall plainly diſcern Gods wiſe prouidence, both in the inflicting and diſpoſing of them. Wee ſhall perceiue how hee bridleth and curbeth in the rage of our enemies, ſo that though their malice be neuer ſo great, yet they are not ſuffered to goe beyond their tether. We ſhall ſee his fatherly loue and care whereby he moderateth and meaſureth our afflictions according to our ability to beare them, making our croſſe lighter when it is ready to oppreſſe vs, or vs ſtronger to ſuſtaine the waight. Wee ſhall ſenſibly find, how he ſupporteth vs with his might, when we are ready to faint, and lifteth vs vp againe, when wee are foiled or falne. We ſhall in our outward croſſes feele the inward comforts of his Spirit, the which are ſo pleaſant and delightfull, that they are ſufficient to ſweeten a world of miſeries, and as the Apoſtle ſaith, The more our ſufferings abound in vs, the more our conſolations ſhall abound through Chriſt; the more he reſtraineth vs from feeding vpon worldly delicates, which would glut and cloy, but neuer ſatisfie vs; the more liberall Banquet hee maketh vs of ſpirituall bleſſings, giuing vs to drinke full flagons of his loue, filling vs with inward feeling of his fauour, and with thoſe precious Cates of his ſauing graces. Finally, ſeeing our loue towards our benefactour is proportioned according to our valuation of his gifts, and ſeeing wee are brought to eſteeme of Gods benefits rather by wanting, than by enjoying them; Hereby it commeth to paſſe, that we loue the Lord much better when hee taketh his gifts from vs, than when wee doe ſecurely poſſeſſe them. For by the want of them finding their value, we then know and acknowledge how much we are bound vnto God for ſuffering vs graciouſly ſo long to enjoy them; wee come alſo by this conſideration to a ſight of the excellency of thoſe benefits, which ſtill God is content to continue vnto vs; and ſo are more louing and thankfull for the remaynder of Gods bleſſings, than when wee had all without any partition; thinking our ſelues (with the afflicted Church) more beholding vnto God, that wee are not vtterly conſumed, than wee did when wee abounded in worldly proſperity, and wanted nothing that our hearts deſired.

2.Cor.1.5.

Lament.3.22.

§.Sect. 4.
That God b our afflicti worketh and increaſeth feare in vs.

Thus alſo our feare of God receiueth much growth and ſtrength by our afflictions, which vſually is weakned and impaired with that wretchleſneſſe and ſecurity which ariſeth from long proſperity. For howſoeuer our feare of God being a filiall affection, ſhould chiefly ſpring from faith and aſſurance of his loue towards vs, and from that loue which is inflamed in our hearts towards him, by the apprehenſion of this his vndeſerued fauour, and the conſideration of thoſe innumerable benefits which as fruits of this fatherly affection, haue been communicated vnto vs; chiefly fearing to offend and diſpleaſe ſuch a gracious God whom wee ſo loue, becauſe hee ſo loueth vs: yet ſo is our Spirituall part hampered with the fleſh, and our filiall affection aſſaulted with carnall negligence and ſecurity, that (herein like vnto earthly children) wee feare our heauenly father moſt, when he holdeth in his hand the rods of correction, & when we ſee that by offending him, we make our ſelues obnoxious vnto his heauy judgements, the which wee cannot poſſibly eſcape, either by reſiſting his power or auoyding his preſence. And ſo wretchleſſe we are in all good duties, and ſo much delighted with the pleaſures of ſinne, that if we had a priuiledge of impunity, doing what wee liſt without controlement, and did not feare the ſmart of correction which followeth ſinne, as well as the diſpleaſure of our louing Father, wee would grow diſſolute in our courſes, and be hardly kept either in awe or order. And therefore the Lord, out of his mercy and loue towards vs, maketh vs to feare him for his judgements, ſeeing wee will not, as wee ought, feare him for his mercies, and to ſtand in awe of him to auoid our owne paine, when wee take no care to auoid his fatherly diſpleaſure: as we may ſee in the example of holy Dauid himſelfe, who hauing often felt the ſmart of Gods chaſtizing hand, cryeth out: My fleſh trembleth for feare of thee, and I am afraid of thy judgements. For the burnt child dreadeth the fire, and hee who hath once beene ſcorched with the heat of Gods wrath, and felt the ſmart of his diſpleaſure, will hardly euer after be allured with the ſweetneſſe of ſinne to incurre the danger thereof againe, knowing that it is a fearefull thing to fall into the hands of the liuing God. Whereas they who neuer taſted the bitterneſſe and ſowerneſſe of theſe heauy judgements, and neuer felt the ſmart of theſe whips, are ready to nibble at euery worldly baite, and to hazard the committing of any ſinne, out of wanton con-

Pſal.119.120.

Heb.10.31.

contempt and hope of impunity. For as the Wiſe man ſpeaketh, becauſe ſentence againſt an euill worke is not executed ſpeedily therefore the heart of the children of men is fully ſet in them to doe euill. To which purpoſe the Lord thus reaſoneth with his owne Church and people; Whom diddeſt thou reuerence or feare ſeeing thou haſt lied vnto me, and haſt not remembred me, nor laid it to thy heart? Is it not becauſe I hold my peace, and that of long time, therefore thou feareſt mee not? And therefore ſeeing afflictions worke in vs the feare of God, whereby we are incited to all good duties, and reſtrained from ſinne, which would in this life fill our conſciences with horrour and terrour of Gods wrath, and caſt vs into eternall condemnation in the life to come; great cauſe haue we to kiſſe our earthly croſſes with comfort and contentment; ſeeing they doe not ſo much crucifie vs as our ſins, by the death of the fleſh preſerue vs from death euerlaſting, and by pricking vs in the ſides haſten our ſpeed in the way of righteouſneſſe and holines, which at laſt will bring vs to endles joy, & heauenly happines.

8.11.
57.11.
111.10.

Sect. 5.
at God by ictions worth and in-eaſeth in vs
e grace of e humility.

Finally, the Lord vſeth theſe afflictions, as a notable meanes to worke and increaſe in vs that excellent grace of humility, bringing vs thereby to a ſight and ſenſe of our own vileneſſe and vnworthineſſe to a true acknowledgement of our infirmities, weakneſſe, and great inſufficiency, and to a voluntary ſubjection and ſubmiſſion of our wils in all things to the good will and pleaſure of God. For whereas in the time of proſperity we are ſo blinded with natural pride and ſelfe-loue, that we neuer come to a cleere knowledge of our ſelues, nor to a true valuation of our own gifts and good parts; but are puffed vp with ſelfe-conceit, hauing a great opinion of our owne excellency, ſtrength and abilities; imagining that though God ſhould leaue vs to our ſelues, we could ſtand in our own might, reſiſt any tentation, and encounter and ouercome any enemy; when God bringeth vs into trouble and affliction, and exerciſeth vs with thoſe vſuall trials of ſickneſſe, pouerty, diſgrace or loſſe of our neereſt and deereſt friends; then are we by them brought to a ſight of our own frailty and infirmity, and by this experience find, how vnable we are by our owne ſtrength to indure the weakeſt triall, or to get the vpper hand ouer the leaſt tentation. And then caſting from vs our vain ſelfe-confidence, we implore the Lords aſſiſtance, and truſt wholly in the power of his might, through which obtaining victorie, we diſclaim all praiſe as not due vnto vs, and returne it vnto God to whom of right it appertaineth, ſaying with the Church, not vnto vs O Lord, not vnto vs, but vnto thy name giue the glory. And whereas in the time of our proſperity, we would haue all the glory our ſelues, and will ſcarce admit the Lord to be a ſharer with vs; In our afflictions we ſee and acknowledge that nothing belongeth vnto vs but ſhame and confuſion of face, and whatſoeuer is praiſeworthy in vs, we aſcribe it wholly vnto the Lord, as vnto the ſole author and fountaine of all our good. Finally whereas in our proſperity we grow ſo wilful and ſtubborne, that wee cannot with meekneſſe and patience, ſubmit our will to the wil of God, but rather wiſh that ours, than his, ſhould be fulfilled; and wax through pride and inſolency ſo impatient, that we ſtorme and rage, when we are but touched with any ſleight affliction; as though we thought that ſome wrong and iniury were offered vs by God, when we, who haue in our owne conceit deſerued ſo well, are thus put to ſuffer this ſmart and miſery: this fire of affliction melteth and ſoftneth our hard and ſtubborne hearts, making them tender and plyable vnto the good will & pleaſure of Almighty God, and theſe chaſtiſements and corrections, bringing vs to a ſight and ſenſe of our manifold and grieuous ſins, doe cauſe vs to judge and condemne our ſelues as worthy of farre greater puniſhments, and then doe wee not only with meeknes and patience ſuffer theſe fatherly corrections, but are ready to acknowledge, that it is the wonderfull mercy of the Lord that wee are not vtterly conſumed. And as cockered children doe ſtruggle and ſtriue with their parents, when they goe about to chaſtiſe them for their faults, and with great impatiency roare and cry out, when they feele the ſmart of the firſt ſtripes; but when they ſee them reſolued to continue and redouble their blowes, til they haue broken them of their ſtubborneſſe, they at laſt become as milde as Lambes, and with all meekneſſe and humility ſubmit themſelues to their Parents pleaſure: ſo when our heauenly Father firſt taketh vs in hand after wee haue beene long cockered in plenty and proſperity, and beginneth to correct vs for our ſins; wee murmur and repine, ſtruggle and ſtriue with great impatiency and rebellion againſt his Will and Prouidence, but when he ſtill beateth vs with theſe rods, and either continueth or increaſeth our afflictions, & addeth one croſſe vnto another, then our proud and ſturdy ſtomacks being maſtered, wee humble our ſelues vnder his holy hand, and indure whatſoeuer correction he is pleaſed to inflict with all meekneſſe and patience. And this is a principall end why the Lord afflicteth vs, that he may abate our pride, tame our vnrulineſſe, and worke in vs that excellent vertue of humility. For ſo himſelfe ſaith, that hee afflicted his people for the ſpace of forty yeeres in the Wildernes, that he might humble and proone them; And the Apoſtle Paul affirmeth of himſelfe, that God gaue him that pricke in his fleſh, and the meſſenger of Satan to buffet him, that hee might not be 4.6.

115.1.
9.7.
Deut. 8. 2.
2. Cor. 12.7.

exalted aboue meaſure with the multitude of reuelations. The which his end he powerfully effecteth, as we may ſee by many examples. Thus Dauid in his greateſt afflictions humbleth himſelfe before God, ſaying, Here am I, let him doe to me as ſeemeth good in his eyes. So Rehoboam, who, whileſt he enjoyed peace and proſperity, was ſo proud and inſolent; when he was brought into the ſtraits of affliction by reaſon that the King of Egypt made Warre againſt him, humbled himſelfe before the Lord, acknowledging that the Lord was iuſt. And Nebuchadnezzar who in pride of heart had ſo glorioully boaſted of his might and majeſty, being grieuouſly afflicted humbleth himſelfe and giueth vnto God all prayſe and glory. Yea, wicked Manaſſes himſelfe, who had raged againſt God and his Saints, with wonderfull inſolency, when hee was led captiue by his enemies in fetters and chaines, then was this wild Colt and ſauage Lion broken and tamed, and hee humbled himſelfe greatly before the Lord his God. Yea, euen where there hath beene no place for true humility in the reprobate hearts of wicked men; afflictions haue wrought ſo powerfully in them, that they haue beene brought hereby to an outward and hypocriticall humiliation, as we may ſee in the example of Pharaoh and Ahab, who in their afflictions confeſſed their ſinne and humbled themſelues before the Lord. And thus it appeareth that the Lord by affliction doth powerfully pull downe our pride, and worketh and increaſeth in our hearts that excellent grace of humility, which being the foundation and ground of other vertues, doth, the deeper it is laid in our hearts, make the building of ſpirituall grace ſo much the more firme and ſtrong, that the tempeſts of tentation cannot ouerthrow it. Of which the afflicted Church hauing good experience, profeſſeth it to be good for a man to beare the yoke of affliction euen in his youth. Seeing hee ſitteth meekly alone and keepeth ſilence, becauſe he hath borne it vpon him. He putteth his mouth in the duſt if there may be hope. He giueth his cheeke to him that ſmiteth him, and is filled full with reproach. The conſideration whereof ſhould moue vs to beare all our afflictions with patience and comfort, ſeeing we receiue this ſingular fruit by them, and haue this excellent grace of humility, which is the ornament that graceth all our other graces in the ſight of God and men, both begun and alſo continued and increaſed in vs; and that damnable ſinne of pride mortified and ſubdued, which is ſo odious and abominable in the ſight of God, that hee loatheth his owne gifts which are tainted and ſtained with it; and chooſeth rather to ſuffer his deereſt children to fall into other grieuous ſinnes, that in the ſight of them they may be humbled, than indure that pride ſhould harbour in them; becauſe their other ſinnes doe not ſo much diſhonour God, nor hinder the ſaluation of their ſoules, as this ſinne of pride, if it were ſuffered to raigne in them in its full ſtrength. In which reſpect one ſaith; I dare be bold to affirme, that it is profitable for the proud to fall into ſome open and manifeſt ſinne, that hereby they may diſpleaſe themſelues, who formerly ſinned by too much pleaſing: So Peters diſpleaſure, was more wholeſome to his ſoule when hee wept and wayled, than his pleaſing of himſelfe when he preſumed.

2.Sam.15.26.

2.Chro.12,6.

Dan.4.27.31.

2.Chro.33.12.

Exod.10.16.
1.Kin.21.27.

Lamen.3:28,
29.30.

Auguſt. de ci-uit. dei lib. 14.

CHAP. XXIII.

That God by our afflictions worketh and increaſeth in vs repentance and new obedience.

AND thus haue I ſhewed that afflictions are vſed by God as a notable meanes to worke in our minds and hearts all ſanctifying and ſauing graces: It now followeth to declare how the fruits of theſe graces, repentance and new obedience, are by theſe fatherly corrections furthered and increaſed. For as afflictions doe notably helpe forward our effectuall calling and firſt conuerſion vnto God, ſo do they much further our repentance, & prouoke vs continually to renew the act thereof after our many relapſes and daily ſlips into ſin. And when hauing reſolued to walke in the way of holineſſe and righteouſneſſe towards our heauenly home, wee are in our paſſage allured to turne out of the right path into the by-wayes of ſin and wickeneſſe, by hauing the baites of worldly vanities ſet before vs; the Lord caſteth into our way theſe Thornes and Bryars of affliction and tribulation, making thereby our wandring and digreſſing ſo diſtaſtfull and vnpleaſant, that we are neuer at reſt vntill we be returned by repentance into the right way againe. So one ſaith that God ſtriketh into the heart of man terrour and feare, that hee may weane and with-draw it from the loue of the World, and pricketh him with tribulations, that hee may not loue his way better than the end of his journy, nor his pilgrimage better than his Country. For his fatherly chaſtiſements produce ſorrow and compunction, bring into vs feare and contrition, draw out of vs infirmity and infection, and cauſe vnto vs ſtrength and recouery of our health. But this will better appeare if wee particularly ſhew how affliction furthereth vs in all the duties and actions which are performed by vs in the practice of repentance; for firſt, when God correcteth vs, wee looke backe vnto our former courſes, and conſider and examine our ſelues what ſins wee haue committed,

§. Sect. 1.
That by afflictions we com to examine our waies, to ſee our ſinnes and to bewail them with bitter griefe.

Tua enim pa-terna tribulati producit mœ rem & compunctionem, in ducit timorem & contritionem educit langurem & infecti onem, adducit vigorem & c rationem.
Idiota inter thodoxogr. d patient. veræ contempl.c. 6

mitted, which haue moued the Lord to inflict vpon vs theſe judgements and chaſtiſements; and by this examination we come to a ſight and ſenſe of ſin, and to an humble acknowledgement, that we ſuffer nothing from God, but that which our ſin hath juſtly deſerued. An example whereof we haue in Iacobs ſonnes, who by their troubles and affliction were brought to a ſight and feeling of that grieuous crime, of betraying and ſelling their brother Ioſeph. Wee haue verily ſinned (ſay they) againſt our brother, in that we ſaw the anguiſh of his ſoule, when he beſought vs, and we would not heare him: therefore is this trouble come vpon vs. And becauſe, pride, ſelfe-loue, and liking of our moſt eſteemed ſinnes, doth commonly dazle our ſight and make vs euen ſtarke blinde in this ſearch and diſquiſition; therefore doth the Lord oftentimes obſerue (as hath beene ſhewed) an analogy, proportion and ſimilitude, between the quality of the ſinne and the correction which he inflicteth for it; and ſo leadeth vs, (as it were) by the hand, that we may come to find and feele it by his guidance and direction. An example whereof we haue in Dauid, whoſe ſinne of murther and adultery, was corrected with the Rape of his Daughter and Concubines, and the murther of his children and ſubjects by one another. Secondly, when by affliction we are wakened out of our ſecurity, brought to looke backe and to ſay, What haue I done; and when by ſearching and examining our owne conſciences we ſee and acknowledge, how haynouſly we haue offended God, and feele the burthen and ſmart of our ſin pinching & oppreſſing vs both at once, then are wee hereby moued to bitter griefe and hearty ſorrow, becauſe wee haue offended our gracious Father, and forced him by our wickedneſſe to proceed in theſe ſeuere courſes for our correction and reformation. For when our hearts are ſo hard that ſinne alone will not worke in them ſorrow and remorſe, afflictions and ſenſe of ſmart being added to them as a double weight, doe bruiſe and preſſe out of them ſighes and groanes: and this rod of correction beating vpon theſe hard Rockes, doth cauſe them to yeeld ſtreames of teares, and (as it were) to waſh and bath our ſinfull ſoules in the waters of true repentance. For howſoeuer in Gods deareſt children griefe for the afflictions themſelues which they ſuffer, hath commonly the firſt place, yet this ſorrow for ſmart, doth alwayes end in ſorrow for ſinne, and when correction with ſenſe of paine hath made the heart ſoft and tender, and hath filled (as it were) the cyſternes of the eyes with plenty of water; then grace commeth and altereth the vſe, and whereas it was prouided by nature for the deploring of our affliction, it is now imployed and powred out by Grace for the bewayling of our ſinnes, which are the deſeruing cauſe of all our ſmart and miſery.

42.21

§. Sect. 2.
That by afflictions wee are moued to hate our ſinnes, to confeſſe them vnto God, to flee & forſake them, and to ſerue the Lord in the duties of holineſſe & righteouſneſſe.

Thus alſo doth the Lord by our afflictions worke in vs a true hatred of ſin; and whereas it is ſo ſweet to corrupted nature, that we are ready (as licorous children doe ſugar) to keepe it vnder our tongue; yet when it is imbittered with this gall of afflictions, wee ſpit it out like a loathſome medicine, and begin to abhorre that before-liked meat, when ſuch vnpleaſant ſawce is mingled with it. By them likewiſe are wee brought to an humble confeſſion of ſinne vnto God whom wee haue offended, and to an earneſt deſire of pardon and forgiueneſſe, that ſo being freed of our ſinnes, we may alſo be eaſed of our ſmart. And thus Dauid, when the hand of God was heauy vpon him day and night, and his moyſture thereby turned into the drought of Summer; layd open his ſins before the Lord by humble confeſſion, and ſpread in his ſight all his bonds of debt, that hauing his ſins pardoned and bonds cancelled, he might be deliuered from that affliction and correction which did accompany them. Then (ſaith he) I acknowledged my ſin vnto thee, neither hid I mine iniquity; for I thought I will confeſſe againſt my ſelfe my wickednes, and thou forgaueſt the puniſhment of my ſinne. And furthermore hauing taſted and felt the bitternes & ſmart of theſe loathſome ſawces and ſharpe whips, we flee ſinne with all watchfull care for the time to come, which (as we haue found by experience) hath made vs obnoxious to them, and heedfully auoyd the committing of any wickedneſſe leaſt we thereby diſpleaſing againe our heauenly Father, doe moue him to reſume into his hands theſe rods of chaſtizement and to correct our new ſinnes with new afflictions, which in all likelihood will be more ſharpe and ſeuere, than thoſe which wee ſuffered in time paſt, becauſe we haue no better profited by our former corrections. And this benefit of afflictions moouing vs to flee and forſake ſinne, is implyed in that excellent prayer made by Salomon: When Heauen (ſaith he) ſhall be ſhut vp, and there ſhall be no raine, becauſe they haue ſinned againſt thee; and ſhall pray in this place and confeſſe thy Name, and turne from their ſinne when thou doeſt afflict them; then heare thou in Heauen and pardon the ſinne of thy ſeruants, &c. Neither doe afflictions ſerue onely as a meanes to make vs ſee, bewayle, confeſſe, hate and forſake our ſins, but alſo doe incite and prouoke vs to ſerue the Lord in all holy and Chriſtian duties which reſpect Him, our Neighbours, or our ſelues; nor are they behoouefull alone for the mortifying of our ſins, but alſo for the quickning and inabling vs to performe all the workes of holineſſe and righteouſneſſe which God in his Law requireth of vs. For though our hearts (through the gift and grace of God) are become good ground, and fit to receiue and retaine the ſeed of Gods Word, yet are they made much more fruitfull by the Winter of affliction, and by hauing the cold Snow of trouble and miſery lying vpon them. Though wee are already inflamed with a true zeale of Gods glory, yet doth this heauenly fire burne much more feruently when the wind of tribulation doth blow vpon it: though for the preſent it ſeemeth to bee kept downe and hindred from burning by theſe tempeſtuous blaſts. And this the Apoſtle plainly expreſſeth: No chaſtiſing (ſaith he) for the preſent ſeemeth to be ioyous but grieuous; yet afterward it bringeth the quiet fruit of righteouſneſſe vnto them which are thereby exerciſed. To which purpoſe another ſaith, that the ſweeteſt ſhowers doe not ſo cauſe the ſeed to bud and grow; as this ſhower of teares doth make the ſeed of godlineſſe to ſprout and ſpring. For when the ſoule is waſhed and the minde watered with theſe teares of repentance, the bud and branch of wholeſome Doctrine within a while ſpringeth and ſhooteth vp. The conſideration whereof ſhould much comfort vs in all our afflictions, ſeeing this profitable fruit of repentance ariſeth from them; for thrice happy are thoſe blowes and ſtripes which by making the body to ſmart for the preſent, doe inflict mortall wounds into our killing ſinnes, and preſerue both body and ſoule from theſe deadly ſtings, which otherwiſe would wound them vnto death euerlaſting. Moſt bleſſed vnto vs are theſe rods and whips which by cauſing the skin to ſmart, doe cure thoſe deadly wounds in our hearts and ſoules; and by vexing vs with their ſtripes, doe keepe vs from vexing God with our ſinnes. And moſt happy may wee thinke our ſelues when the Lord vſeth theſe afflictions, as ſpurs and goades in our ſides to pricke vs forward in the way of holineſſe and righteouſneſſe, when in our ſelues we are drowſie, dull and dead, vnto all good actions; and as cords to draw vs on in holy and Chriſtian duties, when in our owne diſpoſition we are backward and ſluggiſh.

Pſal.32.4,5.

1.King.8.35,36

Heb. 12. 11.

Non ſic ſemina delatus imber germinare & creſcere facit, vt pietatis ſemen excitat & vernare facit ex lacrymis ruens imber. &c.] Chryſoſt. ad pop. Antioch. Homil. 4. Tom. 5.

§. Sect. 3. That God by afflictions worketh and increaſeth in vs obedience to his will. Heb. 12. 11.

And thus it appeareth that by afflictions our repentance is daily renewed and increaſed: The like may be ſaid of our new obedience, and that whether wee vnderſtand that actiue obedience, whereby we ſtriue and indeuour to doe the will of God; or that paſſiue obedience, by which wee are content with meekneſſe and patience, that Gods Will may be done in vs. Both which the holy Apoſtle propoundeth vnto vs in our onely patterne and precedent Ieſus Chriſt, whoſe example he exhorteth vs to follow, both in willing and meeke ſuffering that which our heauenly Father inflicteth on vs, in ceaſing from ſinne, and in liuing for the time to come, not after the luſts of men, but after the Will of God. Concerning the former wee are to know, that whereas wee like pampered or reſty Horſes, are ready either to goe out of the way of righteouſneſſe, or elſe to ſtand ſtill, or goe ſlowly forward; the Lord vſeth afflictiōs as a ſtaffe to beat vs into the vvay, and to make vs to returne into our right courſe, from vvhich we haue digreſſed; and and alſo as a ſpur or goade to pricke vs on vvhen vve make a ſtand, or but ſmall haſte in going on in this ſpirituall journey. And whereas like children we caſt the Commandements of our heauenly Father behind our backes, vvhen vvee are too much cockered: and grow careleſſe and negligent in all good duties vvhich vvee owe vnto him, being left to our owne liberty; when he ſtrictly calleth vs to account, and finding vs idle and ſlothfull, doth ſharply chaſtiſe vs for our neglect of that duty vvhich hee hath required; then doe vvee vvith all care and diligence informe our ſelues in his holy Will, treaſure vp his Commandements in our hearts and memory, and vvith all readineſſe put in practice, as occaſion ſerueth, vvhatſoeuer duty is enjoyned vnto vs. So that this ſweet incenſe of our new obedience doth then ſend forth the moſt delightfull odour, vvhen as it is offered vnto God by the fire of affliction: And as the ſweeteſt Roſe doth ſpring out from among the ſharpeſt prickles, ſo the duties of obedience which wee owe vnto God, doe then appeare in their chiefe beauty and brauery; and yeeld the moſt ſweet and pleaſing ſent, vvhen they grovv and ſprout vp from among theſe prickles and bryars of affliction and tribulation. And this the Apoſtle plainly teſtifieth, namely that though afflictions in themſelues are vnpleaſant and grieuous, yet being watered with the dew of Gods grace, they bring forth the quiet fruit of righteouſneſſe vnto them that are thereby exerciſed. So the Prophet telleth vs, that ſeeing Gods iudgements are in the earth, the inhabitants of the world ſhall learne righteouſneſſe. Yea, ſo neceſſary are theſe afflictions for the keeping of vs in the right way, and the furthering of our fruitfulneſſe in holy duties, that when wee are freed and ſecured from them, wee are ready to erre out of the path of Gods precepts, (as we may ſee in the example of Dauid, who out of his owne experience ſaith; before I was afflicted I went aſtray; but now I keepe thy Word) yea, and to become barren and vnprofitable, not yeelding any ſtore of theſe fruits of obedience; whereas when wee are continually vnder the rod, and feele the ſmart of our ſloath and negligence; then doe wee heedfully remember what God requireth, and dare not falter and faile in the performance of our duty, as we may ſee in the example of the afflicted Church, who ſaith; All this is come vpon vs, yet doe wee not forget thee, nei-

1 Pet. 4. 1. 2.

Heb. 12. 11. Eſa. 26. 9. Pſal. 119. 67. Minus pii viuis, ſi minus perſecutionem pertuleris. Greg. epiſt. 6. cap. 191.

Pſa. 44. 17. 18. Vt terra niſi culta fuerit licet fertilis ſit, tamen non ſolum fructum hominibus denegat, ſed è contrario generat ſpinas.

neither deale wee falſly concerning thy couenant: Our heart is not turned backe neither our ſteps gone out of thy path, &c. In which reſpect we are fitly compared vnto Walnut-trees, which are ſo much the more fruitfull, by how much they are the more beaten; or vnto arable grounds, which bring forth no good graine but weeds and thiſtles, briars and thornes, vnleſſe they bee broken and torne in ſunder with the plow and Harrow.

s inſtet niſi
ris tentatiodum fuerit ſolatus aff-bus non ſolum ſe non proſiſed aliquo-in ipſum currit. Baſil. tract. de
ſol. in ad-
ſ.

§. Sect. 4.
The former point illuſtrated by ſimilitudes and examples.

Wee are indeed a fruitfull vineyard of Gods owne planting, and wee who were wild branches barren of all good fruit of holineſſe and righteouſneſſe, are through Gods infinite mercy and loue ingrafted into the true Vine Ieſus Chriſt, from whome receiuing all our life and ſappe, wee are inabled to bring forth the pleaſant grapes of new obedience; but yet if wee were let alone, and ſuffered to runne out with vncontrouled liberty wee would like the fruitfull Vine, which is neuer pruned, returne to our old naturall wildneſſe, and bring forth no other fruit, than thoſe ſowre grapes of iniquity and ſinne. And therefore our heauenly vintager for his owne glory and our good cutteth away the ſuperfluities of our licencious liberty, and pruneth vs with this pruning knife of trouble and afflictions, that being kept ſhort in our worldly and carnall deſires, wee may become more fruitfull in all holy duties. So our Sauiour ſaith; I am the true vine, and my father is an husbandman. Euery branch that beareth not fruit in mee, he taketh away: and euery one that beareth fruit he purgeth it, that it may bring forth more fruit. Wee are fruitfull trees of righteouſneſſe planted by God himſelfe; but yet that wee may continue in this good eſtate, wee had great neede to bee waſhed with the boyſterous ſtormes of tribulation, and to be nipped with the pinching froſts of trouble and affliction, that ſo thoſe cankers and caterpillers of pride, forgetfulneſſe of God, and carnall ſecurity which the ſummer of proſperity and wretchleſſe eaſe doe breed in vs may be killed and deſtroyed; as alſo that wee may be hindred from ſending forth the vnprofitable ſhutes of will-worſhip and ſuperſtition, through the vnſeaſonable warmth of prepoſterous zeale; which, if they were not nipped in with the feare of God ariſing from his correction, and making vs carefull, that wee offer nothing vnto him, but that pleaſing ſeruice which hee hath required; wee ſhould ſpend our whole ſtrength in bringing forth theſe fruits of our owne inuentions, and be vtterly barren and bare of thoſe timely ripe fruits of new obedience. Wee are through the election of grace Gods faithfull ſeruants, but yet not thorowly purged from our ſeruile diſpoſition; for the more bountifull our maſter is, the ſooner we forget him; the more richly hee rewardeth vs, the more negligent wee are in performing of our duty; and the more liberally wee are vſed, the more licentious we wax, growing vnto ſuch pride and inſolence, that whatſoeuer wee luſt after, wee thinke to bee lawfull, and make our will the rule of all our actions: and therefore we force our Lord and maſter to alter his courſe, to with-draw his wages of worldly bleſſings, to handle vs roughly, and to keepe vs vnder ſeuere diſcipline, correcting our negligence, and forcing vs to the performance of our duties with chaſtiſements and afflictions. Which meanes if they be not powerfull enough to worke in vs this reformation, then doth he oftentimes turne vs out of his outward gouernment and protection, and ſuffereth our enemies to preuaile againſt vs, and to bring vs into their ſlauery, that finding the difference of theſe two ſeruices, and growing weary of this preſent bondage; wee may more earneſtly deſire to bee re-entertayned by our old maſter, and being admitted may be more carefull and diligent in the performance of our duty. And thus the Lord dealt with the Iſraelites; for though they had neglected his ſeruice, and ſinned againſt him, yet he ſaith becauſe they had humbled themſelues hee would not deſtroy them, but would ſend them ſhortly helpe and deliuerance; Neuertheleſſe they ſhould for a time become the ſeruants of Shiſhak that they might know the difference betweene the ſeruice of the Lord and the ſeruice of the kingdomes of the Earth.

ſ.15.2.

re grafructu, acerbifrigoris vi-tia repri-
tur. Hie-
ron. epiſt.
l ægrotum
ium. tom. 4

2.*Chro.*12.8.

§. Sect. 5.
That theſe fruits of new obedience ſpringing from afflictions, ſhould moue vs to beare them with patience and comfort.

Seeing therefore the Lord by our afflictions doth not intend our hurt, but out of his meere loue, and mercy vſeth them as a notable meanes to make vs more fruitfull in all holy and Chriſtian duties, which ſhall hereafter be crowned with all glory and felicity; let the expectation of this rich harueſt of holineſſe and happineſſe repleniſh our hearts with patience, comfort and ſpirituall reioycing in the winter of afflictions, ſeeing there is no proportion betweene our paine and the profit which it bringeth. Wee are trees of righteouſneſſe which Gods right hand hath planted, let vs not therefore feare to bee cut and pruned with troubles and afflictions, ſeeing God thus purgeth and pareth away our ſuperfluous branches that we may bring forth more fruit, as our Sauiour teacheth vs. Yea rather wee had great cauſe of feare, if wee were exempted from theſe calamities, for as that is a fruitleſſe tree which is ſuffered to grow wild and vntouched, and is neuer beaten with poles nor ſhaken with mens hands, nor hit nor hurt with any ſtones or cudgels; which is therefore daily in danger to be cut downe and caſt into the fire, becauſe it doth no good by ſtanding and growing: ſo it is a ſigne that wee are fruitleſſe trees ſtill growing in the wild wood of the world, which muſt one day be cut downe and caſt into euerlaſting fire; if our heauenly husbandman taketh no care to purge and prune vs with croſſes and afflictions, and if no blowes or ſtrokes of aduerſity and tribulation doe light vpon vs, who haue farre greater cauſe of ſorrowing in our expectation of our future burning, than of rejoycing in our preſent flouriſhing. Wee are vines of Gods owne ſetting, whoſe glory and excellency conſiſteth not in the broadneſſe and beauty of our leaues, nor in the handſomneſſe and ſtraightneſſe of our body and branches; but onely in our fruitfulneſſe, whereby wee bring forth great plenty of the ripe and ſweete grapes of holineſſe and righteouſneſſe; and therefore when we haue the beauty and brauery of our outward eſtate taken from vs, and haue theſe leaues of earthly vanities blowne away with the winds of aduerſity, and our ſuperfluous ſtemmes of worldly ſubſtance pruned and plucked from vs in this winter of affliction, there is no cauſe of griefe and mourning, ſeeing our chiefeſt excellency is not hereby impaired, yea rather becauſe it is much aduanced, in that wee are made more fruitfull, by how much the more we are by theſe afflictions pruned from our ſuperfluities, this may juſtly increaſe our ioy and comfort.

Eſa,61.3.

*Ioh.*15.2.

§. Sect. 6. That God by afflictions maketh vs more deuout and zealous in the duties of his ſeruice.

But for the better clearing of the former point, let vs deſcend vnto ſome particulars, and inſiſt in ſome ſpeciall fruits of this new obedience. And to this end let vs conſider, that by theſe our afflictions wee are made much more deuout; diligent and zealous in performing of all holy and Chriſtian duties of Gods ſeruice, than when wee flouriſh in proſperity; the which is ſo euident that it needeth no other proofe or witneſſe than common experience in others, and the teſtimony which euery mans conſcience is ready to giue vnto this truth by that which he findeth in himſelfe. For who ſeeth not that when we abound with earthly bleſſings wee grow forgetfull of God, and negligent in his ſeruice, either not performing it at all, or but with great coldneſſe and drowſineſſe, in meere formality and hypocriſie, becauſe wee ſeeme then to ſtand in our owne ſtrength, and to bee ſo well ſtored with our owne prouiſion, that wee neede not his helpe for our preſeruation and defence? whereas when wee are brought into the ſtreights of afflictions, and are diſpoiled of all our worldly ſuccour; when we feele the ſmart of pouerty, ſickneſſe, impriſonment, infamy; and haue no meanes of our owne whereby wee may bee deliuered; when wee are not only ſenſible of preſent paine, but apprehend future dangers, and vnto our priuate euils, expect, that God will for our ſinnes adde thoſe publicke miſeries of plague, famine, warre and deſolation: then are wee awakened out of our drowſie lethargie of ſecurity, ſhake off our ſloth and negligence, and finding that all our helpe is in the Lord both for deliuerance from preſent ſmart, and preſeruation from approaching calamities, we thinke how we may appeaſe his anger; and make him propitious, that together with his wrath the judgements which wee feele or feare may bee remoued from vs. And then with all diligence and deuotion wee worſhip and ſerue the Lord not for forme & faſhion, but with all intention of mind and feruency of zeale, that ſo our ſeruice may bee pleaſing and acceptable in his ſight. The which great difference in mens cariage and behauiour will euidently appeare, if wee will but compare flouriſhing courtiers with poore cotagers; the mariners which are in a dangerous ſtorme, with thoſe which are arriued in the ſafe hauen; thoſe which are ſicke, weake and in expectation of death, with thoſe who are luſty, healthy and in their full ſtrength; priſons, with theaters; burialls with banquets; and thoſe who are inuaded by their enemies and in danger of vtter deſolation, with thoſe who inuade them and haue got the victory. For as among the one ſort a man ſhall ſeldome obſerue any example of religion, piety and the true feare of God, but contrariwiſe contempt and neglect of all the duties of Gods ſeruice, blaſphemous ſwearing, impious curſing, prophanation of Gods ſabbaths, wantonneſſe, ribaldry and vnchaſt dalliance, lying, diſſembling, treachery and ſupplanting one another, gaming, reuelling, drinking, gormandiſing and ſuch like fruits of darkeneſſe: ſo among the other wee ſhall finde, that the fire of affliction hath inflamed the heat of their deuotion, making them to breake off their ſinnes by vnfained repentence, and to turne vnto the Lord with an earneſt deſire and indeauour to performe all the duties of his worſhip and ſeruice, in that manner and meaſure which he requireth; then they humble themſelues before God in faſting and prayer, acknowledging their impotency and inſufficiency to defend or deliuer themſelues, and vnworthineſſe to receiue any helpe and comfort from God. And yet being incouraged by his gracious promiſes, and the experience of his loue and mercy; they flee vnto him as their onely refuge, protectour and defender, and place all their hope and affiance in his alone helpe and almighty aſſiſtance. Then they receiue his word with feare and trembling, and withall reuerence and attention harken vnto it, that their ſinnes which haue brought them into all their miſeries, may bee mortifyed and ſlaughtered by the ſword of the ſpirit: that they may bee informed in the knowledge of Gods will, and alſo by efeffectuall reaſons and powerfull exhortations, may be perſwaded and pricked forward to the performance and practice of that which they learne and know, to the end that by this meanes they may be deliuered from their preſent afflictions vpon their reformation and amendment, and may not be indangered to ſuffer the like or greater miſeries for the time to come; that they may haue their patience confirmed and encreaſed with ſuch arguments and reaſons as the Word of God plentifully yeeldeth, which will much leſſen their miſeries and make the waight of all their afflictions much more light and eaſie to bee borne. Finally being forſaken of worldly comforts, they doe with ſo much the more diligence harken vnto the word of God, that thereby they may repleniſh their ſoules with ſpirituall conſolations ariſing from the feeling of Gods loue, and fauour towards them in this their afflicted eſtate, and the aſſurance of future happineſſe in the life to come. For as thoſe who flouriſh in worldly proſperity, doe with Ahab refuſe to heare the word of the Lord, becauſe it propheſieth no good vnto them, but telleth them that they haue their portion in this life: and that after the fruition of their worldly ioyes, they muſt come into iudgement, and render a reckoning of their abuſed bleſſings and miſpent talents; ſo they who are in affliction doe with hungring appetite feed vpon this foode of their ſoules, and with reuerent and chearefull attention liſten vnto this heauenly ambaſſage, becauſe it aſſureth them, that if they make an holy vſe of theſe fatherly corrections, they ſhall haue heauenly mirth, after their earthly mourning, laughter and reioycing, after their wailing and weeping, a moſt delightfull country and glorious kingdome, after their painefull pilgrimage and weary iorney; and that theſe light and momentany afflictions, ſhall cauſe vnto them a far moſt excellent and eternall waight of glory.

uk.16.25.
al.17.14.

uk.6.21.
Cor.4.17.

Sect.7.
he God by fflictions ma-keth vs to erforme vnto im the duty of prayer.

But aboue all other parts of Gods worſhip and ſeruice, afflictions and miſeries doe make vs moſt frequent and feruent, diligent and zealous in powring forth our prayers and ſupplications vnto God. For whereas in our proſperity we either vtterly neglect this duty, or performe it careleſly and ſlothfully, more for cuſtome than conſcience ſake, and for forme and faſhion, rather than out of any reſpect of duty which wee owe vnto God, or of any neede which wee thinke we haue of his helpe: when we are brought into miſeries and calamities, and haue a ſenſe and feeling of our owne wants, and of the great need which wee haue of Gods aſſiſtance, then doe we flee vnto him by earneſt prayer, crauing his aide and helpe for the ſupplying of our wants, eaſe of our griefes, or protection from dangers. And as the Child, fearing nothing, is ſo fond of his play that he ſtrayeth and wandreth from his mother, not ſo much as thinking of her; but if he bee ſcared or frighted with the ſight or apprehenſion of ſome apparant or approaching danger, doth preſently runne vnto her, caſt himſelfe into her armes and cry out to bee ſaued and ſhielded by her: ſo we ſecurely enjoying the childiſh ſports of worldly proſperity, doe ſo fondly dote on them that wee ſcarce thinke of our heauenly Father, but when perils and dangers approach, and are ready to ſeiſe vpon vs, then doe we flee vnto him, and caſt our ſelues into the armes of his prouidence, and protection, crying and calling vnto him by earneſt prayer, for helpe and deliuerance in this our extremity and diſtreſſe. The truth whereof will more manifeſtly appeare, if wee conſider the examples of the faithfull in former times, who being in affliction haue ſhewed themſelues forward in performance of this duty; thus Hezechias being beſieged by the hoaſt of Senacherib flieth vnto God as his only aide by effectuall prayer, wheras being deliuered in the time of his proſperity, he was ready to glory in his owne prouiſion of riches, and to rely too much vpon his treaſures. So what excellent prayers and Pſalmes did holy Dauid make in the time of his afflictions, flying vnto the Lord, as vnto his onely rocke and refuge, ſhield and ſtrength; but being poſſeſſed of his kingdome, and become famous through many victories, glorying in his power, and relying too much vpon his owne forces, he giueth commandement to number the people. Yea euen Manaſſes himſelfe whoſe heart was full of idolatry, his mouth with blaſphemies, and hands with blood, whileſt hee flouriſhed in his kingdome; when he was led captiue by his enemies, and faſt bound in fetters and chaines, powred forth effectuall prayers vnto the Lord his God. Neither was this the practice of ſome priuate men onely, but euen of the whole people and Church of God; for though in their proſperity (as the Lord himſelfe obſerueth) they turned their backe vnto him and not their face, yet in the time of their trouble they ſay; ariſe and helpe vs. So the Prophet Eſay ſaith; Lord in trouble they haue viſited thee, they haue powred out a prayer when thy chaſtning was vpon them. And the Pſalmiſt ſpeaketh to the ſame purpoſe, when hee ſlew them (ſaith hee) they ſought him, and they returned and ſought God earely. Yea ſpeaking of the manifold kinds of miſerie wherewith the faithfull are exerciſed, hee maketh this the foote of his ſong: then they cryed vnto the Lord in their trouble, and he deliuered them out of their diſtreſſe. And this euery man may find verified in his owne experience, for ſuch is our corruption, that whileſt we abound with

Eſa.37.1.2.3.

Pſal.18.1.2.

2.Sam.24.
2.Chro.33.12.

Ier.2.27.

Eſa.26.16.

Pſal.78.34.

Pſal.81.7.& 107.6,&c.

with worldly bleſſings, as we ſet our hearts vpon them by louing them aboue meaſure, ſo alſo in truſting and relying vpon them without reaſon; and howſoeuer they are but vaine hopes and helpes to ſaue and deliuer vs, yet when we may haue free recourſe vnto them, wee ſeldome and ſlackly flie vnto the Lord for aide and ſuccour. But when he taketh from vs theſe earthly idols, and emptieth our hearts of all worldly confidence, bringing vs into deſperate dangers, and hiding from vs all inferiour helpes; then hauing no other place of ſafety vnto which we may reſort, wee flie vnto the Lord for ſuccour and reliefe, crying out with the Pſalmiſt, O Lord giue vs helpe in trouble, for vaine is the helpe of man. And with good Iehoſhaphat, O God wilt not thou iudge them? for there is no ſtrength in vs to ſtand before this great multitude that commeth againſt vs, neither doe wee know what to doe, but our eyes are towards thee.

Pſal. 108.12.

2.Chro. 20.12.

§. Sect. 8. That in our afflictions we incite our ſelues to call vpon God with many reaſons.

Yea being in this difficulty and diſtreſſe, we are not onely content to be pricked on to the performance of this duty with the ſpurre of afflictions, but wee alſo incite and ſtirre vp our ſelues, to call vpon the Lord for helpe and deliuerance, by many other arguments and reaſons. As firſt by the conſideration of Gods expreſſe commandement, vnto which hee hath encouraged vs to performe obedience by his moſt gracious promiſes. So our Sauiour willeth vs to aske and wee ſhall receiue, ſeeke and wee ſhall find, knocke and it ſhall bee opened vnto vs. More eſpecially by his holy Apoſtle hee hath required vs to performe this duty in the time of our afflictions, Is any among you (ſaith he) afflicted? let him pray. Is any merry let him ſing. And againe, Let vs goe boldly vnto the throne of grace, that we may receiue mercy, and find grace to helpe in time of need. So the Lord himſelfe hath enjoyned vs after a more eſpeciall manner to make our ſupplications vnto him in the time of our afflictions. Call vpon me (ſaith he) in the time of trouble, and I will deliuer thee, and thou ſhalt glorifie mee. The which duty if wee at this time doe neglect wee ſhall double his diſpleaſure againſt vs, for he is not more offended with our ſinne which hath deſerued this chaſtiſement and affliction, than at our negligence or ſtubbornneſſe whereby wee refuſe, or ſlothfully neglect to begge at his hands, pardon and deliuerance. Secondly, by calling to mind, that he alone is of omnipotent power; and therefore able to ſhield vs from all dangers, and to deliuer vs out of all our afflictions; and infinite in his loue and mercy towards vs, and therefore willing to extend his power for our preſeruation and freedome from all our troubles. Both which are ſtrong motiues to make vs flee vnto the Lord by earneſt prayer: for as when the ſtorme bloweth and the Sea rageth, the poore paſſenger can ſee no place of ſafety, till hee be ariued in the quiet port: ſo when wee are toſſed and turmoiled in this Sea of miſeries, and can ſee in all the world no ſafety or ſecurity, then doe wee by feruent prayer flee vnto the Lord, as being the only hauen and harborough which can keepe vs ſafe in theſe tempeſts of affliction. Thirdly, by conſidering that whatſoeuer the inſtruments of our troubles be, the Lord is the ſole authour and chiefe cauſe of them; And therefore as the offender ſueth not to the executioner for pardon, becauſe he knoweth that hee hath no power to puniſh or ſpare him, ſauing that which hee hath receiued from the judge, but beggeth and intreateth that hee will forgiue and releaſe him, who alone had authority to condemne and deliuer him vp, to ſuffer deſerued puniſhment for his offences; ſo wee will not ſo much ſue vnto the inferiour meanes of our afflictions, when wee are in trouble and miſery, becauſe of themſelues they can neither hurt nor helpe vs; but with Iob wee will make ſupplication vnto our Iudge, and by hearty prayer craue of him pardon and deliuerance, who hath abſolute power in his hand to grant or deny it. Finally by calling to mind that hee is (as the Apoſtle ſtileth him) the God of conſolation, who comforteth vs in all our troubles, cauſing our conſolations to abound and exceed our ſufferings, as himſelfe profeſſeth; I euen I am he that comforteth you. And therefore when being in afflictions all worldly comforts faile vs, it will be an effectuall reaſon, to moue vs by daily prayer to flee vnto him who is the God of all conſolations, that wee may receiue from him ſome comfort and refreſhing, in the time of our heauineſſe.

Matth. 7.7.

Iam. 5.13.

Heb. 4.16.

Odit dum offenditur, iraſcitur dum non rogatur offenſus. Hieronym. ad Ægrotum. amicum. epiſt.

Iob. 9.15.

Rom. 15.5.

2.Cor. 1.4.5.
Eſai 51.12.

§. Sect. 9. That God by afflictions maketh vs more frequent and feruent in prayer.

And thus by our afflictions and by theſe conſiderations ariſing from them, wee are moued to performe this duty of prayer, and that not onely after an ordinary manner, but with great earneſtneſſe, heate of zeale, and feruencie of ſpirit; for though wee bee ſlacke and looſe in this holy exerciſe, whilſt wee are at eaſe and reſt, and not ſo much as touched with any trouble, yet when the waight of affliction lyeth heauy vpon vs, it preſſeth out of vs ſtrong cryes, and ſalt teares; bitter ſighes and deepe grones; and as waters running at their full liberty in an open plaine haue little force and ſtrength, but when they paſſe through a ſtreight and narrow current, are of ſuch might that nothing is able to withſtand their violence; ſo when our prayers proceed from hearts inlarged with worldly liberty, and not ſtraightned or bounded with any trouble, they are very weake and wandring, and of no force to preuaile with God; but when they iſſue out of the ſtraits and narrow paſſages of trouble and affliction, they offer an holy violence euen to God himſelfe, holding (as it were) his hands when he is ready to ſtrike, ſo as he is faine when wee cry vnto him to cry vnto vs againe, as hee did vnto Moſes, let mee alone, that I may proceed in the execution of my judgements. And this feruency and zeale was in the prayers of holy Iacob, when he was in danger of being deſtroyed by his enraged brother; for as he outwardly with his body wraſtled with God, not leauing his hold till hee had the bleſſing; ſo much more powerfully did hee contend and preuaile with him, when as inwardly he powred forth his ſoule in feruent prayer, weeping and crying vnto God for helpe & deliuerance as the Prophet ſheweth. The like wee ſee verified in his poſterity Iſrael, who in their trouble ſought the Lord, and powred out a prayer when his chaſtning was vpon them, and that not in a cold and formall faſhion, but with great feruency and and earneſtneſſe, crying like a woman in her paines of child bearing, as Eſay witneſſeth. And this heat of zeale and feruency of ſpirit they ſhewed, when being in danger to bee deſtroyed by the great army of the Philiſtins comming againſt them, they humbled themſelues by faſting and prayer before the Lord, weeping ſo abundantly, that by a ſtrange, yet excellent metaphor, they are are ſaid to haue drawne out water from their eyes, as with buckets out of a well, and not only to haue bee ſprinkled the ground with diſtilling teares, but to haue powred them out in full ſtreames. So the Church and people of God being grieuouſly afflicted in the time of their captiuity doe in a moſt patheticall manner ſhew this feruency of ſpirit and importunate earneſtneſſe in their prayers vnto God for helpe and deliuerance. For their heart cryed vnto the Lord, O wall of the daughter of Sion, let teares runne downe like a riuer day and night, giue thy ſelfe no reſt, let not the apple of thine eye ceaſe. Ariſe, cry out in the night, in the beginning of the watches powre out thine heart like water before the face of the Lord: lift vp thy hands towards him for the life of thy young children that faint for hunger in the corners of euery ſtreete. And this was vſuall with them, as wee may ſee in the hiſtory of the Iudges and Kings (as alſo Nehemiah obſerueth) namely, that when for their ſinnes they were deliuered into the hands of their enemies, then they would cry vnto the Lord in prayer, till he heard them from Heauen and ſent them ſauiours. Yea ſo feruent were they at ſuch times in their ſupplications, that they could not content themſelues with their owne importunity, but earneſtly intreated Gods Prophets to become ſuiters and ſoliciters for them. For in that wonderfull humiliation before ſpoken of, they ſay vnto Samuel, Ceaſe not to cry vnto the Lord our God for vs, that hee may ſaue vs out of the hand of the Philiſtims. And being terrified with an extraordinary thunder and raine in the time of harueſt, they earneſtly deſire him, to pray for them vnto the Lord his God that they might not die and periſh. Thus alſo the Niniuites being in danger of deſtruction, are commanded by their King, to humble themſelues by faſting and putting on ſackcloth, and to cry mightily vnto God. And the diſciples who left Chriſt quietly aſleepe; when they were ſecure, being in danger of drowning run vnto him with great earneſtneſſe, and cry aloud, maſter, maſter, ſaue vs we periſh. Yea our Sauiour Chriſt himſelfe, though hee was continually conuerſant in offering vp the ſacrifice of prayer vnto his Father, yet was he moſt frequent and feruent in performing this duty in the time of his greateſt afflictions; for being in his agony, he is ſaid to haue prayed more earneſtly, and in feruency of ſpirit, to haue vttered thrice the ſame words; and to haue offered vp his prayers and ſupplications, with ſtrong crying and teares, vnto him that was able to ſaue him from death, as the Apoſtle witneſſeth. By all which it appeareth that afflictions doe make vs more frequent, inſtant and earneſt, in this holy exerciſe of prayer; whereof it is, that the Lord taking ſpeciall delight in this zeale and feruency, doth after a more eſpeciall manner command vs to offer vp vnto him our prayers and petitions in the time of affliction, and incourageth vs thereunto by a ſpeciall promiſe of helpe and deliuerance. Call vpon me (ſaith he) in the day of trouble, ſo will I deliuer thee and thou ſhalt glorifie mee. So by the Prophet Ioel, he commandeth them in their grieuous famine, to ſanctifie a faſt, to call a ſolemne aſſembly, to gather the Elders and all the inhabitants of the land into the houſe of their God, and to cry vnto the Lord. Yea in truth this is one eſpeciall end why the Lord bringeth the faithfull into troubles and afflictions, that whereas they in the time of their proſperity neglect this duty of his ſeruice, or performe it formally and coldly, they may bee moued with the ſenſe and ſmart of theſe euils to call vpon him with all zeale, earneſtneſſe and feruency of ſpirit, as appeareth by the ſcope and drift, at which our Sauiour aymed in the parable of the diſtreſſed widdow and vnrighteous judge, who by her often crying and calling vpon him, was moued to doe her juſtice; and of the two friends the one whereof borroweth of the other three loaues, through his importunity, though he had a deniall at the firſt motion. And thus our Sauiour Chriſt gaue vnto the woman of Canaan diuers repulſes, not becauſe he was vnwilling to grant her ſuit, but to make her more inſtant and earneſt in praying for helpe and deliuerance from her grieuous affliction. And od.32.10.

ſ.12.4.
ſa.26.17.
am.7.6.
am.2.18.19.
eh.9.27.

1.Sam.7.8.
Chap.12.19.
Math.8.24.
Matth.26.44.
Luk.22.44.
Heb.5.7.
Pſal.50.15.
Ioel.2.14.
Luk.18.2.7.
Luk.11.8.
Matth.15.28.

§. Sect. 10. That by afflictions we are made more ſincere in our confeſſion of ſin and more earneſt in our petitions.

And thus haue I generally ſhewed, that troubles and calamities make vs more diligent and feruent in performing this duty of holy prayer, the which is a ſacrifice moſt acceptable vnto God and moſt profitable for vs. Now further this will alſo appeare, if we conſider the ſeuerall parts of prayer; for firſt howſoeuer in the time of our proſperity wee diſguiſe and ſo cunningly hide our ſins, that euen our ſelues haue no ſight or ſenſe of them, yet when we are brought into miſery and affliction, wee ſtraitly examine our wayes and workes; yea and narrowly ſearch into the ſecret corners our of hearts, that ſo wee may find out thoſe ſinnes whereby wee haue prouoked Gods diſpleaſure; and hauing found them, we (as it were) hale them into Gods preſence, and with all ſincerity lay them open in his ſight by humble confeſſion, being incouraged by Gods gracious promiſes, that if we confeſſe and forſake our ſinnes wee ſhall find mercy; and that if we acknowledge our ſinnes wee ſhall find him faithfull and iuſt in forgiuing them and in cleanſing vs from all iniquities; and not onely ſo, but in deliuering vs from thoſe euils of puniſhment which doe accompany them. An example whereof wee haue in the people of Iſrael, who being ſtung with the fiery Serpents confeſſe their ſinnes and pray vnto the Lord. So being ſore vexed and tormented by their enemies, they cry vnto the Lord ſaying, wee haue ſinned againſt thee, becauſe wee haue forſaken our owne God, and haue ſerued Baalim. And thus the prodigall Sonne being pinched with hunger and grieuouſly afflicted returneth vnto his Father, and with an humbled ſoule and proſtrate body, cryeth out, Father I haue ſinned againſt Heauen and againſt thee, and am no more worthy to be called thy ſonne. So Daniel in the time of the captiuity humbleth himſelfe before God, and confeſſeth his owne and the peoples ſinnes. Yea Pharaoh himſelfe though hee had no grace or goodneſſe in him, yet by the weight of affliction had the confeſſion of his ſinnes preſſed from him. Thus alſo by afflictions are wee made diligent and earneſt in making our petitions vnto God, and that both deprecations wherby wee feruently deſire to be freed and defended from the dangers which hang ouer our heads, and from the afflictions and miſeries which doe preſently vex vs (neither are wee euer more zealous, earneſt and importunate with God, than when wee are forced herunto with ſmart and ſenſe of paine;) and alſo our ſuits and requeſts, eſpecially that God will giue vs grace ſo to profit by our afflictions; and in ſuch ſort direct and guide vs with his holy Spirit for the time to come, that wee may amend our ſinfull liues, and ſo walke in the wayes of his commandements, that we may not hereafter prouoke the Lord to anger by our ſinnes, and moue him in his juſt diſpleaſure to inflict againe vpon vs the like or more heauy judgements.

*Pro.*28.13.

1. *Ioh.*1.19.

*Num.*21.6.7.

*Iudg.*10.9.10.

*Luk.*15.21.

*Dan.*9.

*Exo.*11.16.17.

§. Sect. 11 That by our afflictions we are moued more frequen ly and heartil to giue thank vnto God.

Finally by our afflictions we are prouoked to render thankes vnto God, and to magnifie and prayſe his holy name, firſt becauſe (as I haue ſhewed) wee haue then the trueſt valuation and eſtimate of Gods rich mercies when wee are for a time depriued of them, the which is one end why the Lord taketh them from vs, that by wanting them wee may learne their worth, and accordingly ſhew our ſelues thankfull vnto God, either becauſe hee vouchſafed vnto vs the vſe of them ſo long, though now for our ſinnes they bee taken from vs, or is pleaſed againe to reſtore them vnto vs. For becauſe (as one ſaith) wee doe not render thankes vnto God for his preſent benefits, it is neceſſary that wee ſhould bee depriued of them that by wanting them wee may know what we did once enjoy. For as the eyes cannot diſcerne glorious objects when they are held cloſe vnto them, but when they are remoued in ſome proportionable diſtance: ſo our vnthankfull minds cannot judge of the greatneſſe and excellency of preſent benefits; but when they are taken a little from vs, then in their departing wee clearely diſcerne the riches of Gods bounty. Secondly becauſe Gods infinite wiſedome, powerfull prouidence, juſtice, mercy and truth, doe moſt clearely ſhine, like glorious ſtars, in the night of our afflictions; namely as he doth inflict them, and alſo order and diſpoſe them, appointing their manner, meaſure, and all circumſtances, and ſo moderating them, that not exceeding our ſtrength, we plainely diſcerne mercy in his greateſt judgements. And alſo his loue and compaſſion do plainely appeare vnto vs, in that he doth not deale with vs according to our iniquities, nor puniſh vs according to the greatneſſe of our offences, but contenteth himſelfe to haue inflicted ſmall corrections for great faults, and light & momentany afflictions for ſuch hainous & grieuous ſins, as haue juſtly deſerued euerlaſting condemnation. In conſideration whereof we haue great cauſe to magnifie and prayſe the Lord, acknowledging with his afflicted Church, that it is his wonderfull mercy that wee are not vtterly conſumed. So alſo his mercy, goodneſſe and truth doe clearely ſhine in our afflictions, as he doth bring light out of darkneſſe, and good out of euill, making theſe puniſhments of ſinne to ſerue as effectuall meanes to further vs in attaining vnto both grace and glory: and finally, his loue appeareth both by his ſupporting vs with ſtrength to beare whatſoeuer he is pleaſed to inflict, by refreſhing vs with inward conſolations, and by ſauing and deliuering vs out of all our troubles, when Quoniam ob bona præſentia gratias deo non agimus, neceſſaria nobis eſt priuatio, vt quid habuerimus ſentiamus, Baſil. Tom.1.p.368

*Pſal.*103.8.

*Lamen.*3.22.

in reſpect of outward meanes our eſtate ſeemeth deſperate. All which and much more being obſerued by the faithfull, doe mooue them to breake out in admiration of Gods Wiſdome, Power, Mercy and Goodneſſe into Prayſes and Thankſgiuing, as we may ſee in the example of the Iſraelites deliuered out of the Egyptian ſeruitude, in the Song of Deborah and Barak for their freedome from Iabin, & victory ouer Siſera; In the Pſalmes of Dauid, many of which were penned vpon this occaſion, that this holy Prophet and other of the faithfull might ſhew their thankfulneſſe vnto God for his powerfull protection in the time of danger, and his gracious deliuerance of them out of all their troubles. Thou haſt turned (ſaith hee) my mourning into ioy, thou haſt looſed my ſacke and girded me with gladneſſe, therefore ſhall my tongue prayſe thee and not ceaſe: O Lord my God I will giue thankes vnto thee for euer. And againe, I will ſing of thy power and will prayſe thy mercy in the morning, for thou haſt beene my defence and refuge in the day of my trouble; vnto thee O my ſtrength will I ſing, for God is my defence and my mercifull God. Neither doe the inferiour meanes of their deliuerance ſo dazle and blunt their ſight, but that they are ſtill able to ouer-looke them, and to behold the Lord as the principall cauſe of all their good, working by theſe inferiour inſtruments, as we may ſee in the example of Paul, who being deliuered by the chiefe Captaine, when the Iewes went about to kill him, doth in reporting this ſtory vnto Agrippa, attribute the prayſe of his deliuerance only vnto God. For this cauſe (ſaith he) the Iewes caught mee in the Temple, and went about to kill me, neuertheleſſe I obtained helpe of God, and continue vnto this day. And this is one ſpeciall end which God propoundeth vnto our afflictions and his gracious deliuerances, that being afflicted we may pray, praying we may be heard and deliuered, and being deliuered we may take occaſion thereby to glorifie and prayſe him who is the chiefe authour of our deliuerance; according to that of the Pſalmiſt; Call vpon mee in the day of trouble, and I will deliuer thee, and thou ſhalt glorifie me. And hereof it is, that when our Sauiour had helped one poſſeſſed with a Deuill, hee willeth him to goe home to his friends, and to ſhew what great things the Lord had done vnto him. Yea, this end the faithfull themſelues do alſo propound of their helpe and deliuerance which they haue from God, according to that of the Pſalmiſt, Haue mercy vpon me, O Lord, conſider my trouble, which I ſuffer of them that hate me, thou that lifteſt me vp from the gates of death; that I may ſhew all thy prayſes within the gates of the daughter of Sion, and reioyce in thy ſaluation.

15. 1.
5. 1.
30. 11, 12.
59. 16. 17.
2, 31.
26, 22.
50, 15.
5, 19.
9. 13, 14.

Sect. 12.

That the former conſideration may much comfort vs in our afflictions.

And thus it appeareth, that the Lord vſeth our afflictions as notable meanes, to further and helpe vs in this excellent duty of Prayer, and all the parts thereof, Confeſſion, Petition and Thankſgiuing. The conſideration whereof may exceedingly comfort vs in all our croſſes and calamities; ſeeing all our griefes and loſſes are ſufficiently counteruailed and abundantly recompenced by this alone benefit which wee haue by them. For Prayer is a moſt eſpeciall part of Gods worſhip and ſeruice whereby he is glorified, and becommeth gracious and propitious vnto vs; it is a moſt notable fruit of the Spirit whereby wee are vndoubtedly aſſured that wee are the adopted ſonnes of God, ſeeing wee cry in our hearts Abba Father. It is the meanes to inrich vs with all ſpirituall graces, for as euery euery good and perfect gift deſcendeth from God the Father of Lights; ſo Prayer is the hand wherby we receiue them, and which we thruſt into the rich treaſury of his graces, taking vnto vs whatſoeuer wee need. It is a chiefe part of our ſpirituall armour whereby wee are not only enabled to reſiſt all the ſpirituall enemies of our ſaluation, but alſo to ouercome and put them to flight. Finally, it is our chiefe comfort, our ſtrength and ſtay; for as all our conſolation, abilities and ſupport is from the Lord alone, who made Heauen and Earth; ſo the meanes which he hath appointed vnto vs, to receiue helpe, aſſiſtance and inward refreſhing from him is Prayer and Supplication. And therefore let vs patiently and thankfully indure the ſmall ſmart of our ſhort troubles, which deriue vnto vs ſo much ſpirituall good; let vs be content to be pricked with theſe thornes of afflictions, ſeeing they keepe vs from falling into the ſleepe of carnall ſecurity, which would make vs a prey to our rauenous enemies; and giue vs occaſion to ſing theſe moſt melodious notes of Prayer and Thankſgiuing, which is the moſt ſweet and delightfull Muſicke in the eares of God.

Rom. 8. 15.
Iam. 1. 17.
Math. 7. 7.
Eph. 6. 18.
Pſal. 121. 2.

§. Sect. 13.

That God by afflictions worketh and increaſeth our patience.

And thus haue I ſhewed that our afflictions are vſed by God as notable meanes to further vs in our new obedience, as it is actiue and exerciſed in doing his will. The like may bee ſaid of our paſſiue obedience, whereby wee are content that his will may be done in vs; ſuffering with meekneſſe and patience whatſoeuer croſſes and afflictions it ſhall pleaſe him to inflict vpon vs. For whereas by proſperity our minds are made weake and effeminate, by reaſon that our too much hauing our wils doth make vs wanton, and wantonneſſe doth make vs wayward and peeuiſh, which cauſeth vs to ſhew great impatience in our ſmalleſt croſſes; and to murmur and complaine when but the ſight or ſhadow of any affliction doth appeare, and approach towards vs; when we are daily exerciſed in carrying the croſſe, and inured to beare heauy burthens, & to indure ſmart and paine, then are wee freed from our peeuiſh wantonneſſe, and nice tenderneſſe, and taking vnto ſelues manlike hearts and Chriſtian courage, and by daily vſe growing better acquainted with our afflictions wee now eſteeme them ſmall and light, which before ſeemed grieuous and intolerable. In which reſpect one ſaith, that a man may well call them miſerable, who by too much proſperity doe grow ſluggiſh and weake, and whom ſlothfull eaſe hath (as it were) becalmed in an vnmoued Sea: ſeeing whatſoeuer befalleth them will ſeeme ſtrange. Croſſes ſeeme heauieſt to thoſe who neuer vſed to carry them; and the yoke is grieuous to a tender, necke: the freſh-water-ſouldier waxeth pale, when he but ſuſpecteth himſelfe wounded, whereas the olde Souldier beholdeth his owne bloud with vndaunted courage, becauſe after the effuſion of bloud he hath oftentimes obtained victory. Againe by our manifold afflictions we haue experience of Gods power and loue, mercy and truth both in ſtrengthning vs to beare whatſoeuer croſſe hee layeth vpon vs, in turning them all to our profit and benefit, and alſo in deliuering vs out of them in due time, when his good worke which he intended is effected by them; from which experience as we grow ſtronger in faith and affiance towards God, perſwading our ſelues, that as he hath in former times, ſo he will now alſo vphold vs in all tentations and ſaue and deliuer vs out of all our afflictions: ſo alſo thereby is our patience confirmed and increaſed, whileſt with quiet meeknes & contentednes we wait Gods leaſure for our deliuerance, and in the meane time ſubmit our ſelues willingly to indure his good pleaſure; being aſſured by our manifold experience, that as hee hath, ſo hee will helpe and free vs from all our calamities, and in the meane time giue vs ſtrength to beare them. And this is manifeſt by plaine teſtimonies of the ſcriptures; for ſo the Apoſtle Paul ſaith, that tribulation bringeth forth patience; And the Apoſtle Iames ſaith, that the triall of our faith, by afflictions and tribulations, bringeth forth patience. And the examples of the Saints doe clearely ſhew, that by their much ſuffering they were inabled to ſuffer, and grew ſtronger in patience the more they were inured to beare the croſſe. Thus Iob as he exceeded all in afflictions, ſo alſo in patience; and holy Dauid by ſuffering innumerable croſſes and calamities, came at laſt to that meeke ſubmiſſion of himſelfe in all things vnto the wil of God; Behold heere am I, let him doe vnto me, as it ſeemeth good in his eyes: yea, our Sauiour Chriſt himſelfe the patterne of all true patience, and the quiet Lambe that opened not his mouth, though hee were the Sonne (as the Apoſtle ſpeaketh) yet learned he obedience by the things which he ſuffered. And this euery man may finde true by his owne experience: for how bitter is ſickneſſe vnto vs when we haue from our Child-hood enjoyed health? How irkeſome is hunger, to thoſe who haue beene accuſtomed to full diet? How grieuous is want and miſery, ſhame and diſgrace, to thoſe who haue had alwayes, plenty, proſperity, and the prayſe and applauſe of all about them; whereas when men are a while inured to ſuffer theſe croſſes, and are growne into better acquaintance with theſe afflictions, they grow ſo ordinary and familiar, that they doe not much trouble them, nor yet moue them to ſhew any impaciency. The conſideration whereof ſhould greatly comfort vs in all our croſſes and troubles, ſeeing this excellent grace of patience is much ſtrengthened and increaſed by thẽ, which is a ſalue that eaſeth all ſores, a ſhield of proofe which defendeth the vitall parts from being pearced with any fiery darts of the worlds tentations, and a faithfull helper which inableth vs to beare the greateſt burthen, making thoſe things which are heauy in themſelues light vnto vs, and thoſe eaſie to be indured, which to a natural man ſeeme intolerable. In regard whereof the Apoſtle Iames willeth vs, to count it exceeding ioy when we fall into diuers tentations, becauſe this trying of our faith bringeth forth pacience; and the Apoſtle Paul making himſelfe with the reſt of the faithfull examples of this rule and precept, ſaith, that becauſe patience was increaſed by tribulation therefore they reioyced and euen gloried in it.

Illos meritò quis dixerit miſeros qui nimia fœlicitate torpeſcunt, quos velut in mari lento tranquillitas iners detinet &c. Senec de prouid. lib. c. 4.

2. Cor. 1. 10.

Rom. 5. 3.

Iam. 1. 3.

2. Sam. 15. 26.

Heb. 5. 8.

Iam. 1. 2. 3.

Rom. 5. 3.

CHAP. XXIV.

That God by afflictions worketh and increaseth in vs, all thoſe vertues, which concerne either our neighbours, or our ſelues.

AND thus haue I ſhewed that our croſſes and afflictions are vſed by God, as effectuall meanes, to worke in vs all ſauing graces, and to ſtirre vs vp to performe new obedience, and all holy duties which reſpect himſelfe and his ſeruice: now wee are to ſhew that they haue the like efficacy in mouing vs to imbrace all thoſe Chriſtian vertues, which reſpect either our Neighbours, or our ſelues. For firſt, we are moued by them to doe iuſtice vnto all men, giuing euery man his due, and doing vnto others, as we would haue them to do vnto vs. And this cõmeth to paſſe, not only becauſe the afflicted eſtate is more vnable to offer iniuſtice, wrongs, iniuries, cruelty, and oppreſſion; and more vnwilling and fearefull to attempt, and runne into ſuch vniuſt courſes, becauſe it commonly wanteth both power in it ſelfe, and aſſiſtance from friends to maintaine theſe oppreſſions and in-§. Sect. 1. That by affli-ctions wee a moued to do iuſtice vnto men, and iniuries, and to defend men, when they haue done them, from deſerued reuenge: but alſo, becauſe it maketh the conſcience more tender, the iudgement more ready to examine, and more quick-ſighted and vnpartial in iudging of right and wrong, and the heart more fearefull and vnwilling to giue aſſent or approbation vnto any iniurious actions; becauſe being vnder the hand of God, and already feeling the ſmart of his corrections, we feare leaſt by committing theſe wrongs, wee ſhall prouoke the Lords anger, & moue him eyther to continue our afflictions, or to double and multiply them in number and waight, becauſe our ſinnes by this new addition, become more numerous and grieuous in his ſight. It is true indeed, that ſome kinde of afflictions, as namely, loſſes, want, and pouerty, doe thruſt many into vniuſt actions, and doe moue them to vſe fraud and deceit, theft and robbery, to patch & peece vp their broken eſtate, and to make a ſupplie of the things which they want, by theſe vnlawfull courſes: but I doe not ſpeake of thoſe effects which afflictions in their owne nature produce, when they fall vpon wicked men; but as they are vſed by God, for the bettering and amending of his owne children, by cauſing them in feare of his fatherly diſpleaſure, with all care & good conſcience, to auoid all ſins whatſoeuer. In which reſpect it may bee truly ſaid, that the ſame rods & whips, which make the ſlaue to run away frō his maſter, & to become more deſperate in his wicked courſes, do make the ſon & true ſeruant of God to draw neerer vnto him by repentance, and to promiſe, & accordingly to endeuour amendement of al his faults, that together with the enioying of his fathers fauor, he may alſo be ſecured from ſuffring the ſmart of his corrections.

§. Sect. 2. That by afflictions we are made more mercifull and compaſſionate towards others in miſery

Heb.5.2.

Chap.2.ver.18.

Secondly, by theſe afflictions wee are made more mercifull, pitifull, and compaſſionate vnto others who indure the like croſſes, and miſeries; and our hearts which are hard in themſelues, are ſoftned and made more tender, and in fellow-feeling of their griefes, more ready and willing to yeeld vnto them any comfort and refreſhing. And thus thoſe who haue been ſicke, are apt to pitty thoſe moſt, whom they ſee pained with the like diſeaſes; thoſe who haue been impriſoned, doe more readily compaſſionate, and accordingly helpe and releeue thoſe who are reſtrained; they who haue been pinched with penury, and pined with hunger, doe aboue others pitty them, who being poore do want foode to feede them, and clothes to couer them. And this was one end, why God layed vpon our ſauiour Chriſt himſelfe, ſo many croſſes and afflictions, that hee might bee able ſufficiently to haue compaſſion of them that are ignorant, becauſe hee was compaſſed with infirmitie, as the Apoſtle ſpeaketh. For as hee ſaith in an other place, in that he ſuffered, and was tempted, hee is able to ſuccour them that are tempted. In which regard, wee may with more confidence and aſſurance go vnto him for helpe and ſuccour in all our miſeries, becauſe himſelfe hath taſted of them. So the Apoſtle ſaith, that we haue not an high prieſt which cannot be touched with the feeling of our infirmities; but was in all things tempted in like ſort, yet without ſin. And from hence he raiſeth this exhortatiō, that therfore we muſt go boldly vnto the thron of grace, that we may receiue mercy & grace to help in time of need. And therfore if the Lord thought it fit that our Sauiour Chriſt (which was ſo ful of loue, mercy, & compaſſion, that in commiſeration of our wretched eſtate, hee was content to lay downe his precious life for our ſakes, that he might free vs from our wo & miſery) ſhould be partaker of our infirmities & afflictions, that his tender hart might be the more entendred, & made more ſenſible of our ſorrows by his own ſufferings; how much more need haue we to haue our hard harts thus ſuppled & ſoftned, who haue little compaſſion in vs but that which ariſeth from our owne ſenſe & feeling?

Heb.4.15,16.

§. Sect. 3. That God by afflictions maketh vs more meeke, humble and courteous towards our Neighbours.

Finally, by our afflictions wee learne to carry our ſelues humbly and meekely, curteouſly and gently, towards all men; for whereas wee are by proſperity puffed vp with pride, and become harſh, ſkornefull and inſolent, in all our behauiour towards our neighbours; when our proude hearts are humbled with croſſes and miſeries, and wee being ſtripped of our outward brauery, doe come to haue a true ſight of our infirmities and deformities, then doe wee thinke better of others than of our ſelues, and accordingly vſe them, with all ciuility and humanitie, being ready with a ſweete mildeneſſe to departe from our owne right, rather than to encroach vpon any thing which is due vnto them. And as the wild colt which runneth at liberty in fruitfull paſtures, is ready to break all bounds, and to run ouer any that ſtands in his way; but being well bridled and broken, ſubmitteth himſelfe to be backed with his rider, and to beare his blowes without any reſiſtance: ſo wee being fatted and pampered in the paſtures of proſperity, breake all the bounds of humanity and ciuility, and are ready in our pride and inſolency to beate downe all that ſtand in our way, & to trāple vnder our feet thoſe who are neere vnto vs; but when God hath put into our mouthes this bit and bridle of trouble and afflictions, and with many blowes hath broken our proude ſtomackes; then are we more readie to ſuffer than to offer iniuries, and quietly to hold on in the courſes of our callings with all lowlineſſe to our betters, and withal curteſie and humanitie to our equals and inferiours. So the wiſe man ſaith, that the poore ſpeaketh with praiers, but the rich anſwereth roughly. An example whereof wee haue in

Prou.18.23.

Dan.3.13,14, 15,16.& 4,34.

Acts 9.

1.Kings 20.10, 18,30,31.

Nebuchadnezzer, who being in his proſperity vttered nothing but thundering threats and proude menaces; but being humbled firſt by Gods miracle, and afterwards by his owne miſerie, he becommeth meeke and full of curteſie. Thus Saul when the world fawned on him, breathed out threatnings and ſlaughters againſt the diſciples of the Lord, and like a raging lion purſued them to the death; but being beaten downe to the ground and humbled vnder the hand of God he waxeth milde and gentle as a lambe. And euen wicked Benhadad himſelf, who being in his ſtrength and preſuming of victorie was ſo vnmeaſurably proude and inſolent, that he became vaine and fooliſh in his boaſting, and with maruellous diſdaine ſkorned all that reſiſted his furie; when his forces were foiled, and he ouerthrowne in battaile by the people of Iſrael, with what baſe abiection doth hee humble himſelfe to Ahab in his miſerie? ſending his ſeruants with ſack-cloth vpon their loines, and ropes about their necks, and putting a meſſage in their mouthes ſutable to their habit; Thy ſeruant Benhadad ſaith, I pray thee, let mee liue. But this point ſhall not neede further proofe either by teſtimonie or example, ſeeing common experience teacheth vs, that as when men flouriſh in wealth and worldly preferments, they preſently become churliſhly ſurly, & proudly diſdainfull, their cheſts being no fuller filled with riches, than their hearts with pride, nor they higher aduanced in their preferments, than they are exalted in conceit of their owne worth and excellencie: ſo being brought into miſery and affliction, they preſently ſtrike ſaile, and carry themſelues with all lowlineſſe and humility, as to all others, ſo eſpecially to thoſe from whom they expect comfort and reliefe in this their affliction.

§. Sect. 4. That by afflictions wee attaine vnto the knowledge of our ſelues.

And thus it appeareth, that afflictions are vſed by God as notable meanes to furniſh vs with thoſe morall and ciuill vertues which concerne our neighbours: The like alſo may be ſaid of thoſe vertues and graces which directly reſpect our ſelues: Neither doe our croſſes and chaſtiſements only enrich vs with thoſe ſpirituall and ſauing graces, which tending chiefely to Gods ſeruice, do alſo further and aſſure our owne ſaluation, and thoſe morall vertues which principally reſpect our neighbours benefite; but alſo with thoſe gifts and abilities, which do more properly and peculiarly reſpect our owne vſe and profit. For firſt, by theſe afflictions we attaine vnto the knowledge of our ſelues, and whereas in our proſperitie, pride and ſelfe-loue doe ſo hudwinke our eies, that wee can neither ſee our ſinne nor miſerie, and doe cauſe vs to put all our gifts and good parts into that end of the wallet which hangeth before vs, and all our vices, faults and imperfections into that end which is caſt behinde vs; affliction pulleth this vaile from our ſight, and cauſing vs to looke backward, doth make vs to behold our filthineſſe and ſpirituall blemiſhes and deformities, through the corruption & pollution of our nature; and thoſe manifold ſinnes and actuall tranſgreſſions, whereby wee haue brought theſe croſſes vpon vs; and alſo our guiltineſſe in reſpect of them both, whereby we ſtand obnoxious to the anger of God, aud to temporall and euerlaſting puniſhments; all which our miſerie and ſpirituall nakedneſſe doth plainely appeare, when the fig leaues of wordly proſperitie are taken from vs. So whereas in our proſperitie, looking through the falſe ſpectacles of pride and ſelfe-loue, wee are ready to ouerweene our gifts, to miſtake ſhadowes for ſubſtances, worldly policie which is meere fooliſhneſſe, for ſound wiſedome; proude preſumption and carnal ſecuritie, for true faith, conſtant hope, and firme affiance in God; couetouſneſſe for frugalitie; and prodigalitie for bountie and liberalitie: as alſo to imagine that the ſmalleſt mites of grace and vertue, are the richeſt talents; and the leaſt and firſt degrees to bee the higheſt and greateſt perfection of them: when theſe deceiuing glaſſes are taken from our eies, we ſee our graces and ſpirituall abilities in their owne nature and proportion; and then counterfeit vertues which like guilded papers or poſtes, make in the time of our proſperitie a glorious ſhew, ſeeming pure gold in outward appearance, do conſume and vaniſh in the fierie triall, as not induring the heate of this furnace of affliction: and then the weakeneſſe and imperfection of our new-borne graces will eaſily be diſcerned, when as they are put to ſtruggle and wreſtle with miſerie and calamitie. Then our faith, which in our proſperitie ſeemed ſo ſtrong, that in the greateſt tentation it could not receiue the leaſt foile, will appeare ſo weake and feeble, that the ſlighteſt triall would ouerturne it, if it were not ſupported by Gods aſſiſtance: and though before trial we haue an opinion with Peter, that in the ſtrength of our faith wee can walke vpon the waters, and preſume ſo much vpon our owne ſtrength and vndaunted courage, that albeit the whole world in the time of perſecution ſhould denie Chriſt, yet we will not; when the waues of trouble and miſerie do approach towards vs, we are readie to ſinke in doubting, and to cry out for feare; and being but examined by a poore Damoſell, we are ready to denie and forſake Chriſt and the Goſpell, leaſt by ſticking to our profeſſion wee ſhould bee expoſed to the danger of perſecution. Then our affiance in God which whileſt wee flouriſhed in the World ſeemed ſo bold and confident, ſo ſtrong & ſteady in Gods promiſed aſſiſtance, will ſhew it ſelfe to be weake, tottering and ruinous, when theſe outward proppes of worldly helpe are pulled from it. Then our hope, which before it was tried appeared ſo conſtant and aſſured, that no delay could euer daunt it, when wee are in affliction, and finde the promiſes of Gods helpe and our deliuerance for a while deferred, is ready to faint and to be preſently turned into doubting and deſpaire. Then our wiſedome which we thought to be of ſo great a reach, that we could eaſily finde meanes either to preuent, or to eſcape out of all difficulties and dangers; when wee are brought into theſe ſtraits and ſnares, doth appeare ſlight and ſhallow, being altogether inſufficient to deliuer vs from theſe miſeries and troubles: and finally then our patience which we imagined to bee ſo firme, well-grounded, and of ſuch Sampſon-like ſtrength, that it was able to ſtand vpright vnder the heauie weight of the greateſt croſſes; when it commeth to the triall, and hath but a ſmall burthen of miſery lying vpon it, it is ready to crack and break into murmuring and impatiencie, and to bee preſſed downe flat when the leaſt & lighteſt affliction doth lye vpon it. To which purpoſe one ſaith, that euery man is vnknowne to himſelfe before he be examined and tryed by tentation; euen as Peter was, in preſuming, ignorant of himſelfe, but by denying his Maſter learned with what ſtrength he was indued. For in his ſtumbling and falling he ſaw how vainely he had preſumed, hee wept, and by weeping came fruitfully to know what he was, and to bee that which before he was not. So whereas in our proſperity, wee through our ignorance are much deceiued in our outward eſtate, thinking it in reſpect of our owne wiſdome, riches, power and externall helps, to be ſo firme and ſtrong, that it cannot be weakned, and much leſſe ouerthrowne by any violence, as wee may ſee in the example of Dauid, who in his proſperitie concluded, that hee ſhould neuer be remoued: no ſooner doth the Lord hide his face in the time of trouble and affliction, and withdrawe from vs his helping hand, but we preſently ſee our exceeding frailtie and imbecilitie, that our ſtrength is weakeneſſe and our wiſedome fooliſhneſſe, and that we, with all wee haue are mortall, momentany, mutable, and but of ſhort and that vncertaine continuance, ſo that if God take our breath from vs we are gone and returne to our duſt; and if with his breath hee doe but blow vpon our wealth and ſtrength, they are preſently waſted and enfeebled. Finally, wheras when wee abound with worldly bleſſings, wee are ready falſely to flatter our ſelues with an opinion of our happineſſe; and to conclude vpon this weake ground, that wee are in the eſtate of grace, and highly aduanced in Gods loue and fauour: when affliction commeth, theſe fond and pernitious conceits, which are not the fruits of faith, but the curſed broode and off-ſpring of preſumption and ſecuritie, doe together with our outward proſperitie vaniſh away; and then wee ſeeke to gather better aſſurance, and to ground our faith vpon a more firme foundation, not iudging of our ſtate by external things, which happen alike to all, both iuſt and vniuſt, elect and reprobate; but by the ſanctifying gifts and graces of Gods holy ſpirit, wherewith wee are indued, and by the notable fruits of righteouſneſſe & holineſſe, which ſpringing from them, doe plainely appeare in our liues and conuerſation. And thus doe wee by our afflictions attaine vnto that excellent benefit of knowing our ſelues; which, next vnto the true ſauing knowledge of God, exceedeth all other kinds of knowledge in vſe and profit: for as he who ruleth his owne minde, is better than he that winneth a Citie; ſo he that knoweth this little world of himſelfe, and his own heart with all the ſecret turnings and windings of it, is in farre better ſtate therby, than he who knoweth the great vniuerſe and frame of Heauen and Earth, the ſecrets of nature, the deep and myſticall policies of common wealthes, yea all the liberall Arts and ſciences, and whatſoeuer other skill or wiſedome in the world, which is attained vnto by painfull inſtruction, or deerly purchaſed by long experience. For being well acquainted with our ſelues, wee plainly diſcern our owne vileneſſe, filthineſſe and guiltineſſe, and ſo are brought to ſeeke righteouſneſſe and perfection out of our ſelues in Ieſus Chriſt; and our owne weakenes, impotency, and inſufficiencie, that we may not reſt vpon the reed of our owne ſtrength, which would moſt deceiue vs when wee moſt leaned vpon it; but vpon the power of Gods might and the promiſed aſſiſtance of his holy ſpirit, which neuer faileth or forſaketh any that rely vpon him. And alſo hereby wee come to the knowledge of thoſe rich gifts & graces, wherewith God hath indued vs, & perceiue what excellency is in theſe peereleſſe pearles, and ſpirituall armour and munition, that ſo wee may giue God the glory of his owne gifts, and reioyce our ſelues in the fruition of them.

gnotus enim ſibi quiſque eſt ante interroga-tionem tentationis, ſicut ſe Petrus præſumendo ignorabat & negando didicit quàm vires haberet. In ſua ti-moratione intel-lexit falsò ſe præſumpſiſſe, fle uit & flendo meruit fructuoſe quod ſit, & eſſe quod
non fuit, Aug.
in Pſal. 58. enarrat.

Pſal. 30. 6.
Pſal. 104. 29.

Prou. 16. 32.

ȣ. 31. 9.

§. Sect. 5.
That the exerciſe of afflictions increaſeth our ſtrength to beare them.

But as the Lord vſeth afflictions as a notable meanes to diſcouer vnto vs our wants and weakeneſſe: ſo alſo for the confirming and increaſing of our ſpirituall ſtrength; for louing vs (as I haue ſhewed) not like a fond mother, who by her cockering and tender vſing of her children maketh them ſo weake, neaſh and effeminate, that they are not able to indure any hardneſſe; but like a wiſe father, ſeeking our good rather than our delight, he putteth vs to toile and labour, and exerciſeth vs in this conflict of afflictions not only vnto ſweat and teares, but ſometimes alſo vnto blood; that hereby hee may both preſerue the ſtrength wee haue from languiſhing with idleneſſe; and alſo may by this exerciſe increaſe it, and make vs more able for further ſeruice. For (as one ſaith) when wee are fatted and pampred with eaſe and ſloth, we grow faint and feeble, and are ſoon tired not only with labour, but alſo with bearing our owne waight; neither is vnhurt happineſſe able to ſuſtaine the weakeſt blow of aduerſe fortune. But when we daily contend with new calamities, continuall vſe and exerciſe in theſe euils, ſo thickneth and hardneth the skin, that being vnſenſible of ſmart, we doe not faint or yeeld in any aduerſity; or if we be ouerthrowne through the violence of our afflictions, yet (as it were) vpon our knees wee will fight and ſtriue againſt them. But this will better appeare if wee further conſider more diſtinctly, that our afflictions confirme & increaſe in vs both our ſtrength and power whereby we are inabled to beare the burthen of any calamitie without ſinking vnder the waight, and alſo our courage, fortitude, and chriſtian valour, whereby wee are hartned to indure the brunt of any incounter without ſhrinking or baſe yeelding in this ſpirituall warfare. Concerning the former point experience teacheth vs, that as other creatures, ſo alſo men, are made more weake and tender by ſoft and gentle vſage, & much diſabled to beare the brunt of any outward violence or aduerſe caſualtie, when (according to their kindes) they flouriſh in eaſe and proſperitie; and contrariwiſe that they are much ſtrengthened to indure any hardneſſe or aduerſitie when they are vſed and inured vnto it by continuall cuſtome. Thus wee ſee that oxen which are bred & brought vp in hard countries and common paſtures, are ſtronger to indure labour, than they which are fed and fatted in ſweet and pleaſant meddowes; and that by their labouring they are inabled to take much more fruitfull paines, than others that are pampred with eaſe and plentie. Thus the trees which grow in the ſoft and ſun-ſhine valley are neither ſtrong, ſolid, nor firmely rooted; but thoſe which ſtanding on the top of the mountaines are expoſed to all kinds of wind and weather, to boyſtrous blaſts and ſtormy tempeſts. So wee find by experience that their bodies are moſt able and actiue, who are inured to pains and labour; and that part of the body to bee moſt ſtrong and fit for imployment, which is moſt vſed and continually exerciſed; and contrariwiſe, that thoſe are moſt vveake and vveariſh, faint and feeble who languiſh in idleneſſe, and ſpend their time in eaſe and plenty; and that hand which is not accuſtomed to labour, to be ſo ſoft and tender, that it cannot indure the ſmalleſt paines; that hard and poore education maketh the beſt Souldiers, and by continuall cuſtome cauſeth want and watching, paines and toyleſome labour, ſcant diet and hard lodging to become familiar and eaſie to be indured: whereas plenty and proſperity, ſoft cloathing and dainty fare, doth ſo weaken and diſable the body, that it can indure no hardneſſe, but is more indangered with winde and weather, cold and hunger, than with the force and violence of the moſt warlike Enemies: that Mariners who haue beene accuſtomed to ſtormes and tempeſts, find ſmall alteration in their bodies in the rougheſt Seas and fowleſt weather; whereas freſh-water Souldiers, and tender Paſſengers cannot brooke the ſmell of the ſhip, nor ſight of the vvater, and are extremely Sea-ſicke when they are but a little toſſed with ſome ordinary winds. Finally, thus vvee ſee that by much running men become more nimble and better breathed, whereas ſloth and eaſe maketh them ſlow and purſie; that the daily Traueller goeth long journies with little vvearines, whereas they that keepe home are ſoone tyred and ſurbayted vvith going a fevv miles: and that the tender Gentleman taketh cold being in a vvarme houſe and vvell cloathed, vvhereas the poore Husbandman dareth the cold winds and nipping froſts with his bare head and naked breaſt; and is ſtrong to indure the whole day any toyleſome labour, when as the other panteth and fainteth vvith vvearineſſe, if he vvorke but one houre. And as it thus fareth vvith the body inured vnto paines and labour, ſo vvith the minde exerciſed vvith troubles, and accuſtomed to beare the burthen of the Croſſe; neither is the one more ſtrengthened vvith continuall vſe and practice to indure any outward toile; than the other inabled with patience and comfort to beare by the ſame meanes any croſſes and calamities. And therefore how weake and waſpiſh ſoeuer wee be in bearing afflictions, after wee haue long liued in eaſe and proſperity, yet if after much trouble and many tryals wee remayne weake and wayward, peeuiſh and impatient, it is a dangerous ſigne that we haue little or no ſpirituall vertue and ability in vs, according to the Wiſe mans ſaying, If thou be faint in the day of aduerſity, thy ſtrength is ſmall: ſeeing if any thing would make vs ſtrong, then would this exerciſe of bearing the croſſe. In regard whereof the afflicted Church out of her own experience ſaith, that it is good for a man to beare the yoke from his youth, becauſe as it is ſaid of Milo, that by accuſtoming himſelfe to beare a Calfe at the firſt, he came after to beare him when he was a Bull; ſo ſhall wee find our ſpirituall ſtrength increaſe with our burthen, ſuſtaining with patience and comfort the moſt intolerable weight of calamity and miſery, though at the firſt wee were ready to murmure, repine and ſhew great impatiency, when we were but touched with the leaſt trouble.

Languent per inertiam ſaginata, nec labore tantum, ſed mole & ipſo ſui onere deficiunt. Non fert vllum ictum illæſa fœlicitas, Senec. de Prouid. cap. 2.

Prou. 24.10.

Lament. 3.27.

§. Sect. 6. That God by

And as our afflictions doe much increaſe our ſtrength and abilitie, ſo alſo our Chriſtian fflictions increaſeth our ourage and Chriſtian rtitude.

ſtian courage and vndaunted fortitude; and whereas proſperitie maketh vs cowardly and fearefull, not daring to indure any danger, or to ſtand to it when we are incountred with any calamitie; our often conflicts with croſſes doe make vs valiant and couragious in bearing the greateſt brunt of theſe ſpirituall battayles, and ſo bold and hardy, that wee indure with patience the ſharpeſt aſſaults, and giue not one foote backe in the moſt deſperate dangers. The ſouldier when he firſt entreth into the field, feareth when he heareth but a falſe alarum, and is ready to ducke at euery ſhot; whereas after he hath paſſed deſperate dangers, and hath beene long exerciſed in many conflicts and skirmiſhes, hee becommeth ſo valorous and couragious, that hee dareth to venter vpon the puſh of the pike, and to fight at the cannons mouth: now leſſe fearing the cruell enemie, and killing bullet in a doubtfull aud dangerous battaile, than, when he was firſt trained, the paper ſhot, and the ſeeming encounters of his friends and fellowes. There is no wraſtler, fencer, or combatant, that contendeth againſt his aduerſarie with that ſpirit and courage, when he firſt commeth into the Theater; as he doth who hath beene accuſtomed to theſe exerciſes; and is not only heartened with eaſie victories but alſo after many foiles and falls, dangerous wounds and much blood-ſhed, hath in the end preuailed, and by many perils hath made his way to a glorious triumph. There is no Mariner is ſo bold and cheerefully confident in the leaſt ſhew of a Sea-faring danger, when hee firſt entreth the ſhip, and in his mouing houſe becommeth an inhabitant of this new appearing world of dreadfull waters; as hee who after innumerable ſtormes and dangerous tempeſts hath oftentimes arriued ſafely at the wiſhed hauen. And thus it alſo fareth with vs in theſe ſpirituall combats with troubles and calamities; for howſoeuer in the firſt conflict wee are maruellouſly cowardly and impatient in ſuffering the leaſt paine; yet when as wee haue been long exerciſed in theſe skirmiſhes, and after many foiles and fals, haue in the end through Gods gracious aſſiſtance obtained a ioyfull victorie, we exceedingly increaſe in a Chriſtian valour; both becauſe this common familiaritie with dangers and diſtreſſes breedeth in vs a careleſſe contempt, and neglect of them; and alſo becauſe it is the nature of true fortitude and Chriſtian courage (like the graine of muſtard ſeed) the more it is bruiſed the more to ſhew its ſtrength and vertue, and (like the palmetree or ſweete camomile) to thriue the better and ſpring the faſter, when it is preſſed and kept downe with the waight of afflictions. And therefore ſeeing by ſuſtaining the burthen of the croſſe we become ſtronger and more able to beare; and by often encountring theſe ſpirituall enemies, we are made much more valorous and couragious, let vs not feare that waight which will not cruſh vs, but increaſe our ſtrength; nor be daunted with the approaching of thoſe forces, which the more and ſtronger they are, the more they increaſe our fortitude & magnanimity; & by their ſharper aſſaulting do but make our victorie to become more glorious. It may be at the firſt this combate with afflictions will ſeeme irkeſome in preſent ſence, and terrible in reſpect of future expectation; but a little experience in this warfare will bring vs into better acquaintance and familiarity with theſe troubles and miſeries, and make vs neither feele their blowes when our skin is hardned, nor to feare their greateſt violence, when as wee finde that they doe not hurt vs. Now wee ſeeme weake and our burthen heauie; feeble in ſtrength and our enemies mighty and vnreſiſtable; but let vs poſſeſſe our ſoules with patience, ſeeing time and cuſtome will make vs equall, by lightning our loade and increaſing our ſtrength; by quelling their courage, and cauſing vs to become more valiant and magnanimous. There is in truth a ſeeming miſerie in croſſes and calamities, becauſe they are ſtrong at their firſt appearing, and terrible to fleſh and blood, becauſe they come masked in an vgly vizard, and doe preſſe vpon vs with a kind of neceſſity; but being accuſtomed a while to beare them company, wee become familiar and well acquainted with them; and then all feare vaniſheth when we finde them harmeleſſe, and wee would not (when they are gon) but that wee had injoyed their ſociety. Then neceſſity is turned into a vertue, and the yoake, which being taken vpon vs by compulſion, was ſo painefull & grieuous, doth by our patient bearing it become light and eaſie.

ontemptum ericulorum ſiduitas peri-clitandi dabit.
ec. de Pro-
id.cap. 4.

ti adjicit virtus la-
a. Senec.
.13.

Verberat nos & lacerat fortuna: patiamur. Non eſt ſaeuitia, certamen eſt; quo ſapius adierimus fortiores erimus. Senec. de Prouid. cap. 4.

Nihil miſerum eſt quod in naturam conſuetudo perduxit. Paulatim enim voluptati ſunt quæ neceſſitate caeperunt. Senec. de prouid cap. 4.

§. Sect. 7.
That God by afflictions doth worke and increaſe in vs temperance, ſobriety, modeſty and chaſtitie.

Finally, the Lord by our afflictions doth vſually worke in vs thoſe excellent gifts and graces of temperance, ſobriety, modeſty, chaſtity and purity: the which he effecteth both by an outward neceſſity, and by an inward care and watchfulneſſe. For whileſt in the time of our proſperity we abound with worldly bleſſings wee vſually abuſe them as prouocations vnto our owne luſts, and fuell vnto our ſinfull pleaſures; as abundance of riches to maintaine vs in light wanton and gariſh apparell; delicate meates & drinkes, as the meanes and occaſions of ſurfeting and drunkenneſſe, chambring and wantonneſſe, luſt and vncleaneſſe, riot and all manner of of exceſſe. And therefore the Lord ſeeing vs thus to ſurfet of this fulneſſe and plenty, and thereby to fall into moſt dangerous and deſperate diſeaſes of the ſoule; like a good Phyſition preſerueth or reſtoreth our ſpirituall health, by keeping or taking from vs theſe his benefits which wee peruert to our owne deſtruction. And when like mad men wee would abuſe theſe bleſſings as inſtruments and weapons, to wound our ſelues with worldly and wicked luſts, hee taketh them away, and turneth our riches and plenty into pouerty and penury, our health into ſickneſſe, our ſtrength into weakneſſe, our pleaſures into paine and miſery, and our liberty into reſtraint, that hee may make vs to bee ſuch as hee would haue vs, by vrgent neceſſity, when wee will not bee ſo out of our owne choiſe; cauſing vs (as it were) to faſt for want of meate, when wee will not doe it out of deuotion; to become chaſt for want of ſtrength and health, temperate in our meates and drinkes, and modeſt in our apparell, becauſe we want meanes to maintaine vs in exceſſe of diet, and variety of ſtrange and vaine attires. Neither doth the Lord, by our afflictions make vs thus temperate and ſober onely by this neceſſity; but by our owne care and watchfulneſſe. For thereby being brought vnto a ſight of our ſinnes in abuſing Gods bleſſings and benefits as incentatiues and prouocations to our own luſts, whereby wee haue iuſtly deſerued that hee ſhould thus ſtraiten his hand, and ſhorten our allowance; wee will euer after take better heed vnto our ſelues, that we doe not by the like ſinne incur the like or greater puniſhments: and bee euen ready to binde our ſelues by an holy vow, that wee will for the time to come liue temperatly & ſoberly, modeſtly and chaſtly, and neuer more ſo abuſe Gods bleſſings to his diſhonour and our deſtruction, if once againe he repoſſeſſe vs of them.

Chap. XXV.

That the Lord vſeth our afflictions as meanes to conuey vnto vs diuers worldly benefits.

§. Sect. 1. That by afflictions we profit much in ciuill wiſdome and policy.

NOw hauing ſpoken of the ſpirituall bleſſings which the Lord by afflictions deriueth vnto vs, reſpecting either God, our neighbours or our ſelues; wee are in the next place according to our order propounded to ſhew, that hee vſeth them as meanes and inſtruments to conuey vnto vs alſo diuers worldly benefits. As firſt, by theſe croſſes and calamities wee profit notably in wiſedome, ſound policie, and vſe-full knowledge; for as proſperity maketh men wanton, and wantonneſſe cauſeth them to become fooliſh and childiſh; in regard whereof it is truly ſaid, that the more the land exceedeth in fruitfulneſſe, the more the people exceede in fooliſhneſſe: ſo aduerſity and affliction doth quicken the vnderſtanding, and maketh vs to pull and gather all our wits together for our owne neceſſary vſe and benefit; and whereas whileſt wee flouriſh in the world, and abound in outward helps, wee wholy reſt vpon them, and giue our ſelues to ſloth and eaſe; when theſe outward props are taken from vs, and wee put to ſtand by our owne ſtrength; then wee doe beate our braines and ſeriouſly ſtudy, how we may by our wiſdome and policy, ſupply that which is wanting in theſe worldly helpes. In which reſpect affliction is fitly called the perfectour of wit, and the refiner of inuention, becauſe it forceth men by a kinde of vrgent neceſſity to looke about them, to ſearch into the ſecrets of nature, to obſerue the times and diſpoſitions of all with whom they are to deale, and to try a thouſand concluſions, that they may finde out the beſt and fitteſt meanes for the remouing their croſſes, and the ſupporting or repayring of their eſtates. Whereas if they ſhould haue authority and friends, health and wealth at will, their wits would mould and ruſt for want of vſe, ſeeing they neede not their helpe for the ſupplying of any wants: but are able to maintaine their eſtate by the preſent meanes which they haue about them. Neither doe our troubles and afflictions increaſe our wiſdome and knowledge only, as they ſharpen our inuention and quicken our wit, but alſo as they better our judgement and diſcretion, by that experience which we gaine in the time of our tribulation, without which the other were to ſmall vſe; for wit is beſt when it is bought at the higheſt rates, and then onely is profitable, when it is ſeaſoned and (as it were) ſealed vnto vs by deare experience; neither is it of any value whileſt it ſwimmeth in the braine, and only fitteth men for diſcourſe; but when it is brought into vſe and practice, and confirmed by experience, then it attayneth to higher perfection, and of wit becommeth prudence and wiſedome. As for example euery one can diſcourſe of the euils which accompany vnthriftineſſe; but hee onely wiſely vnderſtandeth them, who hath felt and taſted of them. So many can talke of the dangers of ſuretiſhip, and yet vpon the next occaſion run into it, thinking that though others haue beene vndone by the fayling of their friends, yet they ſhall not; but when this is confirmed vnto them by their owne experience, and their goods are ſold to pay others mens debts, and their bodies impriſoned becauſe all they haue will not ſatisfie the creditor; then, when they are once quit of theſe troubles they will bee wiſer for euer after, and (like the bird) warily auoid this ſnare wherein they were formerly catched and inſnared. So who knoweth not that innumerable miſchiefes follow ſudden raſhneſſe, and inconſiderate headineſſe; and yet ſo are men tranſported with the heate and violence of Nam quaſi inter ſe contraria ſint bona fortuna & mens bona; ita melius in malis ſapimus; ſecunda rectum auferunt. Senec. epiſt. 94.

of their paſſions and affections, that they are ready to ruſh into ſudden courſes; till being beaten with their owne rod and feeling the ſmart of their vnaduiſedneſſe they learne to vſe deliberation in their actions, and (as wee ſay) to looke before they leape. And finally, who vnderſtandeth not that ſurfetting and drunkenneſſe are the common cauſes of almoſt all diſeaſes; and yet men are ready to follow their appetite rather than their reaſon; and through immoderation to abuſe ſuch meates and drinkes as pleaſe their pallet; but when they haue once learned it by their owne experience, hauing by their intemperance fallen into ſome dangerous, and painefull ſickneſſe, then no more doth the burnt child dread the fire, than they doe carefully ſhun the cauſes of their griefe and ſmart.

§. Sect. 2. That by afflictions we are inabled to diſcerne our friends from flatterers.

Secondly our afflictions are notable meanes to make vs plainely to diſcerne our hearty and faithfull friends who loue our perſons, from paraſites and flatterers who only loue our proſperity and flouriſhing eſtate. For when wee abound with earthly bleſſings euery one is ready to fawne vpon vs, and to performe all good offices with an vſurious intent of deriuing hereby vnto themſelues ſome greater benefit, as it were, lending out good turnes that they may bee returned vnto them with fruitfull encreaſe. Whereby it commeth to paſſe that we cannot eaſily diſcerne who truely loue vs, and who only ſeeke their own good, or ours for their owne ſake; for oftentimes the flatterer in ſhew and outward ſeruices excelleth the faithfull friend, being more diligent to pleaſe and more ready at euery command: becauſe the true friend performeth all duties for his ſake whom hee loueth, the flatterer for his owne ſake that hee may aduance hereby his owne profit. And therefore ſeeing no man loueth an other ſo much as himſelfe, hereof it commeth to paſſe that as ſelfe-loue doth in heate, zeale and feruency much excell that loue which one friend vſually beareth vnto another; ſo the duties and ſeruices which ariſe and ſpring from it muſt needs according to the nature of the cauſe from which they grow, ſo much exceed all thoſe duties which proceed from friendly loue in outward diligence and ſeeming zeale, as ſelfe-loue excelleth the loue of a friend; and the deſire of our owne good, the deſire of aduancing the good of another. In regard whereof hee greatly erreth who chooſeth a friend among ſuiters who throng about his gate, and afterwards proueth him at a feaſt or banquet; becauſe euery one will bee a friend for his owne benefit, yet hee who is tied with no other bond than profit and aduantage, will when greater gaine is offered become a traytour. But affliction like the winde or fanne ſeuereth the chaffe of flattery, from the ſolid graine of faithfull friendſhip, making paraſites to flee from vs (as ſmoke driueth away Bees) when they can raiſe from vs no further aduantage. And as the only true touchſtone it diſcerneth a louer of a mans ſelfe from him who is a louer of vs; for according to the prouerbe, he who is a friend in need, is a friend indeed; and hee who ſticketh vnto vs in the time of aduerſity, and forſaketh vs not when wee are forſaken of the World, doth euidently ſhew that our perſon, and not our proſperity, was the object of his loue. In this reſpect therefore our afflictions are profitable, as they plucke from vs falſe hearted paraſites, which like the Iuy cling about vs to ſucke our ſap, and to make themſelues fat with our ſpoile: and diſcouer vnto vs our true friends, who are hardly diſcerned from the other till this time of tryall; for as the ſonne of Syrach ſaith, a friend cannot bee knowne in proſperity, and an enemy cannot be hiden in aduerſitie.

Errat qui amicum in atrio quærit, in conuiuio probat.

Eccluſ.12.8.

§. Sect. 3. That afflictions do crowne vs with a good name whilſt they diſcouer our ſpirituall graces.

Pro.22.1.
Eccleſ.7.3.

Thirdly afflictions are notable meanes to crowne vs, euen in this life, with a good name, which is better than gold and all riches, and ſweeter than the moſt odoriferous perfume or moſt coſtly oyntment. For whereas whileſt wee liue in eaſe and proſperity, the ſpirituall gifts and graces, which God hath beſtowed vpon vs, doe lie hid and vndiſcerned; when they come to the tryall of tribulation, they are plainely diſcouered and made knowne vnto all men. And as the ſtarres cannot be ſeene in the ſunſhine day, but when the darkeſt night commeth they appeare in all their beauty and brauery: ſo theſe ſhining vertues and graces of God, haue their light much obſcured in the day of proſperity, but when the darke night of affliction commeth, then they ſhine gloriouſly in their chiefeſt brightneſſe. Then doe theſe precious ointments ſend forth their moſt odoriferous ſmell, when our earthen veſſels and theſe brittle glaſſes of our bodies wherein they are contained, are cracked and broken, by being ſmitten with croſſes and calamities. Then doth this ſweete incenſe of grace & vertue yeeld the moſt fragrant ſent, when as it is caſt into this fire of afflictions. Then doth this ſpirituall gold appeare true and good, when it is tryed in this hot burning furnace. Then is the ſtrength of our faith manifeſted to Gods glory & our praiſe, not when wee idly ſit ſtill, but when wee wraſtle and contend with ſtrong tentations. Then doth our Chriſtian valour and fortitude moſt plainely appeare, not whileſt wee lye at eaſe in the ſafe garriſon, but when wee are aſſaulted with theſe mighty enemies, and after many conflicts get the victory. Finally then doth that precious diamond of true patience come to be approued & highly valued not whilſt it lieth vntouched in the rich cabinet, but when it is tryed vpon the Anuile of afflictions. For example; who had euer knowne, or knowing commended, the ſaith and obedience of Abraham, if at Gods commandement hee had not firſt willingly gone into voluntary baniſhment, and left his owne country and kindred; and afterwards beene ready to offer vp in ſacrifice his deareſt ſonne? Who had knowne of Iacobs ſaith and piety if he had not, being indangered by his Brother, wraſtled with God in prayers and ſtrong cryes, and ſo by an holy violence obtained the bleſſing? Who had diſcerned thoſe excellent graces of piety, fidelity, the feare of God, wiſedome and patience, which were in Ioſeph, if he had not been ſold into Egypt, accuſed by his miſtreſſe, and cruelly intreated both by his owne kindred and ſtrangers? Who had euer heard of thoſe glorious deliuerances of the Iſraelits, or vnderſtood how deare they were vnto God, had they not beene firſt vexed in the captiuity of Egypt? Finally who had knowne, or knowing magnified the patience of Iob, the piety and humility of Dauid, the vndanted courage and conſtancy of the holy Apoſtles, if they had not beene manifeſted by their troubles and afflictions? And this is one chiefe cauſe which mooueth the Lord to bring his Children into theſe tryals of tribulation, that the riches and excellency of his graces and vertues beſtowed vpon them, may clearely appeare, both to the aduancement of his glory that gaue them; and the fame and eſtimation of thoſe that haue them. For ſo the Apoſtle ſaith, that God afflicted the faithfull of thoſe times, that the tryall of their faith being much more precious than gold that periſheth (though it bee tryed with fire) might be found to their prayſe and honor, and glory, at the appearing of Ieſus Chriſt. And therefore if men are ready to take any paines, to hazard themſelues vnto any danger, and to ſuffer innumerable miſeries and extremities, that they may attaine vnto the vaine honour and glory of the world, though oftentimes they long outliue it, or if it laſt ſo long, doth but accompany them to the graue, and then rotteth as faſt as their carkeſſe: how ready and willing, yea how chearefull and ioyfull ſhould we be in ſuffering theſe croſſes and calamities, which doe ſo much aduance our ſpirituall fame and reputation, and ſet forth the prayſe of Gods rich graces and vertues in vs; and that not among the inconſtant vulgar who are ready to extoll and diſgrace with the ſame breath, but among Gods faithfull ſaints and ſeruants, who being truly iudicious are alſo conſtant in their prayſes?

Gen.12.1.4.& 22.2.3.
Gen.32.24.
Exod.14.
Iob.13.15.
2.Sam.15.26.
Act.5.45.
1.Pet.1.7.

§. Sect. 4.
That by afflictions we come to relliſh better Gods bleſſings and benefits.

Laſtly by our afflictions our enſuing proſperity is made more delightfull and gratefull; and theſe bitter croſſes make vs to relliſh much better the ſweetneſſe of Gods bleſſings. For there is no worldly thing ſo good and excellent, that hath not in the continuall vſe of it ſome glutting ſatiety, which would in ſhort time make it to become loathſome, vnleſſe our appetite were ſometime ſharpned, by the forbearing or wanting of it. There is a fulneſſe euen of honie it ſelfe, though it bee neuer ſo ſweet and delightfull, and this fulneſſe is accompanied with neglect and loathing; whereas the ſparing vſe of the courſeſt fare maketh it to haue a good relliſh, and to become pleaſant to the taſt and appetite. So the wiſe man ſaith; that the perſon that is full, deſpiſeth an hony combe, but vnto the hungry ſoule euery bitter thing is ſweet. The dantieſt fare, if it be ordinary, bringeth no delight, and wee find no daintineſſe in the taſt of it, vnleſſe it be rarely fed vpon, and ſo made dainty in the vſe; whereas the homelieſt meate hath an excellent relliſh, if it bee eaten after long faſting; and hereof it is, that men after full tables, doe voluntarily vſe ſome ſpare diet, and ſharken their ſtomacke and appetite by long abſtinence. The daies brightneſſe if it were continuall would become tedious; and the glorious light of the ſunne would bring wearineſſe, vnleſſe it were made gratefull by the nights darkneſſe. In a word pleaſure it ſelfe would not long pleaſe vs, if the glutting ſatiety of theſe ſweete meates were not taken away by abſtinence, or ſauced (as it were) with the ſowre ſauce of intermingled miſeries. And as common vſe of worldly benefits doth dull the appetite, and maketh it to loth them; ſo it taketh away from them their excellency and worth in our opinion, and and cauſeth the judgement to vilifie and contemne them; whereas if wee enjoy them ſparingly, and ſometime be vtterly depriued of them, then their worth is increaſed by their want, and they haue much better welcome at their comming againe, than they formerly had before they departed from vs. Thus that excellent iewell of health when it is continually enjoyed is ſcarce thought on, but then it is ſweet and moſt highly prized, when we haue long wanted it through ſome tedious and grieuous ſickneſſe. So liberty, though it be as precious as life, is but little regarded of thoſe who neuer felt the miſery of reſtraint; but after long impriſonment it becommeth moſt gratefull and delightfull. And thus riches are moſt eſteemed by them who haue formerly beene pinched with pouerty, and meate is moſt ſauory, when it is ſauced with hunger. Thus that victory is fulleſt of joy which is hardly obtained after a long, doubtfull and dangerous fight; and the ſafe harbor is then deſcried with moſt comfort and contentment of the paſſengers, after they haue eſcaped the perils of tempeſtuous ſtormes. Thus the delights of the ſpring are much more delightfull becauſe they follow the nipping froſts and fowle weather of lowring winter; and in a word thus all pleaſures which ſatiate and glut without mixture, doe become much more pleaſing, when they ſucced, and are often interchanged with croſſes and miſeries. To which purpoſe one ſaith, that in all humane affaires there can ſcarce be any true joy, vnleſſe dolefull ſorrow haue gone before, and the bitterneſſe of fore-paſſed griefes doth the more commend the ſweetneſſe of enſuing gladneſſe. So the huſbandman is moued by his painefull ſeed time, to rejoyce ſo much the more in his plentifull harueſt, &c. And therefore ſeeing by theſe afflictions the Lord doth but ſauce his benefits, that wee may enioy them with the more delight; and taketh away for a while his earthly bleſſings that after they are reſtored they may bring with them the greater pleaſure; let vs by this conſideration be mooued to beare theſe croſſes with patience and comfort. And as the vſurer, though he make an idoll of his gold, yet is content to want it for a time, becauſe when the terme is expired, hee expecteth to haue it returned with ſome increaſe: ſo though our hearts too much adhere to earthly things, yet let vs bee content to forbeare their company for a while, ſeeing vpon their returne the joy and comfort which wee take in them ſhall bee much increaſed. Euen the verieſt Epicure (as we ſee) vſeth ſharpe and ſowre ſauces to make his pleaſant meates to become more ſauory, and is ſometime content to preſcribe vnto himſelfe a voluntary faſt to ſharpen his ſtomacke, and ſet an edge on his appetite; that ſo afterwards hee may feed vpon his dainty cates with more delight: and why then ſhould wee not bee willing to vſe this temporary abſtinence when God preſcribeth it, who being infinite in wiſedome and loue towards vs, knowes beſt how to delight his children for their greateſt benefit, and ſo to ſauce thoſe earthly comforts, as that they may bring vnto vs the greateſt pleaſure and content? Finally ſeeing that is ſweete in remembring, which was ſowre in ſuffering, and ſeeing when wee are in the middeſt of our delights, it is not the leaſt pleaſure to thinke that wee were once miſerable, and caſting our eye backward, to looke vnto the ſnares out of which wee are eſcaped, let this addition vnto our future ioyes giue ſome eaſe to our preſent ſmart; and let vs for a time indure theſe miſeries with patience, the remembrance whereof will make vs the more happy for euer after.

Pro.27.7.

ironym.
ph.ad ægro-
m amicum.
Tom.4.

d durum pati, nedulce ecc. in
col. ſu-

CHAP. XXVI.

That the Lord vſeth afflictions as a notable meanes to preſerue vs from condemnation, and to further our eternall glory and happineſſe.

§. Sect. 1. That the Lord by afflictions preſerueth vs from condemnation.

BY that which hath beene ſaid it appeareth, that the Lord by our afflictions communicateth vnto vs many temporary benefits, making vs thereby partakers both of his ſpirituall and ſauing graces, and alſo of earthly and worldly bleſſings. Now according to our order propounded wee are to ſhew, that he alſo vſeth them as meanes to conueigh vnto vs ſuch benefits as are euerlaſting, and doe reſpect the life to come. And theſe are of two ſorts; for by theſe chaſtiſements and fatherly corrections the Lord both preſerueth vs from euerlaſting condemnation, and alſo furthereth and aduanceth our eternall glory and endleſſe happineſſe. Concerning the former wee are to know, that whereas wee in our own nature and diſpoſition are ready to take ſuch wayes, and to runne ſuch courſes, as would, if we continued in them, bring vs in the end to endleſſe woe and miſery; the Lord in his infinite loue and mercy, ſtoppeth and ſtayeth vs from going on, by caſting theſe blockes and buſhes before vs, that by an holy violence and profitable neceſſitie we may be forced to turne backe againe vnto him, and ſo bee ſaued from this deſperate danger. And as the carefull huſband-man ſetteth a hedge of ſharpe thornes about his wels and deepe pits to keepe his cattell from falling into them: ſo our gracious God, out of his ſpeciall loue and care ouer vs, doth with theſe thornie hedges of trouble and affliction, preſerue vs (as wee are ranging and rouing in the fields of this world) from falling into, and periſhing in the pit of perdition. In our ſelues wee are ready like ſilly ſheep, to wander out of the right way which leadeth vnto happineſſe, into the bypaths of ſinne and wickedneſſe; and ſo to become a prey vnto Sathan, who like a greedy wolfe rangeth about, that getting vs within his reach, he may ſeaze vpon and vtterly deſtroy vs: and therefore our carefull ſhepheard watcheth ouer vs with his prouidence, and when he ſeeth vs thus to goe aſtray, he vſeth theſe afflictions, as it were, the dog of the flocke, to fetch vs backe againe, and therewith as with the ſhepheards crooke and rod, hee pulleth vs vnto him, and driueth vs forward in the paths of holineſſe and righteouſneſſe, which will ſafely bring vs into thoſe heauenly folds of endleſſe happineſſe. If wee were left vnto our owne libertie, wee would like the fooliſh bird flee from our Lord and maſter, and ſo become a prey to helliſh fiends, who like rauenous kites, would ſeaze vpon vs; and therefore with theſe ſharpe kniues of affliction hee clippeth our wings to hinder vs from taking this pernitious flight, and reſtraineth our licentious liberty, by putting vs into theſe cages of reſtraint, that ſo wee may bee preſerued ſafe from periſhing in theſe dangers. Finally if wee might haue our owne wils, we would, like wanton and vntamed heifers, feede and take our paſtime in the pleaſant paſtures of ſinne, and would gladly keepe companie with wicked worldlings ordained to deſtruction; but howſoeuer the Lord ſuffereth theſe fat buls of Baſan to feede and pamper themſelues with theſe delights, to liue at eaſe, leape and friske about and take their pleaſure, becauſe hee hath appointed them to bee ſlaughtered in the ſhambles of perdition; yet hee reſtraineth vs from this wicked fellowſhip, by putting vpon vs this yoke of chaſtiſement; and cauſeth vs to feede in bare fields, becauſe hee is purpoſed to vſe our ſeruice, that wee may injoy life eternall, and not accompany them in a common deſtruction. So that when we are iudged (we may ſay with the Apoſtle that) wee are chaſtened of the Lord that wee may not for euer be condemned with the world. To which purpoſe a worthy Father ſaith, that when God doth correct his children, & vexe them here with the ſtinging whips of wholſome and holy chaſtiſements, he exerciſeth diſcipline before iudgement, and ſheweth his loue in ſcourging them, in that hee therefore correcteth them that he may not finde them ſuch as are fit to bee condemned. And therefore ſeeing the Lord vſeth our afflictions as notable meanes, to preſerue vs from falling into euerlaſting condemnation, by ſeuering vs from wicked worldlings, and keeping vs from accompanying them in the pleaſant broad way which leadeth to deſtruction: as alſo by reſtraining vs from ſinne when wee are ready to fall into it, or pulling vs out of it by vnfained repentance, when wee are already fallen (as I haue before more largely proued) great reaſon haue wee to beare theſe chaſtiſements, not onely with patience and meekneſſe, but alſo with ioy and thankefulneſſe; For (as one ſaith) it is better to bee burned with the flame of a feauer, than with the flame of vices; ſeeing by this the fier of Hell is kindled againſt vs, the torment whereof is intolerable and euerlaſting. Let vs not then thinke any momentanie afflictions heauie and hard to bee borne, which helpe to free vs from thoſe endleſſe tortures, yea rather let vs prayſe and magnifie Gods mercy in them, in that being in compariſon leſſe than the byting of a flye, they by awakening vs out of the ſleep of ſinne and ſecurity, do preſerue vs from being ſtung euerlaſtingly with that deadly ſtinging ſerpent of death and deſtruction; and being leſſe to bee eſteemed than the pricke of a pin, doe helpe to free vs from the tormenting racke of Gods inraged wrath.

1. Cor. 11, 32.

Diligit quem flagellat, nolens inuenire quem damnet. Auguſt. ſenten. Tem. 3.

Quis neſcit quòd multò melius eſt ardere flammis febrium, quam flammis vitiorum? Gregor.

§. Sect. 2. That God by our afflictions furthereth our euerlaſting glory and ſaluation.

But let vs conſider further, that as the Lord in his infinite loue vſeth afflictions as a notable meanes to perſerue vs from condemnation: ſo alſo for the furthering of our ſaluation, and increaſing of our happineſſe. For as one ſaith, when as theſe euils of puniſhment torture vs, and in torturing doe not extort from vs the euill of ſinne; not onely the ſoule is poſſeſſed by patience, but alſo when the body its ſelfe doth meekely indure affliction or temporarie deſtruction, it gaineth hereby ſecure & immoueable ſafety, ioyned with euerlaſting felicity; and ſo by ſorrow and death, inuiolable health and happy immortality is procured. And this is the chiefe end at which (next vnto his owne glory) God aimeth in all our afflictions; for euery where wee beare about in our body the dying of our Lord Ieſus, that the life of Ieſus might alſo bee made manifeſt in our bodies, as the Apoſtle ſpeaketh; and as elſewhere he ſaith, therefore are wee tryed with tribulaons, that our patience and faith being approued wee may bee counted worthy of the kindome of God; yet not through our owne merit, but through Gods gracious acceptance; for there is no compariſon betweene the ſmalneſſe of our ſufferings and the greatneſſe of the reward, though the Lord in his infinite mercy is content to repute vs worthy of this ſuperexcellent weight of glory for theſe our light and momentany afflictions. So the Authour of the Booke of Wiſedome ſaith, that the righteous hauing beene a little chaſtized ſhall bee greatly rewarded; for God proued them and found them worthy for himſelfe. To the ſame purpoſe an ancient Father ſpeaking of Gods end in chaſtening his Children ſaith; Thou giueſt them correction, that thou maieſt not take thy mercy from them; thou beateſt them for their contumacy, that thou mayeſt beſtow vpon them the promiſed patrimony: Neither is it any wonder if thou correcteſt thoſe being little, whom being come to ripe age in Chriſt thou wilt make thy heires. Thou therefore ſcourgeſt theſe, but withall thou inſtructeſt and preſerueſt them in ſafety; whereas thou ſpareſt the wicked for a time, that thou maieſt condemne them for euer. Thou inſtructeſt them to know thee, thou exerciſeſt them to feare thee, that thou mayeſt crowne them with glory. So another asketh the reaſon why God permitteth the faithfull to be temped? Is it not (ſaith he) that his vertue may hereby be tryed and exerciſed, and hee attaine vnto greater happineſſe, for it is a more glorious victory not to conſent being tempted, than if hee could not at all bee ſubject to temptation? And this conſideration moued Moſes not only to beare with patience affliction, when Cum torquent aliqua mala, & non extorquent opera mala, non ſolum anima per patientiam poſſidetur &c. Auguſt. li. de patien, cap. 8.

2. Cor. 4. 10.

2. Theſ. 1. 5.

Patior in terris vt potiar Cælo.

2. Cor. 4. 17.

Wiſd. 3. 5.

Das diſciplinam vt non auferas miſericordiam. Cædis contumacem vt reddas ei promiſſam hæreditatem &c. Idiota apud Orthodoxogr. de patien. vere contempl. c. 1. Erudit ad ſcientiam, exercet ad timorem vt coronet ad gloriam. Ibidem. c. 12. Auguſt. de. ciuit. dei, lib. 11, cap. 6.

when through vrgent neceſſity and vnauoidable violence it was forced vpon him; but voluntarily to chooſe tribulation with Gods children, rather than to be diuided from their ſociety, becauſe hee knew that after his tryals being approued, there was a Crowne of happineſſe reſerued for him. For ſo it is ſaid that hee refuſed to bee called the ſonne of Pharaohs daughter, and choſe rather to ſuffer aduerſity with the people of God, than to enioy the pleaſures of ſinne for a ſeaſon; eſteeming the rebuke of Chriſt greater riches than the treaſures of Egypt; becauſe he had reſpect to the recompence of reward. Yea, this was a notable incouragement to our Sauiour Chriſt himſelfe in bearing thoſe great afflictions and calamities which were laid vpon him, whoſe example the Apoſtle propoundeth vnto vs for our imitation. Let vs runne (ſaith he) with patience the race that is ſet before vs; looking vnto Ieſus the authour and finiſher of our faith, who for the ioy that was ſet before him endured the croſſe, and deſpiſed the ſhame, and is ſet at the right hand of the throne of God. And ſurely if we alſo would continually fixe the eyes of our mindes vpon the excellency and eternity of theſe heauenly joyes, and conſider with our ſelues that our ſhort and light afflictions doe much further vs in attayning vnto them, it would be a notable inducement to make vs beare them not onely with patience and comfort, but euen to triumph ouer them with great rejoycing. Eſpecially if we conſider further, that it is not the bare bearing of theſe afflictions that doth intitle vs to this happines, but when with our patience we do ouercom them; for as the Apoſtle ſaith, then are wee to bee accounted bleſſed not when we ſuffer, but when wee patiently indure in theſe ſufferings; then ſhall wee bee copartners with Gods Saints in that glorious Kingdome, when wee are companions with them, not onely in tribulation, but alſo in patience, as the Apoſtle Iohn conjoyneth them: then will God giue vs the crowne of life, when hauing tryed vs with afflictions hee hath found vs faithfull vnto the death: Then ſhall we receiue the Garland when wee haue got the victory. And then, and not before, ſhall wee triumph in glory when wee haue fought a good fight, and ouercome and put to flight theſe our ſpirituall enemies.

11.25,26.

12.1,2.

5,10,11.

19.

10.

But let vs ſomewhat more particularly conſider, how and in what reſpects theſe momentany afflictions doe further vs in attayning vnto euerlaſting happineſſe. And firſt we are to know, that our croſſes and calamities doe helpe vs forward towards theſe heauenly joyes, as they doe fit and prepare vs for the fruition of them. And this they doe in a double reſpect: firſt, as they make vs weary of the World, when wee finde ſuch hard entertainment, and willing and deſirous to arriue in our heauenly Country, where we expect better welcome. For as by the afflictions of Egypt, the Iſraelites were inflamed in their deſires to leaue that Country, whereas they could haue beene contented to haue liued and died there, if they had enjoyed in it eaſe, peace and plenty; and when their oppreſſions were increaſed, then and not before, ſet their hearts on the promiſed Land, their face to ſeeke it, and their feet in the way which led vnto it: So when as wee are ſo addicted to the World, that if without moleſtation wee could enjoy the vanities of it, we would be content, yea, earneſtly deſire to continue ſtill in it; the Lord cauſeth this ſpirituall Pharaoh to vexe and oppreſſe vs; with which ſeruitude being throughly wearied, we deſire to forſake the place of our miſerable bondage, that wee may be freed from theſe afflictions, and earneſtly deſiring to be in our heauenly Country, where wee expect to find and enjoy ſweet reſt, peace, and fulneſſe of all ſpirituall joy, we thinke of ſetting our feet toward the holy Land, and of walking in the way of righteouſneſſe and holineſſe which leadeth vnto it. To this purpoſe one ſaith, that if we rightly obſerue the courſe of this life we ſhall find nothing firme or conſtant, but as the Traueller paſſeth ſometimes by pleaſant Plaines, and ſometimes by rough and vneuen wayes; ſo wee, whileſt wee remayne in this life, doe one while meete with proſperity, and another while with aduerſity, which interchangeably ſucceed one another, and change their courſe by turnes. And therefore ſeeing wee are in all eſtates ſubject to changes and alterations, our minds ſhould neither be exalted with proſperity, nor dejected with aduerſity; but with all our hearts wee are earneſtly to deſire to be in that place, where all things which are good are alſo permanent, and where there is no interchange betweene proſperity and aduerſity. To which end God ſo ordereth it by his diuine Prouidence, that in this life either aduerſity followeth proſperity, or proſperity aduerſity; that one while being humbled we may learne to mourne for our ſins, and another while being exalted we may retaine in our minds the remembrance of aduerſity, as the authour of humility. Againe, afflictions doe fit and prepare vs for our heauenly happineſſe, as they ſerue for helps and meanes, to clenſe and purifie vs from the filth of our corruptions and pollution of ſin. For whereas no impure or baſe mettall; can euer come into this treaſury of bleſſedneſſe; afflictions are that fiery furnace wherein we are purged and refined from the droſſe of our corruptions; according to that of the Prouerbs; Take the droſſe from the ſiluer, and there ſhall come forth a veſſell for the finer. Whereas onely the pureſt graine ſhall be ſtored vp in theſe Grainers of happineſſe, afflictions are the winde and fanne which purge

Sect. 3. afflicti-fit and pare vs for Kingdome
Heauen.

Gregor. Epiſt. ex regiſtr. l.2. indict. 11. c.90.

Prou.25.4.

and clenſe vs from the chaffe of ſinne; whereas no vncleane thing can enter in thither, theſe troubles and croſſes are the meanes to waſh, and purge vs, as they bring vs vnto God by vnfained repentance. Finally, whereas faire and wel-ſquared ſtones only ſhall be placed in that heauenly building of the new Ieruſalem, afflictions are thoſe hammers and tooles whereby wee are ſmoothed from the bunches and knobs of worldly ſuperfluities, carnall cares, and earthly loue. And as the Lord in building his materiall Temple tooke order that the ſtones ſhould be hewen, cut and poliſhed, in the Quarreyes, becauſe hee would not haue ſo much as the noyſe of a hammer to be heard in his Houſe; ſo in the building of his ſpirituall and triumphant Church his Will is that the liuely ſtones appointed for this worke ſhould be hewed and hammered, ſquared and prepared with croſſes and troubles in the quarry of this World; becauſe hee is purpoſed that no touch of tribulation ſhould diſquiet and moleſt vs, when as wee are once placed in his heauenly Temple. For there all teares ſhall be wiped from our eyes, and there ſhall bee no more death, neither ſorrow, nor crying, nor paine, as the holy Ghoſt ſpeaketh. In which reſpect one fitly compareth the Chriſtians life to the Palme-tree which in it lower parts is enfolded with dry and rough barke, and therefore vnpleaſant to be touched; but in the vpper parts it is greene, beautifull and fruitfull, ſpreading it ſelfe abroad with comely largeneſſe: for ſo the faithfull mans life is here below on earth deſpiſed, vnpleaſant, encloſed and compaſſed about (as it were) with a rough rinde of troubles and afflictions; but aboue in Heauen it ſhall be delightfull, glorious, and abounding, through our fruition of God, with the fruits of bleſſedneſſe.

Apoc.21.4.

Greg. Moral. lib.29 cap.25.

§. Sect.4. That by our afflictions wee are aſſured of euerlaſting happineſſe; firſt through Gods gracious promiſes made to the faithfull which are afflicted.

Secondly, afflictions doe further vs in attayning vnto heauenly happineſſe, as they doe, whileſt we liue here, aſcertaine and aſſure vs, that wee ſhall enjoy them in the life to come; and ſo enter vs by the aſſurance of faith and hope into the preſent poſſeſſion of euerlaſting glory. The which aſſurance we attaine vnto, both by meditation in Gods Word, and by the conſideration of his workes and adminiſtration of his righteous judgement. For in the Scriptures wee ſhall find, that the Lord hath bound himſelfe by manifold gracious promiſes, that he will giue euerlaſting life and happineſſe vnto all who being afflicted in this World, doe with faith, patience, and humility beare their croſſe. So hee ſaith to his afflicted Church: For your ſhame you ſhall receiue double, and for confuſion they ſhall reioyce in their portion: for in their land they ſhall poſſeſſe them double: euerlaſting ioy ſhall be vnto them. And the holy Apoſtle aſſureth vs, that if wee bee dead with Chriſt, we ſhall alſo liue with him; if we ſuffer with him, we ſhall alſo reigne with him, and that the croſſes of this life, are not worthy the Crowne and glory which ſhall bee ſhewed vs in the life to come; ſeeing as elſewhere hee ſaith, Theſe ſhort and momentany afflictions ſhall cauſe vnto vs a farre moſt excellent and an eternall waight of glory. And hereof it is that our Sauiour pronounceth them bleſſed, who in this life are exerciſed with afflictions, becauſe, profiting by them, they are ſo many certaine ſignes and vndoubted pledges of their future happineſſe. Bleſſed are they that mourne for they ſhall bee comforted. Bleſſed are yee poore, for yours is the Kingdome of God. Bleſſed are yee that hunger now, for yee ſhall be ſatiſfied; Bleſſed are yee that weepe now, for yee ſhall laugh, Bleſſed are yee when men hate you, and when they ſeparate and reuile you, and caſt out your name as euill, for the ſonne of mans ſake. Reioyce yee in that day and be glad, for behold your reward is great in Heauen. So the Apoſtle Iames ſaith that, The man is bleſſed that endureth tentation, becauſe when hee is tryed hee ſhall receiue the crowne of life, which the Lord hath promiſed to them that loue him. By which it appeareth, that if with patience wee beare the croſſe, we ſhall be alſo partakers of the Crowne; if wee indure the fight and obtaine the victory, then ſhall we alſo triumph in glory. With which conſideration Eliphaz perſwadeth to patience in afflictions; Behold (ſaith hee) Bleſſed is the man whom God correcteth: therefore refuſe not thou the chaſtening of the Almighty. And Chriſt encourageth the Angell of the Church of Smyrna with this conſolation to bee conſtant and faithfull in his ſufferings. Feare none of theſe things (ſaith he) which you ſhall ſuffer, behold it ſhall come to paſſe that the Deuill ſhall caſt ſome of you into priſon, that yee may be tryed, and yee ſhall haue tribulation ten dayes. Bee thou faithfull vnto the death, and I will giue thee the Crowne of life. And the Apoſtle Paul thus comforteth himſelfe after all the miſeries which hee had ſuffered in his ſpirituall warfare; I haue fought (ſaith hee) a good fight and haue finiſhed my courſe; I haue kept the faith, from hence-forth is laid vp for mee the Crowne of righteouſneſſe, which the Lord the righteous Iudge ſhall giue me at that day. Neither in truth can there be a more effectuall conſolation in our troubles and diſtreſſes, than when wee are by them aſſured out of Gods Word that after theſe light and momentany afflictions, we ſhall enjoy vnſpeakable and endleſſe happineſſe. For (as one ſaith) wee ſhall not feele the pinching miſeries of this life, whileſt with the whole intention of our mindes wee fixe our thoughts vpon our future hopes. But wee ſhall be like a valiant Warriour, who either feeleth not, or contemneth the griefe of his wounds, whileſt all the powers of his mind are wholly

Eſay 61.7.

2.Tim.2.11,12.

Rom.8.17,18.

2.Cor.4.17.

Math.5.4. Luke 6.20, 22.23.

Iames 1.12.

Iob 5.17.

Apoc.2.10.

2.Tim.4.8.

ly taken vp with thinking vpon his future victory, &c. For ſo doth aſſured hope ouercome things inſtant, that that in a ſort beginneth to be which is to come, and that endeth which is preſent, and maketh vs like to a Woman in the paines of Child-birth, who whileſt ſhe hopeth aſſuredly to haue a ſonne, lightly eſteemeth of her ſorrowes in bearing him.

Sect. 5. ...hat by Gods ...orkes the ...ithful which ...e afflicted ...y be aſſured ...f heauenly ...ppineſſe.

But as by afflictions wee gather aſſurance of euerlaſting happineſſe belonging vnto vs out of Gods Word; ſo may we be more confirmed in this aſſurance by Gods works, and the adminiſtration of his righteous judgements. For the Lord to ſhew the infiniteneſſe and omnipotency of his Wiſdome and Power, doth bring vſually one contrary out of another, as light out of darkneſſe, good out of euill, happineſſe out of miſery, joy out of ſorrow, and the higheſt exaltation vnto heauenly glory, out of the loweſt abjection and humiliation through earthly afflictions and calamities. And as our Sauiour was ſent, by his Word to caſt downe ſtrong holds, and to leuell and make equall with the ground all that lifteth vp and aduanceth it ſelfe, and contrariwiſe to raiſe him vp that is dejected, to preach good tydings vnto the poore, to bind vp the broken hearted, to preach liberty to captiues, to comfort all that mourne, giuing them beauty for aſhes, the oyle of ioy for mourning and the garment of gladneſſe for the ſpirit of heauineſſe; ſo accordingly he doth in act and deed powerfully effect this his good will and pleaſure, bringing men out of miſery vnto felicity, and out of the depths of Hell into the Kingdome of Heauen. Whereas contrariwiſe hee vſually pulleth downe that which is exalted in the World, and out of the greateſt worldly proſperity, bringeth men into euerlaſting woe and miſery. Both which our Sauiour ſignifieth in that Parable of Diues and Lazarus; for as the rich man who ſurfetted of worldly delights, and abounded with all earthly bleſſings, was ſtript of all, and caſt into Hell torments, whereas hee could not obtaine ſo much as a drop of cold water to coole his tongue; ſo Lazarus (who wanted both meanes and friends, and had not the priuiledge of the Dogs granted vnto him, which were allowed to eat the crums that fell vnder the rich mans table) was out of this worldly miſery, carried by the Angels into Abrahams boſome. And this viciſſitude of weale and woe, earthly miſery and heauenly happineſſe, not only was ſignified in the deed done, but alſo in Abrahams ſpeech, which being ſpoken in a Parable belongeth vnto all who are in the like condition. Remember that thou in thy life time receiuedſt thy pleaſures, and likewiſe Lazarus paine; now therefore is hee comforted and thou art tormented. And thus thoſe, whom the Apoſtle Iohn ſeeth adorned with the long white Robes of glory and immortality, are ſaid to be ſuch, as came out of great tribulation, although their garments had not their whiteneſſe by being waſhed in the teares of their ſorrowes and trouble, but in the bloud of the Lambe, as it is there expreſſed. And this is juſt with God that the faithfull ſhould (as it were) by the gates of Hell trauell towards Heauen, and through many miſeries paſſe into euerlaſting felicity, that (as one ſaith) that ſaluation which was willingly loſt for the obtayning of momentany pleaſure might againe bee recouered by patient ſuſtayning of temporary griefe and miſery. And contrariwiſe that the vngodly and wicked, who flouriſhing in worldly proſperity, abuſed Gods good bleſſings for the diſhonour of God, and oppreſſion of his ſeruants, ſhould come to a day of reckoning, when as being found guilty, they ſhall be ſtript of all, and receiue puniſhment according to their deſerts; And with this fitly ſorteth the ſaying of the Apoſtle, It is a righteous thing with God to recompence tribulation to them that trouble you; And to you which are troubled reſt with vs, when the Lord Ieſus ſhall ſhew himſelfe from Heauen with his mightie Angels, &c. Neither haue we only by our afflictions when we profit by them, ſome aſſurance from that viciſſitude of earthly miſery and heauenly glory before ſpoken of; but alſo may haue it moſt ſtrongly confirmed by an Argument taken from juſtice, which muſt needs be in the adminiſtration of Gods righteous judgements. For when we ſee that our ſelues and others, who truly and ſincerely feare and ſerue the Lord, are ſubject to innumerable troubles, and (as the Prophet ſpeaketh) are afflicted euery morning, one miſery (like the waues of the Sea) following in the necke of another, whereas contrariwiſe the wicked contemners of God and goodneſſe, abound with all earthly bleſſings, and flouriſh in the proſperity of the World; from hence wee may neceſſarily and infallibly conclude, that the righteous Iudge of Heauen and Earth, who will render vnto euery man according to his works, hath moſt certainly appointed a time for the puniſhing of their ſinne, and the rewarding according to his gracious and free promiſes, our vertues and holy endeuours; for the full freedome of his faithfull ſeruants out of all their miſeries, and crowning of their faith, patience and obedience, with glory and happineſſe; and alſo for the condemnation and deſtruction of wicked reprobates, who like malicious enemies haue all their life prouoked his wrath, and diſhonoured his Name by their ſin and impiety. Neither will it ſtand with naturall reaſon, that God infinite in juſtice and goodneſſe, ſhould create and ordaine his beſt creatures who are moſt carefull of his ſay 61.1,2,3.

ke 16,

[illegible]

Apoc.7.14.

Et iuste salus illa perpetua quæ turpiter amiſſa eſt per voluntatem, fortiter recipitur per dolorem. Auguſt. de Geneſ. ad literam lib.3.c.15.

2.Theſ.1.6,7.

Pſal.73.14.

glory vnto woe and miſery in the world; and thoſe who are outragiouſly wicked to flouriſh in proſperity and abound in all earthly bleſſings, if hee had not appointed an after-reckoning, and ſecond judgement, for the rewarding of the godly, who are here afflicted, and the puniſhment of the wicked, who are in worldly priuiledges and prerogatiues ſo highly exalted and aduanced. And therefore ſeeing by our afflictions we haue ſo many wayes aſſurance of euerlaſting life and happineſſe, let vs indure them with patience, comfort and rejoycing; for if there were no other fruit or benefit ariſing from them, this alone were ſufficient to counteruaile and infinitely to ouer-weigh all the griefes and miſeries which are incident to the momentany and vncertaine life of man; ſeeing they being light ſhall haue an end before or with vs; whereas this ſuperexcellent weight of glory, which they ſeale and confirme vnto vs, is infinite and euerlaſting. If then worldly men are content to endure any labour, to hazard themſelues to innumerable dangers, and to ſuffer many and grieuous miſeries, that they may be aſſured of earthly things, their ſtrongeſt aſſurances, being but vncertainties, and the beſt things aſſured, but trifling vanities; if the husbandman toyle and labour in the ſeed time, in hope of a plentifull harueſt; notwithſtanding that his expectation is often fruſtrated, by many accidents, as foule and vnſeaſonable weather, too much drought, or too much raine, Wormes, Cankers, Caterpillers, and ſuch like; If the Souldier ſuffer all thoſe miſeries which are incident to his profeſſion, as watching, cold, hunger, and be ready with patience and courage to run into innumerable deſperate dangers, which euery day bring him to the very confines of Deaths kingdome, and all to obtaine either the vaine breath of mens prayſes, or ſome ſmall pay to defray his charges; and if the Marchant compaſſe Sea and Land, and run vnknown courſes, with much pains and great perill, to get ſome wealth which he is vncertaine whether hee ſhall obtaine or no; or hauing obtayned it may after a tedious Voyage periſh in the long deſired Port, or bee ſtolne or taken from him, by outward violence, when he commeth to land: with what patience and comfort ſhould wee endure all our paines and labour, and beare all the croſſes and calamities, which giue vnto vs when we profit by them, moſt certaine aſſurance of ſuch riches, honours, and pleaſures, as being vnualuable and vnconceiueable, are alſo out of all danger of comming, by any outward accident, eyther vnto loſſe or end.

§. Sect. 6. That afflictions keepe vs in the way of righteouſneſſe which leadeth to euerlaſting happineſſe, Thirdly, wee are furthered by our afflictions in attayning vnto heauenly happineſſe, as they are vſed by God as meanes to keepe vs in the right way, or way of righteouſnes, which leadeth vnto them. For whereas by our naturall corruption wee are ready to wander into the by-paths of ſin, and to goe into the broad way which leadeth to deſtruction, being allured by the inticing bayts of worldly vanities, the Lord (as hath beene ſhewed) maketh afflictions to ſerue as a thorny hedge and ſtrong fence to keepe vs in our right courſe, and to reſtraine vs from digreſſing and going aſtray. And when being ſayling in the Sea of this miſerable World, towards the Hauen of euerlaſting reſt, wee are ready to liſten to the ſweet Syren tunes of carnall pleaſures, and leaping out of our ſhip of ſafety the true and inuiſible Church, to periſh by adhering to them in the gulfe of deſtruction; God in loue vnto vs vſeth our afflictions, as wax, to ſtop our eares, that we may not harken to theſe bewitching Songs but may without diſtraction hold on our courſe which will bring vs at the laſt to the Port of Bleſſedneſſe. Neither doe our croſſes only keepe vs in the right way which bringeth vs to heauenly joy and glory, but alſo they haſten our ſpeed in trauayling of it; and whereas in our owne diſpoſition we are ſluggiſh and ſlothfull in our journey, and either ready to turne backe againe, to ſit ſtill, or at leaſt to make ſlow haſte in going forward, the Lord vſeth afflictions as goads and ſpurs to quicken our dulneſſe, and as rods to driue vs on, and to compell vs to make more haſt, that we may more ſafely and ſeaſonably come vnto the end of our journey, and be better aſſured of the ſaluation of our ſoules.

§. Sect. 7. That afflictions are the way whereby we muſt enter into Gods Kingdome.

Finally, our afflictions doe much further vs in attayning vnto glory and immortality, as God appointed them to bee the way that muſt bring vs vnto this euerlaſting reſt. For there is no comming into Heauen vnleſſe we will bee content to paſſe through the ſtrait gate and narrow way of trouble and affliction, as our Sauiour teacheth vs; and if wee will euer come thither, we muſt by many tribulations, enter into the Kingdome of God, as the Apoſtle Paul affirmeth. Wee cannot enter into the heauenly Canaan vnleſſe wee paſſe through this Wilderneſſe of ſin: wee cannot come into the Port of happineſſe, vnleſſe we ſaile through a ſea of miſeries; wee cannot obtaine the garland of Glory vnleſſe we runne and wreſtle for it, ſtriuing as wee ought to doe till we haue gotten the victory, which cannot be performed by vs, but with much paine and irkeſome labour. Wee muſt neuer looke to be crowned with happineſſe, till we haue ouercome the enemies of our ſaluation, and there is no notable victory obtained, vnleſſe a painfull and perillous fight haue gone before; wee cannot come into heauenly happineſſe, but by earthly miſery, and here wee muſt endure wants and watching, wounds and wearineſſe, weakneſſe, ſickneſſe, and many infirmities, before we can attaine vnto

Matth. 7. 14.
Acts 14. 22.

2. Tim. 2. 5.
1. Cor. 9. 25.

Tribulatio materiam habet pugne, vnde fi vt occaſionem præbeat victoria, & per conſequens corone, quia non coronabitur niſi qui legitime certauerit, Idem inter orthodox. de pat. ver. contemp. ca. 3.

vnto heauenly plenty, reſt, ſecurity and that euerlaſting health which cannot bee impeached with any ſickneſſe. Neither muſt wee looke for a priuiledge of hauing any other way than this narrow and ſtrait path of afflictions to bring vs vnto Heauen, ſeeing (as hereafter I ſhall ſhew) it is the common high way, by which all Gods deare Saints and faithfull Seruants haue trauailed before vs. Yea, not the only Sonne of God himſelfe, had any prerogatiue herein aboue others, but though he were moſt pure and innocent, yet he was faine by the Ladder of the Croſſe to climbe into his Kingdome; for as himſelfe ſayth, hee ought to haue ſuffered theſe things, and ſo to enter into his glory; namely, that the predictions of the Prophets might be fulfilled who declared firſt the ſufferings which ſhould come vnto him, and then the glory which ſhould follow after, as the Apoſtle ſpeaketh. And therefore if wee euer meane to come vnto this heauenly happineſſe, wee muſt not thinke to finde out ſome new way which is faire, pleaſant and full of eaſe and carnall delight; but wee muſt tread in the foot-ſteps of Chriſt our Guide who is gone before vs, and keepe in the ſame ſtraight and afflicted way which hee hath trauelled; for none come vnto Heauen but his Diſciples and the Scholars of his Schoole, and euery one who will be his Diſciple muſt make account to take vp his croſſe daily, and follow him, as himſelfe hath told vs. Whereof it is, that the Apoſtle ſaith, that we haue need of patience, for the obtayning of our heauenly patrimony which God hath promiſed vs; becauſe there is no way of comming vnto it but through afflictions and tribulations, in which wee would quickly faint if we were not ſtrengthned by faith and patience. And therefore the Apoſtle prayeth, that the God of all grace who hath called the faithfull to eternall glory by Chriſt Ieſus, after they haue ſuffered a little, would make them perfect and conſtant, implying thereby, that firſt wee muſt be caſt downe and humbled by afflictions, before we can be exalted to glory and happineſſe. And this (as one ſaith) is juſt with God, that wee who were caſt out of the joyes of Paradiſe, for our rebellious luſting after the forbidden fruit, that thereby wee might pleaſe and delight our taſte and appetite; ſhould be re-admitted into our loſt happineſſe by patient induring vnpleaſant griefes and diſtaſtfull miſeries; that we who fled from Gods preſence by doing of euill, ſhould be brought backe vnto him by ſuffering of euill; and that as we there did againſt righteouſneſſe, ſo wee ſhould here ſuffer for righteouſneſſe. Whereby it appeareth that they are in a miſerable condition who haue alwayes flouriſhed in proſperity, and neuer taſted of any miſery, becauſe they are quite out of the narrow and afflicted way which bringeth vs to eternall bleſſedneſſe, and walke in that broad and pleaſant way which leadeth to deſtruction. For as one ſaith, he is vnhappy in his happineſſe, who was neuer thought worthy to combate with croſſes, whereby wee attaine vnto the Crowne of euerlaſting glory. And againe; hee is wretched and vnhappy who in his happineſſe is not exerciſed with tentations; for hee hath not the Crowne of victory who hath not firſt ſuſtained the paines and danger of the fight. To which purpoſe another affirmeth, that he who is exempted from ſuffering the ſmart of afflictions, is exempted alſo from the ſociety of Gods Elect Children, becauſe a woe is denounced againſt them who haue heere their conſolation, and contrariwiſe they are pronounced bleſſed who ſorrow and weepe. In which reſpect tribulation and affliction is much more profitable vnto vs than abuſed proſperity; an abject and meane condition, better than an high eſtate and ouer-topping greatneſſe; and pinching neceſſity, than voluptuous plenty; becauſe both being momentany and paſſing away with poſting ſpeed; the one leaueth behinde it helliſh puniſhments, the other cauſeth vnto vs an heauenly Crowne of euerlaſting glory.

Luke 24.26.
1.Pet.1.11.
Luke 9.23.
eb.10.36.
1.Pet.5.10.
Aug. de patient. lib. cap.14.

Miſer & infœlix eſt qui non fuerit in fœlicitate tentatus. Caret enim munere qui caret certamine, Hier. ad ægrotum amicum, Tom.4.
Ideot. inter orthodox. de patient. veræ Contemp. cap.2.
Bernard. in Pſal. qui habitat. Serm.17.

§. Sect. 1.
That we may comfort our ſelues in all our afflictions by remembring that they further vs in attayning vnto happineſſe.

Seeing therefore the Croſſe of Chriſt is (as it is called) the Ladder to Heauen, his ſufferings being the cauſe, and ours the way that leadeth vs vnto happines, as there is no cauſe of ſhame in hearing of the one, ſo there is no cauſe of ſorrow in bearing of the other; for what matter is it, though the way of our pilgrimage be rough and vnpleaſant, if wee can be aſſured that by trauailing of it, wee ſhall be brought into Heauen? What though it be foule and dirty (like Ieremies Dungeon) ſo that our feet, as we are going, ſticke faſt in the mire? Yet let not this diſcourage vs, for as the way is filthy, ſo it is ſhort, and after we haue indured a little paines in paſſing it, our momentany labour will bring vs to euerlaſting reſt, and this ſhort foule lane being ſoone trauelled will conduct vs vnto a Palace of all pleaſure, and vnto thoſe glorious Manſions of joy and happineſſe which our Sauiour Chriſt hath prepared for vs. What though we muſt paſſe through a Sea of miſeries, where we ſhall be ſubject to the ſtormes and tempeſts of affliction and trouble, and be in danger of the ſpirituall enemies of our ſaluation, which like cruell Pyrats are ready to rob vs? Yet let not this diſmay vs, ſeeing God is our Guide and Maſter Pilot, who is both willing and able to ſafeguard vs from all perils, and it is but a ſhort cut, which being quickly paſſed, will bring vs into the ſafe harbour of heauenly happineſſe. What though we cannot enter into Heauen, but by paſſing through the hot burning furnace of tribulation and affliction? And what if with Elias we muſt be taken vp in a fiery Chariot into the place of our joy and reſt? Let not this Tendimus per viam laborioſam ad quietam patriam vbi tetractis omnibus actionibus noſtris non remanebit niſi Alleluia, Aug. Serm. in feſto Paſchæ de Alleluia. Tom.10.

Rom. 8.18.

2.Cor. 4.17.

Dura videtur, ſed ipſa eſt tuta via, alia fortè delicias habet ſed latronibus plena eſt, Aug in Pſal. 36. enarrat.

Nehem. 2.13.

Cyprianus contra Demetrianum tract. primo.

this diſcourage vs or abate our comfort, ſeeing we are aſſured, that the afflictions of this preſent time are not worthy the glory which ſhall be ſhewed vs, for they are light and momentany but the glory and happineſſe which they cauſe vnto vs is ſuperexcellent and eternall. Finally, what though others find a way much more faire and eaſie that bringeth them to glory? Let vs not enuy them their greater delight, but trauell with patience in that path which God hath appointed vs. For though theirs is fayrer, yet it may be that ours is ſhorter and more direct; though theirs is much more pleaſant, it may be that ours is much more ſafe; not ſo ſweet and delightfull in the paſſage, but withall not ſo much beſet with Theeues, or though ours were behind theirs in all worldly priuiledges, let vs not be ſorry becauſe we goe this way, but glad that wee may goe by any way, vnto the place of our joy; and rejoyce in Gods mercy, if wee may through the dung-port, or by a poſterne gate, be admitted to enter into the new Ieruſalem. Let not theſe ſmall loſſes grieue vs which ſhall be accompanied with ſuch ineſtimable gaine; let vs not like ſlothfull Husbandmen impatiently repine at our pains in the Seed time, but comfort our ſelues in the expectation of our heauenly Harueſt, and let the aſſurance of our future joyes mitigate our mourning for preſent miſeries. Let vs not like timorous Paſſengers feare thoſe Windes and Seas which will ſafely bring vs into the Hauen of reſt; let vs not like loytering Trauellers refuſe that way for a little fouleneſſe, which will directly bring vs to our heauenly home; let vs not like idle Workmen murmure at one dayes labour, which will be rewarded with the wages of heauenly happineſſe and euerlaſting reſt. Finally, let vs not like cowardly Souldiers feare to hazard our ſelues vnto the paines and perils of ſuch a fight, as will aſſuredly bring with it ſuch a glorious victory. And ſeeing heauenly joyes ſhal follow our earthly ſorrowes, great and ineſtimable rewards our ſmall and eaſie labours, and euerlaſting happineſſe our momentany afflictions, there is no cauſe of care and ſorrow vnto any, but vnto thoſe alone who haue neither faith nor hope. To which purpoſe one ſaith, that he alone truly feeleth the ſmart of worldly aduerſity, as of a painfull puniſhment, whoſe joy and glory is all in this life; he mourneth and weepeth if hee be croſſed in the World, who expecteth no happineſſe after this World, but hath all his comfort continued and concluded with his life, and after his departure looketh for nothing but paine and torment. But there is no cauſe of griefe when wee are inuaded with preſent calamities; if by faith we are aſſured of future comforts: neither is there any reaſon why wee ſhould vnmeaſurably mourne for earthly afflictions, if they any whit further vs in attayning vnto heauenly glory. And therefore let vs not in our afflictions fix our minds on the euils which we ſuffer, but looke higher to the happineſſe which they cauſe vnto vs; and being to paſſe (as it were by a narrow bridge) ouer this deepe floud and gulph of worldly miſeries, let vs not caſt downe our eyes to our feet and behold the dangers which threaten to ſwallow vs; which wil but intoxicate the braine and hinder our paſſage; but let vs looke aloft to that heauenly happineſſe which as the end of our hopes is ſet before vs; and ſo ſhall wee hold a ſteady courſe and vndaunted reſolution in paſſing ouer with patience theſe depths of difficulties, and ſafely arriue at the land of Bleſſedneſſe.

§. Sect. 9. That by our afflictions our heauenly ioy and glory ſhall be much increaſed, Gregor. Niſſen. de prouid. cap. 8.

1. Cor. 10.13.

Sed & iiſdem flagellis creuit virtus patientiæ; atq; ex dolore verberis aucta eſt gloria remunerationis, Greg. Moral. lib. 3. cap. 2.

But our momentany croſſes doe not only further our euerlaſting happineſſe, but alſo doe much increaſe it; for the more painfull our labours are in Gods ſeruice, the more rich ſhall be our wages; the more laborious and dangerous our fight is, the more glorious ſhall be our Crowne of victory; and the more our ſufferings exceed in number and meaſure, the more ſhall our joyes be multiplyed and our glory augmented. So one ſayth, that our life is a Warfare, and this World a place of maſteries; wherein the beſt Garlands are alotted to them who ſuſtaine the greateſt labours. And according to the meaſure of our affliction ſhall be the meaſure of our glorious retribution. The reaſon whereof is cleere and euident; for the more the Lord increaſeth our afflictions, the more he increaſeth our ſtrength to beare them; for hee is faithfull and will not ſuffer vs to bee tempted aboue our power, but will giue a good iſſue with the temptation, that we may be able to beare it. And his corrections are tryals to proue vs, and not intolerable burthens to ouer-whelme vs. And therefore the more hee multiplyeth our griefes and ſorrowes, the more he enlargeth and increaſeth our ſpirituall Graces, as Faith, Hope, Patience, Humility and the reſt; that wee may be inabled in bearing to ouercome them; and according to the greatneſſe of our graces ſhall be the glorious neſſe of our reward, ſeeing he crowneth his owne gifts with proportionable bleſſedneſſe; and as hee aduanceth vs aboue others in grace in this life, ſo hee will exalt vs aboue others in glory in the World to come. So that God meaſureth our graces according to the meaſure of our croſſes: and our glory according to our graces; whereof it followeth that our greater afflictions are ſignes of our greater grace; and the more wee excell in Gods graces now, the more ſhall wee excell in glory, in the day of retribution. Thus one ſayth, that our patience increaſeth with our corrections, and that by the ſmart of our ſtripes is augmented the glory of our reward. And this is one principall end why God afflicteth the faithfull, when hee ſpareth the wicked, that their conflict may accaſion their victory; and their croſſes may fit them for the receiuing of their crowne; whereas hee imployeth not the other in any ſeruice, becauſe he is not purpoſed to giue them any wages, and will not let them ſuffer with Chriſt in this life, becauſe hee will not haue them to raigne with him in the life to come. Yea this moueth him chiefly to afflict thoſe whom hee chiefly loueth, and to ſubject them to the greateſt tryals, who are endued with the greateſt graces, becauſe hee would fit them for a richer reward, and aduance them to an higher degree of glory, and happineſſe. So one ſaith, that wee are afflicted by God, that our reward and crowne may hereby be increaſed; and as much as he addeth to our tribulation, ſo and much more will hee adde to our retribution. And whereas our great Commander beſtoweth leſſer rewards for leſſer conflicts, when hee commandeth his valianteſt ſouldiers to attempt and atchieue the moſt valorous imployments, it is his purpoſe for their greater worth to giue vnto them a greater reward. And therefore noble champions thinke it to bee a diſgrace and great diſparagement vnto them, when they are imployed in ſome ordinany ſeruice, or matched with a weake and contemptible aduerſary; becauſe his glory is greateſt, which getteth the greateſt victory, his deuotion & loue towards God is moſt zealous and entire who for his ſake is content to vndergoe the greateſt difficulties and dangers, and then doth our vertue and fortitude ſhine brighteſt, when as they tryumph ouer the ſtrongeſt enemies: And he excelleth others in the Kings eſteeme, who ſuſtaineth the brunt of the battel, and hath his valour tryed in the hotteſt conflict, the might of his vanquiſhed enemies adding much to his victory, and the ſtrength and violence of their repelled incounters, greatly increaſing the glory of his tryumph.

Affligimur, vt coronæ & premia nobis augeantur: quantum enim tribulationes intenduntur tantum & retributiones amplabuntur Chryſoſt. in illud, modico vino vtere. Inferiora ſunt premia inferioribus pugnis; vbi denique fortia fortibus imperantur, fortiorem fortior muneris ſequitur cenſus. Hieronym. ad ægrotum amicum.

§. Sect. 10. That the former conſideration ſhould make vs not onely patient but alſo ioyfull in our greateſt afflictions: and how by degrees wee muſt aſcend vnto this reioycing.

Seeing then our light and momentarie afflictions, doe not onely further our heauenly happineſſe, but alſo augment and increaſe it, making our ſtate of bleſſedneſſe much more bleſſed, our excelling ioyes ſuper-excellent; and our crowne of glory far more glorious; let vs in this faith and aſſurance not thinke it ſufficient to beare thoſe croſſes which God impoſeth with patience and contentedneſſe, vnleſſe we can attaine vnto that pitch which the Apoſtle appointeth vs, and indure all our tribulations with thankſgiuing and ſpirituall reioycing. (om.5.3.) And this perfection of patience in bearing the croſſe, our Sauiour requireth in his Diſciples: namely, that in the day of their greateſt perſecutions and afflictions, they ſhould reioyce and bee glad becauſe their reward is great in heauen. (uk.6.23.) So the Apoſtle Peter exhorteth to this ſpirituall ioy: Dearely beloued (ſaith he) thinke it not ſtrange concerning the fiery tryall which is among you to proue you, as though ſome ſtrange thing were come vnto you, but reioyce, in as much as yee are partakers of Chriſts ſufferings, that when his glory ſhall appeare yee may bee glad and reioyce. (1.Pet.4.13.) And the Apoſtle Iames willeth vs, to count it exceeding ioy when wee fall into diuers tentations, (Iam.1.2.) becauſe this tryall, by increaſing our graces, augmenteth our glory. But yet (as I haue before ſhewed) wee muſt take heed that wee doe not at the firſt ſtep iumpe into this ioy, reioycing in the ſight and ſenſe of our afflictions themſelues, which were Stoicall and ſtockiſh ſenſeleſneſſe; or in the ſight of our ſins which haue deſerued them, and drawne vpon vs theſe heauy croſſes, which were a teſtimony of an hard heart and ſeared conſcience, ſeeing they will not melt and relent in this fiery tryall: But wee muſt ariſe vnto this height of perfection by ſteps and degrees, firſt lamenting our ſinnes with bitter ſorrow, becauſe we haue moued our heauenly Father in his juſt diſpleaſure to chaſtiſe and correct vs; and then bewailing our afflictions themſelues with moderate griefe, that our hearts may bee eaſed by breathing out thoſe ſorrowes, which if they had no vent would drowne and ſtifle them. And when by this repentance we are aſſured of reconciliation with God, and that our ſinne which is the ſting of our afflictions, is taken away; then from this faith muſt ariſe patience firſt, and then thankſgiuing and ſpirituall rejoycing, and that not in reſpect of our croſſes themſelues, but in regard of our hope and aſſurance of that heauenly happineſſe, which they ſeale vnto vs. And this order our Sauiour himſelfe obſerueth and requireth: Verely, verily, I ſay vnto you, that yee ſhall weepe and lament, and the world ſhall reioyce, and yee ſhall ſorrow, but your ſorrow ſhall bee turned into ioy. (Ioh.16.20.) And the Apoſtle Peter noteth, that theſe were conjoyned and intermingled in the faithfull; rejoycing in the aſſurance of ſaluation prepared for them, and heauineſſe for a ſeaſon thorough manifold tentations; mourning (if neede require) in the ſight and ſenſe of our afflictions, and rejoycing in Chriſt with joy vnſpeakable and glorious, as they further vs in receiuing the end of our faith, euen the ſaluation of our ſoules. (1.Pet.1.6.7.8.9.) And this the Pſalmiſt repreſenteth vnto vs in the ſimilitude of the husband-man, who ſowes in teares, and reapes in joy; weeping when hee carrieth out his ſeed, but rejoyceth when he bringeth home his ſheaues. (Pſal.126.5,6.) And our Sauiour Chriſt likeneth vs in this behalfe to a woman in trauell, who in her labour hath ſorrow becauſe her houre is come, but as ſoone as ſhee is deliuered of the childe, ſhee re- (Ioh.16.21.)

membreth no more the anguiſh, for ioy that a man is borne into the World. For ſo though wee waile and weepe whileſt wee trauell in paine, through the ſharpe pangs of our troubles and afflictions, yet no ſooner are wee aſſured by them of our adoption and ſaluation, but we preſently forget our griefes, and rejoyce in this, that wee are borne vnto God, not onely as ſonnes, but heires alſo to his heauenly Kingdome. And this is that true and ſeaſonable rejoycing in our afflictions which wee muſt labour to attaine vnto, firſt ſorrowing for our ſinne and chaſtiſement, yet not reſting in this ſorrow; and then rejoycing in the middeſt of our grieuous afflictions, and not at the firſt ſtep leaping into this ioy; but conſidering them not as fruits of ſinne, nor as ſcourges in the hand of our diſpleaſed Father, but as ſignes of our adoption, and ſeales whereby our heauenly inheritance is aſſured (yea improoued and bettered) vnto vs; let vs from hence take occaſion to rejoyce, yea to triumph in ioy and gladneſſe. For what is the paine of our ſeede time, in compariſon of the profits of our harueſt? what is our preſent ſmart, in reſpect of our future ioyes? how ſmall are our griefes being compared with the greatneſſe of our glory? what are our earthly ſorrowes, to our heauenly comforts? our momentany mourning, vnto our euerlaſting rejoycing? theſe feares to thoſe hopes, theſe ſufferings to thoſe ſolaces, theſe paines to thoſe rewards, theſe light and ſhort afflictions, vnto that farre moſt excellent and eternall waight of glory, which they cauſe vnto vs? and what are the tribulations of this preſent time, in compariſon of the glory which ſhall bee reuealed? Let vs therefore with the wiſe huſband-man, not mourne ſo much to part with our precious ſeede, as rejoyce in our expectation of a plentifull harueſt; let vs not looke ſo much to our bodies decaying by afflictions, like the corne which rotteth in the Earth before it ſpringeth, but rather conſider that by this meanes wee riſe from our corruption, firſt growing like faire greene blades in grace, and then floriſhing like ripe eares in glory and felicity. Let vs not reſpect the preſent loſſe of our ſeede, but thinke of the returning of it with manifold aduantage: yea, let vs rejoyce though wee haue a wet and weeping ſeed time, and a hard, ſtormy, and froſty winter, becauſe they are ſeaſonable, and doe the better aſſure vs of a fruitfull harueſt. And (that I may conclude this point with the diuine meditation of a worthy Father) whileſt wee are walking in the way of Chriſt towards the Kingdome of Heauen, let vs not promiſe vnto our ſelues the proſperity of the World. The path was hard which he trauelled, but the happineſſe great which he promiſed; follow him therefore, and thinke not by what way, but whither thou art going; for thou ſhalt ſuffer temporall aduerſity, but it will bring thee to euerlaſting felicity. If then thou wilt endure the labour, thou muſt bee ſtill mindfull of the reward; for euen the workman would faint in the vineyard, if hee did not remember the receiuing of his wages. But if thou attendeſt vnto that which thou ſhalt receiue, thou wilt lightly eſteeme whatſoeuer thou ſuffereſt, and not thinke thy preſent paines worthy thy future profits. Yea thou wilt wonder, that ſo great and rich a reward ſhould bee giuen vnto thee, for ſuch ſmall and eaſie labour: For wee ſhould (brethren) for the obtaining of euerlaſting reſt, haue vndergone endleſſe paines, and for the gaining of eternall felicity haue endured and ſuffered eternall miſery: but this could not bee; for if wee ſhould haue ſuſtained endleſſe labour, how could there haue beene a beginning for our endleſſe reſt? and therefore it was neceſſary that our tribulation ſhould be but temporary, that being ended, wee might come to euerlaſting felicity. But yet out of queſtion (brethren) we might haue endured long afflictions, for the attaining vnto this neuer ending happineſſe, &c. For if we ſhould haue ſuffered them the ſpace of a thouſand yeeres, what is a thouſand yeeres in compariſon of eternitie? Yea, what proportion is there betweene the longeſt finite time, and that which is infinite? ten thouſand yeeres, yea an hundred thouſand; or if yee will, millions of millions, becauſe they haue an end, cannot be compared with eternity. But Gods loue and free mercy herein ſhineth, in that he would haue our paines not onely temporary, but alſo ſhort and momentany: for the whole life of man laſteth but a few dayes, and therefore though no pleaſures were intermingled with our croſſes (as there are many) though wee ſhould ſpend all our time in labour and ſorrow, in griefe and torment, in priſon and tortures, in hunger and thirſt; yet becauſe we continew here but a few dayes, our miſeries alſo would be but momentany: and after theſe ſhort ſufferings thus quickly ended: wee ſhall receiue an eternall Kingdome, endleſſe felicity, equall glory with the Angels, and an euerlaſting inheritance with Ieſus Chriſt. O how great is our reward for our little labour! wee ſee old ſouldiers which liue and labour in the warres, euen from their youth vnto old age, and are ſtill ſubject to wounds and in danger of death, that they may enjoy a few quiet dayes, when their life draweth towards an end, and when old age beginneth to burthen them, who were not burthened with the waight of warre; what hardneſſe they are content to ſuffer, what iourneies and labours, what cold and heate, what watchings and wants, what wounds and dangers they endure endure with patience, not looking vnto the things they ſuffer, but vnto thoſe few dayes of peace and plenty, which they hope to enjoy in their old age, vnto which they know not whether they ſhall euer attaine or no. And how much more then ſhould wee endure the troubles and miſeries of our momentany warfare, with patience and contentedneſſe, yea with thankſgiuing and rejoycing; ſeeing wee are certainly aſſured, that wee ſhall haue euerlaſting reſt, after our few dayes labours, and moſt excellent and neuer ending ioy and felicity, after our ſhort ſorrowes, and temporary miſeries?

2.Cor.4.17.

Rom.8.18.

Iam cum ſequeris viam Chriſti, non tibi ſæculi proſperitates promittas, per dura ambulauit, ſed magna promiſit. Sequere. Noli tantum attendere quà iturus es ſed quò venturus ſis, &c. Aug. in Pſal. 36. enarrat.

CHAP. XXVII.

That afflictions in their owne nature being euill and the fruits of ſinne, doe not deriue vnto vs all the former bleſſings and benefits; but as they are ſanctified vnto vs for theſe ends by the ſpirit of God.

Sect. 1.
hat God by infinite wer and ſdome alte-eth the nae of afflicti-& maketh m profita-nto vs.

BY that which hath beene ſaid it may appeare, that all the afflictions of the faithfull proceed out of Gods meere loue, ſeeing in theſe fatherly chaſtiſements, he wholly aymeth at his owne glory, and their good; and accordingly, through his infinite wiſedome and power doth effectually atchieue it, cauſing many excellent fruits to ſpring from the tree of the croſſe, and vſing our corrections as meanes to deriue vnto vs many incomparable benefits, both ſpirituall and worldly, temporall and eternall: But leſt any man ſhould miſapply vnto himſelfe theſe comforts to whom they doe not belong, imagining that the ſole ſuffering of afflictions, will intitle him to the goods of Gods temporary bleſſings, and the lands and inheritance of the heauenly Canaan; or that the croſſe hath ſome vertue in its ſelfe for the working in vs, or deriuing vnto vs theſe precious graces and ineſtimable benefits: wee are to know that theſe are not the fruits of afflictions in their owne nature, but of Gods mercy and loue, wiſdome and power, who by his all-ruling prouidence doth order and diſpoſe of them that they may bee meanes for the conferring of this good vnto vs. For being conſidered in themſelues, they are (as hath beene ſhewed) the fruits of ſinne, the euils of puniſhment, the teſtimonies of Gods wrath, the curſes of the Law, and the firſt flaſhes of Hell fire; and therefore theſe trees being ſo euill, muſt needs bee in their owne nature barren of thoſe excellent fruits of Gods ſpirituall graces, and heauenly glory, and fruitfull only in malicious thoughts, wicked words, and euill workes; but God alone to ſhew the infiniteneſſe of his wiſdome, power and loue towards vs, doth change their nature, turning theſe ſtones into bread, and making them fit to nouriſh in vs all ſauing graces, which in themſelues are more likely to choake and ſtifle them; that hereby he may ſhew vnto vs that as in the life of nature, ſo in the life of grace wee doe not liue by the ſole vertue of ordinary meanes, but by euery word that proceedeth out of his mouth; and cauſeth this birth and fruit of ſinne to kill the mother who brought it forth, this temporary puniſhment to become a fatherly chaſtiſement, whereby wee are preſerued from the euerlaſting puniſhment of Hell Fire; theſe teſtimonies of his wrath to become ſignes of his loue and ſeales of our adoption, and theſe curſes of the Law and flaſhes of Hell to become euangelicall bleſſings, and an ordinary and direct way whereby wee may trauell towards his heauenly Kingdome.

§. Sect. 2.
That afflictions tend to the hurt of the wicked, not making them better but much worſe.

But this will better appeare if wee further conſider what fruits afflictions beare in wicked men, when as they follow their kinde, and haue not their nature by any ſuperiour power changed and altered. For if wee obſerue them wee ſhall finde, that their miſeries and calamities doe not at all profit, but exceedingly hurt them; nor make them any whit the better, but rather cauſe them to become worſe and worſe. Wee ſhall ſee that when they firſt fall into them they ſtorme and rage with great impatiencie, tormenting themſelues more with their own vnruly paſſions, and with their ſtrugling and ſtriuing to ſhake off their yoke, than they are tormented with any ſenſe or ſmart of the euils which they ſuffer; and that (looking only vnto ſecondarie cauſes) they are caried with mad fury, and deſperate malice againſt the inſtruments and meanes of their miſeries, and thinke of nothing but of mortall reuenge, which if they bee vnable to execute, they keepe themſelues from burſting with rage by bitter railings, wicked reproches, and with damnable curſes and execrations. Yea when their calamities ſtill continue, and their hornes are ſo ſhortned that they cannot ſhew their curſtneſſe, in wrecking their malice vpon the cauſes of their croſſes, they are ready to murmure againſt the diuine prouidence, and to taxe it of vnjuſtice, or vnmercifulneſſe, becauſe they are puniſhed aboue their ſtrength, or more than any other, yea aboue their deſerts, and with greater rigour than others who haue much more bainouſly offended. Yea they ſticke not oftentimes in deſperate malice to belch out blaſphemies and horrible impieties againſt the ſoueraigne Maieſtie of God himſelfe, and ſeeke to eaſe themſelues of the ſmart which they ſuffer, by burſting out into this railing reuenge, and by caſting out of their blacke and helliſh mouthes the poyſon of aſpes, vnjuſt accuſations and falſe aſaſperſions, whereby in the depth of their malice they labour to blemiſh the beauty of the chiefeſt goodneſſe. Or if their puniſhments open their eyes to behold their nakedneſſe, and call all their ſinnes to their remembrance; and if with the noiſe or ſenſe of theſe heauy judgements, their ſleeping conſciences are awakened, and begin to accuſe and teſtifie againſt them, that they haue not onely deſerued the miſeries which they ſuffer, but may juſtly expect the full vials of Gods feirce wrath to be powred vpon them in this life, and euerlaſting tortures and helliſh torments in the life to come; then are they filled with horror and deſperation, crying out with Caine either that their ſmart exceedeth their ſinne, or that their puniſhment is greater than they can beare; and then either with him they labour to bring a callum or thicke skinne ouer their galled conſciences by giuing themſelues ouer to all luxurious pleaſures and carnall delights, and ſtop the cry of their inward accuſations, with the loud clamour of their ſports and merriments, or if, their calamities doe ſo hedge them in, that they cannot come at theſe worldly paſtimes, then hauing no helpe in themſelues, nor hope in God, they flee from him as from an incenſed enemy, and either with Saul they reſort vnto witches and wizards, and ſeeke the diuels helpe for the remouall of thoſe puniſhments which God hath impoſed; or being quite forlorne) and vtterly deſperate, they doe with Iudas become their owne hang-men. So that the ſame fire of afflictions which purifieth the faithfull, like gold, from the droſſe of their corruptions; doth vtterly conſume the wicked like ſtraw or ſtubble: the ſame winde of trouble which purgeth Gods good wheate, that it may be fit for his owne vſe, doth blow away reprobate men from his preſence vpon the face of the Earth. The ſame anuile and hammer of tribulation, which breake and bruiſe in peeces Gods elect veſſels, that being moulten againe they may bee framed a new for his vſe, doe make the adamantine hearts of wicked men to become the harder and much more obdurate. The ſame doſſe of miſery which is a good antidote and preſeruatiue to Gods owne children, to keepe them from falling into the ſpirituall diſeaſes of ſinne, is vnto vngodly men deadly poyſon, bringing them to eternall death and vtter deſtruction. The ſame ſtraight way of affliction and tribulation which leadeth the faithfull to the Kingdome of Heauen, conducteth the faithleſſe to Hell and condemnation; and the ſame bitter potion which keepeth thoſe who haue grace in temperance and ſobriety, doth make the graceleſſe the more intemperately to ſwallow downe the intoxicating cups of worldly vanities. So as wee may ſay of them, as the Prophet Ieremy in another caſe of the afflicted Church, that they are made drunke with worme-wood, whileſt they labour to ſweeten their embittered mouthes by drinking vnſatiably of their carnall pleaſures. In all which the ſaying of Salomon is plainely verified, that though a foole (that is a deſperate ſinner) ſhould be brayed in a morter, yet his fooliſhneſſe (that is his wickedneſſe) will not depart from him; and that a reproofe entreth more into him, that hath vnderſtanding, than an hundred ſtrips into a foole.

Gen.4.8.

1.Sam.28.8.

Matth.27.5.

Lam.3.15.

Pro.27.22. & 17.10.

§. Sect.3. The former point illuſtrated by diuers examples.

And this will manifeſtly appeare by manifold examples; for thus wee ſee that the more Pharaoh was puniſhed, the more his heart was hardned in his rebellion againſt God; and though, to be freed from the ſenſe of preſent ſmart, he confeſſed his ſinne and craued pardon, deſiring alſo Moſes and Aaron to pray for him, yet no ſooner was he repriued from Gods judgements, but hee hardneth his heart, and baniſheth Gods ſeruants out of his preſence, vnto whom he had formerly ſo humbly ſued. So Ieroboam profited nothing by that miraculous iudgement of God whereby his hand was dried vp, but howſoeuer for the inſtant hee implored the Prophets prayers for him, and intreated him kindly when it was reſtored, yet preſently hee forgetteth this memorable worke of God, and returneth as eagerly as before to the practice of his wicked and abominable idolatry. Thus alſo it is ſaid of Ahaz, that in the time of his tribulation he did yet treſpaſſe more againſt the Lord: for which hee is branded with the marke of a deſperate ſinner, of whom all are to take knowledge (This is King Ahaz:) And of the thiefe vpon the croſſe, that he mocked and railed at the Lord of life, when himſelfe was neere vnto the pangs of death. Finally the holy Ghoſt obſerueth, that the remnant of men in the world, who had hardly eſcaped out of the common deſtruction, like brands pulled out of the fire, for all that repented not of their ſinnes, but continued in their idolatry, murther, ſorcery, fornication, and theft: and that others who were tormented in the fiery furnace of Gods iudgement, whileſt they boiled in this great heat, blaſphemed the name of God, who had power ouer thoſe plagues, and repented not to giue him glory. And againe, that others in like caſe, did bite their tongues for ſorrow; but withall blaſphemed the God of Heauen becauſe of their paines and ſorowes, and repented not of their workes. And theſe fruits and effects ſo commonly ſpring from the plagues and puniſhments of wicked men, that the diuell preſumed vpon manifold experience, that if the Lord would but trie Iob with them, he would blaſpheme him to his face. And howſoener Gods faithfull ſeruants, through the bleſſing of Gods holy ſpirit, doe

Exod.8.15.
Cha.10.16.17.
Ver.20,28.

1.Kin.13.8.

2.Chro.28.22.

Luk.23.39.

Apoc.9.20.

Apoc.16.9.

Apoc.16.11.

Iob.1.11.

doe reape from their croſſes and calamities farre better fruits of grace and glory, (as hath beene ſhewed) yet thoſe other fruits of ſinne and condemnation, doe ſo much exceed in numerous multitude; as the ſmall handfull of Gods elect are in number exceeded by the wicked and reprobate.

§.Sect.4.
he cauſes hy wicked en profit t by their fflictions, but w worſe
d worſe.

The which commeth to paſſe becauſe they neuer looke vp vnto the hand of God ſtriking them, nor vnto their ſinnes deſeruing theſe puniſhments but rather attribute them vnto any other cauſe which is next at hand and ſubject to the ſenſes, than vnto the ſupreme cauſe which ſetteth all the reſt a working, and to the defect, diſorder or malice of any inferiour meanes, than to their owne wickedneſſe and ill-deſeruing. As for example they vſually aſcribe all their calamities (in ſtead of the ſupreme and higheſt cauſe) to deſtiny, chance and fortune, as though they might haue lighted vpon any other as well as vpon them, but that it was their hard hap to come in the way when as blind fortune, hauing theſe afflictions in her hand, did by hap-hazard ſtumble vpon them. Sometimes alſo they attribute them wholly to ſecondary cauſes and inferiour meanes, which are more ſubject to their ſenſes; to the caſuall concurrence of circumſtances, which accidentally meeting together, produced theſe effects; or to their owne ouerſight, raſhneſſe and want of prouidence, whereby if they had fore-ſeene they might haue preuented them. Yea ſometimes they aſcribe all their miſeries to Gods miniſters and faithfull people who liue amongſt them, affirming like wolues, that it is theſe lambes of Chriſt which trouble their waters, as wee may ſee in the example of Pharaoh, who baniſhed Moſes and Aaron, out of his preſence, as the cauſes who brought all thoſe plagues vpon Egypt; and in Achab who when the land was grieuouſly puniſhed with a long famine for want of raine, accuſed not himſelfe and his owne ſinnes, but the Prophet Elias, as the troubler of Iſrael. And thus the heathen perſecuters vſually accuſed the Chriſtians as the only cauſes which brought vpon them all their calamities. Yea rather than faile, they will not ſticke to ſlander the Goſpell, and true religion of Ieſus Chriſt, as the cauſe of their troubles and miſeries, affirming that there was neuer good world, neuer ſuch plagues, warres, wants, and penurious ſcarcity of all things, as haue befallen them ſince this new learning and religion (as they terme it) was preached among them. Or if Gods judgements are ſo fitted both in time and quality to their ſinnes, that they lead them (as it were) by the hand to him that ſmiteth, yet they profit no whit by theſe ſtripes, becauſe they haue not the eye of faith, whereby they might behold God as a gracious father louingly correcting them for their amendment, that they may bee ſaued; but looke vpon him through the glaſſe of the Law, with a guilty eye, as vpon a ſeuere judge who puniſheth them for the ſatisfying of his juſtice in their preſent torments, which doe but make way for their euerlaſting condemnation.

od.10.28.

ng.18.17.

§.Sect.5.
That the preſent afflictions of wicked men doe not free them from future puniſhments, but rather much increaſe them.

And as wicked men are not bettered by their afflictions in regard of their ſinnes; ſo neither haue they any benefit by them, as they ſerue to free them from future puniſhments and euerlaſting condemnation. Yea contrariwiſe, as they harden their hearts, and make them more deſperate in wicked courſes, ſo conſequently they inrage Gods wrath the more, and bring vpon them more fearefull judgements. For it is vſuall with with God, when he ſeeth wicked men contemne his leſſer puniſhments, and not apply them to their hearts for their conuerſion and amendment, to proceede like a wiſe and righteous judge in the adminiſtration of his judgements, and as they multiply their impieties, adding impenitencie and hardneſſe of heart to their other ſinnes, ſo hee alſo multiplieth their plagues, till he hath vtterly deſtroyed them, according to that threatning denounced in the Law; If yee will not for theſe thing obey mee, then will I puniſh you ſeauen times more according to your ſins. An example whereof wee haue in Pharaoh, who not relenting when Gods hand was vpon him, nor repenting of his ſinnes after ſo many plagues, was at laſt with his people ouerwhelmed and drowned, in the red Sea. So when Saul profited not by ſo many admonitions and more gentle puniſhments, at laſt he was cruſhed and quelled vnder that fearefull judgement of being his owne executioner, and became mercileſſe to himſelfe in his death who in his life had beene cruell vnto others. Thus when Ieroboam amended not by the death of his ſonne, nor drying vp of his hand; and when Achab repented not, neither for Gods threatnings, nor for the plagues of drought and famine, which were in the land; they were both rooted out with all their poſterity, and became fearefull examples of Gods terrible vengeance. And thus when Senacherib repented not of his idolatry after the deſtruction of his army, nor acknowled the true God in this miraculous judgement, hee was ouertaken with Gods wrath in the very act of his ſin, and ſlaine by his owne ſonnes, euen whilſt hee was worſhipping his idols. Or if the Lord doe not lay vpon the contemners of his afflictions theſe outward and viſible puniſhments, he doth certainely inflict vpon them inwardly much more fearefull judgements, giuing them ouer vnto their owne ſenſuall luſts, vile affections, and vnto a reprobate mind, to commit all manner of ſin with

Solos pœnæ a ſupplicio liberat quos immutat: nam quos præſentia mala non corrigunt ad ſequentia perducunt. Gregor.moral. lib.9.cap.24.

*Leuit.*26.18.

2.*King.*19.37.

with greedineſſe, for the further ſealing and increaſing of their helliſh condemnation. For as ſure as God is juſt, ſo aſſuredly will hee ſeuerely puniſh this outragious wickedneſſe; & if not in this world yet in the world to come. And their euerlaſting torments ſhall be much more fearefully increaſed, becauſe vnto their other ſins they haue added curſed ſecurity and hardnes of heart, & haue contemned Gods righteous judgements, growing worſe and worſe, and more deſperate in their wickedneſſe, when as they ſhould haue beene reclaimed by the feeling of his puniſhments. In which reſpect one ſaith, that all which a man ſuffers in this life is but a correction if hee amend, and double damnation if hee be not thereby reformed: for here he ſuffereth temporall puniſhments and hereafter he ſhall ſuffer thoſe which are eternall. And another willeth the faithfull to rejoyce in aduerſitie, becauſe if he bee righteous hee is tryed, or amended if he be a ſinner. But (ſaith he) let him mourne in his afflictions who is not bettered and amended with diuine chaſtiſements, and let him feare future puniſhments, who hath contemned Gods preſent correction, which hee appointed to bee the meanes of his reformation.

Quicquid hic paſſus fuerit homo, ſi corrigatur emendatio eſt; ſi non corrigatur duplex damnatio eſt. &c. Chryſo de patient. Iob Homil. vltima.

Gaudeat Chriſtianus in aduerſis; quia aut probatur ſi iuſtus eſt, aut ſi peccator eſt emendatur. August. Homil. 46. Tom. 10.

§. Sect. 6. That afflictions ſomtime for want of a right vſe of them, bring no preſent benefit to the faithfull themſelues.

Yea ſo far are afflictions from conferring any good vnto the wicked and reprobate; that ſometime they bring no preſent profit to Gods owne Church and choſen people. The which commeth to paſſe either becauſe they doe not rightly beare them, or doe not labour after they are taken away to bee bettered by them. For wee receiue no good by theſe croſſes and calamities when they take vs vnprouided and vnprepared, either hauing a ſmall and weake meaſure of thoſe graces which are required to this conflict, or rather letting them lye wretchleſly by vs, not renuing, furbuſhing and putting them on before wee are aſſauled with theſe ſpirituall enemies. Wee profit not by them, when, through our negligence, we doe not looke to the hand that ſmiteth vs, nor conſider that all our afflictions are ſent, ruled and diſpoſed, by Gods wiſe and gracious prouidence, but reſt in ſecondary cauſes, and aſcribe all our troubles to inferiour meanes, which are in truth but Gods bare inſtruments, in bringing vs into theſe miſeries and calamities; wee are not bettered by them, when through our ſloth we doe not examine our ſelues, ſearch out our ſinnes, and acknowledge that they are the onely cauſe of all our ſmart, but ſtill ſecurely ſleepe in them, aſcribing our croſſes vnto outward accidents, our owne negligence, the malice of our enemies, or vnfaithfulneſſe of our friends; and alſo when we are wholly intent vpon our ſmart and ſenſe of paine, and neuer conſider of thoſe gracious ends, which the Lord out of his endleſſe loue propoundeth vnto our chaſtiſements. And finally, wee receiue no good by our afflictions when being deliuered, wee take no paines nor care to be bettered by them; and when wee doe not labour to make a profitable vſe of them, to forſake our ſinnes which were the cauſes of our croſſes, and to draw neerer vnto God by hearty repentance, more zealouſly and conſcionably ſeruing him in the performance of all holy and Chriſtian duties: but either continue in our ſinnes, or after ſome ſlight and ſhort reformation, returne againe into our former courſe of wickedneſſe. In all which caſes the faithfull are ſo far from receiuing the former benefits and bleſſings by their corrections, that they doe for the preſent but increaſe their ſinne, and make their temporary chaſtiſements much more ſharpe and grieuous. In reſpect of the former the Lord complaineth of his people, that they were not by his chaſtiſements brought vnto vnfained repentance, but rather waxed worſe and worſe vnder his corrections, ſo hee cryeth out by the Prophet Eſay: Wherefore ſhould you bee ſmitten any more, ſeeing you fall away more and more? and againe; The people turneth not vnto him that ſmiteth them, neither doe they ſeeke vnto the Lord of hoaſts. So hee complaineth by the Prophet Ieremy, that hee had ſmitten their children in vaine, becauſe they receiued no correction: namely, in their hearts to make an holy vſe of it, though it was outwardly inflicted vpon their bodies. And though they reaſoned thus: Will the Lord keepe his anger for euer? will hee reſerue it vnto the end? Yet hauing thus ſpoken, they did ſtill euill more and more. And this the Prophet himſelfe obſerued and lamented in his prayer to God: O Lord (ſaith he) are not thine eyes vpon the truth, thou haſt ſtricken them, but they haue not ſorrowed, thou haſt conſumed them, but they haue refuſed to receiue correction, they haue made their faces harder than a ſtone, and haue refuſed to returne. And thus the Lord complaineth by the Prophet Amos, that he had afflicted his people with famine, peſtilence, and the ſword; yea ouerthrowne them as he ouerthrew Sodom and Gomorrah, reſeruing only a remnant, which were as a fire-brand pluckt out of the burning, and yet they returned not vnto him by vnfained and renued repentance. And for the latter it is manifeſt in the adminiſtration of Gods judgements towards his children, that if gentler chaſtiſements will not reforme them, hee will vſe more ſharpe diſcipline, and if they will not be reclaimed with his ſmarting rods, he will correct them with his ſtinging whips, and neuer leaue them vntill he haue brought them to ſome amendment. For ſo the Lord threatneth in the former places, that becauſe they had not profited by his former

*Eſay.*1.5.

*Chap.*9.13.

*Ier.*2.30.

*Chap.*3.5.

*Ier.*5.3.

Amos 4.6,8, 9,10,11.

Eſay 1.24,25.

Chap.9.14.

Jer.5.6.

former corections, hee would increaſe their calamities, and deale with them ſo ſeuerely, as if they were aduerſaries and enemies; that hee would make the fire of their afflictions hot enough to burne out their droſſe purely, and take away their Tinne; that hee would bring vpon them a fearefull deſtruction, cutting off from Iſrael head and tayle, branch and ruſh in one day; and that he would cauſe a Lion out of the Forreſt to ſlay them, and a Wolfe of the Wilderneſſe to deſtroy them; that a Leopard ſhould watch ouer their Cities, and that euery one going out thence ſhould be torne in pieces, becauſe (after all their former afflictions) their treſpaſſes were many, and their rebellions were increaſed. And therefore ſeeing afflictions in their owne nature, or by any vertue that is in themſelues, doe not deriue vnto vs thoſe ſpirituall graces and heauenly bleſſings, but contrariwiſe, through our corruption, are fit meanes to increaſe both our ſinnes and puniſhments; for the attayning vnto grace and glory, let vs not thinke it enough to be afflicted in the world; but let vs labour withall to make ſuch an holy vſe of our troubles, (humbling our ſelues vnder the mighty hand of God; bewayling our ſinnes whereby wee haue deſerued them, and drawing neere vnto God by hearty repentance, and an earneſt indeuour of ſeruing and pleaſing him in holines and newnes of life) that they may be vnto vs teſtimonies of his loue, and ſo aſſure vs of all the former benefits. And becauſe afflictions in their owne nature deriue them not vnto vs, but as they are ſanctified by Gods holy Spirit, and made fit for theſe purpoſes by his alone Wiſdome, Power, and Loue, therefore let vs continually implore by faithfull and feruent Prayer his gracious aſſiſtance, that by his bleſſing they may be made fit meanes for the working of his graces in vs; and that we may be inabled by his Spirit to make ſuch an holy & profitable vſe of them, that we may be fit to receiue them, when as by this meanes he offereth them vnto vs.

Chap. XXVIII.

Conſolations taken from the ſubiect place of our afflictions, and from their adiuncts, namely their neceſſitie, profit, breuity and lightneſſe, as alſo from the aſſiſtance of our aſſociates.

§. Sect. 1. That God hath appointed vs in this world to ſuffer afflictions; and in the life to come to inherit happineſſe.

WE haue ſhewed the ſingular conſolations which ariſe from the conſideration of the cauſes and effects of our afflictions: now wee will proceed vnto other arguments of comfort according to our order propounded, the which ariſe eyther from the ſubiect or adiuncts of our croſſes and calamities. The ſubiect place of all our troubles is this world and vale of teares, which is purpoſely appointed of God to be a place wherein all his Saints and faithfull ſeruants ſhall be ſubiect to many tribulations and miſeries; that being by them purged and refined, tryed and approued, they may after this life be admitted into thoſe pure and holy habitations into which no vncleane thing can enter; and receiue that Crowne and Garland of euerlaſting happineſſe, with which the Lord hath promiſed to adorne and honour his owne gifts and graces whereſoeuer hee findeth them. So our Sauiour telleth vs that howſoeuer in him wee ſhall haue peace, yet in this world we ſhall haue affliction; and that whilſt we continue here we ſhall weepe and lament, and the world ſhall reioyce, that we ſhall ſorrow, but our ſorrow ſhall be turned into ioy: And finally, that here we ſhall paſſe our time, like a woman in the paines of child-birth, but in the Kingdome of Heauen our joy ſhall be ſo great, becauſe we are acknowledged of God, as his children, and heires of glory and happineſſe, that wee ſhall quite forget our former miſeries, as a woman forgetteth her ſorrowes in Child-bearing, for joy that a man is borne into the World. Let vs not then expect in this World our glory and gladnes, our pleaſures and delights, ſeeing the Lord hath appointed it to be a place of miſery, and mourning; let vs not in this ſhowry ſeed-time of ſorrow and teares, thinke to reape the harueſt of joy and conſolation; nor to take our eaſe and repoſe in this valley of affliction, which can only be enjoyed in Gods heauenly Mountaine. Here wee muſt ſhed thoſe teares which there muſt be dryed vp: here is the houſe of mourning, and there is the Pallace of joy and rejoycing; here is the place of Prayer, which is moſt feruent when it floweth from an afflicted ſpirit; there is the place of prayſes which are moſt cheerefull when our happineſſe is not diſtaſted with any heauineſſe. Finally, here muſt the Chriſtians life bee ſpent in doing good and ſuffering euill, and there wee muſt looke to haue our good workes rewarded, and our ſufferings recompenced. And therefore let our worldly ſorrow worke in vs ſpirituall rejoycing, ſeeing theſe pangs and throwes of griefe will bring forth the fruit of heauenly pleaſure and rejoycing. Let vs not here expect faire weather and the Sun-ſhine of our comfort; for a dry ſeed-time, will bring but a barren harueſt; but let theſe teares of worldly ſorrow, cauſe teares of ſpirituall joy, becauſe they are now ſeaſonable, and doe but water our hopes, and make our harueſt of happineſſe much more plentifull. Finally, let vs now mourne, if there bee vnto vs no cauſe of mourning; and rejoyce if wee can find in this World no matter of rejoycing; becauſe they which laugh here ſhall for euer

Apoc.21.27.

Iohn 16.33.

Verſe 20 21.

Iohn 16.20.

weepe, and they that mourne here ſhall haue their ſorrow turned into joy.

§. Sect. 2. That this world is the place of tryall and tentation, preparation & ſpirituall exerciſe.

Now is the time, and this is the place of our tryall and tentation, and wee muſt like pure Gold be proued before wee can bee approued, and firſt paſſe the fiery furnace, before we can be admitted into Gods treaſury: we muſt like Iewels and precious Diamonds here indure the hammer & anuil, that hereafter we may be reſerued in Gods heauenly cabinet: we muſt here be Probationers in Gods Schoole, that after examination we may be admitted into that happy ſociety of Saints and Angels. And (as one ſaith) it is a ſigne, not of an vpright, but of a peruerſe mind, to deſire glory, before wee haue exerciſed and ſhewed our vertue; and to couet the garland, before wee haue ouercome in wraſtling: which glory, being vndeſerued, where there is no vertue, is prepoſterouſly affected, and dangerouſly attayned. Now is the time of our preparation, when as wee muſt bee waſhed, trimmed and dreſſed, that wee may bee fit to meete our Bridegroome; and after this life ſhall be the ſolemnizing of our mariage; and therefore we muſt not here expect our ſolace, and delight; but hereafter when we ſhall haue the fruition of our Husband, and thoſe heauenly habitations which hee hath prepared for vs. Here we muſt be purged from our chaffe of corruption, that like pure graine wee may bee laid vp in Garners of Bleſſedneſſe; and therefore wee muſt not now looke for reſt and faire weather: but to be toſſed and turmoyled with the winde and Fan. Now is not the time of feaſting and pampering our ſelues with carnall pleaſures, but of faſting and mourning, ſeeing our Bridegroome is abſent from vs; but then are wee to expect theſe Reuels and Delights, when hee commeth againe to ſolemnize our Nuptials. And thoſe (as one ſaith) who here fat themſelues with worldly fulneſſe, doe but fit themſelues for the ſlaughter, and prepare a more dainty Banquet for the crawling Wormes. This World is the Theater which is appointed for the exerciſe of maſteries; and therefore wee muſt not here looke for eaſe and pleaſure, ſeeing none obtayne the prize of Bleſſedneſſe, but thoſe who haue ſo runned, wreſtled and contended, that they haue alſo obtayned the victory: wee muſt not like lazie Lozels heere expect full Tables, ſoft Beds, ſweet Bathes, and ſuch like effeminate Delights in the place of our exerciſe; but like valiant Champions, hauing in ſtead of coſtly clothing, our naked bodies couered with duſt and oyle, we muſt wreſtle in the heat of the Sunne, and with much ſweat and labour obtayne the Garland; for as the Apoſtle telleth vs, If any man ſtriue for a Maſtery, he is not crowned, except he ſtriue as hee ought to doe. Here man is ordained to labour, and reſt is not to be expected till we keepe an euerlaſting Sabbath vnto God in the heauenly Canaan; now we are appointed to take pains in Gods Vineyard, and wee muſt not looke for our reward, before with our labour wee make an end of our liues, and (as the Apoſtle telleth vs) wee muſt like good Husbandmen take paines in this Seed-time and hereafter wayte for the fruits of haruest; and not be diſmayed, though we be tyred with troubles and ſweat at our labours; ſeeing they are much ſweetned with this conſideration, that they are ſo ſeaſonable. Now is the time of our Exile and Baniſhment, and what comfort or contentment can be expected till wee bee admitted into the preſence of our King? In this World wee are ſayling as in a Sea of miſeries; and therefore wee muſt not thinke it ſtrange, if one waue of affliction doth follow in the necke of another, if wee be ſtill in danger of cruell Pyrats, Rockes, and wrackes, ſhelues and ſands, ſtormes and tempeſts, nor expect eaſe and reſt, ſafety and ſecurity, before wee arriue at the Hauen of happineſſe. This World is appointed by God to be the place of our affliction and puniſhment; and therefore we are not fooliſhly to imagine that we ſhall find it a Paradize of delights; nor to bee diſcouraged if wee meete with troubles and miſeries, ſeeing it well ſorteth with Gods Ordinance, who hath appointed that wee ſhould bee croſſed on Earth, that we may be crowned in Heauen.

Virtus gradus ad gloriam: virtus mater gloriæ, Bernar. in Natali St. Victoris.

Nunquid enim maſtandi ſumus quod nos ipſos ſaginemus? quid tantam vermibus menſam apponis? quid maiorem agis ſaniem? quid ad omnia temetipſum reddis inutilem? Chryſoſt. Homil. ad pop. 54. Tom. 4. Aliud eſt quietis tempus, hoc ærumnis deputatum eſt & ſudoribus, nullus vbi ad certamen ſe exuit vnctuſque eſt, requiem quærit, Chryſoſt. in 2. Tim. 3 Hom. 8.

2. Tim. 2. 5.

Verſe 6.

§. Sect. 3. That this world is the place of our pilgrimage & therefore we muſt looke for pilgrimes entertainment. Heb. 13. 14. 1. Pet. 1. 4. Iohn 18. 36.

Here is not our Country, and the place of our perpetuall aboad; and as the Apoſtle ſayth) here wee haue no continuing Citie, but we ſeeke one to come, euen the heauenly Canaan and new Ieruſalem, where an inheritance immortall, undefiled, and that fadeth not away is reſerued for vs. Here wee are not Citizens and free Denizens, ſeeing the Kingdome of our Soueraigne is not of this world; and therefore we muſt not here look for our Priuiledges and Prerogatiues; but we are in the earth pilgrimes and ſtrangers, and conſequently like men of that quality, we muſt make account to bee daily ſubject to many miſeries and indignities, and expect our happineſſe when wee come ſafely to our home. Our pouerty muſt not much trouble vs: for who deſireth in his pilgrimage and trauels to carry his wealth and riches about him? Onely let it content vs, if wee haue ſufficient to defray our charges, and to ſupply neceſſaries in our journey, and then expect to enjoy our riches and chiefe treaſures, when as wee ſafely arriue in our heauenly Country. We muſt not lay it much to heart, if we find hard entertainment in the World, and be not eſteemed and accounted of according to our worth and deſert; for we are not at home among our friends and kindred, where we might expect ſuch kindneſſe, becauſe they know our ſtate and quality; but in our pilgrimage, and at our Inne, among ſtrangers who are vnacquainted with our perſons and conditions; and who examine not our vertues, but our purſes and outward pompe; not what we haue in our own Country, but what wee carry about vs, and meaſure all their reſpect and ſeruice vnto vs, by that profit and benefit which they may receiue from vs. And who careth much for hard vſage in his Inne, where hee is to remayne but one night? Who looketh for reſpect and duty in a farre Country where hee trauelleth, or careth for vnciuill entertainment among thoſe who know him not, although he be a man of great place & eſteeme in his owne Country? Our toyleſome liues & weariſome labours muſt not much grieue vs, ſeeing they are ſo ſutable for the life of a Pilgrime, who prepareth himſelfe to take paines in his iourney and beareth it with patience, though hee be ſometimes tyred in his trauels, then only expecting reſt and ſweete repoſe, when hee ſafely arriueth at his owne home. Yea, wee muſt not be much vexed, if in this life wee receiue wrongs and iniuries, and if wee bee robbed and ſpoyled through violence and vniuſt oppreſſion; for it is not ſtrange with Trauellers to fall into the hands of Theeues and Robbers, eſpecially when they trauell in barbarous Countries, or in the Dominions of profeſſed enemies. But herein is both their and our comfort, that they can only ſpoyle vs of ſome ſmall trifles, which we carry about vs, whereby we only ſuſtaine ſome preſent want and miſery in the ſhort time of our trauels; but cannot take from vs our inheritance, our principall jewels and chiefe treaſures, becauſe thoſe are ſafely reſerued for vs in our heauenly Country; and we ſhall certainly enjoy them when wee haue finiſhed our pilgrimage. And with this argument of conſolation Abraham ſtrengthened his faith and patience in all the miſeries which he indured in a ſtrange Country, becauſe hee looked, not to his preſent condition, but for a City hauing a foundation, whoſe builder and maker is God.

11,10.

Sect. 4.
this ld is the e of our fare, and efore wee t expect ictions, and hard vſage poore Souls. ſoſt. in h.10.
il.39.

Finally, this World is appointed of God to be the place of our warfare, wherein wee muſt combate, not onely againſt Sathan and our owne fleſh, but againſt all other enemies of our ſaluation; and we are not to expect our crowne, and to triumph in happineſſe, till we haue finiſhed our fight and obtayned victory. For (as one ſaith) Chriſt Ieſus hath built the whole Vniuerſe, like an Houſe of three ſtories, namely Hell, Earth, and Heauen: appointing the Earth for Warriours, Hell for the conquered, and Heauen for thoſe who obtaine the victory. Hee hath not promiſed peace, but hath denounced war whileſt wee continue in this life, reſeruing ſecure peace and quiet reſt for his heauenly Kingdome. And therefore (as one ſaith) if wee here ſeeke peace, we ſeeke a good thing, but we doe not ſeeke it in the place where it is to be found; for there is no peace in this life; and in vaine doe wee ſeeke for that vpon Earth, which is only promiſed in Heauen. Now valiant Souldiers in the time of Warfare doe not ſet their minds vpon eaſe and ſloth, vpon ſoft Beds and dainty Fare; they doe not take care for ſoft and coſtly rayment, nor to haue about them abundance of riches, but they are wholy tranſported with a deſire of victory, and to this end endure with patience all paines and labour, fare courſly, and lie hardly, and either watch the whole night, or make the earth their Bed, their Helmet a Pillow, and the Skie their Canopy; expoſe themſelues to deſperate dangers, and with patience ſuffer many wounds and foiles, that they may in the end obtaine the victory. Yea euen Kings themſelues who in peace abound with plenty and pleaſure, in the time of war accuſtome themſelues to hardneſſe, becauſe it beſt fitteth this ſeaſon; making them more valiant and hardy; and (which is the end of all) much more able to ouercome their enemies. And therefore though our future eſtate be neuer ſo great, as being the ſonnes of God, and heires apparant of his glorious Kingdome, yet ſeeing wee are now in the place of our warfare, let vs with patience endure all hardneſſe, paines and pouerty, as beſt ſorting with our preſent condition, and not expect eaſe and idleneſſe, wealth and dainties, worldly pleaſures and carnall delights, which would effeminate our minds, & vtterly diſable vs to withſtand our enemies. We are Gods Souldiers, and it better becommeth his worthies to be in the field, than in the Garriſon; in a painfull march, than in a ſoft Bed; well armed, than gorgeouſly clothed, and aſſaulting their enemies with man-like courage, than to ſpend their time, like Carpet-Knights in feaſting and reuelling. Here wee muſt looke for impregnable Forts and ſtrong Holds, and expect ſtately Buildings, and rich Furniture in the new Ieruſalem; here we muſt labour, faſt and watch that there we may feaſt, rejoyce, and take our eaſe, here we muſt endure many miſeries and afflictions that there wee may enjoy all glory and happineſſe; here we muſt fight and obtaine the victory, that there wee may triumph in bleſſedneſſe, hauing a crown for our helmet, a Scepter and Palme, for our Sword and ſpeare; glorious garments and gorgeous clothing, for our heauy ſhield, and ſteely breſtplate. For it is better for the preſent to be a little preſſed with the waight of the armor, than to periſh by lying open to the wounds of an enemy; it is better to beare the waight of a ſhield or breſt plate, than to be pierced with the fiery darts of the euill one And this allegory and argument the Apoſtle vſeth to perſwade Timothy to the patient enduring of the croſſe. Thou therefore (ſaith he)

Omnis homo requiem quærit: bonam rem quærit ſed non in regione ſua. Non eſt pax in hac vita, in cœlo nobis promiſſum eſt quod in terra quærimus, Aug. in Pſal. 48. enarrat.

Interim ſane premi magnis quam perimi videtur vtilius, & ſuſtinere pondus clypei & torica quam maligni iaculis igneis vulnerari, Bernard. de dedicat. Eccleſiæ Serm. 2.

2. Tim. 2. 3, 4.

ſuffer affliction as a good Souldier of Ieſus Chriſt. No man that warreth intangleth himſelfe with the affaires of this life, becauſe he would pleaſe him, who hath choſen him to be a Souldier. And afterwards hee propoundeth himſelfe for an example of this precept; in that hee did not couet after the Crowne, till like a valiant Souldier, hee had fought this ſpirituall battaile and obtained the victory. I haue fought (ſaith he) a good fight, and haue finiſhed my courſe; I haue kept the faith, from hence forth is laid vp for me the crowne of righteouſneſſe. To conclude this point, the Lord hath appointed this World as a Valley of miſery and mortality wherein we are to liue a dying life, or liuing death, till being throughly mortified both in body and ſoule, wee may by mortality attaine vnto immortality, by corruption vnto incorruption, and by a temporary death finde a way vnto life euerlaſting. For our liues are in a continuall conſumption from the time of our birth, and the faſter we grow the faſter we decreaſe, the more is added to our liues, the more they are diminiſhed; and the more the number of our dayes is multiplyed, the more it is abated, becauſe what is annexed to the time paſt, is ſubſtracted and taken away from the time to come. And therefore ſeeing there is no way to immortality vnleſſe here wee be ſubject to mortality, no way to liue and raigne with Chriſt, vnleſſe in this World wee ſuffer and be dead with him, let vs not dreame of a flouriſhing eſtate, pompe and earthly proſperity whileſt we continue here, but prepare our ſelues by the croſſe to attaine vnto the Crowne, by the vale of miſery to aſcend vnto the mountaine of glory; and by temporary death and deſtruction to paſſe vnto ſaluation and euerlaſting happineſſe.

2.Tim.4,7,8.

2.Tim.2.11,12.

§. Sect.5.
Conſolations taken from the neceſſity, profit, ſhortneſſe, and lightnes of our afflictions.

And theſe are the comforts which ariſe from the ſubject place of our afflictions; beſides which there are other conſolations, which may be gathered from their adjuncts and properties, as from the neceſſity, benefit, breuity and lightneſſe of them. For firſt, our afflictions are neceſſary in reſpect of Gods Decree, by which they are inſeparably annexed vnto our election, vocation, and ſaluation; for thoſe which hee knew before hee hath alſo predeſtinated to bee made like vnto the Image of his Sonne, whom he appointed firſt to ſuffer, and ſo to enter into his glory. So the Apoſtle telleth vs, that we are hereunto called; for Chriſt alſo ſuffered for us, leauing us an example that we ſhould follow his ſteps. And our Sauiour teacheth vs, that wee muſt by this ſtraite gate and narrow way, enter into his glory; with whom his holy Apoſtle according, ſaith, that we muſt by many afflictions enter into the Kingdome of God. Secondly, they are moſt neceſſary in this ſtate of corruption in reſpect of vs, that by theſe wholeſome corrections we may be contained in our duty and reſtrained from ſinne; in which regard that is truly verified of vs, which we vſually ſay of our little children, namely, that there is a greater neceſſity of our corrections, than of our meat and drink, ſeeing the want of the one tendeth but to the temporary deſtruction of the body, but the want of the other indangereth vs to the euerlaſting condemnation and vtter perdition both of body and ſoule. For if the Lord ſhould continually cocker vs with worldly bleſſings, and let vs neuer feele the ſmart of his chaſtiſing hand, we would quickly forget and contemne him, neglect his commandements, ſecurely goe on in ſinne, and grow wanton in our wickedneſſe. The vtility alſo and profit of afflictions is (as hath beene ſhewed) exceeding great, ſeeing the Lord vſeth them as the ordinary meanes of ſtrengthening and increaſing in vs all his ſanctifying and ſauing graces; of conferring vnto vs many temporary and worldly benefits; and of furthering and aduancing our glory and euerlaſting happineſſe in his heauenly Kingdome. For the attayning of which incomparable bleſſings reſpecting both this life and the life to come, we are not bound to beare a proportionable meaſure of miſery and tribulation; for theſe afflictions which through Gods mercy bring vnto vs theſe vnualuable graces, and vnmatchable waight of eternall glory, are in reſpect of their burthen light, and eaſie to be borne; and for their time, momentany, and but of ſhort continuance; All which points haue in the former part of this Treatiſe beene ſo cleerely proued, that I ſhall not need here any further to inſiſt vpon them.

Rom.8.29.

Luke 24.26.

1.Pet.2.21.

Math.7.13,14.
Acts 14.22.

Heb.12,11.

§. Sect.6.
That God apointeth his holy Angels aſſiſt vs in o
afflictions.

Yea, ſuch is Gods loue and mercy towards vs, that though the afflictions which he layeth vpon vs be but light, momentany, and in their owne nature eaſie to bee borne, yet hauing reſpect to our wonderfull infirmity and great weakneſſe, he neuer ſuffereth vs to beare them alone; but hee alwayes appointeth vnto vs Copartners and Aſſiſtants, who by their helpe keepe vs from fainting, either by taking from vs part of our burthen, when it is too heauy for our little ſtrength; or by encouraging and comforting vs when when we are diſmayed, or finally by bearing & ſuſtayning part of the waight, that it may not oppreſſe and ouer-whelme vs. For firſt the Lord giueth his holy Angels charge ouer vs; to aſſiſt and compaſſe vs about, to preſerue vs in all dangers, and to keepe vs in all our wayes, that no other croſſes befall vs than thoſe which hee hath appointed nor yet in any greater meaſure, than that which in his wiſe prouidence he hath allotted vnto vs. For as the Angels miniſtred vnto our Head Ieſus Chriſt at all times, but eſpecially in his greateſt trials and afflictions, as namely after that conflict of tentation with ſathan our ſpirituall enemy, and in his bitter agony, when as an Angell appeared from heauen to comfort him; So doe they by the appointment of our common Lord and Maſter attend vpon vs who are his members, to preſerue, defend, ſtrengthen and comfort vs, that wee may not faint and faile through our naturall weakneſſe vnder the burthen of the croſſe. Thus the Pſalmiſt ſaith, that the Angell of the Lord encampeth round about them that feare him, and deliuereth them. And againe, Hee ſhall giue his Angels charge ouer thee to keepe thee in all thy wayes; they ſhall beare thee in their hands, that thou hurt not thy foot againſt a ſtone: the which as it is principally to bee vnderſtood of our Head Ieſus Chriſt, as himſelfe applyeth it, ſo likewiſe it belongeth to all thoſe who are the true members of his body; as it may appeare by manifold examples. Thus the Angels attended vpon righteous Lot to deliuer him and his, out of the common deſtruction of Sodome and Gomorrah. And an whole Hoaſt of them encamped about Iacob when hee feared his Brothers armed rage; which at all times were ready (as he ſaith elſewhere) to deliuer him from all euill. Thus the Angell of God ſtandeth betweene Iſrael and the Hoaſt of the Egyptians, purſuing them, and preſerueth them from being ouer-taken by that imminent danger. And afterwards the Lord ſendeth him before them to keepe them in their way, and to bring them to the place which he had prepared: caſting out all their enemies from before them which oppoſed againſt them. Thus an whole Army of theſe holy Angels encompaſſe the Prophet Eliſha, & his ſeruant round about to preſerue them from being deſtroyed by the Hoaſt of the Aramites. So an Angell of God preſerueth the three children in the fiery furnace, and Daniel in the Lions Den. And thus by the miniſtery of Angels Peter is deliuered out of priſon; and Lazarus is carried into Abrahams boſome. And howſoeuer the faithfull haue not in theſe daies ſuch viſible apparitions of theſe heauenly Spirits nor ſuch miraculous deliuerances from dangers by their miniſtery; yet Gods loue and care ouer his Church being now as great as in former times; their diligence and watchfulneſſe is no leſſe to ſafegard and preſerue from all perils, and to comfort and vphold in all afflictions thoſe who are ſo deere to their Lord and Maſter. And therefore if in all griefes and miſeries it be a great comfort vnto vs to haue the company of ſome able and louing friends, which haue both ſome power and wil to ſuccour and reliue vs; how ſweet and comfortable is this happy ſociety of the holy Angels to thoſe who being afflicted doe by faith apprehend their continuall preſence, ſeeing without all compariſon they are more powerfull and willing, than our moſt potent friends, to comfort and preſerue vs in all our extremities.

ath.4.11.
ke 22.43.
al.34.7.
al.91.11,12.
en.19.15.
en.32.1,2.
n.48.16.
od.14.19.
od 23.20,23.
33.2.
ng.6.17.
an.3.25. & 22.
s 12.7.

§. Sect. 7.
That in all our afflictions wee haue Chriſt an aſſiſtant & copartner with vs in our griefes.
*Math.*28.20.

But it will be much more comfortable vnto vs if we further conſider, that we haue in all our afflictions not only the fellowſhip and aſſiſtance of Angels, but alſo of Ieſus Chriſt the Lord of Angels, who according to his gracious promiſe is with vs vnto the end of the World; and that both as our King to preſerue vs from dangers, protect vs from enemies, and to gouerne, guide and meaſure out vnto vs a burthen of afflictions proportionable to our ſtrength; and alſo as our head to condole and compaſſionate our giefes, and to eaſe vs of the irkſomeneſſe of our load by bearing the greateſt part of the waight therof with his owne moſt powerfull ſtrength. For not only hath he learned pity and compaſſion by ſuffering the like afflictions in the body of his fleſh, and in his ſtate of humiliation as the Apoſtle teacheth vs; but alſo now in his ſtate of glory, as our Head hee ſuffereth in vs who are the members of his Body, accounting our afflictions his afflictions, and our ſmart his owne paine, as appeareth in that ſpeech to Saul; Saul, why perſecuteſt thou mee? And to the faithfull at the day of judgement: I was an hungred and yee gaue mee meate, I thirſted and yee gaue mee drinke, I was a ſtranger and yee lodged me, I was naked and yee clothed mee; I was ſicke and yee viſited mee, I was in priſon and yee came vnto me: And when they asked, when they ſaw him in this afflicted eſtate, he anſwereth, Verily, I ſay vnto you, in as much as yee haue done it vnto one of the leaſt of theſe my brethren, yee haue done it to mee. And hereof it is that the ſufferings of the faithfull are in the Scriptures called the ſufferings of Chriſt; Becauſe as they ſuffered with him in his Paſſion as being their head and ſuretie, and ſatisfied Gods juſtice for their redemption and juſtification; ſo hee ſuffereth with them in their affliction as being his members, with his ſtrength & power ſo aſſiſting them, that they doe not ouer-whelme and conſume them, but only tend to their ſanctification and the purging and purifying them from their ſinne and corruption. Thus the Apoſtle ſaith, that euery where we beare about in our body the dying of our Lord Ieſus, that the life of Ieſus might be made manifeſt in our bodies. And elſewhere more plainly: Now reioyce I (ſaith he) in my ſufferings for you, and fulfill the reſt of the afflictions of Chriſt in my fleſh, for his bodies ſake which is the Church. So the Apoſtle Peter exhorteth the faithfull to rejoyce in the fiery tryall; in as much as they were partakers of Chriſts ſufferings. And hereof it is that our Sauiour Chriſt calleth that portion of afflictions which he allotteth vnto vs, and exhorteth vs to beare, his yoke (take my yoke on you, and learne of me) not only becauſe he impoſeth it, but alſo as our yoke-fellow doth beare the greateſt part of the waight. For as when two Oxen which

*Heb.*2.18. & 4.15,16. & 5.2.
Acts 9.4.
*Math.*25.35,40
2.*Cor.*4.10.
*Col.*1.24.
1.*Pet.*4.13.

are far vnequal in their bignes are yoked together, the heavieſt part of the load is borne by the talleſt and ſtrongeſt, the yoke ſcarce touching the necke of him that is leaſt and loweſt: ſo is it betweene Chriſt and vs, in regard whereof hee encourageth vs to ioyne with him in bearing this burthen, becauſe his yoke is eaſie and his burthen light; he who is high & mighty ſuſtaining the chiefe waight, and keeping it with his Omnipotent Power, that it cannot oppreſſe and ouer-whelme vs. The conſideration wherof may miniſter vnto vs ſingular comfort in all our croſſes and calamities; ſeeing wee haue ſuch a copartner and aſſiſtant in bearing all our afflictions, who is able and willing to vphold vs when wee are ready to ſinke, and to comfort vs when we are ready to faint; for as the ſufferings of Chriſt abound in vs, ſo our conſolation aboundeth through Chriſt; and as he addeth to the waight of our burthen, ſo alſo to our ſtrength, in as much as we may ſay with the Apoſtle, that though we be neuer ſo feeble in our ſelues, yet wee are able to doe all things, thorough the helpe of Chriſt which ſtrengtheneth vs. Yea, herein wee may reioyce, in that though our burthen be neuer ſo great, yet it is impoſſible that wee ſhould ſinke and fall downe flat vnder it; for as the leſſer and weaker Oxe, drawing in the ſame yoke with one which is much bigger and ſtronger, cannot fall becauſe his fellow ſupporteth him, by reaſon of that conjunction which is betweene them, vnleſſe hee ſhould alſo pull him downe together with him; ſo neither can we, being yoked and vnited vnto Chriſt our Head, in a farre neerer and more inſeparable vnion, ſinke vnder our burthen, ſeeing he is al-ſufficient to hold vs vp, and cannot bee pulled downe with the greateſt waight. And as by vertue of this ſpirituall vnion with Chriſt, hee as our Head doth partake with vs in all our afflictions, ſo alſo all his Saints and faithfull ſeruants doe communicate with vs in them, as being fellow members of his myſticall Body: for as when any part of the naturall body is vexed and pained with any infirmity, al the reſt do ſympathize in the ſorrowes, and by mutuall compaſſion and fellow-feeling do partake in theſe griefs; ſo is it in the ſpirituall Body of the Church. By reaſon whereof great comfort redoundeth to euery particular member which is thus afflicted; not onely becauſe the burthen is made much lighter which is borne vpon ſo many ſhoulders; but alſo becauſe from this compaſſion, doe iſſue moſt feruent and effectuall Prayers of the whole Church, whereby they commend all the afflicted parts of their body to Gods ſpeciall care and prouidēce, to be vpheld & preſerued by him in theſe their diſtreſſes, the which are moſt powerfull to preuayle with God, for the obtayning of helpe and comfort; for if the prayer of one faithfull man auayleth much if it be effectuall and zealous; then how much more the prayers of all the Saints when they are ioyned together? Finally, wee haue in all our afflictions God himſelfe preſent with vs to aſſiſt and ſupport vs; for as by his moſt wiſe and gracious Prouidence, he appointeth vnto the faithfull their afflictions for their tryall or chaſtiſement, ſo thereby he is preſent with them and watcheth ouer them, that hee may ſupport and ſtrengthen them when they are ready to faint and fall, according to his gracious promiſe whereby he hath aſſured them, that hee will not ſuffer them to be tempted aboue their power, but will giue a good iſſue with the tentation, that they may bee able to beare it. But of this I ſhall haue occaſion to ſpeake more hereafter.

Math 11.29,30

2.Cor.1.5.

Phil.4.13.

Iam.5.16.

1.Cor.10.13.

Chap. XXIX.

That wee may receiue much comfort, by comparing our leſſer and lighter afflictions, with thoſe greater and heauier which Gods deareſt Saints haue felt and ſuffered.

§. Sect. 1.
That it hath alwayes been the portion o
the faithfull t endure in thi world miſery and affliction and firſt that our father A- dam endured great afflictions.

Hauing ſhewed what arguments of conſolation doe ariſe from our afflictions, being ſimply conſidered in themſelues with relation to their cauſes, effects, ſubiect, and adiuncts: now we are, according to our order, to intreate of thoſe comforts, which ariſe from them as they are compared with the afflictions of others, or with thoſe heauenly and euerlaſting ioyes, which theſe ſhort and light afflictions doe cauſe vnto vs. Concerning the former, wee may receiue much conſolation, if wee compare our croſſes, either with the greater afflictions which Gods deareſt children haue ſuffered before vs; or with thoſe miſeries and puniſhments which are inflicted vpon the wicked both in this life and in the life to come. And for the firſt, if wee looke into the Booke of God wee ſhall find, that it hath beene the portion of all the faithfull, to indure in this World miſeries and afflictions; and that they haue not only ſipped and taſted of this bitter cup, but as they haue exceeded in grace, ſo they haue drunke a farre deeper draught than wee, in this vnpleaſant potion. For to beginne with our great grand-father Adam, what miſeries did hee indure in his whole life, partly through the remembrance of his loſt happineſſe, and partly through the preſſure and vexation of preſent afflictions? For hee, who formerly paſſed his time in pleaſure and delight, and abounded ſo in Gods bleſſings that he wanted nothing which his heart could deſire, muſt now labour in a new plantation, for the furniſhing whereof all things were to be inuented, and all neceſſaries to bee prouided; now the earth which formerly brought forth all good fruits of its owne accord, being for his ſinne ſubiect to the curſe, bringeth forth nothing but bryars and thornes, vnleſſe it were tilled and manured with his toileſome labour; now hee who formerly liued at eaſe, if hee will haue his penury relieued, and obtaine neceſſaries for the ſuſtaining of his life, muſt buy them with his ſweat, ſpend part of his bodily ſubſtance, that he may nouriſh the reſt, and waſt his ſtrength that he may preſerue it. Now he who needed nothing, needeth all things, and hath no body to comfort him in his miſeries, but ſhe that cauſed them; none to helpe him in his wants but ſhee who helped him to fall into them. He is indeed Emperour of the World, but he hath no ſubiects to obey him; hee is Lord of all, but hee hath no ſeruants, no not for the baſeſt offices. If he will eate the fruits of the Earth, hee muſt bee his owne husbandman, his owne purueier. If hee will haue clothes, hee muſt be his owne taylor, and make them before he can weare them, if he will haue a lodging, to keepe him from the bruit beaſts and the violence of the weather, there is no man to build it vnleſſe hee will be his owne carpenter and tent-maker, and in a word if hee will haue the pleaſure of any earthly neceſſary, hee muſt firſt endure the paines of getting and procuring it. Yea afterwards when hee expected the comfort of ſociety, and hoped to haue all his other miſeries ſweetned with the pleaſure of his poſterity, his hony is turned into gall, and there, as he thought to haue found his chiefe contentment, he findeth his greateſt croſſes and calamities. For his deareſt ſonne Abel is cruelly murthered, and his other ſonne Cain the firſt borne like a butcher or hangman imbrueth his hands in his innocent blood. And ſo by the death of the one hee is depriued of his comfort, and by the life of the other hee endured a greater croſſe. For hee ſeeth him a vagabond, a reprobate, an enemy to himſelfe, and the whole Church of God, and whilſt hee liued, dead in his ſinne, obnoxious to Gods wrath, and (as it were) already adjudged to eternall condemnation. Now what a griefe was this to conſider that his firſt fruits ſhould offer himſelfe to the Diuell, that the heire of the world, ſhould bee the ſonne of perdition, and the firſt that ſhould hanſell the fire of Hell. But aboue all theſe worldly croſſes hee was preſſed with the burthen of his owne ſinne, which was the cauſe that brought all the reſt vpon him, and the very ſting that made all his paines truely painfull, and all his other miſeries out of meaſure miſerable. For hee who was holy & righteous according to Gods image, now looking into the glaſſe of the law of nature, ſeeth himſelfe made by himſelfe moſt vgly and deformed; he ſeeth himſelfe ſpoiled of the ineſtimable treaſures of Gods gifts and graces, and that himſelfe was the theefe who had thus robbed him. Hee ſeeth nothing in him but the guiltineſſe and filthineſſe of ſin, ignorance in the place of knowledge, peruerſeneſſe in ſtead of obedience, and hatred of God in ſtead of loue. And one while hee is filled with griefe whilſt he conſidereth his loſſe, and another while with anger againſt himſelfe as being the cauſe of all his miſery. Whereſoeuer hee looketh hee findeth cauſe of lamentation; but yet when he is about to complaine on thoſe who haue brought him into theſe miſeries, his owne conſcience apprehendeth himſelfe as the malefactor, and hee hath nothing to cry out on but his owne ſinne. The like afflictions were that part of his poſterity, which feared God, ſubiect vnto; for in that ſhort ſtory of righteous Abell, who was his true heire in vertue and godlineſſe, there is onely mention of his birth, ſacrifice and ſlaughter, his ſeruing of God giuing the occaſion vnto his wicked brother to reſolue vpon and execute that bloody deſigne. So whilſt the poſterity of Cain flouriſhed in the world, built cities, inuented muſicke, and ſpent their time in carnall pleaſures; Sheth and his progeny were obnoxious to their tyranny, and oppreſſion, being innocent lambes among rauenous and cruell wolues. Thus alſo Noah the preacher of righteouſneſſe had his life made bitter vnto him with many and grieuous afflictions; for what great paines did he take in building the arke? vnto what ſcoffes and ſkornes, mockes and flouts was he ſubiect, when as the wicked of thoſe times did ſee him to vndertake (in their opinion) ſuch a fruitleſſe taske and vſeleſſe labour? with what ſorrow was hee oppreſſed when he ſaw his miniſtery contemned and vnprofitable to his hearers, and when afterwards hee beheld Gods goodly workmanſhip defaced, the creatures deſtroied, all mankinde, and among the reſt his friends, kindred and acquaintance drowned & ouerwhelmed in that vniuerſall deluge? what a cloſe and noyſome priſon was the Arke vnto him, for the ſpace of ten moneths together, when as being conſtrained to lodge amongſt ſo many bruite and filthy beaſts, he could not chuſe but be almoſt choaked and ſtifled with their filth, excrements, and ſtinking ſauours? And to ſay nothing of thoſe innumerable miſeries which he muſt needs endure in the new plantation and renouation of the World, what a corraſiue muſt it needes be vnto his heart, to be ſcorned by his owne ſonne, when as he conſidered that his ſinne gaue occaſion vnto it? what a torment was it to his minde to thinke that amongſt all men three only beſides himſelfe, had eſcaped the flood, and that now one of them was drowned in a flood of wickedneſſe, which would carry him dead in ſinne vnto the ſea of endleſſe perdition?

Gen.4.

§. Sect. 2.
Of the afflictions of Abraham the Father of the faithfull

After the flood we ſee Abraham the Father of the faithfull ſubject to the like or greater afflictions. For by Gods commandement he is injoyned to leaue his owne country, his friends, kindred and acquaintance; which are as deare vnto a man as his life, and to ſpend his dayes in a voluntary baniſhment, in a ſtrange land, among a barbarous nation, who were groſſe idolaters, and polluted with all manner of abominable wickedneſſe, where euery day his ſoule was vexed with their groſſe impieties, the ſight wherof was as grieuous as death it ſelfe. The which country, though it were promiſed vnto him as the reward of his faith and obedience, yet in reſpect of fruition, hee was for the preſent but a titular king onely, without land or ſubject, hauing not ſo much as a foot of his inheritance in preſent poſſeſſion. Neither doth it giue vnto him any great comfort in the full aſſurance of future fruition, ſeeing hee found ſuch ſcarcity and penury in it, that hee was faine to leaue it for want of bread, and to flee into Egypt to ſeeke releefe. And being come thither he is conſtrained (through the wickedneſſe of the people) for the ſafeguard of his life to ſuffer his deare Sara to be taken from him, which could not bee much leſſe grieuous vnto him, than the ſeparation of his ſoule and body, and to redeeme his life from famiſhment by proſtituting his beloued wife to be defiled by a wicked infidel. Out of which dangers he was through Gods gracious prouidence no ſooner eſcaped, and againe returned to his owne home, but there fell out ſuch implacable contentions, betweene his, and Lots ſeruants, that he hath no meanes to preſerue peace & loue betweene them, but by parting with his deare nephew, who was then in the place of a ſonne vnto him, and the chiefe ſtay and comfort of his life, confining himſelfe vnto that part of the country which hee refuſed, though by a donation from God he was Lord of all. Vpon which parting hee preſently heareth of the ouerthrow and captiuity of his beloued kinſman, and is conſtrayned to redeeme his life, and liberty with the hazard of his owne. Afterwards God maketh a gracious promiſe vnto him of a numerous poſterity, and that in his ſeed both himſelfe and all the nations of the earth ſhould be bleſſed, when as yet he had no child, which promiſe was ſo long deferred vntill in naturall reaſon it ſeemed impoſſible to bee performed, by reaſon of Sarahs barrenneſſe, and therefore beleeuing the thing promiſed, but ſtaggering in the manner how it was to be accompliſhed, he harkeneth vnto his wife, perſwading him, that ſeeing there was no hope of iſſue by her, he would take vnto him Hagar his maide, that out of her might ſpring this numerous poſterity. By whom he no ſooner had a Sonne, but all his comfort is croſſed through their bitter contentions, which could no otherwiſe bee pacified but by granting an ouer-ruling power vnto Sarah, which ſhee exerciſed with ſuch rigor, that his late eſpouſed wife and onely Sonne as yet vnborne forſake him and flee away. Vpon her returne he is afflicted with care and feare ouer his nephew Lot, labouring for his preſeruation out of the common deſtruction of Sodome and Gomorrah; and ſoone after hee is conſtrayned to leaue his habitation, and to dwell as a ſtranger in the land of Gerar, where the ſecond time his beloued Sarah is taken from him, and in great danger to bee defiled by Abimelech, the King of the country. At laſt Iſaac is borne vnto him, of which joy, leaſt hee ſhould ſurfet, it is embittered with an vnexpected accident; for the ſonne of the bond-woman ſcoffeth and ſcorneth at the child of promiſe, which being diſcerned by Sarah, hee is faine to giue her ſatisfaction by ſending Hagar and his yong ſon Iſmael whom he dearely loued, into perpetuall baniſhment. And now when after this loſſe hee had no comfort left but his deare Iſaac, hee is by Gods commandement injoyned to forgoe him alſo; and that not by naturall ſickneſſe, or through the rage of enemies which had beene grieuous had it beene no more; but which was moſt intolerable, hee himſelfe, the Father of the faithfull and the forwardeſt profeſſour of Gods true religion, muſt in the ſight of the Gentiles and infidels, doe an act in outward appearance abominable and execrable. For he muſt take his own Son, his onely Son, his Son Iſaac, whom hee loued, in whom all the promiſes of life and ſaluation were made, to be fulfilled in that ſeed which ſhould come of him, and after three dayes deliberation vpon the matter, he muſt take the life of his life & comfort of his ſoule, and with his owne hands (like a cruell butcher) cut his throat; and (leaſt there ſhould any relique remaine of him to comfort him with any hope of his reſtoring) he muſt offer him in ſacrifice, and ſee him with his owne eyes conſumed to aſhes? By all which it appeareth that God did ſet forth this holy Patriarch as a preſident of humane miſery, to teach vs, that ſeeing hee thus dealt with Abraham the Father of the faithfull whom he ſo much loued and eſteemed, wee, who profeſſe our ſelues his Children, ſhould not expect any priuiledge whereby we ſhould be exempted from drinking of this cup.

*Gen.*12.1,2.
*Verſ.*10.
*Gen.*13.7,8.
*Gen.*14.12.14.
*Gen.*16.2.
*Gen.*18.& 1
*Gen.*20.2.
*Gen.*21.

§. Sect. 3.
Of the afflictions of Iſaac.

Neither in truth had his poſterity, being children of promiſe, as well as his children after the fleſh, any prerogatiue or exemption from bearing the croſſe; onely it may bee that as their faith was leſſer, ſo their burthen was lighter, being fitted by God according to their ſtrength. For to goe no further; who ſeeth not, that as Iſaac was his heire in reſpect of the promiſes, ſo alſo in reſpect of miſeries and afflictions. In his child-hood he was abuſed, mocked, and (as the Apoſtle ſaith) perſecuted by Iſmael the ſonne of the bond-woman; after his mariage he was like the Father enforced through dearth and famine, to flee for reliefe into the land of the Philiſtins, for the preſeruation of his life; where hee was faine for feare of incurring danger for his wiues ſake, to put in practice his Fathers pollicy, and to call her his ſiſter. And the more that God bleſſed him, the more he was enuied by the Philiſtins, inſomuch as when he had by his great labour digged diuers wells, they for ſpite either filled them vp, or forcibly tooke them from him, not ſuffering him to drinke of that water which he had dearely purchaſed with his paines and ſweate. Hee was alſo like his father long afflicted with the barrenneſſe of his wife, and no ſooner, at his earneſt prayer, had ſhee conceiued two children in her womb, but (after a monſtrous manner) they ſtriue the one with the other in their mothers belly, in which contentions they continued long after they were borne. Hee ſaw his firſt-borne rejected of God, and him caſt off, whom hee had choſen and moſt dearely loued; Hee beholdeth this his reprobation ſealed by his prophane contemning of the birth-right, and in his wicked choiſe of wiues againſt his fathers will from among the curſed nations, who were through their impiety a continuall griefe of minde to Iſaac and Rebbeccah. Finally, God croſſeth his will in making him vnwittingly to giue the bleſſing vnto his leſſe-loued, yet beſt-deſeruing ſonne Iacob; and then heareth that Eſau doth impiouſly thirſt after his blood and threatneth his death, whereby hee and his wife are inforced to ſend him away like a baniſhed man from his fathers houſe for the ſpace of twenty yeares; all which time they had iuſt cauſe to bewaile no leſſe his abſence than his brothers preſence; the one ſpoyling them of their comfort, the other euery day miniſtring new matter of griefe and mourning.

al.4.29.

Gen.26.

Gen.25.

n.35.

§. Sect. 5.
Of the many and grieuous afflictions of Iacob.

The like and greater miſeries was the Patriarch Iacob ſubject vnto, in the whole courſe of his life. For euen in his mothers womb his brother ſtriueth with him; and no ſooner had he receiued Gods bleſſing by the hands of his father (which alſo hee obtayned with great difficulty and danger) but preſently his brother hateth him and reſolueth on his murther: whoſe cruelty hee could no otherwiſe auoid, than by leauing his father and mother with all the meanes of his maintenance and preferment in their family, and by liuing like an exile a great part of his age in a ſtrang country; where hee indured a long and hard ſeruitude vnder an idolatrous, churliſh and deceitful maſter; by whom hee was deluded in his wife for whom hee ſerued, and defrauded of his deſerued wages. And inſtead of comfort at home to ſuſtaine him in theſe ſorrowes, he is vexed with the diſagreement, æmulations, and chiding of his wiues, whileſt they contended who ſhould haue the greateſt intereſt in his loue. Being to returne to his fathers houſe, he is faine to ſteale away from Laban, & to depart from his father in law, of whom he had ſo well deſerued, like one that fled from an enemy, of which no ſooner is notice taken but preſently he is purſued like a runaway rebuked like a ſlaue, and ranſaked like a thiefe. Being eſcaped the iawes of this greedy Wolfe, hee is ready to fall into the pawes of a raging Lyon: for his brother Eſau who had formerly threatned his death commeth againſt him with foure hundred men, whoſe cruelty hee not knowing how to reſiſt or auoide, is exceedingly perplexed with terrour and feare, and after much care and diſtraction of minde, he is faine in the moſt abject manner to proſtrate and humble himſelfe before him, for the pacifying of his wrath. Afterwards, his moſt deare wife Rachel dieth in her trauell, and Ioſeph the comfort of his old age is taken from him, and as hee ſuppoſed, deuoured with wilde beaſts, which errour and falſe conceipt brought vnto him as true and bitter ſorrow as if indeed hee had beene deſtroyed; for refuſing all comfort hee profeſſeth that hee would go mourning to his graue. Vnto which afflictions we may adde the rauiſhing of his onely daughter, the bloudy and vniuſt reuenge taken by his ſonnes Simeon and Leui vpon Shechem, Hamor and the whole City, who were innocent of the fault, getting their opportunity of perpetrating this wickedneſſe, by abuſing and prophaning Gods holy Sacrament: the defiling of his Concubine by his firſt-borne Reuben: the inceſt of Iudah; the dearth and famine which pinched him and his whole family, and whilſt he vſed meanes to prouide bread to preſerue them from famiſhment, he was much more vexed with the trouble of his Sonnes, the impriſonment of Simeon, and aboue all the reſt with the conſtrained departure of his dearely loued Beniamin. By all which it appeareth that hee had iuſt cauſe to profeſſe (as he did vnto Pharaoh) that the dayes of his pilgrimage were but few and euill, ſeeing he begunne and continued his life in the ſuffering of ſuch grieuous and innumerable miſeries.

Gen.27.

Gen.37.35.

Gen.34.
Gen.35.22.

Gen.47.9.

§. Sect. 5.
Of the afflictions of Moſes.

Thus Moſes, whom God ſo dearely loued and entertained into the neereſt familiarity, talking with him as one man talketh with another face to face, was notwithſtanding continually exerciſed with grieuous afflictions. For at his very birth he hardly eſcapeth death according to the cruell decree of wicked Pharaoh. Three moneths together hee was in danger to be butchered, if hee were diſcouered. And then he is expoſed and laid out by his parents, who for feare of their owne liues durſt preſerue his no longer. And though in his childhood and youth hee were nouriſhed by Pharaohs daughter and ſo enioyed for a time the pleaſures of Egypt; yet when he came to mature age, he refuſeth to be called her ſonne, and abandoning all his worldly preferments, he chooſeth rather to ſuffer affliction with the people of God, than to enioy the pleaſures of ſinne for a ſeaſon. For hee ſeeketh to right the wrongs of his oppreſſed brethren; and ſlayeth an Egyptian who did him iniury. Which being diſcouered he is faine for the ſafegard of his life to flie into the land of Madian, where he liued as a ſtranger, and for the ſuſtaining of his life was contented to ſubmit himſelfe vnto the baſe condition of an hyred ſeruant. Afterwards at Gods appointment hee returneth into Egypt, vpon a dangerous and difficult ambaſſage, and runneth himſelfe into many perils, whilſt he laboureth for the deliuery of his people out of their captiuity. For not onely Pharaoh and all the Egyptians became his enemies, but euen his owne nation, for whoſe freedome hee laboured, when contrary to their expectation they were for the preſent more grieuouſly oppreſſed, are much incenſed, and in bitterneſſe of ſoule murmur and cry out againſt him. And after their deliuerance with what afflictions and troubles was he continually vexed? For no ſooner was he come to the red Sea, but they begin a freſh to murmur and repine againſt him; and thus vpon all occaſions afterwards they fall into the like grudging and vniuſt complaining, of which his owne brother and ſiſter were not innocent, but togither with the reſt they vex him with their murmurings. Hee is continually toiled in iudging their cauſes and in taking vp their ſuits and contentions; he is vexed with their ſtiffeneckedneſſe and froward conuerſation; he is exceedingly grieued with their apoſtaſie and odious idolatry; he ſorroweth for their ſlaughters and lamenteth thoſe manifold plagues, which by their grieuous ſinnes they brought vpon them; and whereas he had no worldly comfort to cheere him in ſuffering all theſe afflictions, but the remembrance of the land of promiſe, the fruition whereof he long expected, he is at laſt cut off from this hope, and heareth Gods definitiue ſentence paſſe vpon him, that hee ſhould die in the wilderneſſe, and neuer enter into the promiſed land.

*Heb.*11.25.

§. Sect.6. Of the afflictions of Iob and Dauid.

So holy Iob, though he were the iuſteſt man that liued vpon Earth, and aboue all others in his time moſt highly aduanced in Gods fauour, yet did he endure ſo manifold and grieuous afflictions (as the ſpoiling of his goods, the death of his ſonnes and ſeruants, the outward torments of boyles and botches, and the inward terrors of an afflicted mind; the ſcornes of the wicked, the hard cenſures of the godly, the tentations of his wife, and the vnkind vſage of his friends, who in his chiefeſt miſery and perplexity applyed to his troubled mind corraſiues in ſtead of comforts) that in theſe reſpects he was thought the fitteſt man to be propounded by the holy Ghoſt as a patterne of patience. And thus Dauid though he were a man according to Gods owne heart, yet paſſed all his dayes in trouble and miſery; and that not only before hee came to ſit on the throne, when as hee was continually perſecuted by Saul, and euery day within an inch of death, forſaken of his faithleſſe friends, who ſtood bound vnto him in many benefits, ſlandered and traduced by his cruell enemies, and robbed and ſpoiled of his goods and wiues, who were carried away captiue by mercileſſe infidels. But alſo after he was crowned king, hee endured ſo much more grieuous croſſes and calamities, as thoſe were neerer vnto him who were the authours of them. For to ſay nothing of his warres, both ciuill with the houſe of Saul, and forraine with the enemies of his people; nor of the conſpiracies and treaſons of his own ſubiects, who did riſe againſt him, and the fearefull plague wherein he loſt 70000. of his people, how much more grieuouſly was hee afflicted in his owne poſterity? for Ammon his owne ſon defileth, yea rauiſheth Thamar his owne daughter. And wicked Abſolon in cruell reuenge becommeth his murtherer: For which bloody crime Dauid taking vpon him to pardon him though hee were by God adiudged to death, he doth afterwards conſpire and rebell againſt him, he driueth him out of his kingdome, hee defileth his concubines and bringeth him into moſt deſperate extremities. And finally when by his death Dauid was freed out of theſe dangers and miſeries, the meanes of his deliuerance was more grieuous vnto him than all the former euils which hee endured. For with ſuch vnbrideled loue did hee affect this vngracious ſonne, that hee layeth his death to heart more than all other his afflictions, ſo that like a man oppreſſed with the waight of ſorrow, he ſeeketh eaſe by venting his griefe in that pittifull lamentation. O my ſon Abſalon, my ſonne, my ſonne Abſalon would God I had died for thee; O Abſalon, my ſonne, my ſonne. Vnto whom I might adde all the Prophets and holy men of God who (as our Sauiour witneſſeth) were perſecuted of their and Gods enemies, and through their meanes and malice, afflicted in their whole

*Iam.*5.11.

1.*Sam.*30.

2.Sam 18.33.

*Matth.*5.12.

11.36.
38.

whole liues with innumerable and moſt grieuous croſſes and calamities. For, as the Apoſtle witneſſeth, they were racked and tryed by mockings and ſcourgings, bonds and priſonment; they were ſtoned, hewen a ſunder, tempted and ſlaine with the ſword, they wandred vp and downe in ſheepes skinnes, and in goates skinnes, being deſtitute afflicted and tormented; they wandred in wilderneſſes, and mountaines, and dennes and caues of the earth; and that not for any faults or demerits of their owne, for they were ſo excellent in vertue and holineſſe, that as hee there teſtifieth, the world was not worthy of them.

Sect.7.
the afflicti-s of the A-ſtles, and eſcially of the poſtle Paul.

The like alſo may bee ſaid of the holy Saints, Apoſtles and Martyrs of Ieſus Chriſt vnder the new Teſtament, who though they were aboue all other aduanced in Gods fauour, yet were they aboue all other vexed and tormented with afflictions and perſecutions. For to begin with Iohn the Baptiſt, the forerunner of Chriſt, the friend of the brindegroome, and the greateſt of all the Prophets; wee find that after an auſtere and afflicted life, hee was for reproouing Herod for his ſinne of inceſt wrongfully impriſoned, and afterwards at the ſuit of a dancing damſell without any courſe of law vnjuſtly beheaded. And of the ſame cup all the Apoſtles and Diſciples of Chriſt taſted after him; for beſides all the miſeries and afflictions which they endured in their liues, as want and penury, trauell and wearineſſe, infamy and reproaches, ſlanders and vnjuſt cenſures, mockings and ſcornings, impriſonment and ſcourgings, all the twelue Apoſtles were put to violent deathes, Iohn onely excepted, who being miraculouſly preſerued in the caldron of boyling oyle, was afterward by the tyrant baniſhed into the ile Pathmos. But moſt grieuous and manifold were the afflictions of the Apoſtle Paul aboue all the reſt, being a veſſell of mercy, purpoſly choſen of God to carry his name before the Gentiles, and the children of Iſrael, and to ſuffer many things for his names ſake. For thus he deſcribeth his owne miſeries and calamities; I thinke (ſaith he) that God hath ſet forth vs the laſt Apoſtles, as men appointed to death: for wee are made a gazing-ſtocke to the world, and to Angels and to men: Wee are fooles for Chriſts ſake, weake and deſpiſed. Vnto this houre we both hunger and thirſt and are naked, and are buffeted, and haue no certaine dwelling place; and labour, working with our hands: we are reuiled, and yet we bleſſe; we are perſecuted, and ſuffer it: Wee are euill ſpoken of, and wee pray: wee are made as the filth of the world, the offſcowring of all things vnto this time. So in another place he ſaith; Wee are afflicted on euery ſide, yet are wee not in diſtreſſe; in pouerty, but not ouercome of pouerty. We are perſecuted but not forſaken, caſt downe, but we periſh not; euery where wee beare about in our body the dying of the Lord Ieſus, that the life of Ieſus might bee made manifeſt in our bodies. And againe, In all things wee approue our ſelues as the Miniſters of God; in much patience, in afflictions, in neceſſities, in diſtreſſes; In ſtripes, in priſons, in tumults, in labours, by watchings, by faſtings, &c. And comparing his ſufferings with thoſe which were borne by the reſt of the Apoſtles, he ſaith, that he was in labours more abundant, in ſtripes aboue meaſure, in priſon more plentiouſly; in death oft: of the Iewes fiue times receiued I fortie ſtripes ſaue one; I was thrice beaten with rods, I was once ſtoned; I ſuffered thrice ſhip-wracke, night and day haue I beene in the deepe of the Sea. In iorneying I was often, in perils of waters, in perils of robbers, in perils of mine owne nation, in perils among the Gentiles, in perils in the Citie, in perils in the Wilderneſſe, in perils in the Sea, in perils among falſe brethren. In wearineſſe and painefulneſſe, in watching often, in hunger and thirſt, in faſtings often, in cold and in nakedneſſe. Beſides the things which were outward, I am cumbred daily and haue the care of all the Churches. Who is weake, and I am not weake? Who is offended, and I burne not? Vnto which outward vexations of his body, and inward cares and diſtractions in his minde, we may adde his ſpirituall afflictions, as the fight betweene the fleſh and the ſpirit, and the buffetings of Sathan, which were incomparably greater than all the reſt; for whereas out of the ſtrength of his faith and patience he reioyced, yea euen boaſted himſelfe in his other tribulations; by theſe he is much humbled and caſt downe in the ſight of his corruptions, forced to cry out in perplexity of ſpirit; Wretched man that I am, who ſhall deliuer me from this body of death; and driuen vnto God in frequent and freuent prayer, that hee might bee freed from theſe tentations.

9.15.16.
4.10.11.
13.
Cor.4.8.9.10.
Chap.6.4.5.6.
2.Cor.11.23.44.
Rom.7.24.
2.Cor.12.8.

Sect.8.
That it is the lot of the whole Church militant to ſuffer afflictions.

Neither is this the ſtate and condition onely of ſome few particular men, but euen of the whole Church militant here on Earth, which is continually ſubject to the iniuries and oppreſſions of wicked worldlings, which liue with it and about it, in regard whereof God calleth it a worme (feare not thou worme Iacob) becauſe it is eaſily troden vnder foote, and is not able in its ſelfe to make reſiſtance. And making a diſcription of the Church, wherby it might be deſcerned from all other people, hee ſtileth it with theſe properties: O thou afflicted and toſſed with tempeſt, that haſt no comfort. In which regard the Apoſtle ſaith, that the Theſſalonians became followers of the Churches of God, becauſe they had ſuffered the ſame things. And this manifeſtly appeareth in the

Eſa.41.14.
Eſa.54.11.
1.Theſ.2.14.

the example of the Church of Iſrael, which from the firſt to the laſt was afflicted aboue all other Nations. For what a miſerable captiuity did they indure three or foure hundred yeeres in the land of Egypt, whileſt the wicked Egyptians as their Lords and Maſters flowriſhed in the world, & raigned and ruled ouer them? What miſeries and afflictions did they ſuffer in the wilderneſſe fourty yeares together, as hunger, thirſt, ſtinging and burning Serpents, and grieuous plagues, till all of them that came out of the land of Egypt ſauing Caleb and Ioſuah were vtterly deſtroyed? And after that by ſo great warres and troubles they were ſetled in the land of Canaan, how often were they in the time of the Iudges vanquiſhed and made tributaries and ſlaues to their cruell enemies? What a miſerable captiuity did they indure in Babilon ſeuenty yeeres together? And what oppreſſions and perſecutions did they ſuffer vnder Antiochus, and afterwards vnder the Herods, for many yeares? ſo that the life of that whole ſtate was but a continuall conflict with troubles and calamities, ſauing that the Lord, now and then, gaue vnto them ſome little breathing time, wherby they renued their ſtrength againſt the next combate and incounter. The which their lamentable condition, we may ſee notably deſcribed in the booke of the Iudges, and Kings, in the 44. 79. and 139. Pſalmes, in the Lamentations of Ieremy and many other places of the old Teſtament, vnto which for breuity ſake I referre the reader. And the like, yea much more miſerable and afflicted was the condition of the Church after the aſcenſion of Ieſus Chriſt, not onely by reaſon of thoſe perſecutions raiſed againſt it by the malicious Iewes, but alſo thoſe much more cruell and bloody perſecutions vnder the heatheniſh Emperors, wherein many thouſands of the godly Chriſtians were murthered and maſſacred, and that not by ordinary deathes, but by the moſt exquiſite tortures and torments which wit aſſiſted with malice could inuent.

§.Sect.9.
That the ſcriptures fortell theſe afflictions of the faithfull,

By all which it appeareth that afflictions and tribulations in this World are the portion allotted both to the whole Church in generall, and to all the ſpeciall members, euen euery particular faithfull man; and that the more neere and deere they haue beene vnto God, and the more that they were inriched with excellent vertues and ſauing graces, the greater ſhare and meaſure of croſſes and miſeries hath beene inflicted vpon them. The which needeth not to ſeeme ſtrange vnto any, ſeeing theſe workes of God in the adminiſtration of his judgements are ſo conſonant and agreeable with his word, which ſheweth that all Gods Saints and ſeruants are continually ſubject to theſe croſſes and afflictions. For ſo our Sauiour ſaith, that whoſoeuer will bee his Diſciples they muſt take vp their croſſe daily and follow him: that all his faithfull ones ſhall weepe and lament, when as the world ſhall laugh and rejoyce; and that as many as he loueth he doth rebuke and chaſten. And his holy Apoſtle telleth vs, that all who will liue godly in Chriſt Ieſus ſhall ſuffer perſecution: That whom God loueth he chaſteneth, & ſcourgeth (not ſome but) euery ſon whom he receiueth; and therefore that if wee bee without correction, whereof all are partakers, then are wee baſtards and not ſonnes. And finally, that afflictions are the Kings roade and high-way, by which wee muſt trauell vnto the Kingdome of Heauen, if euer we purpoſe to come thither. And ſo the Apoſtle Peter comforting and ſtrenghthening the faithfull vnto whom hee writeth in their tentations, telleth them that their eſtate was common with them vnto all Gods children, and that the ſame afflictions which they ſuffered were alſo accompliſhed in the reſt of their brethren which are in the world. In which regard the ſonne of Syrach, admoniſheth vs, that if wee reſolue to ſerue the Lord wee ſhould alſo prepare our ſoules to indure tentations. Yea not onely are the Saints of God continually exerciſed with their owne afflictions, but they alſo communicate with the reſt of the faithfull in their croſſes and calamities, as being members of the ſame body; ſo as though it could bee imagined that they had no troubles or miſeries of their owne, yet is their life much afflicted, by compaſſionating others in their afflictions, and partaking in their griefes. And both theſe are compriſed together by the Apoſtle where hee ſaith, that the Hebrewes endured great afflictions, partly whilſt they were made a gazing ſtock both by reproches and tribulations, and partly while they became companions of them which were ſo toſſed to and fro. For both yee ſorrowed with me for my bonds and ſuffered with ioy the ſpoiling of your goods, knowing in your ſelues that you haue in Heauen a better and an enduring ſubſtance. Vnto which duety euery Chriſtian is bound not onely by vertue of their vnion with Chriſt, and of one of them with another as fellow members, but by an expreſſe commandement from God by his holy Apoſtle; Remember them that are in bonds, as though yee were bound with them, and them that are in affliction, as if you were afflicted in the body. And againe, Reioyce with them that reioyce, and weepe with them that weepe, be of like affection one towards another.

Luk 9.23.
Iob.16.20.
Apoc.3.19.
2.Tim.3.12.
Heb.12.6.8.
Act.14.22.
1.Pet.5.9.
Ecclus.2.1.
Heb.10.33.3
Heb.13.3.
Rom.12.15.16

§.Sect.10.
That we may receiue much comfort by cōſidering the Seeing therefore croſſes and afflictions haue from the very beginning of the world to this day beene the lot and portion of all Gods Saints, let this bee our comfort, that wee haue ſuch and ſo many copartners of our mples of ds afflicted ints.

our griefes, for it is better to hold our communion with them, though wee be fellowes alſo in their miſeries, than being ſeuered from them to enjoy all manner of worldly proſperity. It is better to accompany them in the foule and afflicted way which leadeth to Gods Kingdome, it being the only knowne paſſage towards this heauenly City; than to goe alone in an vncouth way which hath not beene beaten and tracted by others of our godly Brethren who haue gone before vs, though it bee neuer ſo pleaſing and delightfull. If trauailing towards a Towne we were aſſured by ſome man of credit that wee ſhould goe vnto it by narrow and filthy Lanes, and that by no other meanes wee could come to the end of our journey, than by trauailing through them, wee would not rejoyce, if in our paſſage wee found only flowry ſweet Medowes and a faire & Champion Country, becauſe wee would conclude that becauſe it was ſo contrary to our friends deſcription, it could not bee the right way which would bring vs to the City: but Chriſt hath aſcertained vs, that it is a narrow, foule and afflicted way that leadeth vs to the new Ieruſalem; and by the Scriptures we are aſſured that Gods deareſt Saints and Seruants haue trauelled by this way towards this heauenly City; ſo that wee haue no cauſe to bee diſmayed if wee finde our paſſage ſuch as Chriſt hath deſcribed it, and the Saints haue formerly tracted before vs, but rather wee ſhould haue juſt cauſe to doubt and feare, if we found it faire and pleaſant, leſt wee were not in the right way that leadeth to bleſſedneſſe. For we are not better, yea, we are many degrees worſer than the holy Patriarchs, Prophets and Apoſtles, and why then ſhould wee expect to haue this priuiledge aboue them, that whereas they by many afflictions entred into the Kingdome of God, wee ſhould hope to come thither by the faire broad way of worldly proſperity? Yea, rather let vs with patience trauaile in that way which they haue beaten before vs; let vs rejoyce & be glad if in our paſſage we may ſee the print of their footſteps, though it be in the mire and clay of trouble and affliction; ſeeing it is the greateſt comfort and aſſurance of attayning vnto happineſſe, when we haue ſuch companions in our journey, or rather ſuch precedents to lead vs the way. Let vs not thinke much to put our ſhoulders vnder that burthen which is borne by all, ſeeing it is not likely that we ſhould ſink vnder it, when as wee haue ſo many aſſiſtants and copartners. Let it be our comfort that in our afflicted eſtate wee be carried with the motion of the Vniverſe, and haue all the whole Church either going before, accompanying, or following after vs. And let vs not take it ill if we ſuſtaine that which is ſuffered by all: neither let vs falſly complaine that our burthen is heauier than other mens; ſeeing if wee compare our afflictions with thoſe which haue beene formerly ſuffered by the Patriarches, Apoſtles, and Saints of God, their weight will appeare to be but a few ounces, to their many pounds; and if now (according to Socrates conceipt) all the faithfull ſhould agree together to caſt all their croſſes and miſeries into one heape, to the end that there might out of the whole bee an equall part ſhared to euery one, the moſt of thoſe who came thither whining and complayning, would rather take againe their owne burthen which they brought, and goe their way, than yeeld to haue a ſhare in that proportionable diuiſion. Finally, let vs not onely looke to thoſe afflictions which other of Gods Saints haue ſuffered before vs, but conſider with what comfort and patience, yea, with what thankſgiuing and rejoycing they haue ſuſtained and endured them; and ſo ſhal wee plainly ſee that our murmuring and repining proceedeth not from the waight of theſe croſſes, ſeeing they haue borne far heauier with comfort & contentment, but from our own impotency & impatiency of bearing the lighteſt burthen. For as all meates and drinkes ſeeme bitter, clammy and diſtaſtfull to him who is ſicke of a burning Feuer; but yet when he ſeeth thoſe who are in health to feed hungerly and with a good ſtomacke on ſuch things as his appetite loatheth and abhorreth, then in his reaſon and diſcretion he imputeth not the vnſauourineſſe to the meate and drinke, but to the nature of his diſeaſe and his owne diſtemper: ſo when we behold other of Gods Saints bearing farre greater afflictions than thoſe which wee ſuffer with comfort and rejoycing, wee will no more complaine of our intolerable burthen, but of our owne impotency and impatiency which more vexe vs than our load.

c tuin for-ns querenda itas eſt; ſi-ia aliorum ice caſus,
m iſta feres.
Ouid. Meta-
rph.lib.15.

us eſt leuius od ab omni-portatur.

cende ſolem eſt cum uerſo rapi.
ec, de pro-
d.cap.5.

Patienter ab vno ſuſtinendum eſt quod multis accidit, Bern. de modo viuendi, cap.42.

Plutarch. de conſol.ad Apol.

§. Sect. 11.
A conſolation for thoſe who complaine that they are afflicted for their grieuous ſins.

But here the afflicted ſinner may object, that this comparing of the croſſes and calamities of the Patriarches and Apoſtles with thoſe which hee ſuffereth can bring vnto him no patience or comfort, becauſe they were holy men of God, who ſuffered in their innocency, for their tryall, and the manifeſtation of Gods graces in them; and therefore no maruell if they bore their croſſes with joy and thankſgiuing; whereas they being grieuous ſinners are afflicted for their tranſgreſſions, and beſides doe ſhew many corruptions and much wickedneſſe whileſt the hand of God lyeth heauy vpon them. To which I anſwere, that the fire of affliction ſerueth not only to try & proue vs, but alſo to refine and purifie vs; neither are our croſſes and calamities onely exerciſes for thoſe which are ſtrong and in health, but alſo Phyſicke to purge thoſe of the corrupt humours of ſinne, who are ſpiritually ſicke; and therefore wee may well beare them with patience and comfort the example of the Church of Iſrael, which from the firſt to the laſt was afflicted aboue all other Nations. For what a miſerable captiuity did they indure three or foure hundred yeeres in the land of Egypt, whileſt the wicked Egyptians as their Lords and Maſters flowriſhed in the world, & raigned and ruled ouer them? What miſeries and afflictions did they ſuffer in the wilderneſſe fourty yeares together, as hunger, thirſt, ſtinging and burning Serpents, and grieuous plagues, till all of them that came out of the land of Egypt ſauing Caleb and Ioſuah were vtterly deſtroyed? And after that by ſo great warres and troubles they were ſetled in the land of Canaan, how often were they in the time of the Iudges vanquiſhed and made tributaries and ſlaues to their cruell enemies? What a miſerable captiuity did they indure in Babilon ſeuenty yeeres together? And what oppreſſions and perſecutions did they ſuffer vnder Antiochus, and afterwards vnder the Herods, for many yeares? ſo that the life of that whole ſtate was but a continuall conflict with troubles and calamities, ſauing that the Lord, now and then, gaue vnto them ſome little breathing time, wherby they renued their ſtrength againſt the next combate and incounter. The which their lamentable condition, we may ſee notably deſcribed in the booke of the Iudges, and Kings, in the 44. 79. and 139. Pſalmes, in the Lamentations of Ieremy and many other places of the old Teſtament, vnto which for breuity ſake I referre the reader. And the like, yea much more miſerable and afflicted was the condition of the Church after the aſcenſion of Ieſus Chriſt, not onely by reaſon of thoſe perſecutions raiſed againſt it by the malicious Iewes, but alſo thoſe much more cruell and bloody perſecutions vnder the heatheniſh Emperors, wherein many thouſands of the godly Chriſtians were murthered and maſſacred, and that not by ordinary deathes, but by the moſt exquiſite tortures and torments which wit aſſiſted with malice could inuent.

§. Sect. 9.
That the ſcriptures fortell theſe afflictions of the faithfull,

By all which it appeareth that afflictions and tribulations in this World are the portion allotted both to the whole Church in generall, and to all the ſpeciall members, euen euery particular faithfull man; and that the more neere and deere they haue beene vnto God, and the more that they were inriched with excellent vertues and ſauing graces, the greater ſhare and meaſure of croſſes and miſeries hath beene inflicted vpon them. The which needeth not to ſeeme ſtrange vnto any, ſeeing theſe workes of God in the adminiſtration of his judgements are ſo conſonant and agreeable with his word, which ſheweth that all Gods Saints and ſeruants are continually ſubject to theſe croſſes and afflictions. For ſo our Sauiour ſaith, that whoſoeuer will bee his Diſciples they muſt take vp their croſſe daily and follow him: that all his faithfull ones ſhall weepe and lament, when as the world ſhall laugh and rejoyce; and that as many as he loueth he doth rebuke and chaſten. And his holy Apoſtle telleth vs, that all who will liue godly in Chriſt Ieſus ſhall ſuffer perſecution: That whom God loueth he chaſteneth, & ſcourgeth (not ſome but) euery ſon whom he receiueth; and therefore that if wee bee without correction, whereof all are partakers, then are wee baſtards and not ſonnes. And finally, that afflictions are the Kings roade and high-way, by which wee muſt trauell vnto the Kingdome of Heauen, if euer we purpoſe to come thither. And ſo the Apoſtle Peter comforting and ſtrenghthening the faithfull vnto whom hee writeth in their tentations, telleth them that their eſtate was common with them vnto all Gods children, and that the ſame afflictions which they ſuffered were alſo accompliſhed in the reſt of their brethren which are in the world. In which regard the ſonne of Syrach, admoniſheth vs, that if wee reſolue to ſerue the Lord wee ſhould alſo prepare our ſoules to indure tentations. Yea not onely are the Saints of God continually exerciſed with their owne afflictions, but they alſo communicate with the reſt of the faithfull in their croſſes and calamities, as being members of the ſame body; ſo as though it could bee imagined that they had no troubles or miſeries of their owne, yet is their life much afflicted, by compaſſionating others in their afflictions, and partaking in their griefes. And both theſe are compriſed together by the Apoſtle where hee ſaith, that the Hebrewes endured great afflictions, partly whilſt they were made a gazing ſtock both by reproches and tribulations, and partly while they became companions of them which were ſo toſſed to and fro. For both yee ſorrowed with me for my bonds and ſuffered with ioy the ſpoiling of your goods, knowing in your ſelues that you haue in Heauen a better and an enduring ſubſtance. Vnto which duety euery Chriſtian is bound not onely by vertue of their vnion with Chriſt, and of one of them with another as fellow members, but by an expreſſe commandement from God by his holy Apoſtle; Remember them that are in bonds, as though yee were bound with them, and them that are in affliction, as if you were afflicted in the body. And againe, Reioyce with them that reioyce, and weepe with them that weepe, be of like affection one towards another.

Luk. 9.23.
Ioh. 16.20.
Apoc. 3.19.
2. Tim. 3.12.
Heb. 12.6.8.
Act. 14.22.
1. Pet. 5.9.
Eccluſ. 2.1.
Heb. 10.33.3
Heb. 13.3.
Rom. 12.15.16

§. Sect. 10.
That we may receiue much comfort by cōſidering the Seeing therefore croſſes and afflictions haue from the very beginning of the world to this day beene the lot and portion of all Gods Saints, let this bee our comfort, that wee haue ſuch and ſo many copartners of our mples of ds afflicted

nts.

our griefes, for it is better to hold our communion with them, though wee be fellowes alſo in their miſeries, than being ſeuered from them to enjoy all manner of worldly proſperity. It is better to accompany them in the foule and afflicted way which leadeth to Gods Kingdome, it being the only knowne paſſage towards this heauenly City; than to goe alone in an vncouth way which hath not beene beaten and tracted by others of our godly Brethren who haue gone before vs, though it bee neuer ſo pleaſing and delightfull. If trauailing towards a Towne we were aſſured by ſome man of credit that wee ſhould goe vnto it by narrow and filthy Lanes, and that by no other meanes wee could come to the end of our journey, than by trauailing through them, wee would not rejoyce, if in our paſſage wee found only flowry ſweet Medowes and a faire & Champion Country, becauſe wee would conclude that becauſe it was ſo contrary to our friends deſcription, it could not bee the right way which would bring vs to the City: but Chriſt hath aſcertained vs, that it is a narrow, foule and afflicted way that leadeth vs to the new Ieruſalem; and by the Scriptures we are aſſured that Gods deareſt Saints and Seruants haue trauelled by this way towards this heauenly City; ſo that wee haue no cauſe to bee diſmayed if wee finde our paſſage ſuch as Chriſt hath deſcribed it, and the Saints haue formerly tracted before vs, but rather wee ſhould haue juſt cauſe to doubt and feare, if we found it faire and pleaſant, leſt wee were not in the right way that leadeth to bleſſedneſſe. For we are not better, yea, we are many degrees worſer than the holy Patriarchs, Prophets and Apoſtles, and why then ſhould wee expect to haue this priuiledge aboue them, that whereas they by many afflictions entred into the Kingdome of God, wee ſhould hope to come thither by the faire broad way of worldly proſperity? Yea, rather let vs with patience trauaile in that way which they haue beaten before vs; let vs rejoyce & be glad if in our paſſage we may ſee the print of their footſteps, though it be in the mire and clay of trouble and affliction; ſeeing it is the greateſt comfort and aſſurance of attayning vnto happineſſe, when we haue ſuch companions in our journey, or rather ſuch precedents to lead vs the way. Let vs not thinke much to put our ſhoulders vnder that burthen which is borne by all, ſeeing it is not likely that we ſhould ſink vnder it, when as wee haue ſo many aſſiſtants and copartners. Let it be our comfort that in our afflicted eſtate wee be carried with the motion of the Vniverſe, and haue all the whole Church either going before, accompanying, or following after vs. And let vs not take it ill if we ſuſtaine that which is ſuffered by all: neither let vs falſly complaine that our burthen is heauier than other mens; ſeeing if wee compare our afflictions with thoſe which haue beene formerly ſuffered by the Patriarches, Apoſtles, and Saints of God, their weight will appeare to be but a few ounces, to their many pounds; and if now (according to Socrates conceipt) all the faithfull ſhould agree together to caſt all their croſſes and miſeries into one heape, to the end that there might out of the whole bee an equall part ſhared to euery one, the moſt of thoſe who came thither whining and complayning, would rather take againe their owne burthen which they brought, and goe their way, than yeeld to haue a ſhare in that proportionable diuiſion. Finally, let vs not onely looke to thoſe afflictions which other of Gods Saints haue ſuffered before vs, but conſider with what comfort and patience, yea, with what thankſgiuing and rejoycing they haue ſuſtained and endured them; and ſo ſhal wee plainly ſee that our murmuring and repining proceedeth not from the waight of theſe croſſes, ſeeing they haue borne far heauier with comfort & contentment, but from our own impotency & impatiency of bearing the lighteſt burthen. For as all meates and drinkes ſeeme bitter, clammy and diſtaſtfull to him who is ſicke of a burning Feuer; but yet when he ſeeth thoſe who are in health to feed hungerly and with a good ſtomacke on ſuch things as his appetite loatheth and abhorreth, then in his reaſon and diſcretion he imputeth not the vnſauourineſſe to the meate and drinke, but to the nature of his diſeaſe and his owne diſtemper: ſo when we behold other of Gods Saints bearing farre greater afflictions than thoſe which wee ſuffer with comfort and rejoycing, wee will no more complaine of our intolerable burthen, but of our owne impotency and impatiency which more vexe vs than our load.

te tam fora querenda ltua eſt; ſiin aliorum ſpice caſus,
nus iſta feres, Ouid. Meta-
rph. lib. 15.

us eſt leuius
d ab omni-s portatur.

cundo ſola-
m eſt cum niuerſo rapi.
nec. de pro-
d. cap. 5.

Patienter ab vno ſuſtinendum eſt quod multis accidit, Bern. de modo viuendi, cap. 42.
Plutarch. de conſol. ad Apol.

§. Sect. 11.
A conſolation for thoſe who complaine that they are afflicted for their grieuous ſins.

But here the afflicted ſinner may object, that this comparing of the croſſes and calamities of the Patriarches and Apoſtles with thoſe which hee ſuffereth can bring vnto him no patience or comfort, becauſe they were holy men of God, who ſuffered in their innocency, for their tryall, and the manifeſtation of Gods graces in them; and therefore no maruell if they bore their croſſes with joy and thankſgiuing; whereas they being grieuous ſinners are afflicted for their tranſgreſſions, and beſides doe ſhew many corruptions and much wickedneſſe whileſt the hand of God lyeth heauy vpon them. To which I anſwere, that the fire of affliction ſerueth not only to try & proue vs, but alſo to refine and purifie vs; neither are our croſſes and calamities onely exerciſes for thoſe which are ſtrong and in health, but alſo Phyſicke to purge thoſe of the corrupt humours of ſinne, who are ſpiritually ſicke; and therefore wee may well beare them with patience and comfort, if they either find vs purified and ſo onely try vs, or make vs more pure by burning away our droſſe; if either they exerciſe our graces, that they may be increaſed and wee preſerued in our ſpirituall health; or purge away the corruptions of ſinne that our ſoules may be recouered out of their dangerous diſeaſes: If either they finde vs in the way of righteouſneſſe and keepe vs in it, or going aſtray in the by-wayes of ſinne, doe reduce vs into a right courſe, making vs more carefull in the vſe of all good meanes for the mortifying of our corruptions, and the renewing of vs vnto holineſſe and newneſſe of life. Beſides wee are to know that howſoeuer thoſe Saints and Seruants of God were holy and righteous, yet had they the reliques of ſinne and the corruption of nature remayning in them, as well as we, although not in ſo great a meaſure and degree; and that they alſo ſhewed many infirmities and corruptions in their afflictions both by impatiency in bearing them, and in vſing vnlawfull meanes to be freed from them, as it may eaſily appeare to thoſe who are but a little conuerſant in the holy Scriptures. And therefore if being like vnto them in afflictions, we be alſo like, yea, ſuperiour vnto them in ſinne, frailty and humane weakneſſe; this ſhould not diſmay and diſcourage vs, if with them wee ſee our corruptions; and diſlike, bewayle and labour againſt them, vſing the meanes whereby they may be mortified and ſubdued. Yea, rather the more wee exceed them in theſe ſpirituall diſeaſes, and the more wee abound in the droſſe of ſinne, the more ſhould be our patience in vſing the medicines which God hath preſcribed for the curing of our dangerous ſickneſſes; and the greater ſhould be our joy and rejoycing when as God purgeth and purifieth vs in this furnace of afflictions, from ſo much droſſe and ruſt of ſinne and corruption, euen as he hath more cauſe of rejoycing, who is cured of the plague, and healed of grieſly wounds and deepe feſtered ſores, than another who is recouered of a gentle Ague, or hath his finger cured of a little cut.

Chap. XXX.

That wee may receiue much comfort by comparing our light and ſmall afflictions, with thoſe grieuous and intolerable puniſhments which Chriſt ſuffered for vs.

§. Sect. 1. Of the manifold miſeries and afflictions which Chriſt ſuffered both in his life and death.

And thus may we comfort our ſelues by comparing our leſſer and lighter croſſes and afflictions with thoſe greater and heauier which the deareſt Saints and Seruants of God haue formerly ſuffered: but much more may we ſtrengthen our patience and repleniſh our hearts with conſolation, yea with ſpirituall joy and rejoycing, if we compare our miſeries and tribulations, with thoſe greater afflictions and calamities which were ſuſtained by Ieſus Chriſt our Lord and King; in reſpect of whoſe ſufferings wee may truly ſay, that our greateſt croſſes are but ſmall ſparkes of that fiery furnace into which he was caſt; and but a few after-drops of that cruell tempeſt and ſtorme of Gods wrath, which with full violence did beate vpon him. For as hee neuer (that we know of) laughed in the World; ſo neuer did the World ſo much as ſmile vpon him; vnleſſe it were with ſome falſe fauour to make enſuing diſgraces and injuries more grieuous and intolerable: yea, contrariwiſe from the day of his birth to the day of his death, it purſued him with deadly malice, and heaped vpon him miſeries and indignities. For though this Rod and Graffe ſpinging from the ſtocke of Iſhai, were glorious in his reſt, as the Prophet ſpeaketh, when he was come to the top of his perfection, couering and ſhadowing all the Gentiles vnder his patronage and protection, as the Apoſtle expoundeth it; yet (as elſe-where the ſame Prophet ſaith) hee was in his firſt growth, as a branch ſpringing from a root in a dry and barren ground, hauing in him neither forme nor beauty, ſo that thoſe who ſhould behold him, would ſee no forme in him that they ſhould deſire him. Yea, he further addeth, that he ſhould be, as one deſpiſed and reiected of men, a man full of ſorrowes, hauing experience of infirmities, ſo as they ſhould hide their faces from him, and not eſteeme him. So the Apoſtle ſaith, that though he were the Prince of our ſaluation, yet God thought it good to conſecrate him to this office by afflictions; and that though he were the Sonne of God, yet learned hee obedience by the things which he ſuffered. And himſelfe affirmeth, that it behoued him to haue ſuffered all thoſe miſeries of his life, and afterwards a curſed death, before hee could enter into his glory. Now what and how great theſe miſeries and afflictions were, it will eaſily appeare, if we take a view of the whole courſe of his life. For in his birth hee had a common Inne for his Kingly Palace, a Stable for his Chamber, a Manger for his Cradle, and the Horſes and bruit Beaſts for his Chamber-fellowes. In his infancy before he could goe he is conſtrained to flee into Egypt, that his life might bee preſerued from cruell Herod, who thirſted after his bloud. In his youth he taketh paines in that poore occupation of his ſuppoſed Father Ioſeph, as appeareth by the queſtion of the people; Is not this the Carpenter, Maries ſonne? In his whole life hee was ſubject to all humane infirmities and afflictions which are generally incident vnto all men, as heate and

Eſay 11.1.10.

Rom. 15.12.

Eſay 53.2.3.

Heb. 2.10. 5.8.

Luke 24.26.

Marke 6.3.

cold, hunger and thirſt, wearineſſe and pouerty. Yea ſo poore he was, that he liued by Almes, and had not the priuiledge of poore Foxes, and ſilly Birds, For the Foxes haue their holes, and the Birds their neſts, but the Sonne of man had not whereon to lay his head. But eſpecially was our Sauiour pinched and preſſed with miſeries and afflictions, when he began to execute his office, and to worke the worke of our redemption. For he faſted forty dayes, and hungred for want of neceſſary food; he is grieuouſly aſſaulted with Sathans powerfull and ſubtill tentations, and getteth not the victory without a painfull conflict. Hee ſpendeth his life in doing well and hearing euill; he doth workes of mercy, and is maliciouſly cenſured; hee teacheth the truth, and hardly eſcapeth outward violence: his friends enuiouſly back-bite him, his enemies maliciouſly ſlander him; and he who being the power of God, did admirable miracles by his onely Word, is accuſed to worke them by Belzebub the Prince of Deuils. He cannot ſpeake, but they are ready to intrap him, and out of the words of life and ſaluation, they are ready to gather matter of his death and deſtruction. Hee is reprochfully called a Wine-bibber, a Glutton, an Impoſter, a Deceiuer, a Samaritan, a Sinner, and being the onely true and naturall Sonne of God, he is ſaid to be poſſeſſed with a Deuill. Hee is betrayed of his owne Apoſtle, and apprehended with ſwords and ſtaues, as if he were an hainous malefactour. Hee is bound who came to ſet vs at liberty, and to redeeme vs out of the cruell bondage of Sinne and Sathan; and arraigned before a mortall, yea wicked man, being the Lord Chiefe Iuſtice of Heauen and Earth. Hee who is Truth it ſelfe is falſly accuſed, comming to be our Aduocate to pleade our cauſe and excuſe vs to Gods juſtice; and is vnjuſtly condemned being innocent and full of all vertue and goodneſſe. Hee is mocked and ſcorned, rated and reuiled, blind-folded and buffetted; he is ſhamefully ſpit vpon, who with his ſpittle had healed and recouered the eyes of the blind; and a bloudy Murtherer preferred before the holy and righteous. Hee is cruelly whipped, as though he were ſome Rogue or Runnagate, and his bleſſed Head is crowned with ſharpe pricking thornes, vnto whom of right belonged the Crowne of glory. Hee hath a Purple Robe in deriſion put vpon him, and a reed in his hand inſtead of a Scepter, and ſo he is ſcornfully ſaluted as a King in a May-game, who is the ſoueraigne Monarch of Heauen and Earth: The Lord of life is adjudged to death, yea, the ſhamefull and curſed death of the Croſſe, and hee who is moſt innocent and righteous is crucified betweene two theeues as though he were the greateſt Malefactour. The which kinde of death as it is exceeding painfull to all that ſuffer it, becauſe the hands and the feet being aboue all other parts moſt ſenſible of torment, by reaſon that they abound with nerues and ſinnewes the inſtruments of ſenſe and feeling, were pierced and nailed to the Croſſe; and becauſe the tortures though ſharp and bitter, are yet alſo long and lingering; ſo eſpecially (as ſome probably judge) to our Sauiour; (for whereas all the powers and faculties of our bodies and ſoules are by reaſon of ſinne, and the corruption of our nature dulled and deaded, and our ſenſes among the reſt; the body of our Sauiour Chriſt as it was moſt pure and free from ſinne, ſo was it moſt quicke and perfect in all theſe faculties, and conſequently moſt ſenſible of ſmart and paine. And thus alſo, inſtead of drinke to quench his thirſt, they giue him Vineger mingled with Gall; and in ſtead of ſweet comforts in the terrours of death, they wag their heads, flout and deride him, ſaying; Thou that deſtroyeſt the Temple, and buildeſt it in three dayes, ſaue thy ſelfe, if thou be the Sonne of God, come downe from the croſſe. He ſaued others, but hee cannot ſaue himſelfe, if hee bee the King of Iſrael, let him now come downe from the croſſe, and wee will beleeue in him. He truſted in God, let him deliuer him now, if he will haue him, for he ſaid I am the Sonne of God. But among all the torments which he ſuffered, not any one nor all together are to bee compared with thoſe tortures of his ſoule, when as he bore the vnſupportable waight of Gods anger due to our ſinnes, which brought him into a grieuous agony, and preſſed out of him in the Garden, thoſe clots of bloud in ſtead of ſweat, and vpon the Croſſe that rufull cry; my God, my God, why haſt thou forſaken mee. By all which it manifeſtly appeareth, that there is an incomparable difference between Chriſts and our greateſt ſufferings, and that our afflictions being compared vnto his, are but a drop to the Ocean, a flea-bite to the ſting of Scorpions, and a little fillip to the torturing Racke. It is true indeed, that wee and hee drinke of the like cup, and the like ingredients, but like in quality, not in quantitie; for his cup was large and deepe, like that cup of which Ezechiel ſpeaketh; ours ſmall and ſhallow. His cup was bitter through the terrours of Gods wrath which hee apprehended, ours is ſweetned through the mixture of ſpirituall comforts. Hee drunke a deepe draught, and (as it were) the lower moſt dregs of Gods fierce wrath, we (as it were) drinke of the vppermoſt part of the potion, and doe onely but ſip and taſte of it; to him this draught was like a deadly poyſon which cauſed death, to vs it is but a Phyſicall medicine, which by purging away the corrupt humours of ſinne, preſerueth our ſpirituall life, and furthereth vs in attayning vnto life euerlaſting.

ke 8.3.
ke 9.58.

*Math.*27.38, 39,40.

*Math.*27.46.

*Ezech.*23.32.

§. Sect. 2. That Chriſt ſuffered all theſe miſeries and afflictions being iuſt and innocent.

And theſe with many other miſeries and afflictions Chriſt our Head ſuffered in the World, being moſt innocent, juſt and holy; for as the Prophet ſpeaketh, hee made his graue with the wicked, though he had done no wickedneſſe, neither was any deceit in his mouth. So the Apoſtle Peter ſaith, that in him was no ſinne, and in his mouth there was found no guile. And the Apoſtle Iohn affirmeth, that he appeared, that he might take away our ſinnes, and that in him was no ſinne. And therefore as one ſaith, if he departed not out of the World without correction, who came into it without corruption, how much more are wee to expect ſtripes, who by our ſinnes haue ſo often deſerued them? And why ſhould it be thought hard, that man ſhould be afflicted by God for ſo many euils, ſeeing God ſuffered ſo many euils at the hands of men, onely for doing good? Or who in his right wits can vngratefully complaine of his correction, if he eſcaped not the whip, who neuer was tainted with the leaſt corruption? And as another ſaith, if Chriſt were content to bee lanced and ſeared who had in him no putrefaction, and if he who is our medicine, refuſed not the medicinall fire and burning iron, much more ought we to endure patiently the hand of our heauenly Chirurgion lancing, ſearing and ſearching our feſtered ſores of ſin with afflictions and tribulations, that hee may heale and cure vs. And therefore let vs wholy commit our ſelues into the hands of our Phyſicion, for he cannot erre in miſapplying his medicines to the ſound fleſh, in ſtead of rotten and putrified, ſeeing hee who made nature muſt needs know the faults and defects of nature, and what imperfections are come vnto it through our concupiſcence and corruption. He knoweth that he gaue a commandement to man in his perfect health, that he ſhould not run a courſe which would bring him to ſicknes, ſaying vnto him in Paradiſe; Eat of this, & this forbeare: but whole man harkned not to the preſcript of his Phyſicion, that hee might not fall; and therefore now at leaſt let him hearken vnto him, that hee may riſe againe and recouer health.

Eſay 53. 9.
1. Pet. 2. 22.
1. Iohn 3. 5.
Cur ita aſperum creditur vt à Deo homo toleret flagella pro malis; ſi tanta Deus ab hominibus pertulit mala pro bonis, Greg. paſtoral. part. 1. cap. 13.
Auguſt. in Pſal. 40. enarrat.

§. Sect. 3. That Chriſt being righteous in himſelf, ſuffered all theſe afflictions for vs who are ſinners.

But let vs further conſider, that Chriſt in himſelfe juſt and innocent, ſuffered all theſe miſeries for vs, who were dead in our ſinnes, the children of wrath, ſtrangers, yea, enemies vnto God and his grace, that by theſe his ſufferings hee might ſatisfie Gods juſtice in bearing that puniſhment which we had deſerued, juſtifie vs by his righteouſneſſe and obedience, and reconcile vs vnto his Father, and ſo might not only free vs from the euerlaſting torments of Hell fire, which was the merit of our ſinnes; but alſo might by the wood of his Croſſe ſweeten theſe bitter waters, pull out the ſting of our temporary afflictions, and ſo not only make them harmeleſſe, but alſo good and profitable. For by his holy and innocent ſufferings hee hath ſo ſanctified all our afflictions, that our pouerty is made the way to riches, our ſhame to glory, our puniſhments to euerlaſting pleaſures, our curſe to bleſſings, and euen our death it ſelfe to euerlaſting life and happines. So the Prophet Eſay witneſſeth, that hee hath borne our infirmities, and carried our ſorrowes, hee was wounded for our tranſgreſſions, he was broken for our iniquities, the chaſtiſement of our peace was vpō him, & with his ſtripes we are healed. And the Apoſtle Peter affirmeth that his own ſelfe bare our ſins in his body on the tree, that being deliuered from ſin we ſhould liue in righteouſneſſe. If therefore Iacob, ſeeing his ſonne Ioſephs coat imbrued with his bloud, was ſo wholy taken vp with ſorrow, that he had no place left for any other, this greater grief making all the reſt eaſie & inſenſible: how much more when wee ſee our deare Sauiours body imbrued with bloud, torn with nailes & pierced with a ſpeare, yea, crucified & tormented thus with our grieuous ſins, which cauſed & made way for al other tortures, ſhould we be ſo wholy poſſeſſed with this griefe & mourning, that we ſhould be ſcarce ſenſible of any worldly ſorrow, but beare all earthly troubles & afflictions with patience & comfort? Eſpecially conſidering further that hee willingly ſuffered for our ſakes all thoſe afflictions, torments, and death it ſelfe, with all meekneſſe and patience; for though (as the Prophet ſpeaketh) hee were oppreſſed, and afflicted, yet he did not open his mouth, but was brought as a ſheepe to the ſlaughter, and as a ſheepe before her ſhearer is dumbe, ſo opened he not his mouth. And as the Apoſtle ſaith, when he was reuiled, he reuiled not againe, when he ſuffered he threatned not, but committed it to him that iudgeth righteouſly. Yea, ſo meeke was our Sauiour in all his ſufferings, that when hee was ſo horribly abuſed, mocked, buffeted, ſpit on, ſcorned, whipped, and crucified, he did not ſhew the leaſt ſigne of impatiency, he refuſeth not the murthering kiſſe of a knowne Traytour, hee healeth the eare of him who came to apprehend him; hee is falſly accuſed and maketh no apology, yea, hee excuſeth and prayeth vnto his Father for his bloudy perſecutors; father (ſaith hee) forgiue them they know not what they doe. All which he did for our ſakes, not onely to perfect the worke of our Redemption, but alſo to leaue vs an example, that wee might follow his ſteps. For if Chriſt ſuffered patiently ſuch great miſeries and indignities for our ſakes himſelfe being innocent, what troubles and afflictions, what croſſes and miſeries ſhould wee be content with all meekneſſe to beare for his ſake and at his appointment, being guilty ſinners who haue deſerued eternal condemnation? Eſpecially conſidering that by his bleſſed ſufferings hee hath ſo ſeaſoned and ſanctified all our worldly tribulations, that

Eſay 53. 4, 5.
1. Pet. 2. 24.
Eſay 53. 7.
1. Pet. 2. 23.
Luke 23. 34.
1. Pet. 2. 24.

that they are become harmeleſſe and without ſting, yea, wholſome, happy, and the meanes of bleſſedneſſe. If hee for the loue that he bare vnto vs thought not his precious life to good to giue it vnto his Father as the price of our Redemption, how ready ſhould wee bee in lue of thankfulneſſe to forſake wealth and health, houſe and lands, kindred and friends, yea, life it ſelfe at his appointment? To which purpoſe one hath a ſingular meditation; If (ſaith he) I wholy owe my ſelfe vnto God for my creation, what ſhall I now giue him for my reſtauration, eſpecially being reſtored after this manner? Neither was I ſo eaſily reſtored as I was created. For he did but ſay the word & I was made, but he that made me by ſpeaking the word only, for my reſtoring both ſpake many things, and wrought wonders, & ſuffred hardnes, & not only hardnes, but things vnworthy of him. What therfore ſhal I return vnto the Lord for all the benefits which he hath beſtowed vpon me? In his firſt worke hee gaue me vnto my ſelfe; in his ſecond, hee hath giuen himſelfe vnto mee, and by giuing himſelfe hath reſtored mee vnto my ſelfe. Being therefore giuen and reſtored, I owe my ſelfe for my ſelfe, and ſo owe my ſelfe vnto God by a double right. But what ſhall I render vnto God for giuing himſelfe vnto me? For though I could giue my ſelfe a thouſand times for recompence, what am I in compariſon of him?

ernard. de ligend. Deo.

§. Sect. 4.
hat we ſhall
e adiudged worthy to igne with Chriſt, if wee e not content o ſuffer with im.

And if wee be not thus willing and ready to ſuffer afflictions for Chriſts ſake, and to beare the Croſſe at his appointment, wee are not worthy of him, nor to bee eſteemed among his Seruants and Diſciples: for if hee, being the glorious ſonne of the eternall God, was content for our ſakes to abaſe himſelfe, to refuſe all worldly glory and riches, and to ſuffer moſt grieuous miſeries, pouerty and contempt, ignominy and diſgrace, yea, the cruell, curſed, and ſhamefull death of the Croſſe, and the wrath of his Father, much more fearefull and intolerable than all the reſt; then are we vnworthy to be acknowledged for his, if being poore wormes and ſinfull wretches, wee ſhould be ſo vngratefull for thoſe ineſtimable paines ſuſtained for vs, as not to be willing to ſuffer what it ſhall pleaſe our Sauiour Chriſt to impoſe vpon vs, ſeeing our load is light, in compariſon of his vnſupportable burthen; or to grudge to drink of that cup which hee hath prepared for vs, himſelfe hauing drunke it to the bottome, eſpecially conſidering it was to him a deadly potion; but vnto vs a Phyſicall Medicine, and an wholeſome reſtoratiue, tending to the preſeruing or recouering of our ſpirituall health. So our Sauiour plainly ſaith, He that loueth father or mother more than mee, is not worthy of mee; and hee that loueth ſonne or daughter more than me, is not worthy of me; And he that taketh not his croſſe, and followeth after me, is not worthy of me. And againe, If any man will follow mee, let him forſake himſelfe and take vp his croſſe and follow me: For whoſoeuer will ſaue his life, ſhall looſe it, and whoſoeuer ſhall loſe his life for my ſake, ſhall find it: and what will it profit a man, if he ſhall winne the whole world, and looſe his owne ſoule? Or what ſhall a man giue for recompence of his ſoule? And elſewhere, whoſoeuer hee be of you that forſaketh not all hee hath (that is, hath not a diſpoſition of forſaking all when I require it) he cannot be my Diſciple. Hee that will ſerue a Maſter, muſt make profeſſion thereof by wearing his liuery, but the Croſſe is the liuery and cognizance of Chriſt, which that his followers might not ſcorne nor grudge to put it on, himſelfe firſt bore and wore it. Haman thought it the greateſt honour that could be done vnto a ſubject, that hee ſhould bee worthy to weare the Kings apparell. The Souldier thinkes himſelfe much honoured, when his Generall admitts him to weare his colours, and to goe into the field in his owne armes; and Ionathan when hee would ſhew his greateſt loue towards Dauid, and how much he eſteemed of him, he puts vpon him his owne Roabe and Garments, his Sword, Bow and Girdle: but theſe afflictions are the bloudy colours of our great Commander, this red apparell, and theſe Garments ſprinkled with bloud, were ſuch as himſelfe wore whileſt he dwelled on earth, as the Prophet witneſſeth; In this bloudy armes he fought and vanquiſhed Sathan and ſinne, with all the enemies of our ſaluation: And therefore let vs thinke it no diſgrace, yea, let vs eſteeme it our higheſt honour, and a great teſtimony of our Lord and Sauiours greateſt loue, when he thinketh vs worthy to weare his colours, to be clothed in his owne apparell, and in his owne armes to fight againſt the enemies of our ſaluation.

Math.10.38,39

Math.16.24,25

Luke 14.13.

Heſt.6.8.

1.Sam.18 4.

Eſay 63.1,3.
Heb.2.14.

§. Sect. 5.
That God hath preordained thoſe to be like Chriſt in his ſufferings, who ſhal be like vnto him in glory.

Finally, let vs conſider that whomſoeuer God hath preordained to bee like vnto his Sonne in glory, hee hath alſo preordained, that he ſhould firſt beare his Image in afflictions, as the Apoſtle tels vs; that before we can be exalted to ſit with Chriſt in his Kingdome, wee muſt firſt drinke with him in his bitter cup, as himſelfe ſpeaketh to his beloued Apoſtles; that before wee are called of God to enter into his joyes, wee are firſt called to ſuffer tribulation, for Chriſt alſo ſuffered for vs leauing vs an example that wee ſhould follow his ſteps, as Peter affirmeth; that if we will be heires with Chriſt, we muſt firſt ſuffer with him, that we may alſo be glorified with him, as Paul joyneth them. And finally, that though Chriſt of his infinite grace, being rich for our ſakes became poore, that through his pouerty wee might bee made rich, yet theſe ſpirituall and heauenly treaſures are beſtowed vpon none, but vpon thoſe, who being humbled with ſorrowes and afflictions

Rom.8.29.
Math 20.22,23
1.Pet.2.21.

Rom.8.17.

2.Cor.8.9.

are poore in ſpirit, as himſelfe teacheth vs. And therefore the holy Apoſtle preparing vs for this glory and aduancement, doth exhort vs to let the ſame minde be in vs which was in Ieſus Chriſt, who being in the forme of God, made himſelfe of no reputation, but tooke vpon him the forme of a Seruant, and humbled himſelfe and became obedient vnto the death, euen the death of the Croſſe. So that if wee will feaſt with Chriſt in Heauen wee muſt faſt with him on earth; if wee will eat with him at his Table of the Bread of life, and (as hee ſpeaketh) drinke wine with him in his Kingdome, wee muſt in this worldly priſon and pilgrimage, eate with him of the bread of affliction, and drinke of the water of ſorrow; and here wee muſt labour and trauell whileſt theſe working-dayes of life laſt, if there we would keep an euerlaſting Sabbath; and worke in the Vineyard, if we will at the euening, receiue that penny and wages of eternall happineſſe. To this purpoſe one ſaith, Thou, O Lord Ieſu, art vnto me both an example and reward of ſuffering, and both doe ſtrongly prouoke, and vehemently inflame mee; thou teacheſt my hands to fight by the example of thy fortitude, and after victory thou crowneſt my head with the preſence of thy Majeſty; and therefore whether I ſee thee fighting, or expect thee to crowne mee, or rather as the crowne of my glory, in both thou doſt wonderfully allure me, and both is a chaine vnreſiſtable to draw mee. Pull mee then after thee, and I will gladly follow thee, but more gladly enjoy thee; for if thou beeſt ſo good, O Lord, to thoſe that ſeek and runne after thee, what wilt thou be to thoſe who find and poſſeſſe thee? And this is very conſonant, and agreeable with reaſon, that none ſhould raigne with Chriſt, but thoſe who haue firſt ſuffered with him: For the Diſciple is not aboue his Maſter, nor the Seruant aboue his Lord: it is enough for the Diſciple to be as his Maſter is, and the Seruant as his Lord. If they haue called the Maſter of the houſe Belzebub, how much more them of the houſhold? If they haue done theſe things to a greene tree, what ſhall be done to a dry? And our Sauiour telleth all his Diſciples, that as the men of the World had perſecuted him, ſo they would alſo perſecute them. The adopted ſonnes of God are not to bee preferred before the naturall ſonne, who is the chiefe of the Family: it is ſufficient, and a wonderfull fauour, if they be admitted to any equality. And therefore if the Prince of our ſaluation, was conſecrated by afflictions, and by his grieuous and manifold ſufferings entred into his glory, why ſhould we expect a priuiledge aboue him? It is not ſutable and fit that an afflicted head ſhould haue a pampered body and members euen languiſhing in eaſe and delicacy. It becommeth not the ſeruant to liue in idleneſſe and pleaſure, when as the Maſter wearieth himſelfe with paines and labour; nor that the Souldier ſhould be in Gariſon, faring daintily and lying ſoft, when as the Captaine is in the field, induring all hardneſſe, and expoſing himſelfe to innumerable dangers. And therefore ſeeing our Head Chriſt was crowned with pricking Thornes, let not vs his members expect to be crowned with worldly glory; Seeing our Maſter hath taken ſuch paines in our worke, and for our ſake; and our great Commander hath ſo couragiouſly encountred our enemies, fighting vnto bloud, and loſing his precious life, that wee might obtaine the victory: let vs his Seruants and Souldiers inure our ſelues with patience to ſuſtaine any labour, and attempt any ſeruice, though neuer ſo dangerous, which hee appointeth, that ouercomming, wee may alſo triumph with him in glory and happineſſe.

Phil.2.5.6.7.

Bernard. ſuper Cantica, Ser.47.

Math.24.25.

Luke 23.31.

Iohn 15.20.

Luke 24.26.

§. Sect. 6. That many would willingly raigne with Chriſt, but few are content to ſuffer with him.

But this (alas) is aboue the ſtrength and courage which we haue by nature, whereof it commeth to paſſe that howſoeuer many would gladly be conformable with Chriſt in glory, yet few would be like vnto him in afflictions; many would bee partakers of his crowne, but few are content to beare his Croſſe; many would follow him to eate of his bread, but few are willing to drinke of his cup; many would triumph in his glory, but few are couragious and conſtant in fighting his Battailes: Finally, many would gladly goe vnto Heauen; but they are vtterly vnwilling to follow Chriſt in the ſame way; they would aſcend with Chriſt gloriouſly from Mount Oliuet in the preſence of their friends, but they will not firſt accompany him to Mount Caluary ignominiouſly to ſuffer with him in the middeſt of their enemies. But as one ſaith, if thou wilt be a Diſciple, it is thy duty to follow thy maſter; now if hee went by affliction vnto his kingdome, and thou wilt goe thither by eaſe and proſperity, thou refuſeſt his way and chooſeſt another, and therefore how wilt thou not following follow him? how wilt thou bee called his Diſciple, ſeeing thou art not content to walke in his ſteps? If (as the Apoſtle ſpeaketh) thou wilt know him and the vertue of his reſurrection, thou muſt firſt haue fellowſhip with him in his afflictions, and bee made conformable vnto his death, that by any meanes thou mayeſt attaine vnto the reſurrection of the dead. Which that we may doe with patience and comfort, let vs often meditate on thoſe afflictions and miſeries which our Lord and Sauiour Ieſus Chriſt (being the eternall ſon of God, & ſo dearely beloued, that in him alone he is well pleaſed) hath ſuffered for vs. As for example, when we are in pouerty and pinched with worldly wants, let vs remember that the Lord of Heauen and Earth, was for our ſakes ſo de-Chryſoſt. in Heb. 12. Homil. 28. in morali.

Phil. 3.10.11.

deſtitute of earthly comforts, that he had not an houſe to hide his head in. When we are injuriouſly traduced and vnjuſtly ſlandered, let vs call to minde that our Sauiour, who was the Lamb without ſpot, moſt innocent and full of all goodneſſe, was called a wine bibber, a friend to publicans and ſinners, an impoſter, and one who did all his miracles by the helpe of Beelzebub the prince of diuels. When we are ill requited by thoſe of whō we haue wel deſerued, forſaken by our friends in the time of our need, & betraied by thoſe who ſtand obliged vnto vs by many benefits; let vs think with our ſelues, that our deare Lord was thus vſed before vs; for thoſe ſought his deſtruction whom hee came to ſaue; his diſciples & followers forſake him and flie away in his greateſt extremity; and one whom he had dignified with the honour of an Apoſtle, and among all the men of the world had choſen for one of the twelue, and honoured with his chiefe ſeruice and choiſe preferments, doth in lue of all his benefits, plot his ruine, and betrayeth him into the cruell hands of his blood-thirſty enemies. Finally are wee diſgratefully apprehended, haled to the judgement ſeat, falſly accuſed, vnjuſtly condemned, buffeted, whipped, mocked, ſcorned, and adjudged to die a ſhamefull and painfull death? let vs comfort our ſelues with this conſideration, that the onely Sonne of God, who aboue all others was moſt deare to his heauenly Father, did ſuffer theſe and many other miſeries, and hath ſeaſoned and ſweetned theſe bitter waters, by bathing in them his moſt bleſſed Body. And to conclude, are we not onely thus afflicted in our bodies and ſtates, but alſo in our ſoules much vexed and troubled, with the tentations of Sathan and the world, with the burthen of ſinne, and the apprehenſion of Gods wrath and terrors of death and hell? then let vs ſtrengthen and refreſh our fainting hearts with this meditation, that Chriſt himſelfe was thus tempted, that he bore at once the burthen, not of one mans ſinne alone, but of all the faithful and elect, and did not onely (like vs) taſte and ſip of the Wine of Gods wrath, but did drink the very dregs thereof euen to the bottome. As therefore they were accuſtomed to prouoke Elephants vnto the fight, by ſhewing them the blood of Grapes or Mulberies: ſo let vs encourage our ſelues to fight couragiouſly againſt worldly afflictions, that wee may with patience conquer and ouercome them, by looking on the afflictions, miſeries and wounds of our Sauiour, and vpon thoſe ſtreames of blood which ſo abundantly flowed from his head and ſhoulders, hands and feet, and laſtly from that pretious fountaine of his pierced heart. For as one ſaith, Wee will with eaſe beare our light and little afflictions, if wee would but conſider what greater things hee ſuffered for vs vpon his croſſe who inuiteth vs vnto Heauen. From thence as out of a pulpit he powerfully preacheth a ſermon of patience, and effectually perſwadeth vs to ſuffer a little for him, who for vs hath ſuffered ſo much. For as the Phyſition cannot vſe a ſtronger reaſon to moue his patient to take a loathed and ſuſpected potion, than when before him (to ſhew that there is no hurt or danger in it) he is content not only to taſt his medicine, but to drinke a much ſtronger of the ſame kinde in a double quantity; ſo there cannot bee a more effectuall motiue to perſwade vs to drinke of Chriſts bitter cup, than when wee conſider, that he himſelfe hath not only begun to vs, but hath drunke a farre greater meaſure, and the very dregs thereof euen to the bottome. And thus the Apoſtle perſwading vs with patience to run in the afflicted race that is ſet before vs, doth will vs to looke vnto Ieſus the author and finiſher of our faith, who for the ioy that was ſet before him, endured the croſſe, and deſpiſed the ſhame, and is ſet at the right hand of the throne of God; & to conſider him that endured ſuch ſpeaking againſt of ſinners, leaſt wee ſhould be wearied and faint in our minds. And thus our Sauiour armed his diſciples againſt the hatred of the world, by putting them in minde that it hated him firſt. And an holy father exhorteth vs, with patience to ſuffer afflictions, encouraging our ſelues by Chriſts example; Drinke (ſaith hee) O thou ſicke man, this bitter potion, that being diſeaſed thou mayſt recouer health. Feare not to take it, ſeeing to free thee from this feare, thy Phyſition hath begunne vnto thee and drunke a full draught of his bitter paſſion. Hee drunke vnto thee who hauing no ſinne, had nothing in him that needed curing; refuſe not then to pledge him who art ſicke in ſinne, and being full of corrupt humours, needeſt purging; but bee content to drinke till the bitterneſſe of this world paſſing away, that happy time ſhall come, wherein there ſhall bee neither feuer nor conſumption. Let vs therefore in all out afflictions ſet before vs the ſufferings of our innocent Sauiour which he endured with all meekeneſſe for our ſakes, ſaying with Thomas when we heare of his death, Let vs alſo goe that we may die with him. Let vs looke vpon our great Commander faſting, watching, and fighting vnto blood, in the middeſt of the royall army of his Saints; and ſay with Vriah, My Lord Ieſus, and the ſeruants of my Lord abide in the open fields; and ſhall I goe to my houſe, eate, drinke, and take my pleaſure? And when we are ſtung with theſe fiery ſerpents of affliction let vs caſt vp our eyes vnto the true brazen ſerpent Ieſus Chriſt, hanging vpon his croſſe, and this will heale vs and mitigate the heat of our impati-

1.Mach.6.34.

Parua tolerabimus, ſi recordemur quid biberet ad patibulum, qui nos inuitat ad cælum. Caſſian. ſuper pſalmos.

Heb.12.1.2.3.

Ioh.15.18.

Bibe, æger calicem amarum vt ſanus ſis, cui non ſunt ſana viſcera.] Noli trepidare quia ne trepidares prior bibit medicus &c. Auguſt. in Pſalm.48.

Iohn 11.16.

2 Sam.11.11.

Col.1.24.
1.Pet.4.13.
Rom.8.17.
2.Tim.2.12.

impatiency: Yea this conſideration will enable vs, not only to beare all our croſſes, with patience and comfort, but alſo (with Paul) to reioyce in our ſuffrings in that wee doe fulfill the reſt of the afflictions of Chriſt in our fleſh for his bodies ſake which is the Church. The which alſo the Apoſtle Peter requireth of vs; Reioyce (ſaith hee) in as much as ye are partakers of Chriſts ſufferings, that when his glory ſhall appeare yee may bee glad and reioyce. For wee ſhall bee heires with him in his glory, if wee be copartners with him in his afflictions, and if wee ſuffer with him wee ſhall alſo raigne with him, as the Apoſtle teacheth vs.

CHAP. XXXI.

That we may much comfort our ſelues by comparing our afflictions with the puniſhments of the wicked, from which Chriſt hath freed vs.

§. Sect. 1. Of the manifold and great miſeries which worldlings ſuffer, for the attaining vnto earthly vanities.

ANd thus may wee comfort our ſelues in our croſſes and miſeries, by comparing them with thoſe much more grieuous afflictions, which the holy Saints of God, yea, our Sauiour Chriſt himſelfe, the onely begotten and dearely beloued of his Father, haue ſuffered before vs: Now in the ſecond place let vs compare our croſſes and calamities which wee find in the ſtraight way that leadeth vnto life eternall, with thoſe troubles and miſeries which worldly wicked men meete with, whileſt they labour to ſatisfie their earthly deſires, in the fruition of meere trifles and worldly vanities; and that both in reſpect of this life and the life to come. In this life they purchaſe the things which they ſet their hearts vpon at ſuch deare prizes, that none in their right wits would enuy their bargaine, or deſire their penny-worth, if they did but know how deare they coſt them. For to ſay nothing of their ſpirituall puniſhments, which like furies continually haunt them, as the wrath of God inflamed and inraged againſt them, for their groſſe crimes and grieuous wickedneſſe committed by them, whileſt they ſeeke by vngodly meanes to compaſſe their deſires, which their guiltineſſe maketh them often to apprehend, and muſt needs bee moſt terrible when it is apprehended; the affrighting terrours of an euill conſcience, which night and day, alone and in company, doe continually purſue them (as it were) with an Hue-an-cry. The dreadfull expectation of Gods terrible judgments, which daily hang ouer their heads in this life, and the day of death, which they know not how ſoone it will approach, and take them from all their worldly delights and comforts, which they loue more dearely than their owne ſoules, and hale them, will they, nill they, before Gods fearefull tribunall ſeate, there to receiue the ſentence of condemnation, whereby they ſhall bee adjudged to thoſe euerlaſting torments of Hell fire. To let paſſe, I ſay, theſe ſpirituall plagues and puniſhments of wicked worldlings (which notwithſtanding are incomparably greater than all the afflictions and miſeries which are poſſibly incident vnto any faithfull man or ſound Chriſtian) how great are the corporall and outward miſeries which they willingly vndertake and ſuffer, being hyred with bare hopes of attaining vnto worldly vanities? How doe they ſpend themſelues, weaken their ſtrength, hazard their health, wearie, and euen weare out their bodies with toyle and labour, for the obtaining of earthly trifles? Yea, how doe they tyre themſelues in the workes wickedneſſe, thinking no danger too dangerous, no paines too painful which they vndergoe and take, for the fruition of their ſinfull pleaſures; by their worldly and temporary torments, making way and preparing themſelues, for thoſe which are endleſſe and euerlaſting? So the Prophet ſpeaking of the wicked of his times, ſaith, That they taught their tongues to ſpeake lies, and tooke great paines to doe wickedly. And in the booke of Wiſdome they are brought in complaining, that they had wearied themſelues in the way of wickedneſſe and deſtruction, going through deſerts where there lay no way; & ſo paſſing through worldly torments into the torments of Hel. The which is noted by the Prophet, as a fearefull judgment of God vpon them. Behold (ſaith he) is it not of the Lord of hoaſts, that the people ſhall labour in the very fire, and wearie themſelues for very vanity? For whereas the faithfull by their many tribulations doe enter into the Kingdome of Heauen; theſe profeſſed Martyrs of the World, doe by as great troubles and miſeries enter into the Kingdome of darkneſſe, and by their temporarie paines, make purchaſe of euerlaſting puniſhments.

Ier.9.5.
Wiſ.5.7.
Habac.2.13.

§. Sect. 2. Examples of heathen men patiently induring great afflictions for the compaſſing of the earthly deſires.

But for the better clearing of this point, let vs conſider of the examples both of former ages, and of our owne preſent times; and wee ſhall plainely ſee that the miſeries which worldlings haue and doe ſuſtaine, are no leſſe grieuous, and incomparably more vncomfortable than thoſe which the faithfull endure in their way to Gods Kingdome, they being depriued of the preſent conſolations of Gods holy Spirit, and the hope of future happineſſe, the want whereof maketh the lighteſt burthen of affliction heauie and intolerable, euen as their preſence doth make the heauieſt and moſt bitter, light and ſweet. For what afflictions doe the Saints ſuffer for God and his Kingdome; which euen meere heathen men haue not voluntarily & chearefully endured for the World and the fruites of worldly vanities? Are they afflicted with pouerty? Fabricius willingly and chearefully beares it, and after ſo great command and many victories, hee is content to follow husbandrie to get his liuing, to ſup in his chimney corner with rootes and hearbes, and for want of meanes is conſtrained to accept of portions for his daughters out of the common purſe. And Valerius Publicola after his famous conſulſhip dyeth ſo poore, that hee was buried at the publicke charge. Are they afflicted with the death of their deareſt friends, of their Children, yea, of their owne, onely, and moſt hopefull ſonnes? Many of the Heathen haue borne this croſſe with great patience and magnanimous courage, as Anaxagoras, Pericles, Xenophon, Demoſthenes, Dio, Angtionus, and many other, as Plutarch witneſſeth. Are they exiled from their natiue home? Rutilius and Ariſtides, though vniuſtly baniſhed out of their dearely loued countries, doe with conſtant meekeneſſe beare the waight of this heauie burthen. Are they whipped and cruelly ſcourged by mercileſſe enemies? The Lacedemonian Children made this but a game and maſtery, wherein they contended one with another, who ſhould endure with patience moſt and ſharpeſt ſtripes, till their bodies were ſo cruelly torne, that they hardly eſcaped with their liues. Are they ſubject to the fierie triall? Mucius Scæuola voluntarily and vnmoueably endures this torment, vntill his greateſt enemie was more wearie in ſeeing, than he in ſuffering it. Are they adjudged to death and brought out to execution? Socrates hauing drunke the deadly Hemlocke, dyeth diſcourſing in his diuine Phyloſophie. M. Curtius leapeth voluntarily into the noyſome and deuouring gulfe; and the Decij deuote themſelues to aſſured death for the preſeruation of their armies. Are they vexed with torments, and ſee death approaching, with his moſt vgly viſage and vizard, and apparelled in his moſt terrible habite? Attilius Regulus willingly offers himſelfe to ſuffer theſe exquiſite tortures, and when hee might haue fled from them with ſome ſmall impeachment and diſparagement to his paganiſh faith, he ſtandeth ſtill, till they catch him, or rather meets them in the midde way. Finally, Demetrius (as Seneca reporteth) profeſſeth himſelfe ready and willing to endure the encounters of any afflictions. Herein alone (ſaith he) O ye immortall Gods, yee giue vnto mee juſt cauſe of complaining, in that before yee brought vpon mee theſe croſſes and calamities, yee did not acquaint me with your will, for had I knowne it, I would willingly haue offered my ſelfe to ſuffer theſe things, which I now endure being called by you to vndergoe them. Will you take away my Children from me? I haue bred and brought them vp for you. Wil yee haue any part of my body? Take it vnto you; neither is it much that I offer, ſeeing ſhortly I ſhall leaue the whole. Will yee haue my ſoule? Why ſhould you not? neither will I bee againſt it, that you ſhould at pleaſure reſume that which you haue firſt giuen. You ſhall, haue whatſoeuer you require from one that is willing to part with it. What then doe I complaine of? I had rather voluntarily offer vnto you what you would haue, than deliuer it vpon demand. What need you to haue taken it by force, ſeeing you might haue receiued it on freewill. But now you ſhall plucke nothing from mee, ſeeing nothing is wreſted, but that which is retained. I am in nothing conſtrained, I ſuffer nothing againſt my will. Neither doe I ſeruilely ſerue God, but voluntarily aſſent vnto him. By all which and many other examples, it may appeare that the Paganes and Infidels haue with great patience, conſtancie and courage, ſuffered as great and heauie croſſes and calamities, as are incident vnto vs; hauing no other end, for the moſt part, but worldly glory, and to continue and eternize their name and fame vnto all eternitie; and therefore how much more ſhould wee endure and ſuffer farre greater miſeries with all joy and chearefulneſſe, ſeeing they tend not onely to the glory of our gracious God, but alſo to the furthering and aſſuring of our euerlaſting happineſſe?

tarch. de
ſol. ad Apol-
l.1.

ec. lib. de uiden. cap. 5.

§. Sect. 7.
Of the paines, dangers and miſeries, which worldlings ſuffer, for the attaining vnto earthly trifles.

But not onely haue men in times paſt beene ſubject to great and innumerable afflictions, for the compaſſing of their worldly deſires, but euen in theſe dayes, they are, in ayming at the ſame ends, liable to the like miſeries. For what difficulties and dangers, what exceſſiue paines and toyleſome labors, doe ambitious men vndertake that they may aſpire vnto worldly honours? How are their heads broken with cares, and their hearts with greefes, in plotting the meanes of their preferments, and in being croſſed in their deſignes? how doe they beate their braines in ſtudying Machiauells pollicies, and in contriuing meanes for the ouerthrowing of their enemies, for the ſupplanting of their competitours, that themſelues may riſe by their fall, yea for the cunning betraying of thoſe vnto whom they profeſſe loue and frindſhip ſtanding in their way, ſo as they may haue their bane, and yet neuer know who hurt them? With what feares are they racked leſt they ſhould be catched in their owne nets? And what ſorrowes doe they ſuſtaine, when as they are ouertaken and ſupplanted by them at whoſe heeles they tripped? Neither doe men take leſſe paines, or vndergoe fewer dangers, or endure ſmaller or lighter miſeries for the obtaining of the Mammon of iniquity. The husband-man is vexed with the cold of Winter, and the heate of Summer. Hee toyleth in the myre and dirt, and his body is ſubject to the iniuries of ſtormie tempeſts, boyſterous winds, hayle, ſnow, and all weathers; he waſteth his body, and conſumeth his ſtrength in digging, ditching, hedging, plowing, threſhing, ſowing, reaping, carting, hauing no other comfort to ſtrengthen him, but the hoped harueſt which ſeldome anſwereth vnto his ouer-greedy expectation. The Merchant trauelleth by Sea and land, and is expoſed to innumerable dangers, to ſtormes and leakes, to rocks and wracks, to the robberies of mercileſſe Pyrats, and the injuries of lawleſſe barbarians, by many whereof he is oftentimes ouertaken, and ſeldome eſcapeth them all. And all theſe paines and dangers he taketh and runneth into, onely in hope of obtaining ſome riches, of which hee ſometimes faileth, running into great loſſes, whileſt hee purſued ſmall gaines; or though hee doe attaine vnto that which hee ſeeketh, yet is he as much troubled in the poſſeſſion, as in the purſuite; and after all his paines in getting, and care in keeping, he is moſt of all tormented, when as looſing that which is endeared vnto him by induring ſo much for it, his heart lieth open to let in greefe and ſorrow. So that (as one ſaith) by all theſe exceſſiue cares, labours & manifold dangers; they ſeeke to obtaine, obtaine to looſe, and looſe to greeue. The Souldier to maintaine himſelfe in his eſtate and calling, endures innumerable and greeuous miſeries; hee watcheth and wardeth, he lyeth hardly and fareth barely, hee runneth deſperatly into any dangers, and endureth the incounters of mighty enemies, hee is ſubject daily to wounds and maimes, and is continually expoſed to perill of death: all which he vndertaketh and ſuſtaineth with courage and comfort, for the gayning of ſome ſmall pay, which he no ſooner receiueth but he preſently ſpendeth it; or for the purchaſe of ſome ſmokie honour, the commendation of his Generall, or the applauſe of his fellow Souldiers. So what paines and torments doth the ſicke man endure, that he may recouer his impaired health? What cutting and lancing, what ſerching and ſearing, what coraſiues and cauterizing, what diſtaſte and loathſomneſſe doth hee endure, whileſt he chaweth the pills which hee cannot ſwallow, and whether hee will or no, caſteth vp againe the loathed potion? and yet oftentimes hee is deceiued of his hope, his medicine being his poyſon, which killeth, in ſtead of curing him. Or though hee attaineth vnto that health which he expecteth, it is onely a repriuall from death and no deliuerance; no full freedome from greefes and paines, but a further enabling of him by recouery of ſtrength, to endure them longer. Finally, wee ſee what paines are ſuſtained by ignorant idolaters, and what afflictions and miſeries are with patience endured by the blind and ſuperſtitious in their will-worſhip and idolatrous ſeruice. The Baalits cut and lance themſelues before their Idoll, the Papiſts goe bare-foote on pilgrimages to their Images of Saints, and cruelly whip themſelues before their crucifix; many of the Iewes would endure any torments, rather than they would eate ſwines fleſh; and the Turkes themſelues would rather dye, than blaſpheme their falſe Prophet Mahomet, or lying Alcharon. In a word, worldlings of any ſort are content with patience to ſuffer any miſerie for the fruition of their earthly deſires, and the pleaſing of their carnall appetite; and though they are not aſſured to attaine vnto them, yet the very bare hope of enjoying doth lighten all their labours, and ſweeten vnto them their moſt diſtaſtfull ſorrowes. And therefore, if worldly men are content to ſuffer ſo many afflictions, that they may obtaine thoſe things which further their deſtruction, how much more chearefully and patiently ſhould wee ſuffer farre greater croſſes, that wee may attaine vnto ſaluation. If they ſuffer ſo much for Mammon and things of no worth, let vs bee aſhamed, to bee vnwilling to ſuffer ſo much and more for Chriſt, and the fruition of heauenly happineſſe. If they endure ſo many miſeries for temporarie trifles, which they are not ſure to obtaine after all their paines and trauailes, nor to retaine them for one houre, though they ſhould haue them in poſſeſſion; how much rather ſhould wee with ioy and thankfulneſſe endure all croſſes and calamities, for the aſſured fruition and euerlaſting poſſeſſion of God himſelfe, and thoſe vnſpeakeable ioyes of his heauenly Kingdome? It is the lot of the moſt to ſuffer many miſeries in this life; and (as one ſaith) in this world, not to feare, greeue, labour and bee in danger, it is meerely impoſſible; but ſeeing farre other is the hope of the godly, than of the wicked, farre other the fruit of their labour, and much richer the reward of their dangers; it is principally to be reſpected for what cauſe, with what expectation, and to what end euery one indureth theſe croſſes and miſeries. And therefore (as another perſwadeth) if thou art a diſciple of Chriſt grudge not, nor take it greeuouſly to enter into the ſtraight and afflicted way, conſidering that if thou bee not by this meanes afflicted thou wilt aſſuredly ſuffer for ſome other cauſe, though fruitleſſe and vnprofitable. For the enuious and couetous man, hee that is inflamed with the loue of harlots, and ambitious of vaine-glory, yea euery one whoſoeuer runneth wicked courſes, Quæris vt acquiras, acquiris vt perdas, perdis vt doleas. Bernard. ſerm. de quinque negotiationib.

Si tanta ſuffert anima mundan vt poſſideat vnde pereat, quant debet ſufferre n pereat. Auguſt. lib. de patient. cap.

Alia eſt autem ſpes piorum, alia laboris fructus, alia periculorum merces. &c. Auguſt. epiſt. ad Largum. epiſt. 82.

Chryſoſt. in 2. Cor. 12. Hom. 26.

courſes, doth ſuſtaine many moleſtations and afflictions &c. And therefore ſeeing howſoeuer wee carry our ſelues, it is altogether neceſſary that wee ſhould ſuffer tribulations; why ſhould we not make choiſe to ſuffer in the way of righteouſneſſe, which with our afflictions will bring vnto vs innumerable crownes of happineſſe?

Sect. 4.
we may ceiue much fort, if we pare our afflictions
the heltorments of damned.

And thus may we comfort our ſelues, by comparing our croſſes and afflictions, with thoſe which worldly men ſuffer for the obtaining of momentany vanities: but much more may we be comforted, if wee compare them with thoſe euerlaſting and helliſh torments, which after theſe temporary puniſhments they ſhall endleſly ſuffer with the Deuill and his Angels. For they ſhall eternally bee purſued with the fierce wrath of God, which lying vpon our Sauiour, but for a while for our ſinnes, and that, at the ſame time, with ſome comfortable aſſurance of Gods loue, did force him to cry out, My God my God, why haſt thou forſaken mee; they ſhall for euer boyle, burne and broyle, in thoſe vnquenchable flames without hauing ſo much as a droppe of cold water to coole their heat. Their tortures and paines ſhall bee intolerable, and yet without end. Their miſery ſhall bee comfortleſſe, and yet without hope of future amendment, for the fire ſhall neuer goe out, and the worme dyeth not. And as they are outwardly burned and tormented, ſo inwardly they ſhall bee racked and tortured with the guiltineſſe of ſinne, and the terrours of an euill conſcience, which ſhall accuſe them as ſelfe-murtherers, and the onely cauſes of all their helliſh miſerie. All which poſitiue puniſhments will not bee ſo grieuous vnto them, as their depriuation of glory and happineſſe, and their euerlaſting baniſhment out of the preſence of God, and the ineſtimable joyes of his heauenly Kingdome. For their torments though neuer ſo great, are neuertheleſſe finite in their quantity, whereas their loſſe is infinite, ſeeing they not onely looſe the ioyes of Heauen, but the fruition of God himſelfe. Now vnto theſe puniſhments which they ſuffer directly and properly in their owne perſons, wee may adde thoſe which ſhall lye vpon them in regard of their company; for beſides thoſe helliſh fiends and vncleane and filthy ſpirits, who will bee ready to ſcorne, deride and inſult ouer them in their miſeries, executing Gods fearefull iudgements with all malicious tyranny, they ſhal haue the fellowſhip of damned men like themſelues, among whom they ſhall heare nothing but direfull yelling and hideous crying, ſhrieking and blaſpheming, which will double and redouble their tortures and grieuous paines. All which and much more (which might bee ſpoken of this argument, if it were pertinent to our preſent purpoſe) being conſidered, may ſerue to lighten all our afflictions, and to yeeld vs comfort in all our croſſes, for ſeeing the Lord of his free grace and infinite mercies, hath through his Sonne Chriſt ſaued and deliuered vs from theſe greateſt euils, and thoſe intolerable and euerlaſting puniſhments, though by nature we are no better than they that ſuffer them, and both by our originall corruption and our actuall tranſgreſſions, which we haue innumerable times committed againſt Gods infinite Maieſty, haue deſerued to be partakers of thoſe endleſſe torments; well may wee with patience and comfort, yea with exceeding thankfulneſſe and ioy vnſpeakeable, endure theſe light and momentany afflictions, as thinking our ſelues happy, that wee are not vtterly conſumed, and euerlaſtingly ſwallowed vp of that helliſh condemnation which others ſuffer.

§. Sect. 5.
That we may receiue much comfort if wee compare our earthly afflictions with our heauenly ioyes.

Laſtly, wee might receiue much conſolation in all our croſſes and calamities, if we would often compare them in our meditations with thoſe eternall and heauenly ioyes, which wee ſhall attaine vnto at the end of our weariſome pilgrimage, after wee haue beene a while tryed and tyred with theſe light and momentany ſufferings. For there wee ſhall find a moſt happy cataſtrophe and bleſſed change of all our croſſes & miſeries, there not onely ſhall wee haue all teares wiped from our eyes, but our weeping ſhall bee turned into laughter, and our ſorrow into ioy, as our Sauiour hath promiſed vs. There ſhall wee find that truely verified which the Apoſtle ſpeaketh, namely, that our preſent afflictions are not worthy the glory which ſhall be reuealed. For (as elſewhere he ſaith) theſe light and momentany afflictions ſhall cauſe vnto vs a farre moſt excellent and an eternall waight of glory; and after our ſlight and ſhort paines which wee take in trauelling our iourney, wee ſhall come to an inheritance, immortall and vndefiled, and that fadeth not away, reſerued in Heauen for vs; wherein we haue cauſe to reioyce, though now for a ſeaſan (if neede require) we are in Heauines, through many tentations; that the tryall of our Faith, being much more pretious than gold that periſheth (though it be tryed with fire) might be found vnto our praiſe, and honour and glory, at the appearing of Ieſus Chriſt. Finally there wee ſhall not onely be freed both in our ſoules and bodies, from all worldly miſeries, but alſo be made partakers of ſuch ſurpaſſing and ineſtimable ioyes, as neither the eye hath ſeene, the eare hath heard, nor the heart of man conceiued. There we ſhall haue the ſociety of the bleſſed Saints and Angels to communicate with vs in all our happineſſe, yea wee ſhall haue fellowſhip with our Sauiour Chriſt, who hath ſo deerly loued vs, and is now aduanced aboue all powers and principalities, and all things in Heauen

Luk.6.21.
Iohn 16.20.

Rom. 8.18.

2.Cor.4.17.

1.Pet.1.4.6.7.

1.Cor.2.9.

Heauen and Earth. Yea wee ſhall haue the fruition of God himſelfe, our ſummum bonum, and chiefe happineſſe, in whoſe preſence there is fulneſſe of ioy for euermore, he being infinite in all perfection and containing in himſelfe alone all beauty, maieſty, glory, excellency, vertue, goodneſſe, and whatſoeuer may bee loued, deſired or admired. But of theſe points I haue largely ſpoken in the other part of this treatiſe, and therefore need not heere to inſiſt longer vpon them: onely let vs conſider, that if after theſe ſhort and light afflictions wee ſhall attaine vnto ſuch vnſpeakeable happineſſe, and hauing poſſeſſion of this glorious Kingdome ſhall neuer bee diſpoſſeſſed, but after many millions of yeares ſhall be as farre from the ending of our ioyes, as wee were at our firſt entrance vnto them, wee haue great cauſe not onely to bee patient, but alſo to rejoyce in our greateſt miſeries and afflictions. For if worldly men do comfort themſelues in all their labours, dangers and ſorrowes, by remembring that they ſhall haue an end, and that they are the meanes to helpe them to the attaining of earthly riches, honours and pleaſures; which when they enjoy, they thinke all their paines and griefes ſufficiently recompenced, although they are both vaine and momentany, ſo as they may outliue them, or are aſſured that at their ſoone-approaching death they ſhall dye with them, and leaue them comfortleſſe in this laſt and greateſt extremity; then how much more ſhould our hearts bee comforted, yea repleniſhed with joy in all our croſſes and afflictions? whenas we thinke with our ſelues that they are but ſhort and momentany, and that when they are paſſed, wee ſhall obtaine thoſe euerduring riches, and neuer fading glory, thoſe endleſſe pleaſures and euerlaſting joyes, which the Lord who is a moſt ſure pay-maſter doth reſerue for vs in his heauenly Kingdome.

See contempt of the world. lib.3.chap. 3.to 11.

CHAP. XXXII.

That we muſt with our ſpirituall conſolations ioyne worldly comforts, when by lawfull meanes we may enioy them.

§. Sect. 1. That we ought not to neglect any lawfull meanes of comfort or freedome from the croſſe.

AND thus haue I handled thoſe ſpirituall reaſons and arguments, which being duly conſidered, may bring vnto vs much comfort in all our croſſes. Vpon which conſolations as we are chiefly and principally to rely; ſo we are not to neglect thoſe outward meanes and helpes, which God out of worldly things ſhall vouchſafe vnto vs, either for the taking away of our afflictions, or for the eaſing of our griefes, and confirming our patience in bearing and ſuſtaining them. Concerning the former, there is no lawfull meanes, which is not to bee vſed for the remouall of our croſſes; for as then alone wee are called of God to ſuffer afflictions, when as wee haue no lawfull meanes to auoide or eſcape them; ſo can we onely lye vnder the waight of this burthen with comfort and good conſcience, whileſt wee want theſe meanes of freedome and deliuerance. For if when the Lord graciouſly granteth them vnto vs, wee will not vouchſafe to vſe them, either becauſe we would not part with our afflictions, as thinking them meritorious and ſatisfactorie for ſinne, or becauſe we would haue the Lord grant vnto vs other meanes, more extraordinarie, and better fitting our proud humours; wee doe therein but tempt the Lord, and are guilty of all our owne harmes, bearing now no more a croſſe ſent from God, but a burthen of our owne making and impoſing; neither yet ſeruing God any longer in our obedience to his will, but becomming voluntarie ſeruants and ſlaues vnto our afflictions, whereby wee iuſtly deſerue to be vſed like ſeruants vnder the Law, who refuſing their liberty, when as it was lawfully offered vnto them, had in token of perpetuall ſeruitude their eares bored with an awle vnto the dore, and had neuer againe any offer of their freedome. Howbeit wee muſt carefully take heed, that the meanes which wee vſe for our deliuerance bee iuſt, honeſt and lawfull; for otherwiſe we ſhall be in worſe caſe than wee were before, wounding our ſoules to cure our bodies, and hazarding our euerlaſting happineſſe, for our deliuerance out of light and momentanie miſeries. But of this I haue before ſpoken, and therefore will heere thus breefly paſſe it ouer.

See firſt booke chap.5.Sect.1

§. Sect. 2. That we muſt make known our griefes to ſome wiſe and faithful friend.

But as we muſt vſe theſe worldly means of our deliuerance frō affliction when we haue them, ſo when we want theſe, wee muſt not neglect ſuch other means as may lighten our load, & ſweeten the bitterneſſe of this loathſome potion. Of which, among many other, there are two chiefe and principal. The firſt, to impart and lay open our griefes vnto our diſcreet and approued friends, that wee may receiue counſaile and comfort from them. For as an heauy burthen (which to one alone is vnſupportable) is made light and eaſie, when as it is borne vpon many ſhoulders; and as thoſe wounds are moſt deſperately dangerous, and doe ſooneſt drowne the heart which doe bleed inwardly, and thoſe leſſe perillous and ſooner cured which haue an outward iſſue; ſo the burthen of ſorrow which is intolerable to one onely, is made much more eaſie when it is borne by diuers friends; and theſe bloudy ſtreames of tribulation, which hauing no externall vent, will drowne the heart with griefe; when they find an outward paſſage into the boſome of a faithfull friend, are eaſily cured by thoſe ſoueraigne ſalues of diuine and morall conſolation, which he through his wiſdome is able to apply vnto them. And therefore, as when we haue more labour and buſineſſe than wee can well by our ſelues diſpatch, wee vſually call in others to aſſiſt and helpe vs, becauſe labour communicated, becommeth eaſie to many, which is impoſſible to one: ſo when the yoake of affliction doth lie ſo heauy vpon vs, that in our owne ſenſe we are ready to faint and ſinke vnder it, let vs call in to our ayde, our deare and faithfull friends, that by the helpe of their counſailes and comforts, wee may bee refreſhed and ſupported. And of this wee ſhall find a double benefit, firſt, as it is an eaſe vnto our hearts, whenas they vnburthen themſelues of griefe by complayning; for as when the floud of ſorrow is pent in and dammed vp, it ſo much the more ſwelleth and inwardly rageth, ſo when it hath a vent and free current, it will run much more weakly and with greater ſtilneſſe. In which reſpect, men to eaſe themſelues are ready to make moane to the bare wals and ſenſleſſe trees; becauſe, as they are more irkeſome when they are ſmothered, ſo it is a comfort, if by any meanes they can but vtter them; and ſecondly, becauſe as ſorrow iſſueth, and the heart emptieth it ſelfe, ſo comfort entreth and repleniſheth it, whileſt our friend to whom wee make knowne our calamities, doth giue vs eaſe and refreſhing, partly by his compaſſion, fellow-feeling, condoling and pitying vs in our griefes, and partly by his wiſe counſailes and ſweet conſolations both Diuine and Morall.

Sect. 3.
choice is made of friend, wee commu-
our

But yet wee are to know, that not euery friend is fit, vnto whom wee may communicate and lay open our griefes, for there are ſome that handle ſores with ſo rough an hand, that they rather bruiſe and hurt them, than cure and heale them; and are ſo auſtere and harſh in their diſpoſition, ſo tart and cynicall in all their cariage and behauiour, that they are more likely to gaule new skinned wounds, and to make the ſores of ſorrow almoſt healed to bleed afreſh, than by the ſweete Balſum of comfort and diſcreet counſaile to giue vnto their grieued patient any refreſhing. There are ſome alſo which being in the contrary extreame are too too ſorrowfull and ouer paſſionate, weeping ouer wounds in ſtead of curing them; vnto whom ſorrow and griefe being imparted by pitifull cryes and mournfull complaints, is echoed backe againe, and ſo redoubled both in the ſound and ſtrength, like two fires when they meete together. And finally, there are ſome both faithfull and willing, who through their want of wiſedome and experience, are not able to apply vnto vs fit comforts; vnto whom wee are no more to reſort for the refreſhing of our ſoules tired with ſorrow, becauſe of their friendſhip and loue towards vs, than we doe for the curing of bodily diſeaſes, make choice of vnskilfull Empericks becauſe they affect vs; knowing that not loue, but skill and learning doe cure diſeaſes, although they are beſt when they are ioyned together. And therefore wee are to make choice of ſuch a Comforter, as is both compaſſionate, temperate in his affections, and wiſe and diſcreete in his comforts and counſailes; and not ſo onely wiſe, that he is withall proud and Cynicall; nor ſo onely pitifull and paſſionate, that he is fit for nothing; but with the ſhowres of teares to increaſe the floud of griefe, and to make the ſtreame of ſorrow to run with double violence. And becauſe Gods faithfull Miniſters are for the moſt part the beſt able, and moſt ready to performe this duty, who haue receiued from God the tongue of the Learned, that they ſhould know to miniſter a word in time to him that is weary; therefore aboue all others, choiſe is to be made of them for this purpoſe, eſpecially whenas their knowledge is ſweetned with loue, meekneſſe and humility; for otherwiſe it is as good to bee without their helpe as haue it when the danger of the diſeaſe is much exceeded by the paines which they put vs to, in their rude and rough curing it. Now that wee may find ſuch a friend in the time of our aduerſity the readieſt way is to be ſuch an one vnto others in their griefs in the time of our proſperity. For if in our plenty we are no niggards of our good counſailes and conſolations, but lend them freely vnto all diſtreſſed Chriſtians, when they are ready to faint in their afflictions; then ſhall wee in the time of our need find them returned vnto vs with plentifull vſury and increaſe, the Lord rewarding our piety and loue into our boſomes, and neuer ſuffering vs to bee comfortleſſe, who haue beene ſo comfortable vnto others.

Eſay 50.4.

In aduerſis habet auxilia quæ in ſecundis commodat.

§. Sect. 4.
The ſecond meanes of worldly comfort, is lawfull recreations ioyned with our honeſt labours.

The ſecond meanes of refreſhing our hearts oppreſſed with griefe, is by ioyning ſeaſonably our honeſt labours with lawfull recreations. For whereas idleneſſe giueth full ſcope and opportunitie vnto Sathan and our owne corruption, to aggrauate and amplifie our afflictions, and gather arguments againſt our owne peace, and contentment, tormenting our ſelues with our owne conceit and apprehenſion, and (as it were) whipping our ſoules with rods of our owne making; this ſerious employment in the buſineſſes of our callings, will put all theſe conceits out of our minds, and free vs from all other griefe, than that which wee are ſubiect vnto in preſent ſenſe and feeling. And whereas idleneſſe maketh vs fal into deepe melancholy, by giuing vnto vs full leaſure and liberty, not onely to meditate on preſent miſeries, but to recall thoſe which are paſt, and through feare to anticipate thoſe which are not yet come; the which humour is the very Nurſe of diſcontent, and impatiency, and the tindar into which when the leaſt ſparke of affliction falleth, it is increaſed in the apprehenſion, and within a ſhort time, becomes a great and vnquenchable flame; labour and continuall exerciſe doth ſo wholy take vp the minde, that there is no place for this idle humour to ſettle in, nor any meanes to nouriſh it, though at the firſt we haue giuen way vnto it. But yet exceſſiue and vnremitted labour, doth as much prepare the minde for the admitting of melancholy, as ſloth and idleneſſe, and doth no leſſe poſſeſſe it with impatiency and diſcontent; and therefore as the chiefe part of our time muſt be ſpent in taking paines, and in performing the duties of Piety and of our callings, to put out of our minds all falſe apprehenſions and idle conceipts; ſo muſt wee allot ſome ſhare thereof vnto honeſt and lawfull recreations, as walking in pleaſant places, conferences which are delightfull without offence, Poetry, Muſique, Shooting, and ſuch other allowable Sports as beſt fit with mens ſeuerall diſpoſitions for their comfort and refreſhing. And this is alike, though not equally, neceſſary as the other, becauſe as too much eaſe breedeth wantonneſſe; ſo too much labour cauſeth wearineſſe, of which the one, as well as the other, is the Mother and Nurſe of waywardneſſe and impatiency. But yet we muſt not at the firſt approching of our afflictions ſo vſe theſe delights and recreations, that they keepe vs from applying them to our hearts, and making an holy vſe of them, for the furthering of our repentance and mortification; as it is the cuſtome of worldly men, who laugh out their ſorrowes, diſcountenance their new approached griefes, drowne their dolour with exceſſiue drinking, and keepe the noyſe of their afflictions from piercing their eares or hearts, with the lowder clamour of their merry company; for ſo they will be vnto vs as bewitching Syrens, which will rocke vs aſleep in carnall ſecuritie, bring vs into a ſpirituall Lethargie, and make vs to become ſenſleſſe both of ſmart and ſinne: but in the firſt place we muſt giue way vnto godly ſorrow for ſin, which is the cauſe of our afflictions, and vſe our croſſes, as Hammers to driue repentance more deeply into our hearts; and that being there throughly fixed and faſtned, our peace made with God, and the mortall poyſon of our miſeries (which is ſinne) being taken away, then we are by theſe comforts and recreations to refreſh our mindes, when they are tyred with the waight and continuance of our calamities, in the meane while carefully taking heed, that neither at firſt nor laſt, our ſports and delights doe not leſſen our ſorrow for ſinne, which is alwayes too little and farre ſhort of that it ſhould be; but onely mitigate our grief for our miſeries and afflictions, which too too often is exceſſiue and immoderate. For as the ſalue being rightly applyed to the ſore, doth heale and cure it, but being laid vpon the whole skin, doth draw a bliſter, and make the patient in worſe caſe than he was before; ſo if this medicine of delight and lawfull recreation, bee well applyed to that ſorrow which ariſeth from afflictions it will do vs much good, and helpe to recouer our ſpirituall health; becauſe this is a diſeaſe of the minde which needeth curing; whereas if it bee miſapplyed vnto our ſorrow for ſinne, which is a ſauing grace, and one of the ſoundeſt parts of a true Chriſtian, it will exulcerate the ſoule, and make the faithfull patient in farre worſe eſtate than he was before.

Chap. XXXIII.

Of the Arguments of conſolation which ariſe from the aſſurance which wee haue of our deliuerance out of all our afflictions.

§. Sect. 1. That God deliuereth the faithfull in that time which is moſt fit and ſeaſonable, Lib.1.cap.11.

Hitherto wee haue ſpoken of ſuch Arguments as are fit and ſufficient enough, if they bee duely thought vpon, to make vs patient and thankfull in all our afflictions, although wee ſhould continually lye vnder them euen vnto the day of our death. And now, according to our order firſt generally propounded, wee are come to ſpeake of ſuch conſolations as ariſe from the aſſurance which wee haue of Gods gracious and moſt ſeaſonable deliuerance. For though the Lord doth not remoue our afflictions at our pleaſure; yet he will doe it in his owne good time, when as it ſhall be moſt for his owne glory and our ſpirituall and euerlaſting good; though our troubles be tedious, yet hee will not ſuffer them to be endleſſe; and though (as the Pſalmiſt ſpeaketh) hee chaſteneth vs ſore, yet hee will not deliuer vs vnto death. And as the louing Father doth not, when he correcteth his ſonne, leaue off at his firſt motion (for then hee would neither care for him nor his correction) but when hee thinketh the chaſtiſement ſufficient for the reclaiming of him from his faults and vices: ſo the Lord our heauenly Father heareth our cryes in the time of affliction, not according to our luſts and childiſh will, but ſo as in his infinite Wiſdome hee ſeeth it to ſtand beſt with our profit, and the reformation of our former euill courſes, which when hee ſeeth effected, hee will caſt his rodde aſide, and (like the jaylour) waſh and heale the ſtripes which before himſelfe had made. So the Pſalmiſt ſaith, That the righteous cry and the Lord heareth them and deliuereth them out of all their troubles; and that though they be very great, yet he deliuereth them out of all. That he healeth thoſe which are

Pſal.118.18.

Acts 16.

Pſal.34.17.19 & 147.3.

ſal.9.9.

are broken in heart, and bindeth vp their ſores; and that he is a refuge for the poore, a refuge in due time, euen in affliction. For the Lord (as the Apoſtle ſaith) will not ſuffer vs to bee tempted aboue our ſtrength, but will giue a good iſſue with the tentation that wee may be able to beare it. And as elſe-where he affirmeth, hee correcteth vs (not for any pleaſure which he taketh in our paine and ſmart) but for our profit, that hee might make vs partakers of his holineſſe; not to puniſh vs, but to poliſh and perfit vs; not to diſable vs and weaken our ſtrength, but rather to exerciſe it and make vs ſtronger. Now if our burthen of affliction ſhould be intolerable, either in reſpect of the waight or continuance of it, it would not accompliſh Gods end, at which hee aymeth in our chaſtiſements, but rather hinder and defeat it; it would not make vs more holy, but rather more wicked and prophane; not more patient, humble, and meek, but more raging, deſperate and wilfull, murmuring and repining againſt Gods wiſe prouidence, as though thereby ſome wrong were offered vnto vs. And therefore the Pſalmiſt ſaith, That the rod of the wicked ſhall not reſt vpon the lot of the righteous; leſt the righteous put forth their hand vnto wickedneſſe. And the Lord himſelfe promiſeth, that hee will not contend for euer, nor bee alwayes wroth, becauſe ſo the ſpirit ſhould faile before him. And this loue and care wee ſee euen in mortall men; for the wiſe & diſcreet Schoolemaſter doth ſo correct his Scholler, that hee may make him more quick in pulling his wits together, and more diligent in labouring his leſſon, and not ſo as his wits ſhould be thereby dulled, and hee made vncapable of Learning. The louing Father chaſtiſeth his ſonne in ſuch meaſure as is fit for the amending of him; and not ſo much as will dead his Spirits and make him to become fooliſh or deſperate; yea, hee that breaketh a wilde Colt ſo moderateth his ſtripes, that he may thereby bee tamed and made more ſeruiceable; and will not beat him ſo vnmeaſurably, that he ſhould become lame and vnprofitable for his vſe. And therefore wee may bee aſſured, that the Lord infinite in mercy and goodnes, will ſhew this loue and care in our corrections, not ſuffering our afflictions eyther in waight or continuance to exceed the meaſure of our ſtrength, whereby we ſhould become vnſeruiceable and good for nothing, but will moderate our corrections according to our ability, and put an end vnto all our troubles and tryals; when as hee ſeeth vs ſufficiently purged from the droſſe of our corruptions in this fiery furnace, or his graces tryed and approoued in this ſpirituall conflict, which were the ends for which wee were brought into them.

1.Cor.10.13.

Hebr.12.10.

Pſal.125.3.

Iſa.57.16.

Sect.2. That God ſeeth and taketh notice of all our afflictions to deliuer vs out of them.

But for the better confirmation of our faith in this aſſurance of our deliuerance out of all our afflictions in ſuch opportune and ſeaſonable time, as will beſt ſtand with Gods glory and our owne good, let vs well weigh and ponder theſe conſiderations following. Firſt, that God ſeeth and taketh notice of all the croſſes and calamities which by any meanes whatſoeuer doe happen vnto vs. So the Pſalmiſt ſaith, That the eyes of the Lord are vpon the righteous, and his eares open vnto their cry. And howſoeuer the wicked flatter themſelues with a conceipt, that God regardeth not the oppreſſions of the faithfull, and ſay in their hearts God hath forgotten, he hideth away his face and will neuer ſee; yet as he affirmeth, the Lord doth ſee it, and beholdeth miſchiefe and wrong, that he might take it into his owne hands. Neither is the Lord onely a bare beholder of the troubles and afflictions of his ſeruants, but hee ſo ſeeth and knoweth them, as withall hee ſeeth and knoweth the meanes of their deliuerance, yea, and alſo doth indeed ſaue them in their greateſt need, according to that of the Pſalmiſt, Behold, the eye of the Lord is vpon them that feare him, and vpon them that truſt in his mercy, to deliuer their ſoules from death, and to preſerue them in famine, with whom the Apoſtle Peter according, ſaith, The Lord knoweth to deliuer the godly out of tentation, and to reſerue the vniuſt vnto the day of iudgement to be puniſhed. With which conſideration Dauid comforteth himſelfe in his diſtreſſe. Though I be (ſaith he) poore and needy, the Lord thinketh on me; thou art mine helper and my deliuerer; my God make no tarrying.

Pſal.34.15.

Pſal.10.11,14. & 94.7,9.

Pſal.33.18,19.

2.Pet.2.9.

Pſal.40.17.

And certainely it muſt needs adde much to our conſolation in afflictions, and our aſſurance of deliuerance, when as wee are perſwaded that the Lord ſeeth and knoweth all our miſeries. For whereas if he had neuer ſo much power and wil to helpe vs, we might neuertheleſſe be obnoxious to many wrongs, and be ouer-whelmed with many calamities, if hee were ignorant of our afflictions, and did not ſee and know our ſtate and condition; now when wee are aſſured, that hee not only dearely loueth vs, and is of power and ability to ſaue and deliuer vs, but alſo doth behold and conſider all our griefes and croſſes, we may be aſſured alſo that hee will ſuffer them no longer to lie vpon vs, than ſhall be for his owne glory, and the euerlaſting good of our ſoules. For if wee put ſuch truſt in earthly parents, that they will not ſee vs want, ſuffer wrong, or be oppreſſed with any miſery, (they being able to releeue and helpe vs) further than will ſtand with our good and benefit, as in the caſe of tryall and chaſtizement: then how much more ſhould wee put our confidence in God for helpe and deliuerance, ſeeing hee loueth vs much more entirely, and is able to defend and ſaue vs much more eaſily, and continually ſeeth and knoweth all our wants and miseries?

§. Sect. 3.
That God is present with the faithfull in all their afflictions to helpe and releeue them.

Secondly, let vs consider, that the Lord doth not onely see and behold our tribulation (as it were) a farre off, he being included in Heauen, as wee are in the Earth, but that as he filleth all places with his eſſence, ſo after a more eſpeciall manner hee is preſent with the faithfull in all their miſeries and afflictions. And as the carefull Phyſician attendeth vpon and watcheth ouer his dearely loued patient, that he may apply vnto him fit medicines, which may ſo purge away the corrupt humours, as that in the meane time nature it ſelfe be not too much weakened; and as the cunning Gold-ſmith whenas hee hath caſt his Gold into the fiery Furnace, doth not there careleſly leaue it, but watcheth by it, that hee may moderate the fire, and ſo order it in reſpect both of the heat and the time of [illegible], that it may be refined and not burned; purified from the droſſe, and not ſpent and conſumed in the pureſt ſubſtance: ſo doth the Lord ſtand by vs when we are in our ſicke beds like a carefull Phyſician to cure and recouer vs; and like a wiſe Artiſan he watcheth ouer vs, when hee hath caſt vs into the furnace of affliction, that when wee are according to his owne mind purged and purified, hee may withdraw his bitter potions, and pull vs like pure metall out of the fire, that wee may not in our ſpirituall parts receiue any hurt or detriment. Neither is the Lord onely preſent with vs as a pitifull friend to take compaſſion on our griefes, but alſo as a powerfull and wiſe helper he putteth to his hand, that wee may be deliuered from them; taking the beſt courſe, and vſing the fitteſt meanes, for the effecting of that which hee willeth and intendeth. And according to the ſaying of Eliphaz and Elihu; hee ſaueth the poore from the ſword, from the mouth of the wicked, and from the hand of the violent man; ſo that when they expect his helpe they are not fruſtrated of their hope. Hee deliuereth the poore in his affliction, and openeth their eare in trouble. So the Pſalmiſt more plainly ſpeaking of this powerfull and working preſence, ſaith, That the Lord is neere vnto them that are of a contrite heart, and will ſaue ſuch as are afflicted in ſpirit. That hee is our keeper, and our ſhadow at our right hand, ſo that the Sunne ſhall not ſmite vs by day, nor the Moone by night. And againe, that the Lord is neere vnto all that call vpon him, yea to all that call vpon him in truth, he will fulfill the deſire of them that feare him, hee alſo will heare their cry and will ſaue them. The Lord preſerueth all them that loue him, &c. And this the Lord himſelfe promiſeth, because (ſaith he) hee hath loued mee, therefore will I deliuer him, I will exalt him, becauſe he hath knowne my Name. Hee ſhall call vpon mee, and I will heare him, I will be with him in trouble, I will deliuer him and glorifie him.

Iob 5.15,16. & 36.15.

Pſal.34.18.

Pſal.121.5.

Pſal.145.18,19

Pſal.91.14,15.

And our Sauiour aſcending into Heauen in his bodily preſence, promiſeth his Diſciples, and, in them, all the faithfull, that he would not leaue them comfortleſſe, but would come vnto them, by his holy Spirit, and be preſent with them vnto the end of the World. The which gracious promiſes wee ſee accompliſhed in the examples of the afflicted Saints; for thus God was preſent with Iacob in his greateſt extremity, holding him vp when he wreſtled with him, and defending him when hee ſeemed to oppoſe againſt him. Thus was hee preſent with Ioſeph, to ſaue and deliuer him in the Land of his Baniſhment, yea, he was with him in priſon, giuing him grace and fauour in the ſight of the Iaylour, and afterwards an happy deliuerance out of trouble. And thus he was preſent with the three children in the fiery furnace, in a viſible manner, walking with them in the middeſt of the fire, and preſeruing them from ſuſtaining any harme. And thus euen in theſe dayes hee is preſent with the faithfull in all their troubles, though not thus ſenſibly and miraculouſly, yet ſpiritually and inuiſibly by his wiſdome and power, finding out fit meanes for their deliuerance out of all their afflictions, in ſuch a time as is moſt ſeaſonable.

Iohn 14.18. Math.28.20.

Gen.32.24.

Gen.39.2. & Verſ.21.22.

Dan.3.25.

§. Sect. 4.
Of the conſolation which ariſeth from the aſſurance of Gods preſence with

The which conſideration may ſerue to repleniſh our hearts with ſingular comfort, in that hee is alwayes preſent with vs who is moſt louing, and beſt able to giue vs ſuccour and reliefe. And therefore the Lord himſelfe, when he would cheere his Church drooping in her afflictions, doth much inſiſt and beat vpon this argument of his gracious preſence. Feare thou not (ſaith he) for I am with thee; be not afraid, for I am thy God, I will ſtrengthen thee and helpe thee; and will ſuſtaine thee with the right hand of my iuſtice: The men which warre againſt thee ſhall bee as a thing of nought; for I the Lord thy God will hold thy right hand, ſaying vnto thee, feare not, I will helpe thee. Feare thou not, thou Worme Iacob, and yee men of Iſrael: I will helpe thee, ſaith the Lord thy Redeemer, the holy one of Iſrael. And againe, Thus ſaith the Lord that created thee, O Iacob, and he that formed thee, O Iſrael, feare not, for I haue redeemed thee, I haue called thee by name, thou art mine. When thou paſſeſt through the waters, I will be with thee, and through the floods, that they do not ouerflow thee. Whē thou walkeſt through the very fire, thou ſhalt not be burnt; neither ſhall the flame kindle vpon thee. And thus the Lord encourageth Paul to be conſtant and couragious in all troubles and afflictions which ſhould happen vnto him, for the preaching of the Goſpell. Feare not (ſaith hee) but ſpeake, and hold not thy peace, for I am with thee, and no man ſhall lay hands on thee to hurt thee. And accordingly thus haue the Saints and Seruants of God com-

Eſa.41.10,13,1

Eſay 43.1,2.

Acts 18.10.

comforted themſelues in all their afflictions, by calling to minde, that the Lord their God was alwayes preſent with them, to ſaue and deliuer them out of all their troubles. For ſo Dauid profeſſeth, that though hee ſhould walke through the valley of the ſhadow of death, hee would feare no euill, becauſe God was with him, and his rod and ſtaffe they did comfort him: and elſewhere, The Lord (ſaith he) is with me, therefore I will not feare what man can doe vnto me. The which his profeſſion he putteth in practice in his greateſt extremity. For when the Amalekites had ſacked and burnt his City, ſpoyled him of all his goods, led his wiues captiues, and when his owne people adding ſorrow vnto ſorow, were ready to ſtone him, euen then hee comforted himſelfe in the Lord his God. Thus alſo Hezechiah comforted himſelfe and his people, when his Countrey was inuaded with the huge Army of the Aſſyrians. Bee ſtrong (ſaith he) and couragious; feare not, neither be afraid for the King of Aſhur, nor for all the multitude that is with him, ſeeing there are more with vs than with him. For with him is an arme of fleſh, but with vs is the Lord our God to helpe vs, and to fight our battels. And thus the whole Church triumpheth ouer all troubles and dangers, in the aſſurance which ſhe had of Gods powerfull preſence. God is our hope and ſtrength, and helpe in troubles ready to be found. Therefore will we not feare, though the earth bee mooued, and though the Mountaines fall into the middeſt of the Sea. Though the waters thereof rage and be troubled, and the Mountaines ſhake at the ſurges of the ſame. Yea, thus did the Head of the Church, Ieſus Chriſt, comfort himſelfe in all his great ſufferings by the preſence and aſſiſtance of the diuine nature. I gaue (ſaith hee) my backe vnto the ſmiters, and my cheekes to the nippers; I hid not my face from ſhame and ſpitting; for the Lord God will helpe mee, therefore I ſhall not bee confounded: therefore I haue ſet my face as a flint, and I know that I ſhall not be aſhamed. According to which examples, let vs labour to carry our ſelues with comfort and patience in our greateſt afflictions, being aſſured that God is alike preſent with vs, as he was with them, to ſaue and deliuer vs out of all our troubles; for it is better to haue him wreſtling with vs like an aduerſary, as hee did with Iacob; than to be vpon any tearmes without his company, ſeeing his gracious preſence is al-ſufficient to ſweeten and lighten the bitterneſſe and burthen of all our croſſes, to turne our groanes and cryes into the heauenly muſique of praiſe & thankſgiuing, and to make Hell it ſelfe better and more delightfull, than the chiefeſt Paradiſe of worldly pleaſures. And therefore becauſe Gods preſence is ſo ſweet and comfortable, and hee hath promiſed to vouchſafe it vnto thoſe who are in miſery and affliction, ſome haue deſired and beene in loue with their croſſes and calamities, though not ſimply for their owne ſakes, yet in this reſpect, becauſe through Gods gracious promiſes, they had the better aſſurance of the enjoying his company. To which purpoſe one ſaith, ſeeing thou haſt promiſed O Lord, to be with me in mine afflictions; therefore let mee euer be afflicted, rather than at any time be without thee. And another, It is better for mee to embrace thee in tribulation, and to haue thee with mee in the fiery furnace of affliction, than enjoying all worldly proſperity, to bee without thy company. And a third making the like profeſſion, ſaith, It is better for me, O Lord, to be in trouble whileſt thou art with mee, than to raigne and reuell, feaſt and flouriſh in worldly pompe, and be without thee. It is a farre greater good to embrace thee in tribulation, and to enjoy thy company in the fire of affliction, than to bee in heauen it ſelfe, being depriued of thy preſence.

Pſal.23.4.
& 118.6.

1.Sam.30.6.

2.Chron.32.7,8

Pſal.46.1.2,3.

Eſay 50.6,7.

Da mihi ſemper tribulationem vt ſemper poſſis eſſe mecum, Gregor.

Idiota inter orthodoxogr. de patient. veræ contemplat. 12 lib. cap. 10.

Bernard. in Pſal. qui habitat Verſ. vlt.

§. Sect. 5.

That Gods power is omnipotent and al-ſufficient to helpe vs.

Thirdly, let vs conſider, that the Lord who ſeeth all our afflictions, and is alwayes preſent and ready to helpe and deliuer vs, is alſo Omnipotent and Almighty, and therefore able and al-ſufficient to ſaue vs, and to giue vnto vs an happy iſſue out of all our troubles. For as the Pſalmiſt ſpeaketh, Who is God beſides the Lord? and who is mighty, ſaue our God? Hee can doe all things (as Iob ſaith) and there is nothing hard vnto him. He is glorious and walketh in his great ſtrength, he ſpeaketh in righteouſneſſe, and is mighty to ſaue, as himſelfe affirmeth. And therefore the faithfull when they haue beene forſaken of all their other hopes, haue notwithſtanding reſted vpon the Lord in all their troubles and dangers for helpe and deliuerance, as being their onely ſtrength and ſtay, as we may ſee in the example of the Prophet Dauid, The Lord (ſaith hee) is my rocke and my fortreſſe, and he that deliuereth mee, my God and my ſtrength, in him will I truſt; my ſhield, the horne alſo of my ſaluation and my refuge. So the Prophet Nahum hauing ſpoken of the wrath and vengeance that ſhould befall the Aſſyrians, affirmeth that God would be good to his Church, and as a ſtrong hold in the day of trouble, knowing them that truſt in him. Yea, this the whole Church knew and acknowledged, according to that of the Pſalmiſt, In the Palaces thereof (that is, of Mount Sion) God is knowne for a refuge. And vpon this ground of knowledge they exhort one another, to reſt vpon the Lord in all troubles for helpe and deliuerance. Truſt in the Lord (ſay they) for euer; for in the Lord God is ſtrength for euer more. Now if nothing can be more comfortable vnto thoſe who are in any danger and diſtreſſe, than to be aſſured that their deareſt friends are not onely preſent with them, and beholders of all their

Pſal.18.31.

Iob 42.2.
Eſay 63.1.

Pſal.18.2.

Nahum 1.6,7.

Pſal.48.3.

Eſay 26.4.

griefs;but alſo haue ability & power ſufficient to free them from the things they feare, & to deliuer them out of al difficulties; then ought our hearts much more to be filled with al joy & conſolation in our greateſt afflictions, ſeeing we are aſſured, that the Lord who is infinite in power and loue, is continually preſent with vs, & both able & ready in the fitteſt & moſt ſeaſonable time, to grant vnto vs deliuerance, and freedome from all thoſe croſſes and miſeries which doe vexe and trouble vs.

§. Sect. 6.
That God is moſt louing towards vs, & therefore willing and ready to helpe vs.

Neither are we onely to comfort our ſelues in the aſſurance of Gods preſence and power to helpe vs, but alſo of his infinite loue and goodneſſe towards vs; the which now commeth in the fourth place to be conſidered, as a chiefe and mayne argument of our conſolation. For if God knoweth all our afflictions, and is neere at hand and ready to helpe vs; if he be almighty in power, and able to doe for vs whatſoeuer he will, farre aboue all that we can aske or think, & doth alſo dearely loue vs, and in regard thereof is ſtill willing to defend vs from euill and to doe vs good, then is there no doubt to bee made of Gods helpe, and our deliuerance in his due and moſt conuenient time. But as the former points appeare plainly by that which hath beene ſaid, ſo is it eaſie with the like euidence of truth to demonſtrate the infiniteneſſe and immutability of Gods loue towards vs. For not onely doth hee as our Creatour, loue vs his creatures and the workes of his owne hands; but alſo as our God, Lord and Maſter, who hath made choice of vs aboue all others to be his owne peculiar people, ſubjects of his Kingdome, members of his Church, and ſeruants of his Family, vnto whom hee ſheweth himſelfe, and by whom he is continually worſhipped & ſerued. Yea, in farre neerer bonds hath hee in his infinite loue and mercy vnited vs vnto himſelfe, for he is our heauenly Father, and wee his children by grace and adoption; hee is our Huſband, and wee his Spouſe; yea, hee is in Chriſt our Head, and wee the members of his Body; whoſe loue, mercy and goodneſſe towards vs, doe as much exceed that which is to be found in earthly Parents, Husbands and Heads, as himſelfe doth exceed them, being infinite and incomprehenſible. And this the Scriptures doe plainly declare vnto vs; for thus the Lord himſelfe ſaith to his Church, that he had loued them with an euerlaſting loue, and in mercy had drawne them vnto him, when being ignorant of his excellency, they made no haſte to come. The which his loue, as it is in time endleſſe, ſo it is in quantity matchleſſe, howſoeuer in the Scriptures it hath ſome reſemblances that we might the better conceiue of it. For it is compared to the loue of a Father, according to that of the Pſalmiſt. As a father hath compaſſion on his children, ſo will the Lord haue compaſſion on them that fear him. And by the Prophet Malachie the Lord promiſeth, that he will ſpare the faithfull, as a man ſpareth his owne ſonne that ſerueth him. Yea, the loue of God is by himſelfe compared to the loue of a tender Mother, and preferred before it. Can a woman (ſaith he) forget her childe, and not haue compaſſion on the ſonne of her wombe? though they ſhould forget, yet will I not forget thee. Behold, I haue grauen thee on the palmes of my hands, thy walls are euer in my ſight. Yea, hee loueth vs as the Husband loueth the Wife, for hee hath married vs vnto himſelfe for euer in righteouſnes, iudgement, mercy & compaſſion: the which his conjugall loue is notably ſet forth vnto vs in the Booke of the Canticles. And if we would yet haue a loue aboue this, hee loueth vs as the Head the mẽbers of the body, pitying & preſeruing vs, as thoſe parts, which being of greateſt vſe, are alſo moſt tẽder & ſubject to injury. For ſo the Prophet ſaith, that he who toucheth the faithfull, toucheth the apple of Gods eye. And Moſes in his ſong ſaith, that God taught his people & kept them as the apple of his eie. In aſſurance of which loue Dauid maketh that prayer. Shew thy maruailous mercies, O thou that ſaueſt by thy right hand them that truſt in thee, from ſuch as riſe vp againſt them. Keepe me as the apple of the eye, hide me vnder the ſhadow of thy wings.

Deut.7.6. & 32.9. Titus 2.14. 1.Pet.2.9.
Ier.31.3.
Pſal.103.13.
Mal.3.17.
Eſay 49.15.
Hoſ.2.19.
Zach.2.8.
Deut.32.10.
Pſal.17.7.8.

§. Sect. 7.
That God eſpecially ſheweth his loue to the faithfull in the time of their afflictions.

And as God ſheweth this his infinite loue vnto the faithfull at all times, and vpon all occaſions, ſo eſpecially in time of their troubles and afflictions, and that both by compaſſionating, and (as it were) condoling with them in their griefes, and alſo by ſauing and deliuering them out of them in due time; for ſo he ſaith of the afflictions of his people, that in all their troubles hee was troubled, and the Angell of his preſence ſaued them. That his ſoule was grieued for the miſery of Iſrael; and that he earned in the bowels of his compaſſion, according as himſelfe ſpeaketh by his Prophet. Is Ephraim my deare ſonne or pleaſant child? For ſince I ſpake againſt him, I do earneſtly remember him ſtill. Therefore my bowels are troubled for him, I will ſurely haue mercy vpon him, ſaith the Lord. For this his loue & compaſſion cãnot be idle; but as it will ſhew it ſelfe in pitying the miſeries & troubles of his childrẽ, ſo alſo in giuing vnto them ſeaſonable helpe and deliuerance. For ſo hee ſaith of the ſame people, and in them of all the faithfull. They ſhall come weeping, and with mercy will I bring them again. I will lead them by the riuers of waters, in a ſtraight way wherein they ſhall not ſtumble; for I am a Father vnto Iſrael, and Ephraim is my firſt borne. And ſo the afflicted Church ſpeaketh out of her owne experience. The Lord will not forſake for euer. But though he ſend affliction, yet will he haue compaſſion, according to the multitude of his mercies; for he

Eſay 63.9.
Iudg.10.16.
Ier.31.20.
Verſe 9.
Lam.3.31.32.33.

hee doth not puniſh willingly, nor afflict the children of men. Yea contrariwiſe, he taketh the greateſt delight in ſhewing his mercy and goodneſſe to thoſe who ſerue and depend vpon him, as being an action moſt naturall and familiar vnto him; according to that of the Prophet Micah. Who is a God like vnto thee, that taketh away iniquity, and paſſeth by the tranſgreſſion of the remnant of his heritage? Hee retaineth not his anger for euer, becauſe mercy pleaſeth him. All which his mercy and goodneſſe hee is, aboue all other times, moſt ready to extend towards vs in the time of our afflictions, in regard of our weakneſſe to beare theſe burthens; for he knoweth whereof we be made, and remembreth that we are but duſt, and he hath experience of our infirmities, as the Prophet ſpeaketh, knowing what to lay vpon vs, and the fitteſt time to eaſe vs of our burthen. The which may ſerue as a ſingular conſolation vnto vs in all our troubles and afflictions, in that the Lord who is almighty and moſt able to helpe vs, is alſo infinite in loue and compaſſion towards vs, and therefore alwayes ready and willing to giue vnto vs deliuerance in time moſt conuenient. For if the child ſo preſumeth on his Fathers loue, that hauing alſo power in his hand to ſupply his wants, protect him from dangers, and free him from any euill, hee comfortably reſteth vpon him in his greateſt pouerty and miſery; If the beloued wife ſo truſteth in her husbands loue, that ſhee careth not to haue much in her owne keeping, ſo ſhee be aſſured that he hath enough for both, nor feareth any enemy in his preſence which ſhee knoweth he is able to reſiſt and ouercome; nor is much troubled with any preſent paine or ſickneſſe, if ſhee be perſwaded, that he at pleaſure can giue her eaſe by curing of it; And finally if the members of the ſame body do ſecurely reſt vpon the wiſe prouidence and direction of the head, and when it ſo appointeth are content with meekneſſe and patience to indure any paine or torture, as binding, lancing, ſearching, ſearing, for the helping and healing of their infirmities and ſores, becauſe by naturall inſtinct they know, that it will impoſe vpon them no more than neceſſary paines, ſeeing in all their troubles and vexation it doth condole with them: then how much more ſhould wee in all our afflictions and miſeries reſt and rely vpon Gods aide and aſſiſtance with ſecurity, comfort and ſpirituall ioy, ſeeing wee can make no queſtion of his power and ability to deliuer vs, and may be aſſured that he infinitely more loueth vs, than the moſt louing father his onely ſonne, the kindeſt husband his deareſt wife, or the naturall head the true members of his owne body.

Micha.7.18.

Pſal.103.14.
Eſay 53.3.

§. Sect.8. Conſolation ariſing from Gods gracious promiſes of helpe and deliuerance.

Laſtly, let vs conſider, that the Lord is not onely powerfull, able and graciouſly willing to giue vnto vs helpe & deliuerance out of all our afflictions in reſpect of thoſe relations of loue betweene him and vs; but hath alſo freely bound himſelfe by his moſt infallible promiſes, which therefore can no more poſſibly fall to the ground vnaccompliſhed, than he and his truth can be ſeuered and parted; who are of the ſame infinite eſſence and being. So he ſaith, Call vpon me in the time of trouble, ſo will I deliuer thee, and thou ſhalt glorifie mee. And elſewhere. Becauſe hee hath loued mee, therefore will I deliuer him, I will exalt him, becauſe he hath knowne my name. He ſhall call vpon mee, and I will heare him, I will bee with him in trouble, I will deliuer him and glorifie him. And in another place; Caſt thy burthen vpon the Lord, and hee ſhall nouriſh thee, he will not ſuffer the righteous to fall for euer. He will fulfill the deſire of them that feare him; hee alſo will heare their cry, and will ſaue them. The Lord preſerueth all them that loue him, &c. And againe, Before they call I will anſwer, and whilſt they ſpeake I will heare. And that I may not multiply more places, becauſe they are obuious and eaſie to find, vnto any that looke into the holy Scriptures, the Apoſtle aſſureth vs, that he will not ſuffer vs to bee tempted aboue our power, but will giue a good iſſue with the tentation, (both in reſpect of waight and continuance of it) that we may be able to beare it. The which gracious promiſes are moſt infallible, becauſe (as the Apoſtle there ſpeaketh) he is faithfull and true who hath made them. Yea he is not not onely true but truth it ſelfe, and therefore no more able to goe from his word than to deny and forſake his very nature and being. And therefore if when wee are in diſtreſſe wee are cheered and refreſhed, when a faithfull and able friend doth promiſe his aid and aſſiſtance for our helpe and deliuerance, from the euils which gaule and vexe vs, though their power bee often ſubject to croſſing, their will to changing, and their faith to failing: then how much more ſhould our hearts bee repleniſhed with joy and comfort, when as wee haue the promiſes of God, who is omnipotent and ſubject to no thwarting, immutable in his loue, and cannot alter, and truth it ſelfe, who cannot faile in performing of any thing which hee vndertaketh?

Pſal.50.15.and 91.15.

Pſalm.55:22. and 145.19.

Eſa.65.24.

1.Cor.10.13.

2.Theſ.3.3. Chriſtus dixit plorabitis & flebitis, ſed triſtitia veſtra vertetur in gaudium. Ergo quia prædicta patimur, reſtat vt etiam promiſſa ſperare debeamus. Gregor. lib. 7. indict. 1. cap. 3.

§. Sect.9. That God is called the God of comfort and conſolation in the former reſpects.

In all which reſpects God is ſaid to be our chiefe and only comforter in all our troubles and afflictions, becauſe all true and ſubſtantiall conſolations doe iſſue and flow from him, as the fountaine of ioy and comfort. Thus the Apoſtle ſtileth him, the Father of all mercies, and God of all comfort, who comforteth vs in all our tribulation. And the Lord appropriateth it vnto himſelfe: I euen I am hee that comforteth you, who art thou that thou ſhouldſt feare mortall man, and the

1.Cor.1.3.4.

Eſa.51.12.& 66.13.

Iob.16.7.

Pſal.94.19.

and 119.76.77.

In omnibus aduerſitatibus Chriſtus querendus eſt tanquam vnicum & ſingulare remedium. Ille optimus medicus, dux non ſeducens, rex ſuos erigens &c. Bernard. de paſſione Domini. cap.22.

ſonne of man which ſhall be made as graſſe, and againe, as one whom his mother comforteth, ſo will I comfort you, and yee ſhall bee comforted in Ieruſalem. In reſpect whereof our Sauiour Chriſt calleth his holy ſpirit, by the name of comforter, becauſe it is a ſpeciall office of his to comfort Gods Saints in all their tribulations. And of this Dauid had experience where he ſaith in the multitude of my thoughts within mee, thy comforts delight my ſoule. Whereof it is that in his afflictions hee deſireth no other comforter; I pray thee that thy mercy may comfort mee, according to thy promiſe vnto thy ſeruant. Let thy tender mercies come vnto me that I may liue for thy Law is my deſire. Neither in truth is there any other in compariſon of him to bee ſought or looked after, for as one ſaith, he is our onely and ſingular remedy in all our afflictions and miſeries. Hee is the beſt Phyſition, a captaine and leader that neuer miſleads vs; a King that alwayes comforts and rayſeth vs vp being dejected, and a moſt valiant champion, who onely fighteth in vs and for vs againſt all enemies, and after our victory crowneth vs with glory, when by his helpe alone wee haue ouercome. And what can wee ſeeke which wee may not find in him? If we bee ſicke, he is our Phyſition; If like pilgrimes wee wander in a ſtrange country, hee is our guide; If wee be deſolate, he is our King; If we bee aſſaulted, he is our champion; If wee thirſt, hee is our drinke; If wee be cold, hee is our garment; If wee be ſorrowfull, hee is our joy; If wee be in darkneſſe, hee is our light; If wee be Orphans, he is our Father, husband, friend and brother? Hee is the chiefe goodneſſe, moſt mercifull, moſt mighty, moſt beautiful, moſt wiſe, who euerlaſtingly gouerneth and diſpoſeth of all by his moſt wiſe and powerfull prouidence.

§. Sect. 10. Examples of thoſe who hauing truſted in God haue bin deliuered in due time.

And theſe are the reaſons wherby we may be aſſured of our deliuerance out of all our afflictions; which are not grounded vpon out workes, merits, worthineſſe, or any thing which is in vs; but vpon God his all-ſeeing knowledge, gracious preſence, power, loue and truth; which being things without vs, cannot bee croſſed by our ſinnes and vnworthineſſe, if wee performe that condition of faith, laying hold on theſe mercies and gracious promiſes of God, and bringing forth the fruits of repentance, whereby wee bewayle, hate and forſake all thoſe ſinnes, which haue mooued the Lord to inflict vpon vs all theſe croſſes and afflictions. Now vnto theſe arguments of comfort ariſing from our aſſurance of deliuerance, let vs adde breefly ſome examples of the faithfull from time to time, who hauing truſted in God, haue in his due time beene ſaued and deliuered out of all their troubles and afflictions. And thus we reade, that God ſaued Noah and his family from periſhing in the vniuerſal deluge, and Lot from the common deſtruction of Sodome and Gomorrah. Thus hee freed Abraham from the danger of looſing either his life or wife, by plaguing the heatheniſh kings, and alſo of looſing his ſonne, by prouiding in an inſtant another ſacrifice to be offered in his place. And thus he deliuered Iacob from the grieuous ſeruitude of churliſh Laban, as alſo from the miſchiefes which hee intended againſt him at his departure; from the armed malice of his brother Eſau, and out of innumerable other afflictions and dangers, as appeareth in his ſtory. So how graciouſly did the Lord deliuer Ioſeph from the bloudy conſpiracy of his brethren, making their malice to ſerue his prouidence, as a meanes of his preferment; as alſo out of all thoſe miſeries into which hee was deepely plunged through the luſtfull rage and falſe ſlanders of his diſhoneſt miſtreſſe? how miraculouſly did hee deliuer Moſes in his infancy from killing, drowning and ſtaruing; and in his mature age from the malitious intendments of Pharaob and the Egyptians, as alſo from the mutinings and often rebellious of the vngratefull Iſraelites? What an happy iſſue did he make for Iob out of all his troubles? and how meruailouſly did he protect Dauid from the Philiſtins, from the perſecutions raiſed againſt him by Saul, and the rebellious treaſon of his owne ſonne? how did hee manifeſt his omnipotent power and watchfull loue, in preſeruing Elias from the malicious rage of Ahab and Ieſabell, in feeding him by the miniſtery of his Angell, and afterwards by the Rauens, and the poore Widdow; in ſafe-guarding Elizeus from the army of the Aramites, and the bloudy deſignements of his owne vngratefull King? in preſeruing the three Children in the fiery furnace; Daniel in the Lyons den, Ionas in the Whales belly; and Ezechias from the mighty hoaſt of Senacherib, and afterward from the iawes of death when as it was ready to ſeaze vpon him? yea how wonderfully did he deliuer the whole people and Church of Iſraell; firſt out of the bondage of Egypt, and afterwards in the time of the Iudges from the ſubjection and oppreſſion of their many and mighty enemies, as from the Amorites, Ammonites, Philiſtims, Zidonians, Amalakites, and Maonites, as the Lord himſelfe telleth them? So likewiſe out of the captiuitie of Babilon; and from the moſt cruell conſpiracie of Haman, whereby he intended at once, to roote them out from being a people. Finally, in the new Teſtament, when as neuertheleſſe hee was purpoſed to make the bloud of his Martyrs the ſeed of his Church, yet till the appointed time came, how ſtrangely and powerfully did hee preſerue them from the crueltie and malice of the *Iudg.*10.11.12. *Nehem.*9.28.

the Scribes, Phariſies, and the reſt of the Iewes, deliuering Peter, Paul and Silas out of priſon by the miniſterie of his Angels; and Paul himſelfe from the conſpiracie of the Iewes at Damaſcus, and afterwards at Ieruſalem, from their rage and vproares, out of deſperate dangers both by ſea and land; and laſtly, from the perſecution of bloody Nero, who like a rauenous Lyon (as himſelfe ſpeaketh) gaped vpon him, thirſting for his bloud. In a word, we may ſee this verified in the examples of all the faithfull, who depending vpon the Lord, haue had experience of his loue, power and truth of his promiſes, in their meruailous deliuerances out of all their afflictions. So the Pſalmiſt ſaith, that the Lord will be a refuge for the poore, a refuge in due time, euen in affliction, and that they who know his name will truſt in him, becauſe hee hath neuer failed them that ſeeke him. And elſe where ſpeaking out of his owne experience, both in himſelfe and others, hee ſaith, that great are the troubles of the righteous, but the Lord deliuereth them out of all. Yet ſetting downe the manifold miſeries and afflictions vnto which Gods people are in this life ſubject, he ſtill concludeth with this, as the foote of his ſong. So they cryed vnto the Lord in their troubles, and he deliuered them out of their diſtreſſe. The Prophet Eſay likewiſe out of his owne obſeruation ſpeaketh to the ſame purpoſe; Thou haſt (ſaith he) beene a ſtrength vnto the poore, euen a ſtrength vnto the needy in his trouble, a refuge againſt the tempeſt, and a ſhadow againſt the heate. The Prophet Aſariah alſo ſaith, that who ſo euer returned in his affliction to the Lord God of Iſrael, and ſought vnto him, he was found of him. And the ſonne of Syrach maketh a chalenge to whomſoeuer ſhould take vpon him to contradict this truth, namely that he ſhould find out one, who hath truſted in God, and beene forſaken of him in his afflictions. Looke (ſaith he) at the generations of old, and ſee, did euer any truſt in the Lord and was confounded? or did any abide in his feare, and was forſaken? or whom did hee euer diſpiſe that called vpon him? for the Lord is full of compaſſion and mercy, long ſuffering and very pittifull, and forgiueth ſinnes, and ſaueth in the time of affliction.

Tim.4.17.

ſa.9.9.10.

Pſal.34.19.

ſal.107.6.13.
28.

ſ25.4.

hron.15.4.

luſ.2.10 11.

Sect. 11.
f the great nſolation hich ariſeth tovs, by membring e deliue-nce of others r of their flictions.

The conſideration whereof ſhould exceedingly comfort vs in all our croſſes and calamities, ſeeing wee haue not onely Gods gracious promiſes of helpe and deliuerance out of all our troubles, but ſuch manifold experience of the performance of them, vnto all the faithfull who haue truſted in him, and repoſed themſelues vnder the ſhadow of his wings; eſpecially conſidering that there is in him no mutabilitie or ſhadow of change; and therefore if wee in like manner rely our ſelues with firme affiance, vpon his prouidence and promiſes, we ſhal find him alike ready to ſaue and deliuer vs out of all our afflictions. When therefore we ſeeme to bee forſaken of God in the day of our tribulation, let vs comfort our ſelues with Dauid and ſay, Our Fathers truſted in thee, they truſted in thee, and thou diddeſt deliuer them; they cryed vnto thee, and were deliuered; they truſted in thee, and were not confounded. For this is the right vſe of their deliuerances, that our faith and affiance may be confirmed and aſſured, that the Lord will bee alike gracious vnto vs, if wee reſt and rely vpon him. According to that of the Pſalmiſt. The Lord will be a refuge for the oppreſſed, a refuge in times of trouble: and they that know thy name will put their truſt in thee, for thou Lord haſt not forſaken them that ſeeke thee. And this vſe he affirmeth the faithfull would make, of his meruailous deliuerances; for hauing ſaid, that vpon his ſeeking the Lord, he was heard of him, and deliuered out of all his feare; hee inferreth, that others alſo ſhal looke vnto him, and runne vnto him, and their faces ſhal not be aſhamed, ſaying, This poore man cryed, and the Lord heard him and ſaued him out of all his troubles.

Pſal.22.4.5.

Pſal.9.9.10.

Pſal.34.4.5.6.

§. Sect. 12.
That we may comfort our ſelues in the remembrance of our owne deliuerances.

Yea, not onely may wee comfort our ſelues in the remembrance of theſe examples in former times, and thoſe which wee may daily obſerue in our owne dayes; but alſo in the conſideration of thoſe manifold and wonderful deliuerances, which either together with the reſt of Gods Church, or particularly by our ſelues, the Lord hath in mercy vouchſafed vnto vs. As namely our freedome from that moſt miſerable captiuity of ſinne and Sathan; our deliuerance from the greiuous yoake and ſlauiſh ſubjection, both in reſpect of body, ſoule and ſtate, vnto the Romiſh Antichriſt, by the preaching of the Goſpell; when as there was impoſſibilitie, in regard of his ſtrength, and our weakeneſſe of euer comming out of his cruell thraldome; our wonderfull deliuerance in the yeare 1588. from the inuaſion and bloudy intendments of the Pope and Spaniard; the raiſing vp of our heads hanging downe with ſorrow, and refreſhing our hearts dejected with feare, at the death of our late worthy and renowned Queene, by reparing our loſſe in our gracious Soueraigne, by whoſe meanes the ſincere preaching of the Goſpell and the flouriſhing eſtate of the Church and Kingdome is continued and preſerued. Finally, our ſtrange & almoſt miraculous deliuerance from that horrible conſpiracie, and vnmatchable treaſon of the bloud-thirſtie Papiſts, who had intended to blow vp at once both King and State, and within ſome few houres had brought their damnable deſigne into act and execution had not the Lord preuented them by his prouidence and power. Vnto which publicke dedeliuerances, euery one may adde all thoſe which they haue had experience of in their owne particular; as protection from enemies, preſeruation from dangers, ſupply of neceſſaries in the time of want, recouery of health after moſt dangerous ſickneſſes, and ſuch like; which being innumerable in reſpect of particular men, I leaue them to the conſideration of euery one, as they haue obſerued them out of their owne experience. All which gracious deliuerances from dangers and paſſed miſeries, ſhould ſerue as effectuall arguments to comfort our hearts in our preſent afflictions ſeeing in regard of Gods vnchangeable loue, they giue vnto vs aſſurance of the like freedome from our preſent afflictions, being ſo many pledges and pawnes of Gods mercy, truth and carefull prouidence, ſtill watching ouer vs. And thus David concludeth, that the ſame God who had deliuered him from the Lyon and Beare, would alſo ſaue him from the vncircumciſed Philiſtim. And Paul hauing experience of Gods power & loue, in deliuering him from that great affliction, which ſo much preſſed him, that hee doubted of his life, profeſſeth his confidence in God for helpe and ſuccour in all future dangers. And being deliuered out of the mouth of the Lyon; that is, from Nero that cruell perſecutour, he comforteth himſelfe, and ſtrengtheneth his faith in this aſſurance, that God would deliuer him from euery euill worke, and preſerue him vnto his heauenly Kingdome. Yea euen the heathen captaine calleth to remembrance the former deliuerances of him and his fellowes, that he might hereby comfort himſelfe and them, in aſſurance of like preſeruation from preſent troubles, whoſe example may conuince vs of greater weakneſſe and infidelitie, if hauing many more pledges and experiments of Gods loue and power, wee come ſhort of him in our courage and confidence. The which will lye as an heauy ſinne vpon our ſoules, and adde much to the waight and bitterneſſe of afflictions; ſeeing wee ſo much diſtruſt God, that wee will not onely, not giue credit to his word and promiſes, but not ſo much as beleeue him when hee hath, by former experience, put into our hands the pledges and pawnes of his loue and care ouer vs. And this was the ſinne of Aſa, who hauing been deliuered from the huge hoaſt, chariots and horſemen of the Æthiopians and Lubims; did not after this experience of Gods mercy reſt vpon him for deliuerance and victory ouer Baaſha king of Iſrael. As alſo of the Iſraelites, who hauing had continuall experience of Gods care, power and loue, in defending and prouiding for them, did in their next wants and dangers, ſhew ſo much diffidence and diſtruſt, as though they had neuer ſeene any of his works of wonder, as the Prophet doth at full declare it, in the 78. Pſalme.

1.*Sam.*17.37.

2.*Cor.*1.9.10.

2.*Tim.*4.17.18.

O ſocij (neque enim ignari ſumus ante malorum) O paſſi grauiora dabit Deus his quoque finem, Æneid. 1.

2.*Chro.*16.7.8.

*Pſal.*78.19.20.25.& v.41.

Chap. XXXIIII.

How wee may ſtrengthen our faith, hope and patience, when God deferreth to performe his promiſes concerning our deliuerance.

§. Sect. 1. How we are t vnderſtand Gods promiſe concerning our deliuerance, out of afflictions.

BVt againſt that which hath beene ſaid, ſome haply may object, that they haue knowne many who truſting in God, and waiting for his helpe, and feruently calling vpon him for deliuerance, haue notwithſtanding long liued, and at laſt died in their afflictions; yea, that they themſelues doe ſtill remaine in great miſery and tribulation, though they haue often by feruent prayer cryed vnto him, and depended vpon no other for ſuccour and freedome from their euils. To which I anſwere. Firſt, that all Gods ſeruants haue deliuerance out of their afflictions in due time, whether it bee by life or death; and therefore ſeeing our longeſt liues are ſhort and momentany, being compared with that euerlaſting happineſſe which is to follow after, the time of our afflictions cannot bee long, nor our deliuerance farre off, although it ſhould bee deferred to the day of diſſolution. Whereas contrariwiſe the puniſhments of the wicked being begunne, doe neuer end, their earthly miſeries leading and bringing them into thoſe euerlaſting and helliſh torments. Secondly, I anſwere, that Gods promiſes of deliuerance from temporarie afflictions are not abſolute, but alwayes to bee vnderſtood with this condition, if it will ſtand with his owne glory, and the ſpirituall good and ſaluation of the parties vnto whom hee maketh them. For otherwiſe our freedome from affliction would bee no benefit, but the greateſt hurt, Gods promiſe would degenerate into a threatning, bringing vnto vs euill in ſtead of good, and it would proue vnto vs the greateſt croſſe, not to bee thus croſſed and afflicted. Now often times Gods glory and our ſaluation, are more aduanced by the continuance, than by the remouall of our croſſes; as when God tryeth by them his graces in vs, that he may afterwards crowne them, and cauſeth our fight to bee ſo much more long and dangerous, that accordingly our enſuing victory may bee the more glorious; or when hee doth vſe them either for an hedge to keepe vs from leaping into the forbidden paſtures of carnall pleaſures; or for a fierie fornace to purge and purifie vs from the droſſe of our corruptions. In which caſes it is the greateſt freedome not to be freed; and Gods greateſt mercy towards vs, when as hee continueth vs in our temporary miſery. And therefore in all our croſſes and calamities wee are to comfort our ſelues in this aſſurance, that if it will ſtand with Gods glory, and the euerlaſting good of our ſoules, wee ſhall moſt certainely obtaine deliuerance;or otherwiſe, if it bee better for vs in theſe reſpects, that we ſhould continue in them, then will the Lord aſſuredly giue vnto vs ſuch ſtrength, patience and inward comforts of his Spirit, as ſhall enable vs to beare them without fainting and ſinking vnder them.

Sect.2.
he firſt means comfort is editation in ods word,
d firſt of odscom-andement waite.

But oftentimes the Lord deferreth his helpe and our deliuerance, either for our further tryall, or for the reſtraining or mortifying of our corruptions, or finally to moue vs hereby with more earneſtneſſe and feruencie of ſpirit to emplore his aſſiſtance; that being deliuered, we may be more thankfull for this benefit, the want whereof hath made vs to value and prize it, according to its worth. And when hee hath purified vs from our droſſe, and exerciſed our faith, hope, affiance and loue towards him, hee will then free vs out of all our miſeries. And therefore ſeeing we are vncertaine, whether our deliuerance bee neere at hand, or far off; whether the Lord will now, or hereafter, or not till the day of death giue vs freedome from the miſeries which afflict and grieue vs; therefore it behoueth vs to perſeuere and continue in faith and hope, with patience and humilitie to waite the Lords leaſure, and to ſtay the appointed time whether it be in life or death. The which duties, becauſe they are not onely hard, but meerely impoſſible to fleſh and blood; let vs earneſtly labour in the vſe of all good meanes which may enable vs to performe them. And theſe meanes enabling vs to waite and depend vpon God, when hee delayeth the accompliſhing of his promiſes, in deliuering vs out of our afflictions, doe either reſpect meditation or action. Concerning the former, if we would attaine vnto this hope and patience when God deferreth to helpe vs, wee muſt diligently meditate in his word, which alone containeth in it all ſuch comforts as may vphold vs in this tryall. For ſo Dauid ſaith of it; It is a comfort in my trouble, for thy promiſe hath quickned me. I haue remembred thy iudgements of olde, O Lord, and haue beene comforted. Thy ſtatutes haue beene my ſong in the houſe of my pilgrimage. And a little after. Except thy law had beene my delight, I ſhould now haue periſhed in mine affliction. More eſpecially wee muſt meditate on the commandement of God, whereby he enioyneth vs to waite vpon him, and to perſeuere in our faith, hope, and patience, notwithſtanding that hee deferreth to deliuer vs. So the Lord hauing by viſion, reuealed the deliuerance of the people of Iſrael from thoſe miſeries where with the Chaldeans did afflict them, willeth to attend his leiſure, for the accompliſhment of it. For the viſion (ſaith he) is yet for an appointed time, but at the laſt, it ſhall ſpeake, and not lye; though it tary, waite: for it ſhall ſurely come, and not ſtay. And the Apoſtle to this purpoſe vſeth that notable exhortation. Bee patient (ſaith he) brethren, vnto the comming of the Lord. Behold, the husband-man waiteth for the precious fruite of the Earth, and hath long patience for it, vntill he receiue the former and the later raine. Bee yee alſo patient therefore and ſettle your hearts, for the comming of the Lord draweth neere. So the ſon of Syrach exhorteth vs to prepare our ſoules for tentation, if wee come with a reſolution to ſerue the Lord, to ſet our hearts aright, and conſtantly endure, and not make haſt in time of trouble; and willeth all thoſe that feare the Lord to waite on his mercy, and not to goe aſide, (namely, by vſing indirect and vnlawfull meanes to deliuer themſelues) leſt they ſhould fall.

119.50,52.

ſ.92.

ba,2.3.

Iam.5.7.8.

Eccluſ.2.2.7.

§. Sect.3.
The ſecond
meanes to meditate on Gods gracious promiſes.

Secondly, let vs meditate and conſider, that vnto this commandement, the Lord hath added his moſt gracious promiſes, to encourage all to yeeld vnto it their obedience; with which the Booke of the Pſalmes abounds in euery place. So he ſaith, [a] The poore ſhall not alway be forgotten: the hope of the afflicted ſhall not periſh for euer. [b] Hope in the Lord, be ſtrong, and he ſhall comfort thine heart, and truſt in the Lord. [c] Behold the eye of the Lord is vpon them that feare him, and vpon them that truſt in his mercy; to deliuer their ſoules from death, and to preſerue them in famine. [d] The Lord redeemeth the ſoules of his ſeruants, and none that truſteth in him ſhall periſh. [e] Waite patiently vpon the Lord, and hope in him, &c. [f] For they that waite vpon the Lord ſhall inherit the land. And the Prophet Eſay aſſureth vs, that they who waite vpon the Lord ſhall renew their ſtrength; they ſhall lift vp their wings as the Eagles, they ſhall run and not be weary, and they ſhall walke, and not faint. And elſe where, Thou ſhalt know that I am the Lord; for they ſhall not bee aſhamed that waite for mee. And againe, Since the beginning of the World, they haue not heard, nor vnderſtood with the eare, neither hath the eye ſeene another God beſides thee, which doth ſo to him that waiteth for him. Yea not onely helpe and deliuerance are promiſed in this life to thoſe who waite vpon God, and perſeuere in their affiance and hope, when he deferreth the accompliſhment of his word; but alſo euerlaſting bleſſedneſſe in the life to come, according to the ſaying of the Prophet; The Lord is God of a iudgement; bleſſed are all they that waite for him. Yea, ſo are preſent and future benefits promiſed to thoſe that perſeuere in their hope and affiance, that they are all appropriated vnto them onely. For there is none attaineth vnto the crowne of glory, but he who hath firſt obtained full and finall victory ouer all the ſpirituall enemies of our ſaluation, and among the reſt ouer theſe tryals, afflictions & tribulations, which a Pſal.9.18.

b Pſal.27.14.
c Pſal.33.18.
d Pſal.34.22.
e Pſal.37.7.9.
f Pſal.41.31.

Chap.49.23. & 64.4.

Eſa.30.18.

Matth.24.13.
Apoc.2.7.10. 11.17.
1.Ioh.5.4.
Eſa.33.2.
Micha.7.7.

which fight againſt vs vnder the conduct of world, for he onely that indureth vnto the end ſhall be ſaued, as our Sauiour teacheth vs. He alone that ouercommeth is admitted to eate of the tree of life, which is in the middeſt of the Paradiſe of God; he that ouercommeth ſhal not be hurt of the ſecond death; he that is faithfull vnto the death, ſhall be crowned with the crowne of life. He that ouercommeth ſhall eate of the Manna that is hid, and ſhal haue that white ſtone, and in it a new name written, which no man knoweth, but he who receiueth it, &c. Now the meanes of obtaining this victory is to perſeuere and continue conſtant in our faith, affiance, hope, and patience, in all our afflictions and tribulations. For (as the Apoſtle ſaith) All that is borne of God, ouercommeth the world, and this is the victory that ouercommeth the world, euen our faith. And becauſe all Gods promiſes are made to thoſe and thoſe onely who perſeuere in theſe graces, and waite vpon the Lord at all times, and in all eſtates and conditions, therefore vpon this foundation the Church groundeth her prayers for helpe and deliuerance out of her afflictions. O Lord (ſaith ſhee) haue mercy vpon vs; wee haue waited for thee, bee thou which waſt their arme in the morning, our helpe alſo in time of trouble. And to the ſame purpoſe the Prophet Micah ſaith, Therefore I will looke vnto the Lord; I will waite for God my Sauiour: my God will heare me.

§. Sect.4.
The third meanes is to conſider that Gods promiſes are infallible.

Thirdly, let vs comfort our ſelues when God deferreth his promiſes, and continueth our conflict of afflictions, after wee haue long waited for helpe and deliuerance, by conſidering that in his good time they ſhall moſt certainely bee accompliſhed; ſeeing his truth being of his eſſence, it is no more poſſible that hee ſhould faile of his word, than it is poſſible that hee ſhould deny himſelfe; and therefore ſeeing he hath promiſed that wee ſhall ouercome the world, that wee ſhall haue ſtrength to endure all tentations, and haue an happy iſſue out of them, that if wee ſuffer with Chriſt, wee ſhall raigne with him, and that by many tribulations and afflictions we ſhall enter into the Kingdome of Heauen; we may be aſſured though our way bee long and foule, yet at laſt wee ſhall come to our iourneyes end; that after our painefull ſufferings, ſhall come our glorious raigning, and that after our dangerous and irkeſome fight, wee ſhall obtaine an happy victory, and bee crowned with euerlaſting glory. In which regard (as one ſaith) wee may be ſecure in fighting, ſeeing wee are ſure of ouercomming. O onely ſafe fight, which for and with Chriſt is vndertaken; in which the Chriſtian ſouldier neither wounded, nor ouerthrowne, nor troden vnder foote, no nor ſlaine can looſe the victory, if he manfully ſtand to it, and doe not betake himſelfe to a ſhameful flight. For the onely meanes of looſing the victory, is by ſhamefull and ſinfull flying from our enemies. By flying wee may looſe it, but by dying wee cannot. For bleſſed is he that dyeth fighting, becauſe he ſhall be crowned dying. But woe bee vnto him who by cowardly auoiding the conflict, doth looſe both the victory and the crowne.

Securus potes pugnare, cum ſecurus es de victoria. O verè tuta pro Chriſto & cum Chriſto pugna &c. Bernard epiſt. ad Robertum nepotem epiſt. 1.

§. Sect.5.
The fourth meanes, is to conſider tha God vſually deferreth to helpe thoſe who are moſt ſtrong in grac and moſt dea vnto him.

Fourthly, let vs conſider, that the Lord vſually exerciſeth the faith, hope, affiance and patience of thoſe who are moſt deare vnto him, and enriched with the greateſt meaſure of theſe ſauing graces, with theſe delayes, and deferreth the accompliſhment of his promiſes vnto thoſe eſpecially, who haue receiued the greateſt ſtrength to endure this tryall. Neither doth the Lord ſhoote his moſt pearcing bullets of tentations againſt his weakeſt armour, which would but diſgrace his workmanſhip, and in mortall manner wound the wearer; but hee diſchargeth them onely againſt ſuch as hee hath made high proofe, which repell the ſhot without harme, and ſet forth the ſkill of him that made it. Hee will not lay a great waight vpon weake ſhoulders, which would cruſh them downe and make them vnprofitable for vſe, but hee loadeth thoſe with the heauieſt burthen, whom he hath firſt enabled with ſufficient ſtrength. He will not leane too hard vpon his bruiſed reedes, nor caſt water vpon his new kindled fire, which hee would haue encreaſe to a great flame; but hee putteth to the greateſt ſtreſſe his moſt ſolid timber and heart of Oke, and caſteth theſe waters of tryall vpon ſuch a throughly inflamed zeale, as is but the more encreaſed in heate by this oppoſition and reluctation. And thus the Lord dealt with Abraham, the Father of the faithfull; for hauing made many notable promiſes vnto him and his poſterity, hee kept him a long time without any iſſue, and hauing aſſured him, that in his ſeed both himſelfe and all the Nations of the Earth ſhould be bleſſed; he exerciſed his faith in this promiſe, by deferring the accompliſhment thereof; vntill he and Sarah his wife were growne ſo olde that it ſeemed impoſſible in nature to bee performed. So hee giueth Iacob the bleſſing, and promiſeth him the land of Canaan in poſſeſſion, but afterwards he is faine to waite for the accompliſhment twentie yeares, as a ſtranger and ſeruant in another countrey. He promiſeth Ioſeph many priuiledges, and the ſoueraigntie ouer his brethren, but in the meane while they vſe him at their pleaſure, they ſell him for a ſlaue into Egypt, where hee paſſeth many dangers, and endureth many miſeries, before he ſeeth any likelyhood of the performance of Gods promiſe. And finally, thus hee vſed Dauid, a man according to his owne heart, for after that he had choſen him for King ouer his people, and had aſſured him by his promiſe, that hee ſhould ſit vpon the Royall Throne, hee deferreth the accompliſhment thereof for many yeares, in the meane while expoſing him to the perſecution of his enemies, and to ſuch innumerable troubles and tentations, that his faith ſometimes receiued foyles, and brought into queſtiō the truth of Gods word. And this appeareth in many places of the Pſalmes, where hee maketh theſe and ſuch like complaints. How long wilt thou forget me, O Lord, for euer? How long wilt thou hide thy face from me? How long ſhall I take counſell within my ſelfe, hauing wearineſſe daily in mine heart? How long ſhall mine enemies be exalted aboue me? Yea, hee cryeth out as one vtterly caſt off; My God, my God, why haſt thou forſaken me, and art ſo farre from my health, and from the words of my roaring? O my God, I cry by day, but thou heareſt not, and by night, but haue no audience. And againe. Will the Lord abſent himſelfe for euer? and will he ſhew no more fauour? is his mercy cleane gone for euer? doth his promiſe faile for euermore? hath God forgotten to be mercifull? hath he ſhut vp his tender mercies in diſpleaſure? and I ſaid, this is my death. Yea, ſo was his faith ſhaken with theſe long delays, that hee ſaid in his feare all men (and among the reſt the Prophet Samuel, who had reported vnto him Gods promiſes of the Crowne and Kingdome) were but lyars and deceiuers; and profeſſeth that his eye fayled in expecting Gods ſaluation, and the accompliſhment of his iuſt promiſe. And euen thus the Lord dealeth with the faithfull in theſe dayes; for howſoeuer when wee are babes in Chriſt, and weake in faith, he will not breake the bruiſed reed, nor quench the ſmoaking flax, and therefore is pleaſed to performe his promiſes ſpeedily, and to encourage vs in his ſeruice with the liberall wages of his rich and plentifull benefits; yet when wee are growne ſtrong in grace, and are endued with a great meaſure of faith, affiance, hope and patience, he will not lay light burthens vpon our able ſhoulders, nor exerciſe theſe gifts with his ſlighteſt tryals; but hee will prooue vs with great and dangerous tentations, and ſeeme to leaue vs in them without helpe and deliuerance for a long time together. And therefore, when this befalleth vs, we are not to be diſcomfited and diſcouraged, yea, rather we are to rejoyce in theſe tryals and afflictions, ſeeing they are ſignes of Gods greater loue towards vs, and that he hath vouchſafed vnto vs a greater meaſure of his gifts and graces; and comfortably to attend Gods good leaſure for our deliuerance, ſeeing we know that the Lord delighteth in them that feare him, and attend vpon his mercy: as the Pſalmiſt teacheth vs.

l.13.1.

.22.1,2.

77.8,9.

l.116.11.

l.119.123.

l.147.11.

§. Sect. 6.

The fift meanes is to conſider that God neuer failed to performe his promiſes, at leſt to thoſe that haue waited on him.

Fourthly, let vs conſider, that howſoeuer the Lord hath made his faithfull and beloued Seruants to waite long for the accompliſhment of his promiſes, yet at laſt he neuer failed to bee as good as his word. For though hee long delayed it, yet in the end hee gaue Abraham children; he made way for the returne of Iacob into his owne Country; hee aduanced Ioſeph aboue all his brethren; and deliuering Dauid from all his perſecutions, he ſet him vpon the throne of the Kingdome, and made him happily to weld the Royall Scepter. For ſo himſelfe ſpeaketh. I waited patiently (ſaith he) for the Lord, and hee inclined vnto me, and heard my cry, he brought me alſo out of the horrible pit, out of the myrie clay, and ſet my feet vpon the rocke, and ordered my goings. And thus the Lord ſuffered his promiſes to be long vnperformed vnto the people of Iſraell, whileſt they remayned in the Egyptian ſeruitude, but no ſooner the day came which hee had appointed, but they were preſently freed out of their cruell bondage. And after he had brought them into the promiſed Land, he tried and corrected them with many afflictions, and ſuffered them to be led captiue of their enemies, deferring their deliuerance out of theſe troubles, till hee had cauſed them to waite long, and had made tryall of their faith and patience, by abſenting himſelfe for a time, and with-holding from them his promiſed helpe. So the Church ſaith. Therefore will I waite vpon the Lord, that hath hid his face from the houſe of Iacob, and I will looke for him. And againe, In that day ſhall men ſay, loe this is our God, wee haue waited for him, and he will ſaue vs; this is the Lord, we haue waited for him, we will rejoyce, and be joyfull in his ſaluation. And in another place, Wee, O Lord, haue waited for thee in the way of thy iudgements, the deſire of our ſoule is to thy Name, and to the remembrance of thee. After which expectation they were not diſappointed of their hope, for when the ſeuenty yeares were expired, which was the appointed time of their deliuery, then maugre the malice, policy and power of all their enemies, they were graciouſly freed out of this their captiuity. And therefore ſeeing we haue ſuch aſſurance of the truth of Gods promiſes, and ſo manifold experience in others and in our ſelues, that his delays though they ſometimes cauſe doubting, yet they neuer bring vnto vs any danger; let vs by a liuely and conſtant faith lay hold vpon them, euen when they are long deferred, being aſſured that if with our Father Abraham, we tarry patiently, we ſhall at length with him enjoy the promiſe. And ſo ſhall we haue a teſtimony vnto our owne conſcience, that we are endued with a true and liuely faith, when as we doe not make haſte (as the Prophet ſpeaketh) but waite the Lords leiſure for the ac-

*Pſal.*101.1,2.

*Exod.*10.41.

Eſay 8.17.

Eſay 25.9.

*Chap.*26.8.

*Heb.*6.15.

Eſay 28.16.

com-accompliſhment of the promiſes. For theſe two goe together and admit of no ſeparation; but as faith cauſeth hope, being (as the Apoſtle ſaith) The ground of things hoped for, and the euidence of things which are not ſeene; ſo hope accompanieth and demonſtrateth faith, expecting the appointed time, when as the things beleeued ſhall be enjoyed. Whereas on the other ſide we bewray our incredulity, when we will not hopefully waite vpon God, for the accompliſhment of his promiſes, but couet in poſt haſte to haue our deſires ſatisfied; reſoluing that if God will not giue vs lawfull meanes of freedome from danger, or deliuer vs out of our afflictions when wee would haue him, that we will no longer attend his leiſure, but vſe ſuch meanes as are next hand, not waighing or regarding whether they be lawfull or vnlawfull, ſo they bee but likely to ſatisfie our deſires in the remoual of our croſſes. And of this haſte we haue an example in Iehoram, who profeſſeth in plain termes that he would not attend on the Lord any longer than pleaſed him, but wold vſe his own means for his deliuerance. And in many men who liue in theſe dayes, who will not waite on Gods leaſure for their recouery of health, but ſend to Witches and Wizards; nor for the repayring of their poore eſtates in the vſe of lawfull meanes; but fall either to oppreſſion and violence, or to fraud and deceitfull dealing.

Heb.11.1.

2.Kings 6.33.

§. Sect. 7.
The ſixth meanes is to conſider that the Lord deferreth to deliuer vs for the furthering of our ſpirituall good and ſaluation.

Fiftly, let vs conſider, that if the Lord deferreth to performe his promiſes for our deliuerance, he doth it not becauſe he is vnable or vnwilling to helpe vs, or becauſe hee taketh any delight in our miſeries and afflictions; but as he doth at the firſt inflict vpon vs theſe tryals and chaſtizements for our ſpirituall good and the furthering of our euerlaſting ſaluation; ſo he onely continueth them ſo long as is fit for the effecting and perfecting of theſe his gracious ends. As for example he afflicteth vs for our tryall, that his graces vouchſafed vnto vs may bee exerciſed and manifeſted to the glory of him that gaue them; and encreaſing of the happineſſe of thoſe that haue them; and therefore if after the renewing of our faith and ſerious and ſound repentance, our croſſes are continued, we may be aſſured that the Lord is pleaſed to vſe vs further as the inſtruments of his glory, and that hee is purpoſed by continuing the conflict to magnifie our victory, and to make our crowne much more glorious. Sometimes alſo hee afflicteth vs, that hereby our ſinnes and corruptions may bee mortified and ſubdued, and wee purged and purified by this fiery tryall: and therefore if after much praying and earneſt ſuing wee are not freed, we are to know that the droſſe of corruption is not yet ſufficiently conſumed, and we refined and purified, ſeeing the Lord continueth vs ſtill in this fiery furnace; and that the ſores of ſinne are not yet cured, nor the core of corruption yet drawne out, ſeeing our skilfull and louing Chyrurgeon doth ſtill cauſe theſe corraſiues to be applyed vnto vs. More eſpecially he vſeth theſe bitter medicines to wean vs from the loue of the World and worldly vanities, and therefore if after much loathing and complayning wee are ſtill compelled to taſte of them, we may hence conclude, that our loue and affection ſtill too much doteth on theſe earthly things, and that wee haue as yet a deſire to ſucke this hurtfull milke, and to returne vnto theſe poyſonous breſts, if the Lord did not ſtill annoint them with the Worme-wood & Gall of theſe temporary afflictions. So the Lord doth afflict vs, that his ſanctifying and ſauing graces may bee confirmed and encreaſed in vs: and therefore if they are ſtill continued vpon vs after we haue often ſued for help and deliuerance, let vs know that we haue not as yet profited by them as we ought, and that in infinite loue the Lord will not leaue vs, vntill hee haue brought vs to greater perfection. More eſpecially we are corrected by the Lord, that by his chaſtizements our faith, repentance and obedience might be encreaſed, and therefore if after earneſt ſuite we are not eaſed of them, we may aſſure our ſelues, that our faith yet needeth more exerciſe, and longer and greater experience of Gods loue, power & truth, in moderating our afflictions and ſupporting vs with the power of his might, that we may be able to beare them; and that wee haue not yet, as we ought, bewayled our former ſins, hated our preſent corruptions, nor firmely (as wee ſhould) reſolued to labour in the vſe of the meanes for the mortifying and ſubduing them; and for the time to come, to ſerue the Lord in holines and righteouſneſſe, with zeale, integrity and vprightneſſe of heart. Finally, the Lord bringeth vs into theſe dangerous ſtraights of trouble and miſery, that wee may flee vnto him by hearty prayer for helpe and deliuerance; and therefore if wee haue already prayed often, and are not yet heard according to our deſires; let vs perſwade our ſelues, that the Lord ſtoppeth not his eares to our ſuites, but ſeeing that we are cold and negligent in ſollicıting of them, hee doth by theſe ſeeming refuſals and temporary repulſes, but make vs the more feruent and earneſt in ſuing for his helpe; and in begging ſuch benefits and deliuerances, as are much endeared vnto vs by his momentany denials and our owne wants; as it notably appeareth in the example of the woman of Canaan, who receiued at Chriſts hands diuers ſore repulſes, not becauſe hee was purpoſed to deny her requeſt, (for ſo gracious was he, that he neuer gaue final repulſe to ſuch humble ſuiters in their lawfull deſires) but becauſe hee would haue her proſecute it with greater earneſtneſſe, to which purpoſe one ſaith, that God in tribulation ſtirring vp the faith to aske, and himſelfe deferring to grant, doth not deny his ayde, but only intendeth and inlargeth our deſire. And therefore if being impatient of our croſſes we ſhould immoderately couet to haue them remoued before wee haue by them attained vnto theſe ends, wee doe in effect deſire that our corrections ſhould become (like thoſe of the Iſraelites) vaine and fruitleſſe. If we ſhould ſue to haue the playſters remoued, and the bitter potions taken away, before our ſores and ſickneſſe of ſinne be healed and cured, wee doe thereby deſire that the Lord would giue vs ouer as a deſperate cure, and leaue vs to rot and periſh in our diſeaſes and corruptions.

Math,15,22,2

Aug. in ſerm.

.1.30.

.Sect.8.
he ſeuenth enes is to ſider, that e Lord often es deliue-
th the faith-l out of afction, when ir eſtate meth moſt ſperate.

Sixtly, let vs conſider that the Lord oftentimes commeth to our ayde, and ſaueth and deliuereth vs out of our troubles, when wee are brought into the greateſt extremities, and paſt all hope of recouering out of our miſeries, for then is he moſt glorified and his wiſdome magnified, when as we being brought vnto our wits end, and ſeeing no poſſible meanes of eſcaping out of our tribulations, he findeth an eaſie paſſage and egreſſe out of them; then is the Omnipotency of his power manifeſted, when he deliuereth vs out of ſuch euils as doe quell and ouerwhelme all humane ſtrength; then is the proweſſe and might of our General beſt knowne, when he ſupporteth vs in moſt terrible conflicts, and giueth vs victory ouer inuincible enemies, wee ſeeing no ſtrength in our ſelues to make reſiſtance. And finally, then principally we are occaſioned to extoll and prayſe our heauenly Chyrurgion and Phyſician, when as he cureth our incurable wounds, and recouereth vs out of our moſt deſperate diſeaſes. An example whereof wee haue in Abraham, whom God continued childleſſe (though he had made gracious promiſes vnto him of multiplying his ſeed) vntill he and his wife were ſo ſtricken in age, that there was no hope remayning: And yet hee aboue hope, beleeuing vnder hope, that hee ſhould be the father of many Nations, as the Apoſtle ſpeaketh, And not weake in faith, neither conſidering his owne body, which was now dead, being almoſt an hundred yeare old, nor the deadneſſe of Sarahs wombe, but tarrying patiently, he did at length enioy the promiſe. So he promiſed the people of Iſraell that hee would bring them out of Egypt, and giue them poſſeſſion of the Land of Promiſe; but this hee performeth not whileſt Pharaoh liued, who was their friend, when as in reaſon there might haue beene ſome likelihood of it, but when they were moſt endangered to the rage and malice of their tyrannicall enemies, and had no appearance of hope to bee freed out of that cruell bondage, or to ſhake that iron yoke from off their necke. And thus afterwards hee deliuered them from the captiuity of Babylon, not when they were in their chiefe floure and ſtrength, and able to make ſome ſhift for themſelues; but when their caſe was vtterly deſperate, the Lord freed them out of this miſery, plucking them (as the Prophet ſpeaketh) like firebrands out of the fire. So he ſaued Dauid when he ſeemed vnto himſelfe vtterly forſaken, and deliuered him out of the hands of Saul, not by keeping him farre off from danger, but when hauing enuironed him about with a ſtrong army, he was euen ready to ſeize vpon him. And thus our Sauiour being in the ſhip with his Diſciples, did ſeeme to neglect them in their greateſt danger, and did not awake out of ſleepe, nor ariſe to deliuer them, till the ſhip was couered with waues, and ready to ſinke. And afterwards hee ſuffered them to be toſſed with a tempeſt, & by his miraculous walking on the Sea to be aſtoniſhed with feare; and then being brought into the laſt extremity, and paſt hope of eſcaping out of danger, he giueth vnto them comfort, by aſſuring them of his preſence. Finally, hee would not preſerue Lazarus life by going vnto him in the time of his ſickneſſe, nor yet when he was newly dead and buried, but he purpoſely ſtayeth from him foure dayes at the leaſt, after his death, and then goeth and raiſeth him to life. Neither did he by his Angell deliuer Peter out of priſon preſently after he was apprehended, but the very night before that Herod intended to proceed to his execution, when as he was ſtrongly guarded betweene two Souldiers, bound with chaines, and had the Keepers beſides wayting before the priſon doore, euen then when all hope was paſt to naturall reaſon, he ſaued and deliuered him out of that imminent danger. And ſo to conclude this point with an example which is freſh in memory, the Lord ſaued vs from the Gunpowder Treaſon, not by diſcouering it when it was firſt plotted, but euen a few houres before it ſhould haue beene put in execution, when as in humane reaſon it was much more likely to haue been ſtill concealed, then to haue beene kept ſecret ſo long before, eſpecially conſidering that beſides thoſe who were actours in this Tragedie, they had ſo many lookers on, who were well acquainted with their courſes and proceedings. The which experience of Gods mercy and power in deliuering vs and others, out of moſt deſperate dangers, ſhould mooue vs ſtill to depend and waite patiently vpon God in all our troubles and afflictions, not onely when we haue any likelihood of helpe, but when we ſeeme paſt all hope of recouery, ſeeing euen then the Lord is as able and ready to ſaue and deliuer vs out of theſe miſeries; and will aſſuredly doe it in his good time, if it will ſtand with his owne glory, our ſpirituall good and the euer-

m.4.18.

4.19.

*Zach.*3.2.

*Pſal.*22.1.

1.*Sam.*23,26.

*Mark.*4.37,38.

Iohn 11.6.

laſting ſaluation of our bodies and ſoules. And therefore in our greateſt extremities, let this conſideration moue vs to wait vpon God, and rayſing and encouraging our dejected and fainting mindes, let vs ſay with the Pſalmiſt, Why art thou caſt downe my ſoule, and vnquiet within me? Waite on God, for I will yet giue him thankes for the helpe of his preſence.

Pſal.42.5.

§. Sect.9. The eighth meanes is to conſider, that God waiteth vpon vs to ſaue and deliuer vs in the fitteſt time.

Laſtly, if we would with patience wait the Lords leiſure when hee deferreth to helpe vs in affliction, let vs conſider, that God no leſſe waiteth vpon vs to doe vs good, than we to receiue it, expecting a conuenient time, when as hee may moſt fitly and ſeaſonably extend his mercy in our deliuerance, both for his owne glory, and the furthering of our ſaluation; according to that of the Prophet; Yet therefore will the Lord waite, that he may haue mercy vpon you; and therefore he will be exalted, that hee may haue compaſſion vpon you. The conſideration whereof ſhould moue vs, with patience to attend Gods leiſure for our freedome out of miſery; for if the Lord waite vpon vs to ſhew mercy, much more ſhould wee waite that wee may be partakers of it. If he be content to watch for the moſt conuenient time of deliuering vs out of trouble, and will not when it is come deferre his helpe (for who waiteth longer than he muſt needs, and who that is wiſe letteth paſſe his beſt opportunity of doing that good which he entendeth?) then how much more ſhould we watch and waite with patience and comfort till this ſeaſonable time come, when as it is beſt and fitteſt, that this promiſed mercy ſhould be emparted vnto vs. Furthermore, let vs conſider, that our greateſt and longeſt afflictions ſhall not be able to ſeparate vs from the infinite and euerlaſting loue of God, as the Apoſtle telleth vs; but as in loue hee began to correct vs, ſo in the ſame loue he continueth our chaſtiſements, that hee may by mortifying our ſinne preſerue vs from condemnation, and by perfecting his gifts and graces in vs, make vs fit for his euerlaſting Kingdome; being euer ready in his tender compaſſion to vphold and ſtrengthen vs in our greateſt conflicts, and to giue vs victory by deliuering vs from them, when as it ſhall be moſt ſeaſonable for our profit and beſt aduantage. Finally, let vs remember, that though our croſſes and afflictions in this World be exceeding grieuous and tedious, yet they are light and momentany in compariſon of thoſe intolerable tortures and euerlaſting torments of Hell fire, from which the Lord in his infinite goodneſſe hath ſaued vs; vſing for this purpoſe the afflictions and ſufferings of his deare Son, as the onely meritorious cauſe, and our afflictions who are the members of this body, as an inferiour, yet effectuall meanes of our freedome from theſe euils. And on the other ſide, let vs call to minde thoſe vnſpeakable and eternall ioyes which we ſhall come vnto by this rough and thorny way of afflictions; which can in no compariſon bee matched with our miſeries; For the afflictions of this preſent world, are not worthy the glory which ſhall be reuealed, ſeeing they being light and momentany, doe cauſe vnto vs a farre moſt excellent and eternall waight of glory, and being tolerable to him who beareth them vpon the ſhoulders of patience; and temporary, not out-laſting the vncertaine time of our ſhort (though longeſt) liues, doe bring vs vnto an inheritance, immortall and vndefiled, and that fadeth not away, reſerued for vs in the Heauens, and that not through our owne power, which would ſoone faile, and at euery encounter hazard our ſaluation, but through the omnipotent power of God, out of whoſe almighty hand none can pull vs. In which regard we haue juſt cauſe of reioycing, though now for a ſeaſon (if need require) wee are in heauineſſe through manifold tentations, ſeeing the tryall of our faith, which is hereby exerciſed, being much more precious than gold that periſheth, ſhall be found vnto our prayſe, and honour and glory, at the appearing of Ieſus Chriſt, as the Apoſtle ſpeaketh.

Eſay 30.18.

Rom.8.35.

1.Cor.11.32.

Rom.8.18.

2.Cor.4.17.

Verſe 6,7.

1.Pet.1.4.

Chap. XXXV.

Of certaine duties which wee are to performe for the ſtrengthening of our faith and patience, when God deferreth to deliuer vs out of our afflictions, and of our thanksgiuing when we are deliuered.

§. Sect.1. The firſt dutie is often to renew our repentance.

ANd theſe are the things whereon wee muſt meditate for the confirming of our faith, affiance, hope and patience, when God deferreth the accompliſhment of his promiſes, and doth not deliuer vs from our croſſes and afflictions; now wee are to entreate briefly of certaine duties to be performed of vs for the ſame purpoſe which reſpect action. And firſt wee ought carefully when God continueth vpon vs theſe croſſes and corrections, to renew oftentimes our repentance towardes God, and faith in Ieſus Chriſt. Vnto the former, namely the practice of renewed repentance in the time of our afflictions, the Scriptures euery where exhort vs. So the Lord by the Prophet ſtirreth vp the people in captiuity to the performance of this duty. Turne vnto me, ſaith the Lord of hoſts, and I will turne vnto you, ſaith the Lord of hoſts. And the Apoſtle Iames likewiſe perſwadeth vnto it, Draw neere vnto God, and hee will draw neere vnto you, cleanſe your hands you ſinners, and purge your hearts yee wauering minded. Suffer afflictions, and ſorrow yee, and weepe; let your laughter be turned into mourning, and your ioy into heauineſſe. Neither

Zach.1.3.

Iames 4.8,9.

ther are wee in time of affliction to performe this duty after an ordinary manner, but with great earneſtneſſe, vehemency, and with all the powers of our heart and ſoules, according to that of the Prophet; Turne you vnto me with all your heart, with faſting, weeping and mourning; and rent your heart and not your clothes, and turne vnto the Lord your God. Vnto which earneſt and ſound conuerſion the people of God exhort one another in the land of their captiuity. Let vs (ſay they) ſearch and try our wayes, and turne againe to the Lord; Let vs lift vp our hearts with our hands vnto God in the Heauens. And thus ſeriouſly haue the faithfull from time to time renewed their repentance, when they haue by the hand of God beene brought into trouble and extremity, as we may ſee in the example of the Iſraelites oppreſſed by the Philiſtimes, who humbled themſelues greatly, and wept ſo abundantly, that they are ſaid to haue drawne water (as with buckets out of a Well) and to haue powred it out before the Lord. So Dauid ſaith, that he fainted in his mourning, and cauſed his bed euery night to ſwimme, and watered his couch with his teares. And among the people of the Iewes being in that great danger through Hamans Conſpiracie, it is ſaid, that there was great ſorrow and faſting, and weeping, and mourning, and many lay in ſackcloth and aſhes. And in the time of their captiuity, the Prophet ſaith of the whole Church, that ſhee wept continually in the night, that her teares did runne downe by her cheekes, hauing none to comfort her. Which examples wee are to imitate when wee are in affliction, if we would haue our faith aſſured in Gods promiſes, when he deferreth to performe them; and our patience ſo confirmed that wee may endure and beare all croſſes with comfort and contentment. For if our new committed ſinnes, ſince the time of our firſt and generall repentance doe lie vpon our conſciences vnrepented of, defiling our bodies and ſoules with their guilt and filthineſſe; they will exceedingly weaken our aſſurance in Gods promiſes of helpe and deliuerance, and accordingly diſable our patience, when as faith and hope, the chiefe pillars vpon which it reſteth are taken from it.

Ioel.2.12,13.

Lam.3.41,42.

1.Sam.7.6.

Pſal.6.6.

Eſt.4.3.

Lament.1.2.

§. Sect.2.
That vnleſſe we performe this duty of repentance, wee can haue no aſſurance of helpe and deliuerance.

For without this renewed repentance we cannot with any good ground of reaſon waite vpon God for freedome, and deliuerance with aſſurance and expectance of his helpe. Firſt, becauſe the promiſes are made vnto thoſe onely who forſake their ſinnes by true repentance, according to that of Azariah the Prophet, The Lord is with you, while yee be with him; and if yee ſeeke him, he will bee found of you; but if yee forſake him, hee will forſake you. So the Prophet Eſay, Seeke the Lord whileſt hee may be found, call yee vpon him whileſt hee is neere. Let the wicked forſake his wayes, and the vnrighteous his owne imaginations, and returne vnto the Lord: and he will haue mercy vpon him, and to our God, for he is ready to forgiue. And Ezechiah to the ſame purpoſe ſaith to the people: If yee returne vnto the Lord, your brethren and your children, ſhall find mercy before them that led them captiues, and they ſhal returne vnto this land, for the Lord your God is gracious, and will not turne away his face from you, if yee conuert vnto him. And the Apoſtle telleth vs, that if wee iudge our ſelues, wee ſhall not be iudged of the Lord. So that ſtill repentance is the condition of Gods promiſes, vpon the performance whereof they are likewiſe performed, according to that of Azariah, Whoſoeuer returned in his affliction to the Lord God of Iſrael, and ſought him, he was found of them. Eſpecially when as this duty is performed with all earneſtneſſe and ſerious heartineſſe, becauſe this hath a more ſpeciall promiſe from the Lord, ſpeaking after this manner by his Prophet, Ye ſhall ſeeke me and finde me, becauſe yee ſhall ſeeke me with all your heart. And conſequently, they who liue in their ſinnes without repentance, cannot apply vnto themſelues theſe promiſes, becauſe they doe not performe the condition, and ſo failing and faltring in their faith and hope, they eaſily fall into murmuring and impatiencie. Secondly, it is Gods maine end in correcting vs, to bring vs by his chaſtiſements vnto vnfained repentance, and therefore if impenitently we continue in our ſinnes, wee cannot waite vpon God for helpe and deliuerance, ſeeing ſo he ſhould be fruſtrate of of his principall end, but may juſtly expect that hee will double and redouble our afflictions, vntill according to his purpoſe hee hath brought vs vnto repentance and amendment; vnleſſe wee be in the number of thoſe whom hee giueth ouer as a deſperate cure, reſeruing them for euerlaſting and helliſh condemnation. So one ſaith, that God can this preſent day free and deliuer vs out of all our afflictions, but hee will not doe it till hee ſee vs purged and purified from our ſins, ſoundly conuerted from our euill wayes, and our repentance not onely begun, but well ſetled and throughly confirmed in vs. And as the gold-ſmith will not take his gold out of the furnace, vntill he ſee that it is well purified from the droſſe, becauſe this was the end why hee caſt it in; ſo the Lord will not deliuer vs out of this furnace of afflictions, vntill the droſſe of ſinne bee by our repentance purged away, becauſe this was the end that moued him to caſt vs into it. Thirdly wee muſt knowe and remember that our ſins are the cauſes of our afflictions, & therefore till they be taken away by vnfained repentance, wee can haue no hope of the remouall of our croſſes; for as the fire muſt

2.Chron.15.2.

Eſay 55.6,7.

2.Chron.30.9.

1.Cor.11.31.

2 Chron.15.4.

Ier.29.13.

Chryſoſt.ad Pop. Antioch.Homil. 4. de patientia.

needs burne vs which wee cary in our booſomes vnleſſe it bee caſt out, or extinguiſhed with water, becauſe it is an effect which inſeparably accompanieth its very eſſence and nature: ſo will this fire of ſinne continually ſcorch vs with the heate of puniſhment, ſeeing they cannot bee ſeuered aſunder, vnleſſe we do put out and extinguiſh them, by caſting vpon them the water and teares of vnfained repentance. Fourthly, ſin is the ſting of afflictions, which being pulled out they become harmeleſſe; but if it ſtill remaine in them, it will infuſe into them ſuch a tormenting & deadly poyſon, that the paine wil grow intolerable, & impoſſible to be endured with any patience. It doth exceedingly wound and weaken our faith, making vs to doubt of Gods loue towards vs, ſeeing we ſhew in our obedience ſo ſmall fruits of loue towards him; which wounds will not bee cured till ſinne the ſting that made them bee pulled out, and the ſores waſhed and bathed by vnfained repentance. And the guilt of ſinne is vnto the conſcience an intolerable burthen, which being added to the burthen of afflictions cannot poſſibly bee ſuſtained with humane ſtrength; and therefore it is no way able to beare them with patience, vnleſſe wee lighten our loade, caſting away ſinne that preſſeth downe, by turning vnto God in vnfained repentance. And then bearing no burthen of our owne impoſing, but that alone which God layeth vpon vs, wee ſhall eaſily ſuſtaine it with comfort and contentment, both becauſe it is light in waight, as the Apoſtle telleth vs, and alſo wee haue aſſured hope by Gods gracious promiſes, that within a ſhort time we ſhal be freed from it.

§. Sect. 3. The ſecond duty is often to renew our faith in Gods promiſes.

Secondly, hauing thus renewed our repentance, wee are in the next place to renew our faith, applying vnto our ſelues all the gracious promiſes of the Goſpell, made vnto repentant ſinners, eſpecially thoſe which concerne the free forgiueneſſe of ſinne, both in reſpect of the guilt and puniſhment, and our deliuerance out of all our afflictions and calamities in Gods due and appointed time, when as it will moſt ſtand with his glory and the euerlaſting good of our owne ſoules. Whereby our faith being renewed and ſtrengthened, we ſhall be the better enabled hopefully to expect the performance of Gods promiſes, although the things promiſed bee not ſubiect to ſight, and aboue the reach of naturall reaſon, for as the Apoſtle ſaith; Faith is the ground of things which are hoped for, and the euidence of things which are not ſeene. And although God tryeth vs with many delayes, yet wee will patiently attend his leiſure; for as the Prophet ſpeaketh, He that beleeueth ſhal not make haſte; becauſe he is aſſured by faith, that though hee haue not from God helpe and deliuerance, when he firſt deſireth it, yet he ſhall moſt aſſuredly obtaine it, when as it will tend to his greateſt benefit.

Heb.11.1.

Eſa.28.16.

§. Sect. 4. The third duty is true humility, whereby we meekely ſubmit our ſelues to Gods good pleaſure.

The third meanes whereby wee may bee enabled to waite vpon God, when he deferreth to accompliſh his promiſes, and to deliuer vs out of our troubles and afflictions, is to labour after true humilitie, whereby knowing and acknowledging our owne ignorance, which maketh vs vnable to diſcerne truely what is good or hurtfull for vs, wee doe wholly deny our ſelues and our owne wiſedome, and reſigne our ſelues ouer freely and wholy vnto God, to be ruled and ordered by him; as he thinketh good, whether it bee to liue in proſperity or affliction, plenty or pouerty, health or ſickneſſe, life or death, being perſwaded, that hee is infinite in wiſedome and knoweth what is beſt; infinite in power, and therefore able to bring it to paſſe maugre the malice and might of all oppoſers, and infinite alſo in loue and compaſſion; and therefore willing and ready to doe that which in his wiſdome he ſeeth to bee fitteſt for vs. And this ground of patience the Apoſtle propoundeth, where hee ſaith, that the Lord knoweth to deliuer the godly out of tentation, that is, he ſo knoweth, that hee alſo both can and will powerfully effect it. Vpon which foundation we muſt alſo build our patience and comfort, when as we continue long in trouble and affliction; and being perſwaded of Gods infinite wiſdome, power and loue, let vs reſigne our ſelues wholy to his good will and pleaſure, knowing that nothing euer miſcaried which was intruſted to his care and prouidence. And though our afflictions bee tedious and bitter to fleſh and bloud, yet let vs patiently endure that which hee in his wiſdome and goodneſſe is pleaſed to inflict, neither preſcribing vnto him the meaſure of our afflictions (for it is abſurd and ridiculous for the childe to make choice of his rod, and to appoint vnto his Father what number of ſtripes hee ſhall giue vnto him) nor the meanes by which wee would be deliuered, which are better knowne to God than vnto vs; nor finally, the time of our troubles, how long they ſhall laſt, and when wee would haue him to free vs from them. For ſo wee ſhall but fall into a dangerous premunire, and make forfeiture of our ſpirituall eſtate, by encroaching vpon Gods royall priuiledges and prerogatiues, ſeeing our office and dutie is onely to beare the croſſe, and it is Gods part to take it away. According to the ſaying of an ancient Father; to know (ſaith he) the time when our tribulation and afflictions are to be taken from vs, it belongeth to him who hath inflicted them, but to beare them meekly with thankſgiuing, it is the proper worke of our patience. And if we thus meekly ſubmit our ſelues to the will of

2.Pet.2.9.

Noſtri eſt crucem ferre, Dei verò auferre. Noſſe enim quando tribulationes auferri oporteat illius eſt qui eas permiſit inferri. Chryſ. in Math.3. homil.10.

of God, it will heereof come to paſſe, that both we ſhall beare our greateſt afflictions with greater comfort and contentment, than worldly men the leaſt defects of their earthly proſperity; & alſo that we ſhal much the ſooner bee freed from them, ſeeing our gracious Father will no longer ſmite and beate vs, when as hee ſeeth vs already throughly humbled, vnleſſe it be in the caſe of tryall, for the better manifeſtation of his graces in vs, that hereafter hee may crowne them with the greater glory.

§.Sect.5.
he fourth ty is to truſt God at all mes,in the reſence and bſence of in-riour means.
eb.13.15.

The fourth meanes, enabling vs to waite vpon God in trouble and affliction, is to worke our hearts vnto firme affiance in him in all eſtates and conditions, that we may ſay with Iob, Though he kill me, yet will I truſt in him, and that both in the preſence and abſence of inferiour meanes. For if in our croſſes and calamities, wee doe not as wee ought, looke vnto God, but reſt in the helpe of our worldly hopes and ſecondary cauſes; it is not poſſible to preſerue our patience, ſeeing they will through vnfaithfulneſſe betray vs when wee truſt in them; through impotencie and inſufficiency faile vs, when wee reſt vpon them; and when they haue pulled vs vp (as we were ſinking) to the top of the waters, and wee thinke our ſelues eſcaped out of the danger, they will let goe their hold for want of ſtrength, or wilfully thruſt vs backe againe into the gulfe of deſtruction: whereas if our whole affiance and confidence bee in the Lord and his promiſed helpe, wee ſhall bee well freed from the violence of paſſion, and neither bee much lifted vp with hope in the abundance of earthly helpes, becauſe we know, that if hee doe but blow vpon them, they doe preſently vaniſh; nor dejected with feare and deſpaire, when as they faile and forſake vs, becauſe we are aſſured, that God in whom we truſt, is able to deliuer vs without them, by his al-ſufficient power, or elſe can when hee pleaſeth prouide vs other meanes in their ſtead, which are more conuenient and better able to helpe vs. Let vs therefore in all our afflictions put our truſt in the Lord, ſaying with the Church when hee deferreth his helpe. Be not terrible vnto mee, thou art my hope in the day of aduerſity. And againe, Giue vs helpe againſt trouble, for vaine is the helpe of man. For it is better (as the Pſalmiſt ſpeaketh) to truſt in the Lord, than to haue confidence in man: It is better to truſt in the Lord than to haue confidence in Princes, for bleſſed is the man who truſteth in the Lord, and whoſe hope the Lord is; as the Prophet pronounceth him, bleſſed in reſpect of his preſent condition, ſeeing hee is aſſured in Gods good time of helpe and deliuerance, and in the meane time, of his gracious preſence and aſſiſtance, enabling him to beare with patience and comfort whatſoeuer he is pleaſed to lay vpon him; and bleſſed in reſpect of his future hopes, ſeeing he ſhall haue his patience, and humble waiting on the Lords leiſure, rewarded and crowned with euerlaſting happineſſe. Whereas contrariwiſe, Curſed is the man who truſteth in man, and maketh fleſh his arme, and withdraweth his heart from the Lord; becauſe hee ſhall but inherit the winde, and bee fruſtrated of his hope and confidence, leaning vpon ſuch weake reeds and broken ſtaues, as will moſt faile and deceiue, when as they are moſt reſted vpon. According to that lamentable complaint of the afflicted Church Whileſt we waited for our vaine helpe, our eyes failed; and in our waiting wee looked for a Nation that could not ſaue vs.

Ier.17.17.
Pſal.108 12.
Pſal.118.8.9.
Ier.17.7.
Ier.17.5.
Lam.4.17.

§.Sect.6.
The fifth duty is frequent and feruent prayer.

Laſtly, becauſe in our afflictions we are ſo weake and wayward, that we are impatient of any delay, therefore we are to haue often our recourſe vnto God by feruent and effectuall prayers, earneſtly crying and crauing for freedome & deliuerance in ſuch a time as the Lord ſeeth fitteſt for his owne glory and our ſpirituall good; and that in the meane time hee will giue vnto vs ſuch ſtrength and patience, and ſo inwardly refreſh vs with the ſweete feeling of his loue and comforts of his holy Spirit, that we may bee able to endure our afflictions, as long as he ſhall be pleaſed to continue them vpon vs; grounding theſe our prayers vpon his word and gracious promiſes, whereby hee hath aſſured vs, that hee will ſaue and deliuer vs, if wee call vpon him, when as it ſhall be moſt profitable for vs to receiue this mercy; and that in the meane while hee will ſo ſupport vs with the power of his might, that wee ſhall not faint in the day of tryall, nor bee ouerwhelmed with the waight of afflictions.

§.Sect.7.
That after our deliuerance wee muſt render vnto God prayſe and thankeſgiuing.

And thus haue I ſhewed how the Chriſtian is to cary and demeane himſelfe whileſt he is vnder the croſſe: Now in the laſt place, according to our order propounded in the beginning of this ſecond Booke, wee are briefly to declare what duety he is to performe, after that through Gods grace and mercifull aſſiſtance hee is freed from his afflictions. And this in a word is, out of a heart truely and vnfainedly thankfull to render vnto the Lord all glory, prayſe and thankſgiuing for his deliuerance out of theſe troubles. For this dutie the Lord himſelfe requireth of vs; Call vpon mee in the day of trouble; ſo will I deliuer thee, and thou ſhalt glorifie me. So the prophet Ieremy, Sing vnto the Lord, prayſe yee the Lord, for he hath deliuered the ſoule of the poore from the hand of the wicked. And the Pſalmiſt diuerſifying the ſeuerall miſeries, out of which the Lord deliuereth his people, doth take occaſion thereby to incite and ſtirre men vp to praiſe his holy name. Let them therefore (ſaith he)

Pſal.50.15.
Ier.20.13.
Heb.13.15.

con-

Pſa.107.22.23.32.

confeſſe before the Lord his louing kindneſſe, and his wonderfull workes before the ſonnes of men; and let them offer the ſacrifice of prayſe, and declare his workes with reioycing. Let them exalt him in the congregation of the people, and prayſe him in the aſſembly of the Elders. And this duty the Lord highly prizeth, preferring it farre aboue all ſacrifices and burnt offerings.

Pſal.50.13.14.

According to that of the Pſalmiſt, Will I eate the fleſh of buls? or drink the blood of goats? Offer vnto God prayſe, and pay thy vowes vnto the moſt high. In regard whereof he profeſſeth, that he wil much rather performe it than the other, as being much more acceptable:

Pſal.69.30.31.

I will prayſe (ſaith he) the name of God with a ſong, and magnifie him with thankſgiuing; for this ſhall pleaſe the Lord better than a young bullocke that hath hornes and hooſes. Yea, this is the end which not onely God propoundeth of our deliuerances, that wee ſhould glorifie him, but which the faithfull alſo propound vnto themſelues in all their troubles, therefore eſpecially crauing helpe and ſuccour at Gods hands in their afflictions, that they may haue occaſion of thankſgiuing, and of lauding and magnifying his holy name for their deliuerance.

Pſal.9.13.14. & 106.47.

So Dauid prayeth, Haue mercy vpon mee, O Lord, conſider my trouble which I ſuffer of them that hate me, thou that lifteſt me from the gates of death, that I may ſhew all thy prayſes within the gates of the daughter of Sion, and reioyce in thy ſaluation. And elſe where, Saue vs, O Lord our God, and gather vs from among the heathen, that we may prayſe thy holy name, and glory in thy prayſe. And becauſe through their great corruption of nature the faithfull haue feared to forget ſo excellent a dutie after their deliuerance, (like vnto the leapers who being cleanſed, onely one of ten returned to giue thankes) therefore they haue beene ready to binde themſelues by ſolemne vow and promiſe to the performance of it;

Hoſ.14.3.

according to that of the Prophet, Take away all iniquity, and receiue vs graciouſly, ſo will wee render the calues of our lippes. And thus Dauid hauing bound himſelfe by vow to praiſe God for his deliuerance, after he was deliuered penned an excellent Pſalme of thankſgiuing, wherein hee performeth his vowes vnto God.

Pſal.116.3.12.13.14.17.

What ſhall I render (ſaith he) vnto the Lord for all his benefits towards me? I will take the cup of ſaluation, and will call vpon the name of the Lord. I will pay my vowes vnto the Lord, euen now in the preſence of all his people. I will offer vnto thee a ſacrifice of prayſe, and will call vpon the name of the Lord. And againe, I will prayſe thee, becauſe thou haſt heard me, and haſt beene my deliuerance.

Pſal.118.21. & 50.14.

The which vowes of thankeſgiuing, the Lord himſelfe requires, Offer vnto God prayſe, and pay thy vowes vnto the moſt high. And therefore ſeeing theſe thanks and prayſe are the maine end of our deliuerances, which both God and the faithfull do chiefly aime at, let vs carefully endeauour to attaine vnto it; for by the rule of reaſon the end is alwayes better than that which is deſtinated vnto it; and conſequently if wee muſt eſteeme our deliuerance it ſelfe, by which wee are freed from all our troubles; much more accompt are we to make of the prayſes of God, and our thankſgiuing after that we are eſcaped; ſeeing it is the end for which God deliuereth vs, and we deſire to bee deliuered. And as in the time of our affliction wee are diligent in prayer, and earneſt ſuiters vnto God for his helpe and aide; ſo hauing obtained it, let vs bee as forward and ready to returne vnto him thankes and prayſe for his mercy and goodneſſe. For otherwiſe wee ſhall diſcouer vnto God and our owne conſciences moſt ſhamefull ingratitude, in that being ſuch bare banke-rupts, that wee haue nothing to returne vnto God for all his benefits, we will not remaine thankfull debters; and hauing nothing elſe to render vnto him for all his mercies, wee will not ſo much as yeeld vnto him prayſe and thankes. Yea, wee ſhall plainly proue, that we are not in the number of Gods faithfull people, whoſe conſtant practice in all ages hath beene, to magnifie and glorifie the holy name of God, when they haue beene deliuered out of any afflictions, as it plainely appeareth in ſo many places of the ſacred Scriptures; that it is but loſt time to inſiſt vpon them.

§. Sect.8. What kinde of thankefulneſſe is to be offered vnto God for our deliuerance.

Now this thankfulneſſe whereby wee glorifie God, for his gracious deliuerance of vs out of trouble and affliction, is not to bee onely formall and externall, but is firſt and principally to bee ſeated in our minds and hearts, wherein wee are perpetually to retaine a gratefull remembrance of Gods mercy towards vs, with a reſolued purpoſe and intention in all things to glorifie his holy name, when as any occaſion is offered or may be taken by vs.

Mal.2.2.

For the Prophet Malachie threatneth a curſe againſt the Prieſts which was to fall vpon them, if they did not conſider, or put it in their heart to giue glory vnto the Lord. And the Apoſtle exhorteth vs in all things to intend and aime at Gods glory,

1.Cor.10.31.

Whether (ſaith he) yee eat or drinke, or whatſoeuer yee doe, doe all to the glory of God. But yet this thankfulneſſe is not wholly to be reſerued (as it were) in the cloſe priſon of our owne breſts, for ſo God ſhould loſe the glory, our neighbours a good example, and wee faile in the performance of our duty, but it is alſo to be profeſſed with our mouthes, and our profeſſion to be approued by our workes and actions. In our ſpeeches we are to declare what great things the Lord hath done for vs, to magnifie his mercies for our deliuerances out of trouble, and to praiſe his holy Name in Pſalmes, Hymnes and ſpirituall Songs, ſweetning the Muſique of the voice with the harmonious melody of our hearts. And becauſe the Lord is glorified, not onely in his prayſes, according to the ſaying in the Pſalmes, Hee that ſacrificeth praiſe, doth glorifie me; but alſo in all our holy communications, and in our religious, honeſt and ſauoury ſpeeches; therefore wee muſt acquaint our tongues with the Language of Canaan, and auoyding all corrupt and vnprofitable words, we muſt ſet a watch before the doore of our lips, and carefully take heed that our ſpeeches be ſo powdered with the ſalt of wiſdome and holineſſe, that they may not onely glorifie God, but alſo tend to the edification of thoſe that heare vs. Finally, becauſe thankfulneſſe profeſſed is not ſufficient, vnleſſe it alſo approued by our workes of godlineſſe and ſanctification; therefore wee muſt endeauour alſo that our lights may ſo ſhine before men, that ſeeing our good workes, they may glorifie our Father in Heauen. And to this end let vs take heed that we doe not dimme or dazle this light, by ouer-ſhadowing it with the black cloud of ſinne and wickedneſſe; but eſpecially let vs labour to mortifie thoſe corruptions, and to forſake thoſe ſinnes, which our owne conſciences doe condemne to bee the likelieſt cauſes of our late afflictions, leſt lying and liuing ſtill in our ſinnes, and impenitently going forward in our former euill courſes, we fall into a relapſe of Gods eſcaped judgements, and after our deliuerance from leſſer afflictions, haue (as our Sauiour ſpeaketh) ſome worſer puniſhment inflicted vpon vs. And withall let vs labour in the contrary workes of holineſſe and righteouſneſſe, endeauouring by our abundant fruits of an holy and ſanctified life, that our heauenly Father may be glorified; and ſo may we be aſſured that the Lord will for the time to come, either preſerue vs out of ſuch afflictions, as wee haue formerly ſuffered, or will inflict them onely for our triall, and the manifeſtation of his gifts and graces in vs; bringing vs as his moſt approoued Souldiers into this conflict of tentations, that wee may obtaine victory ouer all our ſpirituall enemies, and afterwards bee crowned with all glory and happineſſe in his heauenly Kingdome, which he grant vnto vs that hath dearely bought it for vs, Ieſus Chriſt the righteous, to whom with the Father, and the holy Spirit, be rendered of vs, and his whole Church, all honour and prayſe, power, majeſty and dominion both now and for euermore. Amen.

Col.3.16.
Pſal.50.23.
Col.4.6.
Epheſ.4.29.
Math.5.16.
Iohn 5.14.
Iohn 15.8.

FINIS.

THE CHRISTIAN WARFARE,

The Fourth and laſt Part.

CONTAYNING THE CONFLICT BETWEENE THE FLESH AND THE SPIRIT.

WHEREIN IS DESCRIBED THE Nature of theſe Combatants, the malice and power of the Fleſh and fleſhly Luſts, with the meanes whereby wee may ſubdue and ouercome them.

By I. DOWNAME Bachelar in Diuinitie, and Preacher of GODS Word.

GAL. 5.17.
For the Fleſh luſteth againſt the Spirit, and the Spirit againſt the Fleſh, and theſe are contrary the one to the other, ſo that yee cannot doe the thing that yee would.

LONDON,
Printed by William Stansby, for Philemon Stephens and Chriſtopher Meredith, at the Golden Lyon in Pauls
Church-yard, 1633.

In this Conflict two things are to be conſidered.

- 1. The Enemies and Combatants which are deſcribed
  - 1. By their names and natures, the
    - Fleſh,
    - Spirit.
    - Chap. 1. to 8.
  - 2. Their properties where is ſhewed that the fleſh is an enemy exceeding dangerous; the which appeareth first in reſpect
    - 1. Of its own nature becauſe it is very
      - Malicious, Chap.8.
        - In it ſelfe, § 1. to 5.
        - Vnto vs, § 5. to 13.
      - powerfull in reſpect both of its
        - ſtrength and that either
          - ſimply in it ſelfe, Chap.9. § 1,2.
          - compared with the Spirit, § 3.
        - Policy the which is conſidered either
          - 1. Generally where it is ſhewed that it is
            - great in it ſelfe, Chap.10. § 1.
            - pernicious to vs. § 2.
          - 2. Specially, where of the ſpeciall deceits which reſpect either
            - our perſons and ſtates, Chap.11,12,13.
            - Certaine duties required which are of two ſorts.
              - The first reſpect mortifying of our ſinnes, Chap.14,15.
              - The ſecond the practice of vertuous actions, by which it ſeeketh
                - 1. To hinder vs from practiſing them, Chap. 16.2.
                - 2. To diſturbe vs in them, Chap.17. § 1,2.
                - 3. To withdraw vs from them, Chap.17. § 3,4.
    - 2. Of diuers aduantages which it hath againſt vs, the which are two: the
      - 1. That it dwelleth in vs, Chap.18. § 1,2,3.
      - 2. That it is neuer weary in fighting againſt vs, § 4.
- 2. The fight betweene them, in which conſider two things,
  - 1. The Conflict it ſelfe where conſider
    - 1. That there is ſuch a Conflict in euery Chriſtian, Lib.2. Chap.1.
    - 2. The nature of it, where conſider thoſe things which are - more eſſentiall, as
        - 1. The cauſes of it which are
          - Efficient, Chap.2.
          - Formall, Chap.3.
        - 2. The manner of it in reſpect of
          - 1. The whole perſon regenerate, Chap.4.
          - 2. His ſeuerall faculties and parts, Chap.5,6.
      - leſſe eſſentiall, the which are three
        - 1. The effects of it the which are two
          - 1. That the man regenerate cannot with full conſent of will chuſe & commit any euill, Chap.7.§ 1,2.
          - 2. That hee cannot with full conſent of will chooſe and doe any good.
        - 2. The ſubiect in whom it is fought which is handled
          - 1. Negatiuely where is ſhewed that this fight is not in thoſe who are
            - 1. Perfectly regenerate, Chap. 8, § 1.
            - 2. Vnregenerate. Where of the differences betweene the combate that is in the vnregenerate & the regenerate, C.8,9.
          - 2. Affirmatiuely. Where is ſhewed that it is in all the regenerate, and the ſignes of it, Chap. 10 § 10,11,12.
        - 3. The euent and ſucceſſe of the fight.
  - 2. The meanes to obtaine victory vnto which two things are required
    - 1. A due preparatiō to the fight vnto which two things are required
      - 1. That we remember certaine reaſons which may encourage vs to the fight, Chap.19.
      - 2. The right vſe of certain means whereby we may be enabled to overcome: the which are two
        - 1. The putting on of the ſpirituall armour, Chap 20. § 1.
        - 2. The obſeruing of certaine rules which are of two ſorts,
          - 1. Tending to weaken the fleſh the which are two
            - 1. To withdraw all meanes by which it is ſtrengthened, Chap.10 § 3,4.
            - 2. To vſe all meanes by which it may bee weakened, Chap.21.22,23.
          - 2. Tending to the ſtrengthening of the ſpirit, the which are two
            - 1. To ſhunne the meanes whereby it is Weakened, Chap.24.
            - 2. To vſe the meanes whereby it is ſtrengthened, Chap.25.
    - 2. A valorous carriage of our ſelues in the Conflict.

THE CHRISTIAN WARFARE.

The fourth Part.

OF THE CONFLICT BETWEENE THE SPIRIT AND THE FLESH: WHEREIN is ſhewed what they are, and the dangerouſneſſe of this Enemie the Fleſh, with the aduantages which it hath againſt vs.

The firſt Booke.

CHAP. I.

An Introduction into the following Diſcourſe, wherein is ſhewed, that our Enemies in the Chriſtian warfare are many, mighty and dangerous, eſpecially our owne fleſh, with the luſts thereof.

§. Sect. I. That we are to expect no peace in this life, but to fight continually againſt the enemies of our ſaluation.

IT was the errour of the Apoſtles in the infancie of their faith, that being admitted Chriſts diſciples, they ſhould abound in earthly priuiledges; for as they imagined that their Lord and Maſter ſhould like a mighty Monarch rule in the World, tryumphing ouer all his own, and the Churches enemies, & raigning in all Majeſticall glory and Peacefull plentie: ſo they hoped that they, who for the preſent followed him in the ſtate of affliction, ſhould afterwards ſecurely reſt from all troubles & dangers, haue the chiefe preferments in his glorious Kingdome, and the largeſt ſhare in this worldly happineſſe. The like conceipt poſſeſſeth many at their firſt entrance into the profeſſion of Chriſtian Religion, who doe not with Abraham and the reſt of the Patriarches, ſee and beleeue the promiſes afarre off, but expecting preſent reward and wages for their ſeruices, imagine that now they haue for Gods ſake forſaken the pleaſures of ſin, they ſhall haue in liew thereof immunitie from dangers, and freedome from afflictions, fame and fauour among men for their well deſeruing, ſecure plenty, and proſperous peace in regard both of outward and inward enemies. And therefore being ſicke of the ſame

Heb. 11. 13.

a Iob. 18.36.
b & 16.33.
c Act. 14.22.
d Math. 10, 34.

diſeaſe, the like medicines are to bee vſed for their recouerie, which our Sauiour applied vnto his Apoſtles; namely they are to bee informed that [a] Chriſts Kingdome is not of this world, that [b] in the world they ſhall haue afflictions, and [c] by many tribulations enter into the Kingdome of Heauen; that [d] Chriſt came not to bring peace and ſecurity, but fire and ſword, warres and diſſenſions, not onely betweene ſtrangers and enemies, but alſo among neareſt kindred and deareſt friends. Which warres and garboiles though they doe not preſently appeare after our conuerſion vnto God, and deliuerance out of that Egyptian ſeruitude of ſinne and Sathan, leſt being diſcouraged with our rough entertainement in our firſt entrance into the Chriſtian warfare, wee ſhould returne into our thraldome, and redeeme a baſe and diſhonourable peace, at the deare price of helliſh bondage; yet are wee ſure to meete with theſe difficulties and dangers, before wee can bee full conquerours and enter into the poſſeſſion of the holy Land.

§. Sect. 2.
That we are daily aſſaulted with forraigne forces the world and the Diuell.

For no ſooner is the Chriſtian waged into Gods warfare, by receiuing the Preſſe-money of ſome ſauing graces, and taking vpon him the Colours of an outward profeſſion, wherby he is known to be a ſeruant and ſouldier of Ieſus Chriſt; but preſently, there ſetteth vpon him a world of enemies, ſometime aſſaulting him in the open field, by affliction and perſecution, and ſometime out of the ſecret ambuſhments of earthly proſperitie. Beſides with viſible forces of worldly foes, hee is continually encountred with principalities and powers, ſpirituall wickedneſſes in high places, and inuiſible enemies, euen innumerable legions of infernall ſpirits, and the mighty troupes of that helliſh armie.

Ephes. 6, 11.

§. Sect. 3.
That our outward enemies are not ſo dangerous, as our owne fleſh and fleſhly luſts.

But though theſe forraigne foes being mighty and malicious, are exceeding terrible to the Chriſtian ſouldiour; yet are they nothing ſo dangerous, as thoſe inbred enemies which wee nouriſh in our owne boſomes, who like ſecret traytors diſarme vs of our chiefe weapons and munition, when as wee are aſſaulted with thoſe profeſſed enemies, and lay vs open and naked to bee ſpoiled by their inuaſions, and wounded by their blowes. For ſo were wee in our creation (through Gods infinite goodneſſe) furniſhed with ſuch impenetrable Armour of innocencie and righteouſneſſe, that Sathan with all his helliſh army could not hurt vs; and therefore not being able to preuaile by force and violence, he entertained with our firſt parents a treacherous parley, wherein hee perſwaded them to put off their armes, and to entertaine into their ſoules a troupe of his tentations, which were no ſooner entred, but preſently they vanquiſhed all their forces, ranſackt their ſoules of all ſpirituall graces, and brought them into a miſerable ſubjection through his helliſh tyrannie. And that he might the better keepe them in perpetuall obedience, hee did not onely kill and ſpoile the natural inhabitants, Gods ſauing graces, but placed euen in the chiefe Caſtle of their ſoules, a ſtrong gariſon of carnall corruptions and fleſhly luſts, which ſhould reſerue them like a conquered Citie, for his owne vſe, and (as it were) open the gates vnto him and his tentations, when as he pleaſed to make an entrance.

§. Sect. 4.
That Sathan and the world could not hurt vs, were they not ayded by our owne fleſh.

And this was the fountaine of all our miſerie, and the chiefe cauſe and meanes of Sathans tyrannous ſoueraigntie, and of our baſe thraldome and ſlauerie; yea this is the cauſe why hee ſtill preuaileth and holdeth vs captiue to doe his will. For thoſe forraigne forces, led vnder the conduct of Sathan and the world, could neuer vanquiſh vs; vnleſſe the fleſh and the luſts thereof did betray vs into their hands; their wiſdome could not circumuent vs, vnleſſe theſe ſecret traytors gaue them continuall intelligence of all aduantages; their malice and power could not hurt vs, if they had not a ſtrong partie to aſſiſt them in our owne boſomes, who by their mutinous ſedition and ciuill warres, weaken vs and ſtrengthen them; neither could they euer conquer vs, if theſe inteſtine rebels did not open the gates and let in the troupes of their tentations. And therefore as I haue indeauoured to arme and ſtrengthen the weake Chriſtian againſt the forces of thoſe forraigne enemies, ſo it now remaineth, that I ſhould adde to the former, this laſt part of the Chriſtian warfare, deſcribing this conflict betweene the fleſh and the ſpirit; and teaching the Chriſtian with what aydes and ſupplies he muſt ſupport his weakeneſſe in theſe dangerous encounters, how he muſt keepe vnder theſe wicked traytours, and ſo carry himſelfe and manage his weapons, as that he may be aſſured to obtaine the victory.

Chap. II.

Of the fleſh and the diuers ſignifications of it, and what we are to vnderſtand by it in the following diſcourſe.

§. Sect. 1.
That there is in a chriſtian this fight betweene the fleſh and ſpirit.

Where firſt wee will ſpeake of the enemies which fight one againſt another in this Warfare, and then of their conflict. In the former wee will conſider firſt, what theſe enemies are, and then how dangerous and pernicious vnto vs if they bee not ſubdued and kept in ſubjection to them which fight on our ſide againſt them. The enemies which thus fight with one another are the Fleſh and the Spirit, with an innumerable armie of their motions and luſts. Both which, with all their forces dwel in euery true Chriſtian, making mutuall oppoſition, the one nilling what the other willeth, and hindring and deſtroying, that which the other furthereth and aduanceth. This plainely appeareth by the Scriptures, which both diſcouer this hoſtile diſſenſion & contrarie faction in the ſame man, & the oppoſition & conflict which ariſeth from their enmitie and cohabitation, their naturall diuiſion and locall vnion, So the Apoſtle ſpeaketh plainely of this conflict in all Chriſtians. Gal.5.17. The fleſh luſteth againſt the Spirit, and the Spirit againſt the fleſh, and theſe are contrarie one to another; and particularly in himſelfe, where he thus complaineth, But I ſee another law in my members, rebelling, or warring, againſt the law of my minde, and bringing me into captiuitie to the law of ſinne, which is in my members. And againe, I my ſelfe in my mind ſerue the law of God, but with my fleſh the law of ſinne. And hence it is that the Apoſtle Peter exhorteth vs, to fight valiantly againſt theſe luſts, becauſe they doe continally make warre againſt vs. Dearely beloued (ſaith he) I beſeech you as ſtrangers and pilgrimes, abſtaine from fleſhly luſts, which fight againſt the ſoule. 1.Pet.2.11.

ph.3.6.
Gal.5.17.

[illegible]
pant.
om.7.25.

Pet.2.11.

§. Sect. 2.
The diuers ſignifications of the word fleſh, taken for things materially ſubſiſting.

Now that wee may like Chriſts faithfull ſouldiers, after a lawfull and laudable manner thus fight againſt them, wee muſt in the firſt place labour to know what they are, leaſt we miſtake our enemies for our friends; to which end wee are to vnderſtand that the fleſh is diuerſly taken in the ſcriptures: As (to omit many acceptations of it which are far off and nothing pertinent to our preſent purpoſe) ſometime it is taken for all mankinde; In which ſenſe it is ſaid, that all [a] fleſh had corrupted his way vpon the Earth, that is, all mankind; that all fleſh is [b] graſſe, that is, all mankinde is fraile and momentany, and that God would [c] poure out his ſpirit vpon all fleſh, that is, vpon men of all ſorts and conditions. Sometimes it is taken for the whole man, conſiſting of ſoule and body. And thus our Sauiour Chriſt is ſaid, to haue beene put to death concerning the fleſh, that is, his humane nature, his body being ſeuered from his ſoule, and his ſoule (in his preſent ſenſe and feeling) from his God, when as vpon the croſſe he bore his wrath for our ſinnes: and the Pſalmiſt, hauing ſaid, that he [d] would not feare what fleſh could doe vnto him, Pſ.56.4. expoundeth himſelfe in the eleuenth verſe; In God (ſaith he) haue I put my truſt, I will not be affraid what man can doe vnto mee. Sometimes it is taken for the body of man alone conſiſting of many members. And ſo the Apoſtle exhorteth vs to cleanſe our ſelues from all filthineſſe of the fleſh, and of the ſpirit; that is, body and ſoule; and the Pſalmiſt ſaith, that the enemies of the Church had cruelly giuen the fleſh of Gods Saints to the beaſts of the Earth, that is, the dead bodies of Gods ſeruants, which alſo as he ſaith in the ſame place, were giuen to be meate to the fowles of the Heauen. Sometime this word fleſh ſignifieth the whole nature of man, as it is borne in corruption and polluted with originall ſinne. And thus our Sauiour ſaith, that, that which is borne of the fleſh, is fleſh; that is, if the parents bee defiled with ſinne, then needs muſt the children bee polluted with their corruption; for a ſtinking fountaine cannot bring forth ſweet waters; and who (as Iob ſaith) can bring a cleane thing out of filthineſſe? And thus the Apoſtle ſaith, that they who are in the fleſh, that is, remaine in that corrupt and ſinfull condition in which they were borne, cannot pleaſe God. But in none of theſe ſenſes are wee to conceiue the fleſh to bee our enemie; for neither may we Timon-like be at enmity with mankinde; nor like mad-men make warre and offer violence againſt our owne perſons, nor ought wee with the Baalites and Papiſts to fight againſt our owne bodies; neither is there any warre in the naturall man borne in corruption, ſeeing he is wholly fleſh and vnder Sathans gouernment, who like the ſtrong man whileſt hee keepeth the houſe, poſſeſſeth all in peace; ſauing that now and then there is ſome ciuill diſſenſion and ſmal iarres betweene the will and conſcience, and one paſſion with another, which are quickly taken vp, as wee ſhall ſhew hereafter.

Gen.6.12.
Eſa.40.6.
Ioel 2.28.
1.Pet.3.18.
Pſal.56.4.
2.Cor.7.1.
Pſal.79.2.
Iohn 3.6.
Iob 14.4.
Rom.8.8.

§. Sect.3.
Diuers ſignifications of the word fleſh, taken for accidents and qualities.

But wee are further to conſider, that the fleſh is not onely thus ſubſtantially taken for things really and materially by themſelues ſubſiſting, but alſo for accidents and qualities; In which ſenſe it is taken two wayes in the Scriptures: Firſt for that qualitie of corruption, frailtie and infirmitie of the humane nature, which is not ſinne, but rather the effect and puniſhment which attendeth and waiteth vpon it; and in this ſenſe it is ſaid of the Iſraelits, that he turned away his wrath from them, becauſe he remembred that they were but fleſh, and a winde that paſſeth away and commeth not againe. Thus alſo it is ſaid that fleſh and blood cannot inherit the Kingdome of God, and what this fleſh and bloud is, hee expoundeth in the next words, neither doth corruption inherite corruption. And thus the Apoſtle ſaith, that though hee walked in the fleſh, yet hee did not warre after the fleſh, not with weake and carnall, but with ſtrong & mighty weapons, which were able to caſt downe all that oppoſed againſt them; and in this ſenſe (as I take it) are wee to vnderſtand the ſpeech of our Sauiour to his Apoſtles, The Spirit indeed is willing, but the Fleſh is weake. And in this ſignification the fleſh is not to be taken for a ma-

1.Cor.15.50.
2.Cor.10.2.3.4.
Mat.26.41.

malicious enemie, but rather a weake and feeble friend, which is not to bee oppoſed in hoſtile manner (as it were) with a ſword and ſpeare, but rather to bee ſtrengthned with the cordials of comfort, after that the corruption of ſinne, which is the cauſe thereof, by the phyſicke of the Word is purged away.

§. Sect. 4.
The fleſh taken for the corruption of nature.

Secondly, the fleſh is taken for the whole corruption of nature, or for that originall ſinne, whereby the whole nature of man, with all the powers and faculties of his ſoule and body are wholy defiled, the image of God vtterly defaced, and he quite diſabled vnto all good, and made prone vnto all manner of euill, the which as it is the child and off-ſpring of our firſt parents ſinne, ſo is it the mother add nurſe of all actuall tranſgreſſions, and of all our rebellion againſt God and his will. And this carnall corruption poſſeſſeth and ouer-ſpreadeth the whole man before regeneration, defiling and diſabling his body and ſoule, with all the members, parts, and faculties of them, raigning and ruling in him in his full ſtrength a as King & ſoueraigne, and making him obedient to the ſinfull luſts thereof; and after regeneration it ſtill remaineth and dwelleth in him, (although wounded and weakened) like a wicked enemie and falſe traytor, rebelling againſt the Spirit, and reſiſting the good motions thereof; and though it be depoſed from the regencie, and expelled (as it were) out of the heart of the kingdome, yet (like the curſed Cananites) it ſtill keepeth reſidence in the borders of the land, and after it is beaten out of the City doth ſtill dwell in the Suburbs, whence it much moleſteth the ſpirituall part, and is to the regenerate man a ſnare to intangle him, and a trap to catch him, a ſcourge to his ſides, and a thorne in his eyes, ſometime aſſaulting him by open violence, and ſometime indangering him by ſecret ambuſhments and hidden vnderminings. In which ſenſe the fleſh is taken either for the whole nature of man, as it commeth into the world corrupted & defiled with ſin, ſeeing he is nothing but a maſſe of corruption and a ſinke of all filthineſſe, till he be regenerate by the Spirit of God; or elſe for that part of a Chriſtian, which remaineth ſtill vnregenerate after his effectual calling and ſound conuerſion vnto God. In the former ſignification wee are to vnderſtand all thoſe places, where vnregenerate and wicked men are called fleſh, as where our Sauiour ſaith, that that which is borne of the fleſh is fleſh: and the Apoſtle Paul, that, when wee were in the fleſh, the motions of ſin which were by the Law did worke in our members, to bring forth fruit vnto death; and that they who are in the fleſh cannot pleaſe God. In the later wee are to vnderſtand it when it is applyed vnto the faithfull, who are but in part regenerate, to ſignifie the reliques of naturall corruption and the vicious qualitie of ſin, which doth ſtill dwell and remaine in them vnmortified and vnſubdued. So the Apoſtle complaineth, that there was giuen him a pricke in the fleſh, that in his fleſh dwelled no good thing, and that in the fleſh hee ſerued the Law of ſinne. And thus he would haue the inceſtuous perſon deliuered to Sathan, for the deſtruction of the fleſh, that the ſpirit (that is the regenerate man) might be ſaued in the day of the Lord Ieſus. But moſt plainely and diſtinctly doth he ſpeake of it, where hee ſaith, that the fleſh luſteth againſt the ſpirit, and the ſpirit againſt fleſh, and that theſe are contrarie the one to the other, bringing forth in the ſame man diuers and contrarie fruits, as hee there at large deſcribeth them.

Ioſ.23.13.
Ioh.3.6.
Rom.7.5.
Rom.8.8.
2.Cor.12.7.
Rom.7.18.25.
1.Cor.5.5.
Gal.5.17.

§. Sect. 5.
That the fleſh in this diſcourſe ſignifieth the part vnregenerate in a chriſtian, or the reliques of corruption remaining after ſanctification.

Now in this laſt ſenſe we are to take the word fleſh in the following diſcourſe, vnderſtanding thereby thoſe reliques of corruption, which after regeneration doe ſtill remaine in vs, the corrupt quality of ſinne adhering to all the parts and faculties of our ſoules and bodies, vnmortified and vncrucified, or that part of a Chriſtian which is vnregenerate and continually fighteth and ſtriueth againſt the ſpirit. And this is the malicious enemie that aſſiſteth Sathan and the world, to worke our vtter ouerthrow, vnto which the Scriptures haue giuen many names, whereby the nature and qualities thereof are implyed, that we may the better know it, and arme our ſelues to fight againſt it. For it is called the [a] old man, not onely becauſe in age and antiquitie, it almoſt matcheth humane nature; but rather to imply vnto vs, that like thoſe, who, by reaſon of their old age, haue had much experience, it is very ſubtle and politique, and ſo full of ſleights and ſtratagems, that if we be not exceeding wary and watchfull it will eaſily circumuent vs. It is called alſo the [b] naturall man, becauſe this corruption ouerſpreadeth the whole nature of all men who are vnregenerate; for howſoeuer in the firſt creation wee were good and free from ſinne, yet after the fall of our firſt parents, wee were ſo degenerate and infected in our natures with the poyſon of their corruption, that it is as naturall, familiar and eaſie to ſin and offend God, as for a man to eate, drinke and ſleepe, for a fiſh to ſwim, a bird to flie, or for a ſtone to deſcend downwards. It is called the old Adam, to leade vs vnto the fountaine from which it ſprung, that is, not God who made all things good, but our firſt Parents, who as they loſt the image of God by their fall and were wholy corrupted in their owne natures, ſo they deriued their corruption vnto all their poſterity, & hauing firſt defiled themſelues with this ſpirituall Leproſie did alſo infect therewithall that nu-

[a] Rom.6.6. Epheſ.4.22. Col.3.9.
[b] 1.Cor.2.14.

numerous off-ſpring which deſcended of them. It is called the [c] body, becauſe this corruption dwelleth in the bodie, and exerciſeth it ſelfe in it and by it, as by its inſtrument in the committing and perpetrating of all the workes of darkneſſe; and that we may the more clearely diſcerne what body the Apoſtle meaneth, he calleth it the [d] body of ſinne, and the [e] body of the ſinnes of the fleſh, becauſe the fleſh by the body committeth all manner of ſinne and wickedneſſe. It is called the [f] body of death, becauſe it is the cauſe of death and condemnation, in which ſenſe Elizaus his Diſciples ſaid, that death was in the pot, that is, deadly poyſonous hearbs, which would cauſe them to dye who had taſted of them. It is called alſo [g] ſinne, not onely becauſe it ſelfe is ſinne, but alſo the roote and fountaine of all other wickedneſſe; and the [h] ſinne that dwelleth in vs, becauſe like the ſtrong man it keepeth ſure poſſeſſion till a ſtronger commeth and diſpoſſeſſeth it, euen the Spirit of God dwelling in vs. It is called [i] euill concupiſcence, becauſe it filleth vs with ſinfull luſts, & maketh vs to ſtand in oppoſition againſt the will of God, deſiring and willing, that which hee nilleth and condemneth. It is called [k] εὐπερίστατος ἁμαρτία, the ſinne which encloſeth or beſetteth vs about, becauſe this helliſh Captaine with a whole armie of ſinfull luſts enuiron vs on euery ſide, ſo as wee cannot poſſibly of our ſelues eſcape out of their ambuſhments. Finally, it is called the law of ſinne, the [l] law of the members, and the [m] law of death;, becauſe it is the rule of all the naturall mans actions, guiding him into all wickedneſſe, the commander of all his parts and members, vnto whoſe injunctions they doe like ſubjects yeeld free and willing obedience, the which their ſeruice and ſubjection is in the end rewarded with euerlaſting death of body and ſoule.

Cor.9.17.
8.10.
m.6.6.
ol.2.11.
m.7.24.
m.7.8.11.
m.7.17.
m.1.13.14.
b.12.1.
m.7.23.
m.8.2.

CHAP. III.

What wee are to vnderſtand by the Spirit in this diſcourſe.

§. Sect. 1. That the word Spirit is diuerſly taken in the Scriptures.

ANd thus we haue ſhewed what the fleſh is, which is one of the champions in this ſpirituall combate: now wee are to conſider of the other, which is the Spirit; and that wee may the more diſtinctly know what it is, we muſt vnderſtand that the word Spirit is diuerſly taken in the Scriptures; and to omit many acceptations which are altogether impertinent to our preſent purpoſe, we may obſerue, that it is ſometimes taken generally, for all ſpirituall and incorporeall ſubſtances, and ſometimes more ſpecially for ſome one of them; And thus it ſometime ſignifieth the whole [a] Dietie, and ſometime euery one of the perſons, the Father, the [b] Sonne, in reſpect of his diuine nature, and the [c] holy Ghoſt, who hath this name of Spirit, after a vſuall and peculiar manner giuen vnto him. But howſoeuer God and euery of theſe holy and diuine perſons, doe fight in vs, and for vs againſt the fleſh ſeeing it is their grace that ſupporteth vs, and their ſtrength whereby wee ouercome; yet wee are not to vnderſtand by Spirit in the following diſcourſe this diuine nature, who being omnipotent none is able to reſiſt. Sometime it ſignifieth the [d] ſoule of man, euen as the fleſh is taken for the body; but theſe are not oppoſites and enemies but deare friends, who ſo entirely loue, that they feare nothing more than to be ſeparated and to part company. Sometime it ſignifieth that chiefe and excellent facultie of the ſoule called [e] reaſon and vnderſtanding; but neither can it here bee taken in this ſenſe; becauſe this ſpirit it ſelfe is corrupt and ſinfull, & this naturall reaſon and wiſedome is enmitie againſt God; and againſt this ſpirit whereof we ſpeake, which oppoſeth and fighteth againſt it, as againſt his chiefeſt enemie. Sometime it is taken for the vigour and efficacie of the vnderſtanding and reaſon it ſelfe, as where the Apoſtle exhorteth the Epheſians, to be renued in the ſpirit of their mind. Sometime by ſpirit wee vnderſtand the [f] gifts and graces of the ſpirit, as Faith, Loue, Hope, Ioy and the reſt; which being fruits of the Spirit, doe ſtand in oppoſition to the luſts of the fleſh, and in ſome ſort doe fight againſt them, they being contrarie the one to the other. Finally, the Spirit ſometime ſignifieth a new qualitie of holineſſe, created and wrought in all the elect by the Spirit of God, whereby all the powers and faculties of his ſoule and body are renewed according to the image of God, in wiſedome, holineſſe and righteouſneſſe; In which ſenſe we are to vnderſtand ~~it in~~ this place.

a Ioh.4.24.
b Ioh.6.63.
c 1.Ioh.5.6.7.
d Eccleſ.12.7. Act.7.59. 2.Cor.7.1.
e 1.Cor.2.11. Rom.12.2. Luk.1.47.
f Luke 1.15. Gal.3.2. Act.2.18.

§. Sect. 2. What wee are to vnderſtand by Spirit in the following diſcourſe. Epheſ.4.24. Col.3.10.

The Spirit then whereof wee intreat, is the new man, or the regenerate part of a Chriſtian which is nothing elſe but a created qualitie of wiſedome, holineſſe and righteouſnes, wherby we are in the whole man renewed vnto Gods image; which continually fighteth againſt, and in the end ouercommeth the fleſh with all the luſts thereof. And this is the other champion in the ſpirituall combate, which alſo is deſcribed vnto vs in the Scriptures by diuers names, that wee might the better conceiue of the nature thereof; For firſt it is called the Spirit, both to note the cauſe and authour of it, which is the Spirit of God; and to teach vs, that it is of a ſimple, pure and immortall nature, and moſt oppoſite to that which is carnall, earthly and ſenſuall. It is called the new man, in oppoſition to the old Adam, and that Ioh.3.6. Rom.7.6.

Epheſ.4.22.
Col.3.10.
1.Cor.2.15.
Gal.6.1.
a Ioh.3.3.
1.Pet.1.23.
b Rom.7.22.
Eph.3.16.
c 1.Pet.3.4.
d 2.Cor.5.17.
Gal.6.15.
e Rom.8.2.
& 7.23.
f Rom.8.2.14.

that corruption of nature which was deriued immediatly from him, and to point out the difference betweene the fleſh and the ſpirit in reſpect of their cauſes; for the cauſe of the fleſh, was the old man, our firſt parent Adam, from whom it was propagated; the the cauſe of the other, was the new man or ſecond Adam, Chriſt Ieſus, who by his Spirit hath regenerated and begotten vs vnto God, making vs to become new creatures, renewed according to the image of God. It is called the ſpirituall man both to point out the cauſe from which it hath its being, euen the Spirit of God, which regenerateth and ſanctifieth vs, and alſo in reſpect that it ſelfe is the cauſe of many ſpirituall actions, and is wholly taken vp and exerciſed about ſpirituall and diuine objects; aboue all things ſeeking to bee inriched with God and ſauing graces, and to haue ſure title and iuſt claime to the Kingdome of heauen, which is the inheritance of the bleſſed Angels and holy Spirits. And finally to put a difference betweene him who is led by the ſpirit, and him who is meerely naturall and worldly (the one reſembling and imitating the old Adam, who was from the earth, earthly; the other the ſecond Adam, who was from heauen, heauenly; the one led by the ſenſe, and ſeeking onely things ſenſuall and carnall; the other ſoaring aloft, and minding thoſe things which are diuine and ſpirituall;) It is called the [a] regenerate man, to note, that wee haue it not by naturall propagation, but by ſpirituall regeneration and new birth; whereby being begotten by the word and ſpirit wee are borne vnto God. It is called the [b] inner man, and the [c] hidden man of the heart; becauſe it ſwayeth and ruleth principally in the ſoule, mind and heart, inlightaing the vnderſtanding and ſanctifying the will and affections, and ſo making them conformable to the Word and will of God; and cannot be diſcerned outwardly by the ſenſe, but onely when it ſheweth it ſelfe in the effects and fruits thereof. It is called a [a] new creature, becauſe it is no relique or remainder of that image of God, according to which we were at the firſt created, but a new work of Gods holy Spirt, by his ſole omnipotent power made of nothing, and not of any præexiſtent matter which it found in vs. Finally, it is called the law of the ſpirit, and the law of the mind; becauſe it is ingrauen and written in our hearts, ruling and gouerning vs, directing & inclining vs both in our ſoules & bodies vnto all holy obedience, and inciting vs to the performance of all Chriſtian duties, wherein this law of the Spirit differeth from the lawes of men, for although it bee the intention of lawgiuers to make men good; yet their lawes doe this onely thus far forth, as they giue notice vnto them what they ought to doe and leaue vndone; but the holy ſpirit dwelling in vs, doth not onely, by inlightning our vnderſtanding, teach vs what is our ducie, but alſo inclineth our hearts and affections vnto obedience, cauſing vs to put in practice the things wee know. And it is called the Law of the ſpirit of life; For as the naturall ſpirit or ſoule is the cauſe of our naturall life; ſo Gods holy ſpirit is the cauſe of the life of grace; according to the ſaying of our Sauiour: It is the ſpirit which quickneth, and the words which I ſpeake vnto you are ſpirit and life. The which ſpirit of life is originally in our Sauiour Chriſt, and from him deriued vnto vs who are vnited vnto him, and to no other. For as the naturall ſpirit extendeth vnto no member which hath not connexion with the head; ſo this holy Spirit of life is deriued vnto none who is not ioyned in communion with Chriſt our head, according to that 1.*Ioh.*4.13. Hereby wee know that we dwell in him, and he in vs, becauſe he hath giuen vs of his ſpirit.

Iohn 6.63.
1.Iohn 4.13.

§. Sect.3.
That this combate is not maintained betweene bare qualities only, but as they are backed by the holy Spirit, & Sathan the wicked ſpirit.

And thus haue I ſhewed what the fleſh and the ſpirit are, which are the combatants in this ſpirituall Warfare, the one being that naturall corruption, and carnall concupiſcence, in which wee are conceiued and borne, the other a created of holineſſe, whereby we are renewed vnto Gods image, which through the ſinne of Adam was defaced in him and his poſterity; and is continually preſerued, ſupported and ſtrengthned by the Spirit of God dwelling in vs from which alſo it had firſt its being. Neither are wee ſo to vnderſtand it, as though this combate were onely maintained by bare and naked qualities, of renewed puritie, and old corruption; but that they are alſo backed and vpheld by thoſe ſpirts which are the cauſes and the authours of them; namely the holy Spirit of God, the author of all ſanctity and purity; and the impure and wicked ſpirit Sathan, the authour of all ſinne and wickedneſſe. For whileſt men remaine in the ſtate of infidelity, the ſtrong man Sathan keepeth poſſeſſion and dwelleth in them, though not after a groſſe and ſenſible manner, as in demoniacks, yet inuiſibly and ſpiritually, ruling and reigning in them, and (as the Apoſtle ſpeaketh) holding them captiue to doe his will. In which his regiment and gouernement, hee imployeth the fleſh and our carnal concupiſcence as his deputie and chiefe inſtrument, to leade ſinfull men into all wickedneſſe, the which hee continually animateth, inrageth and ſtrengthneth vnto all euill. But when a ſtronger than he commeth, euen the good ſpirit of God, he caſteth him out, and taking poſſeſſion, dwelleth, raigneth and ruleth in our ſoules & bodies, creating in vs that quality of holineſſe and righteouſneſſe called the Spirit, which hee ſub-ſubſtituteth as his Vicegerent and chiefe Deputie in the regenerate man. And though he doth not quite expell the fleſh, Sathans Lieutenant out of vs, yet at the firſt entrance hee giueth him a mortall wound, of which hee neuer recouereth, and depoſeth him from his Vice-gerency, ſo that howſoeuer it ſtil dwelleth, yet it reigneth not in our mortall bodies, as in former times.

2.Tim.2.26.

m.6.12.

Onely Gods Spirit ſuffereth this enemy to inhabite ſtill with vs, that by the oppoſition which it maketh, it might exerciſe the ſpirituall part in the Chriſtian Warfare, that hereby it might be made more vigilant and diligent, more ſtrong and actiue, and in the end obtayning victory might bee crowned with the greater glory. In which combate and conflict hee leaueth not the ſpirituall man to himſelfe, but continually ſendeth vnto him freſh aydes of renewed graces whereby he is inabled to ouercome. Euen as on the other ſide Sathan, the Prince of darkneſſe, though hee be thruſt out of his poſſeſſion and regency, yet hee leaueth and forſaketh not his wounded and weakned deputy the fleſh, but laboureth continually to recure his wound, miniſtreth vnto him new ſtrength, by his helliſh tentations and ſuggeſtions, and by breathing and infuſing into him the poyſon of enmity and malice againſt God and all goodneſſe, ſtirreth him vp to rebellion againſt his holy Spirit, and to make warre againſt that Garriſon of his graces which he hath placed in vs.

§.Sect.4.
The former intproued ydiuers rea-ns.

So that not onely the quality of holineſſe, but the holy Spirit, not onely the gifts and graces of the Spirit, but the Holy Ghoſt himſelfe dwelleth and raigneth in the man regenerate, keeping ſtill poſſeſſion, after that Sathan is driuen out, and ſtrengthening the regenerate part againſt all the aſſaults of the fleſh, and the luſts thereof. The which may appeare by theſe reaſons, firſt, becauſe wee are called the habitation of God, and the temples of the Holy Ghoſt, which cannot be vnderſtood of his gifts and graces onely, which are improperly ſaid to dwell in Temples, ſeeing this belongeth rather to perſons than vnto things and qualities, but of the holy Spirit himſelfe.

Cor.3.16.
6.19.

Secondly, the Spirit of God, and not his gifts and graces onely, are the bond of the ſpirituall vnion which wee haue with Chriſt; for dwelling in Chriſt our Head, and in vs likewiſe who are his members, it maketh vs to become one myſticall body with Him, euen as the head and diuers members make one naturall body, being animated and quickned by the ſame ſoule. Thirdly, the actions which in the Scriptures are attributed to the Spirit dwelling in vs, cannot fitly be applyed to bare qualities, but properly belong to the Spirit it ſelfe. For this Spirit dwelling in vs, is ſaid to rule and gouerne vs, to guide, direct, teach and inſtruct vs, to ſanctifie and purifie vs, to conuince vs of ſin, and to repleniſh vs with all ſauing graces. Now the quality of holineſſe, and the authour by whom it is created; the graces themſelues, and he that infuſeth them and worketh them in vs are diuers. Fourthly, as Sathan keepeth his reſidence in wicked men, working them vnto all manner of ſinne, and holding them ſo captiue, that they doe his will, (for ſo the Apoſtle ſaith, that the Epheſians walked in time paſt according to the Prince of the power of the ayre, the ſpirit that now worketh in the children of diſobedience, &c.) So the Spirit of God comming and thruſting him out of poſſeſſion, dwelleth in vs, leading vs into all truth, repleniſhing vs with all grace, & enclining vs to all holy obedience, and to the performance of all good and Chriſtian duties.

Epheſ.2.2.

Laſtly, the Spirit dwelling in vs, and the new man are plainly diſtinguiſhed in the Scriptures. For ſo the Apoſtle ſaith; yee are not in the fleſh, but in the ſpirit, if ſo be that the Spirit of God dwell in you, now if any man haue not the ſpirit of Chriſt (that is the ſame holy Spirit which dwelleth in our Head and Sauiour Chriſt) hee is none of his.

Rom.8.9.

And elſe-where he prayeth, that God would grant vnto the Epheſians, according to the riches of his grace, to be ſtrengthened with might by his ſpirit in the inner man. By all which it appeareth that not onely the quality of holineſſe wrought in vs by the Spirit, and the ſauing graces thereof, but alſo the Spirit it ſelfe, dwelleth in vs aſſiſting and ſtrengthening vs in this Chriſtian Warfare againſt the Deuill and the Fleſh with the luſts thereof.

Epheſ.3.16.

§. Sect.5.
That the ſpirit doth not dwell in vs eſſentially more than in other creatures.

Notwithſtanding, I doe not, nor dare affirme, that the Spirit of God dwelleth in vs eſſentially more than in any other creature, communicating his eſſence with vs, as an eſſentiall part of vs. For his nature and eſſence being moſt ſimple and indiuiſible, incomprehenſible, and omnipreſent, filling all places without repletion, and containing all, it ſelfe being infinite and contained of nothing, cannot be ſaid thus to dwell in man; for this were to deifie and make a God of him; much leſſe doe I ſay that the Spirit aſſumeth our nature, (as the ſecond perſon aſſumed the nature of Chriſt) to ſubſiſt in him by perſonall vnion and to become one with him and hee with vs, for thus alſo wee ſhould fall into the ſame errour of deifying man, and beſides, then the third perſon in Trinity ſhould bee incarnate as well as the ſecond. Yea, contrariwiſe wee are to know, that the Spirit is ſaid to be giuen vs in the ſame ſenſe, as hee is ſaid to be ſent forth vnto vs: Becauſe yee are ſonnes, God hath ſent forth the Spirit of his Sonne into your hearts, crying Abba father. Now by this phraſe of ſending forth; the Holy Ghoſt teacheth vs, that the Spirit is in one manner in Chriſt; and in another manner in vs; for hee is in him moſt

Gal.4.6.

moſt properly, ſubſtantially, and eſſentially, as being his ſpirit, coeſſentiall with him and co-eternall: in which reſpect the Apoſtle maketh him and the Spirit all one, 2.Cor.3.17. The Lord is that ſpirit; and where the ſpirit of the Lord is there is liberty, and Col.2.9. hee ſaith, that in him dwelleth the fulneſſe of the God-head bodily: but in vs not primarily, and originally, but as hee is ſent forth of Chriſt vnto vs, by whom wee haue ſpeciall right vnto him ſince his reſurrection, by vertue of his promiſe, Iohn 16.7. If I goe not away, the Comforter will not come vnto you, but if I depart I will ſend him vnto you. And by his mediation and interceſſion now ſitting at the right hand of his Father: according to that, I will pray the Father, and hee will giue you another Comforter, that he may abide with you for euer. So that the ſpirit is in Chriſt originally and aboue meaſure, euen the fulneſſe of the ſpirit, but in vs in that meaſure which we haue receiued from him, according to that of the Apoſtle, Epheſ.4.7. Vnto euery one of vs is giuen grace, according to the meaſure of the gift of Chriſt: and that of the Euangeliſt: Iohn 1.14. The Word was made fleſh and dwelt among vs, full of grace and truth. v.16. and of his fulneſſe haue all we receiued, and grace for grace. Finally, this oyle of the Spirit (like that of Aarons) was firſt powred vpon our Head Ieſus Chriſt, and from him deſcended to vs, as vpon the skirts of his cloathing, or rather members of his Body.

Col.2.9.

Iohn 16.7.

Iohn 14.16.

Epheſ.4.7.

Iohn 1.14.

Pſal.133.2.

§. Sect.6.
That the faithfull haue ſpeciall right to the very eſſence of the ſpirit, and that he dwelleth in them in reſpect of efficacie.

Furthermore although the Spirit of God doth not eſſentially dwell in vs more than in all other creatures; yet the Elect and faithfull haue right vnto him aboue all others, euen in reſpect of his eſſence and efficacy, becauſe he is ours by Gods free and gracious couenant, wherein he hath promiſed that he will be our God, and we ſhall be his people: now he is ours in his Sonne, and by his holy Spirit. So in many places the Lord promiſeth to giue vnto vs his holy Spirit, which is not onely to be vnderſtood of the gifts and graces of the ſpirit, but alſo of the vertue and efficacie of the ſpirit dwelling in vs, and effectually working theſe graces in our hearts; for ſo the Apoſtle ſaith, that the loue of God is ſhed abroad in our hearts, by the Holy Ghoſt which is giuen vnto vs; where he ſheweth, that by Gods gift we haue right, not onely to the graces of the Spirit, but euen after a ſpeciall manner to the Spirit himſelfe. Beſides where Chriſt is ſaid to dwell in vs, and to be vnited vnto vs by his Spirit, we are to vnderſtand, that the bond of this vnion, is not onely bare qualities, and gifts and graces of the Spirit, but euen the Spirit it ſelfe, which dwelling in Chriſt our Head eſſentially, is after an vnſpeakable and myſticall manner, yet really and truly, communicated vnto vs who are the members of his body. In which reſpects, though the Spirit of God in regard of his eſſence be alike preſent to all creatures, yet is hee not ſaid to be giuen vnto them, or to be their ſpirit, becauſe they haue no right vnto him by couenant as wee haue, nor any intereſt by Ieſus Chriſt, neither yet any efficacy, operation nor influence of ſauing grace from him, in all which hee is proper onely to the Elect. Moreouer, by vertue of this donation and right, the holy Spirit becomming ours, doth worke in vs after a ſpeciall and powerfull manner; hee is intimate, familiar and in neere acquaintance with vs, like inmates or co-inhabitants, comforting, directing, ruling, ſtrengthening, and cheriſhing vs. In which reſpect wee are ſaid to bee his [a] Houſes and Temples in which [b] he dwelleth. Whereas contrariwiſe Worldlings and Infidels, to all theſe purpoſes are meere ſtrangers vnto him, becauſe they receiue him not, but make their bodies habitations for vncleane ſpirits. For ſo our Sauiour ſaith, that the World cannot receiue this Spirit of Truth, becauſe it ſeeth him not, neither knoweth him, but yee (ſaith he to his Diſciples, and in them to all the faithfull) know him, for hee dwelleth with you, and ſhall be in you. Furthermore, this holy Spirit is giuen to the Elect and faithfull in a ſpeciall manner, not onely in the fruits and ſtreames of his graces, but alſo to be vnto them as the roote and fountaine from which they ſpring and flow, and the authour, worker, preſeruer and continuer of all grace and goodneſſe in them; according to that of our Sauiour. Whoſoeuer drinketh of the water that I ſhall giue him, ſhall neuer thirſt, but the water that I ſhall giue him, ſhall bee in him a well of water, ſpringing vnto euerlaſting life. And againe, If any man thirſt let him come vnto mee and drinke; He that beleeueth on me (as the Scripture hath ſaid) out of his belly ſhall flow riuers of liuing water. But this, (ſaith the Euangeliſt) he ſpake of his ſpirit, which they that beleeue on him ſhould receiue: for the Holy Ghoſt was not yet giuen, becauſe that Ieſus was not yet glorified. Now the ſtreames of Gods graces, and the euerlaſting ſpringing fountaine from which they flow are diuers, and to be diſtinguiſhed, the one being the cauſe and the other the effect, the one the tree the other the fruit. Finally, to conclude this point, although the Spirit dwelleth in vs, in reſpect of eſſence as in other creatures; yet he doth after an eſpeciall manner exerciſe his nature, and ſhew his preſence by his vertue and efficacy more in the faithfull than in the whole earth, in that he chooſeth them for his owne peculiar people, taketh full poſſeſſion of them as of his owne right, raigneth and ruleth in their hearts and conſciences, as in the chiefe ſeate of his Kingdome, vniteth them vnto Chriſt their Head, purgeth and purifieth them from their ſinne and corruption,

Eſay 59.21.

Eze.11.19. & 36.26.& 37.14

Rom.5.5.

[a] 1.Cor.3.16. & 6.19. 2.Cor.6.16.
[b] Rom.8.9,11. 1.Cor.3.16. 2.Tim.1.14.

Iohn 4.14.

Iohn 7.37,38.

tion, repleniſheth them with all ſanctifying and ſauing grace, defendeth, preſerueth, and ſtrengtheneth them from all enemies, and from the inundation of all dangers by his Almighty power and eſpeciall prouidence watching ouer them. And finally inlighteneth them in all truth, and guideth and directeth them in the way of holines and righteouſneſſe which leadeth to Gods Kingdome. And euen thus doth Sathan dwel in the children of vnbeliefe; not by communicating his eſſence vnto them; for then they ſhould be no more men but incarnate Deuils, but by taking full poſſeſſion of them as his owne vaſſals, by infuſing malice into their hearts, and all manner of corruption and ſinne into all the powers of their ſoules and bodies, by ſetting vp his Throne in them, and ruling them with his power according to his owne pleaſure, and making them to become his ſlaues to doe his will; finally by leading and guiding them into all manner of wickednes through his tentations and ſuggeſtions, vntill at laſt hee bringeth them together with himſelfe vnto condemnation and vtter deſtruction in the fire of Hell.

Tim.2.26,

Chap. IIII.

The erroneous conceit of the Papiſts, who by the fleſh vnderſtand the body, and the ſenſuall faculties onely.

§. Sect.1. That the Pa- ſts propound to vs a iend to fight inſt inſtead ur enemy.

HAuing ſhewed what our enemies in this ſpirituall Warfare are, we ſhould now proceed to diſcouer their nature and properties, were it not that theſe enemies were by the Deuill and the World diſguiſed: yea, quite hid from our ſight in ſecret ambuſhments; and our friends through their malice muſtered againſt vs, as though they were our enemies, that ſo whileſt wee bend all our forces againſt them who oppoſe vs in this ſeeming hoſtility, theſe may ſuddenly ſet vpon vs, and aſſault vs at vnawares, giuing vs deadly wounds when wee feare no danger. For the plotting and contriuing of which ſtratagem they vſe the vaſſals of Antichriſt, the Clergy of Rome as their Chieftaines and eſpeciall inſtruments, who hiding our true enemy, the corruption of nature, which hath ouerſpread all the powers and parts of our ſoules and bodies, vnder the cloſe couert of their cunning ſophiſtry, doe in ſtead thereof, offer to our view ſeeming foes of their owne fancying. For by the fleſh they would haue vs to vnderſtand (not the reliques of corruption which keepe their chiefe reſidence in the ſoule, minde, and will) but the body it ſelfe and the fleſh thereof; and at moſt the inferiour, bruite and ſenſitiue faculties of the ſoule; and by the ſpirit they vnderſtand the intellectuall faculties, the minde, reaſon and vnderſtanding, and ſo affirme this to be the fight betweene the fleſh and the ſpirit, when as the body and ſenſitiue parts doe rebell and ſtand in oppoſition againſt the vnderſtanding and reaſon, and contrariwiſe when theſe ſtriue to maintaine their Regency by keeping them vnder and ſubduing them to their Lawes and Orders. And although, being ſometime conuinced with the euidence of truth, they giue together with vs the ſame verdict, affirming that not the body it ſelfe is meant by the fleſh, but the corruption of it, that it is onely the inſtrument of the ſoule in wicked actions, and the ſoule it ſelfe the chiefe cauſe of ſinne, and that the minde, vnderſtanding and reaſon are poyſoned and tainted with naturall corruption; yet by and by they are ready againe to make voide their euidence and to reuerſe this ſentence, and relapſing into their old abſurdity, they either vnderſtand groſly by the fleſh the body alone, or when they pleaſe to deale more liberally with vs, they alſo grant that the inferiour parts of the ſoule, the animall and ſenſitiue faculties are thereby included and comprehended, and ſo imagining that therefore our regeneration is in the Scriptures ſaid to be imperfect, becauſe, howſoeuer the mind and vnderſtanding are truly and perfectly regenerate, yet the body remayneth in the ſtate of corruption, they here-hence conclude, that in the ſoule remayneth no part of this originall corruption, but onely in the body.

§. Sect.2. That the chief Doctors of the Papiſts by fleſh vnderſtand the body

All which doth euidently appeare, not only by their groſſe practice (for if they did not imagine that the body were the chiefe cauſe of all ſin, why doe they ſo miſerably and ſuperſtitiouſly afflict it, placing their mortification onely in a bodily exerciſe, and corporall puniſhments? and if they did not thinke that the ſoule and intellectuall faculties were pure and free from this corruption, why doe they ſo much magnifie and extoll it, aſcribing all our falls and faylings either to the body alone, or to the reaſon and minde only through the corruption & default thereof) But this alſo may appeare by their doctrine: For not to produce many teſtimonies out of a multitude of Authours, but onely to name two or three of the chiefe and moſt refined, Thomas Aquinas himſelfe howſoeuer ſometime hee agreeth with vs, holding that the fleſh is the [a] corruption of nature and originall ſinne, as appeareth in his readings vpon the Romanes, yet in other places he confoundeth the fleſh [b] and the body, and maketh the body of ſin and death, and the naturall body to be all one, although in theſe places, by body and fleſh he vnderſtandeth the vices and corruptions of them, as he expoundeth himſelfe in [c] other places. So likewiſe he holdeth that by the Spirit, part red Ibidem.

[a] Aquin. in Rom.7.lect.4.

[b] Aquin. in Epheſ.5.lect.9.

[c] In Rom.7.lect.4.& cap.8. lect.2.

regenerate, or inner man, wee are to vnderſtand the d minde and reaſon, which as hee ſaith is called the inner man, becauſe that is ſaid to be man, which is principall and chiefe in him. And thus hee oppoſeth the fleſh and the heart, or the minde and reaſon; where ſpeaking of the Apoſtles e words; I know that in me, that is in my fleſh there dwelleth no good thing, hee ſaith, that this is not to be vnderſtood of his reaſon: for in me, that is, in my heart good dwelleth, according to that, Epheſians the third, where the Apoſtle ſaith, that Chriſt himſelfe dwelleth in our hearts by faith. So alſo Lewis Granada, a chiefe Doctor of their ſuperſtitious deuotion and mortification, joyning with the famous Heathen Philoſopher Mercurius Triſmegiſtus, inueigheth againſt the body, as though it alone were this corrupt fleſh, which is the authour and fountaine of all our ſin and euill. Vnleſſe (ſaith he) O ſonne thou hate thy body, thou canſt not loue thy ſelfe, for it is impoſſible ſeriouſly to intend both, vnto things mortall and diuine. But firſt of all of neceſſity thou muſt put off this garment which thou carrieſt about thee, being the couering of ignorance, the foundation of wickedneſſe, the bond of corruption, the darke vaile, the liuing death, the carcaſſe of the ſenſes, the moouing Sepulchre, the houſehold Thiefe, which hateth whileſt it flattereth, and enuieth whilſt it hateth, &c. which ſpeech of the heathen man he judgeth ſo full of light and truth, that for it alone hee well deſerued the name of Mercurius Triſmegiſtus the thrice great or excellent. And in the ſame Chapter hauing demanded, how it can poſſibly be, that any man can hate himſelfe, that is his owne body, vnto which naturally he is ſo obliged in the bond of friendſhip, that the Apoſtle ſaith, No man yet euer hated his owne fleſh, but nouriſheth and cheriſheth it? anſwereth, that this is an argument properly of fleſh and bloud; and that Gods Spirit and Grace, aske rather and with better reaſon, how can it poſſible be that they ſhould not hate it; For whereas the moſt pernicious enemies vnto man are, Hell, the Deuill, the World, the Fleſh and Sin, this laſt is the greateſt, but the next vnto it is our fleſh, which is the mother and ſeed of all ſin. Thus alſo Bellarmine, although in many places he ſpeaketh as much for vs in this queſtion as wee would haue him, yet hee commendeth whipping and tormenting of the body, as a worke ſatisfactory, tending to the mortifying of the fleſh, alleadging for it theſe abſurde and ridiculous reaſons; firſt the Apoſtles exāple, who ſaith, that he did chaſtiſe his body (for ſo the vulgar latine readeth it) that ſo hee might bring it into ſubiection. Where by body hee groſſely vnderſtandeth the very body of the Apoſtle (whereas it heere rather ſignifieth the body of ſinne and corruption, which elſe where he calleth the body of death) and by chaſtizing, whipping; whereas the word ὑπωπιάζω ſignifyeth to ſuppreſſe or keepe vnder. And although hee granteth the Apoſtle heere vſeth a borrowed ſpeech from thoſe who according to ancient cuſtome fought for a maſtery; and ſaith, that he did euill intreate and keepe vnder his body, like thoſe Champions who either with their fiſts, or with bags of ſand did beat and bruiſe their aduerſary till they were blacke and blue, yet hee ſaith (and onely ſaith it without any ſhewe of reaſon) that it is very probable that Paul vſed to whip his owne body, both becauſe the Greeke word ſignifieth ſo much (which is vtterly falſe) and becauſe this kind of puniſhment was vſuall among the ancients; which alſo wee muſt take vpon his word, ſeeing he neither alleadgeth, nor in trueth is able to alleadge any authoritie for it. His other arguments to commend whipping and afflicting of the body, are the Publicans ſmiting of his breaſt, whereby hee ſhewed the compunction of his heart in his humiliation and penitent confeſſion of his ſinnes; ſome teſtimonies of Hierome which ſpeake of faſting, ſackcloath and beating of the breaſt; Gods approouing and commaunding the paying of voluntary vowes, the which hee childiſhly reſtraineth to faſtings and other afflictions of the body, and among the reſt to whipping, though there be no colour for it in the place which hee alledgeth. And finally he produceth the example of Iohn the Baptiſt whoſe garment was Cammels hayre, his meate locuſts, his bed (as he ſaith, but proueth not) the ground, his houſe the deſart. All which reaſons and examples being farre vnfitting the wit of ſuch a ſubtill ſophiſter, and in trueth nothing to the purpoſe, I will paſſe ouer, ſuppoſing that the bare repeating of them is a ſufficient confutation, and that like abortiue birthes they will preſently dye, as ſoone as they come to light.

e In Rom. 7. lect. 3.

Epheſ. 3. 17.

De perfect. amoris Dei, cap. 5.

Epheſ. 5.

De pœnitent. lib. 4. c. 6. tom. 3.

1. Cor. 9. 27.

Rom. 7. 24.

Numb. 30.

§. Sect. 3.
That the Papiſts in their pureſt doctrine vnderſtand by the fleſh our bodies and the inferiour and ſenſitiue faculties only.

And thus do they (as it were in their dreame or dotage) by the fleſh vnderſtand the body alone, but when they are moſt awake, and in the beſt ſtrength of their memory and vnderſtanding, they do by the fleſh vnderſtand the inferiour parts of the ſoule, the ſenſitiue faculties, the appetite, and imagination, as they are corrupted, which alſo according to the doctrine of the laſt councell of Trent, they hold not to be ſinne but onely the puniſhment of it, though the Apoſtle maketh the fleſh, not onely to be the cauſe of al other ſinne, but alſo with a certaine emphaſis calleth it, ſinne it ſelfe. So on the other ſide by the ſpirit they vnderſtand the ſuperior part of the ſoule, the reaſon, vnderſtanding and will, which they magnifie and extoll, as though it were free in it ſelfe from all corruption, the cauſe of all good, and a profeſſed

Rom. 7. 17.

enemy to the fleſh, fighting againſt it continually with all the luſts thereof. And thus Thomas Aquinas ſaith, that the fleſh is ſaid to fight againſt the ſpirit, in as much as the ſenſitiue appetite tendeth to the contrary of that which reaſon deſireth, according to that of the Apoſtle. Gal. 5. the fleſh luſteth againſt the ſpirit. So Lewis de Granada, ſaith, that there are in our ſoule two principall parts, which of Diuines are called the ſuperiour & inferiour parts. And that in the ſuperiour (which is called the ſpirit and the minde) is the will and vnderſtanding which ruleth the will, and is (as it were) its eye and guide. In the inferiour is the ſenſitiue appetite with the imagination which alſo is the eye of the appetite of which it is moued; and theſe parts he maketh to be (as it were) two Commonwealthes in man, the one of beaſtes, the other of Angels. That hee calleth elſe where the fleſh, concupiſcence, ſenſualitie, or the ſenſitiue appetite, whence all the perturbations of the minde doe ariſe, as it is corrupt and made inordinate through ſinne. And in the ſame place hee compareth the ſuperiour part to a wife of ſo great beautie, nobilitie and wiſedome, as is poſſibly incident to that ſex, making the man happy who is married vnto her; and the inferiour part he compareth to a ſeruant, a witch and ſorcereſſe, vpon whoſe loue this man is ſo beſotted that putting away his wife, hee maketh himſelfe a prey to his ſlaue, &c.

Aquin.in Rom. 7.lect.3.

L.Granat. de perfect.amoris Dei cap.7.

Ducis peccator. lib.1.par.2.cap. 19.

§. Sect.4.
That the practice of Popiſh mortification plainly ſheweth that by the fleſh they vnderſtand the body onely, their mortification being nothing elſe but a bodily exerciſe,

And this is their pureſt conceit concerning the fleſh and the Spirit, which being wholly corrupt, how great is the corruption? For in their practice they manifeſtly ſhew that by the fleſh they vnderſtand the body, ſeeing for the mortification thereof they appoint onely bodily exerciſes, which tend to the vexing, tormenting and weakning thereof; as Penance, Pilgrimages, Watchings, Whippings, rough clothing, hard lodginng and ſuch like: ſuppoſing that they fight againſt the fleſh, when they make war againſt their own bodies by afflicting & puniſhing it. Wherein that I may not ſeeme to ſlander them, I will inſert an Hiſtory of Monkiſh mortification, as it is recorded by their famous Saint Climacus in his Booke called the Ladder of Paradiſe, and in the fifth ſtaffe of his Ladder. Which ſtory for the worthineſſe of it, is related by Lewis of Granada, in his Booke intitled the Memoriall of a Chriſtian Life, as a perfect patterne of mortification, and is moſt vnfaithfully tranſlated into Engliſh by one Hopkins a Prieſt, for the practice and exerciſe of the Engliſh Catholickes. And not to alter his methode though moſt confuſed, becauſe it is well enough ſorted and ſuited to the matter, nor to tire the reader with viewing ouer euery particular in that heape of traſh, briefely he telleth vs, that himſelfe comming into a much admired monaſtery, hee ſaw among the Monkes in their practice of penitence, ſuch wonderfull things, as the eye of the negligent hath not ſeene, the eare of the ſlothfull hath not heard, neither hath entred into the heart of the dull and ſluggiſh. To wit, ſuch things and wordes as might ouercome with violence euen God himſelfe, and ſuch faſhions and endeauours, as would ſpeedily encline him to ſhewe mercy. For (ſaith he) I ſawe ſome of the penitents ſtand abroad in the open ayre, watching there whole nights, vntil the morning, neuer mouing their feete out of the ſame place; and when they were grieuouſly vexed with drowſineſſe comming vpon them, they offered force to nature, and would not take any reſt, but reuiled themſelues, and with diſgraces and contumelies offered againſt their owne perſons, they rowſed vp their ſpirits. Others I ſawe ſtanding in prayer & hauing their handes bound behind their backes like malefactors, they inclined their pale faces towards the ground, crying out that they were vnworthy to look vnto heauen. Neither did they preſume in their orizons to ſay any thing to Almightie God, by reaſon of the fearefull doubting of their thoughts, and conſciences, but onely offered their ſilent ſoules and their mute mindes vnto God being full of darkeneſſe and deſperation. I ſaw others ſitting on the pauement couered with ſack-cloth & aſhes, which hid their faces betweene their knees, beating their foreheads againſt the earth. Others I ſaw who in reſpect of their habite, cogitations and actions ſeemed out of their wits, whoſe mindes were ſo ſtupified with exceſſiue ſorrowing, that they ſtood like copper images, compaſſed about with darkeneſſe, and made inſenſible (as it were) for all vitall actions. Others humbly deſired of God to be heere vexed and tormented, that there they might haue mercy; and many afflicted and caſt downe through a burthened conſcience, ſaide that it ſhould well ſatisfie them to be freed from hell torments, though they ſhould neuer attaine vnto the ioyes of Gods kingdome; and that it was ſufficient if they were freed from Gods great and terrible commination, and thoſe vnknown, hidden and helliſh paines, neither durſt they deſire to be deliuered from puniſhments altogether. In others I ſawe Dauids words effected indeed, men poſſeſſed with ſorrows, made crooked to the ende of their liues, going mournfully all their dayes, and caſting out noyſome ſmels out of the putrified parts of their bodies; who liued without all care of their fleſh, forgot to eat their bread, mingling their drinke with groanes, and their bread with aſhes. There you might ſee their burned tongues like wearied Dogges hanging out of their mouthes. Some among them tormented themſelues in the ſcorching heate

Memor.lib.2. in tract. de ſatisfact.cap.1.

of the Sunne; others contrariwiſe afflicted themſelues with extreame cold. Some taſting a little water that they might not be parched with thirſt, ſo contented themſelues without drinking more, others eating a ſmall bit of bread, would caſt away the reſt, affirming that they were vnworthy to feed on the meat which belonged to reaſonable men, becauſe they had carried thēſelues vnreaſonably like vnto beaſts. Some amongſt thē excited others, ſaying, let vs run brethren and not obey this filthy and wicked fleſh, but let vs kill it, as it hath firſt killed vs. And thus (ſaith he) theſe bleſſed Penitents behaued themſelues. Their knees, with their continuall praying, were growne hard; their eyes fayling and ouer-wearied, were ſunke deepe into their heads, the haire of their browes and eye-lids being falne away and loſt, their cheekes ſeemed burnt with the heate of their ſcalding teares, their faces ſo withered, pale and deformed that they differed not from dead men. Their breſts were made ſore with their blowes, and being blacke and blue with bruiſes, they did ſpit bloud. What vſe had they of any bed? What cared they for cleane and whole cloathing? All there were torne, filthy and full of lice. And in a word what is their affliction who are poſſeſſed with a Deuill, in compariſon of theſe? What the bitter vexation of thoſe who mourne for their departed friends? What their ſorrow who liue in baniſhment? What the puniſhments of cruell Parricides? Surely the paines and torments which all theſe vnwillingly ſuffer, are nothing being compared with their voluntary penance. And not content with puniſhments inflicted by themſelues, they would intreat their great Iudge and Gouernour of their Monaſtery, who was a very Angell amongſt men, that he would put irons and chaines about their necks and hands, and faſten their feet in the ſtocks, not ſuffering them to come out till they were to be buried. Yea, indeed they would not ſo much as haue any buriall. (Neither will I hide their wonderfull Charity towards God and the penitence of theſe bleſſed men.) For being to die and to become Citizens of that heauenly City, they would with earneſt prayers adjure their Abbot, that hee would not vouchſafe them humane buriall, but like brute creatures caſt them either into the riuers or into the open fields to be deuoured of beaſts; which ſometimes he alſo did being ouercome with their importunate requeſts. But what was the quality of their place and habitation? Surely it was very darke, vnhandſome, ſtinking, foule and filthy, ſo as it might fitly be called a priſon for condemned perſons, and the very ſight thereof might well bee a Miſtreſſe of perfect penitence and mourning. Yea, they were not contented with thoſe torments which could be inflicted by men; but (as he further ſaith) they deſired of God with many grones and great lamentation, that they might be taken away by the Deuill, or fall into ſome grieuous diſeaſes, or looſe their eyes, and ſo become a miſerable ſpectacle vnto all men, that ſo by theſe preſent paines they might eſcape future puniſhments. Now if we would know the fruit of all their labours, and what inward peace and ſecurity they had by theſe outward torments and vexation; this alſo in that worthy Story is made knowne vnto vs, namely, that as they paſſed their dolefull dayes in theſe ſelfe-deuiſed tortures and torments of body, ſo at the day of death they were no leſſe vexed with terrours of conſcience, affrighting feares, and dreadfull doubtings; as in truth what other can be expected from them who by their ſuperſtitious deuiſes haue robbed God of the glory of his free grace in our ſaluation, derogated from the al-ſufficiency of Chriſt Ieſus our alone Sauiour his merits and obedience, and in a great part arrogated the prayſe of the remiſſion of their ſinnes, and attaining vnto euerlaſting life, to their owne penance and ſatisfactions?

§. Sect. 5. That the Popiſh Doctors are iuſtly to be taxed for teaching the former doctrine: and the ſuperſtitious people for putting it in practice.

Now by this which hath beene ſaid it appeareth what the Church of Rome and her adherents conceiue and hold concerning the fleſh, in reſpect both of their doctrine and practice. Wherin they are juſtly to be taxed, firſt of vntruth and falſhood, in that they doe herein teach groſſe errours which are directly contrary to the whole courſe of Scriptures, as it ſhall (God willing) afterwards plainly appeare. Secondly, of damnable pride, and that firſt in this reſpect that they afflict and torture their bodies by their voluntary penance for meere oſtentation to be ſeene and prayſed of men, (for elſe to what end ſerue their going bare-foot on their Pilgrimages; and their Whipping of themſelues in the open ſtreets) of all which their torments, if any pittying them more than they doe themſelues, would haue them eaſed and freed; the beſt way were to follow the aduice of Plato, who ſeeing men take compaſſion on the proud Cynicke Diogenes, becauſe he voluntarily ſtood in a great ſtorme of raine, told them, that the onely way to rid him out of that miſery, was to withdraw themſelues, and to let none remayne to looke vpon him: for there would ſurely but few be carried about in this Pageant of Penance, if there were no Spectators who might encourage them with their applauſe. Secondly, their pride appeareth in the acting and ſuffering of this voluntary Penance in reſpect of the end, which is not ſo much to mortifie the fleſh, as to make ſatisfaction to Gods Iuſtice for their ſins, or to merit his fauour and the ioyes of Heauen; wherein as they derogate much from Gods mercy, and the al-ſufficient merits and ſatisfaction of Ieſus Chriſt, ſo alſo they manifeſt their helliſh pride, which will not ſuffer them wholly to deny themſelues, and aſcribe the glory of their iuſtification and ſaluation onely to Gods free grace and Chriſts ſufferings and obedience: but needs will they ſhare with them in the prayſe, in part at leaſt pay their owne debt, and giue ſomething towards the purchaſe of our heauenly inheritance. In which reſpect it may truely bee ſaid, that the leaner they make their bodies with penance and puniſhment, the more their hearts are fatned with pride and vaine-glory; and the more they ſubdue and keep vnder their fleſhly carkaſe, the more their minds are lifted vp with opinion of their merit and deſeruing. Thirdly wee may in this regard juſtly taxe them to bee thoſe imposters and deceiuers of whom the Apoſtle ſpeaketh, who ſeeke to deceiue men of their heauenly reward; ſeeing they hold not the Head Chriſt, but in part reſt vpon their owne ſuperſtitious deuices, being (as the Apoſtle there ſpeaketh,) vainely puft vp in their fleſhly minds, and placing the chiefe of there Religion, in a voluntary humility, and worſhipping of Angels, in ſubiecting themſelues to humane ordinances after the commandements and doctrines of men; which things haue at the moſt but a ſhew of wiſedome, in wil-worſhip and humilitie, and not ſparing or puniſhing of the body. Laſtly, herein wee may well charge them with groſſe hypocryſie, and falſe treachery, ſeeing they betray the poore Chriſtian who asketh their counſell and aduiſe in this ſpirituall warfare, whileſt they pretend his ſtrengthening and defence. For as they profeſſe Chriſt in ſhew, but oppoſe him in truth, being thoſe limmes of Antichriſt who make warre againſt him and his members; ſo they outwardly proclaime war againſt the world and the fleſh, when as in truth none are greater friends vnto them; for that the fleſh our true enemy may eſcape vntouched and vnhurt in the Chriſtian conflict, they diſguiſe and hide it, leſt it ſhould be knowne, and craftily ſubſtitute into the place thereof our bodies which are our friends to receiue deadly wounds and blowes by the ſword of mortification; and whileſt they afflict and perſecute them, as though they were the onely troublers of this our Iſrael they (as Ieſabell Baalls Prieſts) cheriſh and nouriſh the corruption of nature, the fleſh and the whole army of carnall luſts (as it were) at their proper charges giuing them meate and drink at their owne table.

Col.2.18.19. 20.22.23.

§. Sect.6. That our oppoſition againſt the Papiſts in this doctrine is very neceſſarie.

And thus haue I ſpent more paines and paper vpon this baſe ſubject than it deſerueth, and both by their doctrine and practice ſhewed what the Church of Rome and her fauorites thinke of the fleſh and of the meanes whereby it may bee mortified and ſubdued, partly that all might take heed of the bewitching cups of the whoore of Babylons fornications, ſeeing thoſe who haue drunke thereof, haue beene ſo intoxicated and made drunke with theſe inchanted potions, that like mad men and inraged bedlems they haue not onely wraſtled with God himſelfe, to ſpoyle him of his glory, murthered his holy Martyrs and cauſed the ſtreets to runne with riuers of their bloud, but alſo frantiquely haue offered violence to their owne perſons, grieuouſly tormented their owne bodies, and ſought to ſatiſfie their inſatiable cruelty, by drinking deepe draughts in their owne bloud. Partly alſo to preſerue all, who loue the truth from theſe ſuperſtitious cruelties in the practice of their mortification, ſeeing corrupted nature, and blinde ſuperſtition, with as ſtrong a ſtreame of violence, carrieth men headlong into theſe inhumane and vnnaturall practices againſt their owne perſons, as the pleaſures of the fleſh tranſport others who are licentious and prophane to the imbracing of them. The which wee may plainely ſee in the practice of the Baalitiſh prieſts, who with kniues lanched their owne bodies, and in the experience of all ages among the heathens and infidels, yea euen of our owne times, not only among the Sauadges & Barbarians, but aboue all others among the Papiſts who are all ready rather to tormẽt their bodies, than to croſſe their carnall wils; to torture the fleſh, rather than to ſubdue their fleſhly luſts; yea euen to mortifie with voluntary penance their naturall parts and members, rather than to labour in the crucifying of the old man, and to forſake any of their darling ſinnes. But eſpecially my maine drift herein is to diſcouer our true enemy that wee may diſcerne it from our friends, and to ſhew what in truth the fleſh is, that ſo wee may labour to ſubdue and mortifie it, ſeeing it is ready in craft and ſubtiltie to hide or diſguiſe it ſelfe, and to ſubſtitute another in its place, that ſo we may ſpend our ſtrength in vaine, and being ſpent and tyred in fighting againſt thoſe who are friends vnto vs, may bee the more eaſily ouercome at the firſt incounter of our ſpirituall enemies.

CHAP. V.

That the body and ſenſitiue faculties onely are not the fleſh proued by the Scriptures, and diuers reaſons.

§. Sect.1. That the body and ſenſitiue faculties only are not the fleſh proued by teſtimonies of the Scripture.

AND therefore hauing ſhewed what is the erroneous conceipt of the Papiſts concerning the fleſh, in the next place wee will confute it, and proue that by fleſh wee are to vnderſtand, not the body and inferiour and ſenſitiue faculties of the ſoule, nor yet onely the corruption of them both; but alſo the corruption of the whole man, and principally of the reaſon and will which they magnifie with ſo many prayſes. And this will appeare by the cleare euidence of the holy Sciptures, by ſtrong and demonſtratiue reaſons grounded vpon them, by the teſtimony of the Fathers, yea euen of the Aduerſaries themſelues. And firſt in the whole courſe and current of the Scriptures wee may obſerue that there is much more ſpoken of the ſinfull corruption of the ſoule, than of the body; and in the ſoule, not onely of the inferiour, ſenſitiue and animall faculties, but alſo of the ſuperiour and intellectuall, as of the corruption and deprauation of the minde, vnderſtanding, reaſon, wiſedome and will. The Apoſtle ioyneth them both together, 2. Cor. 7.1. Hauing therefore (ſaith he) theſe promiſes (dearely beloued) let vs cleanſe our ſelues from all filthineſſe of the fleſh and ſpirit, perfecting holineſſe in the feare of God. Where he neceſſarily implyeth, that both in himſelfe, and in thoſe beloued Saints to whom he writeth, there was remaining corruption and filthineſſe of nature, which was to bee purged away, not onely in the body which here is ſignified by fleſh, but alſo in the ſoule, which is here vnderſtood by the Spirit. So Ephe. 2.3. Among whom (ſaith he) alſo wee all had our conuerſation in times paſt, in the luſts of our fleſh, fulfilling the deſires of the fleſh and minde. And Rom. 8.8. he telleth vs, that they, who are in the fleſh cannot pleaſe God. Where by fleſh wee cannot vnderſtand the body (for then the ſeruants of God could not pleaſe him in this life) but the corruprion of nature, with which our bodies and ſoules are defiled, till they be renewed and ſanctified by Gods Spirit. And thus Chryſoſtome expoundeth this place. What then (ſaith he) ſhall we deſtroy our owne bodies, and ſo goe out of the fleſh that we may pleaſe God? Doeſt thou command vs to be murtherers, when as thou pretendeſt to draw vs vnto vertue? Yee ſee what abſurdities doe hence ariſe, if theſe things be ſimply and literally vnderſtood. But by fleſh here he meaneth not the body or bodily eſſence, but a worldly and carnall life addicted to wantonneſſe and voluptuous pleaſures, which make the whole man to become fleſh. For as they who are led by Gods ſpirit, haue alſo their bodies made ſpirituall, ſo they who are led by the fleſh and are addicted to carnall delights, they make their ſoules to become fleſhly and carnall, not by changing the eſſence and ſubſtance, but by ſpoyling it of true nobility. And this manner of ſpeaking is vſed in the Old Teſtament, where the fleſh ſignifieth that groſſe and earthly life, which is filthily intangled in all abſurd pleaſures. For God ſaith to Noah, my ſpirit ſhall not ſtay with theſe men becauſe they are fleſh. And yet Noah himſelfe was clothed and encompaſſed with the garment of fleſh; but this was not the fault that offended God, to be compaſſed with fleſh, becauſe this was the worke of nature, but in that they had made choyſe of a carnall and ſenſuall life. And therefore Paul ſaith, They who are in the fleſh cannot pleaſe God; and alſo addeth; But you are not in the fleſh but in the ſpirit, not vnderſtanding ſimply the ſubſtance of the fleſh, (for ſo they were in it to whom hee writeth) but ſuch a fleſh which is drawne and oppreſſed with luſts and paſſions. Euen as the like ſpeech of our Sauiour is to bee vnderſtood, but you are not of the world, not becauſe they had not their habitation in the world, But becauſe they were not defiled with worldly malitiouſneſſe. And afterwards more fully expounding thoſe words; You are not in the fleſh but in the ſpirit; What then (ſaith he) were they not in the fleſh? and did they go about without bodies? What ſenſe or reaſon were in ſuch a ſpeech? And therefore you ſee that he meaneth by fleſh, a fleſhly life. And thus alſo Ambroſe expoundeth this place, The Apoſtles (ſaith hee) by denying thoſe to be in the fleſh whom it is manifeſt to haue beene in the fleſh, did not condemne in them the ſubſtance of fleſh, but their ſinnes and ſinfull corruptions, that is, the workes of the fleſh.

2.Cor.7.1.

*Epheſ.*2.3.

*Chryſoſt.in Rom8.Ser.*13.
*Rom.*8.8.

Ambroſ.de fide reſurrect.To.in3.

§. *Sect.*2.
Other teſtimonies to proue the former point.

And vnto theſe teſtimonies of Scripture many more might be added. As Tit. 1.15. Vnto the pure all things are pure, but vnto them that are defiled and vnbeleeuing is nothing pure, but euen their minde and conſcience is defiled. So the Apoſtle ſaith, that the wiſedome or [a] minding of the fleſh is enmity againſt God, and that the [b] minde as well as the body is fleſhly. And thus he exhorteth the Epheſians to bee renewed in the ſpirit of their minds, thereby implying that not onely the body and ſenſitiue faculties are naturally corrupted, but alſo the minde, the chiefe part of man, and hereof the ſpirit, that is, the prime vigour and chiefe faculty of the minde. For what needeth any renouation if there were not in them the taynture of their old corruption? So Rom. 12.2. And be not conformed to this world, but be transformed by the renewing of your minde, that you may proue what is that good, that acceptable, and perfect will of God. Whereby he implyeth that naturally they were corrupted, euen in the vnderſtanding part, and ignorant of the will of God, till they were renewed and inlightned by the Spirit of God, which renouation is not finiſhed at once, but by little and little, euen to the end of life; according to that 2. Cor. 4.16. Though our outward man periſh, yet the inward man is renewed day by day. Againe, where the Apoſtle prayeth vnto God that the minds of the faithfull might bee renewed, he plainely intimateth that they were by nature

[a] *Rom.*8.7. τὸ φρόνημα.
[b] *Col.*2.18. ὑπὸ τοῦ νοὸς τῆς σαρκὸς αὐτοῦ,
[c] *Eph.*4.23.

*Rom.*12.2.

1.Theſ.5.23.

Eph.1.17.18.

Eph.4.18.

Eph.6.12.

ture corrupt and ſinfull. And thus he prayeth that the faitfull Theſſalonians might be ſanctified wholly, and that their whole ſpirit, and ſoule and body might be preſerued blameleſſe vnto the comming of our Lord Ieſus Chriſt. And that the Epheſians might haue the ſpirit of wiſedome and reuelation in the knowledge of him, and that the eyes of their vnderſtanding being inlightened they might know what was the hope of their Calling, &c. Of which prayers they had great neede, ſeeing as the Apoſtle teſtifieth of them, they together with the reſt of the Gentiles had their vnderſtanding darkned being alienated from the life of God, through the ignorance which was in them, becauſe of the blindneſſe of their heart. Epheſ. 4. 18. Finally the Apoſtle plainely determineth this queſtion, whereas hee ſaith that the enemies with whom wee wraſtle in this Chriſtian Warfare, are not fleſh and bloud, but ſpirituall wickedneſſes, euen the wicked ſpirit, the world and our owne corruption.

§. Sect.3. Reaſons to proue that the body only is not the fleſh. The firſt taken from the names that are giuen vnto it.

Omne peccatum caro dicitur. Ambroſ. in Epheſ. 2.

Ezech.18. 4.

Reaſon 2.

Gal.5.17. Non hic carnem apellat corpus, alioquin quomodo concupiſcit, quandoquidem concupiſcentia non carnis eſt ſed animæ. Chryſoſt. in Gal. 5.

Reaſon 3.

Gal.5.19.20.

Auguſt. de ciuit. Dei. lib.14. cap.2.

Vnto theſe teſtimonies of Scripture wee may adde many reaſons to proue, that by the fleſh wee are not onely to vnderſtand the body and the ſenſitiue falculties or the corruption of them both; but the ſinne and pollution which hath ouerſpread the whole man, ſoule and body. Firſt becauſe the names in the Scriptures which are giuen to the fleſh doe intimate thus much, for it is called the old Adam and the old man, which conſiſt as well of a reaſonable ſoule, as of a naturall body; It is called ſinne, according to that of Ambroſe; All ſinne is called the fleſh; and the ſoule ſinneth as well as the body, as the Prophet implyeth, where he ſaith, that the ſoule that ſinneth ſhall dye. It is called the euill concupiſcence, and the act of luſting belongeth to the ſoule and not to the body. It it called the euill which encloſeth vs, namely all the whole man, body and ſoule, and finally it is called the law of ſin and law of death, and lawes are giuen by the chiefe Commander & ſupreame ſoueraigne, which as all confeſſe, is not the body, but the ſoule, and herein the reaſon and vnderſtanding. Secondly, the actions which are attributed to the fleſh doe proue this; for it is ſaid to couet, deſire, or luſt, Gal. 5. 17. which is an act of the ſoule, & therefore Chryſoſtome concludeth that the Apoſtle meaneth not the body, but the ſoule, for otherwiſe (ſaith hee) how can the fleſh be ſaid to luſt; ſeeing luſting belongeth not to the body but the ſoule, for the body is to be reckoned among thoſe things which are moued and not which moue, as being not an agent, but a patient. Thirdly, the ſinnes which are attributed to the fleſh ſhew plainely that wee are thereby to vnderſtand the corruption of the ſoule, as well as of the body. So the Apoſtle reckoning vp diuers fruits of the fleſh, nameth not onely adultery vncleaneſſe, murthers, drunkenneſſe and ſuch like; But alſo Idolatry, Witchcraft, Hereſie, which are the ſinnes of ſoule and minde, and not properly and immediately of the body: And this Auſtine obſerued. Who knoweth not (ſaith hee) that Idol-ſeruice, enmitie, contention, æmulation, ſtomaching, diſſenſion, hereſie, enuy are rather the vices of the mind than of the fleſh; ſeeing it may be that for idolatrie, or ſome errour of hereſie, a man may abſtaine from the pleaſures of the fleſh? Where further it is to bee noted, that theſe workes of the fleſh, are not onely in the wicked and vnregenerate, but alſo in the godly and ſanctified in reſpect of their fleſh or part vnregenerate, for of ſuch the Apoſtle ſpeaketh, ſeeing they onely are exerciſed in the ſpirituall conflict, and they, and none but they, haue, the ſpirit in them luſting againſt the fleſh.

§. Sect.4. Reaſon 4. Originall corruption hath ouer ſpread the whole man body and ſoule.

1.Cor.2.14.

1.cor.13.9.21.

Gen.6.5. 2.Cor.3.5.

Fourthly the corruption of originall ſinne (which in the man regenerate is all one with the fleſh) hath ouerſpread not the body alone, but alſo the whole man, body and ſoule: for the image of God was thereby defaced which principally conſiſted in wiſedome, originall righteouſneſſe and holineſſe, and theſe were chiefly & immediately ſeated not in the body, but in the ſoule: and in this regard the whole man, the ſoule as well as the body, needed to be waſhed in the blood of Chriſt, and in the lauer of regeneration, becauſe all his powers and parts were defiled and corrupted. The which will better appeare if wee conſider of ſome particulars. For in the mind and vnderſtanding are ſeated, as in their proper place, the ſinnes of ignorance, not onely in the vnregenerate, according to that of the Apoſtle; the natural man perceiueth not the things which are of the ſpirit of God, for they are fooliſhnes vnto him, neither can hee know them, becauſe they are ſpiritually diſcerned; but alſo the reliques thereof remaine in the regenerate, for wee know but in part, and we ſee but as through a glaſſe darkely; in which regard Chriſt telleth Peter that fleſh and bloud had not reuealed vnto him that our Sauiour was the Sonne of God, meaning by fleſh and bloud, humane reaſon and vnderſtanding. And vnto this we may adde the ſinnes of infidelity and doubting; errours and hereſies. In the conſcience alſo there is ſtupidity and terrours, whereby it is either aſleepe, and obſerueth not our actions to approue that which is good, and to accuſe vs for euill, or being awakened doth with horrible fury purſue and terrifie vs admitting of no pacification. In the cogitation and imagination, vanity and much wickedneſſe, according to that Gen. 6. 5. Where it is ſaid, that God ſaw that euery imagination of the thoughts of mans heart, were only euill continually. Finally in the will remaineth much auerſneſſe to good, Jer.17.10.

Philip.2.12.
Bernard. de Aduentu domini. Serm.5.

good, and proneneſſe to euill, great rebellion and ſtubbornneſſe againſt God whereby we reſiſt his holy will in reſpect whereof the Prophet ſaith, that the heart of man is wicked aboue all things; and the Apoſtle telleth vs that in our wils there is no inclination vnto any thing which is good, vnleſſe God firſt worketh it in vs. By all which it appeareth, that by the fleſh wee are to vnderſtand the corruption of ſoule and body, according to that of Bernard; As (ſaith he) the old Adam was ſpread ouer the whole man, and poſſeſſed him wholly; ſo now let Chriſt haue all who hath created all and redeemed all, and will alſo glorifie all.

§. Sect.5.
Reaſon 5.
Becauſe the Body and Spirit are not enemies but louing friends.
Gal.5.17.

Eph.5.28.29.

Chryſoſt.in Gal.5.

Fiftly, the Fleſh and the Spirit are as the Apoſtle telleth vs; contrarie one to the other, and like mortall enemies in hoſtile manner they fight together ſeeking one anothers ruine and deſtruction; but ſuch enmitie is not betweene the ſoule and body, for then they would ſeeke one anothers ouerthrow, whereas contrariwiſe they mutually loue and cheriſh the one the other, and are much grieued when they muſt part aſunder. So the Apoſtle telleth vs, that no man euer yet hated his owne fleſh, but nouriſheth it and cheriſheth it, euen as the Lord the Church, and in this regard he willeth the the husband to loue his wife, as his owne body. And this argument Chryſoſtome vſeth. Whereas (ſaith he) the Apoſtle telleth vs that the fleſh luſteth againſt the ſpirit, he ſpeaketh of a twofold knowledge, whereof the one is contrary to the other, to wit not the ſoule and body, but vertue and malicionſneſſe; for if they ſhould be ſo oppoſed, they would deſtroy, one another, as water fire, and light darkeneſſe, &c. Now whereas the oppoſition and fight is not betweene the body and the ſoule, but the fleſh and the ſpirit, hereof it will clearely follow, that wee are not by fleſh to vnderſtand the ſubſtance of the body, but the quality of corruption in ſoule and body; for theſe enemies are of like nature, and therefore as by the ſpirit we vnderſtand not the ſubſtance or eſſence of the holy ſpirit, but a created quality of holineſſe and righteouſneſſe, in the whole man; ſo contrariwiſe wee are by the fleſh to vnderſtand not our bodily ſubſtance, but the ſinfull quality of corruption which hath defiled ſoule and body.

§. Sect.6.
The ſixt reaſon taken from the words of the Apoſtle.
Rom.7.18.

1.Cor.6.19.

Chryſoſt.in Gal.5.

Rom.8.8.

Sixtly, the Apoſtle ſaith, that in him that is in his fleſh dwelleth no good thing; where the fleſh cannot ſignifie the body as it is diſtinguiſhed from the ſoule; for ſo it is not true which the Apoſtle ſpeaketh, ſeeing his body was not onely the habitation of his ſoule, but alſo the Temple of the holy Ghoſt. Neither was it here the Apoſtles purpoſe to diſtinguiſh betweene his ſoule and his body, but betweene grace and naturall corruption which had ouerſpread the whole man, ſo farre forth as he remained vnregenerate; as contrariwiſe by ſpirit hee vnderſtandeth the whole man, as he is regenerate and ſanctified. And this is the reaſon why hee correcteth himſelfe ſaying in mee, that is in my fleſh, becauſe hee would not be injurious to Gods ſpirit dwelling in his body, which maketh him thus to explicate his ſpeech, of his fleſh or part vnregenerate, in which the holy ſpirit dwelleth not. So Chryſoſtome telleth vs that the Apoſtle calleth Fleſh not the naturall body, but the depraued will, as when hee ſaith, you are not in the Fleſh but in the Spirit; And againe, thoſe who are in the fleſh cannot pleaſe God. What then is the fleſh to bee deſtroyed? Why hee who ſpake theſe things, was not hee compaſſed with fleſh? &c. By fleſh therfore he meaneth earthly, ſluggiſh and retchleſſe thoughts. So that this is not the accuſation of the body, but the fault of the negligent ſoule.

§. Sect.7.
The ſeuenth Reaſon becauſe the body is not abſolutely euill, as the fleſh is.

Aug.de eccleſiaſt.dogmat. Cap.76.

Chryſoſt.in Rom.7.Serm. 13.

Hieron.ad Licinium.

Eightly, that which is called the fleſh, is in other places, called the euill concupiſcence, the euill which encloſeth vs, and the law of ſinne; but the body is not euill abſolutely, for it is the good creature of God as well as the ſoule; but reſpectiuely, as together with the ſoule it is tainted and defiled with corruption. So Auſtine telleth vs that our fleſh that is our body is good, yea very good, as being the workmanſhip of our onely good God; and it is not euill as Sethianus, Ophianus, and Patricianus would haue it; nor the cauſe of euill as Florianus hath taught, nor yet compacted of euill and good, as Manichæus blaſphemeth, but whereas it is good by creation, it is at the choiſe of the minde made vnto vs either good or euill, not by the change of the ſubſtance, but by the wages of execution. With whom Chryſoſtome agreeth, ſaying, that the Apoſtle doth not call the fleſh (that is the body) ſinne, but it is the worke of God, which if we wiſely vſe it, is exceeding fit for the purſuing of vertue. Neither is the body our enemy in this ſpirituall conflict, but our friend which aſſiſteth vs in in the fight, and taketh our part againſt the fleſh with the reſt of our ſpirituall enemies; namely as it is imploied by the ſoule, in praying, faſting, watching, hearing the word, holy conferences, giuing of almes and ſuch like religious and Chriſtian duties. So Hierome teſtifieth that this life to mortall men is a place of Combate, here we fight that elſewhere wee may bee crowned, and no man can goe ſecurely among ſerpents, and ſcorpions. Wee are compaſſed about with great troupes of enemies; the whole world is full of them; the fraile fleſh which within a while will become duſt, fighteth alone againſt many, &c. For as the body partaketh with the ſoule in the ſtate of corruption, ſo alſo in the ſtate of regeneration, the one being ſanctified as well as the other. For whereas the Apoſtle ſpeaking

1.Cor.6.11.
1.Cor.7.34.
2.Cor.7.1.
Hieron.in. Rom.8.
Chryſ.in.Ro.8.
Gal.5.22.

ing to the faithfull telleth them, that they were waſhed and ſanctified, he excludeth not their body but vnderſtandeth it of the whole perſon body and ſoule. And this he plainely teſtifieth, ſaying, that the vnmarried woman careth for the things of the Lord, that ſhe may be holy, both in body & in ſpirit. And therefore hee exhorteth the Corinthians to the waſhing and purging of the whole perſon. Hauing (ſaith he) theſe gracious promiſes, (dearely beloued) let vs cleanſe our ſelues from all filthineſſe of the fleſh and ſpirit, perfecting holineſſe in the feare of God. So whereas hee affirmeth that our bodies are temples of the holy Ghoſt, he implyeth, that they are regenerate and ſanctified; for what communion can there be betweene light and darkneſſe, God and Belial, the holy Spirit, and a polluted cage of vncleane ſpirits? And therefore as our ſoules are not in this life perfectly regenerate, but haue remaining in them many reliques of corruptions, ſo our bodies are not quite without regeneration, but are in part waſhed and purged by Gods holy Spirit, that they may bee fit habitations for himſelfe to dwell in. To which purpoſe Hierome ſaith, that the Apoſtle doth not prayſe the ſpirit, and diſpraiſe the fleſh, becauſe that is good and this is euill: Seeing himſelfe ſaith, that the Virgin careth for the things of the Lord, that ſhee may be holy in body & in ſpirit, and contrariwiſe doth accuſe the ſpirit, ſaying men corrupted in their minds, &c. So Chryſoſtome ſaith, that Chriſt hath deſtroyed the kingdome of ſinne, and hath made the fleſh more able and ſpirituall for all good duties, not by changing the ſubſtance of it, but by raiſing and inciting it hereunto. For as fire being ioyned with iron, doth make the iron like vnto the fire, though it remaine the ſame in its owne nature: ſo the fleſh of the faithfull, who are indued with the holy Ghoſt, is changed by vertue of the ſpirit, and being made ſpirituall and lofty is lifted vp on high together with the ſoule. And as the body is thus in part ſanctified, ſo alſo the affections and inferiour faculties of the ſoule, as loue, hope, deſire, hatred, and the reſt, and are made ſeruiceable to the ſoule for holy and religious duties: and whereas whileſt wee were in the ſtate of vnbeliefe, they fought on the diuels ſide, and prouoked vs to the committing of all wickedneſſe, now they forſake his campe and take part with the armie of Ieſus Chriſt, inciting vs both in our ſoules and bodies, to the ready performance of all holy duties. And as the Apoſtle numbreth idolatry, witchcraft and hereſie which are more properly belonging to the ſuperiour to faculties of the ſoule among the workes of the fleſh: ſo contrariwiſe he reckoneth loue, ioy, and peace, among the workes of the ſpirit, which are affections belonging to the inferiour part.

§. Sect. 8.
The eight reaſon. Becauſe the faithfull are tempted to ſuch ſinnes as properly belong to the vnderſtanding and will.
*Iam.*1.14.

Laſtly, euen the faithfull and regenerate are tempted, not onely to ſinnes wherewith the inferiour faculties of the ſoule are delighted, as luſt, wantonneſſe, intemperance, and the like; but alſo vnto ſuch ſinnes as properly belong to the vnderſtanding and will, as errours, hereſies, infidelity, doubting of Gods mercy, truth, and prouidence; ſecurity, impenitency and hardneſſe of heart. Now of what are they thus tempted, but as the Apoſtle telleth vs, of their owne concupiſcence? and therefore this concupiſcence extendeth as well to the ſuperiour as the inferiour faculties of the ſoule. Yea not onely are they tempted but often are foyled by yeelding to the tentation; of which I need no other proofe, but that experience which euery Chriſtian may haue in himſelfe, if without partiality he will examine his owne conſcience: for who is ſo inlightned that doth not find in his minde much darkneſſe? who ſo ſanctified, that doth not acknowledge many errours whereby he hath beene ouertaken in his judgement; and much vanity in his cogitations? Who is ſo humbled and hath ſo denied himſelfe, that doth not feele in his will much peruerſeneſſe and rebellion againſt the will of God? Finally, who hath his remembrance ſo confirmed and ſtrengthned in grace, that doth not ſee his forgetfulneſſe of God and of holy duties? And who is ſo ſtrong in his faith, that doth not find many aſſaults of doubting and infidelitie? All which doth plainely proue that euen in the regenerate the reliques of carnall corruption doe remaine not onely in the inferiour and ſenſitiue faculties of the ſoule, but alſo in the ſuperiour and intellectuall.

CHAP. VI.

Teſtimonies of Fathers to proue that the body alone is not our enemy the fleſh.

§. Sect. 1.
Teſtimonies to proue that the body is not our ſinfull fleſh.
Auguſt.de ciuit Dei lib. 14. *cap.*3. *tit.*5, *col.*755.
*Auguſt.de ciuit. Dei lib.*14. cap. 5.*tit.*5.col. 758.

VNto theſe reaſons wee may adde diuers teſtimonies for the better clearing of this point. And firſt Saint Auguſtine telleth vs, that the corruption of the body, which ouerburtheneth the ſoule, is not the cauſe of the firſt ſinne but the puniſhment. Neither doth the corruptible fleſh make the ſoule ſinfull, but the ſinful ſoule maketh the fleſh corruptible. From which corruption of the fleſh, although there ariſe many prouocations of vices and vicious deſires, yet not all the vices of a wicked life are to be imputed to the fleſh (that is the body) leaſt hereby wee acquite the Diuell of them, who hath no fleſh. Againe, he that magnifieth the nature of the ſoule, as though it were the chiefe goodneſſe, and accuſeth the nature the fleſh as euill, without doubt he doth car-

Auguſt. pſal. 145.

Auguſt. de continent. cap. 8. Tit. 4. col. 998.

nally affect the ſoule, and after a fleſhly manner ſhun the fleſh, becauſe he ſo iudgeth out of humane vanity, and not out of diuine truth. So in another place, the ſoule is not better than the body in merit but in nature; for the ſoule is ſinfull and ſtained with many corruptions of concupiſcence. But yet impure gold, is better than the moſt purified lead. And elſewhere he ſaith; The fleſh therefore is not euill if it want euill, that is, ſin wherewith man is corrupted, neither is he euill made, but doth euill, for in both parts, ſoule and body, he was made good of our good God, but he doth euill whereby he is made euill. Now as by all theſe teſtimonies hee ſheweth what the fleſh is not, namely not the nature or ſubſtance of the body; ſo in many other places hee ſheweth what it is, namely the law of ſinne and corruption of nature, which hath ouerſpread and defiled the ſoule and body. To name one or two for all. In his booke of retractations, hee ſaith that the Apoſtle by the names of fleſh and blood, vnderſtandeth the corruption of them both. And againe, the ſoule when as it affecteth thoſe things which are carnally good, is named the fleſh. With him agreeth Chryſoſtome; for writing on the words of the Apoſtle, they haue crucified the fleſh with the luſts of it, he ſaith, that he here calleth their euill deeds the fleſh, for if they ſhould haue crucified their bodies, how then could they haue liued? And againe, it is the manner of the Scriptures to call by the name of fleſh thoſe, who onely minde carnall things, and neuer thinke on that which is heauenly. Thus alſo Gregorie ſaith, that the Scriptures are accuſtomed to ſignifie by the names of fleſh and blood, the ſinnes of the fleſh. And in another place; It is written (ſaith he) that fleſh and blood cannot inherite the Kingdome of Heauen, and how then ſhall I beleeue that in truth the fleſh ſhall ariſe at the laſt day? I anſwere in the holy Scriptures the fleſh is ſometime taken according to nature, and ſometime according to fault and corruption; in the former ſenſe, this now is bone of my bone, and fleſh of my fleſh: and againe, the word was made fleſh. In the other ſenſe is to bee taken; my ſpirit ſhall not ſtriue in theſe men, becauſe they are fleſh, and the ſpeach of the Apoſtle, but you are not in the fleſh, but in the ſpirit; not that they were not in the fleſh, to whom the Apoſtle wrote, but becauſe they had ouercome the paſſions of their carnall deſires &c. So Hierome on the eight of the Romanes, ſaith, It is to be noted that the Apoſtle there accuſeth the workes of the fleſh and not the ſubſtance. And thus alſo Baſill vnderſtandeth it; for (ſaith he) he that is called the old man, ſignifieth together all ſinnes and defilements particularly, as it were, in his parts. So Theoderet; The Apoſtle calleth fleſh the inclination of the minde vnto thoſe things which are euill; and the ſpirit, grace which inhabiteth and guideth the minde vnto thoſe things which are good. And againe; it is manifeſt, that idolatry, witchcraft and ſuch like ſinnes, are not proper to the fleſh, (that is the body) but to the ſoule; and therefore he doth not accuſe the fleſh; but the wicked and ſlothfull cogitation.

Carnis & Sanguinis nomine ipſam corruptionem carnis & ſanguinis intelligendus eſt apoſtolus nuncupaſſe.
Aug. retract. Lib. 2. cap 3.
Auguſt. de fide & Symb. c. 10.
Chryſoſt in Gal. 6.
Chry. in Gen. 6. Homil. 24.
Gregor. moral. lib. 3. c. 11.
Moral lib. 14. cap. 19.
Hieron. in Rom. 8.
Baſil. de baptiſ. lib. 1.
Theod. in Gal. 5. 17.
Ibidem.

§. Sect. 2. That Sathan hath aſſaulted not onely the body and affections, but the minde, and vnderſtanding.

And thus haue I ſhewed by the Scriptures and Fathers, that by the fleſh wee are not to vnderſtand the body and the ſenſitiue part of the ſoule alone, but the ſinfull corruption of our nature: and that this hath ouer-ſpread and infected not the fleſh or affections alone, but euen the minde and will. For Sathan hauing a deſire to conquer vs, and to hold vs for euer vnder his ſubjection, did not onely by aſſault, take in the body and ſenſitiue faculties (at it were) the outſconces, but hath alſo skaled and ſurpriſed the reaſon and vnderſtanding, which is the ſtrong tower and caſtle of our ſoule, through the ſtrength whereof he commandeth all the reſt. And hauing gotten poſſeſſion of it, hee hath placed in it a ſtrong garriſon of his helliſh armie, to keepe it for his vſe; knowing that if hee can hold the minde vnder his gouernment, he may by the helpe thereof keepe all the reſt. And this maketh him to vſe all his skill and diligence, in darkening and deluding the reaſon and vnderſtanding, and to this purpoſe hee doth ſometimes poſſeſſe it with a ſpirit of ſlumber by making it drunke with the intoxicating cuppes of ignorance and errour; ſometimes hee dazeleth and darkeneth it with the ſmoake and vapors of helliſh temptations, that it may ſee no more, nor in other manner, than he will haue it, and ſometime hee abuſeth and deceiueth it by caſting betweene the things preſented vnto it, and the eye of reaſon falſe colours; and then as a man looking through a greene glaſſe thinketh a chriſtall ſtreame and filthy puddle all alike, ſo the eye of our judgement being deluded, with Sathans falſe glaſſe or gloſſes which hee caſteth before it, can put no difference betweene right and wrong, good and euill.

§. Sect. 3. No part more corrupted than the mind and vnderſtanding.

And by reaſon of this the diuels diligence, and politique care, it commeth to paſſe that no part or facultie of man is more infected and corrupted with the poyſon of ſinne than the minde and vnderſtanding. It cannot be denied but that the minde and reaſon of man doe in their naturall endowments as farre exceede the body and ſenſitiue faculties, as the Sun in his chiefeſt brightneſſe doth the ſmalleſt and dimmeſt Starre; It is true alſo that by thoſe reliques of light, which remayne in the vnderſtanding a man is excellently guided in naturall, ciuil, and meere morall actions, and by vertue thereof is able to atchieue great and difficult matters: but as in phyſicall bodies the beſt ſubſtance hath the worſt corruption: ſo is it alſo true in Diuinitie, that the more excellent the faculties of the ſoule be, the worſe they be in the ſtate of corruption. For the reaſon and vnderſtanding in man is the chiefe rebell, which leadeth and ruleth the body and inferiour faculties (as it were) the baſer ſort of the common people : and therefore the more politique, eloquent and potent this rebel is, the more dangerous alſo and pernitious; ſeeing he holdeth the more powerfully al his ſubiects and inferiours in their emnity and oppoſition againſt their ſupreame ſoueraigne. And in this regard the ſoule is much more worthy blame than the body, and in the ſoule, the reaſon, minde and vnderſtanding than the will, becauſe it is the chiefe ring-leader in this rebellion, and the arch-traitor which giueth lawes and gouerneth all the reſt; for as the iudgement alloweth or diſalloweth, eſteemeth or vilifieth, ſo the will chuſeth or refuſeth, and the affection loueth or abhorreth. Euen as contrariwiſe the chief praiſe belongeth vnto it in our conuerſion vnto God, becauſe with it ſelfe it cauſeth all other parts which it commandeth to returne vnto him and to ſubmit themſelues in all obedience to his rule and gouernment, whereof it is that true repentance is called μετάνοια the changing of the mind, becauſe this being the firſt and principall act in our conuerſion doth giue denomination to all the reſt. And this chiefe faultineſſe of the ſoule in the ſtate of rebellion and corruption, as it appeareth by the former reaſons, ſo doth antiquity giue teſtimony vnto it. Thus Chryſoſtome ſaith, that the ſoule here is more to bee blamed and accuſed than the body, becauſe the body deſigneth no euill without direction from the ſoule, but contrariwiſe the ſoule committeth much wickedneſſe without the vſe and aſſiſtance of the body. So Auſtine ſaith that the fleſh (that is the body) without the ſoule cannot couet. And although the cauſe of carnall concupiſcence bee not in the ſoule alone, yet much leſſe is it in the body alone. And therefore it ariſeth from both, to wit, from the ſoule becauſe no delight is felt without it, and alſo from the body, becauſe neither without it is there any ſenſe of carnall pleaſure.

Chryſoſt. in Eph.2.Serm.6.

Aug. de Geneſi, ad literam, lib. 10.cap.12.

§. Sect. 4.
That the ſoule chiefly ſinneth, and in it the minde and vnderſtanding

But the chiefe faultineſſe of the ſoule will better apppeare, if wee conſider that in the acting of this ſinfull Tragedy, the ſoule, and in it, chiefly the minde and vnderſtanding, playeth the chiefeſt part; for it is the Grand Captaine in this ſinfull army which leadeth the body and inferiour faculties, and appointeth them to the accompliſhing of its particular deſignes : it is naturally the Deuils Steward, which receiuing immediatly inſtructions from this helliſh Maſter, doth appoint to euery inferiour part their taske as common ſeruants. It is the Deuils forge wherein hee firſt hammereth and faſhioneth his ſinfull temptations. It is the maſter workman in the ſhop of our ſinfull nature, which ſetteth on worke all the other parts as vnder Prentizes. For firſt the minde thinketh on miſchiefe, or entertaineth the Deuils temptations; then the judgement alloweth it, if not ſimply, yet in reſpect of ſome circumſtance; if not as an helliſh hooke, yet as it is couered with the baytes of worldly vanities, either eſteeming the ſin for it owne ſake, or at leaſt for the wages and reward, and ſo then the will chuſeth it, & the heart affecteth it, the concupiſcence deſireth it, and the body accompliſheth it. So that if the minde were bound to the good behauiour, and either would not thinke on wickedneſſe, or at leaſt would vilifie and contemne it, our peace with God, and our owne conſciences would be kept, and wee ſhould haue no ſinnefull ſeditions, and tumultuous vproares in the inferiour parts and members. In a word the minde and vnderſtanding is the ſpring head from which all the ſtreames of ſinne doe runne and flow; and therefore the diuell firſt poyſoneth and corrupteth it, that ſo it may taint and infect all the other parts, as wee may ſee in the example of our firſt parents whoſe iudgement he firſt corrupted, and then with eaſe infected their will and affections. Wherein he dealeth with vs as Eliſha with the Aramites; firſt blinding vs and then miſleading vs at his pleaſure. For whereas God in the little world of man hath appointed the reaſon and vnderſtanding, to be as the Sunne to giue light and directions vnto all the other parts and faculties, that ſo they may orderly exerciſe their functions and operations, Sathan knoweth right well, that if he can ecclypſe this light, by the oppoſition of changeable trifles, or vtterly darken it by the interpoſition of earthly vanities, there can thereupon nothing follow, but ſinfull diſorder and dangerous confuſion in all our actions. And thus the Apoſtle liuely deſcribing mans miſery and ſinne, firſt pointeth at this as the chiefe fountaine, that there is none that vnderſtandeth nor ſeeketh after God, & then that, they are all gone out of the way and become vnprofitable. And this is the cauſe why the kingdome of ſinne is called the Kingdome of darkeneſſe; and ſinfull luſtes are called the luſtes of ignorance; & ſinfull workes, the workes of darkneſſe; becauſe ignorance is the ſcepter of the diuels kingdome by which hee raigneth and ruleth in the children of diſobedience; all carnall luſtes ſpring from the blindneſſe of the minde; and the darkenes of ignorance is the vayle which hideth all wicked workes, not onely from others but alſo from their owne eyes who commit them, and ſo encourageth them to goe on in theſe ſinfull actions.

Rom.3.11,12.
Ephef.6.12.
Col.1,13.

1.Pet.1.14.
Rom.13.12.

§. Sect. 5.
That the ſoule is the chiefe actor of ſinne proued by teſtimonies.

And vnto this truth the ancients haue giuen their ſuffrage and teſtimony. Chryſoſtome ſaith; that in euery ſinne, the ſoule firſt ſinneth, Chryſ. in Math. 7. Hom. 21.

Chryſ. in Rom. 7 Serm. 10.
Rom. 1, 28.
Ambroſ. in Rom. 7.
Fulgent. de myſter. mediat. ad Truſim. lib. 1.
Math. 15. 19.
Aug. queſt. ſuper Exod. lib. 2. c. 2.

ſinneth, and afterwards the fleſh, and vnleſſe the ſoule were firſt ouercome, the fleſh could neuer ſin. And expounding thoſe wordes of the Apoſtle, when we were in the fleſh; that is (ſaith he) in euill actions or in a carnal life. Neither would he ſay, that before times they were in the fleſh, and that now they walked about without bodies, &c. Moreouer leaſt any man ſhould accuſe the body, he doth not ſay, which euill actions the members themſelues haue wrought and done, but which were wrought in our members, that he might ſhewe how that the firſt beginnings of wickednes were deriued elſewhere, namely from our thoughts working them, & not from the members which were driuen by their motion. For the ſoule holdeth the place of the Artizan or Muſician, and the fleſh of the inſtrument, giuing that kind of ſound or Muſique which the Muſician maketh it; and therefore it is not to be aſcribed to the fleſh if there bee diſcord in the Muſique, but rather to the ſoule by which it is ruled. So writing on thoſe words of the Apoſtle, that as the Gentiles did not like to retaine God in their knowledge, God gaue them ouer to a reprobate minde to doe thoſe things that are not conuenient: he ſaith, that the Apoſtle hereby diſcouereth that our ſins doe not ariſe primarily from our bodies, as certaine Heretiques would haue it, but from the minde, to wit from the euill concupiſcence, as it were, from the fountaine from which all euils flow. For the minde being reprobate, all other parts are ſo too, as the Coachman being diſordered which driueth the Coach, all that is vnder his rule, muſt needs be diſordered and out of frame. So Ambroſe demanding, what it is to be ſubiect vnto ſin, anſwereth, nothing elſe but to haue the body corrupted through the ſin of the ſoule; into which, ſin chuſeth it ſelfe to driue man as a captiue vnto it, that hee may doe its will. And Fulgentius likewiſe ſaith, that although ſin ſeemeth to be commited of a man corporally, yet it taketh its beginning from the heart; neither is any thing done outwardly, vnleſſe it be firſt inwardly concluded by the iudgement of the minde; the truth whereof truth it ſelfe hath ſhewed vs, ſaying, that out of the heart proceedeth euill thoughts, murthers, adulteries, &c. So Auguſtine ſaith, that not in the body or inferiour faculties, but in the will of man is the originall of all vices.

§. Sect. 6.
That the body is but the ſeruant of the ſoule in acting ſinne.
Aug. in Pſal. 145. Serm. 27. tom. 10.
Chryſoſt. in Rom. 6. Ser. 12.
Ambroſ. de Pœniten. lib. 1. c. 14
Nihil peccant oculi ſi non oculis animus imperet, Seneca.

So likewiſe they teach, that the body is but the ſeruant of the ſoule which can or dare doe nothing but by the Maſters appointment. So Auguſtine ſaith, that the fleſh is an obedient ſeruant to the ſoule: this ruleth, the other is ruled, the one commandeth, the other obeyeth. In which regard he would haue the Manachees derided, who imputed all ſin vnto the fleſh, the which hee would haue, to Gods glory, duely prayſed, and all the fault to be attributed to the will. Chryſoſtome likewiſe compareth the body to armes and weapons, which are to be eſteemed according to their vſe. The Souldier vſeth them whileſt hee fighteth in defence of his Country; and the Thiefe againſt common friends who are of the ſame Countrey, the which is not the fault of the weapons, but of thoſe who abuſe them vnto euill: And ſo (ſaith hee) the body is either this or that, not in its owne nature, but by the predominant direction of the minde. And in another place, the ſoule ſo vſeth the body, as the ſmith the hammer & the anuile, vpon which it forgeth and faſhioneth the Idols of all carnall corruption & filthines; & frameth the images of all pleaſures. Nor is the fleſh the prompter & teacher of ſin, nor the inuenter of all malicionſneſſe, or the framer and diſpoſer of the things which are done; but it is the ſhop of the ſoule, which worketh and accompliſheth in it and by it whatſoeuer it effecteth. Thus alſo Ambroſe concludeth; You ſee then, that the minde is the authour of our fault, and that the fleſh is innocent, ſauing that it is often the inſtrument of ſin. Yea, euen the heathen man by the light of nature could diſcerne this truth; affirming that our eyes offended not, if they were not ruled and commanded by an euill minde.

§. Sect. 7.
That the ſoule only properly ſinneth.
Auguſt. de ciuit. Dei, lib. 14. c. 3.
Chryſ. in Math. 5. Hom. 17.
In Geneſ. 12. Hom. 32.
In 1. Cor. 6. Hom. 18.

Yea, ſo far is it off that our bodies ſhould be chiefly corrupted, and the principall authours of ſinne, that if wee ſpeake properly the ſoule onely ſinneth; and the corruption of the ſoule alone is ſinfull, and as for the corruption of the body it is rather the puniſhment of ſin than ſin it ſelfe. So Auguſtine ſaith, that the corruption of the body which cloggeth the ſoule is not the cauſe of the firſt ſin but the puniſhment. So Chryſoſtome ſpeaking of our Sauiours ſpeech concerning the cutting off the right hand, and pulling out the right eye; he ſaith, that he intendeth not the diſturbing, much leſſe the deſtroying of the frame of the body. Farre be it from vs ſo to conceiue, for hee doth no where ſhew that there is any fault in the body, but euery where conuinceth the will of the euill; for not ſo much the eyes, as by the eyes, the minde and reaſon doe ſee; whereof it is that ſometimes the eyes doe not diſcerne thoſe who are preſent before them, the mind and cogitation being otherwiſe occupied. And elſe-where hee plainly affirmeth, that the peruerſe will is the cauſe of all euill. And againe, our mortall body is not the cauſe of ſin, but our wicked will is the root of all euill. For why did not Abels body make him vniuſt? And why doth not the want of bodies benefit the Deuill? Will you know the cauſe, becauſe the mortall body bringeth to men, not onely no detriment, but much profit and benefit. And therefore hee concludeth, that it is the worke of the Deuill to make fooliſh men rather to accuſe their body, God himſelfe or their Neighbour, than their corrupt minde, leſt finding the cauſe of their ſinning, they ſhould plucke vp the root of all their euils.

§. Sect.8. That the body is not the fleſh proued by the teſtimonies of the aduerſaries themſelues, and firſt out of Thomas Aquinas.

And thus haue wee proued by teſtimonies of Scripture, Reaſons, and Fathers, that by fleſh in the ſpirituall conflict, wee are not to vnderſtand the body and inferiour faculties of the ſoule, or the corruption of them both, but the corruption of the whole man in euery part and faculty, and eſpecially in the minde, vnderſtanding and will which aboue all the reſt are chiefly tainted and defiled. Now let vs alſo produce the teſtimony of the Aduerſaries themſelues, who howſoeuer in their doctrine they commonly confound the body and the fleſh as being all one; and in their whole practice of mortification, doe bend all their ſtrength againſt the body to ſubdue and keepe it vnder, yea, euen to torment, conſume and deſtroy it, as though it were their mortall enemy; yet hauing ſometimes their eyes dazeled with the light of Truth, they acknowledge euen the ſame verity of Doctrine which wee teach and defend againſt them. Thus Thomas Aquinas, their great Schoole Doctour, extendeth the fleſh and corruption of nature to the whole man, the ſoule as well as the body; for writing on the words of the Apoſtle, In me that is my fleſh, dwelleth no good thing, hee ſaith, that in man as hee is a ſinner dwelleth no good thing, neither in his body nor minde. Now this is ſpoken by the Apoſtle of himſelfe, and that as he was in the ſtate of grace and regeneration as Aquinas a little before acknowledgeth, and therefore muſt neceſſarily bee referred to the part vnregenerate both ſoule and body.

Aquin. in Gal. 5.17.

And commenting on theſe words of the Apoſtle, The fleſh luſteth againſt the ſpirit, hee ſaith, that heere is a doubt to bee cleered; namely that, ſeeing to luſt or couet, is an act proper to the ſoule; therfore, as it may ſeeme, it cannot agree with the fleſh: vnto which wee are to ſay with Auguſtine, that the fleſh is ſaid to couet or luſt, in regard that the ſoule doth luſt or deſire according to the fleſh; as the eye is ſaid to ſee, when as rather the ſoule ſeeth by the eye. And therefore the ſoule then luſteth by the fleſh, when as it deſireth thoſe things which are pleaſant according to the fleſh. But the ſoule luſteth or deſireth by it ſelfe, when as it is delighted in thoſe things which are according to the ſpirit, as workes of vertue and diuine contemplation. Yea, but if the fleſh luſteth by the ſpirit, how is it ſaid that it luſteth againſt it? namely, in this reſpect, as the concupiſcence of the fleſh, hindereth the concupiſcence of the ſpirit. But this anſwere is not ſufficient; for if both kinds of concupiſcence come from the ſoule, the one immediately, the other mediately according to the fleſh, this maketh no contrariety betweene the ſpirit and the fleſh, as hee vnderſtands it, but onely in the ſame act of concupiſcence which is in the ſoule alone in reſpect of the diuers manner of luſting, the one kind by the body, the other by it ſelfe. And therefore this anſwere would better fit the objection and agree with Auguſtines ſpeech, That there is in the ſoule a double concupiſcence; the one in the part regenerate which is ſpirituall, the other in the part vnregenerate which is carnall, the which are directly contrary the one to the other. And thus hee might anſwere another objection which himſelfe maketh againſt his owne words; for whereas the Apoſtle ſaith, that the ſpirit luſteth againſt the fleſh, he objecteth, that if we here take the ſpirit for the holy Spirit, and grant that ſpirituall concupiſcence is onely againſt that which is euill, it will follow, that the fleſh or body againſt which the ſpirit luſteth is euill, which was the errour of the Manichees. To which hee anſwereth that the ſpirit luſteth not againſt the nature of the fleſh, but againſt its deſires onely as they extend to ſuperfluity. But this anſwere croſſeth his former ſpeech, whereby he affirmed that the fleſh or body had no concupiſcence at all, but that it was an act proper to the ſoule alone. And therefore the objection were better ſatisfied if wee ſay that there is not onely in the regenerate part of the ſoule, the concupiſcence of the ſpirit, but alſo the reliques of carnall concupiſcence in the part vnregenerate, which fight as contraries and enemies the one againſt the other. But as Aquinas affirmeth, that concupiſcence is onely an act of the ſoule, and conſequently euill and carnall concupiſcence, as well as holy and ſpirituall, wherein hee agreeth with vs; ſo alſo hee granteth in ſome places that the fleſh is the corruption of nature or originall ſinne, which is deriued vnto vs from our firſt Parents. So he ſaith, that the carnality which importeth or ſignifieth the rebellion of the fleſh againſt the ſpirit, proceeded from the ſin of our firſt Parents, becauſe it belongeth to that fuell of corruption deriued from that ſin. So hee expoundeth the Law of the members to bee that fuell of ſinne and corruption which moueth vs to ſin, and is the puniſhment of the ſinne of our firſt Parents in vs who are their poſterity. And yet more plainly ſpeaking of thoſe words of the Apoſtle. But you are not in the fleſh, hee ſaith that it is euident that this is not to bee vnderſtood of the ſubſtance of the fleſh, ſeeing the Romanes were mortall men cloathed therewith, but hee taketh the fleſh for the vices and corruptions of the fleſh, according to that, 1. Corinth. 6. 9. Fleſh and bloud ſhall not inherit the Kingdome of God. So that when hee ſaith, yee are not in the fleſh, the meaning is, yee are not in the vices, and corruptions of the fleſh, liuing as it were according to the fleſh.

Aquin. in Rom. 7. lect. 3. lect. 4.

Aquin. in Rom. 8. lect. 2.

§. Sect.9. Teſtimonies

But much more cleerely doth the arch-champion of the Papiſts, Cardinall Bellarmine mine aſſent vnto this truth; the fleſh (ſaith he) in the Scriptures almoſt euery where is oppoſed to the ſpirit or ſome thing elſe more high and heauenly. For it doth not ſignifie the ſubſtance of the fleſh, but the infirmitie or corruption, or humane and fleſhly cogitation; all which are to the ſame effect, ſeeing it ariſeth from our corruption, that a man will take vpon him to iudge of diuine matters after an humane ſenſe. And in another place he ſaith, that ſinne taken properly cannot be in the body but in the minde. For ſinne is vnrighteouſneſſe, and vnrighteouſneſſe truely ſo called, can there onely haue place where true righteouſneſſe hath its place. Now who euer hath placed righteouſneſſe, truely and properly taken, in the members of the body? But why doth he affirme this truth? Surely to confirme an vntruth; for hence hee concludeth, that whereas the Apoſtle ſaith, that concupiſcence is ſinne, and that it dwelleth in the fleſh and not in the minde, hereby hee plainly ſheweth, that it is not ſinne properly but figuratiuely. But the Apoſtle ſpeaketh properly when hee calleth concupiſcence ſinne, neither doth Bellarmines argument prooue the contrary, ſeeing the Apoſtle doth not (like the Ieſuite) by fleſh vnderſtand the body but the vnregenerate part & the corruption of nature, which is as well (yea much more) in the ſoule as in the body; the which I haue fully prooued, and Bellarmine himſelfe will preſently confeſſe. For in another place hauing ſaid that Auguſtine by the name of concupiſcence vnderſtandeth the corruption of the inferiour part of the ſoule which rebelleth againſt the ſuperiour, hee preſently addeth; But it muſt not be denied that the like ſin and corruption is to be found in the ſuperiour part; for euen this part of the ſoule alſo is prone to luſt after honours, vain-glory and other vanities, and although it be againſt our wils it doth ſometimes bring forth ſuch deſires. And therefore Saint Paul, numbreth among the luſts of the fleſh, not onely whoredome and drunkenneſſe, but idolatry, enmity, hereſie, as Auguſtine hath diligently obſerued, Lib. 14. de Ciuit. Dei, cap. 2, 3, & 4. Where hee ſheweth that the fleſh is ſometimes taken for the whole man, as he is without the grace of God after the fall of Adam and that he is ſaid to be carnall who liueth according to himſelfe and not according vnto God. So elſewhere anſwering Caluins and Beza his objection, who ſay, that the fleſh in the ſeuenth of the Romans, is to be taken for the whole man, as hee is in the ſtate of corruption, becauſe Saint Paul numbreth the minde among the parts moſt corrupted, 1. Tim. 6. and commandeth vs to be renued in the ſpirit of our minds; to this hee anſwereth, that in many places of the holy Scripture wee are without doubt by the fleſh to vnderſtand as well all the ſuperiour as the inferiour faculties corrupted with ſinne. Neither doe wee deny but that with this ſinne the mind alſo of man is corrupted, &c. No maruell therefore if the workes of Bellarmine are not ſuffered to bee reade without ſpeciall licence nor ſcarce to bee found in common ſhops throughout Spaine and Italy, ſeeing in this and innumerable other points of Poperie he differeth from the moſt of their other Writers, and generally from the whole courſe of their practice, both in thoſe and all other places, as hath in this particular beene before ſufficiently proued.

out of Bellarmine to prooue the former point.

Bellar. de Sacramen. Eucharist. lib. 1. cap. 14.

Bellar. de amiſſ. gratie & ſtat. peccati, lib. 5. cap. 10.

De amiſ. gratie & ſtat peccat. lib. 5. cap. 15.

Bellar. de amiſſi gratie & ſtat. peccat, lib. 5. c. 7.

Ephes. 4. 23.

CHAP. VII.

Obiections of the Aduerſaries anſwered, whereby they indeauour to proue that the body and ſenſitiue faculties are the fleſh.

§. Sect. 1. The firſt Obiection, becauſe this our enemy is vſually called the fleſh.

NOw in the laſt place it remayneth that wee anſwere ſome Objections; whereby they endeuour to proue that by the fleſh wee are to vnderſtand our bodies and ſenſitiue faculties only with their corruption; and not the ſoule and ſuperiour faculties. And firſt they reaſon that this ſpirituall enemy of our ſaluation is the body and inferiour faculties of the ſoule, ſeeing it is vſually called by the name of fleſh and carnall concupiſcence. To which I anſwere that this manner of ſpeech is not proper but tropicall and figuratiue, and to be vnderſtood by a Metonymy of the ſubject for the adjunct or quality, fleſh for the fleſhly quality of corruption which hath defiled ſoule and body, the which is vſuall with the Hebrewes who in their ordinary phraſe, put the abſtract for the concrete, and the ſubject for the quality that belongeth vnto it; the which alſo the Greekes and Latines doe ſometimes imitate, as when they called a wicked fellow κάθαρμα, Scelus. But it may further be demanded why this ſpirituall enemy ſhould by this Metonymy bee called the fleſh rather than ſin and corruption, if it were not chiefly ſeated in the body. I anſwere that it is thus called to ſhew how deeply our nature is tainted and infected with the poyſon of ſinne, in that it is, (as it were) incorporated into our fleſh, and one of our eſſentiall parts turned, and (as it were) transformed into corruption, and it into them; ſo as there is nothing naturally remayning but euen a maſſe of corruption and lumpe of ſin. And ſecondly, to intimate vnto vs the dangerouſneſſe of this enemy, in that it is not onely domeſticall, dwelling in vs, but (after a ſort) eſſentiall and inherent, ſo as it is not poſſible to auoyde it, but wee muſt deny our ſelues, nor to kill it, vnleſſe we crucifie our owne fleſh, nor to vanquiſh and ſubdue it, vnles we ouercome our ſelues. Yea, but why is this corruption of nature called carnall and fleſhly, rather than animall and ſpirituall, if it were not ſeated in the body, rather than in the ſoule? I anſwer that this corruption hauing defiled both the ſpeciall parts of man the body, as well as the ſoule, it was indifferent by a Synecdoche to vnderſtand the whole corruption of nature, by the name of either part. But if this anſwer will not ſatisfie: but that they will further obiect; that the ſoule is the principall part and therefore the name or denomination ſhould follow it eſpecially if it bee chiefly tainted and corrupted, and the arch-authour of all ſinne: I anſwere that notwithſtanding all this, our enemy in this ſpirituall conflict is called the fleſh rather than the ſoule or ſpirit, to note vnto vs the great contrariety, and vnreconciliable enmity that are betweene the Combatants in this Warfare; for as oppoſite are theſe the one to the other as Light and Darkneſſe, Heauen and Hell, God and the Deuill, Good and Euill. And therefore to expreſſe this contrariety which is betweene them, names were choſen which were moſt extremely oppoſite: and it is not called after the ſoule, becauſe there is ſome agreement betweene the ſoule and the body, and ſome reſemblance between the ſpirit and the ſoule, but after the body, which being the groſſeſt and moſt earthy part of man is moſt oppoſite and different to the ſpirit which is the pureſt part of the minde and reaſon.

Ephes.4.23.

§. Sect.2. Other reaſons why the corruption of nature is called the fleſh.

And vnto theſe diuers other reaſons may be added. For firſt this corruption of nature is called the fleſh, becauſe the body is the inſtrument of the ſoule to execute & put in practice the luſts and deſires of ſinfull concupiſcence, according to that, Rom.6.13. Neither yeeld yee your members as inſtruments of vnrighteouſneſſe vnto ſin: And the ſoule luſteth by the body; whereof it is, that the ſin of euill concupiſcence is attributed to the body as the inſtrument, though the mind be the chiefe agent, euen as the eye is ſaid to ſee, when as the ſoule rather ſeeth by the eye, and the ſword is ſaid to kill, when as it is the man rather that killeth with the ſword. Secondly, becauſe the ſinfull corruption of our natures doth diſcouer and manifeſt it ſelfe rather by the outward actions of the body and concupiſcence of the fleſh, than by the ſecret cogitations and deſires of the mind and will. For whileſt this poyſon lurketh in the mind and will, it is ſecret and hidden alwayes to others, and oftentimes euen to our ſelues; but then it commeth to be knowne, when as it ſwelleth in our carnall concupiſcence, and breaketh out in the ſores of wicked actions. And as it fareth in the naturall birth, ſo in this helliſh brood of ſinne, after that the Deuill, or our corrupt fleſh, haue caſt into the minde the curſed ſeed of ſin, the concupiſcence warmeth, faſhioneth and nouriſheth it, and ſo though in the firſt conception it was vnknowne euen to the parents themſelues that bred it, in the further growth thereof by luſt, and in the birth by the outward action, it is made manifeſt, both to them and others. Whereof it is that the Holy Ghoſt calleth this ſin and corruption concupiſcence of the fleſh, not becauſe it gaue vnto it the firſt being in nature, but did onely firſt diſcouer it, & (as it were) brought it forth into the World. Thirdly, becauſe the baits and allurements wherewith the Deuill and the World intice vs to ſinne, are offered moſt vſually vnto our minds and vnderſtandings by the mediation of the body and the outward ſenſes, as riches, honours, & voluptuous pleaſures; for theſe obiects being tendred to the ſenſes, they preſent them to the vnderſtanding and will, which approue and chuſe them, not caring to ſwallow the hooke of ſin, ſo they may feed on the bewitching bait. But what is the cauſe hereof? Not for that the ſenſes and carnall concupiſcence doe firſt infect the ſuperiour faculties, but becauſe being already corrupted they are ready to entertain al ſuch wicked motions. And as inferiour ſeruants, doe not, nor dare not, perſwade their Soueraignes to ſuch ſinfull actions as are contrary to their liking and odious vnto them, as thoſe who are royally munificent and bountifull, to baſe bribing and vnconſcionable pilling of their people; thoſe who are chaſte and temperate to wantonnes and exceſſe; but onely vnto ſuch vices as they are by nature ſomewhat inclinable to: ſo is it in this little Kingdome and Commonwealth of man; for the vnderſtanding and reaſon are firſt corrupted and falne from that integrity, ſpirituall wiſdome and excellency in which they were created, wherewith they were inlightned with the knowledge of God and of ſpirituall and heauenly things in which originally they tooke all their delight and ſweet contentment, and now being blinded with ignorance, and not able to diſcerne or relliſh theſe diuine delicates, they ceaſe to liue this ſpirituall life and can take no pleaſure in heauenly things; and therefore giue themſelues ouer to all ſenſuality, and willingly entertaine all corrupt motions of the fleſh, which by the mediation of the body and carnall appetite may conueigh vnto them any earthly delight. And thus the ſoule is ſaid to luſt by the fleſh, when as it deſireth thoſe things which are delightfull and pleaſant according to the fleſh; euen as contrariwiſe the concupiſcence of the ſoule, in its created purity, was, when it delighted it ſelfe in thoſe things which were ſpirituall and heauenly. To which the ſpeech of Auguſtine fitteth well, What (ſaith hee) is it to walke according to the fleſh? Nothing elſe but when we conſent to carnall luſt. And what is it to walk according to the ſpirit? It is to be ſo aſ-

Rom.6.13.

Quid eſt ſecundum carnem ambulare? carnalibus concupiſcentijs conſentire, &c. Aug. Serm.7. Tom.10.

ſiſted with Gods holy Spirit in our mindes, as that wee doe not obey this fleſhly concupiſcence.

§. Sect. 3. Another reaſon why this our ſpirituall enemy is called the fleſh.

Anima verò cum carnalia bona adhuc appetit caro nominatur, Aug. de fide & Sym. cap. 10.

Fourthly, the whole corrupt man body and ſoule is called fleſh, becauſe the ſoule as well as the body being giuen ouer to all ſenſualitie, doth only deſire and joy in fleſhly delights and the vain pleaſures of ſin, whereof it fitly hath its name from the objects and actions about which it is wholly exerciſed. And this reaſon Aug. giueth, the ſoule (ſaith he) is therfore called fleſh, becauſe it onely deſireth thoſe things which are carnally good. Yea will ſome ſay, but there remayne yet in corrupted nature ſome reliques of diuine light, and ſome ſparkes of created wiſdome, which condemne fleſhly pleaſures, and oppoſe againſt carnall and ſenſuall luſts: I anſwere that there are indeed euen in meere naturall men, ſome conflicts betweene their reaſon and affections, their conſcience and concupiſcence, but ſeeing that commonly the iſſue of this skirmiſh is the victory of the luſts and paſſions, and the baſe yeelding of the minde and reaſon, to ſubject themſelues to their Lawes in the members, and to agree to the carnall concluſion of theſe inferiour parts, they are fitly with the ſenſuall faculties intituled with the ſame denomination of fleſh, ſinfull concupiſcence, and the reſt. Fiftly, the corruption of nature, as well in the ſoule as the body, is called fleſh, becauſe by the fleſh and carnall ſeed in our generation ſin is propagated vnto the whole man, ſoule and body. And finally becauſe the ſoule, reaſon and vnderſtanding, forgetting their created excellency, ſupremacy and authority ouer the other inferiour parts, doe baſely ſubject themſelues to become ſeruants and ſlaues vnto the fleſh, for the contemptible wages of ſinfull pleaſure. And whereas they were made to rule the body, now they ſpend all their ſtudy and paines in doing ſeruice vnto it, in pampering of the belly and decking and adorning of the backe, and in deuiſing all meanes for the pleaſing of the fleſhly appetite, and ſatisfying of the luſt and carnal concupiſcence. And therefore juſtly with their rule and gouernment, they looſe alſo the honour of their Titles, and whereas whileſt they remayned Lords and Kings, they gaue names to the body and inferior parts, which were called after them reaſonable and ſpirituall; now becomming their ſeruants they looſe their owne names, and are called after their Lords and Maſters whom they haue choſen to ſerue, fleſhly and carnall. And this reaſon Auguſtine giueth, As the ſpirit (ſaith he) ſeruing the fleſh is not vnfitly called fleſhly; ſo the fleſh ſeruing the ſpirit, is fitly called ſpirituall; not becauſe it is turned into ſpirit, but becauſe by an admirable facilitie and readineſſe to obey, it is ſubiected to the gouernment and rule of the ſpirit.

Aug. de Ciuit. Dei, lib. 13. c. 20.

§. Sect. 4. The ſecond obiection grounded on 1. Cor. 9. 27.

The ſecond reaſon objected is grounded vpon the Apoſtles words, 1. Cor. 9. 27. But I keepe vnder, (or as the vulgar Latine hath it) chaſtiſe my body, leſt by any meanes when I haue preached to others I my ſelfe ſhould be a caſt-away. Where the Apoſtle maketh the body (as they thinke) the enemy againſt which hee fighteth, and the chiefe object of mortification. To which I anſwere firſt, that we doe not deny, but that the body is corrupted, as well as the ſoule, and that ſin holdeth part of his reſidence euen in our earthly members; in which regard this naturall corruption is to be ſubdued euen in the body, by thoſe exerciſes of mortification which the Scriptures haue preſcribed, as faſtings, watchings, laborious exerciſes in the duties of Chriſtianity and of our ſpirituall callings. And to this he exhorteth vs, Col. 3. 5. Mortifie therefore your members which are vpon the earth; whereby hee meaneth thoſe ſinnes which dwel in our earthly members, to wit, fornication, vncleanneſſe, inordinate affection, euill concupiſcence, as hee expoundeth himſelfe in the next words. But all this doth not exempt the ſoule, from being the ſeat alſo of naturall corruption; yea, euen the chiefe Palace where ſinne dwelleth. Secondly, I anſwere that by body in this place is not meant the ſubſtance of the fleſh, but the whole corrupt man, or part vnregenerate both ſoule and body; In which ſenſe the Apoſtle elſe-where calleth himſelfe carnall, extending this fleſhly corruption to his whole perſon; euen as by members we are to vnderſtand thoſe ſpeciall ſins which dwell in the members, as the Apoſtle in that place of the Colloſſians explaineth it. And thus he calleth this [a] body of ſin, the law of ſin which was in his members, and the body of death, and ſaith, that the old man is [b] crucified with Chriſt, that the body of ſin might be deſtroyed, and that in Chriſt wee are circumciſed with Circumciſion made without hands, in putting off the body of the ſins of the fleſh. And finally, that [c] if Chriſt be in vs (namely by his ſpirit) the body is dead becauſe of ſin, but the ſpirit is life becauſe of righteouſneſſe; where by death of the body wee are to vnderſtand the mortification of the fleſh in reſpect of ſinne; as appeareth by the Antitheſis, whereby we are to vnderſtand the quickening of the inner man to newneſſe and holineſſe of life.

Rom. 7. 23.

Col. 3. 5.

Rom. 7. 14.

[a] Rom. 7. 23, 24.

[b] Rom. 6. 6.

[c] Col. 2. 11, 6.

[d] Rom. 8. 10.

§. Sect. 5. The third obiection grounded on the Apoſtles words, Rom. 12. 6.

Thirdly, they object the words of the Apoſtle Rom. 12. 6. Let not ſin raigne in your mortall body; from whence they conclude that the ſeate of ſinne is in the body and not in the ſoule and reaſon. To which the anſwere is eaſie; namely that by the name of body, here wee are not ſimply to vnderſtand the body alone, but by a Synecdoche of the part for the whole, the perſon of man conſiſting of ſoule and body. And this is vſuall in the Scriptures by one part to ſignifie the whole perſon, and as by the body to include the ſoule, ſo in other places, by the ſoule to include the body. As, the ſoule that ſinneth ſhall die, and all the ſoules that came with Iacob, into Egypt, which came out of his loynes were threeſcore and ſixe. And thus Ambroſe expoundeth this place. The Apoſtle (ſaith hee) calling it mortall body, vnderſtandeth the whole man, becauſe they who obey ſinne are called mortall. For the ſoule (ſaith he) that ſinneth ſhall die, that is the whole man, for none ſhall bee iudged without their bodies. And that the Apoſtle by naming the body did not exclude the ſoule, it appeareth in the next words, that you ſhould obey it in the luſts thereof; whereby he ſheweth that ſinne is not onely in the body, but firſt and principally in the powers and faculties of the ſoule.

Ezech. 18.4.
Gen.46.26.

Mortale ergo corpus dicens totum hominem ſignificauit. Ambroſ. in hunc locum.

§. *Sect.*6. The fourth Obiection is that the cheiſe poyſon of corruption is to be diſcerned in the ſenſitiue faculties.

Fourthly it is obiected, that the chieſe poyſon of corruption is in the ſenſitiue and inferiour faculties, ſeeing experience teacheth vs that the mind, reaſon and vnderſtanding, is infected by them, and ſo blinded and miſled by paſſion and carnall concupiſcence, that men giue themſelues ouer to all ſenſualitie and become like vnto bruit beaſts. To which I anſwere, that indeede the poyſon of ſinne hath exceedingly tainted the concupiſcence, appetite, affections and all the ſenſitiue faculties, and that they being infected doe infuſe their poyſon into the ſuperiour faculties, and like filthy ſinkes of ſin doe ſend vp noyſome ſents into the vpper parts, the minde and reaſon; for the obiects moue the ſenſes, and the ſenſes the will and vnderſtanding; and it is true, that in this little common-wealth of man, the luſts and paſſions like rebbels riſe againſt reaſon their King and Soueraigne. Finally we deny not but that the minde is drawne to thinke on that euill which the heart affecteth, and is corrupted by giuing way to theſe ſinfull luſts, and by plotting and deuiſing the meanes whereby they may bee ſatisfied: but yet all this proueth not that the fountaine of corruption is in the body and ſenſitiue parts, for the poyſon is firſt ſent from the minde to the heart, which being infected and corrupted returnes it backe againe to the minde: euen as the liuer ſendeth groſſe blacke blood to the ſpleene, which regurgitating and ouerflowing, ſends it backe againe to the liuer, and ſo the fountaine of blood being corrupted, it corrupteth the whole body. Neither doth this inteſtine rebellion ariſe firſt from the inferiour and ſubiect parts; but from the ſinfull corruption of their ſuperiours, whereby they are miſgouerned, either through looſe negligence, or deſperate malitiouſneſſe; for why doth the heart affect that which is euill, but becauſe the minde eſteemeth it, the iudgement approueth it, and the will chooſeth it, if not ſimply, yet as it is baited with ſome worldly profit, preferment or voluptuous pleaſure. But it may be further vrged, that there are many who haue great knowledge & deep iudgments, that notwithſtanding are much corrupted in their hearts, paſſions and affections. To which I anſwere, that though they haue ſome knowledge, yet not ſauing knowledge, and though they haue great illumination, yet no ſpirituall wiſedome and prudence, to apply this light after an holy manner to particular actions. For this Chriſtian prudence in doing any thing, firſt propoundeth the end of the action which moueth vs to vndertake it, and then firſt it rightly counſelleth, ſecondly rightly deliberateth and iudgeth of the counſell; and laſtly rightly and conſtantly commaundeth that which is counſelled and determined. Now the naturall man though hee hath wit to counſell, yet no true iudgement and conſideration to approue of that which is beſt; but like Abſalon heareth diuers counſels, and in concluſion chuſeth the worſt. And therefore the Apoſtle prayeth for the Coloſſians, not onely that they might bee filled with the knowledge of Gods will, but alſo, with all wiſedome and ſpirituall vnderſtanding, that they might walke worthy of the Lord, &c.

Col.1.9, 10.

§. *Sect.*7. The fift Obiection is that there are certaine ſinnes proper to the body and ſenſitiue faculties.

Laſtly it is obiected that whoredome, ſurfetting and drunkenneſſe, proceed from the body and ſenſuall appetite and are ſinnes proper vnto them, and therefore the minde and reaſon is not alwayes the chiefe authour and fountaine of ſinne. To which I anſwere that though theſe actions of eating, drinking luſting and committing vncleanneſſe, are immediately from the ſenſuall concupiſcence and the body, yet the corruption and ſinfulneſſe of theſe actions is from the minde and reaſon. Either becauſe it bridleth not the appetite, or pricketh it forward to exceſſe, becauſe it taketh delight in theſe voluptuous pleaſures: for not the body it ſelfe, but the ſoule by the body taketh pleaſure in eating, drinking and ſatisfying of the luſts. Neither are theſe actions in themſelues ſins, but the immoderation and exceſſe, or the miſapplying of them to wrong obiects, as we may ſee in luſt it ſelfe, which in its owne nature is not euill, for then it could in no caſe be lawfull, but when a man luſteth after ſtrange fleſh. So Chryſoſtome ſaith, that the body luſteth & deſireth but, neither fornication nor adulterie, but commixtion; the body coueteth, yet not dainties but meate, not drunkenneſſe but drinke. And elſewhere; the body (ſaith he) is made to doe this or that, not out of its owne nature, but out of the ouerruling iudgement of the minde. The eye indeed when as it curiouſly beholdeth anothers beauty becommeth an inſtrument of vnrighteouſneſſe, but not out of its naturall action (for Corpus concupiſcit, at neque fornicationem nec adulterium ſed ſimpliciter commixtionem, &c. Chryſoſt. in Eph.3. Serm.6.

Chryſoſt. in *Rom.*6. Ser. 11.

the naturall office thereof is to ſee and not to ſee euilly) but out of the cogitation infuſing malitiouſneſſe. Whereas if it were thereby reſtrained as with a bridle, it would become an inſtrument of righteouſneſſe. And the ſame is to be ſaid of the tongue, hands and all other members. And in another place; Thou wilt (ſaith hee) obiect, that the body draweth thee into fornication. To which I anſwere, not the body but the incontinency of the mind,&c.

CHAP. VIII.

That the fleſh is a moſt dangerous enemy. Firſt becauſe it is exceeding malitious.

§. Sect. 1. That through the fleſh alone wee are expoſed to all danger.

BY this which hath beene ſaid it appeareth ſufficiently what our enemy is; and now in the next place we are to conſider that it is not an enemy to bee contemned, but exceeding dangerous and pernitious; for howſoeuer it may ſeeme at the firſt ſight to bee weake and of ſmall ſtrength yet is it the mightieſt and chiefeſt Captaine vnder the prince of darkeneſſe, by whoſe aide and aſſiſtance he getteth the victory, and without whoſe helpe he could do nothing. For though he ſhould aſſault vs with a huge army of his temptations, and haue his ſtrength reenforced, and euen twiſe doubled with the aides of all our worldly enemies, yet they could neuer preuaile againſt vs, but ſhould bee ſure of a ſhamefull ouerthrow, vnleſſe theſe inbred enemies did betray vs into their hands, and ſecretly open the gates of our ſoule to let in the troupes of their temptations. The which is apparent in the example of our Sauiour Chriſt, who being free from the inward corruption of the fleſh, was not at all endangered with the outward temptations of the Diuell. And whereas the helliſh ſparkes of his ſuggeſtions fall into our corrupt hearts (as it were) into tinder or gunpowder, by which they are nouriſhed and much encreaſed in their ſtrength and violence: they did no more worke vpon our bleſſed Sauiour, whoſe pure nature was no iot tainted with carnall corruption, than a weake dart that lighteth vpon an impenetrable armour, or a ſmall ſparke of fire that ſhould fall into a Sea of water. Needs then muſt the fleſh be a dangerous enemy, ſeeing all danger is by and through it: needs muſt it aboue all be moſt pernitious, ſeeing it expoſes vs to all miſchiefe, and nothing without it were able to hurt vs. The which ſhould perſwade vs to bend all our ſtrength againſt it, ſeeing if we ſubdue our carnall corruptions, wee ſhall eaſily put to flight the Diuell and the world; whereas in vaine ſhall wee fight and ſtriue againſt theſe forraigne forces, if wee doe not firſt kill and crucifie theſe ſecret traytors, for no more buſie can wee bee in building forts and bulworkes to ſtrengthen vs againſt their ſtrong aſſaults, than they will be in raſing and ruinating them, that they may giue an eaſie entrance to theſe outward enemies. And this was the practice of the Apoſtle Paul, who did not beate the ayre and ſpend his ſtrength in vaine by fighting againſt a ſhadowe or phantaſie, but like a politique ſouldier diſcouers and ſingles out his moſt dangerous enemy, euen this body of corruption which dwelled in him; and though hee could not quite kill or thruſt him out into perpetuall baniſhment, yet hee employes all his ſtrength to ſubdue & keepe him vnder, and vſes him like a baſe bondſlaue beating him blacke and blew, and giuing him daily deadly wounds, that ſo he might neuer gather ſtrength, nor bee able to ſtand out in rebellion againſt the part regenerate.

1.Cor.9.17.

§. Sect. 2. That in the fleſh dwelleth nothing that is good.

But the dangerouſneſſe of this enemy will the better appeare, if we conſider both how dangerous it is in reſpect of its owne owne nature, and in regard alſo of diuers aduantages which it hath againſt vs in the conflict. The dangerouſneſſe of it in reſpect of its owne nature will appeare, if we conſider that as on the ſide it is moſt malitious; ſo on the other very mighty and powerfull. The wicked malitiouſneſſe of it may be conſidered both in it ſelfe and in its owne nature, and as it is exerciſed towards vs, that is, the true Chriſtian, or the part regenerate. For the former; the fleſh is ſo wicked and malitious, that no good thing remaineth in in it, for ſo the Apoſtle plainely confeſſeth I know that in mee, that is in my fleſh, dwelleth no good thing. From which abſence of all good, one of the ancients giueth the notation of the latine name. Thou fleſh (ſaith he) art naked and vtterly deſtitute of all vertues, and art therefore called fleſh from thy wanting, becauſe thou art naked of all that is good. In which reſpect the fleſh is much worſe than the Diuell himſelfe; for though he be wicked, yea that wicked one, by a kind of eminency, yet is there in him ſome relation and reſpects of good, namely as hee is the creature of God, and in reſpect of his eſſence and ſubſtance, as alſo his gifts of wiſedome, power, ſwiftneſſe, &c. being conſidered in their owne nature, and not in regard of his abuſe. But in the corrupt fleſh there is nothing but a lumpe and maſſe of ſinne, not any part of Gods workmanſhip, an vtter abſence of all good gifts, and nothing but folly, ignorance, dulneſſe, impotency and whatſoeuer may bee called by the name of euill; for as it is deſtitute of all good, ſo is it euill in all relations: for as the fleſh is all euill, ſo all euill is in the fleſh, and from the fleſh is all euill. In which reſpect wee

Rom.7.18.

Tu caro cunctis virtutibus denudata es, ideoq́ diceris caro à carendo, quia cares omni bono. Ideot. in orthodoxogr. de conflict. carn. & animæ.c.1.

wee may truely ſay that the fleſh is vnto this euill of malitiouſneſſe, ſubiectum adæquatum, a ſubject equally extended vnto it, for there is no part or power of the fleſh which is not wicked and ſinnefull, nor any wickedneſſe of ſin which is not to be found in this center of wickedneſſe. For firſt the fleſh is wholly wicked and malitious. The [a] wiſedome of it is enmity againſt God. The [b] vnderſtanding of it a dungeon of ignorance; the [c] imaginations onely euill and that continually, the [d] will ſtubburne and peruerſe, ſtanding out alwayes in an vtter oppoſition and obſtinate rebellion to the will of God. And if the ſuperiour faculties of the fleſh bee nothing elſe but a ſinke of ſinne, what can wee expect, but that the inferiour parts muſt in their degree bee ſutable in corruption? And therefore as the Apoſtle ſpeaketh of ſinfull men, ſo may wee ſpeake of the fountaine and authour of all their ſinne; the eyes of it are full of adultery, the throate an open ſepulcher, the tongue of it vſed to deceit, the poyſon of aſpes is vnder its lippes, the mouth of it is full of curſing bitterneſſe, the feete ſwit to ſhed blood; deſtruction and miſery are in its way, the way of peace it hath not knowne, neither hath it the feare of God before its eyes.

[a] Rom.8.7.
[b] Rom.3.18.& Eph.4.18.
[c] Gen 6.5. Ier.13.23.
[d] Eph 4.19. 2 Tim.2.26.

Rom.3.18.19.

§.Sect.3.
That all manner of euill is in the fleſh.

Secondly, as the fleſh is wholly euill, ſo all manner of euill is in the fleſh. For it is the common ſewer in which all filth and loathſome poyſon of ſinne meeteth: and in a full ſource runneth together; it is the Diuels ſtorehouſe of wickedneſſe, and his armory in which hee layeth vp all the weapons of impietie; It is the Sea of ſinne from which all wickedneſſe floweth, and into which it floweth backe againe. In a word it is the fruitfull wombe into which the diuel caſting the ſeeds and ſpawnes of his helliſh temptations, they receiue warmth, nouriſhment, growth, and in the end life and the perfect ſhape of all kinds of ſin. For there is not any ſinne whatſoeuer though neuer ſo monſtrous and abhominable, but hath its being in this wicked fleſh; if not appearing, yet at leaſt ſecretly lurking in this filthy dungeon, if not in the full groweth, yet at leaſt in their ſeeds and chiefe principles. There lyeth hid impious Atheiſme, filthy prophanneſſe, abominable idolatry, palpable ignorance, curſed infidelity, damnable hypocriſie, hatefull, pride, bold preſumption, fearefull deſperation, wicked treaſons, horrible murthers, beaſtly inceſts, adulteries, thefts, couetouſneſſe, ambition, crueltie, falſehood deceit, with a huge ſwarme of innumerable other ſinfull abhominations. And though theſe vices and corruptions doe not alwayes burſt out into the ſores of outward actions; yet (like dangerous impoſtumes) they lye hidden within the body of this fleſh; though they are not alwayes exerciſed in their functions and operations, they being ſubdued with Gods ſanctifying ſpirit in the faithfull, and with his reſtrayning grace in the vnregenerate, yet theſe curſed habites and hidden faculties doe ſtill remaine, euen in the regenerate in ſome degree, although in part mortified and weakened, and in their full ſtrength in wicked men. And as the egge hath in it potentially all the parts of the bird, and onely needeth to haue the damme to ſit and houer ouer it, vntill by her warmth it may bee hatched: ſo the fleſh containeth in it all manner of wickedneſſe, and if the filthy ſpirit, like an vgly toade, houer ouer it, and (as it were) warme it with the heate of his helliſh temptations, there will bee hatched the killing cockatrices of all ſinne, if the ſpirit of God doe not cruſh them in the ſhell. Neither is this the ſtate of ſome alone, but euen of all mankinde, ſo farre forth as they are vnregenerate, whereof it is that what David had ſpoken of ſome ſpeciall and notorious ſinners of his times, the Apoſtle in the third Chapter of the Epiſtle to the Romanes, extendeth it to all mankind, being conſidered in the ſtate of corruption.

Rom.3.19.20.

§.Sect.4.
That the fleſh is the author of all wickedneſſe.

Laſtly as the fleſh is all euill, and all euill in the fleſh, ſo it is alſo a fruitfull mother of all wickedneſſe, and a filthy ſinke from which ariſe the noyſome ſents of ſinne, and that poyſonous fountaine from which doe flow the ſtreames of all euill. And this our Sauiour noteth whereas he ſaith, that which commeth out of a man (namely from the inner fountaine of a fleſhly heart) defileth him. So the Apoſtle Iames maketh this carnall luſt the mother, as the Diuell is the father of all ſinne and wickedneſſe: for receiuing the ſeeds of Sathans tentations (as it were) into a fruitfull wombe, it firſt conceiueth, and then bringeth forth ſinne, and ſo ſinne when it is finiſhed bringeth forth death. And the Apoſtle Paul telleth vs what curſed fruits doe ſpring from this roote of bitterneſſe, namely Adulterie, Idolatrie; Witchcraft, Hatred, Hereſie, murther and many other horrible abominations. Neither in truth can it otherwiſe bee; for who (as Iob ſaith) can bring a cleane thing out of an vncleane? Or what can wee expect from an euill tree but euill fruits? as our Sauiour hath taught vs. And ſeeing the fleſh is a Sea of wickedneſſe, and a fountaine poyſoned in the very head, there can nothing flow from it but corrupted ſtreames. And therefore as the Lord gaue nine commandements to dry vp (as it were) theſe ſtreames of wickedneſſe, ſo he gaue the tenth to damme vp the well head, for in vaine it is to ſtop the current, if the fountaine it ſelfe be euer ſpringing.

Mark.7.18.
Iam.1.14.15.
Matth.7.18.
Gal.5.19.20.
Iob.24.4.
Matth.7.18.

§.Sect.5.
That the fleſh is a more mallitious enemy vnto vs, than the deuill or the world.

And thus it appeareth how euill and malicious this wicked enemie the fleſh is in its owne nature; now let vs conſider how it ſtandeth affected towards vs: in which reſpect ſpect wee are to know that it marcheth (if not exceedeth) the world, yea the Diuell himſelfe in miſchiefe and maliciouſneſſe; for howſoeuer it diſguiſeth it ſelfe vnder the vizard of friendſhip and (courtier-like) maketh ſemblance of all loue, yet is it in deadly hatred with the ſpirituall man, continually diſturbeth his peace, vndermineth his ſafety, and is ſtill plotting his ruine and deſtruction. Neither is it poſſible to conceiue a more bitter oppoſition in all things, than betweene the fleſh and the ſpirit; for what the ſpirit vndertaketh, the fleſh croſſeth, what that furthereth this hindereth, and at all times and vpon all occaſions the one nilleth what the other willeth. In which reſpect it may truely bee ſaid, that theſe two cannot reigne and flouriſh in the ſame man at once; for the proſperity of the one, is the ruine of the other, the kindling of fleſhly luſts is the quenching of the ſpirituall, the nouriſhing of carnall concupiſcence after earthly things, is the choaking of ſpirituall concupiſcence after that which is diuine and heauenly; and the feeding and fatning of the one, is the pinching and ſtaruing of the other, according to that of the Pſalmiſt, hee ſatisfied their carnall deſires, but withall hee ſent leanneſſe into their ſoules; for the pampering of theſe luſts bring the ſoule into a deſperate conſumption; and the ſatisfying of them taketh away all appetite after ſpirituall nouriſhment. From which mortall and malicious oppoſition, wee may plainely gather, that there is no peace to bee expected, no not any intermiſſion or ſurceaſing of this warre, vnleſſe one of the combatants bee killed and deſtroyed; for as fire and water being put together, neuer ceaſe ſtriuing and fighting, till either the fire bee extinguiſhed, or the water conſumed; ſo is it in this ſpirituall conflict betweene theſe vnreconcileable enemies. The which ſhould adde much to our Chriſtian reſolution, and make vs couragiouſly to aſſault this enemy with carefull diligence, renewed ſpirits and redoubled ſtrength, ſeeing there cannot bee ſo much as a truce, much leſſe a ſecure peace betweene vs, nor any meanes to preſerue the life of the ſpirituall man, vnleſſe wee kill and crucifie this malicious enemie.

Pſal.106,15.

§. Sect.6. That the fleſh is moſt malitious vnto vs becauſe it is the author of all ſinne.

But this maliciouſnes of the fleſh wil better appeare, if wee conſider the effects and fruits that it bringeth forth againſt vs: which may either bee referred to our ſinne or to our puniſhment. The former appeareth by that which hath beene ſaid, for it is this ſinfull fleſh which worketh in vs all manner of euil concupiſcence, and from the inward corruption of the heart proceed euill thoughts, murthers, adulteries, fornications, thefts, falſe witneſſe, blaſphemies as our Sauiour teacheth vs. And ſo farre off is the Law of God from ſtopping this floud of wickednes, that it ſwelleth ſo much the higher, and by the oppoſition of Gods will taketh occaſion of greater rebellion, breaking downe all the bounds and bankes that ſhould ſtay and keepe it in. And as a wilde beaſt or curſt ban-dogge groweth more fierce and inraged when as they are reſiſted, or when they are curbed in and tyed vp: So this ſauadge fleſh and ſinfull corruption take occaſion by the knowledge of the law the more to tranſgreſſe it, and the more that they are checked and reſtrained, the more violent they grow in their wicked outrage. And this the Apoſtle teſtifieth out of his owne experience; But ſinne (ſaith he, that is, the ſinfull fleſh) taking occaſion by the commandement, wrought in me all manner of concupiſcence; for without the law ſinne was dead. Now ſinne is the greateſt euill that can bee imagined, as being oppoſite to God the ſupreame goodneſſe, neither is death, puniſhment, hell, condemnation, nor the Diuell himſelfe, ſo abſolutely euill, nor ſo extreamely contrarie to Gods glorious Majeſtie. In which regard the fleſh which is that ſinning ſinne as the Apoſtle calleth it, and deepe feſtered and euer running ſore which ſendeth forth this filth of corruption, is chiefely to bee hated of thoſe who loue God, as being the principall prouoker of rebellion againſt our ſupreame ſoueraigne, the bellowes which inflame vs with the fire of concupiſcence, the cauſe which maketh vs ſo often to offend our gracious God, the thiefe which robbeth vs of all ſauing graces, the wall of ſeparation betweene vs and heauenly happineſſe, and that arch-enemy which would often euery day thruſt vs into Hell, and the gulph of deſtruction, if wee were not ſupported by Gods grace and holy Spirit.

Rom.7.8.

§. Sect.7. That the fleſh is the cauſe of the deprauing of our nature and the defacing of Gods image in vs.

And as it is the cauſe of all euill of ſinne, ſo conſequently of the euill of puniſhment: for this is the running and fretting Leproſie which hath monſtrouſly defiled the whole man; and defaced that glorious image of God in which we were created, turning our ſpirituall wiſdome, into folly and ignorance, and our created holineſſe and righteouſneſſe into all injuſtice and helliſh impietie. Yea this fleſh & fleſhly luſts do not onely deface the image of God, but euen the image of a man, whileſt they take away from him his reaſon and vnderſtanding, and ſo all difference betweene him and a beaſt; for through the ſinfull concupiſcence of the corrupt fleſh, man turning away from his Creator to the creatures, looſeth not onely the image of God, but euen the image of himſelfe; and hath the image of the creatures imprinted vpon him. And hereof it is that man, Gods moſt excellent workmanſhip, is ſo monſtrouſly deformed, and ſo horribly abaſed, that hee is become in his naturall condition vile and vgly in the ſight of God and his holy Angels; yea euen a terrour and ſhame to himſelfe, if once the Lord open his eyes and giue him a ſight of his naked deformities. As we may ſee in the example of Adam, who being made the moſt beautifull and glorious of the creatures, was ſo miſhapen and deformed with theſe ſinfull luſts, that he could not indure the ſight of himſelfe, but as he did run into the buſhes to hide his deformites from the eyes of God, ſo if it had bin poſſible hee would haue hid himſelfe from himſelfe and therefore for want of a better couering, made him breeches of Fig-leaues to couer his nakedneſſe. Thus alſo Iob, when by the light of Gods preſence he came to a ſight of his owne corruptions, he was vile and baſe in his owne eyes, abhorred himſelfe, and repented of his ſinnes in duſt and aſhes. So that nothing maketh vs more vile and baſe than the fleſh and carnall luſts, euen as contrariwiſe nothing more intituleth vs to honour and dignity, than to bee cleanſed from this naturall filth, and to bee adorned with holineſſe, whereof it is that the Apoſtle matcheth theſe two together; for hauing exhorted vs to purge our ſelues from the ſinne of vncleanneſſe, he wiſheth vs in the next place to poſſeſſe our veſſels in ſanctification and honour.

Iob.42.6.

1.Theſ.4.3.4.

§. Sect.8.
The the fleſh bringeth vs into a moſt baſe condition.

But this will better appeare, if we further conſider into what a baſe condition we are brought, if the fleſh and the luſts thereof doe get the dominion ouer vs. For whereas there is no eſtate ſo vile and abject as the eſtate of a bondſlaue, becauſe hee is in all things ſubject to the command of his maſter, there being no place left vnto expoſtulation, nor ſo much as any liberty to demand a reaſon; nor no bondage comparable to the bondage of Sathan and our owne ſinfull luſts, becauſe there is no maſters ſo vnjuſt and cruell, the fleſh ſubjecteth vs to this miſerable thraldome. For if Sathan command theſe abject vaſſals, they muſt obey, though it directly tend to the diſhonour of God, the hurt of their neighbours, and the vtter deſtruction of their owne bodies and ſoules. And in the like or greater ſlauerie they are to their owne ſinfull luſts. If vnjuſt anger prouoke them to reuenge, they muſt kill and ſlay; if filthy luſt impoſe vpon them neuer ſo hard a taske, they muſt vndertake it, though it bee to the ruine of their ſtates, the ſtayning of their fame, yea the hazard of their liues, and damnation of their ſoules. If couetouſneſſe command the compaſſing of ſome wealth, they muſt make no queſtion of right or wrong; of hurting other men or their owne perſons. If ambition would haue them to aſpire to preferment, they muſt not ſticke to tread all vnder foote that ſtand in the way, they muſt lye and diſſemble, ſweare and forſweare, and climbe vp the craggie rocke of honour with intolerable toyle, though they are in danger by falling to breake their neckes, either when they are in the midway, or when they be come to the top of their hopes. If voluptuouſneſſe and ſenſualitie will haue their appetite ſatisfied, they muſt toyle and moyle and indure many dayes labour for an houres delight. In a word, they who are in ſubjection to the ſinfull fleſh, are aboue all men in the world in the greateſt ſlauerie, being like vnto Cham, who was a ſeruant of ſeruants, not ſo much in reſpect of outward ſubjection, as in that they are embondaged to their owne carnall luſts; for as there is no ſeruant or ſlaue ſo baſe and vile, ſo there is no tyrant in the world ſo proud and cruell.

§. Sect.9.
That whilſt we liue in the fleſh we cannot pleaſe God.
Rom.8.8.

A third fruit and effect which ſpringeth and proceedeth from this ſinfull fleſh is, that whileſt we liue in it, and it in vs, we cannot pleaſe God, nor doe any thing which is acceptable in his ſight. So the Apoſtle plainely telleth vs, that they who are in the fleſh cannot pleaſe God; and the reaſon hereof is cleare and euident, becauſe to bee in the fleſh, is to bee the ſeruant of ſinne and the vaſſall of Sathan, and to doe nothing but what they like and command; and therefore ſeeing nothing in the world can bee imagined, ſo oppoſite and contrarie vnto God as they, nor any thing ſo odious and abominable in his ſight; and ſeeing their friends bee Gods enemies, and thoſe things which pleaſe them be moſt diſpleaſing in the ſight of God, needs muſt all thoſe actions which are done in the fleſh be odious vnto him and make the agents obnoxious to his wrath. Now what a miſerable condition is this, into which man is brought by his ſinfull fleſh, that both his perſon and all his actions his words, workes and ſecret cogitations ſhould bee vtterly miſliked and diſallowed of him who is the ſupreame King and judge of Heauen and Earth, who hath all power in his hand to reward infinitely thoſe whom hee liketh and alloweth, and to puniſh in like proportion, thoſe whom hee diſalloweth and miſliketh.

§. Sect.10.
The fleſh ſetteth man at enmitie againſt God.
Rom.8.7.

Fourthly the fleſh nouriſheth perpetuall enmity betweene God and the carnall man, for ſo the Apoſtle ſaith that the wiſedome of the fleſh, or the carnall minde, is enmity againſt God; for the fleſh and carnall luſts are in great league and amitie with the Diuell and the world, and they all three vnite all their forces to fight againſt God and all his friends; and howſoeuer they are often vanquiſhed by his almighty power, yet like malicious enemies they ſtand continually againſt him in open rebellion, rather to teſtifie their malice and hatred, than out of any hope of preuailing againſt him. And therefore they who will bee friends vnto theſe fleſhly luſts, the wicked world and the arch-traytor Sathan, muſt needs hereby make themthemſelues enemies vnto God, according to that of the Apoſtle, Know yee not that the amitie of the world is enmity with God, and whoſoeuer will bee a friend of the world, is the enemie of God. And againe, if any man loue the world, the loue of the Father is not in him; and the reaſon which he rendreth is this, becauſe the world and the fleſh with the ſinful luſts thereof are combined together, for (ſaith he) all that is in the world, the luſt of the fleſh, the luſt of the eyes, and the pride of life, is not of the Father but is of the World. For this carnall luſting after earthly things, breeds a neglect and loathing of things ſpirituall and euen of God himſelfe: for their appetite being filled and glutted with the ſweet poyſon of fleſhly delights, they haue no taſt nor relliſh of thoſe heauenly excellencies, and they who haue their ſenſes filled with the ſeeing of worldly pleaſures, haue their ſpirituall ſenſe ſo dulled and deaded, that they cannot ſmell Gods odoriferous ſweetneſſe in his Word and holy ordinances. But as the Beetle chuſeth rather to bee in the dung than among the ſweeteſt flowers, and the filthy hogge is more delighted with routing in the dunghil, than to walke about in the moſt pleaſant garden: ſo thoſe who are carnally minded are beſt pleaſed, when as by any meanes they may ſatisfie their ſenſuall and fleſhly appetite, and take no pleaſure in ſpirituall or heauenly things; yea ſo contrarie and oppoſite are they vnto God in all goodneſſe, and ſuch enmity there is betweene them, that nothing giueth vnto them greater diſtaſte and diſcontentment. And as theſe fleſhly luſts enrage men againſt God; ſo alſo doe they prouoke Gods wrath againſt them; and therefore the Apoſtle ſaith, that whileſt they had their conuerſation in the luſts of the fleſh, fulfilling the deſires thereof, they were alſo the children of wrath, and in that reſpect in danger daily to bee conſumed with the fire of his diſpleaſure. Now what a fearefull condition is this, to bee at enmitie, mortall oppoſition and in hoſtile termes againſt God himſelfe? For as the Apoſtle ſaith, doe we prouoke God vnto anger? Are wee ſtronger than he? Can it bee well with the earthen pitcher when it daſheth its ſelfe againſt the ſtrong Rocke? Or can the ſeely Mouſe eſcape deſtruction when hee prouoketh and encountreth the fierce Lyon? And how much more may they bee aſſured of vtter ruine and deſtruction who are at enmity with God himſelfe, who is not onely able to arme all the creatures againſt them, but with a word of his mouth to caſt them iuto Hell?

Iam. 4. 4.
1. Joh. 2. 16.
Eph. 2. 3.
1. Cor. 10. 22.

§. Sect. 11. That the fleſh is the cauſe of all our puniſhments.

Finally, as the fleſh is the cauſe of all ſin, ſo alſo of all puniſhment; & therfore (becauſe it were infinite to ſtand vpon the particular euils and miſchiefes which this malicious enemy cauſes vnto vs,) looke how many plagues and puniſhments are inflicted vpon mankinde, either in ſtate or name, ſoule or body, and impute them all to the fleſh, as the fountaine of theſe bitter waters from which they ſpring and flow. And yet all theſe being put together are not comparable to thoſe fearefull puniſhments which it cauſeth to carnall men in the life to come. For it excludeth them out of Gods Kingdome and cutteth off all hope of hauing any part in the heauenly inheritance. For they that are in the fleſh, are vnregenetate and vnſanctified, and without holineſſe they can neuer ſee God; and out of this heauenly City are excluded, dogges and ſorcerers, and whoremongers, and murtherers, and idolaters, and whoſoeuer loueth and maketh a lye. And more plainly, the Apoſtle hauing reckoned vp the fruits of the fleſh, directly affirmeth, that they who do ſuch things, ſhall not inherite the kingdome of God. And laſtly the maliciouſneſſe of this wicked enemy and the ſinfull luſts thereof herein appeareth, in that nothing will ſatisfie them but our death and deſtruction. For they are thoſe mortall weapons which kill and murther vs, and the edge and point of them is not onely directed againſt the body, but againſt our ſoules, which are much more precious. And this argument the Apoſtle vſeth to perſwade vs to ſhunne and auoide them; Dearely beloued (ſaith he) I beſeech you as ſtrangers & pilgrims, abſtaine from fleſhly luſts, which warre againſt the ſoule. The end of which warre is not onely to get the victory, and to keepe vs in ſubiection, but to caſt all that are conquered into the priſon of hell, and to plunge them into euerlaſting condemnation of body and ſoule. So the Apoſtle ſaith, that when wee were in the fleſh, the motions of ſinnes which were by the Law did worke in our members to bring forth fruit vnto death; and that to bee carnally minded is death: and yet more plainely, that if wee liue after the fleſh we ſhall die; and that hee who ſoweth to the fleſh ſhall of the fleſh reape corruption, whereby is meant eternall death and deſtruction, as appeareth by the antitheſis following; but hee that ſoweth to the ſpirit, ſhall of the ſpirit reape life euerlaſting. And the Apoſtle Peter likewiſe telleth vs, that the Lord reſerueth the vniuſt vnto the day of iudgement to be puniſhed, but chiefely them that walke after the fleſh in the luſt of vncleanneſſe.

Heb. 12. 14.
Apo. 22. 15.
Gal. 5. 21.
1. Pet. 2. 11.
Rom. 7. 5.
Rom. 8. 6. 13.
Gal. 6. 8.
2. Pet. 2. 10.

§. Sect. 12. That the malice of the fleſh is the more dangerous, becauſe it is masked vnder the colour of friendſhip.

Now this maliciouſneſſe of the fleſh is ſo much the more dangerous, becauſe it is maſqued and diſguiſed vnder the colour and couerture of the neereſt friendſhip; for whileſt in outward ſhew it ſeemeth a neerer friend, than a Kinſman or deareſt brother, and like another ſelfe appeareth moſt carefull of aduancing our preſent and future good, it doth moſt maliciouſly vndermine our ſafety, & betrayeth vs into the hands of our profeſſed enemies; neither can Satan and the World be more ready to beſiege and aſſault vs with the forces and troupes of their temptations, than the fleſh to yeeld vs into their hands by giuing free entrance to theſe aſſailants. Yea it doth not onely open the gates of our ſoules to let in theſe mortall enemies, but being entred, it joyneth with them, aſſiſteth theſe helliſh forces with a ſtrong army of carnall luſts, and fighteth againſt our ſoules, robbing and ranſacking them of all ſpirituall graces, and wounding them euen to the death with the wounds of ſin, if they were not recured with the precious Balſum of Chriſts bloud. So that we haue juſt cauſe to complaine with our Sauiour, that it is not a ſtranger or profeſſed enemy, but a wicked Diſciple and falſe Iudas that continually followeth vs; waiting all opportunities wherby he may betray vs; & that he who eateth bread with vs hath lift vp his heele againſt vs. And as Dauid complaineth of Achitophel. It is not a profeſſed foe that doth vs this miſchiefe, but it is thou, a man, mine equall, my guide and mine acquaintance, our councellour and companion that walketh with vs to the houſe of God. It is one who was borne and bred, liueth and dieth, eateth, drinketh, ſleepeth, walketh and talketh with vs, which notwithſtanding watcheth all occaſions of bringing vs to deſtruction; for like Tinder receiuing the ſparkes of Sathans temptations it nouriſheth and encreaſeth them, till at length our ſoules be inflamed with a world of wickedneſſe. Whereby it appeareth that the fleſh with the luſts thereof are enemies aboue all others moſt dangerous and pernicious; for being ſecret Traytours they are much more malicious than profeſſed enemies, malice and hatred being of ſuch a nature, that the more they are ſmothered and concealed, the more they are inwardly increaſed and inraged. They haue alſo the fitteſt opportunities to worke our ouerthrow in that lying and liuing with vs, they can eaſily take the beſt aduantages, and then ſet vpon vs when as wee are moſt weake or ſecure, and leaſt prouided to make reſiſtance. Moreouer being ſecret Traytours they are ſo much the more able to doe vs miſchiefe, becauſe ſuſpecting no hurt from them, wee doe not arme our ſelues againſt them, nor fortifie our ſoules againſt their aſſaults; whereof it commeth to paſſe that we are often ouercome and led captiue vnto ſin, before we diſcouered the enemy, or did diſcerne that we were encountred. Finally, they fight with vs not by marching againſt vs in the open field, but out of ſecret ambuſhments, when wee feare no danger, and ſo oftentimes put vs to flight, before we haue any time to recollect and marſhall in order the forces of our mind, or to make any head againſt their fury. Now what can bee more dangerous than to haue alwayes in our company ſuch a treacherous Iudas, who is ſtill plotting the fitteſt meanes whereby hee may betray vs into the power of our enemies? To haue alwayes with vs ſuch a flattering, falſe Ioab, who when hee performeth all complements of kindneſſe, doth but watch his opportunity to ſtab and kill vs; to bee beſieged with mighty enemies, and to haue within the wals of our City ſecret Traytours, who are ſtill ready to open the gates to let them in, and being entred to joyne with them, that ſo together they may worke our ouerthrow?

Iohn 13.18.
Pſal.55.13,14.

§. Sect.13.
How wee may defeat the malicious treaſons of the fleſh,

But it is not enough to know our danger, vnleſſe we alſo be acquainted with the means how we may preuent it. And therefore let vs inquire how we may auoid theſe pernicious Treaſons and eſcape the perill of theſe ſecret ambuſhments. And firſt taking notice that the fleſh, whileſt it profeſſeth friendſhip and offereth vnto vs much profit and many delights, is our mortall enemy, and a ſly Traytour which taketh part with the chiefe enemies of our ſaluation, wee muſt hearken to the Prophets counſell in another caſe. Truſt yee not in a friend, put yee not confidence in a guide, keepe the doores of thy mouth from her that lyeth in thy boſome, and alwayes haue it in jealouſie, then moſt ſuſpecting it, when as it offereth to ſatisfie our deſires. And when it commendeth vnto vs the vanities of the World, promiſing that in the fruition of them wee ſhall haue great contentment, let vs beware of ſecret treachery, and againe and againe looke vnder theſe baites to ſee if there be not hidden vnder them the hooke of ſinne, and curiouſly ſearch if theſe booties are not purpoſely ſet out, to make vs fall into Sathans ambuſhments, that ſo hee may ouercome and lead vs captiue to doe his will. For who would giue any credit to ſuch a falſe Traytour, as hath before his eyes brought ſo many to vtter ruine, yea, which we know by manifold experience, hath many hundred times betrayed vs to the Deuill and the World, when as it hath tendred vnto vs the faireſt promiſes and pretences. Secondly, ſeeing we know it to be a trayterous enemy we muſt diſarme and weaken, captiue & hold it in ſubjection, that ſo though it haue euer a malicious will to hurt vs, yet being diſabled, it may not haue any power to rebell againſt vs. Thirdly, wee muſt keepe a narrow watch ouer it and ouer our ſelues, that it doth not take vs at any aduantage, and often looke to our ſenſes, as it were the gates of our ſoules, that they be not by our fleſh and carnall corruption vnbarred and left open to entertaine the forces of our ſpirituall enemies. And becauſe our vigilance is not ſufficient to preuent the plots and practices of this ſubtile Traytour, let vs often often intreat, by our moſt feruent prayers, the keeper of Iſrael who neuer ſlumbreth nor ſleepeth, that hee will watch ouer vs, and by his holy Spirit diſcouer and defeat theſe treacherous enemies.

Micah.7.5.

Chap. IX.

That the fleſh is an enemy exceeding powerfull and mighty.

§. Sect. 1. That the fleſh is to the vnregenerate a mighty King, & to the regenerate a powerfull Tyrant.

WE haue ſhewed that the fleſh is a moſt malicious enemy, ſo that it wanteth no will to bring vs to deſtruction: And now it remayneth that wee ſhew how mighty and powerfull it is in effecting that which it deſireth and luſteth. The which will appeare if we conſider the mighty power and ſubtile policy of theſe malicious enemies. Their power appeareth both in regard of their ſtrength and number. For the firſt, if wee looke vpon the fleſh in its full ſtrength, as it is in a man vnregenerate, and is not ſubdued nor hath the vigour thereof abated by Gods Spirit, wee ſhall finde that it raigneth as a mighty Monarch in the little World of man, holding euery faculty, power and part both of ſoule and body in ſubjection. The which the Apoſtle plainly intimateth, where he exhorteth thoſe whom Chriſt by his Spirit hath regenerated and freed from this regiment, not to let ſin raigne in their mortall bodies, that they ſhould obey it in the luſts thereof. Yea, it raigneth not onely as a King and abſolute Soueraigne; but as a Lord or Tyrant who hauing conquered mankind doth hold them in ſubjection as miſerable captiues and bond-ſlaues, ſelling them ouer to the committing of all actuall tranſgreſſions, for the baſe price of earthly vanities. The which the Apoſtle intimateth in theſe words; but I am carnall, ſold vnder ſinne. Whereby he ſignifieth that the fleſh dealt with him like a proud and cruell Tyrant, ſeaſing vpon him, like one who had bought a ſlaue in the market, and forcibly compelling him to doe his will. The which if the Apoſtle might truly ſpeake of himſelfe though hee were regenerate, in reſpect of that part which remayned vnſanctified, then how much more may it be verified of thoſe who remayne in the ſtate of corruption and vnregenerate, who are wholly vnder the dominion of ſin? Now if we would ſee with what power and vnreſiſtable force, this cruell Tyrant did rule in all the ſonnes of men, whileſt they remayned in the ſtate of corruption, hereby it will appeare in that they were ſo vtterly vnable to free themſelues out of this thraldome, that they neuer durſt nor could attempt their liberty, becauſe their wils were no leſſe captiuated, than their other parts and faculties, and it was their chiefe delight to liue in this ſlauery. Neither were any outward helpes auaileable, becauſe being poſſeſſed and ruled by this legion of wicked luſts, like the Demoniake in the Goſpell nothing would containe them nor reſtraine their fury, but they brake eaſily all thoſe Chaines, Giues, and Fetters wherewith they were bound, being (like mad men) a like harmefull both to themſelues and others. For neither would Gods loue and many benefits allure them and contain them in obedience, nor his wrath and fearefull judgements terrifie and reſtrain them from ſinne. Neither the Law of God, contayning ſo many gracious promiſes to them who obeyed it, and ſo many terrible threatnings againſt them that tranſgreſſed it, both of temporary plagues and euerlaſting puniſhments; nor the execution of theſe dreadfull judgements in the puniſhment of the whole World by an vniuerſall deluge; of Sodome and Gomorrah with fire and brimſtone, with many other Cities and Countries which haue beene made examples of Gods wrath againſt ſinne; beſides the experience of innumerable particular perſons, and euen of themſelues, viſited by the hand of God in a fearefull manner, were all ſufficient and ſtrong enough to curbe and keepe vnder theſe ſinfull paſſions and corrupt luſts, nor to ſubdue and thruſt out of his regency this powerfull Tyrant the fleſh; till Chriſt Ieſus himſelfe came who is the wiſdome and power of his Father, and conquered him on his Croſſe, triumphing glorioully ouer him together with the reſt of our ſpirituall enemies; and vntill hee apply the vertue of this victory vnto vs, and by his powerfull Spirit, which is infinitely ſtronger than all men and Angels, doe vanquiſh this mighty Tyrant, giue him a deadly wound of which hee continually languiſheth, and depoſing him from his regency, doe ſet vp in our hearts the gracious and glorious Kingdome of our bleſſed Sauiour. So that we may conclude this point with the ſaying of Cyrill. The voluptuous luſts of the fleſh without doubt are of mighty power, by which the minds of men are wholly diuerted from all honeſtie and goodneſſe.

Rom.6.12.

Rom.7.14.

Mar.5.

In Johan. lib.3. cap.34.

§. Sect. 2. Of the ſtrength of the fleſh being conſidered in its ſelfe.

But leſt thoſe who are regenerate ſhould contemne this enemy, as being weake and impotent, becauſe it is in part mortified and the ſtrength thereof abated by vertue of Gods Spirit dwelling in them; let vs in the next place know, that though it be not in them ſo puiſſant and powerfull as in thoſe who remayne in their naturall corruption, yet it is exceeding ſtrong and mighty, whether wee conſider it ſimply in it ſelfe, as it worketh and rebelleth in thoſe who are ſanctified, or compare it with the ſpirituall and regenerate part. The former is notably ſet downe by the Apoſtle in his owne perſon, in the ſeuenth Chapter of the Epiſtle to the Romanes, manes, where hee ſheweth that this corrupt and ſinfull fleſh is ſo farre off from any conformity to the Law, that taking occaſion by the commandement, it wrought in him all manner of concupiſcence, and ſo abuſed the Law which was purpoſely giuen to reſtrain him from ſinne, and to ſubdue and mortifie his corruptions, as a means to giue ſtrength, life and vigour vnto it; Whereby the Law Verſe 8. which was ordained to life, became to be vnto death. Further ſhewing the power of his fleſhly corruption hee ſaith, that it tooke occaſion Verſe 9. by the commandement to deceiue and ſlay him, working death vnto him by that Verſe 10. which is good; that it ouercame him and like a Verſe 11. ſlaue ſold him vnder ſinne, that it made him to doe that which hee allowed not, to omit the Verſe 12. good which hee affected, and commit the euill which he hated; that though he were delighted in the Law of God and deſired to obey it, yet Verſe 13. euill was preſent with him. That though hee Verſe 14. conſtantly reſolued to ſerue God, yet the fleſh like a ſtrong rebell making warre againſt him, did often foyle and ouercome him, and carried him into captiuitie to the Verſe 24. law of ſinne. Yea, of ſuch force and might did this holy Apoſtle find the fleſh in him, that it forced him to cry out; wretched man that I am, who ſhall deliuer me from the body Gal. 5.17. of this death. So elſewhere hee telleth vs, that the fleſh is not ſo ſubdued, but that it continually maketh warre againſt the part regenerate; and ſtandeth in ſuch ſtrong oppoſition againſt it, that the godly cannot doe

1. Pet. 2.11. the good they would. With whom the Apoſtle Peter agreeing telleth vs, that the fleſhly luſts doe fight againſt our ſoules. Finally, as it hindreth vs oftentimes from yeelding any obedience to the law, and enforceth vs to tranſgreſſe it; ſo when wee doe performe any duties which it requireth, it ſo defileth and ſtaineth them, that wee haue juſt cauſe to acknowledge with the Prophet that our beſt Eſay 64.6. righteouſneſſe is but like a polluted cloth. Now this ſtrength of the fleſh vnleſſe it be wounded, ſubdued and kept vnder by Gods Spirit, is alwayes in it full vigour, yea in daily growth, notwithſtanding all naturall means which can be vſed. For the decay of nature it ſelfe doth not make it decay, but euen in ſickneſſe it retaineth health and vigour, and when through olde age the body is weak and decrepite, it continueth firme and ſtrong.

§. Sect. 3. That the fleſh is mighty being conſidered comparatiuely with the ſpirit.

So alſo if we compare it with the ſpirituall part, the fleſh is much greater and ſtronger; and therefore would eaſily ouercome it and quench all Gods graces in vs, if God ſhould leaue vs to our ſelues to be ſupported and defended by the ſtrength which wee haue receiued, and not continually ſend vs new ſupplyes, and vphold vs with the power of his owne ſpirit. For the Apoſtle telleth vs, that in this life we haue receiued but the firſt
Rom. 8.23. fruits of the ſpirit, which is but an handfull in compariſon of the harueſt, the whole crop of grace being reſerued, till we ſhall receiue with it the fulneſſe of glory. And in regard that the fleſh in quantity did ſo much exceed the ſpirit, he ſticketh not to ſay, that the Corinthians though ſanctified in Chriſt Ieſus
1. Cor. 1.2. and called to be Saints, were carnall and but Chap. 3.1.3. babes in Chriſt; yea, hauing himſelfe receiued ſuch a great meaſure of grace, hee notwithſtanding in the ſight and ſenſe of his great corruption acknowledgeth that hee Rom. 7.14. was carnall and ſold vnder ſinne. Hereof it is that Diuines compare the fleſh to the great Gyant Goliah, and the ſpirit to little Dauid; and not vnfitly, for as Dauid was farre vnequall to the mighty Gyant, and therefore preuayled not againſt him by his owne ſtrength, but by the power of God aſſiſting him, in whoſe name he came againſt him; ſo by the ſame meanes only the ſpirit getteth victory ouer the fleſh, God giuing it ſtrength to ouercome becauſe it fighteth his owne battailes.

§. Sect. 4. Of the multitude of our fleſhly luſts,

Finally, vnto the ſtrength of our enemy wee may adde their multitude, for though they be one in name, to note that they are all of the like ſinfull nature, and as one combined in malice to worke our deſtruction; ſo are they many in number, euen whole legions of vnlawfull luſts, which continually multiply themſelues, by begetting a new offſpring after the old are killed and ſubdued.
Whereof it is that the Apoſtle Peter willeth vs, to abſtaine from fleſhly luſts, which fight againſt the ſoule, ſpeaking plurally of them as being many, euen a whole army which maketh warre againſt vs.

§. Sect. 5. That the power of our enemies ſhould make vs to ſhake off all ſecuritie.

The conſideration whereof ſhould moue vs to ſhake of all ſecurity, ariſing from contempt of our enemies, and ſeeing they are ſo mighty in ſtrength, and many in number, let vs vſe ſo much the more care, diligence, and vigilance to defend our ſelues againſt their fury, buckling vnto vs the whole armour of God, and vſing all means both for the weakning of our enemies, and the nouriſhing and ſtrengthening of Gods graces in vs. Eſpecially let vs call vpon God, the Lord of hoaſts, deſiring him by our feruent Prayers, that he will by his Spirit abate the power of the fleſh and the ſinfull luſts thereof, and re-inforce and ſtrengthen the army of his ſpirituall graces in vs, by ſending to them daily new aydes and freſh ſupplyes, that ſo in the end we may obtaine the victory.

§. Sect. 6. That the might of our enemies ſhold not diſcourage vs from the fight, but make vs more couragious.

Neither ſhould the power of theſe ſpirituall enemies daunt and diſcourage vs, and ſo make vs cowardly to flie, or yeeld our ſelues as ſlaues vnto them; becauſe being ſo much too ſtrong for vs, there is no hope of withſtanding their fury or obtayning victory.
But let vs ſtill remember that wee fight the Lords battailes, and therefore hee being on our ſide, wee are ſure (if wee will but fight) to obtaine the victory in the end. Let vs remember that our Grand Captaine Ieſus Chriſt hath by his death ouercome ſinne, and led it captiue vpon his Croſſe, triumphing glorioully ouer it together with the reſt of our ſpirituall enemies, ſo as none of them ſhall bee able to hurt vs. With which meditation the Apoſtle comforted and incouraged himſelfe in his tedious conflict with the fleſh; for hauing pitifully complayned and cryed out; Wretched man that I am who ſhall deliuer mee from the body of this death? Hee preſently addeth; I thanke God through Ieſus Christ our Lord; By whom alone hee had obtained ſtrength, whereby hee was able to ſtand in the fight, and was aſſured in the end to get the victory. Yea, let vs call to minde that hee by his Spirit hath applyed vnto vs the vertue of his death, whereby hee hath giuen vnto our fleſh ſuch a deadly wound, that it ſhall neuer recouer of it, but languiſh in a continuall conſumption, vntill by our death it bee fully aboliſhed. And therefore when wee like weake and white-liuered Souldiers are tyred in the fight, let vs flie to the ſtandard, and fight vnder the ſhield of Chriſt our Sauiour, who is our true Eleazar (the comfort of God) and ſo mighty and omnipotent, that hee is able to vanquiſh and ouercome all our enemies alone; onely hee would haue vs to fight with him in the battaile, that ſo wee might alſo accompany him in his glorious triumph. Let vs remember that though our ſpirituall part bee but the firſt fruits, yet it is an earneſt of the whole harueſt; though it be but ſmall in quantitie, yet it is full of vertue and vigour, the God of Life giuing life vnto it, and like a little quinteſcence, which is ſtronger in operation, by that vertue which it receiueth from the fire of Gods Spirit, than a great quantitie of common waters. Whereas contrariwiſe the fleſh, though it be much greater and ſtronger, yet being deputed to mortification and hauing receiued a fatall blow, of which it daily languiſheth and decayeth; it is a Gyant in deed in ſtrength and bigneſſe, but yet ſuch an one as being in a deadly conſumption, pineth away by little and little till it be wholy aboliſhed. And on the other ſide though the ſpirit bee as a childe in age and ſtature, yet it is in a continuall growth vntill it come to mans eſtate and a perfect age in Ieſus Chriſt.

Rom.7.

CHAP. X.

Of the policy of the Fleſh; and that it is more dangerous and pernicious than its power and ſtrength.

§. Sect. 1.
That the policy of the fleſh is in its nature exceeding pernicious.

IT now remayneth in the next place, hauing ſeene the power of the Fleſh, that we alſo conſider of the policy of this enemy. The which as it is great in it ſelfe, ſo alſo moſt dangerous and pernicious vnto vs. For howſoeuer the ſtrength of the fleſh be very great, yet the policy thereof doth farre exceed it; for being not a profeſſed enemy, but a ſecret Traytour, it is more exerciſed in cunning vndermining of our ſafety with ſubtle ſleights and politique ſtratagems, than in aſſaulting vs after an open & hoſtile manner with ſtrength and violence. Hence it is that the Lord telleth vs by the Prophet, that the heart (whereby hee vnderſtandeth the ſoule of man, or that part of the ſoule which remayneth vnregenerate) is deceitfull aboue all things, and ſo deſperately wicked in this depth of fraude, that none can know it but the Lord, who is omniſcient, and knoweth all things. For howſoeuer Sathan the olde Serpent in reſpect of his naturall abilities and long experience, may be more cunning and politique in himſelfe, yet his deceit is not ſo great, in abuſing and wronging vs, as is the deceit of our owne fleſh. For this being a part of our ſelues, yea, of euery power, faculty and member of our ſoules and bodies, it is of the priuy counſell of all our thoughts, and knowing our moſt hidden imaginations and ſecret intentions, it can take aduantage of them to worke our owne ouerthrow; where as Sathan being ignorant of them, cannot by all his craft and ſubtilty ſo much endamage vs. And in this reſpect Sathan cannot deceiue vs, vnleſſe our owne fleſh aſſiſting him doe firſt deceiue vs, whereof it is that our Sauiour, being pure from all fleſhly corruption, and moſt free from this carnall guile, could not poſſibly be deceiued with Sathans policies and moſt ſubtle ſtratagems. Whereas on the other ſide our owne fleſh can eaſily abuſe and coozen vs, though it haue no helpe at all from the arch-enemy of our ſaluation. And hereof it is that the fleſh in the Scriptures is called the olde man, to note vnto vs, that as men in this age, grow by their long experience very politike, and vnleſſe they bee ſanctified with Gods grace and holy Spirit, very ſubtill, crafty and full of fraude, ſo the fleſh exceedeth and aboundeth in fraude and treachery.

Ier.17.10.

§. Sect. 2.
Of the ſtrength of the fleſh being conſidered in it ſelfe.

Now this fraude and policy of the fleſh, as it is moſt malicious in it ſelfe, ſo it is moſt pernicious vnto vs. The former appeareth in that it taketh part with Sathan, the wicked one, against God himſelfe the chiefe goodneſſe;

8.7.

7.11.

ich.7.5.

ou.28,26.

m.8.6.

m.7,11.

17.10.

4,23.

eb.3.12,13.

neſſe; for ſo the Apoſtle telleth vs, that the wiſdome of the fleſh is emnity againſt God. And that this policy is moſt pernicious vnto vs, it is manifeſt, firſt becauſe it often preuaileth, and much deceiueth vs; as the Apoſtle out of his owne experience complaineth, Rom.7.11. Sinne taking occaſion by the commandement deceiued mee. In which regard that may juſtly bee ſaid vnto vs which the Prophet ſpeaketh in another caſe, Truſt yee not in a friend, put yee not confidence in a guide, keepe the doores of thy mouth from her that lyeth in thy boſome. For ſo often and commonly are wee hereby deceiued and abuſed, that we haue juſt cauſe to ſubſcribe to the Wiſe mans ſaying: Hee that truſteth in his owne heart is a foole. Secondly, the perniciouſneſſe of this policy vnto vs hereby appeareth, in that it tendeth vnto no leſſe hurt than our death and vtter deſtruction; for ſo the Apoſtle telleth vs, that the wiſdome of the fleſh is death, and therefore he joyneth theſe two together, that ſinne, or his ſinfull corruption deceiued and ſlue him; becauſe it was ſuch a deceit as brought death and deſtruction, vnleſſe he had beene redeemed and freed from it by the precious death of Ieſus Chriſt. Finally, the danger of this carnall policy and deceipt is ſo much the greater, becauſe it is ſo ſubtill and ſecret, ſo deepe and diſguiſed, that it can hardly be diſcerned and found out; according to that of the Prophet Ieremy, The heart is deceitfull aboue all things and deſperately wicked, who can know it? So that our longeſt line cannot ſound the bottome of this gulph; our quickeſt and moſt piercing ſight cannot diſcouer the multitude and ſtrength of theſe ſubtle enemies, becauſe they diſplay not their colours in the open field, but lie hidden in ſecret ambuſhments: yea, they mingle themſelues amongſt our owne forces, and diſguiſe themſelues in our owne coats and habits. They make ſhew of ſimplicity and ſincerity, when as there is nothing but craft and deceipt: and theſe dangerous bogs ſeeme outwardly faire greene fields and firme ground, but hauing with this outward ſhew inuited vs to them, wee are ready to ſinke, and to bee ſwallowed vp and periſh, when wee reſt vpon them. In which regard it behoueth vs to follow the Wiſe mans aduice: Pro.4.23. Keepe thy heart with all diligence. And the exhortation of the Apoſtle: Take heede brethren leſt there be in any of you an euill heart of vnbeliefe in departing from the liuing God. But exhort one another dayly, whileſt it is called to day leſt any of you bee hardened through the deceitfulneſſe of ſinne. For how hard is it to ouercome thoſe enemies, which are ſo hardly diſcouered? and to fruſtrate and preuent thoſe deceits which cannot without great difficultie be ſo much as diſcerned?

§.Sect.3.

That the policie of the fleſh ſhould make vs more watchfull and vigilant.

But let this difficultie in ſounding of the depth of this helliſh policy, and in ſearching out thoſe deceipts which lye lurking in theſe darke corners, onely make vs more vigilant and diligent to diſcouer them but not daunt and diſcourage vs, or make vs leſſe confident & couragious in fighting this ſpirituall conflict; for be the fleſh neuer ſo politique and euen inſpired with all the ſubtiltie of the Deuill, yet haue wee a wiſdome to direct vs in compariſon whereof all this depth of craft & cunning is but childiſh folly. And though there be in our corrupt nature ſuch a maze of deceit, that we cannot enter into it, or being entred cannot tel how to get out; and though it be ſuch a darke dungeon of ſubtilty, that by the light of our owne wiſedome and vnderſtanding wee cannot ſee into it; yet the Lord hath giuen vnto vs his Word to be our line, which if we follow we ſhall find euery creeke and corner, turning and winding of this Labyrinth of wickedneſſe; and to be a light ſhining in the darkeſt places, which is able to diſpell this Cymerian darkneſſe, and to diſcouer cleerely all theſe ſubtilties and crafty policies, teaching vs alſo the way to preuent and defeat them, ſo as wee ſhall not be in danger of theſe ſecret ambuſhments. So the Apoſtle telleth vs, that the Word of God is quicke and powerfull, and ſharper than any two-edged ſword; piercing euen to the diuiding a ſunder of ſoule and ſpirit, and of the ioynts and marrow, and is a diſcerner of the thoughts and intents of the heart. And therefore as the darkeſt dungeon where all things are hidden and vnſeene, becommeth as light as any other place, if there be made an open paſſage, for the Sun-beames to ſhine into it, ſo as all the filth and ſluttiſh corners are manifeſt to euery beholder, which before by reaſon of the darkneſſe none could diſcerne: ſo this dungeon and depth of carnall policy hideth all things, and is it ſelfe hidden from our ſight, ſo long as we bring vnto it no other light than our darke vnderſtanding; but if once the beames of Gods ſhining Truth, and the bright rayes of his holy Word doe inlighten vs, wee ſhall eaſily diſcerne theſe deepe and darke deceits, and diſcouer all the ſecret filthineſſe and abominable wickednes which lyeth lurking in theſe ſecret corners. So that if wee will make choiſe of Gods Word to bee a lampe to our feet and a light vnto our paths; wee ſhall eaſily auoid thoſe ſecret ſnares which lie in our way, and eſcape thoſe ſubtile ſtratagems and dangerous ambuſhments, which the fleſh hath purpoſely laid to inſnare and circumuent vs. If we will often and ſeriouſly ſtudy in this holy booke, we ſhall find all the ſlights and ſubtilties of thoſe ſpirituall enemies layed open, together with the meanes how wee may defeat them. But withall, becauſe the fleſh doth continually caſt fogs and miſts before our eyes, that we may not diſcerne this light, and like ſome

2.Pet.1.19.

Heb.4.13.

Pſal.119.105.

kinds of fiſh doth purpoſely muddy theſe cleere waters, that ſo it may the better glide away and not be diſcouered; we muſt continually deſire the Lord to open our eyes, that wee may ſee the wonderfull things of his Law, and that he will by the light of his holy Spirit ſo illuminate our minds, and diſpell theſe fogs and miſts which the fleſh daily raiſeth, that wee may ſee all its deepe policies, and dangerous ſubtilties, and haue ſuch a meaſure of ſpirituall wiſedome and vnderſtanding, that wee may be able to preuent and eſcape them.

*Pſal.*119.18.

Chap. XI.

Of certaine particular deceits of the fleſh reſpecting our perſons.

§. *Sect.*1. The firſt deceit that wee are nothing ſo euill as in truth we are.

But come wee from the generall to ſome particulars, which as they are moſt common and ordinary, ſo alſo moſt dangerous & pernicious, for more eaſily might I number the haires of a mans head, or the ſtars of Heauen, yea, the graſſe in a large field, or ſtones vpon the Sea ſhore, than all the deceits of our corrupt fleſh. Beſides my late worthy aſſiſtant in the worke of my Miniſtery, that excellent light of Gods Church, which (ah) too ſoone did ſet vnto vs, that hee might for euer glorioully ſhine in Heauen, hath in his Booke of the deceitfulneſſe of the Heart ſo ſweetly and diuinely diſcourſed on this ſubject, that hee hath eaſed mee of this labour. Yet this diſcourſe ſo neceſſarily requiring that I ſhould ſay ſome thing of this argument, as that it will ſeeme maymed if it goe without it, I wil a little inſiſt vpon it, and for our more orderly proceeding I will referre theſe deceits of the fleſh to two principall heads. The firſt ſuch as reſpect our perſons and ſtates, the other ſuch as concerne certaine duties which God requireth of vs. For the former, it is a common and moſt pernicious policy of the fleſh to perſwade vs, that we are nothing ſo euill, corrupt and wicked as in truth we are. To the entertayning of which conceit we are the more eaſily induced by reaſon of ignorance and blindneſſe of minde, pride & ſelfe-loue which naturally raigne and rule in vs. For though wee be wholy, from the crowne of the head to the ſole of the foote, defiled with ſinne, and thereby vtterly diſabled vnto any good duty; yet we ſee that the moſt haue an opinion of their owne worth and excellency; For many boaſt themſelues in the goodneſſe of their natures, as though therein they might be accepted, not only of men, but alſo of God himſelfe; many vaunt of their pure naturals and, workes of congruity, which before grace receiued they are able to performe in the ſtrength of their naturall abilities; many doe reſt in their owne ciuill juſtice and honeſty as though it were ſufficient to juſtifie them in Gods ſight, many bleſſe themſelues in their legal righteouſneſſe, as though thereby they could merit Heauen with ſome ſmall helpe; and finally, many with the Angel of the Church of Laodicea doe thinke themſelues rich and ſo increaſed in goods, that they ſtand in need of nothing; when as in truth they are wretched and miſerable, poore, blinde and naked. But let vs take heed of this policy as being moſt dangerous and pernicious, ſeeing it maketh men reſt in themſelues and vpon the weake reed of their owne righteouſneſſe to their vtter perdition, and keepeth them from flying vnto Chriſt, and from hungring after his righteouſneſſe by which alone wee are juſtified and ſaued. And as it keepeth vs from imbracing Chriſt by faith, ſo alſo it hindreth our repentance, and nouriſheth in vs carnall ſecurity and hardneſſe of heart: for wee muſt firſt ſee our ſins before we can euer bewayle or turne from them, and whileſt we haue any opinion of our owne good natures, or our legall righteouſneſſe, wee can neuer as wee ſhould bewayle our ſinfull corruptions, nor carefully vſe any meanes to be purged from them.

Maſter Daniel Dike.

*Apoc.*3.17.

§. *Sect.*2. The meanes to defeat the former policy.

Whereby it appeareth that no policy is more pernicious if it preuayle againſt vs, ſeeing it ſpoyleth vs of our Sauiour Chriſt, and of all the gracious promiſes of life and ſaluation contained in the Goſpell, which are all made on the condition of faith approued to be liuely and juſtifying by the fruits thereof in vnfained repentance. The which ſhould moue vs to vſe all our care and indeuour that we may defeat it: to which purpoſe we muſt not looke vpon our ſelues as wee appeare in the twilight, or rather in the darke night of naturall knowledge, nor yet through the falſe ſpectacles of pride and ſelfe-loue, which will hide and diſguiſe our vices and corruptions, and make them to ſhew themſelues in vertues colours; but we muſt looke vpon our ſelues in the glaſſe of the Law, and try our thoughts and words, our workes and our wayes by the rule of Gods Word, and ſo ſhall wee plainly diſcouer our blemiſhes and defilements, yea, our monſtrous deformities and vgly corruptions, with the auerſenes of our wils to all good, and the peruerſeneſſe and crookednes of our hearts and affections. For there ſhall wee ſee that our vnderſtandings are ſo blinded that though they be wiſe vnto euill, yet to doe good they haue no knowledge; that our judgements are wholy corrupted, miſtaking euill for good, and good for euill, right for wrong, and wrong for right, truth for falſhood, and falſhood for truth; that our imaginations are euill and that continually; that our conſciences are either ſeared through ſecuritie, or affrighted *Ephes.*4.18. *Ier.*4.22.

frighted with terrours and horrours through deſpaire, and either accuſing when they ſhould excuſe, or excuſing when they ſhould accuſe; that our memories are ſlippery to retaine any good thing, and retentiue like braſſe or yron in keeping and preſeruing ſinfull and wicked impreſſions; that our wills ſtand in open rebellion againſt God; nilling what he willeth, and willing what he nilleth. That our hearts are alienate to all goodneſſe and cleaue faſt to all worldly and ſinnefull vanities; that our affections are wholly corrupted and diſordered, and all the members of our bodies the ready inſtruments of ſinne. There ſhall wee finde that by reaſon of this corruption wee are not able to thinke a good thought, nor ſo much as will that which is good, that we are altogether vnprofitable ſeruants, yea rather the ſlaues of ſinne and Sathan, the children of wrath, and not onely ſicke but euen ſtarke dead in our ſinnes; that wee haue not onely in vs vtter barrenneſſe of all good, but the ſeedes of all wickedneſſe, lurking and lying hid, which ſproute fourth vpon all occaſions, when as they receiue any warmth and moyſture from the temptations of Sathan and the world; yea would of themſelues daily come to growth and ripeneſſe if they were not continually nipped and reſtrained by the common grace of Gods Spirit. Finally that the black-moore may as eaſily change his blackeneſſe, and the leopard his ſpots, as wee our ſinnefull condition into a better eſtate; yea that in ſtead of making any ſatisfaction by paying the old ſcore, we are ready to encreaſe our debt by adding new ſinnes vnto the olde, and ſo plunge our ſelues into more fearefull condemnation. And thus may we defeate this pollicy of the fleſh and comming vnto a true ſight of our owne naturall vileneſſe, wee may abhorre our ſelues and repent in duſt and aſhes, and renouncing our owne righteouſneſſe, may hunger after the all-ſufficient righteouſneſſe of Chriſt, and applying it vnto vs by a liuely faith may find it effectuall for our juſtification and ſaluation.

cor.3.5.
hil.2.13.
ph.2.1,3.
er.13.23.
ob 42.6.

§. Sect. 3.
The ſecond pollicie that the good things in vs are much better than in truth they are.

Secondly as the fleſh perſwadeth vs that wee are nothing ſo ill as wee are in reſpect of our ſinfull condition, ſo that the good things which we ſeeme to haue are farre better and of much greater excellency than in truth they are; and as there it lookes vpon our faults and vices through the thicke fogge of ignorance which maketh them to bee ſcarce viſible and diſcernable; ſo when it beholdeth any appearance of good in vs it putteth on the ſpectacles of pride and ſelfe-loue, which make them ſeeme to bee farre greater than they are in deede, euery moale-hill a great mountaine, and euery ſmall ſtarre as large as the Sunne it ſelfe. Thus it magnifieth to a meere worldly man the goodneſſe of his nature, as though this alone without any further helpe would bring him to Heauen; and maketh him beleeue that his common guifts are ſpeciall endowments, that Gods reſtrayning grace in him, is ſanctifying and ſauing grace, and his moderated and blunted vices and corruptions to bee ſingular vertues and great perfections. Thus it perſwadeth the proud juſticiarie to reſt in his inhærent righteouſneſſe and legall obedience for his juſtification and ſaluation. And to this end it bleareth his eyes ſo as hee cannot ſee any wants and imperfections in it, and worketh in him a conceipt, that it is moſt perfect both in the parts and degrees, when as there is nothing but defects and corruptions. Thus it made the young man in the Goſpell to boaſt that hee had done all commaunded in the Law, when he had tranſgreſſed all; and to aske after a greater taske, what lacke I yet, when as his worke was not ſo much as begunne, and as yet hee had done nothing. Thus it made the proud Phariſie to bragge of his legall righteouſneſſe euen vnto God himſelfe, and to reſt in his paying of ſmall tithes, minte, commine and anniſe, as though hee had done the waightie things of the Law. Finally thus it perſwadeth the ſincere profeſſor to ouer weene his guifts, and to magnifie aboue meaſure the graces which he hath receiued. It maketh him beleeue that his little mite is a rich treaſury, and his ſmall graine of muſterſeed, and firſt degrees of faith, to bee already a great tree; that he is good wheate able to indure the fanne or the blaſts of any temptations, whereas if Chriſt prayed not for him, that his faith might not faile, hee would when Sathan ſhould ſift him, prooue but light corne, if not very chaffe. Finally that hee is ſo ſtrong in Chriſt, that hee can willingly ſuffer Martyrdome for his name ſake, and with Peter to preſume that though all the world ſhould forſake him, yet hee would not; when as the voyce of a poore damoſell will make him ſtart backe, and the ſmalleſt loſſe of goods or impeachment to his credit, will eaſily moue him to abiure his profeſſion. The iſſue of which deceipt is moſt dangerous if by Gods grace it be not preuented, for the maine end at which our deceitfull fleſh herein aymeth is either to puffe vs vp ſo in pride, that wee forget God the ſole author of our guifts, and ſpoyle him of his prayſe, by arrogating it vnto our ſelues; and that wee grow inſolent in reſpect of men, contemning thoſe who in our falſe conceipt come ſhort of vs; or ſecondly that wee reſt contented with that meaſure of grace which wee haue, as being abundantly ſufficient; and neuer vſe any meanes, whereby our imperfect and defectiue graces may be encreaſed and grow to greater perfection.

Mat.19.20.

Luk 18. 11. & 23.23.

§. Sect. 4.

Now if wee ſhould ſtand in the day of

The meanes to defeate the former pollicie.
1.Pet.5.5.

temptation, and not bee ouertaken with this deceipt of the fleſh; the beſt way is firſt, that, wee decke our ſelues with humility, as the Apoſtle exhorteth: remembring that the way to obtaine more grace at the hands of our heauenly father, is to bemoane our ſmall meaſure, to bee emptie in our owne conceipt, and to hunger and thirſt after more, for hee reſiſteth the proude, but giueth his grace to the humble, hee filleth the hungry with good things, but ſendeth the rich empty away; neither doeth hee euer raiſe and build the goodly pallace of his grace and vertue, but where hee hath firſt laid the foundation of humilitie. And therefore let vs not (as the Apoſtle exhorteth vs) thinke of our ſelues more highly than wee ought to thinke, but thinke ſoberly, according as God hath dealt to euery man, the meaſure of faith. Secondly, let vs caſt away thoſe falſe ſpectacles of pride and ſelfe-loue, which make our ſmall guifts to ſeeme ſo great, and examine our graces by the neuer-deceiuing light of Gods word. And there we ſhall plainely ſee how farre we come ſhort of that perfection which God requireth, what a little pittance it is wee haue in compariſon of that which wee want, and how our ſmall meaſure is blotted and ſtained with the fleſh and the tainte of our corruptions. Thirdly, let vs not commend our graces to the eye of our deluded judgements, as ſhop-keepers doe their courſe wares, by ſetting courſer by them; or by ſetting in our ſight the example of others who come ſhort of vs; but let vs compare our little ſparkes of grace with thoſe bright flames which haue ſhon in the Patriarches, Prophets and Apoſtles, yea in our Sauiour Chriſt himſelfe, and ſo wee ſhall not bee proude of our progreſſe, but aſhamed rather of our ſmall proficiencie; and with the Apoſtle forgetting thoſe things which are behind, and reaching forth to thoſe things which are before, wee ſhall preſſe towards the marke, for the price of the high calling of God, in Chriſt Ieſus.

Luk.1.53.
Rom.12.3.
Phil.3.13.

Chap. XII.

Of the fleſhes policies reſpecting our eſtates.

§. Sect. 1.
The firſt pollicie reſpecting our eſtate is to perſwade the faithfull that they are hated of God becauſe they are afflicted.

And theſe were the chiefe deceipts of our fleſh reſpecting our perſons. Now concerning our eſtate it vſeth a wicked policie whereby all men are exceedingly abuſed and deluded, which is to draw vs vnto a falſe judgement concerning our eſtate, as either to thinke our ſelues miſerable when wee are in the way to happineſſe, or happy when wee are in the way to perdition. Concerning the former it is commonly vſed by the fleſh towards the children of God when they are in the ſtate of affliction either of body or minde. For when pouerty pincheth them, or reproaches are caſt vpon them, or ſickneſſe ſeazeth on their bodies, or griefes vpon their mindes; when they are caſt downe in the ſight of their ſinnes, and are terrified in their conſciences with the apprehenſion of Gods diſpleaſure, then the fleſh is ready to perſwade them that theſe are ſignes of Gods wrath and of their reprobation and damnation. But concerning this policy I ſhall not neede heere to ſay much, ſeeing I haue ſufficiently armed the Chriſtian againſt it in the firſt and third part of this Chriſtian warfare, where I haue proued that this is the falſe judgement of the fleſh and quite contrary to the Scriptures, which teach vs that afflictions, either of body or minde are vnto vs markes of Gods loue and ſignes of our adoption, when as wee make a right vſe of them, and are by theſe fatherly chaſtiſements reformed and amended.

§. Sect. 2.
The ſecond pollicie is to perſwade vs that we are in an happy condition when our ſtate is moſt miſerable.

But the contrary vnto this, as it is much more dangerous, ſo alſo much more frequent and common; namely for the fleſh to perſwade vs that we are in an happy and bleſſed condition, when as in trueth wee are in the very iawes of eternall death and condemnation. And thus the fleſh abuſeth either thoſe, who being in the boſome of the Church are profeſſed worldlings, or ſuch as in their profeſſion and conuerſation do make ſome ſhew of Chriſtianitie. Concerning the former; how many are there that beare the name of Chriſtians, who are ſlaues to the world and their owne luſts, and the very bondſlaues of the Diuell, making no conſcience of their wayes, but giuen ouer to all liſcentiouſneſſe, and to commit all manner of ſinne with greedineſſe? & yet are deluded by the Diuell and their owne corruption, with this conceipt, that they are in Gods fauour, and that they among other ſhall be ſaued. How many are there that liue in ignorance and infidelitie, and worſhip no other God but the idoll of riches, pleaſures and worldly glory; that make no conſcience of ſwearing, forſwearing, blaſpheming, of prophaning Gods Sabbaths, vnjuſt anger, furious reuenge, malice, enuy, cruelty, oppreſſion, whoredome, drunkenneſſe, fraude and all manner of outragious wickedneſſe: and yet are deceiued by their owne corrupt fleſh, perſwading them that God will neuer call them to an account for any of theſe things, but either not obſerueth them, or will ſoone forget them; or if at all hee doe remember them, yet hee will not at all lay theſe things to their charge if they profeſſe themſelues Chriſtians, and haue time euen at their laſt houre to call for mercy?

§. Sect. 3.
Outward priuiledges no

Now the chiefe arguments which the fleſh vſeth to delude men with this falſe judge-

…e teſtimo-
…s that we
…e in Gods
…

judgement are two. Firſt becauſe they are Chriſtians by profeſſion and not Turkes, Iewes or Infidels, and members of the true Church who haue their part in thoſe royall priuiledges, the Word, Sacraments and Prayers in the aſſemblies. But let ſuch know that all theſe priuiledges will no more benefit them, than they did the rebellious Iewes, who hauing theſe prerogatiues long before them, were vtterly rejected for their rebellion and diſobedience, that it will doe them no more good to pretend the name of Chriſt or his Church, than it did them to cry out, the Temple of the Lord the Temple of the Lord, or to boaſt of their circumciſion, ſacrifices and legall ceremonies. Let them remember that; not the hearers of the law, but the doers thereof are iuſtified; and that theſe who are onely hearers and not doers of the word doe but deceiue themſelues. Let them call to minde, that he who was priuiledged to come to the wedding feaſt of the Kings Sonne, but was found there without his wedding garment, was haled from thence and caſt into vtter darkneſſe where is weeping and gnaſhing of teeth; that though the tares are ſuffered to grow with the good corne in the ſame field euen vntill harueſt, yet then they ſhall bee pulled vp, gathered into bundles and caſt into the fire. And that though the goates and ſheepe be ſuffered here to graze together, yet the time ſhall come when they ſhall bee ſeuered, and the goates being ſet on the left hand ſhall heare that dreadfull ſentence: Depart from me ye accurſed into hell fire prepared for the diuell and his Angels. Let them knowne that by all theſe outward ptiuiledges the which they haue ſo much abuſed, they ſhall haue their puniſhments haſtened and encreaſed; For iudgement muſt beginne at Gods owne houſe, and hee will plague the Citie where his name is called vpon. If our King be ſo juſt and vertuous that hee will ſeuerely puniſh wickedneſſe in the common-wealth, how much more in thoſe who are in his owne family? If the iealous husband hateth filthineſſe in ſtrangers, how much more in his own ſpouſe or children? Aud if the husbandman will ſcarce ſuffer a brier or thiſtle grow in the fallow field, how much more will hee pull them vp when as they grow among his corne and in ſuch grounds as he hath beſt tilled and moſt carefully manured? If the Bridegrome can abide no loathſome annoyance in any corner of the houſe, how much leſſe will he endure it in his bridall chamber? Yea let ſtrangers ſpeed how they can, the Lord will not ſuffer himſelfe, to bee diſhonoured by thoſe who profeſſe themſelues to be his ſeruants, but as they cauſe his name to bee blaſphemed by their ſinnes, ſo he will cauſe it to bee glorified in their puniſhments. Let the weeds in the woods grow till they wither with age, yet they ſhall bee pulled vp if they bee found in the garden wherein God delighteth. And if Sodom and Gomorrah ſhall not ſcape vnpuniſhed, then Corazin and Bethſaida ſhall fall into a much more fearefull condemnation, who hearing Chriſts heauenly Sermons and ſeeing his miracles, continued in their ſinnes without repentance. And the Apoſtle telleth vs that, the Earth which drinketh in the raine that commeth oft vpon it; and yet bringeth forth nothing but thornes and briars, is aboue all other ſoyles reiected, and is nigh vnto curſing, whoſe end is to be burned.

…er.7.4.12.
…1.22.
…11.13.
…13.30.
…31.41.
…4.17.
…25.29.
Mat.11.21.
Heb.6.7.8.

§. Sect.4.
That worldly proſperitie is no ſure ſigne of Gods loue or our happy condition.

The ſecond argument which the fleſh vſeth to perſwade carnall worldlings that they are in an happy condition and in the loue of God is, becauſe they abound in earthly proſperitie and with many temporall bleſſings, which they eſteeme as ſo many teſtimonies of Gods loue and ſignes of their owne ſaluation. And ſurely it cannot bee denied but that theſe things are good in their owne nature, as being the gifts of our good God, which he giueth as rewards of vertue and the temporary wages to thoſe who ſerue him; but yet they are not abſolutely and ſimply good, but, in reſpect of their vſe, of an indifferent nature, good to the good, and euill to thoſe who abuſe them vnto euil. And therefore as the children of God who haue a right vſe of theſe temporall bleſſings, when they vſe them as inſtruments of their bounty and beneficence, to the glory of God and the good of their fellow ſeruants, may eſteeme them as pledges of Gods loue and earneſt-pennies of their ſaluation; ſo carnall worldlings who abuſe them to pride, forgetfulneſſe of God, prophaneneſſe, wantonneſſe, oppreſſion, cruelty and all manner of ſin, haue juſt cauſe to thinke, that they are gifts giuen them in Gods wrath, that they may be ſnares to entangle them to their deeper condemnation, according to that of the Pſalmiſt, let their table become a ſnare before them, and that which ſhould haue beene for their welfare let it become a trappe. Againe the Scriptures teach vs that wee cannot by theſe outward things judge either of Gods loue or hatred towards vs, ſeeing all theſe things come alike to all, and there is one euent, to the righteous and to the wicked, or if there bee any difference it is commonly in this, that the wicked flouriſh in all worldly iollitie, when as the godly are afflicted with many miſeries; as it is notably obſerued and at full deſcribed both by Iob, Dauid and Ieremie. Thus wee ſee Abell murthered, and Caine waxing great and building Cities, Pharaoh and the Egyptians raigning as Lords and tyrants, and the poore Iſraelites making bricke, beaten and miſuſed; Nebuchadnezer like a great Monarch ruling ouer Nations, and the people of God ſubdued and led into mi-

Pſal.69.22.
Eccle.9.1.2.
Iob.21.6.7.8.
Pſa.73.1.2.&c.
Ier.12.1.

miſerable captiuitie. And the experience of our owne times teacheth vs, that wee cannot conclude, that we are in Gods fauour and in the ſtate of ſaluation, becauſe wee thriue in the world and haue good ſucceſſe in all our endeauours, ſeeing by this reaſon wee might inferre that the great Magot, the Turke, Perſian and many other Infidels and Pagans were better beloued of God than Chriſtian Princes; and among Chriſtians many prophane and carnall men, than the ſincere louers of Gods truth; becauſe they more abound in theſe worldly bleſſings. But of this point I ſhall neede to ſay little here, ſeeing I haue written ſo much of this argument in my ſecond part of this Chriſtian Warfare.

§.Sect.5. That a ciuill life is no ſure ſigne that we are in the ſtate of grace and ſaluation.

And thus the fleſh abuſeth thoſe who are profeſſed worldlings: Neither doth it deale leſſe deceitfully with thoſe that make ſome ſhew of religion; the which are of two ſorts, ciuill iuſticiaries and temporarie hypocrits. Concerning the former, it perſwadeth them, that they are in good eſtate becauſe they liue ciuilly and vnblameably among their neighbours in reſpect of notorious crimes which are puniſhable by the lawes of men; and maketh them to bleſſe themſelues becauſe they are no murtherers, adulterers, drunkards, theeues periured perſons, and couenant breakers; but contrariwiſe deale honeſtly with all men, keepe their word, pay euery one their due, and ſometimes alſo giue an almes to thoſe that are in want and miſery. And becauſe in reſpect of their dutie towards God, they are of that religion which the Prince is of, and the Law requireth, and are no recuſants, but come to the Church with the reſt of their neighbours, and there heare diuine ſeruice, and the word preached, and receiue the Sacrament as oft as the law injoyneth. Though in the meane time they are vtterly ignorant of the true God, his perſons, nature and attributes, of Ieſus Chriſt and his natures and offices, and the great worke of redemption, and in a word of all the principles of true religion. And though they make no conſcience of performing any duties of the firſt table (as of Prayer, hearing the Word, receiuing the Sacrament, ſanctifying the Sabbath) in ſpirit and in truth; as God requireth, but onely formally for cuſtome and faſhion ſake, yet their corrupt fleſh maketh them beleeue, that God will accept of their good meaning and ſupeſtitious deuotion, and will be well ſatisfied with their bodily exerciſe and lip-labours, though their hearts bee farre from him; yea though in the very time of his ſeruice they ſet vp idols in their hearts, and haue all their cogitations wholly taken vp with their pleaſures, profits and other vanities of the world. But that wee may not be ouertaken with this deceit, let vs know and remember, that God will not accept of vs, vnleſſe with Dauid wee haue reſpect vnto all his commandements, and make conſcience of performing as well, (yea principally) the duties of the firſt table, as of the ſecond; that the feare of God and his true religion is the head and firſt beginning of ſauing wiſedome; and that it is but a counterfeit and carnall righteouſneſſe, ſuch as was in the heathens, which doth not ſpring from the roote of piety, that wee cannot haue a liuely faith without ſauing knowledge, nor doe any good workes without faith; that without faith wee cannot pleaſe God, and whatſoeuer we doe without it, is ſinne. That if our iuſtice ariſe not from godlineſſe, it is but meerely morall ciuilitie, and if our loue of our brethren ſpring not from the cleere fountaine of Gods loue, then it ſtreameth from the filthy puddle of ſelfe-loue. Let vs know that God will bee worſhipped, not after the commandements of men, but after his owne reuealed will, and that whoſoeuer ſerue God principally becauſe the Princes law requireth it, and not becauſe God commandeth it, hee worſhippeth his King aboue his God. That bodily exerciſe profiteth nothing, and that the Lord will bee worſhipped in ſpirit and truth; that God regardeth not formall ſeruice which riſeth rather from cuſtome than conſcience, and that the religion of the ſoule, is the ſoule of religion, without which it is but a dead carkaſe. That God can indure no riuals in his ſeruice, nor no halting betweene Iehouah and Baal, God and the world; hee cannot abide a double or diuided heart, but hee will either haue all, or leaue all to the Diuell and the world; and finally that our good meaning will bee no currant payment in the day of accompt, ſeeing it hath not Gods image and ſtampe vpon it, but is coyned in the forge of our owne braine, and hath on it the print of our owne inuentions, which the Lord eſteemeth no better than high treaſon againſt his royall crowne and dignitie.

*Pſal.*119.6.

*Pſal.*111.10.

*Heb.*11.4.
*Rom.*14.23.

1.*Tim.*4.8.
*Ioh.*4.24.

§.Sect.6. That a bare profeſſion of the true religion is not ſufficient for ſaluation.

And thus the fleſh deceiueth ciuill iuſticiaries: the like deceit it vſeth towards hypocrites, with whom it dealeth diuerſly according to their kindes. For either they are groſſe hypocrites, who though they make a great ſhew of religion, yet their liues are ſo euill and ſcandalous, that their hypocriſie is detected and manifeſt, not onely vnto others, but alſo to their owne hearts and conſciences; or more cunning and ſubtle, who by their outward profeſſion & ſeeming conformitie to the law, deceiue not onely other men, but themſelues alſo. Concerning the former; the fleſh deceiueth them with a vaine conceipt that the bare profeſſion of the true religion is ſufficient for their ſaluation without all practice and obedience, that it is inough to ſay that they haue faith, though they bee vtterly barren of all good Workes; to cry, Lord, Lord, though they neglect the will of our heauenly Father; that they be hearers of the word, though they be not doers of it; and that they profeſſe that they know God, though in their workes they deny him, being abominable, diſobedient, and to euery good worke reprobate. But this is ſo contrary to the whole courſe of the Scriptures, that who ſo is but a little conuerſant in them, may plainely ſee, yea palpably feele this deceipt, neither is it poſſible, that any ſhould bee deluded with it, but thoſe whom the god of this world hath blinded, and for want of loue to the truth are giuen vp of God to be ſeduced with ſtrong deluſions, and to beleeue lies. For there we ſhall plainly ſee, that theſe conceits are croſſed and contradicted in direct and expreſſe tearmes; namely that not the hearers but the doers of the word are iuſtified; that if we heare and doe not, wee doe but deceiue our ſelues: that they onely are bleſſed who heare the word and keepe it; that not euery one who ſaith Lord, Lord, ſhall enter into the Kingdome of Heauen; but hee that doth the will of our Father which is in Heauen; that it will nought auaile vs to boaſt of our faith, if it doe not appeare in the fruits of good workes, ſeeing ſuch a faith, as is without workes, is but a dead carkaſe, without life or ſoule, and therefore cannot juſtifie nor ſaue vs. So the Lord ſharpely reprehendeth and condemneth wicked men, for making profeſſion of his religion: Vnto the wicked, ſaith God, What haſt thou to doe to declare my ſtatutes, or that thou ſhouldeſt take my couenant in thy mouth; ſeeing thou hateſt inſtruction, and caſteſt my words behinde thee? &c. And then concludeth: Now conſider this yee that forg[illegible] God, leſt I teare you in pieces and there bee none to deliuer. So the Prophet Ieremie. Behold yee truſt in lying words that cannot profit. Will yee ſteale, murther, and commit adulterie, and ſweare falſly, and burne incenſe vnto Baal, and walke after other gods that yee know not, and come and ſtand before mee in this houſe which is called by my name, and ſay, we are deliuered to doe all theſe abominations?

Ti.1.16.
2.Theſ.2.11.
m.2.13.
m.1.22.
h.13.17.
k.11.28.
Mat.7.21.
m.2.14.17.
16.
Pſal.50.16.22.
Ier.7.8.9.

§.Sect.7.
The fleſhes deceipt in perſwading men to reſt in externall ceremonies.

But if this deceipt bee too groſſe, as hauing nothing to colour or countenance it but the ſlight thin vayle of a bare profeſſion, then it will perſwad vs to place all religion about externall rites and ceremonies, and to thinke that wee haue done inough, if wee bee ſtrict in the obſeruation of them, although in the meane time we make no conſcience of many Morall duties, and vtterly neglect the waighty things of the Law. So the Phariſes of old placed all their religion in ſome legall rites and humane traditions, in externall waſhings, ſacrifices, and tything mynte, cummine and anniſe, and neglected the duties of children to their parents, the pure and ſincere ſeruice of God, and the waighty points of the Law, iudgement, mercy and faith. And the Apoſtle telleth vs of ſome in his times, who placed all their religion in the obſeruation of dayes, Sabbaths, Holydayes, and new Moones, and in their obſeruance of certaine ordinances, as touch not, taſt not, handle not, all which did periſh with the vſing. And wherein doth in theſe dayes the religion of the Papiſts chiefely conſiſt, but in the obſeruation of ſuch holidayes, waſhings, purifications, faſtings from certaine meates, at certaine times, and in vſe of their rites and ceremonies which they preferre before, and preſſe more than many Morall duties or the eſſentiall parts of Gods ſeruice, with which they will much more eaſily diſpence, than with their traditions and ſuperſtitious inuentions? With which deceipt if the fleſh preuaile not, it is readie to thruſt vs into the contrary extreame, and to place all religion in the oppoſing of theſe ſuperſtitious ceremonies, and to ſpend all our time which ſhould be ſpent in attaining vnto the knowledge and practice of true godlineſſe in declaiming againſt will-worſhip and humane traditions. As though it were enough to be free from ſuperſtition, though wee be deſtitute alſo of all true religion, to oppoſe againſt falſe worſhip, though wee doe not practice that which is true to bee zealous againſt ceremonies, and to be keycold in imbracing the ſubſtance, truth, faith, mercy, judgement, brotherly kindneſſe and the reſt.

Mat.23.
Col.2.16,21.

§.Sect.8.
The meanes to defeate the former policy.

But that wee may not be ouertaken with this deceit, nor bee perſwaded to ſpend the ſtrength of our deuotion about ceremonies and things of ſmall moment, let vs know that there is no leſſe order and due proportion, than juſtice and judgement in the commandements of God, the Lord requiring that thoſe things which are chiefe and principall in their owne nature ſhould haue the firſt and chiefe place in our obedience. So the Morall duties are to bee preferred before ceremoniall; and among them, our dutie to God before our dutie to our brethren; the duties of greateſt importance, before the meane, and the meane before the leaſt. Which order who ſo tranſpoſe, and will preferre the duties towards men before their dutie vnto God, and the ceremonies before the ſubſtance; ſuch mens religion is hypocriticall and odious in Gods ſight. Hence is it that the Lord condemneth the Sabbaths, New Moones, ſacrifices, and ſolemne aſſemblies of the Iewes, becauſe they did put all their religion in them, and neglected judgement, mercy, relieuing the oppreſſed, and judging the fatherleſſe. Thus he condemneth their faſts and the afflicting of their ſoules by theſe bodily exerciſes, be-

Eſa.1.11.12.13.
Eſa.58.5.

cauſe they were ioyned with ſtrife & debate, oppreſſion and crueltie, yea ſo odious is this ceremoniall ſeruice being ſeuered from the more waighty and ſubſtantiall, that the Lord profeſſeth, that he that killeth an Oxe, is as if hee ſlue a man, hee that ſacrificeth a Lambe, as he that cutteth off a Dogges necke, hee that offereth an oblation, as hee that offereth Swines blood, hee that burneth incenſe as if hee bleſſed an Idoll. So he profeſſeth, I will haue mercie and not ſacrifice, not becauſe he ſimply reiected ſacrifices, which himſelfe had commanded, but when they were ſeuered from mercy, or preferred before it. And ſaith that hee ſpake not vnto their Fathers, nor commanded them in the day that hee brought them out of the land of Egypt, concernings burnt offering or ſacrifices; but this thing (ſaith he) commanded I them, ſaying, obey my voyce, and I will be your God, and yee ſhall bee my people: and walke yee in all the wayes that I haue commanded you that it may bee well vnto you. Implying hereby, that as theſe maine Morall duties were firſt commanded, ſo alſo they ſhould be firſt and chiefely practiſed. Finally, the Apoſtle telleth vs that true religion conſiſteth not in outward rites, ſignes and ſacraments, but in the truth and ſincerity of the heart; Circumciſion (ſaith hee) verily profiteth, if thou be a keeper of the Law, but if thou bee a breaker of the Law thy circumciſion is made vncircumciſion. For hee is not a Iew which is one outwardly, neither is that circumciſion which is outward in the fleſh. But hee is a Iew which is one inwardly, and circumciſion is that of the heart, in the ſpirit and not in the letter whoſe prayſe is of not of men, but of God.

Eſa.66.3.

Hoſ.6.6.

Ier.7.22,23.

Rom.2.25.28.

Chap. XIII.

Of the pollicies of the fleſh towards temporary beleeuers.

§. Sect. 1. That the fleſh in a ſubtill ſort deceiueth Temporaries.

ANd thus the fleſh deceiueth the groſſer kinde of hypocrites: But when men haue receiued ſuch a meaſure of illightening, that theſe darke fogges and miſtes of ignorance are ſomewhat diſpelled, and haue their ſleepie conſciences ſomewhat awakened, ſo that they are able and ready to tell them that all which is formerly ſpoken of, will bee to little purpoſe, if they make no further progreſſe in the wayes of God; Then the fleſh vſeth more refined and ſubtill pollicies, and condemning as much as any others carnall Goſpellers, ciuill iuſticiaries and groſſe hypocrites, it perſwadeth them to be like Agryppa almoſt, (and but almoſt) Chriſtians; and to reſt in ſome ſhadowes and meere counterfaits of ſauing graces and Chriſtian obedience, which are ſo like vnto them, that vnleſſe they bee brought to the all-diſcouering light of Gods word, and diligently examined by this touchſtone of truth, they can hardly bee diſcerned, I will not ſay by others (which is meerely impoſſible) but euen by thoſe that haue them. And this is the eſtate of temporarie beleeuers in, whom there is almoſt nothing wanting which is in ſound Chriſtians but ſinceritie and truth. For they are allowed by their ſinnefull fleſh to bee as like Chriſtians as poſſibly may be, ſo they be not ſo indeed; and to runne before many true beleeuers in outward duties, and euen to knocke at Heauen gates, ſo that they will there reſt but for a time and neuer enter. They haue knowledge often times in farre greater meaſure than many of Gods deare children; ſome ſhewes and ſemblances of true faith, repentance, obedience, and that in ſuch a degree, that in outward appearance many true Chriſtians come far ſhort of them. And therefore ſeeing aboue all deceipts this is moſt deceitfull, we are to bend all our care and ſtudy that wee may diſcouer and defeate it.

§. Sect. 2. That we muſt labour to haue all ſpirituall graces in ſincerity and truth and firſt our knowledge.

To which purpoſe wee muſt not onely labour to haue all ſauing graces, and to bee enabled vnto the performance of all Chriſtian duties; but alſo aſſurance that they are in vs and done by vs in ſinceritie and truth. And to this purpoſe wee are often to examine and waigh them in the ballance of the ſanctuary, and to obſerue the infallible markes and ſignes, whereby our true graces and vertuous actions may bee diſcerned, not onely from vices and groſſe corruptions, but alſo from theſe neere counterfaits and ſhadowes of them, which are in ſubtill hypocrites and temporary beleeeuers. For here wee ſhall find that though the knowledge of temporaries bee in reſpect of the meaſure very great, yet it faileth in the qualitie and effects; for it is barely learned by hearing and reading, and not taught by the ſpirituall annoynting, whereof the Apoſtle ſpeaketh which the faithfull onely receiue: it is much in ſpeculation and theorie; and little in practice, ſpirituall power, feeling and repentance; and they know the things of God appertaining to ſaluation, as a man knoweth a ſtrange land by reading, which he neuer trauailed; whereby hee is enabled to diſcourſe of it, and of the fruites and benefits contained in it, though hee neuer taſted them, nor hath any hope euer to enjoy them; whereas the true beleeuer, though he be in his pilgrimage, yet knoweth Heauen and heauenly things, as his owne countrey, and the bleſſings contained in it, of which hee hath already taſted and had feeling experience, and is aſſured after a while when he hath finiſhed his iourney to haue the full fruition of them. And hereof it is that the knowledge of the Hypocrite bring-bringeth ſmall ioy and comfort with it, and though it exceed in meaſure, yet it cheareth not the heart, like the leaſt knowledge of a ſound Chriſtian; euen as the knowledge of the Lawyer in the euidences of a mans lands may be greater than the owners: but yet hee cannot read them with like comfort, becauſe he hath no right vnto them.

1.Ioh.2.20.

§. Sect. 3.
wee may ſcerne a true ſtifying
th: from which is porary.

So alſo Hypocrites and temporaries haue faith whereby they not onely know and beleeue the whole Word of God and the promiſes of the Goſpell to be true, but alſo giue their aſſent vnto them, yea, make ſome kind of application of them vnto themſelues; And yet there are diuers eſſentiall differences betweene this faith of Hypocrites and of true Beleeuers. For firſt they differ in their cauſes, the one being wrought by the Miniſtery of the Goſpell made effectuall by the inward co-operation of Gods Spirit; the other by Sathan and carnall corruption, abuſing and miſ-applying of theſe promiſes in Chriſt. Secondly, in their grounds; for a liuely faith is grounded vpon Gods reuealed Truth, but the faith of Hypocrites vpon no other groũd than the falſe ſuggeſtions of Sathan, vnwarranted conceits, carnall ſecurity and fond preſumption, which cauſe the Hypocrite to apply vnto himſelfe the mercies of God, and merits of Chriſt, and the ſweet promiſes of the Goſpel when as he is in no ſort qualified and fitted according to the word to receiue or haue any intereſt in them. For before we can beleeue with a true faith, wee muſt be humbled in the ſight and ſenſe of our ſinnes, we muſt deny our ſelues and become vile in our owne eyes, and haue an hungring and thirſting after Chriſt and his righteouſneſſe, and an high valuation and eſteeme of them aboue all things in the World, all which are wanting in the faith of Hypocrites. Thirdly, true faith is ioyned with vnfained loue of God, for he that is aſſured that much is forgiuen him, hee loueth much, not only God himſelfe but his Neighbours, yea euen his enemies for Gods ſake, and thoſe aboue all the reſt in whom he diſcerneth the Image of God moſt cleerely ſhining: But the faith of Hypocrites being alwayes accompanied with ſelfe-loue, maketh a man to value himſelfe aboue all things, yea aboue God himſelf the chiefe goodnes. Fourthly, where there is true faith there is alwayes a ſore combat and conflict betweene the fleſh and the ſpirit, betweene faith purifying the heart, and vnbeliefe labouring to retaine the pleaſures of ſin and all our inbred corruptions which are pleaſing or profitable, but the faith of Hypocrites is ſtill quiet & peaceable, becauſe it is nothing but carnall preſumption, which being corrupt & ſinfull, agreeth wel with other corruptions neither doth Sathan moue, or as much as in him lyeth ſuffer it to be moued by any queſtions, becauſe hee would poſſeſſe all things in peace, and not haue his Kingdome diuided in it ſelfe. Secondly, true faith is the inſtrument of a mutuall donation, for as it receiueth Chriſt who is giuen vs of God, ſo it offereth and conſecrateth our bodies and ſoules vnto Chriſt who by the gift of God hath as much right vnto vs as we vnto him: But the faith of Hypocrites would haue part in Chriſt and all his benefits, but Chriſt muſt haue no part in them, or if any at all, he muſt be contented with their tongue onely, whereas the World and the Deuill muſt haue their hearts. Secondly, truth faith is not eaſily daunted or diſmayed, but commonly ſhineth moſt cleerely in the darke night of afflictions, and manifeſteth it ſelf in its chiefe ſtrength, when carnall reaſon will miniſter no comfort: but the faith of Hypocrites reſteth onely vpon the prop of worldly proſperity which being pulled away ſinketh and faileth; and whileſt this faire greene blade, which ſpringeth out of the ſtony ground, is moyſtened with the dew of temporall benefits, it ſprouteth vp and flouriſheth; but no ſooner doth the Sun of affliction and perſecution ariſe but preſently it withereth and fadeth. Laſtly, true faith is alwayes a liuing and fruitfull faith, and is continually exerciſed in good workes and Chriſtian duties, and in loue and obedience towards God: but the faith of Hypocrites is dead, barren and fruitleſſe, or if it beare any fruits at all, yet haue they no reſpect to God, but are done out of pride or ſelfe-loue, for feare of puniſhments or hope of rewards. But more of this afterwards.

§. Sect. 4.
The difference betweene true and falſe repentance.

Thus alſo the Hypocrite hath ſome kinde of repentance, the which the fleſh commendeth vnto him as agreeing well enough with it ſelfe, and that to this end that he may content himſelfe with it and neuer labour after ſound repentance. Which deceit that wee may preuent we are to learne and obſerue the many differences betweene this counterfeit and falſe repentance, and that which is ſound and ſincere. For true repentance ſpringeth from a liuely faith aſſuring vs of Gods loue, which cauſeth vs to bewayle our ſinnes, becauſe by them we haue diſpleaſed our gracious God, who ſo loueth vs, and whom wee ſo loue: but the ſorrow of Hypocrites riſeth from infidelity and ſelfe-loue, which maketh vs mourne becauſe by our ſins we haue made our ſelues obnoxious to puniſhments. Godly ſorrow ariſeth from a true hatred of ſinne, which being odious vnto vs as an vgly Serpent, or grieuous as an heauy burthen, doth cauſe vs to ſorrow and mourne becauſe wee cannot bee rid of it, nor ſhake it off; but worldly ſorrow from our loue of ſin, becauſe wee are loath to leaue it, and yet muſt needs for feare of further puniſhment. Godly ſorrow driueth the ſinner to God with Dauid, and maketh him to humble himſelfe, acknow-

Zach. 12.10.
Luke 15.18.

knowledge his ſin and aske pardon: But the ſorrow of Hypocrites driueth men from God, and maketh them to deny their ſin, or to excuſe and mince it. Godly ſorrow worketh a change and alteration to amendment of life; but the Hypocrite though he hangeth downe his head like a bul-ruſh for a day, and blubbereth his cheekes with teares, yet either he leaueth not his ſin at all, or onely as hee leaueth and putteth off his clothes with a purpoſe to reſume & put them on the next day. Godly ſorrow doth chiefly reſpect the ſin, whereby the Chriſtian hath offended God, but the ſorrow of Hypocrites looketh chiefly to the puniſhment wherby they haue diſpleaſed themſelues. Finally, the ſorrow of the faithfull is conſtant and continuall from the firſt day of conuerſion to the end of their liues; but the ſorrow of Hypocrites is but by flaſhes and ſpurts, and commonly ceaſeth when they are freed from their ſmart and paine.

§. Sect. 5.
The differences betweene the obedience of the faithfull and of Hypocrites.

The like differences alſo wee may obſerue in the other part of repentance which is amendment of life and new obedience. For the obedience of the faithfull ſpringeth from their faith and loue of God: but the obedience of Hypocrites from ſelfe-loue and carnall reſpects. The faithfull propound vnto all their good workes the glory of God as their chiefe end: but the Hypocrite propoundeth to himſelfe chiefly his owne good and that in worldly and carnal reſpects. The true Beleeuer performeth totall obedience in reſpect of the ſubject, with all the powers and parts of his ſoule and body: but the Hypocrite contenteth himſelfe with bodily exerciſe, which is without the power of godlineſſe, and doth not worſhip God in ſpirit and truth, nor with a willing and chearefull heart, but inuerting the Apoſtles ſpeech he may ſay, the euill which I loue, that doe I not, but the good which I hate that doe I. So alſo the faithfull Chriſtian performeth totall obedience in reſpect of the object, and hauing regard vnto all Gods Commandements, he fleeth from all ſin and embraceth all holy duties: yea, aboue all ſins, hee hateth thoſe moſt which cleaue faſteſt vnto him, and laboureth moſt to bring his heart to the loue of thoſe duties to which naturally he is moſt backward. But the Hypocrite ſeeming to make conſcience of one Table neglecteth the other, or if hee forſaketh many ſins and doth many duties; yet he hath ſome darling ſinnes which hee holdeth as ſweet vnder his tongue, which hee will by no meanes part with, and ſome duties there are ſo contrary to his corrupt nature, that there is no arguments that can be vſed which can moue him to practiſe them. Finally, the obedience of the faithfull is conſtant and permanent, and the longer it continueth, the more it groweth and increaſeth: but the obedience of Hypocrites is vnconſtant and by fits onely and flaſhes; and commonly like a naughty jade he is moſt free and forward in the beginning of the journey, but quite tired before he come neere vnto the end.

Rom. 7.

Pſal. 119.6.

Iob 20.12.

§. Sect. 6.
The fleſhes deceit in mouing vs to leaue off from doing good duties that w may auoyde Hypocriſie.

And thus wee may defeat the policies of the fleſh, whereby it draweth vs to hypocriſie. Wherewith if it cannot preuayle with vs, it will labour to draw vs into the contrary extreame; and becauſe Hypocriſie is odious vnto vs, it will moue vs more to diſguiſe and hide our profeſſion of Religion, to refraine from all good ſpeeches, which might glorifie God, and edifie our Brethren, to conforme our ſelues to their faſhions which beare vs company in outward ſhew, though in heart we be farre vnlike them, and to neglect all good actions and holy duties, as Meditation, Faſting, Prayer, giuing of Almes, or to doe them in great ſecrecie, and (as it were) by ſtealth, for feare leſt men taking notice of them, ſhould thinke vs too glorious in our outward ſhew, and condemne vs of Hypocriſie. The which conceit ſo ouerſwayeth with diuers who are otherwiſe good Chriſtians, that they are aſhamed and ready to bluſh, when they are taken at vnawares in doing religious duties; as though they were guilty of ſome great fault. And ſo much the rather becauſe the moſt godly Chriſtians, hauing the reliques of Hypocriſie, as of all other ſinnes remayning in them, are guilty to themſelues of this corruption, as finding it often to preuayle with them, & therefore labour with ſo much the more diligence to auoide all ſemblance and appearance of it. With which deceit that we may not be ouertaken, let vs conſider, that wee ought not ſo to auoid the ſhew of Hypocriſie, as that wee doe in truth ſhun Chriſtian apology and profeſſion, whereby God is to be glorified, and our Neighbours edified: that we fall into the ſin of hypocriſie indeed, whileſt we thus labour to flie the appearance of it; for it is Hypocriſie to ſeeme that wee are not, and diſguiſing and diſſembling our religious and honeſt hearts vnder the outward ſhew of a carnall conuerſation, to appeare Worldlings, when in truth we are ſincere, though weake, Chriſtians; as Iacob though to a better end, tooke vpon him the habit of Eſau, whoſe prophaneneſſe hee hated. Let vs know that wee diſhonour God, when wee hide and diſſemble his gifts and graces in vs, and wrong our Neighbours who might walke in our light, if we did not couer it (as it were) vnder a buſhell; & that they in ſome degree are aſhamed of Chriſt and his Truth who dare not before Worldlings, either profeſſe it in their words, or practiſe it in their workes. Let vs remember that our Sauiour requireth not onely that we ſhould haue the light of holineſſe in our ſelues, but that we ſhould alſo, let it ſhine before

Math. 5.8.

before men, that they ſeeing our good workes, may glorifie our Father which is in Heauen; onely he condemneth theſe outward ſhewes of good workes when as thereby we doe not ſeeke Gods glory, but our owne. And the Apoſtle chargeth Chriſtians to haue their conuerſation honeſt among the Gentiles, that whereas they ſpake againſt them as euill doers, they might by their good workes, which they ſhould behold, glorifie God in the day of viſitation. That Dauid profeſſed his loue to Gods Commandements before Princes, and was not aſhamed; and that Daniel would not ſmother for a few dayes his practicall profeſſion of religious duties, though it were to the extreme hazard of his life. Let vs conſider that one ſpeciall dutie of Chriſtianity which we owe vnto our Neighbours is, that we ſhine before them by our holy example, which is required in the ſixt Commandement, as a meanes of preſeruing the life of their ſoules, and therefore that we are guilty of ſpirituall murther if we neglect it. Finally, ſeeing carnall Worldlings are not aſhamed to profeſſe their ſeruice and allegeance to their maſter Sathan, but with all boldnes vtter blaſphemous oathes, ribald words and rotten ſpeeches which corrupt the hearers, and audaciouſly performe all ſinfull actions, which are without the compaſſe of mens law, not caring who heare or ſee them; let it be our ſhame, to be aſhamed of the ſeruice of our great Lord and Maſter, who is ſo infinitely good in himſelfe and gracious towards vs; but let vs with all confidence and courage performe all holy Chriſtian duties which we owe vnto him, though we liue in the middeſt of an adulterous and ſinfull generation: leſt being aſhamed before ſuch of Chriſt and his words, hee be aſhamed of vs, when hee commeth in the glory of his Father with his holy Angels.

Pet.2.12.

ſal.119.46.

Marke 8,38.

Chap. XIV.

Of the policies of the fleſh in alluring and perſwading vs to ſinne.

§. Sect.1.
The firſt policy to perſwade vs that ſinne is no ſinne.

WE haue ſpoken briefly of the deceits of the fleſh which reſpect our perſons and eſtates; and now wee are to ſpeake of the other which concerne certaine duties which God requireth, the which are of two ſorts, the firſt reſpect the withſtanding, ſubduing and mortifying of our ſins; the other the exerciſe and practice of vertuous actions. Concerning ſin, God requireth two things of vs; the firſt that we ſhould not commit or fal into it; the ſecond that being falne we ſhould not ſecurely liue and lie in it, but riſe out of it by vnfained repentance. Againſt both which the fleſh oppoſeth, vſing many policies and deceits firſt to draw vs to the committing of ſin, and hauing committed it to continue in it without repentance. To the former purpoſe it vſeth diuers deceits. As firſt it putteth vpon the foule face of ſin a faire Vizard, and dreſſeth this filthy Strumpet in the habit of vertue; it adorneth it with borrowed ornaments, and beautifieth it with falſe colours; intitling wicked vices, with vertuous names, as though it would commend nothing vnto vs, but what God himſelfe commandeth. Thus that wee may imbrace and liue in it, the fleſh graceth ſuperſtition with the name of deuotion, doubting and infidelity, with the name of humility, ſecurity and preſumption, it calleth faith and affiance in God; Choller and vnjuſt anger, zeale for Gods glory; luſt it tearmeth loue, drunkenneſſe good fellowſhip, prodigality, bounty and munificence, and baſe niggardlineſſe and couetouſneſſe, good husbandry and frugality.

And hauing thus marſhalled and ranged theſe foule vices in the ranke of vertues, and beautified them with theſe falſe and borrowed colours, it doth further authorize them by teſtimonies of Scriptures, and not onely offereth them to our choice as things indifferent, or tolerable, but preſſeth them vpon vs as profitable and neceſſary. Which policy of the fleſh if wee would defeat, wee muſt firſt labour to be illightened with the knowledge of Gods Truth, and with the inward illumination of his Spirit, that ſo wee may diſcerne betweene vertue and vice, good and euill, which are eaſily confounded and miſtaken the one for the other in the darke night of ignorance, and through the naturall blindnes of our minds. Secondly, we muſt not take nor imbrace any thing ſuddenly and raſhly, which Sathan or our own corrupt fleſh commendeth vnto vs, but examine and try all things by the light of Gods Word, and the touch-ſtone of truth, which will plainly diſcouer vnto vs what is to be imbraced, and what auoyded, what to be treaſured vp in our hearts as pure gold and good treaſure, and what to bee rejected as droſſe and baſe metall. Finally, we muſt labour to purge our hearts from pride and ſelf-loue, which aboue all other things corrupt our judgements, making thoſe things to ſeeme louely which wee loue, and worthy our choice becauſe wee haue choſen them: And contrariwiſe wee muſt adorne our ſelues with humility denying our owne wils and carnall luſts, and make the will of God reuealed in the Scriptures to be the rule of our wils and the guide of our affections.

§. Sect.2.
The ſecond policy to tell

In the ſecond place, if the fleſh cannot perſwade vs that our ſins are no ſins, but rather vertues, then it will intice vs to commit vs that the ſin is but ſmall which it perſwadeth vs to commit.

them vnder this colour, that they are but ſmall ſins, telling vs, that wee cannot bee Saints on earth and pure from all ſinne, but muſt of neceſſity be ſubject to many infirmities and frailties; that in many things wee ſin all, and that there is no man ſo juſt on earth that ſinneth not; that the righteous fall ſeuen times a day, and therefore that it is too much preciſeneſſe to ſtand ſo ſtrictly on euery trifle; and finally, that the beſt of Gods children which euer liued haue had their imperfections, as Abraham his lie, Ioſeph his vaine oath, Moſes his vnbeliefe, Peter his diſſimulation, &c. and that theſe are ſo veniall in their owne nature, that eithe God will not puniſh them at all, or but very lightly. For the defeating of which deceit let vs know, that the leaſt ſin that is, in it owne nature, offendeth the infinite Majeſty of God, prouoketh his fierce wrath, ſubjecteth vs to the curſe of the Law, and maketh vs lyable, to eternall death and condemnation. For the guilt of ſin is to be meaſured, not onely by the act, but alſo by the object, and therefore ſeeing the object is the infinite Majeſty of God who is offended by the leaſt ſinne, it becommeth, after a ſort, of infinite guilt, and ſo deſerueth infinite puniſhment. The which anſwerably ſhould be inflicted vpon him who leaſt offendeth, if Chriſt by bearing his ſmall, as well his great ſins in his body vpon the Croſſe, had not freed him from it. And therefore let vs thinke no ſinne ſmall which prouoketh God vnto anger and offendeth his infinite Majeſtie; let vs thinke no ſinne in it owne nature ſleight and veniall, which plungeth a man into euerlaſting death and condemnation, and which can no otherwiſe be purged away and pardoned, but by the precious bloud of Ieſus Chriſt.

Gal.3.10.

Secondly, let vs know that there are no ſinnes ſmall vnto them who thinke them ſo; for ſin is not to meaſured ſo much by the matter and act of it, as by the forme and malicionſneſſe of it; in which reſpect willing entertainment giuen to any ſinne, maketh it become wilfull, and preſuming that wee may liue in it becauſe it is but a little one, maketh it to be a ſinne of preſumption, and ſo exceeding great and worthy of the greateſt puniſhment; as we ſee in the example of him, who would needs gather ſticks on the Sabbath, becauſe hee preſumed that this was a ſmal and tolerable breach of Gods Commandement. To this purpoſe tendeth the ſpeech of our Sauiour, that he who neglecteth and breaketh the leaſt of Gods Commandements, and teacheth men ſo, hee ſhall be the leaſt (that is none at all) in the kingdome of Heauen.

Leuit.24.10.

Math.5.19.

Thirdly, euen our leaſt ſinnes, if God ſhould let vs feele the weight of them, would be an intolerable burthen, and ſo ſting our conſciences, that wee ſhould neuer reſt, as the experience of many afflicted in minde doth painely manifeſt; and therefore let vs thinke no ſinne light which with the weight thereof, if it ſhould lie vpon vs, would cruſh and preſſe vs into Hell.

Fourthly, let vs know that there is no leſſe danger in ſmall ſinnes than in thoſe which are great and haynous, firſt becauſe as theſe exceed them in their qualitie or quantity, ſo they exceed theſe in number, as being common and ordinary. Now as the ſhip will be ſunke as well by many ſmall holes, if they be not ſtopped, as at a great leake; and may be ouerburthened and periſh as well by a multitude of ſmall pibbles, as by a few Milſtones: ſo may our ſoules ſinke and periſh if they be ſurcharged with a multitude of leſſer ſins, as well as with hainous ſins being rarely committed. Secondly, becauſe ſmall ſins are commonly accompanied with impenitency, ſecurity and hardneſſe of heart; and men not regarding them, doe like and liue in them without deſire of amendment; whereas thoſe which are hainous, making deepe wounds and gaſhes in the heart and conſcience, doe cauſe men to bee more ſenſible of them, and more earneſt in looking after the cure; as wee may ſee in the example of the Phariſes and Publicans. Now our other ſins though neuer ſo damnable, yet will not condemne vs, if they be not joyned with impenitency, and contrariwiſe the moſt veniall ſin will proue vnpardonable, if we liue and die in it without repentance. Whereof it is that our Sauiour telleth the Phariſes, that Publicanes and ſinners ſhould goe to Heauen before them. For as ſmall ſparkes of fire lighting in combuſtible matter, will if they be not quenched, burne a whole Citie, and contrariwiſe a great flame doth little hurt if it be ſpeedily put out; ſo if the leaſt ſparkes of ſin be nouriſhed with the oyle of ſecurity, it will proue dangerous and damnable, whereas, though it bee a great flame of wickedneſſe, it will not doe that hurt, if we ſoone extinguiſh and quench it with the teares of repentance. Laſtly, let vs know that the allurements which the fleſh vſeth to make vs liue in ſmal ſinnes without repentance are vaine and friuolous. For if we doe not deſire & indeauonr to be Saints on earth, we ſhall neuer become Saints in Heauen; if we doe not labour to ſhake off daily our imperfections, and to grow vnto more perfection in this life, we ſhall neuer attaine vnto it in the life to come; if wee doe not ſeeke to be pure in heart, we ſhall neuer bee bleſſed in the Viſion of God. If we be not preciſe and conſcionable in flying the leaſt ſins, we ſhall ſurely become ſecure and preſumptuous. Moreouer, let vs remember that the leaſt ſins are not frailties and infirmities, if we liue in them ſecurely and wilfully; as contrariwiſe the greateſt may deſerue this name if wee commit them ſuddenly, and riſe out of them ſpeedily. Euen as a man may be ſaid to fall through weakneſſe and infirmity into a deep gulfe, when as ſlipping at vnawares hee vſeth all his indeuour to recouer himſelfe; and on the other ſide it is not weakneſſe but wilfulneſſe, if hee fall but into a ſhallow ditch, if hee will not labour to get out againe, but lyeth grouelling in the water vntill he be drowned. Let vs know, that though in many things wee ſinne all, yet they who belong to God doe not make a trade of wilfull ſinning, and being ſometime ouertaken they are not at reſt till they haue riſen againe by vnfained repentance; and though there be none ſo juſt who ſinneth not, yet all who will be ſaued, muſt be ſo juſt as not to ſuffer it to raigne in them. And finally, that though the beſt of the Saints, Patriarches and Apoſtles had their infirmities, yet none of them could euer be found that nouriſhed, defended and continued in them wittingly and willingly, after their judgements haue beene rightly informed and their conſciences conuinced. And therefore the examples of their ſlips will not countenance our wilfull ſinnes, no not our leaſt infirmities; yea, rather it wil make vs the more vnexcuſable, if ſeeing them fall (as it were) before vs, we doe not looke the better to our footing.

Math.5.8.

mes 3.2.

§. Sect. 3. The third po- …y to tell vs …t if we com- …it leſſer ſins, …y will pre- …e vs from …ance.

Thirdly, the fleſh dealeth moſt deceitfully with vs, whileſt it perſwadeth and inticeth vs to entertaine ſome ſmaller and leſſer ſins, promiſing that it will reſt contented with them, and craue no more; and ſo theſe leſſer ſinnes ſhall ſerue as preſeruatiues to keepe vs from thoſe which are great and hainous; and theſe ſmall allowances, being giuen to theſe ſauage beaſts, our ſenſuall and vnruly luſts, ſhall keepe them in quiet, which if they bee too much reſtrained and famiſhed will with violence breake all bonds, and with outragious cruelty vtterly deſtroy vs. And thus it perſwadeth vs, that if we wil let the world haue quiet poſſeſſion of ſome little corner of our hearts, God ſhall for his ſhare haue all the reſt, that if we will vſe ſmall oathes, as ornaments to our ſpeech, it will neuer moue vs to diſhonour God by outragious blaſphemies; that if we will at leaſt in ſome companies, either to pleaſe them or aduantage our ſelues, diſſemble our Religion, and be ſeemingly conformable to their example; we may ſtill be as zealous in our hearts as euer wee were, and neuer be in danger of relapſing to worldlineſſe and prophaneſſe. That if wee will not be ouer-ſtrict in ſanctifying Gods Sabbaths, wee ſhall be the more conſtant in ordinary duties: that if we will vſe wanton dalliance, and giue our tongues liberty to vtter obſcene and ribbald ſpeeches, our fleſh will reſt contented and neuer moue vs to commit filthineſſe in act: that if wee will vſe deceit, vſury and oppreſſion for a time till wee haue gotten ſome competency of eſtate, we ſhall leaue theſe vnlawfull courſes, when as we are not preſſed vnto them by any neceſſity. Whereby it groſly abuſeth vs, and from one degree of ſinne draweth vs vnto another, vſing leſſer ſinnes as ſtrong cords to draw on greater, as the ſmall point of the piercer which maketh way for all the reſt, and the Deuils Pioners to ſmooth the paſſage, that he may eaſily bring againſt vs the greateſt Ordinance. For who ſeeth not by daily experience that thoſe who make the World ſharer with God, doe in the end giue it poſſeſſion of the whole; that thoſe who ſweare vainly in their ordinary communication, within a while make no conſcience of forſwearing and blaſphemy; that diſſimulation in Religion bringeth to abnegation and apoſtacy. That neglect of holy duties ends commonly in open profanation; that filthy words draw many on to filthy actions, and that when once men haue giuen way to vnlawfull courſes for the getting of ſome ſmall competency, they will much more continue in them for the obtayning of abundance. Neither in truth is any other thing reaſonably to be expected. For doe we think that we can driue away Beggars from our doores by vſing euery day to caſt them ſcraps, or that they will be weary of crauing till they ſee vs to be weary of giuing? Can we quench the fire of our concupiſcence by caſting Oyle vpon it? Or ſatisfie our dropſie deſires by giuing them a little? Is it a ſafe way to let little Theeues which are of the ſame company lodge in our Houſes, to keepe out great ones and preſerue our goods? Is it the beſt meanes to ſet fire on the Kitchin, that the reſt of the houſe may be preſerued from burning? And will it not rather creepe from thence to the Hall, Parlour and the reſt of the building? Finally, is it held good policy to giue our enemy leaue, to make ſome ſmall breaches in our wals, whereby he may enter and ſurprize vs; to ſuffer him to haue ſome competent allowance and quiet poſſeſſion in ſome corners of our Cities, and not rather to keepe him aloofe, and vtterly to ſtarue and famiſh him, ſo as he may haue no ſtrength to aſſault and indanger vs? Againe, let vs know that there being no other argument to reſtraine vs from ſinne, but Gods Commandement, when we haue broken our bounds, by giuing way to leſſer ſins, we are ready to grow looſe & diſſolute, for he that in one thing neglecteth Gods Commandement, hath as great reaſon to neglect it in another. That we quench the Spirit by theſe voluntary ſins, & by polluting his lodging do make him weary of it, and (if wee doe not cleanſe it by vnfained repentance) vtterly abandon it and ſo leaue the full poſſeſſion to Sathan and our owne luſts. Let vs conſider that we cannot ſatisfie our liquorous luſts by giuing them a taſte of ſin, which is ſo ſweet to their pallet, but ſhall hereby make them much more greedy and eager; and that wee may better ſtand firmely on the hill top, than when wee haue begun running, to ſtay our ſelues till we come to the bottome. Finally, let vs remember, that no man who hath had any ſhew of goodneſſe, doth at once become out-ragiouſly wicked, but by degrees, one ſin drawing him on to another, & the leſſer to the greater, till at laſt many particular acts bring men to a cuſtom, & oftẽ vſe grow to an habit.

§. Sect. 4. The fourth policy is to perſwade vs that wee are in no danger of falling into ſome ſinnes.

Fourthly, the fleſh oftentimes deceiues vs by bringing vs into careles ſecurity, whilſt it maketh vs beleeue, that there is no danger of falling into ſome ſins; for when it cannot perſwade vs that ſin is no ſin, or if any at all, yet ſo ſmall and venial that we may liue in them without perill to our ſoules, or hazard of our ſaluation; then it is ready to ſuggeſt, that there is no cauſe why we ſhould feare falling into many ſins, becauſe they are ſo haynous and monſtrous, and we not onely in our natures are ſo auerſe vnto them, but alſo haue receiued ſuch a meaſure of grace & ſtrength, that no allurements can draw vs to them. Thus when the Prophet told Hazaell what horrible outrages he ſhould commit, he was ſo blinded with this deceit of the fleſh, that he would not beleeue it, but cryed out vnto him, What is thy ſeruant a Dogge, that I ſhould doe ſuch things? And when our Sauiour told Peter, that he ſhould deny and abiure him, conſulting onely with his fleſh, he was ready to preſume vpon his own ſtrength, and rather doubted of his Maſters truth, than of his owne courage and fidelity. Now by this deceit we are made retchleſſe and ſecure, and keepe no watch ouer our ſelues, becauſe we feare no aſſault of ſuch enemies, whereby it commeth to paſſe that wee are ſupprised at vnawares, and carried captiue of ſin becauſe we neuer expected, and therefore neuer armed our ſelues againſt ſuch mighty enemies; as wee may ſee in the example of Dauid who hauing long made conſcience of ſmall infirmities and ſeriouſly repented euen for his ſecret ſlips and leaſt ſins, neuer feared falling into adultery & murder, & ſo was the more eaſily ouercome, becauſe he neglected his watch and ſuſpected no danger. And thus Lot hauing beene preſerued pure from the filthineſſe of Sodome, was ouertaken by inceſt, when hauing no other company with him but his owne daughters hee grew ſecure and feared nothing. For the defeating of which policy let vs conſider that; whileſt we liue in this World, we are but in part regenerate, and that in our fleſh, as there dwelleth no good thing, ſo contrariwiſe, there lie ſecretly lurking the ſeeds of al ſins, which are ready continually to ſprout and ſhoot forth, when they are watred and warmed with Sathans temptations, if they be not nipped and reſtrained by the ſanctifying grace of Gods holy Spirit; that our hearts ſo farre forth as they are vnregnerate, are a ſinke of ſinne and a ſea and gulfe of wickedneſſe, wherein the Deuill caſting the ſpawne of his temptations, begetteth vgly monſters of all ſorts both ſmall and great. And that as our bodies when they are at the pureſt, haue in them ſufficient matter for all manner of diſeaſes; ſo our ſoules being much more corrupted are aptly diſpoſed to any ſin. Secondly, knowing and remembring that through this corruption we are prone to all ſin, let this humble vs in the ſight of our frailty and weakneſſe, and cauſe vs with more earneſtneſſe to craue Gods aſſiſtance and denying our ſelues to reſt on his ſtrength, which alone is able to preſerue vs from falling. Thirdly, let this moue vs to ſhake off all carnall ſecurity and preſumption of our owne graces, and to keep continually a narrow watch ouer our harts, that wee bee not at vnawares ouer-taken through the deceitfulneſſe of ſin. Let it make vs to worke out our ſaluation with feare and trembling, as the Apoſtle exhorteth, and whileſt we thinke we ſtand take heed of falling. Let vs be perſwaded hereby to labour and endeuour daily to purge our ſelues from all filthineſſe of the fleſh and ſpirit, and finiſh our ſanctification in the feare of God. Finally, let vs remember that the man is bleſſed that feareth alwayes: But as for thoſe who harden their hearts through ſecurity and preſumption; they are of all others moſt ready to fall into all euill and miſchiefe.

2.Kings 8.13.

Phil. 2.12.

1.Cor. 10.12.

2.Cor. 7.1.

Prou. 28.14.

§. Sect. 5. The fift policie is to perſwade vs that we may ſafely vſe the means and occaſions of ſin.

A fifth pollicy which the fleſh vſeth to draw vs vnto ſinne, is to perſwade vs, that we may ſafely vſe the meanes and occaſions of ſinne, and yet be preſerued from the ſinne it ſelfe. And thus Lot was allured to drinke exceſſiuely, neuer ſuſpecting his falling into that brutiſh drunkenneſſe, and much leſſe that abhominable inceſt with his owne daughters. Thus Dauid ſecurely liued in idleneſſe and wantonneſſe, neuer thinking, that theſe would be the meanes to bring him to whoredome. Thus Salomon gaue his ſtrength vnto women, and defiled himſelfe with vnlawfull luſts, neuer imagining that this corporall whoredome would be the occaſion and meanes to make him commit alſo ſpirituall whoredome with Idols & ſtrange Gods. Thus Iehoſaphat lincked himſelfe with wicked Ahab by marrying his daughter, and yet ſuppoſed that he ſhould no way bee tainted with his impieties; and Peter preſumed that hee ſhould bee conſtant in his loue to his maſter, and the profeſſion of the truth; and yet conſorteth himſelfe with the high Prieſts ſeruants. And thus in our times many thinke that they may be ſafely preſent at the Maſſe & idolatrous ſeruice, yea themſelues haue about them many meanes and occaſions of idolatry, and yet not fall into the ſinne it ſelfe; many thinke they may ordinarily ſweare and yet neuer commit the ſinne of periury; that they may nouriſh couetouſneſſe, and yet neuer commit theft, fraude, oppreſſion or any vnjuſtice; that they may drinke, pamper the belly and vſe all manner of wanton dalliance, and yet bee farre enough off from fornication and adultery. Now that wee may not bee abuſed with this deceipt, let vs conſider, that where the Lord forbiddeth any ſinne, there he alſo forbiddeth the occaſions and meanes thereof becauſe thoſe who doe not carefully auoide theſe, they cannot poſſibly eſcape the other. That they who goe in the way, will (though they neuer thinke of it) come thereby to the towne or place to which it leadeth. That if wee alwayes walke vpon the yce or ſlipperie places, we ſhall euer bee in danger of falling, and often fall though we be neuer ſo wary; and therefore the Pſalmiſt pronounceth him bleſſed, who hath not walked in the way of ſinners. That as they who vſe ſurfetting and drunkeneſſe, yea drinke dangerous poyſons, cannot looke to enjoy their health, becauſe they vſe the meanes which bring men ordinarily to ſickneſſe and death; ſo they who vſe the meanes of falling into ſinne which is the ſickneſſe of their ſoules, cannot looke to enjoy the life of grace, but will quickly fall into ſpirituall diſeaſes which in the end will bring them to vtter deſtruction. Finally, that they who vſe the meanes and occaſions of euill, doe deſperatly runne into temptations preſuming of their owne ſtrength, and ſo are giuen ouer of God; and being abandoned of his aſſiſtance, muſt needs fall and come to ruine; for hee that loueth danger ſhall periſh therein.

Pſal.1.1.

ccl.3.26.

§. Sect.6. The ſixt policie to draw vs by degrees to commit haynous ſins.

Sixtly, the fleſh oftentimes deceiueth vs, by drawing and intycing vs by degrees to the committing of thoſe ſinnes which are moſt great and haynous, as firſt to looke and caſt wanton glances, then to luſt, then to conſent to the committing of the fact, then to plot and deuiſe of the meanes, how it may be effected, then to the act it ſelfe, and laſtly to the often reiterating of the ſame ſin. Thus firſt it defileth the heart with couetouſneſſe, then cauſeth it to bee diſcontented with our ſtate and portion, then to couet other mens goods, and finally to deuiſe and put in practice the meanes whereby they may bee gotten from them, as fraude, deceipt, extortion, oppreſſion and ſuch like vnlawfull courſes. And thus it draweth vs into all kinds of wickedneſſe, by alluring vs to keepe company with thoſe that loue and liue in it; then for carnall and by-reſpects to wincke at and tolerate their ſinnes whoſe perſons we affect; then to thinke them light and veniall; then for company ſake to commit them, leſt wee would bee thought more preciſe and ſcrupulous than the reſt of our conſorts; and finally to defend our wickedneſſe, yea to boaſt and bragge of it, as though it were ſome vertuous action and much for our credit to liue in it. And thus it bringeth vs to the higheſt ſtep of the ladder of wickedneſſe, vnto which it could neuer haue mounted vs, vnleſſe it had caried vs by theſe degrees, and maketh vs embrace the moſt haynous ſins, as it were, our choyſeſt friends, which before we tooke for our greateſt enemies, and therefore hated and auoided them, by bringing vs firſt acquainted with all the alies, friends and attendants which waite vpon them. For the preuenting of which deceit our beſt courſe is to keepe a narrow watch ouer our ſelues that wee be not thus ouertaken; ſpecially ouer our owne hearts, that we may withſtand the firſt motions vnto ſinne and euen cruſh it in the ſhell that it may neuer come to be hatched. Secondly, to take notice of our leaſt ſinnes, that wee may not ſecurely liue in them, but hauing fallen may recouer our ſelues by vnfained repentance. And laſtly that ſeeing our ſelues are too too retchleſſe and ſecure, wee doe often and vnfainedly deſire the Lord to watch ouer vs, and by his ſpirit to waken our conſciences that they may admoniſh vs of the euill which we are ready to fall into, and ſo preuent the committing of it, or accuſe vs being fallen that we may ariſe againe by repentance, and afterwards bee made more carefull of our wayes.

§. Sect.7. The ſeuenth policie is to draw vs from things indifferent to ſinne.

A ſeuenth pollicy of the fleſh is, to draw vs from that which is indifferent and in its owne nature lawfull, vnto that which is vnlawfull and ſinnefull; for whereas things indifferent are not ſimply good, but onely in their right and moderate vſe, the fleſh allureth vs to abuſe them through immoderation and exceſſe, whereby they become ſinfull and euill. Thus becauſe the creatures are good in their owne nature: and the bleſſings of God vnto vs if they be ſanctified by the word and prayer, and bee vſed ſoberly for the better fitting and enabling vs to Gods ſeruice, and for the performance of all religious and Chriſtian duties, the fleſh allureth vs to loue them exceſſiuely more than the Creator himſelfe, and than all ſauing graces and heauenly happineſſe; and ſo chiefly to value, affect and ſeeke them and to place all our happineſſe in the fruition of them. Thus becauſe riches, honours and pleaſures, are in their owne nature good, it perſwadeth vs to loue them exceſſiuely, to ſet our hearts vpon them and ſeeke them more diligently than the Kingdome of God and his righteouſneſſe, and ſo through our abuſe to make them become vnto vs ſhamefull Idols with which wee commit ſpirituall whoredome. Thus becauſe recreations are lawfull, if we vſe them lawfully, ſeaſonably, and with moderation, that ſo wee may bee the better enabled for the duties of Gods ſeruice, it allureth vs to abuſe them through exceſſe, and to ſpend all, or the chiefe part of our time in them, whereby of recreations they become occupations, which take vs wholly vp, and ſhoulder and thruſt out all Chriſtian duties of our callings with all religious duties of Gods ſeruice; or to vſe them vnſeaſonably on the Lords day, which ſhould bee conſecrated as holy vnto him, and be wholy ſpent in diuine duties and religious exerciſes. So becauſe meates and drinkes are lawfull and of an indifferent nature, the fleſh draweth vs to abuſe them by intemperance and exceſſe, ſurfetting and drunkenneſſe, and ſo to become groſſe Epicures who make their belly their God. Becauſe apparrell is neceſſary to keepe vs warme and hide our nakedneſſe, the fleſh perſwadeth vpon this ground to exceſſiue brauery, and ſtrange attyers: becauſe ſleepe is warrantable in the moderate vſe of it, it allureth vs to immoderate ſloth and ſluggiſhneſſe, which conſumeth our precious time, and ſo dulleth the ſpirits, that we are made vnfit for any good duties. And finally becauſe honeſt mirth is commendable, it prouoketh vs ſecurely to embrace carnall delights, and paſſing all bounds of ſobriety, to turne our mirth into madneſſe, to the diſhonour of God, the diſcredit of our profeſſion and the wounding of our owne conſciences. And thus the fleſh ſpurreth vs on in the vſe of theſe things indifferent, and neuer ſuffereth vs to reſt, vntill we haue wholly paſſed the bounds which God hath ſet vs, & haue turned our Chriſtian and lawfull libertie into vnchriſtian and lawleſſe licentiouſneſſe. The which deceipt is ſo much the more dangerous, becauſe it inticeth vs to the embracing of thoſe things, vnto which wee are naturally carried and hurried with our carnall deſires, and ſinfull appetites; as alſo becauſe the things wherein wee offend, are in their owne nature lawfull and the good bleſſings of God, which maketh vs ſecurely to vſe them, neuer ſuſpecting any danger. Now if we would not be ouertaken with this pollicy, wee muſt keepe a vigilant watch ouer our ſelues in the vſe of things indifferent, that our libertie doe not turne to libertiniſme. Let vs conſider not onely what is lawfull, but alſo what is expedient in reſpect of time, place, perſons and other circumſtances, which not being obſerued, things lawfull in themſelues become vnlawfull vnto vs through our abuſe; that they who will alwayes doe the vttermoſt that they may, will often do that which they ſhould not; and they who will preſumptuouſly walke vpon the brinke of the riuer, will ſometimes ſlip in and bee in danger to bee drowned; that theſe things which are not abſolutely good, but of an indifferent nature, are vnto vs according as we vſe them, good to thoſe which vſe them well, and euill to thoſe who abuſe them vnto ſinne; that we are naturally exceeding inclinable to this abuſe, if wee bee not very watchfull and wary; and finally that thoſe things which are not ſimply good, but as they are confined within their bounds and meaſure, their cautions and conditions, become euill and vnlawfull, when theſe limits are exceeded and theſe cautions not obſerued.

¶.Sect. 3. The eighth policie is to perſwad vs to ſin by the examples of the Saints,

Finally the fleſh perſwadeth vs to ſinne, by propoſing vnto vs the example of the Saints; and that either inticing vs to embrace ſinne generally, becauſe all of them generally haue ſinned, or elſe alluring vs vnto particular ſinnes, by propounding vnto vs particular examples; and (as it were) ſpeciall patrons for euery kind of wickedneſſe. As for example Noah and Lot for drunkenneſſe, Dauid for whoredome and murther; Ieremy and Ionah for murmuring and impatiency, Peter for denying of Chriſt and diſſembling of our profeſſion. For the defeating of which deceipt let vs conſider that the vertues of theſe men and not their vices are propounded vnto vs for imitation; yea that their ſinnes are ſet before vs, that ſeeing their falls we ſhould be more watchfull and warie, or being fallen wee ſhould not deſpaire, but bee encouraged to riſe with them by vnfained repentance. Finally let vs know, that without this repentance wee can haue no comfort by their example; and that if we do ſoundly repent with them, it will cauſe in vs many a deepe ſigh and dolefull groane, and ſo we ſhall finde much more bitterneſſe in our ſorrow, than wee haue done ſweeteneſſe in our ſinne; and that where as the delight was vaine and momentanie, the griefe will be great and permanent. And therefore looke not vpon Dauid ſporting himſelfe in his vnlawfull luſts, but behold him afterwards when hee is bowed and goeth crooked vnder the waight of his ſinne, complaining as a man affrighted with the terrors of conſcience and rejected of God, making teares his food, and watering his couch with them. Looke not vpon Peter ſauing himſelfe by forſwearing his maſter, but behold him afterwards weeping bitterly. Finally looke not vpon the Church delighting her ſelfe with her louers, and with that ſpirituall whoredome committed with them; but liſten vnto her pitifull lamentations, when being led into captiuity, ſhee is grieuouſly afflicted for her ſinnes.

*Pſal.*38.6.& 6.6.

Chap. XV.

Of the pollicies which the fleſh vſeth to hinder our repentance.

§.Sect.1. The firſt pollicie is to perſwade vs that our common ſinnes are no ſinnes, and our haynous ſins ſmall and veniall.

WEe haue ſpoken of ſome ſpeciall and notable deceipts which the fleſh vſeth to allure vs to the committing of ſinne; and now we are briefly to conſider of ſome other which it vſeth, to make vs being fallen to continue in our ſinnes without repentance. The firſt whereof is to blinde or hoodwinke the eyes of our vnderſtandings, and to corrupt and delude our judgements, that wee may thinke our common ſinnes to bee no ſinnes, and our great and haynous ones to bee ſmall and veniall: with which deceipt wee are the more eaſily abuſed if wee thriue and proſper in our euill courſes, and haue not our eyes cleared by the ſharpe waters of afflictions. For when God ſuffereth vs to goe on in our euill wayes without checke, wee either thinke that hee approueth, or not much miſliketh them; or elſe continue ſecurely in them and neuer call them to examination. For the defeating of which pollicy the beſt meanes are firſt, diligent ſtudying and meditating in the booke of God, which is that al-ſufficient light whereby wee may diſcouer theſe workes of darkeneſſe, and that moſt vpright judge, which not onely adjudgeth what is good and euill, but alſo in what meaſure and degree. Secondly, that we often pray vnto God that our eyes may be annointed with the eye-ſalue of his grace and holy Spirit, that being cured of their naturall blindneſſe, they may be able to diſcerne betweene euill and good, darkeneſſe and light. Finally, that wee doe not liue in carnall ſecurity, but often examine our workes and wayes by the rule and ſquare of Gods word, and eſpecially thoſe wherein wee thriue and proſper, and ſo wee ſhall perceiue plainely which are juſt and ſtraight, and which are crooked, and alſo in what meaſure and degree.

§.Sect.2. The ſecond pollicie is to extenuate and couer our ſins with vaine excuſes, as firſt corruption of nature.

Secondly, if it cannot perſwade vs that our ſins are no ſinnes, then it will extenuate and couer them with vaine excuſes, & make them ſo little, light, and veniall, that as it will make vs beleeue, wee may without danger continue in them. And firſt it pretendeth corruption of nature and humaine frailtie, which is ſo great in all men, that doe what they can, they muſt needs be guiltie of many ſinnes. But in this wee may vanquiſh our fleſh with its owne weapon, for we ſhould not giue willing entertainement vnto any ſinne, becauſe through our infirmitie, and the ſtrength of naturall corruption, many will thruſt in vpon vs whether we wil or no; but rather wee ſhould therefore fight the more couragiouſly againſt theſe enemies, becauſe they are ſo inſtant to preſſe vpon vs. Yea in truth this ſhould double our repentance, ſeeing there doth not onely ſome ſtreames of wickedneſſe flow from vs, but alſo we haue the fountaine in our ſelues; eſpecially conſidering wee were not thus by creation, but through our owne default, whereby we haue defaced Gods image, and brought our ſelues into this ſtate of corruption.

§.Sect.3. Secondly the fleſh teacheth vs to pretend cuſtome.

Secondly men excuſe themſelues for liuing impenitently in their ſinnes, by pretending cuſtome, which hath taken ſuch faſt hold vpon them, that they can by no meanes ſhake it off. Thus the ſwearer pretendeth, that hee would willingly leaue vaine and blaſphemous oathes, but that he is ſo inured vnto them, that hee often ſweareth at vnawares. Thus the voluptuous man ſaith, that he would be content to leaue his carnall delights, as drinking, gaming, rioting, whoring, but that hee hath ſo accuſtomed himſelfe vnto them, that he cannot forſake nor giue them ouer. But let ſuch know that it is high time for them to come out of their ſins by repentance, ſeeing they haue brought themſelues into a moſt miſerable and fearefull condition; for ſinne is turned into another nature, and by pleading cuſtome holdeth them in ſubjection (as it were) by vertue of a Law. And Sathan who through their naturall corruption held them in the vileſt and baſeſt ſlauerie, hath his poſſeſſion confirmed by their cuſtomable ſeruice of him in their actuall tranſgreſſions, and now the ſtrong man holdeth the houſe with ſome ſhew of right, hauing ſo long poſſeſſed it that he can pleade preſcription. Of theſe men I would demand if euer they meane to come out of their ſinnes by vnfained repentance or no. If not what appearance of hope is there but that they muſt be eternally miſerable in the fire of Hell. But if they doe, as all will pretend, why doe they it not preſently? For if cuſtome be too ſtrong for them already, how much more vnreſiſtable will it bee, when it is more & more confirmed by much practice and continuance? But I am ſo fettered in ſinne by an ill cuſtome, that I cannot ſhake it off. Yet know that though it be hard, yet vpon the neceſſity of thy ſaluation it muſt bee done; and therefore in ſtead of breaking theſe cords with a Sampſon-like reſolution, let not time and vſe double them and make them ſtronger. Yea rather vntwiſt them by little and little, if thou canſt not at once breake them; and by a contrary cuſtome of piety and righteouſneſſe, diſuſe thee from thy ſinnes by degrees, indeauouring firſt to ſet thy heart at liberty. For if the heart being deliuered out of the bondage of ſinne, begin now to hate it, then neither will the tongue delight to ſpeake it, nor the hand to act it. And therefore pretend not cuſtome, ſeeing it is not this, but our malicious wils, that imbrace it and our hearts that affect it, which make vs continue in our ſinne without repentance, neither can cuſtome hold vs vnto any thing which is in our owne power to alter, if our wils with any reſolution doe breake a way from it. For tell me thou who pretendeſt this excuſe; if this cuſtome ſhould bee puniſhed in euery particular act with ſome forfeiture, whereby thy eſtate would bee impoueriſhed, or ſome puniſhment inflicted on thy body, which would bring vnto thee more damage and ſmart, than thy ſinne doth pleaſure and delight; wouldeſt thou not leaue thy ſinne and hate it, if not for it ſelfe, yet for the penalty ſake inflicted on thee for it? And wilt thou not regard thy precious ſoule as well as thy corruptible body; and be as carefull to auoide eternall damnation, as well as ſome worldly loſſe? Finally know, that it will proue but a miſerable excuſe at the day of judgement, when God and our owne conſciences ſhall accuſe vs for our ſinnes, to ſay that wee committed and could not leaue them, becauſe we were accuſtomed vnto them; and all one, as if the man-ſlayer ſhould excuſe his murther, by telling the judge that he could doe no otherwiſe, becauſe hee had for a long time beene accuſtomed thereto, by killing of many other: Or as if the thiefe ſhould excuſe his theft by ſaying, that he could not chooſe but doe it, becauſe his hands for a long time haue beene inured to ſtealing. And therefore let vs not continue in ſinne becauſe wee haue ſinned, thinking that we can bee excuſed by pleading cuſtome, but becauſe wee haue long and often committed theſe ſinnes, let vs be ſo much more earneſt in the exerciſe of repentance. For as the Apoſtle telleth vs, Chriſt hath ſuffered in the fleſh, that we ſhould no longer liue the reſt of our time in the fleſh to the luſts of men, but to the will of God. For the time paſt of our life may ſuffice vs, to haue wrought the will of Gentiles, when we walked in laſciuiouſneſſe, luſts, exceſſe of wine, reuellings, banquettings and abhominable idolatries. So the Apoſtle Paul exhorteth vs, that as wee haue yeelded our members ſeruants to vncleaneſſe and to iniquitie, vnto iniquitie; ſo now we ſhould yeeld our members ſeruants to righteouſneſſe, vnto holineſſe.

1.Pet.4.2.3.

Rom.6.19.

§. Sect.4
The third deceipt is to pretend pouertie.

Thirdly the fleſh deceiueth vs, by pretending the pouerty and neceſſity of our eſtate as a ſufficient cauſe, and reaſonable excuſe, why we ſhould continue in our ſins; and maketh vs beleeue, that though we neglect all meanes of knowledge, faith, and all ſauing grace, and all duties of Gods ſeruice, we may be diſpenſed with becauſe our whole time is little inough to bee imployed for the obtaining of worldly neceſſaries; yea that wee may vſe wicked and vnlawfull meanes, for the ſupplying of our wants, as all manner of fraud and deceitfull dealing in our trades and occupations, which is no better than theft it ſelfe in the ſight of God. But let vs know that though we be neuer ſo poore, this is no excuſe why wee ſhould neglect any religious duty, or commit any ſinne, For one thing is neceſſary and happy are wee, if with Mary we quit our ſelues of worldly incumbrances, and chooſe the better part. That if we bee poore in earthly things, wee haue greater cauſe to labour after ſauing graces & heauenly treaſures, which alone without the other are all-ſufficient to make vs rich. That when we haue carked & cared, toyled and moyled to prouide earthly things, yet all is in vaine except Gods bleſſing be vpon our labours; and we cannot expect it either by neglecting holy duties which he hath commanded, or by committing ſuch ſinnes as he hath forbidden and condemned. That we haue Gods gracious promiſe of earthly neceſſaries, if we firſt and chiefely ſeeke his Kingdome and righteouſneſſe: That pouerty, if we vſe it well, is no hinderance to grace in this life nor glory in the life to come; as we ſee in the example of the Diſciples, yea Chriſt himſelfe, who being moſt poore in worldly things, were moſt rich in ſpirituall and heauenly treaſures. Finally let vs know, that if we ſerue and ſeeke the Lord, he will take care for vs, and not ſuffer vs to want any thing which is good, and that they of all others are beſt prouided for, who haue his prouidence to watch ouer them. Or though wee ſhould be pinched in reſpect of earthly things, yet it is much better with Lazarus to goe poore to Heauen, than with Diues hauing abundance, to be caſt into Hell.

*Pſal.*127.1.

*Mat.*6.33.

*Pſal.*34.10.

§. Sect.5.
The fourth policie is to pretend a neceſſitie of liuing in our ſins by reaſon of our calling.

A like conceipt vnto this is, when as the fleſh perſwadeth vs that wee may neglect good duties, or commit and liue in diuers ſinnes becauſe we liue in ſuch callings as doe force vs to take theſe courſes, without which we could not maintaine our charge. Thus it perſwadeth ſhop-keepers, that they ſhould not bee able to liue in their trades, if they ſhould not vſe lying and deceipt; and other tradeſ-men as Cookes, Taylors, Shoomakers, Vintners, Butchers, Cariers, and ſuch like, that they may be diſpenſed with, though they neglect the ſeruice of God, and labour in the workes of their calling on the Lords Sabbaths, becauſe otherwiſe they ſhould looſe their cuſtome, together with thoſe gaines, by which they are inabled to maintaine themſelues and theirs. Yea and thus it perſwadeth others to liue in vnlawfull callings, becauſe they haue no other meanes, as Players and Playmakers, gameſters, and thoſe who keepe gaming houſes, and ſuch like. But let the former know that no particular calling ſhould withdraw vs from performing the duties which belong to the generall calling of a Chriſtian; that they ſhall in the end find thoſe gaines the greateſt loſſes, when to keepe a market for our body and ſtate, wee neglect the ſpirituall market of our ſoules, and the meanes whereby wee might attaine vnto the riches of ſauing graces and heauenly happineſſe. That thoſe who ſeeke to compaſſe riches by vnlawfull meanes, they either faile of their end, and ſo labour in vaine, or together with them get a curſe, which will make them moulder and conſume away: or if they continue, will bring to the poſſeſſers but ſmall comfort, when they muſt leaue their riches behinde them and carry their ſinne with them before their judge. Let them know that no man in any lawfull calling is brought into ſuch ſteights, but that if there bee prudence, prouidence and wiſe forecaſt ioyned with it, he may finde ſome time and opportunity for the ſeruice of God and the feeding of his ſoule: and though he doe not vſe the meanes of thriuing in his calling as others doe, who ſo earneſtly follow their worldly buſineſſe that they neglect all holy duties; yet may they expect from God vpon their weaker indeauours a greater bleſſing, which may make their ſtate become as fat and in as good liking, as thoſe children were in their bodies who fed onely vpon pulſe and water: Dan.1.15. or though God ſeeth it good to ſcant them in wordly things, yet they ſhall enjoy the little they haue with aboundant comfort, ſeeing they are vnto them little pledges of Gods great loue, and in the meane time haue their bodily wants exceedingly recompenced with the peace of a good conſcience, the joy in the holy Ghoſt, and the ſpirituall riches of all ſauing graces. As for thoſe whoſe callings are vnlawfull, their beſt courſe were to exchange them for thoſe that are lawfull, ſeeing they haue no better excuſe of their liuing in them, becauſe they haue no other meanes to maintaine themſelues, than Harlots, Theeues and Pickpurſes, who are alike ready to alleadge, that therefore they vſe theſe courſes, becauſe they haue no other meanes whereby they may liue. For better it were for them not to liue at all, than to liue in ſinne to the diſhonour of God and hurt of their brethren; better it were that their bodies ſhould pine and famiſh in this world, than that their bodies and ſoules ſhould eternally bee tormented in the fire of Hell.

§. Sect.6. The fift policy of the fleſh perſwading vs to continue in our ſinnes, in regard of the corruption of the times.

Fiftly the fleſh deceiueth vs, whileſt it perſwadeth vs to continue in our ſins without repentance, by alleadging that the times wherein we liue, and the perſons among we dwell, are ſo euill and wholy corrupted with ſinne, that there is a neceſſitie laide vpon vs of conforming our courſes to the example of others; ſeeing if wee purge our ſelues from the ſinnes which commonly raigne, and make conſcience of thoſe vices which others commit; wee ſhall not onely expoſe our ſelues to the ſcorne and obloquie of all that obſerue vs, as being more ſtrict and preciſe in our courſes than wee neede, but alſo (as the Prophet ſpeaketh) make our ſelues a Eſa.59.15. common prey. For the defeating of which deceipt, let vs know that wee muſt bee of the little flocke of Chriſt, Luk 12.32. if euer wee meane to be in their number, vnto whom his Fathers pleaſure is to giue a Kingdome; that wee muſt not follow a multitude in doing euill, Exod.23.2. vnleſſe wee thinke alſo to bee partakers in their puniſhments; that wee muſt not faſhion our ſelues to the example of the world, Rom.12.2. if we would not periſh with it, but muſt bee transformed by the renewing of our minds, Ioh.15.19. and bee ſeuered from the world and culled out of it, if wee would be in the number of Chriſts Diſciples, or become true members and ſubjects of his kingdome. That it is better to goe into Heauen alone, than to goe into Hell and haue all the world to beare vs company. Let vs remember that wee muſt through good report and euill report, 2.Cor.6.8. goe on in our Chriſtian courſe, with the bleſſed Apoſtle, if we euer meane to accompany him in Heauen. That it is no great matter to ſuffer a ſcoffe for Chriſt, who hath for our ſakes ſuffered the bitter death of the croſſe; that we muſt not refuſe to be the ſheepe of Chriſt, nor alter our nature to a woluiſh condition, becauſe we would not be iniured by wolues and goates, vnleſſe we would with them be ſet at Chriſts left hand and heare that dreadfull ſentence of condemnation denounced Mat.25. againſt vs. That wee ſhall in the end ouercome by ſuffering, and receiue a crowne of our patience, which without all compariſon will exceede our paines. Let vs further conſider that no man is carleſſe of the health of his body, becauſe the ayre is infected, and the country full of contagious ſickneſſes, but doth ſo much the more carefully vſe all good preſeruatiues to keepe him from theſe Epedemicall diſeaſes, and the like care wee would haue of our ſoules, if we loued them as well as wee doe our bodies. In regard whereof the Apoſtle vſeth this as an argument to make vs more watchfull and diligent, in redeeming the time, becauſe the dayes Eph.5.16. are euill. Finally let vs know that neither time nor place in which we liue, will excuſe vs before God, if wee liue in our ſinnes, ſeeing as the beſt time or place will not priuiledge vs from falling into ſinne no not Paradiſe it ſelfe, and the ſociety of the Angels, as we ſee in Adam; ſo neither will thoſe times and places which moſt abound with euill, poyſon vs with the contagion of ſinne, if we haue about vs the preſeruatiue of a good conſcience, and haue ſincere and vpright hearts, which make vs with Enoch in the middeſt of worldly diſtractions to walke Gen.5.

with our God. Yea rather when we are on all ſides compaſſed about with wicked men, the heate and zeale of our godlineſſe (as it were by an antiperiſtaſis) will be intended and increaſed. As we ſee in the example of Noah, who continued juſt, when all the world were wicked. Of Abraham, who was vpright in his wayes among the wicked Cananites; of Lot, whoſe ſoule was righteous, though hee liued among the filthy Sodomites; of Ioſeph and Moſes in the Court of Pharaoh, Dauid in the Court of Saul, and of Nehemiah, Daniel, the three children, and many others, who feared and ſerued the Lord, though they liued, yea bore office in the Court of the Kings of Babylon.

Gen.6.9.

§. Sect.7. The ſixt policy of the fleſh in perſwading vs to continue in our ſins becauſe God is mercifull.

A ſixt pollicy which the fleſh vſeth, to perſwade vs to continue in our ſinnes without repentance is to tell vs of Gods mercy, which is ſo endleſſe and infinite, that notwithſtanding we goe on in our owne courſes yet we ſhall be ſaued. With which that we may not be ouertaken, let vs conſider; that it is an horrible abuſe of Gods mercy, when we take occaſion thereby to continue in ſins, which in the Scriptures is offered vnto vs as the maine argument whereby we are inuited vnto repentance. So the Pſalmiſt ſaith that there is mercy with the Lord that hee may be feared; and the Apoſtle telleth vs, that the riches of Gods goodneſſe, his patience and long-ſuffering doe inuite vs to repentance. It is a notable motiue to perſwade a rebell to yeeld & ſubmit himſelfe to his Prince, becauſe he is gracious and mercifull, but if any will goe out or continue in his rebellion vpon this ground, his preſumption alone would make him worthy to bee hanged, becauſe the grace and goodneſſe of his Prince ſhould worke in him loue and obedience, and make him loath and euen aſhamed to offend and diſpleaſe ſo gracious a ſoueraigne. Secondly, let vs know that howſoeuer Gods mercy in itſelfe is infinite and incomprehenſible, yet in reſpect of the object and exerciſe of it, it is limitted by his truth, which appropriateth it only to repentant ſinners, becauſe ſuch onely doe lay hold of it, and apply it vnto themſelues by a liuely faith; without which application, the mercy of God can doe vs no more good, than a ſoueraigne ſalue can cure a wound, which is caſt behind the doore and neuer applyed vnto it. Laſtly, let vs know, that as God is infinite in mercy, ſo alſo in juſtice, yea in truth theſe are all one in God, his mercy being a juſt mercy, and his juſtice a mercifull juſtice, onely they ſeeme to differ in reſpect of the obiect, and his diuers manner of exerciſing them towards his creatures. In which regard notwithſtanding it may truely be ſaid, that hee is iuſt in iuſtifying a ſinner, becauſe beleeuing in Chriſt his ſins are ſatisfied for by his merits and obedience; and that he is mercifull towards the wicked in bearing with them ſo long, and affording vnto them ſo many meanes to bring them to repentance. But if theſe meanes bee contemned, then the acceptable time and day of ſaluation being paſt, there is no more place for mercy, but onely for juſtice; in the manifeſtation whereof towards the wicked and reprobate, God is no leſſe glorified, than in the declaring of his mercy and trueth towards the faithfull and Elect. Neither muſt wee thinke it any diſparagement to Gods mercy, that it is not effectuall for the ſaluation of all, ſeeing the fault is in themſelues who deſpiſe it; neither is the infiniteneſſe thereof at all limited or ſhadowed, becauſe it is not extended to thoſe who reject it, no more than the mercy of the Prince is ecclypſed, who ſendeth his pardon to a malefactour with this condition, that hee ſhall haue the benefit of it, if hee will receiue and pleade it; and for the time preſent bee ſorry for his fault, and for the time to come endeauour to amend; and yet afterwards hangeth the offender, when hee refuſeth to receiue it, and withall profeſſeth his reſolution to continue in his wicked courſes. Beſides the infiniteneſſe of Gods mercy is not onely manifeſt by the number which he forgiueth, but alſo by the quality and greatneſſe of the debt which hee pardoneth and remitteth. In which regard the infinite grace and goodneſſe of God would cleerely ſhine in the ſaluation of one ſinner though there were no more than he, becauſe hee forgiueth the infinite guilt and puniſhment of his ſin, whereby he hath offended his infinite Majeſtie.

Pſal.130.4.

Rom.2.4.

Rom.3.26.

§. Sect.8. The ſeuenth pollicie of the fleſh in perſwading vs to deferre our repentance.

Laſtly, if the fleſh cannot draw vs to a reſolution of liuing in our ſins without repentance; then it allureth vs to deferre it from time to time, becauſe it will neuer be too late to performe this duty though it were delayed to the laſt houre of our liues; which deceit that we may defeat, let vs know, that this is a like abuſe of Gods infinite mercy and goodneſſe, when as by our preſumption we make it ſerue as a reaſon to continue vs in our ſins, which ſhould be the chiefeſt motiue to haſten our repentance. Secondly, let vs conſider that wee haue no aſſurance of our liues for the ſpace of one houre, nor that wee ſhall haue power to repent, if wee deſpiſe Gods preſent grace though our liues ſhould be prolonged for many yeares. Thirdly, that without repentance there can bee no ſaluation, which being the chiefe thing, deſerueth our firſt and beſt endeuours; and what folly is it to ſeeke firſt for vaine and momentany trifles and to defer this greateſt and moſt important buſineſſe to our laſt and vncertain times ſeeing if we be preuented by death there is no hope, but that we ſhall goe vnto hell? Fourthly, let vs know that the longer we defer our repentance, the more hard and difficult ſhall we find it to be done, for if wee cannot ſhake off our ſinnes, when like ſtrangers they are firſt entertained, much leſſe ſhall we be able to doe it, when they are of familiar acquaintance, yea, by long cuſtome habituall, and (as it were) turned into a ſecond nature. Finally, let vs remember that this late repentance is commonly falſe and counterfait, not ſpringing out of faith and the loue of God, but out of ſelfe-loue and feare of approching judgements. The which lamentable experience maketh too manifeſt, ſeeing few among many hundreds performe that which they promiſed, when the hand of God correcting them is pulled backe, but after their recouery out of thoſe ſickneſſes which they thought mortall, returne to their former courſes, yea, become more worldly and wicked than euer they were before. But of this ſubject I haue largely intreated in the firſt part of this Chriſtian Warfare, and therefore will content my ſelfe heere to haue ſo briefly touched it.

CHAP. XVI.

Of the policies of the fleſh which it vſeth to hinder vs from performing holy duties, and vertuous actions.

§. Sect. 1.
Of the firſt po-icy of the ſh in blind-g our minds corrupting r judgeents, that we y not diſ-nebetween od & euill.

WE haue heard of ſome notable deceits which the fleſh vſeth to draw vs vnto ſin, and being falne to make vs lie in it without repentance: now let vs conſider ſome chiefe policies which it vſeth about holy duties and vertuous actions. And theſe are of three ſorts; the firſt it vſeth to hinder vs from embracing and practiſing them. The ſecond to diſturbe and interrupt vs in them. The third to alienate our hearts and withdraw vs from them. For the firſt, it vſeth many deceits to keepe vs from embracing vertue, & bringing forth the fruits of new obedience. As firſt of all, when wee haue ſome inclination to embrace vertue and to practiſe Chriſtian duties in the generall, it cunningly indeuoureth to dazle the eyes of our minde, and to corrupt our judgements, that wee may miſtake vertue for vice, and good for euill. To which end it either mooueth vs to judge of them according to common errour, and the falſe opinion of worldly men, who by ſelfe-loue are eaſily brought to condemne that as naught, which is moſt contrary to their carnall appetite; or elſe it diſguiſeth vertues beauty with the foule and vgly vizard of vice and ſin, or ſo beſprinkleth and beſmeareth them with the blacke colours of falſe imputations, that we are ready to abhorre and reject them at the firſt view, without any further tryall or examination. Thus it brandeth a Chriſtian conuerſation with the name of a melancholicke or Monkiſh life, deuotion with the name of ſuperſtition, and a conſcionable care to approue our hearts and all our wayes vnto God it tearmeth nice ſcrupuloſity, and needleſſe, yea, peeuiſh preciſeneſſe. Thus a religious care to ſanctifie the Sabbath, it calleth Iudaiſme; zeale, fury and madneſſe, or at beſt raſhneſſe and indiſcretion; humility it tearmeth baſeneſſe, magnanimity pride, bounty lauiſhneſſe, frugality niggardlineſſe, meekneſſe cowardize, and Chriſtian courage and fortitude it intitleth with the name of deſperate and audacious boldneſſe. Now the meanes to preſerue vs from being ouertaken with this deceit, is to pull off theſe deformed Vizards, and to behold vertue and all Chriſtian duties, in their owne natiue beauty by the neuer deceiuing Light of Gods Word. And not to liſten to the falſe opinion of the World and the fleſh, which make light darkneſſe, and ſweet ſower, but to examine by the Scriptures what God approueth, and what hee diſliketh and condemneth. To which purpoſe wee muſt daily exerciſe our ſelues in the ſtudy and meditation of Gods Word, which will ſo enlighten, rectifie and informe our judgements, that wee ſhall neuer be deceiued by thoſe foggy and falſe miſts, which the Deuill, the World or our owne corrupt Fleſh, doe caſt before them.

§. Sect. 2.
The ſecond policy in alledging difficulties that are in Chri-ſtian duties.

A ſecond deceit which the fleſh vſeth, to diſcourage vs from ſeeking after vertue, and endeuouring to practiſe Chriſtian duties, is to perſwade vs, that the houſe of vertue is ſcituated on ſo high an hill, that wee ſhall be out of breath and quite tyred before wee can clime vnto it; and that there is ſo much difficulty and ſo many diſcouragements in a Chriſtian life, that it would be but in vaine to enter into it, it being impoſſible that we ſhould goe forward, and that better it were not to giue the on-ſet, than in the firſt skirmiſh to be foyled, and forced to make a ſhamefull retraite. To this end it is ready to tell vs, that wee muſt leaue all our delights, which ſo much content vs, and exerciſe our ſelues in ſuch duties as are quite againſt the haire, and through the contrariety which is betweene them and our nature, ſo diſpleaſant and diſtaſtfull to our appetite, that wee ſhall not liue one merry day after we haue taken vpon vs this mopiſh and melancholicke profeſſion. Yea, and for the better countenancing of this deceit, it is ready to abuſe Gods infallible truth, and to ſet before vs the afflictions of the Saints, their mournings and lamentations, their pouerty and reproches, impriſonments, baniſhments and cruell death, aſſuring vs (as the truth is) that if we follow them in the ſame courſes we ſhall meete with the ſame croſſes, ſeeing it is expreſly ſaid, That all who will liue godly in Chriſt Ieſus muſt ſuffer perſecution. Now that

2.Tim.3.12.

that we may be armed againſt this ſubtill incounter, let vs know, that the chiefe ſtrength of it lyeth in laying open and amplifying the diſcouragements which might hinder vs in our Chriſtian courſe, and in the concealing and hiding of thoſe helpes and comforts which might bee encouragements to our good proceedings. For though the worke of repentance be vnto vs hard and difficult, yet ſeeing it is not onely an act done by vs, but chiefly and principally a grace and gift of God, who is ready to beſtow it freely vpon all who deſire to haue it, and doe endeauour to embrace and practiſe it, the difficulty ſhould bring with it no diſcouragement, ſeeing God is al-ſufficient to effect his owne worke, and by the power of his Word and Spirit, to make that eaſie and delightfull which is naturally impoſſible and vnpleaſant. Againe, let vs know that in repentance there is a change not onely of our actions, but alſo of our hearts and minds, whereby it commeth to paſſe, that thoſe ſinfull delights which were formerly moſt ſweet to our carnall appetites, are now moſt bitter and loathſome to the part regenerate; and thoſe godly and religious exerciſes which were to the fleſh and naturall man moſt diſtaſtfull and tedious, are now to the man regenerate moſt pleaſant and comfortable; as wee may ſee in Dauid who eſteemed Gods Word and holy Ordinances aboue all manner of riches, and found them ſweeter to his taſte than the hony or the hony combe; and in Iob who profeſſeth, that he eſteemed the Word of God much more than his neceſſary food. And therefore though new obedience be irkſome and painfull to thoſe who are vnregenerate, yet not to thoſe who are ſanctified, changed and renewed in the ſpirit of their mindes. Euen as wee ſee thoſe paines and ſerious ſtudies which were ſo tedious and contrary to our diſpoſition whileſt we were children, are ſweet and delightful when we are come to years of diſcretion. Furthermore let vs conſider that though it be a moſt toyleſome labour vnto vs to run in the Chriſtian race being conſidered in our ſelues, becauſe we are ſtiffe and benummed, and ſore & lame in al our joynts through the fetters and bolts of ſinne which haue long hanged vpon vs, yet being ſtrengthened by the ſpirit, and being made partakers of this ſpirituall anoynting, we are made able, nimble and actiue to run in the wayes of God, according to that of the Spouſe, Draw mee, and I will runne after thee, and of the Prophet; I will runne the way of thy Commandements when thou ſhalt inlarge my heart; and that alſo of the Apoſtle; I can doe all things through Chriſt which ſtrengtheneth me. Finally, let vs know, that as wee haue in the way of Chriſtianity many croſſes, ſo alſo many comforts; as for example, for the preſent wee looſe the applauſe of Worldlings, and lie open to obloquy and reproach; but for recompence we haue the approbation of God and our owne conſciences; wee haue warres with men, but peace with God; wee looſe carnall rejoycing in the pleaſures of ſin, but in ſtead thereof we haue ſpirituall rejoycing in the aſſurance of Gods loue, the remiſſion of our ſins, and the ſaluation of our ſoules; wee are ſtripped of worldly wealth, but we are inriched with ſpirituall treaſures, Gods ſanctifying gifts and graces, and gloriouſly decked both with inward ſincerity and the rich roabes of an holy conuerſation; wee forgoe carnal ſecurity which within a while would bring vs into horrour and deſpaire in the ſight of our ſins, and that horrible vengeance which is due vnto them; but we haue in exchange ſpirituall ſecurity, whereby we quietly reſt vpon Gods promiſes and prouidence in the midſt of all dangers, and can with Dauid walke through the vale of the ſhadow of death, and yet feare no euil. And thus our worldly loſſes are euen in this life infinitely recompenced with our ſpirituall gaines, and how much more when we come to the fruition of our future and heauenly hopes, for if we ſuffer with Chriſt wee ſhall raigne with him, and theſe preſent ſufferings, are not worthy to be compared with the glory which ſhall be reuealed in vs; for they are light and momentary; but they ſhall cauſe vnto vs a farre moſt excellent and an eternall waight of glory. And therefore let vs not ſo remember the croſſe, as that we forget the Crowne, nor ſo looke to the fouleneſſe of the way, as that wee doe not regard the gloriouſneſſe of our Palace vnto which we are trauelling; but let vs conſider that by Mount Caluarie wee ſhall come vnto Mount Sion, the City of the Saints, and that by our many tribulations we ſhall enter into the Kingdome of Heauen. And ſo ſhall we with Moſes, preferre afflictions with the people of God, before the enioying of ſinfull pleaſures which laſt but for a ſeaſon, and eſteeme the reproach of Chriſt greater riches than the treaſures of this worldly Egypt, hauing reſpect to the recompence of reward. Yea, ſo ſhall wee be like vnto Ieſus Chriſt, the authour and finiſher of our faith, who for the ioy that was ſet before him, endured the croſſe, deſpiſing the ſhame, and is now ſet down at the right hand of the throne of God, where we alſo ſhall ſit with him if wee follow his example.

Pſal.19.& 119.
Iob 23.12.
*Cant.*1.4.
*Pſal.*119.32.
*Phil.*4.13.
*Pſal.*23.4.
2.*Tim.*2.12.
*Rom.*8.18.
2.*Cor.*4.17.
Acts 14.22.
*Heb.*11.25,26.
*Heb.*12.2.

§.*Sect.*3.
The third policy is to perſwade vs to deferre the doing of holy and Chriſtians duties.

But if the fleſh cannot perſwade vs vtterly to neglect good duties, becauſe wee diſcerne that they are neceſſary for our ſaluation, then it will mooue vs to deferre them for a time, telling vs that hereafter they will be more ſeaſonable, and that we alſo ſhall haue better leiſure to performe them. For the defeating of which policy let vs know, that there is no time alike ſeaſonable for the exerciſe of a godly life vnto the time preſent; For whileſt

it

ſal.95.7.
Cor.6.2.

it is called to day, and the Lord calleth vpon vs to performe holy duties, it is the acceptable time and day of ſaluation which being once paſt, will neuer returne againe. That thoſe duties which are firſt in excellency, ſhould be firſt alſo in time, and that no wiſe man putteth off matters of greateſt waight, but giueth them priority and precedency both in reſpect of time and place. Let vs remember that our liues are ſhort and momentany, and that it were but all too little, though they ſhould be wholy ſpent in Gods ſeruice; and that this ſhort time is ſo vncertaine, that wee haue no aſſurance of liuing another day or houre, in regard whereof it is great madneſſe to put off thoſe duties, for the doing whereof we chiefly came into the World, and vpon the performance of which our ſaluation dependeth, and to preferre before them trifles, which for the preſent are of ſmall value and will not profit vs any whit at the day of death and judgement. That wee cannot by our owne naturall ſtrength doe any good duty, but as we are aſſiſted by Gods Spirit, & that if we from day to day quench the good motions thereof and will not open, when hee knocketh ſo hard and often at the doore of our hearts, wee ſhall moue him to depart from vs and leaue vs to our impenitency, ſecurity and hardneſſe of heart. Finally, let vs know, that if it be now troubleſome and tedious to performe holy duties and vertuous actions, how much more will it be ſo, when our vices are growne habituall, and by long cuſtome are turned into another nature. Furthermore whereas the fleſh pretendeth many occaſions of preſent diſtraction and multitude of buſineſſe, and telleth vs, that we may more conueniently performe Chriſtian duties, and betake our ſelues to a godly life, when theſe troubles are a little ouer; as for example, that wee may better ſerue God, when as wee haue ſetled our worldly eſtate, and are freed from diſtractions which for want hereof, doe now diſturbe vs; when wee haue gotten ſuch a ſumme of money, ſuch a Farme or Lordſhip, attained to ſuch honour and preferment, or haue had the fruition of this or that pleaſure vpon which wee haue ſet our hearts; let vs know that all theſe are but friuolous excuſes, like vnto theirs who being inuited to the mariage Supper of the Kings Sonne refuſed to come, which will in no caſe be accepted of God as ſufficient when he calleth vs to account, ſeeing they only diſcouer our doting loue on worldly vanities and our vtter neglect of ſpirituall and heauenly things. Let vs conſider that it is a great indignity, to conſecrate vnto the World our chiefe ſtrength and prime ſeruice, and to deſtinate vnto God the after-leauings, of which alſo wee are vncertaine, whether wee ſhall performe them or no; that it is great folly and want of judgement to prouide, firſt temporary neceſſaries, yea, ſuperfluities for our bodies, and leaue to a ſecond vncertaine care the eternall ſaluation of our ſoules. That we haue no aſſurance to liue till wee haue attained earthly things, and afterwards to prouide for heauenly; and therefore if wee thinke Heauen better than Earth and thoſe euerlaſting joyes, better than theſe momentany trifles, it were our wiſdome to preferre and ſeeke them in the firſt place, ſeeing wee cannot be aſſured of them both; and leauing off with Martha to be incumbred with worldly buſineſſe, to chooſe with Mary the better part. For though many things might be conuenient and worth our ſeeking, if we had a leaſe of life, and leiſure enough to looke after them, yet this one thing is neceſſary, that by feating and ſeruing the Lord, (which was the mayne end for which wee came into the World) we may glorifie him, and ſo gather aſſurance of our owne ſaluation.

Math.22.

Luke 10.41.

§.Sect. 4.
The fourth policy of the fleſh in mouing vs to reſt in faire promiſes and faint purpoſes.

Fourthly when as the fleſh cannot intice vs to vſe meere delayes, and doe juſt nothing; then it will perſwade vs to reſt in that which is as good as nothing, namely, faire promiſes and faint and falſe purpoſes and reſolutions, that wee will become new men out of hand: Eſpecially if wee haue our deſire in ſome things which we preſently hope for, as deliuerance from ſome affliction, freedome from ſome danger, or recouery from ſome ſickneſſe. But when wee haue gone thus far there it maketh vs to ſtay, by offering vnto vs, if wee will continue in our old courſes ſome acceſſe of worldly wealth, or the fruition of ſinfull pleaſures; and hauing preuailed ſo much with vs, it ſtayeth not here, but maketh vs ſoone after more carnall and wicked, more ſlothfull and negligent in performance of all duties than euer wee were before. With which deceit if wee would not be ouertaken; let vs know, that it were better not to promiſe at all, than hauing promiſed not to performe and pay, for what is this but to mocke God who will not be mocked? What is it but to dally and to play childes play with him, ſeeking to pleaſe him with complementall promiſes and faire words? That the Lord is not pleaſed by our making vowes and promiſes, if wee doe not alſo pay them, ſeeing we doe hereby but multiply our ſinnes, adding to our former euill courſes couenant-breaking and falſifying of our promiſes, euen with God himſelfe. Finally, that we doe but quench the good motions of the Spirit, when as we doe not nouriſh and cheriſh thoſe good purpoſes and reſolutions which hee ſuggeſteth vnto vs; but ſuffer our ſelues to be carried away by the contary motions of our ſinfull corruption. And therefore the Pſalmiſt biddeth vs vow and pay vnto the Lord our God; the which the Prophet Eſay

Pſal.76.11.
Prou.20.25.
Eſay 19.21.

maketh a note of the faithfull, and the contrary by the Wiſe man is ſaid to be a property of a foole. When (ſaith he) thou voweſt a vow vnto God, deferre not to pay it, for hee hath no pleaſure in fooles, pay that which thou haſt vowed.

Eccleſ.5.4.

§. Sect.5. The fift policy is to withdraw vs from more excellent duties by occaſion of doing of ſome leſſer good.

But if it cannot by all the former deuiſes and deceits perſwade vs to neglect ſuch duties as are truly good, then will it by the occaſion of doing ſome leſſer good, withdraw vs from that which is greater and more excellent, in which regard that good which is of a meane and inferiour nature becommeth vnto vs euill, becauſe it is abuſed by our fleſh to ſhoulder and thruſt out that which is of greater worth and waight. And thus it perſwadeth men to reade the Scriptures at home on the Lords Day, and in the meane time to neglect the publique aſſemblies, the miniſtery of the Word and Prayer with the Congregation; yea, ſometime to pray priuately in the Church, or to read ſome good Booke, that ſo they may neglect to joyne with the reſt of Gods people with vnanimity and vniformitie in the publique ſeruice of God. Thus it moueth men to preferre the outward reſt of the Sabbath before the workes of neceſſitie or mercy, which God requireth as ſpeciall parts of the ſanctification it; as helping the diſtreſſed, viſiting the ſicke, indeauouring to preuent ſome great and imminent danger, either to our Neighbours or our ſelues; the which was the ſin of the Hypocriticall Phariſes which our Sauiour ſo ſharply reprehendeth; teaching them and vs, that the Lord preferred mercy before ſacrifice; and ſuch was Martha her ſinne in neglecting Chriſts Sermon, the food of her ſoule, that ſhe might miniſter vnto him food for his body. For the preuenting of which deceit, we muſt labour to haue our judgements rightly informed out of Gods Word, not onely in the knowledge of that which is good, and to be embraced of vs, but alſo in what degree of goodneſſe euery Chriſtian duty is, that euery thing in due order may bee eſteemed, choſen and practiſed by vs; the higheſt degrees before the meane, and the meane before that which is inferiour vnto it: the duties which we owe vnto God in the ſame ranke and degree, before thoſe which wee owe to our Neighbour; the end, duty and ſeruice it ſelfe, before the meanes whereby wee are enabled thereunto. As for example, the obedience and ſeaſonable practice of the things we know, before hearing & reading, which are the meanes of knowledge, when as of neceſſity the one muſt giue place to the other. And the loue and true ſeruice of God, before the loue which we owe to our Neighbours, when as they will not ſtand together. And finally honeſt recreations which are the meanes whereby we may be the better fitted for the workes of our callings, muſt giue place vnto the duties themſelues, which they inable vs vnto.

Math 9.13.

Luke 10.40.

Deut.13.1,2.

§. Sect.6. The ſixt policy is to mooue vs to performe good duties vnſeaſonably.

Like vnto this is an other deceit of the fleſh, whereby it moueth vs to do that good which we reſolue to doe, vnſeaſonably, and to our great hinderance in our courſe of godlines: as when, to diſtract vs in prayer, it putteth into our minds good meditations and profitable inſtructions, which wee haue formerly heard and learned; or, to hinder vs from hearing the Word, it cauſeth vs to thinke of ſome dutie or worke of mercy which is not pertinent to the preſent purpoſe; or, to keepe vs from ſanctifying the Sabbath, and conſecrating it wholy, as an holy reſt vnto God, it moueth vs to thinke vpon the duties of our particular callings and of prouiding for our Children and Families. Now the meanes to fruſtrate this policy is wiſely to diſcerne it, and to obſerue & ſet a watch ouer our hearts, that they may ſeriouſly and onely intend the well performing of thoſe duties about which we are employed, that ſo wee may doe them with all our might: for as the Prouerbe is, He that hunteth after two Hares at once ſhall catch neither; and as nature intendeth not many things at once, ſo neither doth grace; becauſe the vertue and powers either of body or minde, being diſtracted by diuers objects, doe (like the Riuer diuided into many ſtreames) but weakly performe their functions and operations, and being vnited, are much more ſtrong and actiue.

§. Sect.7. The ſeuenth policy is to moue vs to neglect ſome preſent good, vpon pretence of doing ſome greater good afterwards.

And not vnlike to the former is that other deceit whereby it moueth vs to neglect the doing of ſome preſent good vpon the pretence of doing ſome other and greater good afterwards, whereby it not onely defeateth our preſent good purpoſe, but commonly doth alſo withdraw vs from doing that future good for the performance whereof the other was neglected. And thus when we are purpoſed to pray vnto God, it perſwadeth vs to delayes, vnder this colour that wee may afterwards performe this duty more effectually when wee are not ſo dull and heauy, ſo troubled with diſtractions, nor ſo aſſaulted with temptations. And thus generally it diſſwadeth vs from performing any ſeruice vnto God, pretending that wee may haue afterwards better meanes and fitter opportunity, and ſo may do it in ſuch a manner as may be more acceptable vnto God. And thus alſo it moueth vs to neglect the workes of mercy all our life long, pretending that we may doe them much more amply and liberally by our laſt will, which taketh not effect till after death. For the defeating of which policy let vs know, that wee cannot performe ſeruice vnto God till he calleth and enableth vs by his Spirit thereunto, and that we are called when the Lord offers meanes and opportunitie; which if we neglect, wee know not whether hee will afterwards honour vs ſo much as to appoint vs to theſe holy ſeruices which wee haue careleſly and cauſleſly omitted. Let vs remember, that the time preſent is ours, and therefore at our pleaſure to bee vſed for all good purpoſes; but the time to come is out of our reach, and we know not whether we ſhall catch hold of it yea or no. That it is better to doe a certaine good, though not ſo great and excellent, than to neglect it, in hope of doing that which is vncertaine, though in it owne nature more eminent and commendable. Finally, conſider, that if we vſe well the time preſent for doing God that ſeruice which we are able, hee will with the inlarging of our deſires, inlarge alſo our meanes and opportunity of doing greater good in the time to come.

CHAP. XVII.

Of the policies which the fleſh vſeth to interrupt vs in the doing of good duties, and to alienate our hearts from them.

§. Sect. 1. How the Fleſh interpoſeth when we are exerciſed in doing good duties.

AND thus the fleſh hindereth vs from the performance of all good duties. In the performance of them it dealeth alſo no leſſe deceitfully, and that either to interrupt and diſtract vs, that wee may doe them onely formally and to no purpoſe, or elſe ſo to corrupt and poyſon our beſt graces and moſt vertuous actions, that they may become vnprofitable, yea, hurtfull vnto vs. For the former, when we endeauour to ſeeke the Lord in his holy Ordinances, and ſet our ſelues to performe the pious duties of his ſeruice, if it cannot by the former deceipts wholy hinder vs from doing of them, it will (like Dauids falſe friend) accompany vs to the Houſe of God, as though it likewiſe were delighted in theſe holy exerciſes; but to no other end, than that it may fruſtrate and defeat our holy deſires. For when we labour to heare Gods Word, to call vpon his Name, or ſing his prayſes, this ſinne that hangeth on vs and preſſeth vs downe, doth either make vs dull and drowſie, lumpiſh and heauy, ſo that wee cannot attend theſe holy exerciſes with any chearefulneſſe and alacrity of ſpirit, but offer vnto God dead and carrion-like Sacrifices, which hauing no heart nor life in them are loathſome vnto him: or elſe it worketh our minds to ſome carnall prejudice or diſlike of our teachers, or of ſome paſſages in his Sermon, whereby we are affected with choler and ſpleene towards him; or to thinke meanly and baſely of him in reſpect of ſome naturall infirmities or defects; or elſe becauſe of the mediocrity of his gifts: or it hangeth ſo heauily on vs that it maketh vs weary of theſe holy exerciſes before they be halfe ended. Or if none of theſe, yet it will neuer faile to diſtract our mindes with worldly cogitations & wandring thoughts, ſo as we cannot intend theſe religious duties, but performe them with the lips, eares, and outward man; but not with the heart; in ſhew and ceremony, but not in ſpirit and truth. And thus the fleſh like Iudas waiteth vpon vs that it may betray vs; it goeth with vs into Gods market, that it may hinder vs from buying any ſpirituall merchandize; it thruſteth in with vs into Gods armory, when as we go to furniſh our ſelues with ſpirituall weapons, that it may make vs neglect them and leaue them behind vs, or elſe ſo weaken vs that we cannot carry them with vs; it will like Huſhai force kindneſſe vpon vs, and by no perſwaſion wil ſtay behind vs; but it is to this end that by cunning policy it may fruſtrate our enterpriſes, & ſo betray vs into the hands of our enemies. For the defeating of which policy our beſt courſe is, to leaue behind our chiefe corruptions by renewing of our repentance, before we come to performe theſe holy exerciſes, and keepe vnder thoſe which we carry with vs, watching ouer them with all diligence, that they doe not diſtract nor hinder vs. To which end we muſt come vnto theſe holy duties with due preparation, and being come wee muſt meditate on Gods glorious preſence before whom we ſtand, we muſt with all diligence looke to our hearts, becauſe the Lord chiefly requireth them in all duties of his ſeruice; wee muſt thinke of the excellency, waight and fruit of theſe Religious exerciſes, that our hearts being inflamed with the loue of them, we may performe them with all cheerefulneſſe and delight. And finally, wee muſt continually craue the aſſiſtance of Gods gracious Spirit, that thereby wee may be in ſome good meaſure enabled to performe them ſo, as that they may be acceptable to God, and profitable for our owne ſaluation.

Heb.12.1.

§. Sect. 2. How the Fleſh corrupteth & poyſoneth our beſt duties.

Thus alſo when we haue in the regenerate part an earneſt deſire to embrace vertue, and to be inriched with ſauing graces, like a cunning Sorcereſſe it laboureth to infect them with the poyſon of corruption, and like a ſubtile Merchant it ſophiſticates theſe pure wares, and intermingleth with them the baſe refuſe of ſinfull vices, that they with the other may become vendible. Thus if wee bee deuout and earneſt in Religion, it ſeeketh to taint vs with wil-worſhip and ſuperſtition; if wee excell in knowledge, it laboureth to puffe vs vp with ſelfe-conceit, to contemne plaine truth, and curiouſly to affect nice and vnprofitable ſpeculations, and to deſpiſe others in compariſon of our ſelues whom wee thinke doe come ſhort of our meaſure. With our faith it intermingleth preſumption and carnall ſecurity; with our loue, luſt and jealouſie; with our zeale, raſhneſſe and corrupt anger; with our humility baſeneſſe; with our courage audaciouſneſſe; with our conſtancy, pertinacy and obſtinate inflexibleneſſe; and finally with all our graces and excellent vertues, pride and vaine glory, whereby wee ouer-weene them, or arrogate the prayſe of them; or magnifie our ſelues before others who haue not attained to our pitch and proportion. And thus this cunning Coyner embaſes the pure metall of grace and vertue, by mixing with it the Copper or rather droſſe of carnall corruptions, ſetting notwithſtanding vpon it vertues ſtampe and ſuperſcription, that ſo it may goe for currant with vs; and by mingling theſe poyſons with our wholeſome food, doth make it become vnto vs mortall and pernicious. For preuenting of which deceit we are often to examine our vertues, and to try if they bee not tainted and infected with the contagion of the next extremes, let vs often bring them to the touchſtone of Gods Truth, which is onely ſufficient to make vs diſcerne the differences betweene the pure gold of Gods graces, and the baſe metals of our owne corruptions; and let vs continually deſire the helpe of Gods holy Spirit, which is that heauenly fire, that can part and ſeuer the ſolid ſubſtance from the droſſe, purifying the one, and conſuming the other, and the pure gold from other baſe metals of any kind.

§. Sect. 3.
How the Fleſh perſwadeth vs to abate of our zeale, and to intermit vertuous actions for a while.

The third and laſt kind of policies which the fleſh vſeth are thoſe, whereby it ſeeketh to alienate our hearts and affections from imbracing and practiſing of holy vertues and Chriſtian actions. And firſt of all, if it cannot perſwade vs wholy to forſake them, and at once to deſiſt from the exerciſe of them, then it will allure vs to abate our feruour and zeale in piety; to intermit all vertuous actions for a little while, and not to fall altogether, but in ſome degrees from our former ſincerity, either pretending that if we goe more ſlowly, we ſhall goe more ſurely, or that we are more zealous than needs, ſeeing with farre leſſe ſtrictneſſe in our courſes we may attaine vnto happineſſe; or elſe though vpon ſome occaſions wee ſlaken our pace in the wayes of godlineſſe for a while, we may hereafter make more ſpeed and eaſily recouer and redeeme our loſt time, by our future diligence. With which deceit that we may not be ouertaken, let vs conſider that there is no ſtanding ſtill in the Chriſtian courſe, ſeeing he who doth not daily goe forward in it will queſtionleſſe goe backward; and what then can become of them who are in the way of declination and backſliding? That if we giue way to our ſpiritual enemies for a time, and be perſwaded to lay aſide our Chriſtian armour, they will giue vnto vs deadly wounds before we ſhall be able to put it on againe, and that wee may much more eaſily keepe them out of the gates of our City, than driue them backe when they are once entred. Let vs know that if we ſlacken our hold, wee ſhall hardly recouer it in our fall; and that we may be as deſperately endangered by a lingring conſumption of grace and goodneſſe, as by a feuer of Apoſtaſie. Let vs remember that if our heate come once to luke-warmeneſſe, it will within a while turne to key-coldneſſe; and that if the Deuill & our owne corruption can but a little while diſacquaint our hearts from God and his wayes, they will not leaue till they haue made them meere ſtrangers, if they haue a little looſened them from him they will with much more eaſe pul them quite aſunder. And therefore let vs carefully watch ouer our ſelues, that there be no declination in grace nor the leaſt backſliding from our former ſincerity, but forgetting that which is behind, let vs reach vnto thoſe things which are before, and preſſe hard towards the marke, for the price of the high calling of God in Chriſt Ieſus. For if we ſlacken our pace in the waies of godlineſſe, and ſit ſtill, though but a little while, we ſhall grow ſo ſtiffe and ſore, that wee ſhall haue little deſire to goe on in our journey. And by our negligence wee ſhall looſe our ſweet communion with God, the light of his countenance, the ſenſe of his loue, and joy and comfort of his Spirit, which are our chiefe encouragements that make vs goe on in the way of godlineſſe. Of the liuely feeling whereof when wee are depriued, we ſhall either diſconſolately ſit downe and looſe our Crowne, or faintly proceed with much weakneſſe and wearineſſe.

*Phil.*3.13,14.

§. Sect. 4.
How the fleſh perſwadeth vs to reſt in that which we haue already done or ſuffered.

Another deceipt like vnto this, whereby the fleſh allureth vs to deſiſt from vertuous actions, is to make vs to reſt in that which wee haue already either done or ſuffered, as being aboundantly ſufficient for our ſaluation. Which that wee may defeate, let vs conſider, that though it were true, yet it is of no force to make vs leaue off or intermit our vertuous actions. For what ingratitude and groſſe negligence were this in a ſeruant, who hauing done a little worke would loyter and ſurceaſe his paines, becauſe hee is aſſured that his Lord is ſo bountifull, that he would not hold backe any part of his wages? And how much more in vs ſeeing the riches of our reward is ſo ineſtimable and permanent, that wee haue juſt cauſe to thinke our whole life, which is but ſhort and momentanie to bee too too little (though wee could attaine to the age of Methuſelah) if it were ſoly imployed in glorifying our gracious God by our faithfull ſeruice, which if wee doe not, but content our ſelues onely with that which ſtandeth vpon the neceſſitie of our ſaluation we plainely ſhew, that all we haue done is but falſe and counterfeit obedience, ſeeing it did ſpring and flow only from fooliſh ſelfe-loue, and not from the ſincere loue of God. Fooliſh I ſay becauſe it ſhall ſurely bee fruſtrate of its end, or though it ſhould not, yet of that meaſure of glory which thoſe who are wiſe will labour after: for according to that meaſure of grace we haue receiued, and obedience which we haue performed, we ſhall haue our portion and proportion in that heauenly happineſſe. But bee it that thou art not ſo ambitious of bleſſedneſſe, but that the leaſt part and loweſt place will well content thee, conſider in the next place, that in this life wee are neuer ſo rich in grace & the fruits of obedience, that wee may now giue ouer and ſpend vpon the ſtocke, vnleſſe wee meane to be bankerupts in goodneſſe; for if there bee not a growth there will bee a decreaſe, if not a progreſſe, then a regreſſe in the wayes of godlineſſe, and when wee neglect the ſeruice of God, then doe wee begin to ſerue the Diuell, the world and our owne fleſh. Beſides, true ſauing grace is not like the Moone ſometime in the full and ſometime in the waine, but like the light of the morning which ſtill increaſeth till it be perfect day; It is alwayes in the growth vntill wee come vnto a perfect age in Chriſt, which perfection we ſhall not attaine vnto till wee haue layed downe theſe bodies of fleſh. And that which a while groweth and then ſtandeth at a ſtay, was but a falſe conception, and like an Embrio in the wombe, which though it may delude a woman with a deceiuing hope, yet this ioy will bring bitter ſorrow without all comfort in the end. Againe conſider, that all Gods promiſes are made to thoſe alone who continue conſtant in their faith and obedience to the end. Hee that indureth to the end ſhall be ſaued; and be faithfull vnto the death and I will giue thee the crowne of life; and to him that ouercommeth I will grant to ſit with mee in my throne &c. And as the tree falleth ſo ſhall it lye. And therefore our former graces and good workes ſhould not make vs ſlothfull & ſluggiſh for the time to come, but much more painefull and diligent in imbracing and practiſing them, ſeeing if we now deſiſt we ſhall ſurely looſe all our former labour. Finally what ſouldiour will thus fooliſhly reaſon; I haue fought long and indured many brunts in the battell, and now I will take my eaſe, becauſe I haue almoſt obtained the victory? What traueller will ſit downe in the middeſt of his iourney, becauſe hee hath gone farre and taken much paines, ſeeing all his labour is loſt if he come not to the end? And who running in a race wil giue ouer before he come to the goale, excuſing himſelfe that hee hath runne well in the beginning, becauſe hee is ſure to looſe the garland with all his former paines? Yea rather becauſe they haue begunne wel they wil continue till by their conſtant labours they haue obtained their reward. And therefore let vs not bee leſſe wiſe or induſtrious for the aſſured gayning of heauenly and euerlaſting happineſſe, than wee are for the momentany and vncertaine poſſeſſion of earthly trifles; but after wee haue done much good, let vs ſtill hold on to doe more, for bleſſed is the ſeruant (not who hath done well in former times but) who when his maſter commeth ſhall be found ſo doing.

Pro.4.18.

Phil.1.6.

Mat.24.13.

Apoc.2.10. & 3.21.

Eccleſ.11.3.

Mat.24.46.

CHAP. XVIII.

Of certaine aduantages which the fleſh hath againſt vs, in the ſpirituall Conflict.

§. Sect.1. That this enemy the fleſh hath great aduantages againſt vs; becauſe it dwelleth within vs.

HAuing diſcouered the dangerouſneſſe of this enemie the fleſh in its owne nature, it now followeth according to our order propounded, that wee further conſider that this perill is much intended and increaſed, in reſpect of diuers aduantages which it hath againſt vs in the ſpirituall Conflict. And theſe are principally two; the firſt is, that this enemy is not farre off, whereby wee might haue leyſure and opportunitie of fitting and preparing our ſelues againſt the Conflict, before he could approach vnto vs, but dwelleth with vs, yea in vs. Hee is not onely neere at hand, and (as it were) in the Suburbs, cloſe vnto the gate of our ſoules, but lodgeth euen within the walles of the Citie, not in the out-parts and backe lanes, but keepeth ſtrong poſſeſſion in the chiefe forts and caſtles of our minds and wils, our hearts and affections, where our chiefe ſtrength and treaſure lyeth. And (as one ſaith) wee beare our ſnare with vs, and carry our enemy about vs whitherſoeuer wee goe. The which danger is much aggrauated in that he doth not profeſſe his enmity, but is in outward ſhew a familiar friend who eateth, drinketh and ſleepeth with vs; it maketh ſhew of loue, but indeede mortally hateth vs, it is like an helper, but is in truth our greateſt Aduerſarie, and like Sanballat and Tobiah it offereth his paines in building the wals of our Citie, which may repulſe forraigne forces, when as it intendeth nothing but our ruine and to betray vs into the power of outward enemies. For no ſooner doth Sathan and the world beſiege and aſſault vs with their tentations, but preſently it ioyneth with them, and being acquainted with all our counſailes, it reuealeth vnto them our ſecrets, euen our hidden thoughts and vnknowne deſires; and like a wicked Dalilah, hauing by treacherous flattery vndermined vs, it diſcouereth to theſe curſed Philiſtims where our chiefe ſtrength lyeth. Yea it ſecretly openeth the gates of our hearts, and not onely letteth in Ipſi geſtamus laqueum noſtrum, nobiſcum circumferimus inimicum Bernard. de Quadrageſ. ſerm.5.

Hic eſt qui manus noſtras proprio cingulo alligat, & baculo noſtro nos cadit. Bernard.ibid.

Grande quidem periculum eſt & gravis lucta aduerſus domeſticum hoſtem &c. Bernard.de Quadri.ſerm. 5.

*Luk.*4.13.

in all their forces, but as ſoone as they are entred, ioyneth with them, and laying violent hands on the ſpirituall man, it laboureth all it may to captiuate and deſtroy him. And therefore the wilie red Dragon neuer maketh warre againſt vs, vntill he bee aſſured firſt of theſe inbred trayters and carnall aydes; And as one ſaith, it is his policie to binde vs alwayes with our owne girdle, and to ouercome and beate vs with our owne ſtaffe. Yea not onely doth the fleſh dwell and coinhabite with vs, but it alſo adhereth and inſeparably cleaueth vnto vs, as being a part, and the greater part of our ſelues. Whereby the dangerouſneſſe of this enemy appeareth, for the warre which it maketh againſt the new aud ſpirituall man, is not onely ciuill and domeſticall (which notwithſtanding is much more perilous and terrible than that which is forraigne) but without any metaphor, properly, and truely inteſtine, and (as it were) in our own bowels. Beſides this combate betweene them is fought in a place of great diſaduantage, namely this world where the worſer part hath many friends and ſtrong aydes, euen Millions of wicked men and whole legions of Diuels, and contrariwiſe the better part hath few friends and many enemies. Great ſurely (ſaith one) is the danger, and the conflict ſore and grieuous againſt an enemie ſo domeſticke, eſpecially ſeeing wee are ſtrangers and hee a Citizen; hee inhabiteth his owne countrey, and we here are exiles and ſtrangers. Yea in truth this warre is more inteſtine than that which was betweene Rebecca her twins. For not onely doth here one perſon fight againſt another, nor (as ſome would haue it) the body againſt the ſoule of the ſame man, nor yet one faculty alone againſt another of a different nature, the ſenſitiue againſt the reaſonable, and the will and affections againſt the judgement and conſcience; but alſo the ſelfe ſame faculties againſt themſelues, reaſon againſt reaſon, will againſt will, the ſame affection againſt the ſame, loue againſt loue, feare againſt feare, and hope againſt hope. In which reſpect this fight with our fleſh is much more dangerous than our fight with Sathan himſelfe; for though hee bee ſometime yea often neere vs, yet not alwayes, and when he is neereſt hee is not alike neere as our owne fleſh, which adhereth to euery part and faculty of body and ſoule. Though he caſteth into our hearts and minds the fiery darts of his tentations, yet if wee catch them vpon, and quench them with the ſhield of faith they will not hurt vs. Yea though he buckle and cloſe with vs, yet if the Spirit of God dwelling in vs reſiſt this foule ſpirit, he will flie away at leſt for a ſeaſon, and we ſhall be rid of his noyſome company: but our fleſh and carnall corruptions inſeparably cleaue vnto vs, and though they be neuer ſo often ouercome, by faſting, prayer, watchings and ſuch like ſpirituall exerciſes, yet as long as we liue, we cannot be quite rid of them, nor wholy ſnbdue them, and annihilate their ſtrength, but after they ſeeme to bee withered they will againe flouriſh, after they are weakened they will recouer ſtrength, after they ſeeme to languiſh with age, they will regaine their youthfull vigour; yea when in outward ſhew they appeare mortified and quite dead, they will againe reuiue and ſtanding ſtoutly in their ſtrength they will re-enforce the fight againſt vs.

§. Sect.2. That the dangerouſneſſe of this enemie is much increaſed by reaſon of this cohabitation.

From whence it may plainely appeare, how exceeding dangerous the fleſh with the luſts thereof are vnto vs, ſeeing they are enemies not onely ſtrong and ſubtile, but alwayes hard at hand, not onely beſieging and beſetting vs, but euen dwelling with and in vs. Whereby they haue no ſmall aduantage againſt vs, for neuer leauing but adhering and cleauing vnto vs in all places and at all times, they are ready to watch all occaſions and to take all opportunities of doing vs miſchiefe, laying trappes and ſnares for vs in all our enterpriſes. For doe we vndertake the performance of holy & religious duties? Why then they dogge and follow vs to the exerciſes, and diſtract vs with worldly cogitations and wandring thoughts, and oppreſſe our minds with dulneſſe, drowſineſſe and carnall wearineſſe. Are wee imployed in the duties of our callings? They will make vs negligent and lazie, and carry vs away with carnall pleaſures, or ſo wholy and earneſtly intent on them, that we ſhall ſpare no time for Gods ſeruice nor for the inriching of our ſoules with ſpirituall treaſures. Doe we eate and drinke to relieue and ſuſtaine our bodies? They are ready to make our tables ſnares, turning ſufficiencie into ſuperfluitie, and neceſſary foode into exceſſe and belly-cheare, ſurfetting and drunkenneſſe, whereby the ſoule and ſpirits are ſo oppreſſed, that they are vtterly vnfit for any Chriſtian duties. Doe we intend to refreſh our ſelues with honeſt recreations? They do attend and waite on vs, mouing vs to conſume a great part of our time in them, which ſhould be allotted to better exerciſes, and euen to ſpend our ſtrength and ſpirits in the immoderate vſe of them, wherby in ſtead of being refreſhed and cheared, wee are diſabled and made vtterly vnfit for the duties of Chriſtianitie and of onr callings, and are ſo wholy taken vp in the meanes, that wee neglect the maine ends for which wee vſe them. Yea doe wee after our labours betake our ſelues to our reſt? When wee locke our chamber doores, wee cannot ſhut out theſe enemies, but whether wee will or no, they will be our bed-fellowes, and are alwayes ready at our lying downe to diſtract vs from any good meditations or ſerious examination of what wee haue done or omitted the day paſt, to fill our minds with vaine dreames and wicked imaginations, and to oppreſſe nature, in ſtead of refreſhing it, whileſt wee giue our ſelues to too much dowſineſſe. And thus theſe cowards ſticke not to ſtrike vs euen when we are downe, and if wee ſtand vpon our watch and guard when wee are waking, to giue vs deadly wounds when wee are aſleepe, neuer ſuſpecting any danger.

§. Sect. 3. The meanes of preuenting the former danger, is to ſtand vpon our guard and to pray the Lord to watch ouer vs.

1.Tim.4.5.

Now if wee would bee ſecured againſt that dangerous aduantage which the fleſh hath againſt vs, the beſt way is, not to bee ſecure, but continually to ſtand vpon our guard, and as the Apoſtle exhorteth Timothy, to watch in all things, that wee bee not circumuented by this enemy, who is alwayes preſent with vs to take all opportunities of working our deſtruction. For who walking among ſnares or ſcorpions would not carefully looke to euery ſtep? What man carrying a ſerpent in his boſome will not vſe his beſt heedfulneſſe to preſerue himſelfe from ſtinging? Who being among the thickeſt of knowne theeues, will not looke to his purſe, and haue alwayes an eye to his choyſeſt iewels, that he be not robbed by them? What Citizens hauing their mighty and malicious enemies, not onely beſieging them in the ſuburbs, but euen entred into the Citie, and alwayes ready in armes to ſurprize them, will lye ſnorting in ſecuritie and not carefully ſtand vpon their watch and guard? Yea, who hauing a cruell and malicious enemy lodging in his owne heart, and alwayes ready to pry into all his thoughts, words, and actions that he may take all opportunities to circumuent and hurt him, would not be moued hereby to hearken vnto the Wiſemans counſel, and keepe his heart with all diligence, that ſo hee might defeate this enemy, and bee preſerued from euill in the middeſt of theſe dangers? And yet this is not inough if wee goe no further; for wee muſt not onely watch, but pray alſo, if wee would bee freed from theſe tentations. Neither is our care and prouidence ſufficient to keepe vs in the middeſt of theſe dangers, ſeeing if wee ſometime bee awake, wee bee at other times aſleepe; if now wee keepe a narrow watch, ſoone after we will be ſecure and retchleſſe, and therefore wee muſt pray the keeper of Iſrael; who neither ſlumbreth nor ſleepeth, to watch ouer vs and to preſerue vs from theſe perilous and peſtilent enemies, and of him wee muſt beg with Dauid, not onely that hee will ſet a watch before our mouthes and keepe the doore of our lips, but alſo ouer our works and wayes, yea euen the ſecret thoughts of our hearts, that they may not bee tainted and corrupted, ſubdued and led captiue vnto ſinne by this ſinnefull fleſh, which adhereth vnto vs and dwelleth in vs.

Pro.4.23.

Pſal.121.4.

Pſal.141.3.

§. Sect. 4. The ſecond aduantage which the fleſh hath is that it is indefatigable and neuer wearied.

The ſecond aduantage which the fleſh hath againſt vs, is that whereas we are faint and ſoone wearied in this ſpirituall conflict, the fleſh vſing herein a naturall motion, is altogether indefatigable and neuer wearied; whereof it is that it is ſo impudently importunate, that though it hath many repulſes yet it will take no deniall, though in the conflict it bee often beaten backe and put to flight; yet it will neuer quite leaue the field; but vnite its ſcattered forces, and receiuing new aydes and encouragements from the Diuel and the World, it will afreſh aſſault vs and renew the fight; herein reſembling an hunger-ſtarued dogge who will by no meanes leaue the houſe where he hath often beene relieued, but no ſooner is beaten out of one doore, than he re-entreth into another. So one ſaith, that the fleſh rageth with furious ſtrength, and neuer reſteth from the warre; the ſucceſſe whereof is very doubtfull, for ſometime the fleſh is ſubdued by the ſpirit, and ſometime againe the ſpirit vnwillingly followeth the fleſh, and although it deſireth that which is better, yet it doth that which it hateth, &c. For the fleſh is ruled by no words, it is broken and weakened with no labours, nor yet bowed or ſoftned with any length of time; but alwayes with blind eyes haſteneth againſt our liues and (like him poſſeſſed with the legion) it luſteth to bee on the ſteepe mountaines and craggy rockes; and if ſometime it bee forced for a while to giue place to the feare of God, painefull labours, and diuine oracles, yet againe like a plant bended downe by the hands of the gardiner, it returneth to its peruerſe faultineſſe. Yea oftentimes the more theſe fleſhly luſts are reſiſted, the more enraged and violent for the time they grow, and the meanes and medicines which God hath appointed to cure them make the diſeaſe but the more deſperate. An example whereof wee haue in thoſe heathen Princes of which the Pſalmiſt ſpeaketh, who when Chriſt by his word and ſpirit would raigne ouer them, vnite all their forces and rebell againſt him ſaying, let vs breake his bonds in ſunder, and caſt away his cords from vs. So the Apoſtle confeſſeth, that the more he charged the Law vpon his ſinnefull luſts, the more they rebelled, and tooke occaſion by the Commandement to worke in him all manner of concupiſcence. Wherein theſe lawleſſe luſts may be fitly likned vnto lime which is kindled and inflamed by water, wherewith all other fires are quenched, and do reſemble their Lord and leader the Diuel, who the more hee is croſſed of his ends, the more he rageth; and are fitly by the Prophet compared to a raging Sea, which the more the tide and current is croſſed and oppoſed by the winde, the more tempeſtuous it waxeth, Nazianzen. de anima ſua calamitate. pag. 934.

Pſal.2.3.

Rom.7.8.

1.Pet.5.8.9.

Eſa.57.20.

waxeth, ſwallowing and deuouring all that is in the way, with his loftie waues and ſurging billowes.

§. Sect. 5. Of the means to fruſtrate the former aduantages.

Now if wee would not haue theſe aduantages which the fleſh hath againſt vs pernitious to our ſoules, let vs labour that as it is neuer weary in fighting againſt vs, ſo we alſo may not be weary and faint in this conflict; but let vs with vndaunted courage, not only ſuſtaine the aſſaults of this enemy, but alſo prouoke and ſet vpon him with all his ſinfull luſts, that wee may mortifie and ſubdue them, though wee cannot wholy expell them and driue them out. For if our ſinfull fleſh be neuer weary in running ſuch courſes as will bring vs to deſtruction, let vs bee neuer weary in ſtopping and oppoſing it, and contrariwiſe in running the Chriſtian race which will bring vs to ſaluation. If it be neuer weary of tripping at our heeles, that wee may fall, and in clinging vnto vs as a heauy burthen, that it may ſlacken our pace, ſtay vs in our courſe, and ſo make vs looſe our crowne; let vs neuer be weary in looking warily to our footing that we may not ſlip nor ſlide, or being fallen that wee may ſpeedily riſe againe by vnfained repentance, nor yet let vs thinke any paines too much that wee may ſhake off this waight of corruption, and this ſinne that doth ſo eaſily beſet vs, that wee may runne with patience the race that is ſet before vs. Heb.12,1. To which end let vs firſt conſider, that if we will take this paines, wee ſhall in the end bee aſſured of victory; the which may well put courage into vs, and make vs hold out in this conflict, for if the fleſh is not wearied in this fight after many wounds and foyles, though in the end it bee ſure of a ſhamefull ouerthrow, much leſſe let vs faint who are aſſured in the end to obtaine a ioyfull victory. 1.Cor.15,58. Secondly, let vs meditate on the riches of the crowne; and of the gloriousneſſe of the tryumph, which wee ſhall enioy after wee haue ſuffered a little while the paines of this ſpirituall warfare; and when we are weary in running the Chriſtian race, let vs comfort and refreſh our ſelues by hauing continually in our eye the goale and garland, imitating and looking vnto Ieſus the authour and finiſher of our Faith, who for the ioy that was ſet before him deſpiſed all the toyle and trouble which hee found in the way. Heb.12,2. And finally let vs being weake and faint in our ſelues, pray continually vnto God for the aſſiſtance of his holy Spirit to ſtrengthen vs in this conflict, and to renew and repaire our wearied, fainting and decayed graces, that ſo receiuing new life, vigour and ſtrength from him, we may thereby be enabled to hold out vnto the end; let vs when wee are tyred craue this holy annoynting which will ſo ſupple and ſoften our ſtiffe ioynts and weary limmes, that wee ſhall bee able to continue in the Chriſtian race, till being come to the goale wee ſhall obtaine the garland. Neither let this diſcourage vs, that the more ſharply vve deale vvith the fleſh, the more it is inraged; for it is but like the fury of an enemy, who hath receiued a mortall wound, vvhich if for the preſent it bee reſiſted, the blaze of the choller quickly goeth out, and fainting in his ſtrength hee will fall at our feet. It is but like the reluctation and reſiſtance of a baſe minded ſlaue, who by a few and ſmall ſtrips, is ſo inraged that hee is ready to catch his maſter by the throate; but if he be throughly hampred and ſoundly beaten, hee will fall downe at his feete and beare what ſtripes he pleaſeth to giue him without reſiſtance. And therefore let vs make this vſe of the rage of the fleſh, to be moued thereby to vnite our forces and redouble our blowes, and then though it make neuer ſo many gallant brauadoes, it will quickly yeeld and wee ſhall bee ſure of an happy victory.

The end of the firſt Booke.

THE CHRISTIAN WARFARE.

The fourth Part.

INTREATING OF THE CONFLICT IT SELFE, BETWEENE THE FLESH and the SPIRIT, and of the meanes whereby wee may get the victorie.

The ſecond Booke.

CHAP. I.

That there is a combate in euery true Christian betweene the Fleſh and the Spirit.

§.Sect.1. Teſtimonies f Scripture o proue that there is this nflict in erie man that is rege- nerate.

NOw hauing ſhewed the nature of our enemie, how dangerous hee is, and how wee may bee armed and prepared to withſtand his aſſaults and obtaine the victory: we are to intreate of the combate and conflict it ſelfe. And firſt we will ſhew, that there is in the faithfull ſuch a combate and conflict indeede and truth, although worldly and carnall men who neuer found it in themſelues are ready to think it to be but a meere conceit. The which will appeare by plaine teſtimonies of Scripture, for the Apoſtle telleth vs, that the fleſh luſteth againſt the ſpirit, and the ſpirit againſt the fleſh, and that theſe are contrary the one to the other, ſo that wee cannot doe the things we would. Where by fleſh and ſpirit (as I haue proued) we cannot vnderſtand the body and ſoule, but the part regenerate and vnregenerate, the corruption of nature and the qualitie of holineſſe in euery faculty and power of them both. So in his owne example he ſheweth the practicke and experience of this truth in the ſeuenth chapter of the Romanes, for he profeſſeth that he could not doe the good he would, nor leaue vndone the euill hee would not, that hee was delighted in the law of God in the inner man, but at the ſame time found another law in his members rebelling and making warre againſt the law of his minde, and bringing him into captiuitie to the law of ſinne which was in his members; and plainely ſaith that when he was thus led captiue vnto ſinne, it was no more he that did it, but the ſinne, that is, the ſinnefull corruption that dwelled in him.

Gal.5.17.

Rom.7.19.22. & 23.

§.Sect. 2. That the Apoſtle in the ſeuenth of the Romans ſpeaketh of this conflict in himſelfe as he was regenerate.

Arminius in Rom.7.

Now that the Apoſtle did not ſpeake this of himſelfe as he was vnregenerate, as ſome affirme, nor as hee was vnder the law, as others would haue it, in his ſtate of humiliation and preparation to his conuerſion, and ſo conſequently not of the conflict betweene the fleſh and the ſpirit, but betweene the conſcience and the corrupt will; it may eaſily appeare by the Scripture it ſelfe, for the Apoſtle doth not write in the preterperfect-tenſe, what hee had beene in time paſt, but in the preſent-tenſe, as his ſtate was when he wrote this Epiſtle. And beſides, the things which hee ſpeaketh of himſelfe doe plainely euince this, which cannot be truely attributed to a man vnregenerate, or vnder the law, and onely in his preparation to his regeneration; but are proper vnto them who are conuerted and in part ſanctified. For firſt hee alloweth not the euill hee doth, and conſenteth vnto the law that it was good, and therefore his conſcience and judgement were in part inlightened and rectified, hee willeth the good hee did not, and the euill which hee did, that hee nilleth, and therefore his will was in part regenerate; he hateth the euill he doth, and delighteth in the law of God after the

the inner man, and therefore his affections were in part ſanctified; hee did not the euill which was committed, but ſinne that dwelled in him, and there is a ſore conflict betweene the law of his minde and of his members, which was nothing elſe but the combate betweene the fleſh and the ſpirit, and therefore in reſpect of his whole man he was in part regenerate. Finally hee deſireth earneſtly to bee deliuered from the bondage of corruption, and profeſſeth, that with his minde hee ſerued the law of God, though his fleſh ſerued the law of ſinne, and therefore he was not the ſlaue of ſinne and Sathan, as all are who are vnregenerate and vnder the law; but the ſeruant of God, and a ſubject of the Kingdome of Ieſus Chriſt. And thus Auſtine, vpon his ſecond and ſounder thoughts, reuoking his former errour, expoundeth this place; I thought (ſaith hee) that theſe things (to wit) I am carnall, ſold vnder ſinne, and led captiue vnto the law of ſinne by the law of my members, could not bee truely ſpoken of any, but of ſuch as are ſo inthralled of their carnall concupiſcence, that they did whatſoeuer it compelled them, which to conceiue of the Apoſtle were meere madneſſe ſeeing in many of the Saints, the ſpirit ſo luſteth againſt the fleſh, that it cannot thus preuaile. But afterwards I gaue way to others of better iudgement, or rather to the truth it ſelfe, plainly perceiuing in theſe words of the Apoſtle the groaning and complaint of the Saints ſtriuing againſt their carnall concupiſcence, &c. Whereof it came to paſſe that I vnderſtood this place as it was vnderſtood by Hilarie, Gregory, Ambroſe, and the reſt of the holy and famous Doctors of the Church, who doe all thinke that the Apoſtle did couragiouſly fight againſt his carnal concupiſence, which he had in him though he deſired to bee freed from it, and that in theſe words hee profeſſeth this his conflict. And a little after; neither can well any mans ſpirit luſt againſt his fleſh, vnleſſe the ſpirit of Chriſt dwelled in him. So Gregory Nazianzen acknowledgeth and deploreth this conflict which hee felt in himſelfe betweene the fleſh and the ſpirit. Neither am I (ſaith hee) wholy minde or ſpirit, that is, pure nature, nor on the other ſide wholy fleſh, that is, nature corrupted, but compoſed of both, I am an other thing and yet both of them. Whereof it is, that I continually ſuffer perpetuall tumults of warre, the fleſh and the ſpirit encamping againſt one another. I am the image of God, and am drawne into vice, though I ſtruggle and ſtriue againſt it, the worſe part wickedly conflicting againſt the better; ſo as not without great labour and daily wraſtling, the hand and helpe of God aſſiſting mee, I flee and reſiſt vice. And theſe thus conflicting the one with the other, the eye of God beholding them from Heauen hath ayded the ſpirit, ſubdued the tumult and rage of the troubleſome fleſh, and ſtilled the ſwelling waues of carnall perturbations. And ſo alſo the fleſh rageth with furious ſtrength, and neuer reſteth from making cruell warre; and though there may be ſometime an intermiſſion, yet there is neuer a diſmiſſion from the fight.

Ego enim putabam dici iſta non poſſe, niſi de ijs, quos ita haberet carnis concupiſcentia ſubiugatos, ut facerent quicquid illa compelleret. Auguſt. contra Iulian Pelagian lib. 6. cap. 11. Col. 1135. T. 7. Vide etiam retract. lib. 1. cap. 23. & lib. 2. cap. 1. Tom. 1.

Greg. Nazian. de anime ſue calamitat. pag. 93. 934.

§. Sect. 3. That all the regenerate haue feeling and experience of this conflict.

And theſe teſtimonies out of the Scriptures and Fathers may bee ſufficient to conuince the carnall, and vnregenerate, who hauing no feeling of this conflict in themſelues, becauſe they are wholy fleſh, doe imagine that it is not in any other. For as for thoſe who are in part regenerate, and yet haue the old man and the reliques of ſinfull corruption dwelling and remaining in them, they will eaſily acknowledge this truth, euen out of their owne feeling and experience, though no other teſtimony or reaſon could bee alleadged. Neither is it poſſible that this mortall combate ſhould be fought in any, but that they muſt eaſily feele the terrible encounters and cruell blowes giuen on either ſide. Not betweene diuers faculties, as the conſcience and the will, the minde and iudgement againſt the affections and the ſenſuall faculties (the which is alſo in the vnregenerate;) but the ſelfe-ſame faculties, as they are regenerate, fighting againſt themſelues as they are vnregenerate; as errour againſt truth, and truth againſt errour in the ſame mind and vnderſtanding, faith againſt doubting, and doubting againſt faith in the ſame heart; willing againſt nilling, and nilling againſt willing, about the chuſing and refuſing of good and euill in the ſame will; the loue of God conflicting and combating with the loue of the world, the feare of God with the feare of men, affiance in God with diffidence in him, and confidence in the creatures; hope of heauenly happineſſe, with hope of enioying earthly vanities, as alſo with preſumption and deſpaire; and contrariwiſe, obedience againſt diſobedience and rebellion in the ſame deſires and actions; as we ſhall more fully and plainly ſhew in the following diſcourſe. All which doth plainely proue that their whole man is diuided, and part-takings in all their faculties and powers of body and minde, the one adhering and cleauing to God, the other drawing to Sathan and the world, the which is more feelingly diſcerned and experimentally felt by euery true Chriſtian, than it can bee demonſtrated and euidenced by any mans writing.

§. Sect. 4. The contrarie effects which the Chriſtian feeleth in himſelfe, do proue plainely that this conflict is in them.

Finally the contrary effects which euery Chriſtian may obſerue in himſelfe, doe ſufficiently argue and demonſtrate, that there are contrary cauſes in him from which they proceede, and (as it were) many ſouldiers of contrary factions, led vnder their Captaines the fleſh and ſpirit, which like mortall enemies continually make warre the one against the other. For who findeth not, after his regeneration and conuerſion, himſelfe to be as a Kingdome diuided, and that as in his ſpirituall and renewed part, he hath a great deſire to ſerue his Lord and Redeemer, and taketh delight in his Lawes, preferring them with Dauid before all manner of riches; ſo in his fleſhly part and the old man that he is inclinable vnto the ſeruice of ſinne and Sathan for the baſe hire of worldly vanities? that as in the one hee affecteth and loueth Piety and Purity, Righteouſneſſe, Mercy and Holineſſe of conuerſation; ſo in the other he is tranſported with ſelfe-loue, and is much addicted to the pleaſures of ſin? As in the one he beleeueth God and the truth of his promiſes and threatnings, truſteth in his word, power and prouidence, loueth & feareth him aboue all things; ſo in the other hee is ſubiect to doubting and infidelity, to diſtruſt in God and affiance in the creatures, to the loue of earthly things and the immoderate feare of man. Finally, as in the one he aſpireth vnto immortality and euerlaſting happineſſe, and hauing his conuerſation in Heauen, mindeth not earthly things, but chiefly ſeeketh after thoſe things which are aboue; ſo in the other he lyeth grouelling on the earth, walloweth himſelfe in the puddle of ſenſuall pleaſures, and vnlawfull luſts, meditateth and thinketh onely on momentany riches and mutable preferments, or the meanes whereby he may compaſſe them, neuer ſeeing, ſeeking nor regarding, that heauenly happineſſe and waight of eternall glory prepared for the faithfull. And from this contrariety in affection and diſpoſition, the Christian may diſcerne the like contrariety in all his actions which ariſe and ſpring from them. For one while the Spirit lifteth him aloft in heauenly meditations, and another while the fleſh pulleth downe his thoughts, and fixeth them vpon earthly vanities; now with poſting ſpeed hee runneth in the wayes of God, and ſayleth with full ſayles, hauing the wind and tide to helpe him forward; and ſoone after the fleſh diuerteth him into the by-paths of ſin, or maketh him ſit ſtill, or to returne into his old courſes, or tripping at his heeles cauſeth him to fall, or ſo fettereth his feet and preſſeth him downe, like a heauy burthen, that (like them troubled with the Ephialtes or the night Mare) though he hath a great deſire to run a pace, yet can he ſcarce ſtirre, but he runneth, as it were, vp a ſteepe Hill, and ſayles againſt the wind and tide. Finally now he loueth God and is rauiſhed with delight when hee enjoyeth his preſence in his Courts, and feeleth ſweet communion and fellowſhip with him to his ineſtimable joy and comfort, and this maketh him to contemne the World, and to take all his pleaſure in ſpiritual and heauenly things: and by and by the World catcheth him in her bird-lime of carnall delights and fettereth him in her golden chaines, ſo as hee is made negligent in Gods ſeruice, and therefore either omitteth it altogether, or elſe performeth it with drowſie dulneſſe, ſenſleſſe deadneſſe, and carnall wearineſſe, whereof it is that he can take no manner of comfort and contentment in it. Yea, rather he ſeeth Gods angry countenance frowning vpon him in the abuſe of his holy Ordinances, and being terrified therewith, hee goeth away diſcontented and diſmayed.

pſal.119.

pheſ.5.9.

Phil.3.20.

§. Sect. 5. The point proued by *Gal.*5.19.

And of theſe contrary effects and fruits of the Spirit in the ſame Christian the Apoſtle plainly ſpeaketh, *Gal.*5.19. Now (ſaith hee) the workes of the fleſh are manifeſt, which are theſe Adultery, Fornication, Vncleanneſſe, Laſciuiouſneſſe, Idolatry, Witchcraft, Hatred, Variance, Emulation, Wrath, Strife, Seditions, Hereſies, Enuyings, Murthers, Drunkennes, Reuilings and ſuch like. For the ſeeds of all theſe grieuous ſins lie lurking in our corrupt fleſh, and though they be ſo nipped and ſuppreſſed by the contrary motions of the ſpirit, that they can neuer come to full ripeneſſe, yet doe they often appeare to the beſt Christians in their firſt motions and ſuggeſtions. So contrariwiſe hee ſaith, that the fruit of the Spirit is loue, ioy, peace, long-ſuffering, gentleneſſe, goodneſſe, faith, meekneſſe and temperance. To which purpoſe, Hierome ſaith, Whatſoeuer we ſpeake, doe or thinke, is ſowed in two grounds the fleſh and the Spirit; if the things be good which iſſue from the mouth, hand and heart, they are ſowne in ſpirit, and ſhall bring forth abundant fruit to eternall life; if they be euill they are taken from the field of the fleſh, and will bring forth vnto vs the fruit of corruption.

Verſe 21.

Omne quod loquimur, agimus, cogitamus in duobus ſeminatur agris, carne & ſpiritu, &c. Hyeronym. in *Gal.*6.

Chap. II.

What the Conflict betweene the Fleſh and the Spirit is, and what are the cauſes of it.

§. Sect. 1. The conflict betweene the fleſh and the ſpirit deſcribed.

BY this it appeareth that there is a Combate in euery Christian betweene theſe enemies: now in the next place let vs conſider what it is; and the cauſes of it. Where there needeth no curious definition, ſeeing the very name doth ſufficiently expreſſe the nature of it; For it is nothing elſe but a continuall conflict betweene the vnregenerate part the fleſh, with the luſts thereof, and the part regenerate, the ſpirit, with all the holy qualities, graces and motions thereof, by reaſon of their contrarietie in nature and conjunction in place, whereby they mutually luſt and ſtriue one againſt the other, the fleſh willing and imbracing that euil which the ſpirit nilleth and ha-hateth, and nilling and ſhunning that good which it willeth and affecteth, and contrariwiſe. For in this conflict they mutually aſſault one another with vnreconciliable enmity and immediate and vnplacable contrariety, ſo that as the one getteth, the other looſeth, as the one gathereth ſtrength, the other is weakened; and looke how much this preuayleth and triumpheth, ſo much his enemy and oppoſite is foyled and dejected. Like herein to a paire of ſcales, in which the riſing of the one is alwayes joyned with the going downe of the other; or like the ſpleene in the body, the ſwelling whereof is joyned with the conſumption of the other parts. Yea alike, nay, much more contrary than light and darkneſſe, heate and colde, the one whereof increaſeth, as the other decreaſeth.

§. Sect.2.
Of the firſt & chiefe cauſe of the conflict which is Gods will for the manifeſtation of his owne glory.

The cauſes of this Conflict are either efficient and more remote, or formall and eſſentiall; the latter is plainly expreſſed, the former implyed in the deſcription of this conflict, namely, Gods will appointing this fight; and to this purpoſe, not perfecting our ſanctification in this life, but in part regenerating, and in part leauing vs vnregenerate. Yea, but why did not the Lord, who through his infinite wiſdome was able to haue re-created and renewed vs at once by his ſole Word as he did firſt create and make vs, perfect this worke of regeneration, repleniſh vs with abundance of his Spirit and ſanctifying graces, and quite aboliſh the fleſh with the luſts thereof? I anſwere though there were no other reaſon but the good pleaſure of his moſt wiſe will, it were ſufficient to ſatisfie vs, for hee beſt knoweth what to giue, and when to giue it, what meaſure of his grace is fitteſt for him to beſtow, and the moſt ſeaſonable time for vs to receiue it. But yet diuers reaſons may be yeelded, why the Lord ſuffereth the fleſh, and the ſinfull luſts thereof, ſtill in ſome meaſure and degree to remaine in vs, and to fight with and aſſault the ſpirituall part, all which may be reduced to two heads; firſt becauſe this courſe is moſt profitable, and ſecondly moſt fitting and ſeaſonable. It is moſt profitable both for the ſetting forth of Gods glory, and the aduancing and furthering of our own good. It doth more manifeſt and magnifie the glory of God, for the weaker we are in our regenerate part, and the ſtronger the fleſh is with all other the enemies of our ſaluation, the more clearely his wiſdome and power ſhineth and appeareth, which ſo ſtrengtheneth this weake part, that it is able to ſtand in the day of battaile; yea, that it obtaineth a full and finall victory, and putteth all its mighty enemies to flight. Whereas if wee were perfectly regenerate and the fleſh vtterly vanquiſhed and aboliſhed, it were no great wonder, that wee were not ouercome, if wee had no enemy or but a weake one to ſet vpon vs. And this moued the Lord to ſuffer the pricke in the fleſh to moleſt the Apoſtle, and the meſſenger of Sathan to buffet him, notwithſtanding hee ſo earneſtly prayed to bee deliuered from them, that the al-ſufficiency of his grace aſſiſting him might appeare, and his power might be glorioully manifeſted in his weakneſſe and infirmity. Secondly, God is more glorified, when as wee ſeeing the ſtrength of our fleſh and naturall corruptions, and our frailty and weakneſſe, wants and many infirmities of our ſpirituall part, are mooued hereby to attribute the whole glory & prayſe of our ſaluation to the alone mercy of God, both in reſpect of the beginning, and perfecting thereof, and vtterly denying our ſelues and our owne righteouſneſſe, doe wholy reſt and rely vpon the perfect and al-ſufficient righteouſneſſe and obedience of his Sonne Ieſus Chriſt: where as if there were in vs perfection in holineſſe, we would hardly acknowledge the Lord to be all in all in the worke of our ſaluation, but would be ready to attribute ſomthing vnto our ſelues. Thirdly, the wiſdome and power of God is more manifeſted and glorified, when as hee doth his great workes by contrary meanes and cauſes which in their owne nature would rather hinder them. And therefore he will haue vs blind, that wee may ſee, fooliſh that wee may become wiſe, poore that he may inrich vs, weake that we may be ſtrong, imperfect in our grace, that wee may be endued with more perfection, and finally, will haue vs paſſe by the gates of Hell, that we may come to a greater meaſure of heauenly happineſſe. It were not ſo much, if the Lord ſhould perfectly ſanctifie vs, and preſently giue vs eternall glory; but to giue this bleſſedneſſe to vs who haue ſo many wants and corruptions, yea, to make our imperfections to ſerue as meanes for the increaſing of our happineſſe, this doth exceedingly magnifie his power and wiſdome. Fourthly, we are hereby made more thankfull vnto the Lord, and more chearefull in ſinging to his prayſe, when we are ſupported and ſaued notwithſtanding our imperfections, than if he ſhould indue vs at the firſt with all perfection. For the more ſenſible wee are of Gods benefits, the better wee eſteeme them, and ſo conſequently receiue them with greater thankfulneſſe: but the more wee haue found the want of them, and how little wee haue deſerued them, the more ſenſibly doe wee apprehend their excellency when wee enjoy them; the more wee haue groaned and laboured vnder the burthen of our infirmities and corruptions, the more wee rejoyce when wee are freed from them; and our reſtoring out of a ſtate of imperfection vnto perfection, is much more acceptable, than if we had

2.Cor.12.9.

Iohn 9.41.
1.Cor.3.18.
Apoc.3.18.
2.Cor.12,9.

had alwayes beene preſerued in it. Euen as it giues vs more contentment hauing beene poore to be made, than to be borne rich; to enjoy our liberty after thraldome, than if we had neuer beene imbondaged; and makes vs more thankfull to our benefactors, when as by them we haue beene adopted, than when we haue been borne to a goodly inheritance. And ſo in the like caſe we are more thankfull vnto God for freeing vs from our ſinfull corruptions, by little and little, than if at the firſt he had made vs pure and perfect; and for giuing vs victory ouer the fleſh after a painfull and doubtfull conflict, than if we had neuer bin aſſaulted, but had alwayes enjoyed a ſecure peace. And this wee may ſee in the example of the Apoſtle, who hauing through the violence of the fleſh bin led captiue vnto ſin, and thereby forced lamentably to cry out, O wretched man that I am, who ſhall deliuer mee from the body of this death? Doth preſently in the ſenſe of Gods mercy which had deliuered him, burſt forth into thankfull prayſes; I thanke God through Ieſus Chriſt my Lord. Laſtly, hereby wee more glorifie God when we are aſſured by our growth in ſanctification, and in all ſauing graces of the Spirit, by which we are inabled to reſiſt the fleſh and the luſts thereof, that they are the free gifts of God, and that he beginneth, continueth and increaſeth them in vs, which if they were alwayes from the beginning perfect in vs, we would thinke them to be ſome naturall faculties and abilities, and not giuen vs of God. And theſe are the reaſons which doe chiefly reſpect the glory of God.

Rom.7.24,25.

¶.*Sect.*3. That this conflict is profitable for the faithfull, to traine them vp in humility.

Secondly, the Lord ſuffereth the fleſh ſtill to dwell in vs and daily to aſſault vs, becauſe it is profitable for our owne good, and the furthering and aſſuring of our heauenly happineſſe. Firſt, becauſe it is a notable meanes to traine vs vp in humility, which is a grace moſt acceptable vnto God, and to ſubdue our pride and all vain-glorious conceit, which aboue all other vices is moſt odious and hatefull, when as we ſee and conſider what a miſerable vaſtation and ſpoyle of all thoſe graces and excellent endowments which we had by creation, ſinne hath made in vs; how it hath poyſoned, corrupted and diſabled all the powers and faculties of our ſoules and bodies; how it hath made vs vnfit for any good thing, and prone vnto all euill; and that theſe ſtaines and blots of ſinfull corruption doe in a great part remayne in vs after our regeneration, ſo aſſaulting vs with all malice and fury, darkning our vnderſtandings, wounding our conſciences, peruerting our wils, hardening our hearts, & corrupting & diſordering al our affections, that were we not continually aſſiſted and vpheld by the ſpeciall grace of the Almighty God, wee ſhould ſinke and fall in the conflict, and be made an eaſie prey to our malicious enemies: this may well ſubdue our lofty and proud conceits, and make vs pull downe with ſhame our Peacocks plumes, when as wee looke to the foule feet of our filthy corruptions, ſee the ruines remayning of Gods goodly building, and how all our naturall forces do quite faile vs & forſake vs, when as we moſt relie on them; yea, when as we ſee euen after regeneration ſuch reliques of corruption and rebellion remayning in vs, that did not the Lord continually ſend vnto vs freſh aydes of renued graces we were not able to ſtand nor maintaine the fight againſt our carnall corruptions. In conſideration whereof we are juſtly moued to humble our ſelues and to giue all glory vnto God, who worketh in vs the will and the deed, and not onely beginneth, but continueth and perfecteth the worke of our ſaluation; and finally to acknowledge, that what grace or ſpirituall ſtrength we haue more than others, we haue it from God and not from our ſelues, and therefore that wee haue no cauſe to boaſt of it ſeeing it is receiued, but muſt returne God the glory of his owne gifts. And thus doth the Lord in his infinite power and wiſdome turne euill into good, and like the moſt skilfull Phyſitian doth make our ſins (as it were the fleſh of the Viper) a moſt wholeſome preſeruatiue and cordiall for the diſpelling from our hearts more dangerous poyſons.

1.Cor.4.7.

¶.Sect. 4. This conflict is effectuall to make vs deny our ſelues.

Secondly, whereas wee cannot be Chriſts Diſciples vnleſſe wee deny our ſelues, nor be partakers of his righteouſneſſe for our juſtification, vnleſſe we renounce our owne; nothing can be more effectuall to this purpoſe, than the ſight and ſenſe of our owne imperfections and coruptions; for when we plainly diſcerne, that there is nothing in our ſelues to reſt vpon for the ſatisfying of Gods Iuſtice, this will make vs to flee vnto Chriſt, to hunger and thirſt after his perfect and al-ſufficient righteouſneſſe, and to make vs wholy to relie vpon him for our juſtification and ſaluation. Which when we doe, we may be more ſecure and better aſſured of heauenly happineſſe, than if wee were as perfect in our owne inherent righteouſneſſe, as our firſt Parents in the ſtate of innocency, ſeeing they fell into ſin and miſery through the ſtrength of Sathans temptations, but wee cannot; ſo long as we wholy reſt vpon Chriſt, and are vpheld by his omnipotency. And as hereby our ſelues haue great aſſurance of our happy condition; ſo doe we more glorifie our Lord and Redeemer, ſeeing wee acknowledge the al-ſufficiency of his grace, and yeeld vnto him the whole glory of our ſaluation.

¶.*Sect.*5. By this conflict we are moued the, more to hate ſinne.

Thirdly, we are hereby moued to abhor ſin which God ſo hateth, with greater deteſtation, when as by our owne experience wee find and feele the venome and poyſon of it working in our ſelues, and to bewayle and forſake it with more earneſt endeauour, when we diſcerne and ſee what miſerable effects it produceth, and what bitter and curſed fruits it bringeth forth in vs. As namely that it hath corrupted our whole nature, diſabled all our ſtrength, defaced in vs Gods glorious image, incenſed his wrath againſt vs, made vs ſubiect to the curſe of the lawe, depriued vs of the glory of God, and made vs guiltie of eternall damnation. From all which miſeries nothing could free vs, vnleſſe the ſonne of God had dyed for vs, and waſhed vs from the guilt & puniſhment of all our ſinnes in his moſt precious blood. All which plainely diſcouereth the haynouſnes and tyranny of ſinne, and maketh vs thankfull vnto our Sauiour who hath freed vs from it.

§. Sect. 6. We are moued hereby to flie vnto God by frequent and feruent prayers, Fourthly, by the ſight and ſenſe of theſe ſinful corruptions ſtill dwelling in vs, we are occaſioned to flee oftener vnto God by feruent prayers, acknowledging and bewailing them before the throne of grace, earneſtly crauing the remiſſion of them, and the aſſiſtance of Gods grace and holy Spirit, whereby wee may bee inabled to mortifie our corruptions, and to flee all ſinne for the time to come; and to returne vnto him prayſe and thankeſgiuing when we haue receiued theſe graces from him. Fiftly, whereas there is nothing more dangerous vnto vs than ſloth and ſecurity, we haue through theſe corruptions dwelling in vs the benefit of ſpirituall exerciſe, whileſt wee make warre againſt them, withſtand their aſſaults, prepare our ſelues for the conflict, watch ouer our owne hearts that wee be not ſurpriſed at vnawares with their deceitfull policies, mortifie and ſubdue them with the Sword of the Spirit, exerciſe the ſpirituall graces receiued from God, and our ſelues in all holy duties which God requireth for the obtaining of victory; by which they are more and more confirmed and encreaſed. So alſo hereby we haue great cauſe to be more carefull and watchfull ouer our hearts and wayes, ſeeing we haue dwelling in vs a ſecret enemy who watcheth all opportunities to ſupplant and betray vs into the hands of Sathan and the World; the which ſhould make vs worke out our ſaluation with feare and trembling; and whileſt we ſtand to take heed of falling; this ſhould cauſe vs to ſtand daily and hourely vpon our guard, and to keepe the the ſpirituall armour girded faſt vpon vs as the Apoſtle exhorteth vs.

Phil.2.12. 1.Cor.12.13. Epheſ.6.10.

§. Sect. 7. It ſerueth to worke in vs patience and contentment. Lament.3.39.

Sixtly, it may ſerue to make vs goe on in our pilgrimage with contentment, and to beare all afflictions which are laid vpon vs with meekneſſe and patience, not onely becauſe we haue deſerued them by this ſin that dwelleth in vs, according to that in the Lamentations; Wherefore doth a liuing man complaine, ſeeing he ſuffereth for his ſinnes? but alſo becauſe wee know and haue experience that theſe corrections are neceſſary to bridle and mortifie the fleſh with the luſts thereof, and ſerue as drawing ſalues to draw out the core of corruptions, as the launcher and ſearing Iron to helpe and heale our impoſtumations of ſinne, as bitter potions to purge away our corrupt humours, and as ſalt to ſeaſon vs, that wee may not be tainted and periſh in our fleſhly putrefaction; and to make vs more wiſe and wary, that wee may not nouriſh our enemy, but mortifie and crucifie it, ſeeing it is the chiefe author of all our calamities.

§. Sect. 8. By this conflict our hearts are weaned from the World.

Seuenthly, it is profitable for the weaning of our hearts and affections from the World, and to make vs long after our heauenly happineſſe, when as wee find our ſelues tyred and wearied in fighting, not onely with forraigne foes, but with theſe inteſtine and ſecret Traytours in our owne bowels; whereas if hauing gotten full conqueſt wee ſhould haue continuall peace and our victory crowned with earthly proſperity, we would neuer ſo much long after our heauenly happineſſe. And this chiefly made the Apoſtle to long after his diſſolution and to be with Chriſt, becauſe he found himſelfe ſo often foyled with this law of his members, and led away captiue by his ſinfull fleſh.

Phil.1.21. Rom.7.23.

Eighly, as it cauſeth vs to long after the crowne of victory, ſo it will make it, when we ſhal obtain it, much more glorious; for the Lord will haue vs firſt to fight and ouercome our ſpirituall enemies, and then he will reward vs with the crowne of victory; firſt he will haue our ſpirituall graces exerciſed and manifeſted in the conflict, and then being approued he will giue vs a proportion of glory according to the proportion of our graces. So our Sauiour promiſeth (not to the Souldiers which lie quietly in their Garriſon, aſſaulted with no enemy) but to them who fighting ouercome, that they ſhall ſit with him on his Throne, clothed with white rayment, and ſhall eate of the Tree of Life, which is in the middeſt of the Paradiſe of God. And this order Paul vſeth in laying hold on theſe bleſſed hopes, firſt to fight the combate, and then to receiue the crowne. I haue (ſaith he) fought a good fight, I haue finiſhed my courſe, I haue kept the faith; henceforth is laid vp for me a crowne of righteouſneſſe.

Apoc.2.& 3.

2.Tim.4.8.

§. Sect. 9. This conflict is ſutable for the time and place wherein we liue.

Laſtly, as it is profitable that theſe reliques of ſin ſhould remayne in vs, ſo alſo ſutable and ſeaſonable to the time and place wherein we liue. For it is appointed by God that wee ſhould not in this life attaine vnto perfection, but that we ſhould only labour after it, and attain vnto it in the life to come; that we ſhould, whileſt we be here, be in our nonage and come to our perfect age in Chriſt and our heauenly inheritance after wee are diſſolued and be with Chriſt. This World is appointed for our painfull pilgrimage, wherein we muſt toile and trauell, indure many miſeries and be indangered to the malice and furious aſſaults of our ſpirituall enemies, and it is not ſeaſonable to expect our reſt and joyes, vntill wee bee arriued ſafe in our owne Country. Finally, it is appointed of God to be the place of our Warfare, and therefore wee muſt not looke to haue our enemies quite expelled or vanquiſhed, but here wee muſt fight daily and approue our faith and Chriſtian valour to our chief Soueraigne; and then afterwards when by death we haue gotten a full and final conqueſt, we ſhall be crowned with the crowne of victory. Finally, it is not Gods pleaſure that we ſhould in this life attaine to our full ſtature and perfect meaſure of ſanctification and holineſſe, but that wee ſhould bee ſtill growing from one meaſure of grace to another, and by peece-meale conſume the body of ſin which hindreth our growth, vntill by death it be fully aboliſhed.

CHAP. III.

Of the formall and eſſentiall cauſes of this Conflict.

§. Sect. 1. That there was no conflict in vs in the time of innocencie.

WEE haue ſhewed the chiefe efficient cauſes of this conflict: let vs now conſider of thoſe cauſes which are formall and eſſencial; and becauſe contraries are beſt illuſtrated by their contraries, as heat by cold, darknes by light, and the miſeries of a dangerous warre, by the bleſſings and benefits of an happy peace; let vs conſider (that wee may reduce this diſcourſe ab ouo, euen the firſt principles and grounds) how that there was a time, when this conflict and ciuill broyles were not to be found in the little World of Man. The which was two-fold, the one was that truly golden Age, in which man created according to Gods owne Image, liued in the ſtate of innocency; when as there was a bleſſed peace and heauenly harmony betweene the body and the ſoule and all the faculties, powers and parts of them both. For the vnderſtanding being inlightened from God with heauenly wiſdome, did both know and obſerue the Law of Nature written in the heart; the which ſerued as a juſt rule, whereby it was directed in the knowledge of good and euill, truth and falſhood, right and wrong. Wherein the judgement being thorowly informed, the mind gaue vnto the wil true euidence and information, concerning all things preſented vnto it, the which it readily receiued, cheerefully imbracing what it approued, and refuſing and auoyding what it diſallowed. The affections alſo quietly and joyfully obeyed reaſon as their Lord and Soueraigne, like Souldiers following their Captaine; and as blind men doe their guides; and the body was both a fit & ready inſtrument vnto the ſoule for the executing of all good deſignes, and in all things like a faithfull ſeruant was ready at command. And thus whileſt the vnderſtanding and reaſon, placed as Gods Vice-roy in vs obeyed him as the ſupreame Soueraigne, the will was alſo ruled by reaſon, and the affections with all the parts of the body were ſubject vnto them both; and all conſpiring and agreeing together made a ſweet harmony, and like louing and wel-agreeing Subjects in a well ruled Common-wealth, they all ſtood firme in their vnited forces.

§. Sect. 2. How the cauſes and occaſions of this conflict were begun in vs.

But when Satan the arch-enemy of mankind, and chiefe authour of all diſcord and diſſention, ſaw and ſeeing enuied, our happy eſtate and condition, hee plotted all meanes whereby hee might worke our ruine. And perceiuing, that though our eſtate were ſtrong, yet it was mutable, wee being left of God to our owne free will, either to ſtand or fall, to retaine the good, or to chooſe the euill, he muſtereth together all his forces, and layeth ſiege to this wel-walled and ſtrong-manned City; againſt which hee could no more preuayle (than the Grecians at the ſiege of Troy) by powerfull violence and fierce aſſault, till with his Sinon-like or rather Serpentine ſubtilties, he had perſwaded vs vnder ſhew of loue and peace to put off our armour of created graces; and to pull downe with our own hands the walls of our defence. And then ſeeing vs thus weakened and diſarmed; and yet lying in the drunken and drowſie ſleepe of retchleſſe ſecurity, hee entreth in vpon vs, accompanied with a crew of helliſh Souldiers, the firſt and chiefe whereof were diſobedience, vnbeliefe in God, and credulity to the Deuill, damnable pride, enuy, diſcontent, aſpiring ambition, and vnthankfulneſſe. All which being let in by that breach which our free will abuſing its liberty had made in our ſoules, preſently they all fell to burning, ſacking and ſpoyling vs of all Gods rich graces, our created wiſedome and holineſſe, and ſurprize all our ſtrong holds, making themſelues conquerours of all our powers and parts, and euery one of this helliſh crew and ſinfull vices chuſing for their dwelling and poſſeſſion thoſe places and parts which they thought moſt fitting for them. And as Souldiers hauing ſacked a City, doe thruſt the Citizens out of their Habitations and euery one make choice of ſuch houſes as beſt pleaſe them: ſo theſe in like caſe. As for example ignorance, errour, curioſity and many thouſands of ſinfull imaginations, like the Iebuzites ſurprize and keepe the chiefe tower of the minde; worldlineſſe and prophaneſſe, ſubdue and hold reaſon in ſubjection; peruerſneſſe and rebellion ſurprize the will; but in the heart there are encamped (as it were in the chiefe market place of the City) ſuch a multitude of our helliſh enemies, as cannot either bee named or numbred, euen many legions of vnlawfull luſts, infidelity, wicked hopes, helliſh deſpaire, hatred of God, loue of the World, Pride, Diſobedience, Deceit, Cruelty, Ambition, Couetouſneſſe, Voluptuouſneſſe with the reſt. All which with innumerable others of this helliſh Army, being entred; did not vtterly raze downe this goodly built City, but onely killing and caſting out Gods graces which were the naturall inhabitants, they kept their holds and places for their owne vſe and dwelling. Neither were the ſubſtance of the ſoule or body, or the eſſentials, the powers, parts and faculties of them, loſt, annihilated or vtterly deſtroyed by the fall of our firſt parents (although their energy and vertue was greatly impaired, their edge blunted, and vigour deaded) but onely thoſe excellent qualities, and rich ornaments of heauenly wiſdome, holineſſe and righteouſneſſe, wherewith they were beautified after Gods owne Image, were quite taken away. The which (being as it were the ſtrong Garriſon which kept the City) were no ſooner expelled, but the ſinfull luſts triumphing in their victory, held all vnder their ſubjection to the Deuils vſe as their chiefe Soueraigne.

§. *Sect.*3.
No conflict betweene the Fleſh and the Spirit in the ſtate of corruption.

Now there was not in either of theſe eſtates this combate & conflict in vs betweene the fleſh and the ſpirit whereof we intreate; not in the ſtate of innocency, for then was there in vs a ſweet harmony, and conſent betweene all our powers and parts of ſoule & body, and there being no ſinfull luſt or vnruly paſſion in vs, but a great multitude of wel-agreeing graces, wee enjoyed a bleſſed peace. Nor in the ſtate of corruption was there any ſuch conflict, becauſe the ſtrong man Sathan poſſeſſing all, all that he poſſeſſed was in peace; onely (as it happeneth often among Souldiers of the ſame Band, who ſtriue one with another about the booty and prey) there was ſome contention betweene the Will and the Conſcience, and betweene one vnruly paſſion and another, but it was onely like thoſe hot contentions betweene the Ieſuites and the Prieſts, who much diſagreeing about profit and ſoueraignty one with another, yet all agreed and joyned together, as one man, like true Vaſſals, to doe all ſeruice to their Lord God the Pope, yea (as it may probably be ſuſpected) euen their quarrels and contentions were part of his ſeruice, and in their diſagreeing they yeelded obedience to their holy Father: for ſo in the like manner in the hotteſt contention betweene our ſinfull luſts, they yeelded their obedience to the Deuill as their chiefe Soueraigne, who if he ſaw by this ſtrife any diſaduantage ariſing to his helliſh Kingdome through this hot contention, was both able and ready to accord their differences (as the Pope did thoſe betweene the Prieſts and Ieſuites) and ſo to joyne them together like friends in doing him ſeruice.

§. *Sect.*4.
The peace of the vnregenerate more pernicious than the moſt dangerous warre.

But this helliſh peace was ten thouſand times more dangerous and pernicious to our poore ſoules and bodies, than the moſt cruell and perillous warre to the weakeſt enemy; and ſo much the rather becauſe wee had no apprehenſion of the danger, nor feeling of our owne miſery. Becauſe wee were borne the bond-ſlaues of the Deuill, and ſo ſtill brought vp in doing him ſeruice in the vnfruitfull workes of darkneſſe, for which we had onely the preſent pay of worldly vanities, though when wee had laboured moſt in his toyleſome workes wee were oftentimes coozened of our wages. Herein like vnto the Iſraelites vnder the Egyptian Pharaoh, who when they were beſt vſed, had but their Onions, Garlicke and Fleſh-pots, whereby onely they were but better enabled to doe their drudgery and work in their brick-kils; and ſometime in ſtead of theſe poore comforts, they had for all their labour, ſore beatings and cruell blowes; and yet being bred in this ſeruitude and knowing no better, they rather chuſe to returne vnto it againe, than to take any paines in going to the Land of promiſe. So and much worſe was our miſerable bondage to the Pharaoh of Hell, for at the beſt we had for all our drudgery, but the ſtinking Garlicke and Onions of worldly vanities, which hee gaue not for loue to vs, but in loue to himſelfe, giuing vs this food (as the Rider giueth prouender to his horſe) that wee might be the more hartened to doe him ſeruice. And out of his helliſh hatred and cruelty towards vs hee often with-held from thoſe who did him moſt faithfull ſeruice, this pay of earthly proſperity, and in ſtead thereof afflicted and miſuſed them with the blowes and ſtripes of miſery and affliction. Neuertheleſſe, being borne and inured to this helliſh thraldome (ſuch was the height of our miſery) wee deſired ſtill to liue and die in it, taking our whole delight, and placing our chiefe happineſſe in pleaſing our tyrannicall maſter by ſeruing him in the workes of darkneſſe, and doing all abhominable wickedneſſe; although wee were ſure after that we had beene toyled in his ſeruice and ſcorched in his brick-kils, we ſhould for the accompliſhment of our reward be caſt into the fire of Hell.

§. *Sect.*5.
Gods infinite loue in ſending his only

But when wee were in this deſperate condition, and now come to this height of miſery, that wee deſired ſtill to liue in it, and (like the Iſraelits with Moſes) would haue

onne to redeeme vs, made way for this ſpirituall conflict.

haue been angry with any who ſhould haue offered vnto vs meanes of deliuerance, becauſe not onely our other parts and faculties, but alſo our wils and hearts, our loue and liking, with all other our affections, were enthralled in this ſeruice, and voluntarily leauing their Lord and creatour, wholy adhered to Sathan and delighted to doe his will: euen then our gracious God, infinite in all mercy and goodneſſe, of his meere grace and free good will, ſent his onely ſonne into the world to redeeme vs with his precious death, to vanquiſh and ſubdue all the enemies of our ſaluation, and to ſet vs at liberty, who were embondaged, and ſo in loue with our thraldome, that wee did not ſo much as deſire to bee freed from it. Who hauing thus paide the price of our redemption, and prouided a ſoueraigne ſalue for all our ſores of ſinne, doth not ſo leaue vs (for then wee ſhould haue beene neuer the better) but applyeth the power and efficacy of his merits vnto vs, and (as it were with his owne hand) layeth the plaſter vpon our mortall wounds, whileſt by his word made effectuall by his Spirit, he maketh knowne vnto vs this excellent worke of our redemption, and the promiſes of grace and ſaluation made to all beleeuing and repentant ſinners, by which he begetteth this faith in vs, wherewith, as with an hand, wee lay hold on and apply vnto vs his righteouſneſſe, death and obedience for our juſtification and redemption, and ſo in reſpect of right wee are freed from our ſinnes, ſo as they cannot condemne vs, becauſe God in Chriſt hath forgiuen them, and alſo from the tyranny and thraldome of Sathan, death, hell, and condemnation, ſo as they ſhall neuer bee able to hurt vs or lay any thing to our charge. And not reſting here, our powerfull Sauiour ſendeth his ſpirit with many legions of his graces into our hearts, who pull vs out of the dominion of ſinne and Sathan, ſo as they cannot rule and raigne in vs as in times paſt; regenerate and purifie vs from the filth and corruption of ſin by the power of the ſame death which deliuered vs from the guilt and puniſhment due vnto it, and enabled vs to ſerue God in newneſſe of life, by applying likewiſe vnto vs the vertue of his reſurrection.

Rom. 8.1.33.

§. Sect. 6. Sanctification begun and not perfected is the formall cauſe of this conflict, firſt becauſe of the great contraſity betweene grace and corruption.

But this (as I haue before ſhewed) is onely begunne and not perfected and accompliſhed in this life; not for want of ſufficient vertue in Chriſts death and reſurrection, but through the weakeneſſe of our faith wee being but partly regenerate and partly vnregenerate, in part ſpirituall, and in part carnall. And that I may follow the ſimilitude, though the great tyrant Sathan bee thruſt from his throne, ſo as hee cannot any longer rule vs as a King, yet hee is not quite expelled out of our quarters, but ſtill hee moleſteth vs as an enemy, and though the legions of his luſts are beaten from the ſtrong holds, and driuen out of the market place and chiefe gate of the City, yet they lye lurking in the ſuburbs and ſecret corners; and no ſooner giue wee them through our retchleſneſſe the leaſt aduantage, but they ſteale through our ſleepy watch and guard, or cunningly thruſt in at ſome poſterne gate, and ſo aſſault vs with all violence and malice. So that there may bee two maine and eſſentiall cauſes giuen of this conflict betweene the ſpirit accompanied with Gods graces, and the fleſh attended with many ſinnefull luſts; the one is the antipathy and contrarietie which is betweene them, which is exceeding hoſtile and full of all enmity and oppoſition, as it may appeare if wee conſider the contrariety of their natures. For what is the ſpirit, I meane the created ſpirit infuſed into vs, but the quality of holineſſe and righteouſneſſe renewed according to Gods image? And what is the fleſh, but the defacing of this image, the depriuation of this originall righteouſneſſe, and the ſtaine of naturall corruption which hath ouer-ſpread and defiled all the powers and parts of our ſoules and bodies? ſo that the fleſh reſiſteth the ſpirit in a double oppoſition, both as it is a priuation and want of righteouſneſſe, and as it is a corruption making vs prone to all vnrighteouſneſſe. And therefore the contrarietie which is betweene them is as great and vnreconcilable as betweene light and darkeneſſe, health and ſickneſſe, heate and colde, good and euill, ſo that the proſpering of the one is the ruine of the other; the encreaſing of the one is the decreaſing of the other, and the ones preuayling and victory, is the others weakening and vtter ouerthrow.

§. Sect. 7. Secondly becauſe theſe enemies ſo contrarie and oppoſite dwell together.

The other is their cohabitation and dwelling together in the ſame place and ſubject, which miniſtreth vnto them mutually occaſion, and impoſeth a neceſſity of their continuall oppoſition, euen as when fire and water, heate and cold meete together, there can neuer bee any agreement, or ſo much as truce till the one of them haue gotten the vpper hand, and the other as much as lyeth in the power of the contrary quality, bee ſubdued and aboliſhed. Neither are wee ſo to conceiue it, as though theſe enemies ſo oppoſite dwelled in the ſame City, but in diuers holds, or in the ſame man in reſpect of his diuers parts, but euen (as it were) in the ſame houſe and chamber, in the ſame faculties and parts. More plainely, the fleſh doth not onely dwell in the body or inferiour and ſenſuall parts; and the ſpirit in the ſoule alone, or the intellectuall and reaſonable faculties; for ſo they might part their bounds and dominions, ſhut the doore againſt one another, and ſometime enjoy a peace or truce without the others moleſtation; but in the ſame vnderſtanding and will, body and affections, ſo that the whole ſoule in reſpect of its diuers faculties, is partly fleſh and partly ſpirit, and cannot bee deuided, but onely diſtinguiſhed, the vnderſtanding, will, affections and body being partly regenerate and partly vnregenerate, partly ſanctified by Gods ſpirit, and partly ſinnefull and corrupted with thoſe reliques of ſin remaining in them. For example, the image of God is in part renewed, and the image of ſinne and Sathan in part remaineth. As in the vnderſtanding ignorance is inchoatiuely diſpelled and driuen away, and the light of knowledge ſhineth in it, not perfectly, but ſtill the fogge and miſts of ignorance remaining, obſcure this light being wholy mingled with it. So the peruerſeneſſe and rebellion of the will is changed into loyalty and obedience, but yet imperfectly, and therefore the reliques of corruption remaining, the ſame will obeyeth and rebelleth, willeth and nilleth both good and euill; the affections which were corrupted and diſordered, are by the ſpirit ſanctified and reduced to order, yeelding their obedience to their ſoueraigne holy reaſon; but this ſanctification being but begunne and imperfect, the reliques of corruption doe ſtill remaine, ſo that the ſame man loueth and loatheth both ſpiritual and carnall things, truſteth and diſtruſteth God, and contrariwiſe diſtruſteth and truſteth in the creatures, hopeth and diſpaireth in Gods mercy, feareth God and immoderatly feareth man, humbleth himſelfe before God aſcribing vnto him the whole glory, and is puffed vp with pride, arrogating ſome part of that which is due vnto God onely, vnto himſelfe. So the ſame appetite being but in part ſanctified, is partly temperate and partly intemperate, partly ſober and partly addicted to exceſſe; and the ſame body in the like reſpect, is partly the inſtrument of righteouſneſſe vnto holineſſe, and partly the inſtrument of vnrighteouſneſſe vnto ſinne. In which reſpect the new man and regenerate part, may fitly bee compared to a child, which is perfect in all the parts of a man in the firſt houre he is borne, but yet little and weake in reſpect of his ſtrength and ſtature, notwithſtanding ſtill increaſing and growing till hee come to be a man of ripe and perfect age. And contrariwiſe the part vnregenerate is as fitly reſembled to an old man, worne out with age and decrepite, who alſo hath in him all the parts of a man, but yet weakened and enfeebled. Who, though hee hath a greater ſtature, yet is not much ſtronger than a childe; and though hee bee, yet herein is his diſaduantage, that whereas the other encreaſeth daily and waxeth ſtronger, hee decreaſeth and decayeth, waxing euery day more feeble than other, till at laſt by death all his ſtrength is wholy aboliſhed, ſo as now the weake childe being growne to mans age, may tryumph ouer him and trample on his graue.

§. Sect.8.
How ſuch contraries can dwel together and not aboliſh one an other.

Yea but how can ſuch mortall enemies and contraries ſo oppoſite, dwell together without the abolition and vtter deſtruction of the one partty, ſeeing they doe not onely like the Canaanits and Iſraelits dwell in the ſame land, or the Iſraelits and Iebuſits in the ſame City, but in the ſame man, and which is more, not in diuers, but euen in the very ſame part and faculty? To this I anſwere, that though theſe contraries cannot dwell together in their prime vigour and full ſtrength, and therefore in the ſtate of perfection, there could bee no conflict, becauſe there could bee no fleſh, nor yet in the ſtate of corruption, becauſe there could bee no ſpirit; yet they may, when their degrees are abated and their vigour and full ſtrength is ſomewhat blunted and deadded. In which reſpect this reſidence of the fleſh and ſpirit, is fitly compared to the reſidence of the light and darkeneſſe in the ayre, in the twilight or dawning of the day, when as there is not one part of the ayre darke and another light, but the whole ayre partly light and partly darke, the darkeneſſe and light being mingled together; or of heate and cold in the ſame luke-warme water, where they are not diuided in place, but the whole water is partly cold and partly hot; or of water and wine in the ſame veſſell, in which there is not one part wine and another water, but the whole mixture is partly water and partly wine; or of ſickneſſe and health in thoſe which wee call weake and ſickly, through ſome ſpice or reliques of an Ague or Feauer; of whom it cannot be ſaid, that he is ſicke in one part and ſound in another, but that he is partly healthy in his whole body, ſo farre forth as he is recouered, and partly ſicke ſo far forth as the reliques of his ſickneſſe remaine in him. In all which theſe contrary qualities doe not friendly conjoyne themſelues, nor agree one with another, neither doe they communicate their properties, vertues and contrary qualities to produce this mixture, but both of them ſtand ſtill in hoſtile termes in the ſame ſubject, labouring continually to get the victory, and wholly aboliſh his enemy and oppoſite.

Chap. IIII.

Of the Combate it ſelfe and the manner how it is fought in vs.

§. Sect.1.
When we are called by God to this conflict.

WEe haue ſhewed what are the cauſes of this conflict; and now we are in the next place to ſpeake of the combate it ſelfe, and of the manner

Rom.6.12.
2.Cor.4.4.
2.Tim.2.26.

Phil.3.

manner how it is fought in vs. To which purpoſe we are to know, that the acceptable time and day of ſaluation being come, when as the Lord is purpoſed to deliuer vs eternally out of the hands and power of ſinne and Sathan, raigning and ruling in our hearts as Kings, yea Gods, as the Scripture ſpeaketh; holding the whole man with all the powers and faculties of his ſoule and body in ſubjection to doe their will; that for the time which remaineth, we may bee his ſeruants and ſouldiers, to obey him in all things, and to make warre vnder his ſtandard, againſt the ſpirituall enemies of our ſaluation, it pleaſeth him by the miniſtry of his word, made effectuall by the operation of his ſpirit, to open our blinde eyes, that we may ſee and plainely diſcerne, that wretched bondage vnder ſinne and Sathan in which we liue, the innumerable miſeries into which it plungeth vs for this preſent life, and that helliſh condemnation and euerlaſting torments, which if we liue and die in this thraldome, doe attend vs in the life to come. Thereby is diſcouered vnto vs the tyranny of the Diuell, whereby hee raigneth and rageth in vs, working our hearts to his will, and inclyning vs to drudge in his ſeruice, for no other reward but the vncertaine pay of worldly vanities, which ſhall bee accompanied with endleſſe deſtruction; the vglineſſe and intolerable waight of ſinne which as an heauy burthen preſſeth vs downe to hell; the terrible wrath of God inflamed againſt vs by our ſinnes; and the curſe of the law ready to attach vs. Finally that our liues bee momentany and vncertaine, and therefore alſo the pleaſures of ſinne can be but alike vnſure and of ſhort continuance; but the life to come and both the pleaſures and ioyes, and the paines and torments of it are euerlaſting, and that there is no hope to enioy the one and eſcape the other if wee liue and dye in our preſent condition. And thus when by the miniſtery of the word wee are brought to a ſight and ſenſe of our damnable and wretched eſtate, our ſleeping conſciences are awakened, our hard and flintie hearts are throughly humbled and ſoftned, bruiſed and made contrite, ſo as our former carnall ſecuritie being ſhaken of, wee relent and mourne in the ſight of our ſinne and miſery. Being thus caſt downe and humbled, the Lord by the preaching of the Goſpell maketh knowne vnto vs his loue in Chriſt, the infiniteneſſe of his mercy and goodneſſe together with that ſingular pledge thereof his deare and onely ſonne, giuen to the death for our redemption; the ſweet promiſes of the Goſpell aſſuring all of the mercy and forgiueneſſe of their ſinnes, and deliuerance out of the hands of all our ſpirituall enemies whom Chriſt by his death hath vanquiſhed and ſubdued, and of eternall life and ſaluation of body and ſoule, if wee will lay hold vpon Chriſt and his righteouſneſſe by a liuing faith, and bring forth the fruits thereof by forſaking our ſinnes and turning vnto God by vnfained repentance. Which meanes of comming out of our preſent miſery and of attaining to a better eſtate, being made knowne vnto vs, wee begin to conceiue that there is ſome poſſibilitie of comming out of the thraldome of ſin and Sathan, and of attaining to ſaluation; the which inflameth our hearts with an earneſt deſire to come out of our bondage, and to this end, to bee made partakers of Chriſt and his righteouſneſſe, who alone can helpe vs, and a firme reſolution to deny our ſelues and all other meanes as vaine and vnprofitable, and to caſt our ſelues wholy vpon our Sauiour Chriſt for our iuſtification and ſaluation. From hence ariſeth a conſtant endeauour in the vſe of all good meanes to attaine vnto faith, whereby we may be aſſured of Chriſt and his benefits, and particularly apply them vnto our ſelues for our owne vſe, which being likewiſe wrought in vs by the ſweet and gracious promiſes of the Goſpell and we thereby perſwaded of the pardon our ſinnes, of Gods loue and our owne ſaluation, in the next place we deſire to haue our aſſurance confirmed more and more by a liuely ſenſe and feeling, and an experimentall knowledge that wee are by Chriſt our redeemer deliuered out of the hands of our ſpirituall enemies. To which end wee deſire the aſſiſtance of Gods grace and holy ſpirit, by which we may be actually deliuered out of the bondage of ſinne and Sathan, that they may no longer haue dominion ouer vs; and to find and feele the vertue and power of Chriſt Ieſus his death as effectuall for our ſanctification as our iuſtification, for the inriching vs with ſauing grace, as for the aſſuring vs of eternall glory, for the mortifying and ſubduing of the corruption of ſin, as for the freeing of vs from the guilt and puniſhment.

§. Sect. 2.
The ſecond ſummons to this conflict.

Which deſires are no ſooner wrought in vs by the miniſtery of the word, made effectuall by the inward operation of Gods ſpirit, but preſently the Lord, rich in mercy and goodneſſe, by the ſame meanes doth ſatisfie them, and ſendeth his ſpirit accompanied with a ſtrong army of ſanctifying graces to take poſſeſſion of vs for his vſe, to raigne and rule in vs, and to thruſt downe Sathan from his throne, and to depoſe him from his regencie or rather tyranny ouer vs; and to ſubdue, kill and mortifie all thoſe garriſons of ſinnefull luſts, ſo as they ſhall not bee able vnder their great Generall to rule and raigne in vs as they did in former times. For example he cauſeth knowledge, ſpirituall wiſedome, iudgement, diſcretion, holy reaſon and ſpirituall cogitations to enter into the head, and by ſtrong aſſault to encounter ignorance, curioſitie, carnall wiſedome, errour, raſh giddineſſe and carnall imagination; Chriſtian reſolution and holy obedience to enter the will, and to ſet vpon cowardly feare and vnconſtancy, vnflexible ſtubborneſſe and ſtiffe rebellion; faith and loue with innumerable numbers of holy affections to take poſſeſſion of the heart, and to ſubdue and vanquiſh infidelitie, ſelfe-loue and loue of the world, with thoſe many legions of vnlawfull luſts and vnruly paſſions which Sathan had placed in it; ſpirituall concupiſcence and holy deſires; temperance, ſobriety and chaſtity, to ſeate themſelues in the inferiour faculties and ſenſuall appetite, and to thruſt out, and to hold poſſeſſion againſt carnall concupiſcence, worldly luſts, intemperance, wantonneſſe and vncleanneſſe with the reſt of their oppoſites; Finally puritie and honour, to ſeaze vpon the body and all the members thereof, and to driue out and cleanſe it from all vncleanneſſe and noyſomneſſe, wherewith it had beene defiled like a filthy ſtye of impure beaſts, through the inhabitation and abuſe of ſinnefull luſts.

§. Sect. 3. The manner of the conflict it ſelfe.

Which royall and heauenly army of Gods ſauing graces, led vnder the conduct of his holy ſpirit, doe no ſooner enter the field and encounter their enemies, but preſently they put them to the worſe, and cauſing them to retire doe get the victory. Satan the ſtrong tyrant that held all in quiet poſſeſſion and ruled as he liſt, is put to flight, ſpoyled of his power and regency, and the Spirit of God ſeateth himſelfe vpon the throne, and the fleſh and the luſts thereof in the firſt conflict receiue ſuch deadly wounds, that they neuer recouer of them, but languiſh in a continuall conſumption till at laſt they bee wholy aboliſhed. And therefore being in the firſt battell thus weakened, foyled and diſcomfited, they haue neuer the courage afterwards in a martiall manner to proclaime warre againſt the ſpirit, and the army of Gods graces which doe accompany it, to bid them battell and to fight againſt them in a pitched field; but craftily and cunningly re-entrouping their ſcattered forces, they like the ſauadges or Iriſh kernes, will onely fight vpon aduantages, and therefore make ſecret ambuſcadoes, and hide themſelues (as it were) in the woods and thickets, from which they ſally out at vnawares, when wee are moſt ſecure, and ſo skirmiſhing with vs they ſometime wound and foyle vs and for a time cauſe vs to retire. And ſo otherwhiles they ſet out ſome booty of worldly profit or pleaſure, with which they allure vs to come, when we thinke not of it, within the danger of their ſhot; and ſometimes (as it were in the night) when wee are brought into a deepe ſleepe of retchleſſe ſecuritie, they make ſome inroads vpon vs, waſt and ſpoyle, and doe much miſchiefe, firing our hearts with vnlawfull luſts, corrupting or gagging the conſcience which as the centinell ſhould giue vs warning of their approach; wounding and miſleading the will vnto ſome peruerſneſſe, and carrying the members of the body as captiues vnto ſin. But when the Spirit taking notice of theſe conflicts riſeth vp to giue them battell, gathereth his ſcattered forces and entring the field ſoundeth the alarme to the fight, then the rebells quit their ſtandings and runne away; or yeeld themſelues as captiues to ſuffer the puniſhment which their rebellion hath deſerued. Howbeit they doe not long continue in ſubjection, being onely kept vnder by ſlauiſh feare, but vpon euery opportunitie they rebell againe, and giue freſh aſſaults to Gods graces in vs, though in the end they are aſſured of an vtter ouerthrow. Like herein vnto theeues and cutpurſes, who when they are apprehended and caſt into priſon, are onely reſtrained from their wicked courſes, but not reclaimed and amended; or vnto gally-ſlaues who are forced to labour at the command of their enemies, whileſt they are tyed in chaines and feele the ſmart of the whip, but no ſooner doe they breake looſe and make an eſcape, but they are ready to encounter with all fury the ſame perſons who not long ſince they ſo ſeruilely obeyed; or finally like vnto their father the diuell, who though hee be continually foyled and put to flight, yet is ſo wholy tranſported with his inueterate malice, that he continually oppoſeth God in all things, eſpecially in the ſaluation of his Elect, and maketh continuall warre againſt Michael the Arch-angell, or the Prince of Angels Ieſus Chriſt, and the army of his Saints, though he bee not able to preuaile againſt them.

§. Sect. 4. That this fight is not corporall but ſpirituall.

2.Cor.10.3.4.5.

Now this fight betweene theſe enemes is maintained on both ſides not by handy blowes, ſword and ſhield, pike and ſhot, for of the fight of the Spirit the Apoſtle ſaith, that though wee walke after the fleſh, yet wee doe not warre after the fleſh. (For the weapons of our warfare are not carnall, but mightie through God to the pulling downe of ſtrong holds) caſting downe imaginations, and euery high thing that exalteth it ſelfe againſt the knowledge of God, and bringing into captiuity euery thought to the obedience of Chriſt. And hauing in a readineſſe to reuenge all diſobedience, when your obedience is fulfilled. But as the enemies are ſpirituall, ſo is the manner of the fight ſpirituall, by inward luſting and concupiſcence, whereby motions and inclinations, either good or euill are ſtirred vp in the heart and ſoule. And thus there is a contrary luſting betweene theſe enemies: the fleſh luſting againſt the ſpirit, and the ſpirit againſt the fleſh, as the Apoſtle plainely teacheth vs.

Gal.5.17.

§. Sect.5. The firſt end at which the fleſh aymeth in luſting againſt the ſpirit.

In which their contrary luſting, they both of them mainely ayme at two generall ends. The firſt end at which the fleſh in its luſting aymeth, is to ſtirre vp and incline vs vnto ſuch luſts, deſires and motions, as are ſinnefull and contrary to the law of God, as to infidelitie, impenitency, pride, ſelfe-loue, hatred, enuy, vncleaneſſe, couetouſneſſe and ſuch like; or to ſpeake more diſtinctly, it endeauoreth to beget and ſtirre vp, preſerue and nouriſh euill cogitations in the minde, wicked inclinations in the will and ſinnefull affections, and deſires, in the heart, in which reſpect it is fitly compared to a fiery furnace or boyling pot, which continually ſend vp ſparks and ſmoke; and by the Apoſtle Iames it is likened to a filthy harlot, which by her alluring bayts inticeth men to commit folly with her, vpon which followeth the conception and birth of ſinne and death. And our Sauiour Chriſt telleth vs, that from within, euen in the heart, (that is, the ſinnefull fleſh and naturall corruption, which chiefely reſideth in the heart) proceed euill thoughts, adulteries, fornications, murthers, thefts, couetouſneſſe, wickedneſſe, deceit, laſciuiouſneſſe, an euill eye, blaſphemy, pride, fooliſhneſſe, &c. Contrary to this is the luſting of the ſpirit, which endeauoureth to ſtirre vp and preſerue good motions and inclinations in vs, as good meditations in the mind, good reſolutions in the will, good deſires and affections in the heart which are conformable and agreeable to the holy will and word of God. Thus the Apoſtle Iohn ſaith, that wee haue receiued an vnction from the holy one whereby wee know all things. And Saint Paul exhorteth vs not to quench the ſpirit, that is the good motions which ariſe from it, as it were ſparkes from the fire. So Dauid. I will bleſſe the Lord who hath giuen mee counſell; my reynes alſo inſtruct mee in the night ſeaſon, that is, thoſe ſweete meditations and motions which the ſpirit ſecetly in the night ſeaſon putteth into our mindes and hearts. And the Prophet Eſay ſaith, that the eares of the faithfull ſhall heare a voyce behind them, ſaying; This is the way walke yee in it, when they turned to the right hand, and when they turned to the left. Which is to be vnderſtood not onely of the voyce of Gods Miniſters, outwardly ſpeaking vnto vs in the miniſtery of the word, but alſo of the voyce of the ſpirit, ſecretly by the good motions thereof leading vs into all truth. For ſo our Sauiour accordingly promiſeth, that he would ſend his ſpirit the comforter, who ſhould conuince the world of ſinne, righteouſneſſe and iudgement; and that when hee is come, hee ſhould leade the faithfull into all truth; and reueale vnto them things to come.

Iam.1.14.15.

Mat.14.18.19.

1.Ioh.2.20.

1.Theſ.5.19.

Pſal.16.7.

Eſa.30.21.

Ioh.16.8.13.

§. Sect.6. The ſecond maine end at which the fleſh aymeth in luſting againſt the ſpirit.

The ſecond maine thing at which the fleſh aymeth in this conflict is, either to repreſſe and ſmother the good motions and inclinations which the ſpirit exciteth and ſtirreth vp in vs, or elſe to poyſon and corrupt them, that they may become vnprofitable and turned into ſinne. So when the ſpirit moueth vs to performe ſome good duty of Gods ſeruice, of iuſtice or mercy, it will labour to quench this motion, and to withdraw vs from it, either by alluring vs vtterly to neglect it, and to ſpend our time rather in purſuing worldly vanities; or by perſwading vs, that there is ſuch difficultie in it, that wee ſhall not bee poſſibly able to compaſſe and atchieue it; or if wee doe, that it will not bee worth our labour, or finally by intycing vs to deferre and delay it, becauſe we may bee fitter, or haue better opportunitie to performe it hereafter, than at this preſent; in which reſpect the Apoſtle ſaith, that through this oppoſite luſting of the fleſh, wee cannot doe the good wee would. But if it cannot perſwade vs either vtterly to neglect the duties of Gods ſeruice which hee commaundeth, or to deferre them till wee get ſome better opportunity, then it will endeauour to interrupt and diſtract vs in them, and to ſtaine them with our corruptions and imperfections, that they may not bee acceptable. As when wee ſet our ſelues to pray or heare the word, it will put into our minds worldly cogitations and wandring thoughts, that ſo we may not intend theſe holy exerciſes, or elſe oppreſſe our hearts with drowſie dulneſſe, deadneſſe of ſpirit and carnall wearineſſe, ſo as wee cannot performe them with any chearefulneſſe. And of this the Apoſtle complaineth; namely, that when hee delighted in the law of God in the inner man, he ſaw another law in his members, warring againſt the law of his minde, and and bringing him into captiuitie to the law of ſinne which was in his members. And this is the cauſe why our beſt righteouſneſſe becommeth like a menſtrous cloth, and why our beſt prayers, neede to be perfumed with the ſweete odours of Chriſts interceſſion, before they can aſcend vnto God, and become ſweete incenſe in his noſtrils.

Gal.5.17.

Rom.7.22.23.

Eſa.64.6.

§. Sect.7. The ends at which the ſpirit aymeth in luſting againſt the fleſh.

Contrariwiſe the ſpirit laboureth and endeauoureth to ſuppreſſe and ſubdue thoſe euill motions which the fleſh rayſeth in vs, and ſtill moueth vs to take the firſt and beſt opportunities of ſeruing God and doing his will. So alſo it purifieth our hearts by faith from all our ſinfull corruptions, and maketh vs to labour and ſtriue againſt our infirmities and imperfections, that we may with feruency of ſpirit and chearefulneſſe of heart, performe all holy ſeruice vnto God; and when in theſe our endeauours wee come ſhort of our deſires, through this ſinnefull fleſh which doth ſo eaſily encompaſſe vs, it moueth vs to bewaile our imperfections, and ſtill more and more to labour in the vſe of all good meanes, whereby we may attaine vnto more perfection; as wee ſee in the example of the Apoſtle Paul, who kept vnder this body of corruption, beating it, as it were, blacke and blew, that he might hold it with the luſts thereof in ſubiection; whereof when hee fayled and was either hindred from doing good, or led captiue vnto ſinne, he makes lamentable complaints of theſe rebellious luſts, and not contenting himſelfe with that portion of grace and godlineſſe vnto which hee had attained, he forgate what was paſt, and ſtill did labour and ſtriue to attaine vnto more perfection. And thus the ſpirit maſtereth and ſubdueth the fleſh, ſo as it cannot haue full liberty, and take its full ſwinge in ſinne, as it deſireth; according to that of the Apoſtle, Whoſoeuer is borne of God doth not commit ſinne, for his ſeed remaineth in him, and hee cannot ſinne (namely like the vnregenerate with full ſwinge and conſent of wil) becauſe he is borne of God.

Heb. 12. 1.
1. Cor. 9. 27.
Rom. 7. 23. 24.
Phil. 3. 12.
1. Ioh. 3. 9.

Chap. V.

Of the manner of the fight betweene the fleſh and the ſpirit in our ſeuerall faculties and parts.

§. Sect. 1. The conflict betweene the fleſh and the ſpirit in the mind.

But let vs deſcend to ſome particulars, and conſider the manner of this fight betweene the fleſh and the ſpirit in our ſeuerall faculties and parts. And that both the ſuperiour and inferiour faculties. In the ſuperiour, as both the minde and the will, whether wee conſider them ſeuerally or ioyntly. Concerning the former, the minde of the faithfull being but in part renewed and regenerate, the reliques of our ſinfull corruption doe remaine in it, which continually fight againſt the renewed graces of the ſpirit, they labouring to expell and thruſt them out, and the other to keepe their poſſeſſion and continue in them. So Nazianzen; There is in mee (ſaith he) a double mind, the one being good followeth that which is good, the other being euill followeth alſo euill. That chearefully and willingly obeyeth Chriſt, and deſireth the light; this contrariwiſe is deuoted to fleſh and blood, and is ready to entertaine Beliall drawing vs to darkneſſe. Whereof it commeth to paſſe that this is delighted in earthly things and in the flitting and fraile profits of this life, as though they were the chiefe good, and loueth riotous feaſtings, hatred, gluttony, and the filthineſſe and wily deceits of the workes of darkeneſſe, and goeth the broade way, being compaſſed about with ſuch a darke cloud of folly, that it faineth vnto it ſelfe pleaſure out of its owne deſtruction. But the ſpirituall minde reioyceth in heauenly things, which we enioy through hope, placeth all confidence of life and ſaluation in God alone, eſteemeth worldly profits ſubiect to innumerable caſualties, as vile and contemptible ſmoke, loueth honeſt labours, pouerty and laudable cares, and taketh the narrow way that leadeth to life.

Eſt mihi mens duplex, altera bona & boni ſequax: altera mala & mali conſectatrix: &c. Nazianzen. de calamit. animæ ſuæ. Tom. 2. Pag. 934.

§. Sect. 2. The conflict betweene the fleſh and ſpirit in the vnderſtanding

Now this conflict in the minde betweene the fleſh and the ſpirit, may be diuerſly conſidered in reſpect of the diuers faculties which belong vnto it. And firſt the vnderſtanding being in part regenerate and ſanctified, and in part vnregenerate and corrupted, partly inlightened with ſpirituall and ſauing knowledge, and partly obſcured with the reliques of ignorance; and not onely ſo, but alſo much defiled and depraued; there is a conflict maintained in it, betweene ſanctified knowledge and ſpiritual wiſedome on the one ſide, and carnall curioſitie, palpable ignorance, and that wiſedome of the fleſh which is worldly and diuelliſh on the other ſide. For firſt carnall curioſitie neglecting thoſe things which are profitable, neceſſary and reuealed to this end that wee ſhould know them, laboureth after nice and idle ſpeculations and curious queſtions, which as they are vſeleſſe and vaine, ſo alſo abſtruſe and ſecrete; or elſe diueth into Gods hidden counſels which he hath forbidden vs to ſearch and pry into. But ſauing knowledge not onely leaueth ſecret things as belonging to the Lord our God, but alſo repreſſeth and mortifieth, as much as may bee, that vaine curioſitie, and reſtraining vs from going about to vnderſtand aboue that which is meete to vnderſtand, it vnderſtandeth in ſobrietie, according as God hath dealt to euery man the meaſure of faith. It apprehendeth things reuealed as belonging vnto vs, and aymeth more at the vſe and fruit in practice, than at the theorie and ſpeculation, and to haue feeling and experience of a little, rather than a bare conceit and abilitie to diſcourſe of much. And yet it reſteth not in a ſmall meaſure, yea in truth not in the greateſt proportion, but ſtill it laboureth after ſpirituall growth and encreaſeth daily more and more vntill it come to perfection in Ieſus Chriſt. Secondly, this ſauing knowledge continually combateth with the contrary extreame, palpable ignorance; for our vnderſtandings are but partly inlightened with the knowledge of Gods truth, and the reliques of ignorance doe in part remaine. So the Apoſtle ſaith, that we know but in part and ſee but as through a glaſſe darkly; and yet wee ſtand not at a ſtay, but labour to attaine vnto that perfection of knowledge whereby wee

Deut. 29. 29.
Rom. 12. 3.
1. Cor. 13. 12.

ſhall know as we are knowne. And this is the cauſe of this conflict whileſt ignorance ſtriuing to keepe its place in the vnderſtanding, rayſeth thicke miſts and darke fogges to obſcure the light of truth, and to put out or dazle the eyes of the mind; and on the otherſide ſauing knowledge doth endeuour with the Sun-ſhine of truth ſhining clearely in Gods Word, to diſpell and ſcatter theſe miſty fogs by little and little, vntill it ſhine forth brightly vnto perfect day.

§. Sect. 3. The conflict betweene ſpirituall & carnall wiſdome.

Iam.3.15.

Finally, ſpirituall and renewed wiſedome fighteth with that wiſedome of the World which is earthly, ſenſuall and deuilliſh, as the Apoſtle calleth it; the one being ſo wholy taken vp and exerciſed in ſpirituall and heauenly things, which it ſeeth, knoweth and eſteemeth as moſt excellent, and therefore contemning worldly vanities as droſſe and dung, yea loſſe, in compariſon of them, it little looketh after them, whereof it commeth to paſſe, that it hath little policy, either to get and compaſſe, or to poſſeſſe and keepe them; the other being wholy deuoted to earthly things and tranſitory trifles, looketh onely downe-ward, and not being able to diſcerne the beauty of thoſe diuine excellencies (no more than thoſe eyes which hauing long pored in the darke, can behold the bright beames of the Sun, but are made more blind than any way illightened with them) it is onely delighted in beholding thoſe things whoſe beauty is ſubiect to the ſenſes and naturall reaſon; about which being continually exerciſed, it groweth very wiſe and quick-ſighted in diſcerning them, and very politique in plotting and vſing of all meanes both for the getting and keeping of them. And as theſe two vſe contrary Organs and Inſtruments, the one a ſpirituall, the other a carnall eye, ſo alſo contrary meanes and lights to diſcerne their contrary obiects. For the ſpirituall eye is beſt enabled to ſee diuine and ſpirituall things by the cleare light of Gods Truth ſhining in his Word, and the inward illumination of his Spirit, which maketh it better able to diſcerne thoſe things which are ſpirituall and heauenly; but the carnall eye (like the eyes of Bats and Owles) not being able to endure this Sun-like brightneſſe diſcerneth beſt of the excellency of worldly things in the night of ignorance, and then it is moſt cleare-ſighted to hunt after them, and moſt wily and politique to catch and hold them. And thus it is ſaid of meere naturall men, that the eyes of their minds doe only ſerue them to act cunningly the workes of darkneſſe, becauſe they beſt ſute with the darkneſſe of their vnderſtanding, according to that of the Prophet; My people is fooliſh, they haue not knowne mee, they are fooliſh children, and haue none vnderſtanding, they are wiſe to doe euill, but to doe good they haue no knowledge. So the Apoſtle telleth vs, that they that are after the fleſh doe mind or ſauour the things of the fleſh, but they that are after the ſpirit the things of the ſpirit; where by ſauouring or minding, he meaneth vnderſtanding, approuing and magnifying theſe things. The which as it is true of diuers perſons and ſubiects, ſo of the diuers parts regenerate and vnregenerate in the ſame perſon; and ſo whereas the Apoſtle ſaith, that the naturall man vnderſtandeth not the things that are of the ſpirit; learned Zanchie vnderſtandeth it not of him who is meerely carnall, but of the vnregenerate part of him who is ſanctified. And ſo in truth muſt the like words ſpoken by our Sauiour to the Apoſtle Peter be neceſſarily vnderſtood of his part alone which was vnrenued, Math.16.23. Get thee behind mee Sathan, Thou art an offence vnto me; for thou ſauoureſt not the things that be of God, but thoſe that be of men; ſeeing at this time hee was truly conuerted, and a famous Apoſtle of Ieſus Chriſt, who a little before had ſhewed, that in his part regenerate hee ſauoured the things of God, by that notable confeſſion of his faith in Ieſus Chriſt.

Ier.4.22.

Rom.8.5.

1.Cor.2.14.

Mat.16.23.

Mat.16.16.

§. Sect. 4. The conflict betweene the iudgement of the fleſh and ſpirit.

And thus wee ſee the conflict betweene ſpirituall wiſdome and carnall; from which ariſeth another betweene the iudgement of the fleſh and the ſpirit, for ſo farre forth as the mind is illightened with ſpirituall wiſedome and knowledge, anſwerably the iudgment diſcerning betweene truth & falſhood, right and wrong, good and euill, doth allow, approue and eſteeme the one, and diſalloweth, reiecteth and vilifieth the other, but ſo farre forth as it ſtill remayneth blinded and miſled through naturall ignorance, the iudgment miſtaketh errour for truth, wrong for right, and euill for good. So our Sauiour ſaith to the Phariſees, yee erre not knowing the Scriptures. And Dauid himſelfe being ignorant of the ſtate of the godly and wicked in this life in reſpect of proſperity and aduerſity, and that theſe things happen alike to all, was ready by a falſe iudgement to condemne the generation of Gods children; but after that going into the ſanctuary, his mind being inlightened with the knowledge of the truth, his iudgement then gaue right euidence. And the Apoſtle Peter being ignorant of the abrogating of the Ceremoniall Law after the death of Chriſt, and of the breaking downe of the partition wall betweene the Iewes and Gentiles, iudgeth the creatures of God vncleane which hee had ſanctified, and that he was ſo confined within the Land of Iury, that hee might not preach the Goſpell vnto the Gentiles: but when God by Viſion had inlightened his mind with the knowledge of the truth, hee reformed alſo the errour of his iudgement.

Mat.22.29.
Eccleſ.9.2.
Pſal.73.15.
Acts 10, 14, 34.35.

Acts 10.

§. Sect. 5. How theſe

And this is the conflict fought in the mind betweene knowledge and ignorance, true &

falſe faculties of the mind preuaile one againſt the other.

falſe judgement, in which they (as it were) ſtab and wound one another, and interchangeably either of them preuayle ſometimes, and ſometimes are againe foyled and get the worſt. As for example, knowledge in the regenerate part of the minde aſſaulteth ignorance in the part vnregenerate, and with the light of Gods Truth, ſcattereth and diſpelleth the darke miſts of ignorance; and ſoone after ignorance through the neglect of reading, meditation, hearing the Word, Prayer and holy conferences gathereth ſtrength, and bleareth againe the eyes of the vnderſtanding, that it cannot ſo clearely, at leaſt after a ſauing feeling and experimentall manner, diſcerne the things of God, but then againe knowledge being renewed & ſtrengthened by thoſe holy exerciſes, recouereth it ſelfe and winneth the field. So truth in that part of the judgement which is regenerate entreth the liſts, and ſtriketh at errour in the vnregenerate part, giuing it ſuch a deadly wound that it neuer recouereth throughly of it, and for the preſent, it may be, falleth into a dead ſownde, but yet it oftentimes through the helpe of ſubtile ſophiſtry, nice and ſubtle diſtinctions and cunning Paralogiſmes, brought in to ayde it by the World, and corrupt affections of the ſinfull fleſh, which make aduantage to themſelues of vnprofitable errours, it recouereth ſtrength, and truth getteth a foyle for the time; but being againe renewed and confirmed by the light of Gods Word, it giueth errour in the end a ſhamefull ouerthrow.

§. *Sect.*6. The cauſe why the godly learned differ in judgement from one another.

From hence wee learne what is the cauſe why men not onely very learned, and endued with a great meaſure of knowledge, but alſo regenerate, godly and religious, doe often in their judgement much differ from one another in points of Religion; namely, becauſe their minds and judgements are but in part regenerate, ſo that the reliques of ignorance and errour do ſtill remayne in them, which is the cauſe that they know but in part, and ſee the truth of God (as it were) through a glaſſe darkly; like the man in the Goſpell who when his ſight was firſt reſtored, diſcerned men walking, as it had beene trees; the which imperfection of their ſpirituall ſight and knowledge, worketh in them onely a doubtfull opinion, and not any wel-ſetled judgement, which maketh them to take that way which their conceipt apprehendeth as the moſt likely and probable. Like diuers men intending to trauell towards the ſame City, who being vncertaine and doubtfull of the right way, doe chooſe diuers paths, one being more direct, and others leading them out of the way or much about; but yet all ayming to goe towards the ſame place, they are ready to returne into their way againe, and to make more haſte in trauelling, when vpon inquiry receiuing better information, they doe perceiue their former errour. And this alſo is the cauſe why the ſame men otherwiſe godly and religious, doe leaue the way of truth and fall into errours after their judgements haue beene truly enlightened, the fleſh preuayling ouer the ſpirit in a new aſſault, and dazling the eyes of their minde, whileſt with its miſts and fogs, it darkeneth the light which formerly did ſhine vnto them. The which befalleth them ſometimes not onely in the knowledge of thoſe points of Religion which are of leſſe conſequence, but alſo exceeding waighty & fundamentall, as we ſee in the example of the Corinthians and the Galathians, euen after the truth of the Goſpell had beene preached vnto them, the one erring in the doctrine of the reſurrection from the dead; the other in the mayne point of juſtification by faith in Chriſt without the workes of the Law. Where, by the way, we may note the errour of the Church of Rome, whileſt it teacheth that the Church cannot erre. For euery man liuing, hath the fleſh ſtill dwelling in him, & with it the reliques of errour and ignorance, which ſometime miſleadeth and miſguideth him; and that which is the condition of euery man, is the caſe of all, the ſame reaſon being of the whole and all the parts. And where as it may be objected that the Church hath ſpeciall promiſes of being enlightened by the Spirit and guided into all truth; to this I anſwere, that the like promiſes alſo are made to euery particular member of it, who notwithſtanding may and doe erre in ſome particulars, and therefore the promiſe is to be limited, firſt, vnto all truth neceſſary to our ſaluation; and ſecondly, that they ſhall by the Spirit receiue this priuiledge, that whereas the wicked continue and periſh in fundamentall errours, the faithfull though they may fall into them & continue in them for a time, yet they ſhall not liue and die in them, but ſhall in Gods good time after their going aſtray, heare the voice of Gods Word and Spirit reuoking and recalling them into the right path, and ſaying, this is the way walke yee in it.

Marke 8.24.

Iohn 16.13. 1.Iohn 2.20,27.

Eſay 30.21.

§. *Sect.*7. That this ſhould make vs to conforme our iudgement to the analogy of faith.

Againe, ſeeing through the fleſh dwelling in vs we are ſubject to ignorance and error, this ſhould make vs to conforme our judgement and opinion to the analogy of faith, & as to hold faſt thoſe doctrines which are maniſeſtly grounded vpon the Scriptures, ſo to be modeſt and ſober in mayntayning ſuch points as are doubtfull and controuerſall, when as other of our Brethren differ from vs; becauſe wee may erre by reaſon of thoſe reliques of ignorance remayning in vs; and they may erre alſo out of humane frailty, & therefore are rather to be pitied than hated, and to be drawne not with rigour, but with the ſpirit of meekneſſe. Finally, ſeeing the reliques of ignorance and errour will neuer

Phil. 3.15. Gal. 6.1.

leaue vs till death diuide vs, this muſt make vs labour continually in the vſe of all good meanes, wherby our mindes may be more and more illightned and our judgements informed in the knowledge of Gods Truth, that ſo we may be ſtrengthened againſt thoſe ſharpe encounters wherewith ignorance and errour will daily aſſault vs. And eſpecially we are to heare the Word, ſtudy and meditate in the Scriptures, and call often and earneſtly by feruent prayers for the aſſiſtance and illumination of Gods holy Spirit, wherby we may be preſerued from all errours and led into all truth. For if Dauid who was wiſer than his Ancients, and had attained vnto more knowledge than his Teachers, had need to make that prayer; Open mine eyes, O Lord, that I may ſee the wonderfull things of thy Law; and if the Apoſtle Paul who was immediately taught by Chriſt, and had receiued ſuch abundance of Reuelations, deſired aboue all things ſtill more and more to know Chriſt, and to find and feele the vertue and power of Chriſts Death and Reſurrection, then how much more ſhould we, who come farre ſhort of their perfection?

Pſal.119.18.

Phil.3.10.

§. Sect.8. The conflict in our thoughts and imaginations.

The next conflict which is to be conſidered in the minde is betweene the actions and operations of it, which like vnto the minde it ſelfe being partly ſpirituall, and partly carnall; doe continually ſtriue and fight againſt one another. And theſe are our thoughts and cogitations, our meditations and imaginations, which labour mutually to expell one another, and to keepe the minde in their ſole poſſeſſion. For when the Spirit lifteth vp the mind in diuine Contemplations, and cauſeth it to thinke and meditate on heauenly things as the end of our hopes; or on the ſeruice of God, the duties of Chriſtianity, or of our lawfull callings, as the meanes whereby wee may attaine vnto them; then the fleſh depreſſeth and pulleth it downe, and (as it were) clippeth the wings, or caſteth vpon them the lime or ſlime of ſin, when as it is ſoaring this lofty pitch, and by ſuggeſting ſuch thoughts as are ſimply worldly and wicked, or elſe impertinent and vnſeaſonable in reſpect of the preſent employment, doe cauſe it to ſtoop vnto earthly vanities, and ſo leauing the ſubſtance to catch a ſhadow. But the ſpirituall part finding it ſelfe thus defeated of thoſe ſpirituall excellencies, which ſo earneſtly it purſueth, doth not reſt thus dejected and depreſſed, but ſhaking off the thoughts of ſinful vanities and ſenſuall delights, and bathing it ſelfe in the precious bloud of Chriſt by a liuely faith, it is waſhed from the filth of earthly corruption, and as it were picking and pruning it ruffled feathers, when the Sun beames of Gods louing countenance ſhine vpon it, it leaueth the earth and vp againe it mounteth in ſpirituall & heauenly thoughts. And remembring that we are but Pilgrimes on earth, and that Heauen is our Country, it cauſeth vs by diuine Meditations to haue our conuerſation there, whileſt our bodies are on earth; and knowing that wee are riſen with Chriſt, it maketh vs to ſeeke thoſe things which are aboue, where Chriſt ſitteth at the right hand of God, and to ſet our affections on things aboue, and not on things which are on the earth.

Phil.3.20.
Col.3.1,2.

§. Sect.9. The conflict betweene ſpiritual and carnall memory.

And this is the conflict betweene the fleſh and the ſpirit in our mindes and vnderſtandings. To this wee may adde the combats that are betweene them in our memories; for theſe being but in part regenerate, and the reliques of corruption remayning in them, there is a great conflict whileſt the memory ſo far forth as it is ſpirituall, laboureth to blot out and deface all worldly, wicked and ſinfull impreſſions, and to haue imprinted in it, thoſe heauenly and ſpirituall documents and inſtructions which haue beene entruſted vnto it by the ſanctified vnderſtanding; and whileſt it endeauoureth to caſt out the rubbiſh and noyſome filth of prophaneneſſe, ribaldry, ſcurrilous jeſts, maliciouſneſſe and all manner of impiety and wickedneſſe, that ſo it may be a fit, ſure, and faithfull treaſury of wiſe Sayings and Religious Diſcourſes. And contrariwiſe whileſt on the other ſide the fleſh and vnregenerate part ſtandeth in direct oppoſition to the ſpirit, by re-printing and repeating thoſe leſſons of impietie and prophaneneſſe which before our conuerſion eſpecially, and ſince alſo wee had learned in the Schoole of the Deuill and the World; & by working in vs obliuion and forgetfulnes of all good things, whereby theſe heauenly treaſures and ſpiritual jewels are (as it were) preſently caſt out of doores, as ſoone as they are receiued, theſe holy leſſons are no ſooner written but they are preſently blotted out & cancelled; and theſe waters of Life doe no longer ſtay with vs, than common water continueth in a leaking veſſell, or in a Siue.

§. Sect.10. Of the conflict betweene the Fleſh and the Spirit in the conſcience.

Finally, there is alſo the like conflict betweene the fleſh and the ſpirit in the conſcience, whereby I vnderſtand not the fight betweene it and the will, affections, and carnal appetite, which may be in thoſe who are vnſanctified and meerely naturall, of which I ſhall ſpeake more in the following diſcourſe; but that conflict which is in the ſame faculty, as it is partly regenerate and renewed by the ſanctifying grace of the Spirit, and partly vnregenerate, the reliques of ſinfull corruption remayning in it. For as it is regenerate, it is ſo inlightned and rectified by the Spirit of Grace, that like a true witneſſe, it giueth an infallible teſtimony betweene God and vs, excuſing vs when we doe well, that wee may proceed in well doing, and accuſing vs when we haue done euill, that we may forſake it and recouer our ſelues by vnfained repentance, yea, before the doing of either of them both, it giueth teſtimony and approbation vnto that which is good, that wee may imbrace and practiſe it, and alſo diſcouereth that which is wicked and ſinfull, that wee may ſhun and auoid it. Neither doth it onely play the part of a witneſſe, but alſo of a Iudge, and according to this true euidence, it either iuſtifieth vs or pronounceth the ſentence of condemnation againſt vs. From the former whereof ariſe peace, comfort and ſpirituall joy in the Holy Ghoſt, whereby wee are incouraged to proceed in all holy duties; and from the other, either feare whereby we are reſtrained from falling into ſinne, or ſorrow and repentance not to be repented of, cauſing ſaluation; after that wee are falne. But contrariwiſe as the conſcience is vnregenerate it remayneth blinded with ignorance & corrupted with maliciouſneſſe, and therefore is continually ready to play the part of a falſe witneſſe; either dawbing and colouring ouer our ſin with deceiptfull colours, that we may ignorantly fall into it; or excuſing it, being committed as though it were veniall or none at all, that we may continue in it without repentance; or on the other ſide it is ready to accuſe vs when we do wel, and in the ſeruice of God, or the vſe of our Christian liberty about things indifferent, to raiſe in our minds ſuperſtitious feares and cauſeleſſe doubts, that ſo we being affrighted, may be hindered from Chriſtian duties, or diſcouraged after wee haue done them. And ſo anſwerably it playeth the falſe Iudge, condemning where God and a good conſcience iuſtifie, & iuſtifying where they cõdemn. The which falſe ſentence is the cauſe of carnall ſecurity, when we continue in ſin, & of cauſeles terrours & needleſſe feares, when we are carefull to performe our duty. The which if at any time it be reuerſed by a good conſcience inlightened by Gods Word and holy Spirit, and the vglineſſe and haynouſneſſe of ſin be diſcouered and layed open; then the carnall and corrupt part of conſcience which before ſeemed ſeared and ſenſeleſſe, being pricked and awakened, filleth the minde with loude cryes and grieuous accuſations, with terrible horrours and hideous feares, and now as eagerly moueth to deſpaire, as it did before to ſecurity and preſumption; telling vs that our ſinnes are vnpardonable, and that it is too late to turne from them by repentance. But then againe the good conſcience putteth it to ſilence, and allayeth and quieteth the fury of it, by witneſſing vnto vs that our hearts are vpright with God, notwithſtanding that wee haue beene ouertaken, and haue falne through frailty and infirmity; or at leaſt by bathing it ſelfe from the filth of ſin in the precious bloud of Ieſus Chriſt, which is ſufficient to purge vs from the pollution euen of thoſe ſinnes which are wilfull and preſumptuous; with which waſhing of bloud applyed by the hand of a liuely faith, it cauſeth vs to joyne that waſhing of water, in the teares of vnfained repentance and amendment of life.

2.Cor.7.10.

Chap. VI.

Of the manner of the conflict betweene the Fleſh and Spirit in the will, heart and affections.

§. Sect. 1.
Of the conflict betweene the carnall and renewed will.

ANd thus haue wee ſhewed the conflict betweene the Fleſh and the Spirit in the mind and vnderſtanding with thoſe faculties which belong vnto it. Come wee now to that fight which is between them in the will; the which is much more ſharpe and ſenſible; for it likewiſe being partly regenerate and partly vnregenerate, there is a continuall combat bebetweene theſe contrary factions, whileſt the regenerate part willeth and imbraceth that which is good, and nilleth and rejecteth that which is euill; and contrariwiſe the part vnregenerate willeth & chooſeth that which is euill, and nilleth and refuſeth that which is good. As for example, the ſpirituall part being guided by the vnderſtanding, inlightned with ſauing knowledge, chooſeth and imbraceth God as the chiefe happineſſe, and refuſeth and contemneth the World and earthly vanities, the ſeruice of Sathan, and the momentany pleaſure of ſin, which in the end bring death & deſtruction, though they for the preſent be bitter to the fleſh, and much more imbittered by afflictions, and theſe be ſweet and delightfull to the carnall appetite. But contrariwiſe that part of the will which remayneth vnregenerate, being directed by that wiſdome of the fleſh which is worldly, ſenſuall and Deuilliſh, neglecteth and refuſeth the preſent comforts of grace which it rellisheth not, and the future hopes of heauenly happineſſe, which it knoweth not, as being out of ſight and beyond the apprehenſion of ſenſe, vncertaine and not to be compaſſed without great difficultie; and contrariwiſe chooſeth and imbraceth this preſent World with the vaine honours, vncertaine riches and ſinfull pleaſures of it becauſe they are ſubject to the ſenſes, and may be had in preſent poſſeſſion. In which conflict they mutually encounter one another; and as they get their aduantages, ſometimes the one and ſometimes the other preuaileth, and cauſeth the aduerſe part to giue ground. And this conflict with the iſſue of it the Apoſtle felt in himſelfe, Rom.7.15. For that which I doe I allow not; for what I would, that doe I not, but what I hate that doe I. And againe, To will is preſent with mee, but how to performe that which is good I find not; for the good I would, I doe not, but the euill which I would tuiretiego ſu- ſpirabam liga- tus, non ferro alieno ſed mea ferrea volunta- te, &c. Aug. confeſſ. l. 8. c. 5.

Rom.7.15.

would not, that I doe. So Auguſtine confeſſeth, that whileſt he deſired his ſound conuerſion, he found himſelfe bound, not with other mens chaines, but by his owne Iron and obdurate will. The enemy (ſaith he) did hold my will, and thereof made a ſtrong chaine to binde me; for out of peruerſe will, ſprung vnlawfull luſt, and whileſt I obeyed luſt, it became a cuſtome, and whileſt the cuſtome was not infringed it became neceſſity, with which linkes infolded one in another, a chaine, as I ſaid, was made, and held me bound in a miſerable ſeruitude. And my will renewed which begun to moue mee to worſhip and enioy thee freely my God, and onely ſure ioy, was not yet fit to ouercome the other confirmed by age. And ſo my two wils, one old, the other new, that carnall and this ſpirituall, did fight betweene themſelues renting my ſoule in ſunder by this their diſcords. And ſo I vnderſtood in mine owne experience that which I had read, how that the fleſh luſteth againſt the ſpirit, and the ſpirit againſt the fleſh. And I ſurely was in both, but yet more I in that which I approued in my ſelfe, than in that which I diſallowed. For in this rather I was not I, becauſe for the moſt part I did ſuffer that vnwillingly which I did willingly. And a little after. Doe not diuers wils diſtract the heart of man when hee deliberateth what to preferre in his choyſe? And all appeare good and ſtriue with themſelues, till at length one thing be choſen, vnto which all the will is carried, together which before was diuided in ſunder. And ſo when eternity delighteth aboue, and the pleaſure of temporall good detaineth below, the ſame ſoule doth not with the whole will, will this or that, and therefore it is diſtracted with much griefe, whileſt it preferreth that in true iudgement, and yet cannot part with this through long acquaintance.

Confeſſ. Lib. 8. cap. 10.

§. Sect. 2.
Of the conflict between faith and infidelitie and preſumption.

And thus wee haue ſeene the combat betweene the fleſh and the ſpirit in the vnderſtanding and will ſeuerally; now let vs come to that conflict which is in them being ioyntly conſidered, between faith and the contrary extreames, infidelity and vaine preſumption. The which I referre to both theſe faculties, becauſe (as I take it) the firſt beginnings and leaſt degrees of faith are chiefly in the will and heart, euen as the perfection and higheſt degrees of it are in the mind and vnderſtanding. For after a man by humiliation and contrition is fitted and prepared to receiue faith, and after that the Law hath brought him to a true ſight and ſenſe of his ſins, of the puniſhments which by them hee hath deſerued, and that by himſelfe his eſtate is deſperate and remedileſſe, being vtterly vnable to come out of this miſerable & forlorne condition; and that the Goſpell hath generally ſhewed that Ieſus Chriſt, ſent into the World by his Father to this end, is an alſufficient Sauiour, who by his bloud purgeth vs from the guilt and puniſhment of all our ſins, and by his righteouſneſſe and obedience iuſtifieth ſinners; then the Spirit of God aſſiſting the Miniſtery of the Word, worketh thereby in his heart ſome earneſt deſires to be made partaker of Chriſt and theſe benefits, which wee call hungring and thirſting after his righteouſneſſe: and this I affirme to be the firſt degree of iuſtifying faith; and not onely a preparation vnto it, becauſe they are pronounced bleſſed who thus hunger and thirſt after Chriſt and his righteouſneſſe, and there is no bleſſedneſſe to thoſe who liue in the ſtate of infidelity. Then there is wrought in his will a firme reſolution to chuſe Chriſt alone for his Sauiour, and to reſt and relye vpon him onely for his ſaluation, which is the ſecond degree of true faith, vnto which when the Chriſtian hath attained by the liuely ſenſe and experimentall feeling of Gods loue in his holy Ordinances, of the vertue and power of Chriſts Death and Reſurrection for the mortifying of his ſins, and the renewing and quickening of him in all ſauing graces, and finally, by his daily walking with God in the works of holineſſe and righteouſneſſe, and that ſweet communion which he hath with him in ſpirituall exerciſes, hee groweth from one degree of faith to another, till at laſt there be wrought in the mind not onely a certaine, but alſo a full perſwaſion of Gods loue, the remiſſion of his ſins and his owne ſaluation. But yet the fleſh and reliques of corruption remayning in vs, when wee haue attained vnto the greateſt perfection which this life yeeldeth; as in the part regenerate, there is full and certain perſwaſion, ſo in the vnregenerate part dwelleth doubting, infidelity and vaine preſumption, which continually aſſault one another, and ſometimes the one, ſometimes the other preuayleth and getteth the better in the particular skirmiſhes, although in the concluſion and end of the fight, faith alwayes ouercommeth and obtaineth a full and finall victory. In the meane time, euen after that by faith we haue laid hold on the promiſes, and haue growne to a great meaſure of ſtrength, and to an high degree of perſwaſion, doubting and infidelitie taking the opportunity of ſome grieuous temptation, doe giue vnto our faith many wounds and foyles, of which notwithſtanding it recouereth vpon the renewing of our couenant with God, receiuing the Sacrament which is the ſeale of it, the applying afreſh of Gods gracious promiſes, the remembrance of his former mercies, and the renewing of our repentance, eſpecially for our latter ſlips and fals. And this we ſee in the example of Sara and Abraham, who after that by faith they had receiued Gods promiſe, were ſo farre foyled with doubting, that they could think of no meanes of bringing it to paſſe, but by ſubſtituting Hagar in her place. Of Peter who beleeuing in his Lord and Maſter, ſo reſted vpon his Word and Power, that he walked towards him on the waters, but ſunke into the water, after he had firſt ſunke through doubting and vnbeliefe, when he ſaw a boyſterous blaſt of wind threatning a ſtorme, and therefore was reproued for his doubting. So the father of the poſſeſſed childe cryeth out, I beleeue, Lord helpe mine vnbeliefe. But moſt notably doth this appeare in the example of thoſe great Worthies Iob and Dauid; for the former we ſhall ſee him ſometime complayning as a man vtterly deſperate, curſing the day of his Natiuity, and challenging God as his enemy, and at another time profeſſing his faith and aſſurance of ſaluation, and reſoluing that though God ſhould kill him, yet hee would ſtill truſt in him. And for the other we ſhall ſee him in the Book of the Pſalmes, one while (as it were) a man vtterly rejected of God and forſaken, and ſoone after (as it were) riding in triumph after victory, and euen glorying in the ſtrength of his faith and confidence in God. Whereby it appeareth that there is in euery man regenerate a notable conflict betweene faith and vnbeliefe, whereof it commeth to paſſe, that Gods deareſt children may oftentimes, not onely be foyled with diffidence and doubting, but alſo in ſome grieuous temptations may fall into ſome deſpaire of Gods mercy and loue towards them; the which notwithſtanding differeth from that deſpaire which is in the wicked and reprobate, in that theirs is totall and finall, whereas the faithfull lie in it onely for a time, whileſt the violence of the temptation preſſed vpon them by the Deuill and the fleſh laſt, and is not totall, ſeeing their faith euen in the greateſt brunt fighteth and ſtriueth againſt it, and in the end getteth the vpper hand. Contrariwiſe, our faith is ſometime aſſaulted with preſumption, wherby the fleſh mooueth vs falſly to apply the promiſes, and to preſume of Gods loue and our owne ſaluation, for though theſe doe potentially belong to all the faithfull, yet they cannot actually be applyed vnto them, ſo long as they liue and lie ſecurely in ſome knowne ſins without repentance, eſpecially thoſe promiſes which concerne temporary benefits, which are preſent pledges & pawns of Gods loue and fauour. But againſt theſe alſo faith preuayleth, when as it purifieth our hearts, bringing vs to a ſight and ſenſe of our ſinnes, to a loathing and deteſtation of them, and to a conſtant reſolution and earneſt endeauour to labour to forſake them for the time to come; and ſo againe afreſh applyeth the promiſes vnto vs, as hauing now juſt intereſt and right vnto them.

Math. 5. 6.

Heb. 11. 11.
Rom. 4. 19.

*Math.*14.30.

Iob 3.1.3. & 7. 20. & 6,4.

*Iob.*13,15. & 19.25.

*Pſal.*42.6. & 73. 13,77,10. & 23. 4.31.23,46.2.

§. Sect. 3. That the conflict betwe ene the fleſh & the Spirit is moſt turbulent and ſenſible in the affectiõs & ſenſuall appetite.

And thus haue wee ſeene the conflict betweene the fleſh and the ſpirit in the ſuperiour faculties: the like may be obſerued in the inferiour ſeated in the heart, as affections, paſſions and ſenſuall appetite; the which though they be no more corrupt than the other, yet the corruption in them is much more ſenſible, and though the conflict be no more dangerous, yet is it much more turbulent and violent. For as the poyſon in the braine is as mortall and pernicious, as any other, and not reſting there alone, but diffuſing it ſelfe into all the parts of the body, doth benumme and dead them; but that which is receiued into the ſtomacke is much more raging and painfull, ſending vp poyſonous vapours into the head wherewith it is annoyed and mortally affected: ſo the poyſon of corruption hauing tainted the vnderſtanding faculties, doth from thence deſcend to the heart and affections, infecting them with their malignity; but that which is infuſed into them, doth cauſe a more raging and violent diſeaſe, which is more ſenſible and grieuous, and becommeth more dangerous to the ſoule ſick in ſinne, becauſe theſe inferiour faculties being corrupted, doe worke alſo vpon the will and vnderſtanding, ſtriking vp their poyſon backe againe vnto them with redoubled violence. For as the outward objects moue and affect the ſenſes, and they the heart and affections, ſo they being thus moued doe moue the wil, and the wil draweth alſo the judgement and vnderſtanding. But though theſe ſenſuall faculties are more groſſely poyſoned, and therfore ſeeme more deſperately incurable; yet the Spirit of God working alſo vpon theſe parts, doth purge them from their contagious humours, and comforteth the heart with ſuch ſpirituall cordials, and ſtrengtheneth it with ſuch heauenly antidotes, that ſpirituall health is in ſome meaſure recouered. But for as much as in this life the poyſon of corruption is not wholly expelled, and ſo they are not fully perfected, there is a continuall conflict betweene health and ſickneſſe, the antidotes and the poyſon, the heart and affections, as they are renewed and ſanctified, and as they remayne corrupted and vnregenerate. For the hard ſtone in the heart ſtriueth with the ſoft fleſh, rebellion with obedience, corruption with grace, and whileſt the Spirit draweth the heart vnto God, and ſpirituall and heauenly things, that it may inſeparably cleaue and adhere vnto them, the fleſh pulleth it backe & withdraweth it from them, and laboureth to keepe it ſtill fixed and faſtned vpon earthly & worldy vanities.

§. Sect. 4. Of the conflict betweene the affections and paſſions.

And from the ſame cauſe ſpringeth that continuall conflict which is betweene the affections and paſſions, wherein ſometimes the ſame affections diuided (as it were) betweene grace and corruption, doe fight and ſtriue againſt themſelues, and ſometimes being croſſe matched doe mutually oppoſe and encounter other affections and paſſions which are contrary & oppoſite vnto them; the former combate being exerciſed in contrary, the latter about the ſame ſubjects. Thus the loue of God, and of ſpirituall and heauenly things is aſſaulted with ſelfe-loue, loue of the world, and hatred of thoſe Diuines excellencies; Affiance in God, his prouidence and promiſes, with confidence in the creatures, and diffidence in the all-ſufficient creatour; zeale of Gods glory with carnall blind zeale, coldneſſe and lukewarmeneſſe: the feare of God which is ingenuous and filiall, with feare of men, and that feare of God which is ſlauiſh and ſeruile; Hope in God, with earthly hopes; and alſo with preſumption and deſpaire; ſorrow for ſinne, with worldly ſorrow which cauſeth death, and alſo with retchleſneſſe and carnall ſecuritie; joy in the holy Ghoſt and ſpirituall rejoycing in God, with carnall joy in the pleaſures of ſinne, and deſperate griefe for worldly loſſes; Alacritie and chearefulneſſe in Gods ſeruice, with carnall chearefulneſſe in purſuing our ſenſuall and ſinfull luſts, and alſo with lumpiſh heauineſſe, dulneſſe, deadneſſe of heart and carnall wearineſſe. In which conflict though the ſpirit receiue many foyles through the raging violence of theſe wilde and rebellious paſſions, and is oftentimes ſo wounded, that in outward appearance there ſeemeth to bee no life remaining, yet it proueth to bee but a dangerous ſownd, out of which recouering with redoubled valour, it reneweth the conflict and getteth the victory. Though it ſeeme but a ſmall ſparke remaining of a great fire, almoſt extinguiſhed with a flood of paſſions, and ſo couered vnder the aſhes of corruptions that it ſcarce appeareth, yet when the ſpirit of God doth blow vpon it, it encreaſeth in ſtrength to a great flame; and finally though whileſt the ſtorme laſteth, like a ſhip in a mighty tempeſt, it is ſo hid vnder the waues of ſinfull paſſions, that ſcarce any ſhew or ſemblance of grace remaineth, yet the good ſpirit of God aſſwaging the tempeſt and becalming theſe rough and raging Seas, like the ſhip which ſeemeth lately ſuncke, they re-appeare & ſhew themſelues in their former beautie, and being helped on with that diuine breath, they carry vs forward in all Chriſtian courſes (as it were) vnder full ſayles, with a proſperous wind and tide.

Chap. VII.

Of the effects which this Conflict betweene the fleſh and the ſpirit produceth in vs.

§ Sect. 1. That the man regenerate cannot, with full conſent of will chuſe or refuſe either good or euill.

WE haue ſeene the manner of the conflict betweene the fleſh and the ſpirit in our ſeuerall parts and faculties; now let vs briefly conſider of the effects which it produceth in vs. And theſe are either in the will and deſires, or in the workes and actions. Concerning the former; from this conflict betweene the fleſh and the ſpirit, ariſing from the imperfection of our regeneration this effect is wrought and cauſed in the man regenerate, that hee cannot with his whole will and full conſent, either chooſe and embrace, or refuſe and reject either good or euill; becauſe being partly regenerate and partly vnregenerate, his will is deuided, and accordingly doth at the ſame time refuſe and chooſe, both the euill and the good. For when the will as it is regenerate would doe that which is good, or auoide and ſhun that which is euill, that part which remaineth vnregenerate ſtruggleth and hindereth, and when this would embrace the euill or refuſe the good, the regenerate part reſiſteth and oppoſeth. And this is that Law which the Apoſtle ſaith hee found in himſelfe, namely, that when hee would doe good, euill was preſent with him; and that when hee delighted in the law of God after the inner man; he ſaw another law in his members, warring againſt the law of his minde, and bringing him into the captiuity of the law of ſinne which was in his members. From whence ariſeth a notable difference betweene the ſins of the regenerate and the vnregenerate, which though they be all one in reſpect of the act and deed done, yet not in reſpect of the agent and manner of doing. For the regenerate man cannot commit a knowne ſinne with full conſent of will, but there is a reluctation and reſiſting againſt the fleſh, not onely in his conſcience, but alſo in his heart, will and affection. For being ſpirituall and regenerate in all the faculties of his ſoule, the chiefe and principall part of his will adhereth to the law of righteouſneſſe deſiring in all things to yeeld obedience vnto it. And conſequently it reſiſteth the motions of the fleſh, nilling that which it willeth; And if through frailty and weakeneſſe it be ouercome, it hateth and and deteſteth that ſinne with which it is taken captiue, and maketh the Chriſtian to be much diſpleaſed with himſelfe becauſe hee hath committed it. Hee conſenteth to the law of God that it is holy and good, and is more delighted in it, than in the bewitching pleaſures of ſinne. An example whereof we haue in Dauid, who though by his fleſh he was drawne, not onely in his will to embrace, but alſo in his actions to practiſe ſome grieuous ſinnes, yet hee truely ſaith of himſelfe, that in his heart hee hated euery falſe way, and that he would haue reſpect to Gods ſtatutes continually. But the vnregenerate man though he ſometime feeleth ſome pangs of conſcience checking him for his ſinnes, ſo as hee cannot ſecurely ſleepe in them without diſturbance, yet he liketh and

Rom. 7. 21. 23.

Pſal. 119. 104. 118.

loueth them with all his heart, he willingly obeyeth his ſinnefull luſts, he pleaſeth and delighteth himſelfe in them; neither doth any thing trouble him, but the feare of a guilty conſcience, apprehending and expecting deſerued puniſhment; ſo that hee inuerteth the Apoſtles ſpeech and is ready to ſay, the euill I loue that doe I not, but the good I hate that doe I.

§. Sect. 2. The regenerate man cannot at all times doe the euill which the fleſh chuſeth. Gen 39.9.

The effects which ariſe from this conflict in the actions and workes of the man regenerate are diuers: firſt that hee cannot doe the euill at all times which the fleſh chuſeth and imbraceth. And this Ioſeph intimateth in his deniall of the wicked ſuite which his miſtreſſe made vnto him: How can I doe this great wickedneſſe and ſinne againſt God? And what reſtrained him? ſurely the feare of God and his holy ſpirit which would not ſuffer him to fall into ſo great a wickedneſſe. Secondly that hee cannot commit ſinne as the wicked doe with full conſent of will; for ſinne being depoſed from its regency, cannot raigne and rule in the whole man as in times paſt, but is confined vnto a part alone; and ſo farre forth as wee are regenerate wee cannot ſinne. According to that of the Apoſtle; Hee that committeth ſinne is of the Diuell, whoſoeuer is borne of God doth not commit ſin, for his ſeed (that is regeneration or the ſeed of the ſpirit) remaineth in him; and hee cannot ſinne becauſe hee is borne of God. Thirdly that hee cannot walke in the way of ſinners, but propoundeth vnto himſelfe to worſhip and ſerue the Lord in holineſſe and righteouſneſſe; in which courſe though ſometime he ſlippeth and falleth, and ſometime erreth out of the right way for a little ſpace, yet the Spirit of God dwelling in him and conuincing him of his ſinnes, and ſhewing vnto him the digreſſions and errors of his life, exciteth him to riſe againe after his fals, and to returne into his old and right way by renewing his repentance. Whereby it appeareth that they who liue and continue in knowne ſinnes, and make a daily practice of committing wickedneſſe, haue not the worke of regeneration ſo much as begun in them, though they make neuer ſo glorious a profeſſion, and (like Herod) doe many things prayſe-worthy in the ſight of men.

1. Ioh. 3.9.

§. Sect. 3. By reaſon of this conflict he cannot doe the good hee would.

Secondly, by reaſon of this conflict the man regenerate cannot doe the good hee would, nor yeeld that perfect obedience to Gods law which it requireth and hee deſireth. So the Apoſtle out of his owne experience ſaith, that the fleſh luſteth againſt the ſpirit, and the ſpirit againſt the fleſh, ſo that wee cannot doe the things that we would. And againe, what I would that doe I not, but what I hate, that doe I. To will is preſent with me, but how to performe that which is good I find not. For when hee would runne the Chriſtian race, the ſinne that compaſſeth him doth clinge about his necke, and either maketh him for wearineſſe to ſit downe, or to runne forward ſlowly and with great difficultie. It giueth him ſuch blowes and wounds, that hee is often foyled and faileth in his courſe; and when he recouereth himſelfe and riſeth by repentance, though hee laboureth and much deſireth to redeeme his loſt time with his future haſt and ſwiftneſſe, yet after his wraſtling & combate, he goeth on his iourney but haltingly, yea and is often times ſo dazled and blinded with the deceits of the fleſh, that he erreth and goeth aſtray, and oftentimes is haled with violence into the by-wayes of ſinne and wickedneſſe. Whereof it is that our beſt obedience is imperfect, euen after wee are regenerate, and our beſt actions ſo ſtained and defiled by our ſinfull fleſh, that were not their imperfections couered with Chriſts perfect obedience, and their pollutions waſhed away in his blood, they would neuer be acceptable in the ſight of God; for though they ſpring from the pure fountaine of Gods ſpirit, yet running through the filthy puddle of our ſinnefull fleſh, they are hereby defiled and looſe their natiue beautie and puritie.

Gal. 5.17.
Rom. 7.15.18.
Heb. 12.1.

§. Sect. 4. That though the fleſh cannot wholly hinder the ſpirit from good actions, yet it interrupteth it in them.

It is true, that the fleſh in this conflict doth not wholly hinder and withdraw the regenerate man from performing of his duty, nor alienate his mind and heart from the ſtudy and embracing of godlineſſe and righteouſneſſe, but yet it ſtill endeauoureth to doe it, and though it cannot make him to ſtand ſtill or turne backe againe, yet like a heauy burthen it preſſeth him downe and hindereth him in his iourney; though it cannot make him deſiſt running the Chriſtian race, yet it caſteth many blocks in his way, and often trippeth at his heels to make him ſtumble & fall; though it cannot quench and extinguiſh his deſire to ſerue and pleaſe God, yet it much abateth the heate and feruour of his zeale; and though it cannot quite cruſh and ſincke him; yet it will ſo ſhrewdly bowe and buckle him together, that hee is ready to complaine with Dauid, that he is crooked and bowed downe greatly, and therefore goeth mourning all the day long. The conſideration whereof ſhould moue euery Chriſtian to bee humbled in the ſight of his owne frailtie, wants and imperfections, to deny himſelfe and his owne righteouſneſſe, that hee may wholy reſt vpon the perfect and al-ſufficient righteouſneſſe and obedience of Ieſus Chriſt for his iuſtification, and to aſcribe vnto God the whole glory and prayſe of his ſaluation. For the mind, will, heart and affections, which are the cauſes and fountaines from which all our workes doe ſpring, being in part regenerate, and in part vnregenerate, partly ſpirituall and partly carnall, all our workes and actions which proceed and ſpring from

Pſal. 38.6.
Eſa. 64.6.

them

1 Cor.10,12.
Phil.2,12.
Prou.4.24.
Heb.3.13.
12.13.
Rom.7.23.
Prou.4.23.
Heb.3.13.
Heb.12.13.

them muſt needs bee of the like nature. So alſo it ſhould moue vs to worke out our ſaluation with feare and trembling, and whileſt wee ſtand to take heede of falling; ſeeing wee are ſo full of frailty, and are ſo much weakened vnto all good actions through the malignitie and continuall oppoſition of our ſinnefull fleſh. This ſhould make vs to keepe a narrow watch ouer our hearts, that they bee not hardened through the deceitfulneſſe of ſinne, and to lift vp the hands which hang downe, and the feeble knees, and to make ſtraight pathes for our feete, leaſt that which is lame be turned out of the way, as the Apoſtle exhorteth. It ſhould cauſe vs to mourne and grone in the ſight and ſenſe of our carnal corruption, hindering vs in all good actions, and leading vs captiue vnto ſinne, and to cry out with the Apoſtle, wretched man that I am, who ſhall deliuer me from the body of this death? Finally it ſhould moue vs to poure forth daily vnto God moſt feruent and effectuall prayers, deſiring him to annoynt our ſtiffe limbes with the oyle of his Spirit, and to enlarge our hearts, that wee may runne more chearefully and ſwiftly in the way of his Commandments, to ſtrengthen vs daily with his might, and to ſend continually into vs freſh ayds of his ſanctifying graces, whereby wee may bee inabled to withſtand the continuall aſſaults of the fleſh, to ſubdue and mortifie it with the luſts thereof, that it may not bee able to reſiſt the good motions of his Spirit, and hinder our Chriſtian courſe in the way of godlineſſe; and in his good time wholy to aboliſh this our enemy, and to giue vnto vs a full and a finall victory ouer it in Ieſus Chriſt.

CHAP. VIII.

Of the ſubject of this Conflict betweene the fleſh and the ſpirit.

§. Sect.1. There can be no conflict in them that are perfectly ſanctified.

THe next point to be conſidered in this conflict betweene the fleſh and the ſpirit, is the ſubject of it where and in whom it is fought; The which is ſuch perſons as are regenerate, and the faithfull onely, whileſt they liue in the world: for in them only is the cauſe of this conflict, which is the cohabitation of theſe enemies which aſſault and reſiſt one another. Neither can there bee any ſuch combate in the glorified Saints, becauſe they are perfectly ſanctified, and haue no reliques of the fleſh or ſinnefull corruption remaining in them, and conſequently no enemy to oppoſe and reſiſt the ſpirit. For whereas it may be objected that there was a conflict in our Sauiour who was perfectly holy, when being in his agony he prayed to haue the cup paſſe from him, and then ſubmitted his will to his Fathers, Not my will but thine bee done; To this I anſwere, that this was not the conflict betweene the fleſh and the ſpirit; but as the Schoolemen ſpeake betweene two wils in Chriſt, the ſuperiour and the inferiour, or the will of reaſon, and the will of ſenſuality, the one being the will of the fleſh or naturall appetite and concupiſcence, the other the will of the man or the reaſonable creature, as the Apoſtle Iohn ſeemeth to diſtinguiſh them. Thus the Diſciples hauing long watched, by their inferiour will and ſenſuall appetite deſired ſleepe; But the will of reaſon ſhould haue ouerruled this, and therefore becauſe it did not, our Sauiour reproueth them, Could you not watch with me one houre? So a man may by his inferiour will deſire to eate and drinke, and in his ſuperiour will may deſire rather to abſtaine, that it may bee conformable to Gods reuealed will, requiring that wee ſhould humble our ſelues by faſting and prayer. So when death approacheth a man may in his inferiour will and naturall appetite, deſire to liue, and yet in his reaſonable will ſubmit himſelfe to Gods good pleaſure; Yea deſire in many reſpects to bee diſſolued and to bee with Chriſt. And thus our Sauiour being man and in all things like vnto vs, ſinne onely excepted, deſired that the cup of his paſſion might paſſe from him in his inferiour will and naturall appetite, which ſhunneth death and ſeeketh the preſeruation of it ſelfe; but in his reaſonable will conſidering the end why hee came into the world, which was by his death to glorifie God in perfecting the worke of our redemption, he ouerruled the naturall appetite and did wholy ſubmit himſelfe to the will of his Father. Neither is the ſenſuall will ſinnefull and vnlawfull, when it is ſubjected to the reaſonable, but when it goeth about of a ſubject to become a Soueraigne, and to reſiſt and ouerrule that vnto which it ſhould yeeld obedience. Euen as it is no fault in a ſubject to deſire that his owne will in things lawfull or indifferent may bee done, ſo that when hearing the contrary pleaſure of his Prince he doe not rebell againſt it, but is content willingly to ſubmit himſelfe vnto it. Or if wee would haue this ſtrife and conflict to be in the ſame will of Chriſt, wee may ſay that it was a combate, not betweene grace and corruption, but betweene diuers deſires in the ſame will, which may lawfully be in a man, if they bee grounded on diuers reſpects; as a man may at the ſame time lawfully deſire to liue, that hee may glorifie God, or to dye, that hee may ceaſe to ſinne and be glorified by him; hee may deſire to eate, for the refreſhing of nature and the repelling of the paine of hunger, and to faſt, that hee may bee fitted the better for ſome religious ex-

Mat.26.42.
Ioh.1.13.
Mat.26.42.

erciſe. And ſo our Sauiour deſired to haue the cup paſſe from him, hauing reſpect to the preſeruation of his nature, and at the ſame time was willing to die, that he might yeeld obedience to his fathers will, and perfect the worke of our redemption, and yet as one ſaith, Vtrobique Chriſtus, neutrobique peccatum, Chriſt in both, but ſinne in neither.

§. Sect. 2. That this conflict is not in the vnregenerate.

Secondly this conflict is not at all in thoſe who are vnregenerate and vnſanctified, for in theſe one of the combatants which is the ſpirit is wanting, and they are wholy ruled by the fleſh vnder their cheife commander Sathan, whoſe kingdome is not deuided in the carnall man, but hee quietly raigneth without any reſiſtance, and poſſeſſeth all in peace. Neither is there in him any power of oppoſition, for hee is not onely ſicke, but ſtarke dead in treſpaſſes and ſinnes; and there is not any ſparke of ſpirituall life and grace which is wholy from the ſpirit, according to that of the Apoſtle, to be carnally minded is death, but to be ſpiritually minded is life and peace. Sathans throne is ſet vp in them, and hee raigneth not onely like a King, but alſo like a God in the children of vnbeleife, hauing not onely their bodies and outward man, but euen their hearts and ſoules, their wils and affections at his command, ſo as they are neither able nor willing to make any reſiſtance, but yeeld vnto him chearfull obedience. The fleſh as Sathans Vice-roy alſo ruleth in them, and they willingly obey it in the luſts thereof. It raigneth in their mortall bodies, as the Apoſtle ſpeaketh; yea in the moſt excellent parts of their ſoules, the mind and vnderſtanding; for their wiſdome is earthly, carnall and diuelliſh, ſtanding in direct enmitie againſt God, and being in the fleſh they doe only mind things of the fleſh. And therfore the Apoſtle ioyneth both theſe together as being all one; fulfilling the deſires of the fleſh and of the mind. And as they are wholy fleſh ſo all their actions are fleſhly and carnall; for as our Sauiour ſaith, that which is borne of the fleſh is fleſh, and as the Apoſtle telleth vs; when we were in the fleſh, the motions of ſinnes which were by the law, did worke in our members to bring forth fruite vnto death; and being the ſeruants of ſinne, they yeelded their members as ſeruants to vncleanneſſe, and to iniquitie vnto iniquitie. And therefore in thoſe who are meerely naturall and vnregenerate there can bee no ſuch conflict, becauſe they are onely fleſh and no ſpirit, neither can it rightly be ſaid (as Auguſtine affirmeth) that the ſpirit of any man can luſt againſt his fleſh, vnleſſe the ſpirit of Chriſt doe dwell in him.

Eph.2.1.

2.Cor.4.4.
Eph.2.2.

Rom.6.12.

Iam.3.15.

Rom.8.7.

Eph.2.3.

Iob.3.6.

Rom.7.5.

Rom.6.17.19.

Auguſt. Contra. Iulian pelagian. l.6.cap.11. Tit. 7.Col.1136.

§. Sect. 3. That the conflict that is in the regenerate and that which is in the vnregenerate differ much, and firſt in their grounds and cauſes from which they ariſe.

Howbeit wee are to know, that there is euen in the carnall man another fight and skirmiſh, which hauing ſome ſeeming ſhew and ſimilitude of the ſpirituall conflict, is by worldly and ciuill men miſtaken for it; in which reſpect it will not bee amiſſe to idiſtinguiſh them one from another. Firſt then they differ in their ground and cauſe from which they ariſe; for whereas (as hath beene ſhewed) the ſpirituall conflict ariſeth from the grace of regeneration and ſanctification, whereby the gifts and graces of Gods Spirit, being infuſed into all our powers and faculties, doe make warre againſt our carnal corruptions & fleſhly luſts; the conflict which is in the vnregenerate, ariſeth from thoſe reliques of Gods image defaced in vs, oppoſing the image of Sathan and our ſinnefull corruption. For the minde retaineth ſome ſmall ſparkes of the light of nature, and certaine common notions, which receiue ſome little ſtrength and luſtre from the view and ſtudy in the booke of the creatures, and yet a larger increaſe of illumination from the word of God, which illightneth the minde euen of a meere naturall man, with ſpeculatiue & literall knowledge, whereby hee is in ſome ſort enabled to diſcerne betweene good and euill, truth and falſehood, right and wrong. With which light of the vnderſtanding the conſcience being directed, it retaineth alſo a power to excuſe vs when wee doe well, and to accuſe, condemne, terrifie and torment vs when wee doe euill. So the Apoſtle ſaith, that the Gentiles who had not the law, did ſhew the worke of the law written in their hearts, their conſcience alſo bearing witneſſe, and their thoughts the meane while accuſing, or elſe excuſing one another. The will likewiſe retaineth a kinde of freedome, not only about things materially euill, but alſo ſuch as are naturall, ciuill and meerely morall, though herein alſo it bee very weake, corrupt and defectiue. And theſe reliques are common to all men, and in ſome are much encreaſed, and riſe to a farre higher pitch and degree, by the common gifts of the ſpirit and meere ciuill graces, which in a farre greater meaſure are conferred vpon ſome men, than vpon others. But there being mingled in all theſe faculties a ſea of corruption, with ſome ſmall droppes of thoſe created reliques, ioyned with a world of wickedneſſe in the inferiour and ſenſuall faculties of the ſoule; and many of theſe carnall corruptions being in their ſpeciall kinds contrary one to another (although they generally agree in being all ſinfull and euill) from hence ariſeth this warre and diſcord betweene them like vnto theeues and robbers, who all agree together in robbing and ſpoyling of a true man, but fall out among themſelues when they come to deuide the prey. Thus the vnderſtanding by the light of nature or common grace diſcerning in particular actions what is good and to be embraced, & what is euill to & be ſhunned, informeth the conſcience accordingly, and leaueth it to its cenſure and determination, either to approue vs for the doing of good and forſaking of euill, or to condemne vs for the doing of euil and neglecting of good. Vpon which cenſure ſometimes the will is excited and moued to embrace that which the conſcience alloweth, and to refuſe that which it condemneth; ſometime being tranſported by its owne ſinnefull corruption, and ſometime ouerſwayed with the violence of the inferiour will, carnall appetite and vnruly paſſions, it harkeneth vnto them and ſtoppeth the eares to reaſon and conſcience. For example, the vnderſtanding diſcerning that it is grounded on reaſon and equitie, that wee ſhould ſerue God who created vs, and doth continually preſerue vs, according to that of the Apoſtle; For we are his workmanſhip created in Chriſt Ieſus, vnto good workes which God hath before ordained that wee ſhould walke in them; propoundeth this to the conſcience, that by the Law of creation, wee are all bound to ſerue him, the which approueth vs when we ſet our ſelues to ſerue him, and accuſeth vs when we neglect the duties of his ſeruice. So the vnderſtanding diſcerning Gods excellency, goodneſſe and perfection, propoſeth this to the conſcience, that God aboue all is to be honoured and loued, the which light when it hath receiued from the vnderſtanding, it accuſeth and condemneth vs when wee loue or reuerence any thing more than him, condemning vs as guilty of ſinne and liable to fearefull puniſhments; wherewith the heart being affrighted and terrified, it is caſt downe with griefe and ſadneſſe, and oftentimes plunged into vtter deſpaire. But when the vnderſtanding and conſcience through the light of nature, helped and encreaſed by the Scriptures, haue thus in ſome poore ſort and ſmall degree performed their dutie, the will being peruerted with the baites of worldly vanities, doth riſe vp in open rebellion againſt the vnderſtanding and conſcience, and though it acknowledgeth the truth of their propoſitions and concluſions, yet it commeth in with a non obſtante, and reſolueth notwithſtanding they perſwade to the contrary, that it will doe what it liſt, and goe on in its owne courſe, though it bee conuinced to bee the worſt, becauſe howſoeuer it hazardeth the ſoule for the time to come to the loſſe of Heauen and the torments of Hell, yet it bringeth the preſent fruition of earthly vanities. And no ſooner is reaſon and conſcience ready to ſubdue the rebellion of the will, and to perſwade by other arguments vnto obedience, but preſently a tumultuous route of vnruly affections and raging paſſions, come to reſcue and ſtrengthen the will in its rebellion by preſenting vnto it the honours, riches and pleaſures of the world, which it may gaine by following wicked courſes; and if the reaſon and conſcience oppoſe future dangers and would hinder the wils euill choiſe by further perſwaſions, they ſtop the mouth of reaſon with tumultuous rage, and with loud ſhowting and clamorous cryes drowne the voyce of the conſcience, that it is conſtrained to ceaſe directing and accuſing, or to continue doing it in vaine and to no purpoſe. An example whereof wee haue in Laban; for though reaſon and conſcience told him, that hee ought to vſe Iacob well, and richly to reward his ſeruice becauſe God bleſſed all hee had for his ſake, yet his will being corrupted, and his heart and affections wholy caried away with worldly wealth, hee oppreſſeth and wrongeth him with one injury after another. So though reaſon and conſcience told Pharaoh, that he did wickedly in diſobeying Gods commandements and keeping backe his people from ſeruing of him, which made him ſometime, when hee was on the racke of ſome preſent judgement, to confeſſe that hee had ſinned, yet afterwards his heart was hardened, his will rebelled, and his affections being ſet vpon the profit of their ſeruice, did ſtop his eares to all perſwaſions, and to the accuſations of his owne conſcience. Thus Saul in his vnderſtanding conceiued that Dauid was innocent; and therefore his conſcience accuſing him that hee did wickedly in purſuing him, made him to juſtifie him, and to condemne his owne vnjuſtice and faultineſſe; Thou art more righteous than I, for thou haſt rewarded me good, whereas I haue rewarded thee euill; but by and by his will and affections being wholy ſet vpon worldly honour, and tranſported with ambition, he hearkeneth neither to reaſon nor conſcience, but perſecuteth him againe with more than wonted rage. Finally, thus Pilate, aduiſed by reaſon and conſcience, juſtified our Sauiour as innocent and faultleſſe, but his will and affections chiefly deſiring to continue his eſteeme with Cæſar, and to be applauded by the Prieſts, Phariſies and vulgar multitude, he reuerſeth the ſentence of reaſon and conſcience, and vnjuſtly condemneth the innocent to dye with malefactours.

Rom.2.15.

Eph.2.10.

Exod.9.27.34.

1.Sam.24.17.

§. Sect.4. The ſecond difference is in the mouing cauſes of theſe conflicts.

Secondly the conflict betweene the fleſh and the ſpirit, differeth from that which is betweene the reaſon and will, the conſcience and affections in the mouing cauſes, for the ſpirit is moued to aſſault the fleſh by the true loue of God, which cauſeth it to make warre againſt carnall luſts, becauſe they are odious vnto him, as being enemies to his grace, and contrary to his holy will; and by a filiall feare of his Majeſtie which maketh the man regenerate loth to yeeld vnto any motions of ſinne, leſt hee ſhould hereby offend and diſpleaſe him; but the combate betweene the conſcience and affections ariſeth from ſelfe-loue and ſeruile feare, which make the man vnregenerate to withſtand the motions of ſinne in the will and affections for feare of thoſe puniſhments, which will accompany his ſinnes, as horrour of conſcience, ſhame, corporall paine, eternall death and helliſh condemnation, like the ſlaue who dare not offend his maſter, not becauſe hee diſliketh the fault, but becauſe hee feareth the whip; or the thiefe who is reſtrained from robbing, not in obedience to the law, or becauſe hee hateth ſinne or loueth juſtice and truth, but becauſe hee feareth to be hanged on the gallowes. And ſo likewiſe they differ in their ends; for the end at which the regenerate man aymeth in fighting againſt the fleſh, is that he may glorifie God in his victory ouer his ſinfull luſts, and be more & more aſſured of his loue and his owne ſaluation; but the end at which the conſcience of the man vnregenerate aymeth in oppoſing his corrupt will and carnall affections, is that hee may the better compaſſe his worldly deſires, either in the obtaining of ſome earthly good, or the auoyding and eſcaping of ſome imminent euill. In which regard although the ſame effect be produced in them both, & both the man vnregenerate and regenerate doe or leaue vndone the ſame thing, yet the like actions which make a like glorious ſhew in outward appearance, are farre vnlike in the judgement of God, becauſe they ariſe from contrary cauſes, and are directed to contrary ends; and therefore the ſame actions done by the one are approued and accepted as lawfull and good, and of the other rejected and condemned as euill and wicked.

§. Sect. 5.
A third difference betweene the conflict in the regenerate and the vnregenerate, is that this is betweene diuers faculties and that in the ſame.

Thirdly there is a difference betweene theſe conflicts in reſpect of the combatants; for in the combate betweene the fleſh and the ſpirit, there is a conflict betweene grace and corruption, in the ſame faculties, knowledge and ignorance, ſpirituall wiſedome and carnall wiſedome, in the ſame vnderſtandiug; willing and nilling good and euill in the ſame will; accuſing and excuſing for euill in the ſame conſcience; loue of God and loue of the world, feare of God and feare of men, truſt in the Creatour, and truſt in the creature in the ſame affections; temperance and intemperance in the ſame appetite. And here all the powers and faculties of the whole man as they remaiue vnregenerate, doe with vnited forces fight againſt the ſpirit, the reaſon, mind and conſcience not excepted. But in the combate which is in the vnregenerate, the conflict is betweene diuers faculties, which are all carnall and corrupted, fighting one of them againſt another, as beteewne the reaſon and the will, the conſcience and the carnall concupiſcence, paſſions and affections; in which whitherſouer party preuaileth ſtill the vnſanctified man is drawne vnto ſin. And ſo alſo they differ in the manner of the fight, for that which is betweene the ſpirit and the fleſh is done by contrary luſting the one againſt the other in a practicall, reall, and effectuall manner; but that which is betweene the reaſon and the will, the conſcience and the affections, is maintained by logicall diſputes, and mentall diſcourſes, whileſt the conſcience inferres fearefull concluſions of puniſhments, and Gods enſuing judgements vpon the wicked choyſe of the will, and their yeelding to ſatisfie their carnall affections. For though in the creation the will was in ſubjection to reaſon, and embraced or ſhunned that which it approued or diſallowed, and though this order bee commonly obſerued betweene the faculties, euen in this ſtate of corruption; yet after that man rebelled againſt his chiefe Soueraigne, there followed rebellion therupon in the inferior faculties againſt their ſuperiour in the little common-wealth of man; and now the will yeelding obedience no further than it liketh and luſteth, doth often reſiſt reaſon which is his King, and refuſeth to follow its directions, and to allow of its concluſions, but rather embraceth the cleane contrary. Now whileſt reaſon is earneſt in perſwading by arguments, and the will rebellious and violent in croſſing and thwarting it, the conſcience being awakened and rowſed vp, commeth in to the reſcue of reaſon, reſtraining the will from embracing that euill it liketh, by the terrours of puniſhment which it adjudgeth the offender vnto, vpon the committing of the ſinne: wherewith oftentimes when the violence of the will is abated and the courage thereof cooled, ſo that it beginneth to ſtagger and faint in its reſolution, then enters in a tumultuous troope of paſſions & affections, as freſh aydes to ſtrengthen the will in rebellion, which being themſelues firſt hyred and corrupted to doe ſeruice vnto Sathan in ſinnefull deſires and actions, with the preſent pay or expected wages of worldly vanities, doe by the ſame proffers perſwade the will to continue ſtiffe and obdurate in rebellious courſes, and with all reſolution to oppoſe it ſelfe againſt reaſon and conſcience. But yet conſider, that in all this conflict betweene theſe diuers faculties, there is no enmitie & contrariety betweene them in their natures, neither is there more grace or leſſe corruption in the reaſon and conſcience, than in the will and affections, for they as well as theſe doe like and loue ſin with the pleaſures and profits of it in its owne nature, if they were not deterred with the fearefull conſequents of Gods judgments and puniſhments, which they ſee will neceſſarily follow vpon ſuch ſinfull premiſes. Nor is there leſſe enmitie betweene them and Gods grace and goodneſſe, for were they out of the gun-ſhot of danger, they would as willingly imbrace the pleaſures of ſin, as doe the affections and will; but here onely is the difference, that they are more politique enemies to God and all goodneſſe, and more wiſely louing themſelues dare not ſeeke pleaſure in ſuch ſinfull attempts, as will cauſe more bitterneſſe and ſorrow in the end, through ſenſe of puniſhment, than can be counteruailed with the ſhort joy which they ſhall take in the fruition of their wicked delights; whereas the other being more rude and ſenſuall, doe onely looke vpon preſent objects, and therefore when they ſee a bait and booty of ſin ſet out before them, they run vnto it with a headlong violence, not fearing nor caring for the imminent danger of denounced puniſhments.

Rom.2.15.

§. Sect. 6. The conflict betweene the Fleſh and the Spirit is in the ſame faculties.

But it is farre otherwiſe in the conflict betweene the ſpirit and the fleſh, which is not betweene diuers faculties all ſtill remayning and agreeing in their naturall corruption, & onely differing one with another, like Souldiers in the ſame Campe, and fighting vnder the ſame Generall, vpon their diuers reaſons and grounds in the managing of the Warre, the one being more willing in running into dangers, the other more wary to auoid and eſcape them: but it is betweene the ſame faculties, fighting againſt themſelues, reaſon againſt reaſon, and will againſt will, not ariſing from a Syllogiſticall diſcourſe vpon outward grounds of enſuing miſchiefes, but from a reall change of their nature wrought by Gods Spirit, the which becauſe it is but begun and imperfect, the reliques of ſinfull corruption remayning and dwelling in the ſame houſe and heart with ſpirituall and renewed graces, theſe being euen in their owne nature as contrary one to another as fire to water, light to darkneſſe, good to euill, there neceſſarily followeth a continuall conflict betweene them, in which, as vnreconciliable enemies, they ſeeke to deſtroy one another; not moued hereunto by diſcourſe of reaſon, no more than in the fight betweene the Lion and the Dragon, the Dogge and the Beare, the fire and water, but by the antipathy and contrariety which is in their natures. Whereof it is that a new born babe in Chriſt who hath little learning, and a ſmall degree of knowledge and ſpirituall vnderſtanding, doth with as great reſolution withſtand the encounters and motions of ſinne, and endeauours to pleaſe God, though hee be ſcarce able to render a reaſon of his doings, as thoſe who are growne vnto a riper age, and haue attained vnto an higher degree of learning and wiſdome. An example whereof we haue in many poore, ſimple and illiterate men, who as conſcionably auoid all ſin, & practiſe the holy duties of a Chriſtian life, as other Chriſtians who are learned and haue a greater meaſure of knowledge and wiſdome; and alſo in many Martyrs, who being vnlearned and not able to maintaine the truth of their cauſe by ſyllogiſticall diſputes, did yet as reſolutely oppoſe themſelues againſt Idolatry & Popiſh Hereſies, and as willingly and couragiouſly ſeale the Truth with their bloud, as others who had attained to the greateſt Learning. Which plainly ſheweth that their oppoſition to errour and falſhood, was not chiefly grounded on mentall Diſcourſes (for then thoſe who moſt excelled in learning & knowledge ſhould haue as much exceeded in their reſolution and oppoſition) but vpon that ſecret change of nature, made in them by Gods Spirit, by which they oppoſed that which was euill, not onely in their reaſon and vnderſtanding, but alſo in their will, hearts and affections, with all other powers and parts of their ſoules and bodies. By which it appeareth that the Chriſtian is no ſooner conceiued of the ſeed of the Spirit, and by communication of ſauing grace, receiueth ſpirituall life, birth and being, but he preſently becommeth one of Gods Souldiers, and as naturally and voluntarily by vertue of his regeneration, fighteth againſt the Fleſh, the World and the Deuill, without any preſſing by the conſcience, or inticement by the promiſes, or inforcing by the terrours of the Law denouncing puniſhment, if he goe not on this Warfare, onely out of his loue and obedience towards God and his owne inclination carrying him againſt theſe enemies, as it were by a naturall antipathy and inward contrariety, as the fire ſtriueth againſt the water, health againſt ſickneſſe or life againſt death.

§. Sect. 7. The fourth difference is in their contrary effects.

The fourth difference betweene the combat of the Spirit and the fleſh in the regenerate, and betweene the reaſon and will, the conſcience & affections in the vnregenerate, is in their contrary effects; for by the conflict betweene the fleſh and the Spirit, our faith is confirmed in the aſſurance of our regeneration, ſeeing the Spirit of God, which is one of the Combatants dwelleth in vs; of Gods loue and fauour, ſeeing hee hath choſen vs for his Souldiers to fight his battels; & of our owne ſaluation, ſeeing Gods Spirit fighting in and for vs, wee are aſſured of victory (for who can withſtand his power or reſiſt his will?) and of the Crowne of victory, euerlaſting glory promiſed by truth it ſelfe to all thoſe who ouercome. But contrariwiſe from the conflict of conſcience in the vnregenerate (where in oftentimes the worſer part preuaileth) ariſeth doubting and incredulity, terrours, feares and vtter deſpaire in the apprehenſion of Gods wrath & thoſe dreadfull puniſhments which ſin hath deſerued. Secondly, from the combat of the fleſh and ſpirit, vnfained repentance is begun, or renewed and increaſed in thoſe who are regenerate, nerate, for there is a change in them, principally in their wils, hearts and affections, whereby in all things they oppoſe the fleſh, hating that which it loueth, and louing that which it hateth, willing what it nilleth, and nilling that which it willeth; vpon which followeth the purifying of the heart and the purging of it from all ſinfull corruptions, the hating and forſaking of all ſinne, and a hearty deſire and earneſt endeauour to ſerue the Lord in holineſſe and newneſſe of life; and not onely a reformation in part, but totall obedience in all our affections and actions, in the renouncing of all ſin, and the imbracing of all good duties in the whole courſe of our liues. But there is no ſuch change following the conflict betweene the conſcience and affections, reaſon and will, onely there may be ſome pangs of ſorrow and ſhedding of teares, cauſed not by the loue of God or hatred of ſin, but by the apprehenſion and expectation of deſerued puniſhments. There may be alſo ſome confeſſion and acknowledgement of ſin, whileſt they are vpon the racke of conſcience, and are terrified with the feare and apprehenſion, or pinched with the preſent ſenſe and ſmart of puniſhment; and ſome promiſe, or it may be purpoſes, of leauing and forſaking their wicked courſes, as we ſee in the example of Pharaoh, who whileſt the hand of God was vpon himſelfe and his people, confeſſed his ſin and promiſed amendment. And finally, they may out of this ſeruile feare, leaue the moſt of their ſins, and outwardly reforme themſelues and conforme their practice in many things to ſuch obedience, and to the performance of ſo many good duties, that they may thinke themſelues and perſwade others that they are notable Conuerts, as we may ſee in the example of Herod; and yet for all this, there is in them no ſound repentance, no change of nature, no purging & remouing, but onely a temporary reſtrayning of their corruptions, wrought in them not by grace and the Spirit, but by other corruptions of a different nature, namely, ſeruile feare and terrour of conſcience; As hereby it plainly appeareth, in that when as they are taken from the racke, and ſecured in their conceit from the feeling of further puniſhment, they returne againe to their wicked courſes, and become more obdurate and rebellious than they were before, or if there is any ſhew of ſome amendment, yet it is not a through reformation, or a purging of the heart from all the filth of ſin, ſuch as followeth the conflict of the ſpirit and the fleſh, but a reducing of the vnregenerate man from extremity to ſome mediocrity, from being a Publican and notorious ſinner, to be a Phariſie, Hypocrite, or at the beſt a meere ciuill man, conformable to the Politique Lawes in the ſtate, and no oppoſer to outward Diſcipline and Order in the Church. And this alſo is the worke of naturall reaſon, which perſwadeth them to this reformation for worldly reſpects: whereas the other is the worke of the Spirit, which in loue and obedience to God beginneth and continueth this amendment in them; the fruit and benefit whereof redoundeth chiefly to the preſeruation of humane ſociety, the good of Common-wealths in the mayntayning of externall Diſcipline, which could not ſtand againſt the rage and fury of tumultuous paſſions and affections, were it not that their ſtrength is abated and their violence reſtrained by the conflict of conſcience; whereas the fruits of the combate betweene the ſpirit and the fleſh are much better; namely, the aduancement of Gods glory by our worſhipping and ſeruing him in ſpirit and truth, the ſtrengthening and increaſing of our faith, the inward purging and purifying of the heart and conſcience from the hidden and ſecret corruption of all ſin, humiliation in this life, and glorification in the life to come; for all that thus fight ſhall ſurely ouercome, and receiue for their reward, the Crowne of victory, euerlaſting bleſſedneſſe. Thirdly, the warre betweene the ſpirit and the fleſh cauſeth vnto vs the moſt ſecure peace, euen peace with God, when as becomming his Souldiers we fight vnder his Standard, againſt his and our enemies; peace betweene the faculties of our ſoules when as the inferiour faculties are in quiet ſubjection to the ſuperiour, the affections harkening vnto and obeying the conſcience, the will yeelding voluntary obedience to reaſon as Gods Vice-roy, and all to God as their ſupreame Soueraigne. It bringeth alſo with it vnſpeakable comfort, ſpirituall rejoycing & joy in the Holy Ghoſt, becauſe it aſſureth vs of Gods loue and gracious aſſiſtance, of a full and finall victory ouer all our enemies, & the Crowne of Victory euerlaſting Glory. But the conflict of conſcience in the vnregenerate cauſeth continuall garboyles and hot diſſention, tyranny in the ſuperiour faculties ruling onely by ſeruile feare, and rebellion in the inferiour, when as they haue power to breake the yoke of Gouernment; horrour and anguiſh of minde, diſconſolate ſorrow and helliſh deſpaire, when the affrighted conſcience beareth ſway; or the mad and tumultuous joy of frantique men, when the wilde affections and diſordred paſſions, by gagging and ſilencing the conſcience, doe get the vpper hand, the which oftentimes laſting no longer than a blaze of thornes, doth leaue behind it redoubled griefe and deſperate deſpaire. Finally, the conflict betweene the ſpirit and the fleſh maketh the man regenerate with more care and diligence to obſerue his own heart, and more conſcionably to watch ouer all his wayes,

that

Marke 6.20.

that he giue no aduantage to his ſinfull fleſh. It cauſeth him ſtudiouſly to affect and earneſtly to endeauour, in the vſe of all good meanes, whereby the ſpirituall part may be more and more ſtrengthened, and the fleſh with all carnall luſts may be mortified and ſubdued, that ſo it may not rebell and gather ſtrength to preuayle againſt it, as wee ſee in the example of the Apoſtle. But the conflict of conſcience is commonly joyned with ſecure retchleſneſſe; whereby the vnregenerate man doth careleſly neglect the cauſes and occaſions of this bitter conflict, vntill he be ouer-taken with them, and onely auoideth the puniſhment and not the ſin which cauſeth it, or the ſin onely, when hee is ſenſible of the puniſhment. It worketh in him no care to mortifie his ſins, vnleſſe it be onely in outward fact, and that alone for ſeruile feare of paine and ſmart, and not in loue and obedience vnto God: yea, ſtill hee loueth them as his deareſt darlings, and when he dare not giue them place and entertainment in his workes and actions, as it were, in his outward roomes, hee ſecretly lodgeth them in his heart, as in his ſecret cloſet or priuate Chamber. It doth not make him vſe any meanes to ſubdue his fleſh and mortifie his corruptions, yea, rather it bringeth him into a ſluggiſh deſpaire, which maketh him to cry out, that there is a Lion in the ſtreet, to ſtarue his ſoule becauſe hee will not take paines to plucke his hand out of his boſome and put it to his mouth; to ſtop his eares againſt all good counſell, and to harden his heart againſt all inſtruction and exhortation, whereby he is taught the way whereby he may come out of his miſery, or is incited and ſtirred vp to walke in it, complayning that all theſe meanes are vnto him vſeleſſe & bootleſſe, ſeeing hee is already irrecouerably plunged into a deſperate condition. Or elſe if he vſe at all the meanes of his recouery, it is onely in hypocriſie, not with a deſire to profit by them, but onely to ſtop the cry of conſcience, vpon this perſwaſion that God will be contented with this formall ſeruice, notwithſtanding that he ſtill goeth on in his wicked courſes.

1.Cor.9.27.

§. Sect. 8.
The fift difference is in the ſubiect matter or occaſion.

The fift difference is the ſubject matter or occaſion, about which theſe conflicts are made by theſe diuers enemies. For the Fleſh and the Spirit do in all things oppoſe againſt one another; the Spirit, the Fleſh in all that is euill; the Fleſh, the Spirit in all that is good. For there is no good action which the ſpirituall man performeth, but the fleſh interpoſing, hindreth and interrupteth him; as in Prayer, hearing the Word, receiuing the Sacrament, Sanctification of the Sabbath, the workes of Iuſtice and Mercy, Temperance, and Sobriety, ſometime wholy withdrawing him from them, and ſometime diſtracting and diſabling him in them, which maketh him to complaine with the Apoſtle; To will is preſent with mee, but I find not how to performe that which is good. For I find a Law, that when I would doe good, euill is preſent with me; the which is to be vnderſtood, not only of particular actions but alſo of our whole life and conuerſation. And contrariwiſe there is no euill knowne to the ſpirit, and done by the fleſh, wherein the ſpirit doth not croſſe and oppoſe it, (no not thoſe ſins which by carnall men are thought ſleight and veniall) either hindering and reſtraining the regenerate man, that he may not fall into it, or mouing him being falne to riſe againe by vnfained repentance. But the conflict of conſcience extendeth not to the whole courſe of life, but onely to ſome particular actions, and yeelding vnto the will and affections in leſſer, common and ordinary ſins, it onely contendeth with them about the committing of ſuch ſins as are hainous and outragious, and eſpecially thoſe which are againſt the ſecond Table, not ſo much regarding or reſtrayning them in thoſe which are committed againſt the firſt.

Rom.7.18,21.

§. Sect. 9.
The laſt difference is in reſpect of time,

The laſt difference betweene theſe diuers conflicts is in reſpect of time; for the combat betweene the fleſh and the ſpirit beginneth at the time of our regeneration and conuerſion, and not before; and being begun it is conſtant and continuall to the very end of our liues, though it may haue ſome intermiſſions in reſpect of our ſenſe and feeling, as when the ſpirit through the thicke vapour of corruption raiſed by the fleſh, is caſt into a ſlumber, or by ſome mighty blow wounding the conſcience, aſtoniſhing the ſenſes, and hardening the heart, is (as it were) caſt into a ſowne, and hath no ſignes of ſpirituall life remayning in it, out of which it alwayes recouereth being excited and re-enliued by Gods quickening Spirit. But the combat of conſcience doth begin oftentimes long before conuerſion, euen as ſoone as wee haue the vſe of reaſon and vnderſtanding, receiuing common notions from the light of Nature; but it is neither conſtant and continuall but only by pangs and fits, vpon the occaſion of ſome grieuous ſin already acted, or about to be committed; nor yet alwayes permanent and laſting to the end of life, ſeeing oftentimes by cuſtomable ſinning the conſcience becommeth ſo deaded & ſeared, that it taketh no notice of ſin, nor oppoſeth againſt the will & affections, but (as it were) caſteth the reines in their necke, neuer at all checking or curbing them in, but ſuffering them to run on in an head-long courſe, vnto the committing of all manner of wickedneſſe.

Chap. IX.

That the Conflict of Conſcience is not in all that are vnregenerate nor in them onely.

§. Sect.1. That no comfort ariſeth out of the conflict of conſcience.

And thus we haue ſhewed the many differences betweene the combat of the Fleſh and Spirit, and of the Conſcience and Affections. Whereby it is plaine, that as the former giueth vnto vs comfortable aſſurance of our Regeneration, Adoption and Saluation, ſo there can no ſuch hope ariſe from the other. For, as we ſee, it may be, and moſt commonly is in the wicked and reprobate, it hath no reference to God, nor ſpringeth from Faith, Loue, filiall feare and obedience, but from carnall ſelfe-loue, and ſeruile feare of iudgement and puniſhment; not from any diſlike of ſin, the which the wicked in the hotteſt of this conflict doe loue with all their heart, but onely becauſe they deſire to auoide the puniſhment, like vnto children, whoſe teeth water when they ſee licorous meats, but yet dare not touch them for feare of the rod. An example whereof wee haue in Balaam, who with all his heart would haue ſinned in curſing Gods people, that he might haue gained the reward of vnrighteouſneſſe, but yet durſt not doe it for Balaacs Kingdome, becauſe he was afraid to bee ouer-whelmed by Gods fearefull vengeance. And though theſe Combatants fight one with another, yet are both corrupt and ſinfull, and both Souldiers in Satans Campe, ioyning together in the common cauſe, howſoeuer diſſenting in ſome particular quarrels, and fighting one againſt another, like contrary vices, prodigality againſt couetouſneſſe, preſumption againſt deſpaire, raſh foole-hardineſſe againſt baſe cowardize; or like Pirats in the ſame ſhip who fall together by the eares about ſome particular wicked deſignes; though they all agree to rob the Merchant.

§. Sect.2. That the conflict of conſcience may bee in the regenerate.

But howſoeuer this conflict of conſcience be in the wicked and reprobate, yet wee are to know that it is not in them onely, nor yet in all. For this combat may alſo be in the faithfull and regenerate; yet not in the part regenerate, for the ſanctified will and affections doe not oppoſe the ſanctified conſcience and reaſon, but there is a goodly harmony betweene them, the will and affections being guided & ruled by the vnderſtanding, & it by God our ſupreame Soueraigne, and conſcience approouing of this holy gouernment and ſubiection. But in the vnregenerate part euen the faithfull themſelues doe feele this conflict in them betweene conſcience accuſing for feare of iudgement & puniſhment, and carnall concupiſcence drawing them to ſin. The which is more weake on that ſide of paſſion, becauſe their corruption is much abated and ſubdued, but ſtronger on the ſide of conſcience, becauſe it is excited with a greater illumination diſcouering more manifeſtly the odiouſneſſe of ſin, and fearefulneſſe of thoſe puniſhments which it deſerueth. Howſoeuer in another reſpect the violence of it is abated, namely, as it terrifieth with ſeruile feare, and denounceth againſt the offender hell and condemnation, from which thoſe who are in Ieſus Chriſt are freed and deliuered. But let vs know that though this fight be in the faithfull, yet it bringeth not (like that of the ſpirit & the fleſh) any comfort or aſſurance of Gods loue, ſanctification, adoption or ſaluation, becauſe it is not proper to the godly, but is alſo common to the wicked and vnregenerate.

Rom.8.1.

§. Sect.3. This conflict of conſcience is not in thoſe who are extremely ignorant.

Secondly, this conflict is not in all the vnregenerate. For firſt it is not in them who are either extremely ignorant or outragiouſly wicked. The former are of two ſorts, firſt, ſuch as are not capable of knowledge, as young children, Ideots, and madmen, who though they haue the facultie of reaſon habitually or potentially in reſpect of the vſe, yet not in the act or exerciſe of it; & therefore their conſcience receiuing no illumination from their vnderſtanding, putteth no difference betweene good and euill, neither accuſeth them for any ſin, nor at all reſiſteth their will and affections. For though they haue conſcience in them in reſpect of the faculty, yet like thoſe that are in a dead ſleepe, they haue it not in act and operation. Secondly, ſuch as being capable of knowledge, haue through their negligence or wilfulneſſe ſuffered thoſe ſparkes of the light of Nature to goe out for want of blowing vpon them by vſe and exerciſe, or nouriſhing them with fit meanes (as it were) neceſſary fuell, which is the caſe of many Ethnicks, and Barbarians, yea, of ſome who would be called by the names of Chriſtians, who through affected ignorance, are ſo farre from the illumination of grace, that they haue quite obſcured and extinguiſhed the light of Nature. Thoſe alſo who are outragiouſly wicked haue ſeldome in them the conflict of conſcience, becauſe the Lord puniſheth their other ſins by giuing them ouer to their owne vile affections and a reprobate mind, whereof it commeth to paſſe, that their vnderſtanding being darkened, and euen quite blinded, the common notions and the light of Nature being cleane put out and extinguiſhed, their cõſciences alſo are ſeared & ſenſles, ſo as they neuer checke and controule them for any ſins, and ſuch a callum and thicke skin ouergroweth their hearts, and ſo hardeneth them through their often committing of knowne wickedneſſe, that without any feeling or remorſe, they commit any manner of ſin with delight and greedineſſe. An example whereof wee haue in thoſe Idolatrous Heathens of whom the Apoſtle ſpeaketh, who not worſhipping God according to that light which they had by nature, and by looking into the booke of the creatures, they became vaine in their fooliſh imaginations, and had their minds ſo darkened, as that they gaue the glory of God to the baſeſt of the creatures; whereupon God gaue them vp to vncleaneſſe, to their owne vile affections, and to a reprobate minde to do thoſe things which are not conuenient. So elſe where he ſaith of them, that they walked in the vanitie of their minds, hauing their vnderſtanding darkened, being alienated from the life of God, through the ignorance which was in them, becauſe of the blindneſſe of their heart, and being paſt feeling, had giuen themſelues ouer vnto laſciuiouſneſſe to worke all vncleaneſſe with greedineſſe. And writing to Timothy hee ſpeaketh of ſome in theſe later times, who ſhould haue their conſciences ſeared with an hote iron: Wherby they become ſo ſenſeleſſe, that they take no notice of any ſinne, nor accuſe for the committing of any wickedneſſe. For as the greateſt blowes which light vpon an anuile, doe not at all moue it, but it cauſeth the waightieſt hammer to rebound back againe; and as the deepeſt gaſhes and moſt grieſly wounds, giuen to a member which is mortified, or to a part gangrened, are not at all felt; and therefore the partie vpon whom they are inflicted neuer complaineth nor ſhrinketh for them: So when the gangrene of ſin hath ouerrun the intellectual faculties, blinding the vnderſtanding and deading the conſcience, though there be deep gaſhes made in them they feele them not, and therfore bewray neither feare nor griefe by accuſing and complaining of the cauſes of their euils.

Rom.1.Verſe 21.to Verſe 31.

Epheſ.4 17,18, 19.

1.Tim.4.2.

§. Sect.4. The conflict of conſcience is ſeldome in ſimple people.

And among all theſe the conſcience and affections, the reaſon and will are at a ſecure, ſenſleſſe and ſinfull peace. There are diuers other ſorts of men in whom their peace is not ſo continuall and permanent, but yet there is often a truce betweene them, which is ſometimes of ſhorter, and ſometimes of longer continuance according as the occaſions be of their agreeing or diſcording with one another. The firſt are ignorant and ſimple people whoſe conſciences through defect in knowledge and want of vnderſtanding, wanting illumination and direction, doe ſeldome checke them for any thing they doe, vnleſſe it bee ſo groſſely wicked, that euen the light of nature doeth diſcouer and condemne it. And here the reaſon and will, the conſcience and affections, continue friends and maintaine peace, becauſe they are not able to diſcerne thoſe iuſt cauſes which are offered of diſcording from one another; like enemies who lye quietly in their tents in the darke night, when the aduerſe party doeth goe a ſpoyling and forraging, becauſe they haue no light to diſcouer their attempts. Oppoſite vnto theſe are thoſe carnall men who hauing a great meaſure of ſpeculatiue knowledge, art, and learning, are able by their paralogiſmes and ſubtill ſophiſtry, their nice diſtinctions, and cunning ſhifts, to make blacke ſeeme white, darkeneſſe light, falſehood trueth, and good euill: whereby they blinde the eye of reaſon, ſtoppe the mouth of conſcience, and ſo corrupt and dazle the iudgement, that they can do what euill they liſt, and ſatisfie in all things their carnall luſts and affections vncontrouled and condemned. Of theſe it is truely ſaid, that they haue much ſcience and litle conſcience, like thoſe Lamia who were ſharpeſighted when they went abroad, but ſtarke blinde, when they entred into their houſes; or the Phariſees who ſitting in Moſes chaire were able to teach others their duties, and to rebuke and controule them for their ſmalleſt ſinne, but were not able to ſee their owne carnall worldlineſſe, helliſh pride and damnable hypocriſie, & as our Sauiour chargeth them, could diſcerne a mote in their neighbours eye, though there were a beam in their owne. In theſe there is no conflict of conſcience becauſe like crafty and skilfull Lawyers, they can with falſe colours and colluſions blinde the eyes of the Iudge, making their euill cauſe ſeeme juſt and good; or like cunning Theeues, they doe ſo ſubtilly and ſecretly atchieue their wicked deſignes, that when they come to be arraigned they ſhift off and elude the moſt pertinent accuſations.

Math.7.5.

§. Sect.5. That the conflict of conſcience is not in proud Iuſticiaries and ciuill Worldlings.

Vnto theſe wee may adjoyne proude Iuſticiaries, who taking away from the Law of God the life and vigour of ſpirituall ſenſe, do expound it after a groſſe and literall manner, that ſo they may ſatisfie it with their groſſe obedience; and becauſe their obedience cannot reach to the ſpirituall meaning, therefore they frame a meaning ſutable to their carnall obedience. And ſo juſtifying themſelues as though they had done all which the Law requireth, their conſciences ſleepe ſecurely in all their ſinfull courſes, & neuer accuſe them for any ſin; of which we haue an example in the Phariſies, who juſtified themſelues when our Sauiour moſt condemned them; in the young Iuſticiary who boaſted that hee had done all which was required, when as he had done nothing; and in the vain-glorious Papiſts, who farre out-ſtrip them both, affirming that they can fulfill the Law, and doe more than it requireth; for which indeed they haue ſpeciall helpes, ſeeing they giue what ſenſe they liſt to euery Commandement; and if they can make no ſenſe ſeeme ſenſible & probable to their too dim-ſighted followers, then for more ſurety they will quite cancell and blot it out, as they deale with the ſecond Commandement, condemning their Imagery and Idolatry, and hauing

Luke 16.15.
Math,19.20.

uing made none of one, they make of one two, by diuiding of the tenth, and ſo filling vp the number, that their theft and falſehood may not be diſcouered. Like vnto theſe are our ciuill Worldlings and ignorant Proteſtants, who placing all Religion in outward abſtaining from haynous faults, as perjury, whoredome, drunkenneſſe & ſuch like, and in performing formall ſeruice to God, according to the Princes Lawes, and morall duties of honeſty and juſtice to one another, doe thinke that God is throughly ſatisfied when they haue attained to this period of perfection, which themſelues haue pitched. And therefore their conſciences are quiet, and ſuffer them to enjoy a ſecure peace, though they liue in ignorance and vnbeliefe, in the neglect of ſpirituall Seruice, Swearers, Sabath breakers, and in all things follow thoſe courſes, which Ambition, Couetouſneſſe, Voluptuouſneſſe and Selfe-loue will preſcribe vnto them.

§. *Sect.*6. That the conflict of conſcience is ſeldome in thoſe who are tranſported with violent paſſions.

Finally, wee may adde vnto theſe ſuch others, as are violent and furious in their affections, who whileſt the fit and feauer of their paſſion laſteth, can commit any wicked out-rage, and neuer feele any conflict of conſcience. Not becauſe reaſon is quite blind, and conſcience dumbe, but becauſe ſeeing & ſpeaking, they are not heard and diſcerned; no more than the ſpeech of a wiſe Citizen & Senator in a tumultuous vproare of common people. Not becauſe they vtterly refuſe to doe their office and make reſiſtance, but becauſe they are ſo carried away and hurried with the violence of the throng, that they are not able to keepe their ſtanding or hinder their proceedings. Or if we will, wee may here compare reaſon and conſcience in them, to that they are in Drunkards, which are ſo hindred & diſabled with intoxicating fumes, that they are not able to doe their functions, till by naturall heate they be ſpent and ſcattered. But in theſe commonly, when the heate and violence of paſſion is ſomewhat ſpent and abated, reaſon, and conſcience eſpecially, doth recouer ſtrength, and (like a Prince foyled and put to flight by his rebellious ſubjects) recouering by force his ſtate and dignity, of a King becomes a Tyrant, and ſo much the more ſeuerely keepeth them vnder, by how much hee hath taſted more ſenſibly of the miſchiefes accompanying their rage and diſloyalty. For thus experience teacheth vs, that when conſcience hath beene foyled and wounded with rage and paſſion, their power being ſpent by their owne fury, it doth afreſh ſet vpon them, and beating them out of their holds doth put into their place affrighting terrours and aſtoniſhing feares, & ſo terrifieth the heart with its vehement accuſations, that oftentimes it ſinketh into the gulfe of deſpaire; the which wee ſee manifeſt in the example of Caine, Saul, Iudas & many others. And theſe are the men in whom either a peace or truce is maintayned betweene the conſcience and affections, there being whileſt it laſteth no conflict betweene them. Now if we would know in whom principally this combat is fought, it is in ſuch vnregenerate men as haue ſtill remayning in them ſome common notions of the light of Nature, encreaſed by their ſtudy in the Volume of the Creatures, and in the Booke of holy Scripture, and their obſeruation of the due execution of Gods fearfull judgements. In ſuch whoſe conſcience remayneth liuely and ſenſibly ſoft and vigorous, becauſe it is not yet cautherized and ſeared with the often and wilful committing of haynous ſins. Finally, in ſuch whoſe affections are ſomewhat gentle and moderate, and whoſe hearts are not ſo hardened nor wholy taken vp with wicked infidelity, but that they giue ſome credit to Gods fearefull threatnings.

Chap. X.

Whether the Conflict betweene the Fleſh and Spirit be in all the regenerate, and whether, if it be, it bee in ſame manner and meaſure.

§. *Sect.*1. That this ſpirituall conflict is in all the regenerate that are of yeeres.

WE haue ſhewed that the conflict betweene the fleſh and the ſpirit is onely in the regenerate, and how it differeth from that conflict of conſcience, which is oftentimes in many of the wicked; now let vs conſider whether that combate bee in all the regenerate. Secondly whether it bee in all in the ſame manner and meaſure. Thirdly how we may know whether this conflict bee in vs or no. And laſtly, if it bee when it beginneth and how long this conflict is to continue. Concerning the firſt wee are to know, that this conflict betweene the fleſh and ſpirit is in all the regenerate, who haue receiued ſpirituall illumination, and haue the vſe of their reaſon and vnderſtanding, being poſſeſſed of Gods ſanctifying graces, not onely in their habites but alſo in their acts and operations, not in the faculties alone, but alſo in their functions and exerciſes. For as long as theſe curſed corruptions (like the Canante in the land) doe co-inhabite with vs, they will continually be as ſcourges to our ſides, and thornes in our eyes; and ſtill there will bee warre betweene vs, whileſt they labour to hold their poſſeſſion, and wee endeauour to roote them out. And howſoeuer our chiefe Commander may ſometime ſound a retraite, and giue vs ſome intermiſſions for the renewing of our forces, and recouery of our breath, yet vtter diſmiſſions wee ſhall not not haue from this warlicke ſeruice, till hauing (like our Head and Sauiour) by death ouercome all our enemies, wee ſhall receiue the crowne of victory, and for euer tryumphantly rejoyce in the ſecurity of our peace.

Ioſh.23.13.

§. Sect. 2. What we are to thinke of Infants and Ideots.

But whereas I ſay that this conflict is in all the regenerate who haue the vſe of reaſon and vnderſtanding, I doe from among them exempt ſuch infants and ideots as want the vſe of reaſon, and yet belong to Gods election; in whom God worketh for their juſtification, ſanctification and ſaluation, after an extraordinary, ſecret and wonderfull manner, applying Chriſt vnto them his righteouſneſſe, obedience, and the vertue of his death and reſurrection by his holy ſpirit, who al-ſufficiently ſupplyeth vnto them the defect of all inferiour inſtruments & meanes, and hereby purgeth and cleanſeth them from the guilt, puniſhment and corruption of all their ſinnes. Now in theſe there cannot actually bee this conflict betweene the ſpirit and the fleſh, becauſe they haue not the acts and operations of ſpirituall graces, but only the ſeeds of them, which though they may haue their potentiall inclinations to this conflict, yet no preſent actuall exerciſe and voluntary imployment of them in this ſpirituall warfare. Although it may bee, thus much may bee granted, that ſeeing by their regeneration there is a change in their nature, by which they are ſpiritually renewed in all their powers and faculties, there may bee in them all, an auerſeneſſe in their renewed nature to their olde corruptions (as it were) by an holy inſtinct and diſpoſition, wrought in them by Gods ſpirit, although there bee no diſcourſe of reaſon or vſe of vnderſtanding, euen as wee ſee by naturall antipathy fire and water, light and darkeneſſe contending and ſtriuing againſt one another, though they haue no will or reaſon to ſtirre them vnto the fight. For though (as wee haue ſhewed) the conflict of conſcience ariſeth out of logicall diſputes and the diſcourſe of reaſon and vnderſtanding, and therefore can onely bee in them who haue the vſe of theſe, yet this combate of the ſpirit ſpringing from another fountaine, euen the change of a nature through ſpirituall regeneration, there may (in that ſenſe which I haue ſhewed) euen in children and ideots, bee ſome kind of conflict betweene the ſpirit and the fleſh, the ſeed of grace and of corruption ſtriuing againſt one another. All which is to bee vnderſtood not of all infants belonging to Gods Election, but onely of thoſe which dye in their infancy, who hauing much to bee done for the quicke perfecting of that great worke of their ſaluation, whileſt they are going that ſhort paſſage betweene the wombe and their heauenly inheritance, God to manifeſt his infinite wiſedome, power and goodneſſe, doth thus worke in them after a wonderfull and extraordinary manner. And as for thoſe who liue to riper age, and vntill they haue the vſe of reaſon and vnderſtanding, they haue not this conflict in them before their regeneration and conuerſion, becauſe then onely the ſpirit and its ſanctifying graces doe begin to dwell in them, and to make warre againſt their carnall corruptions.

§. Sect. 3. That this conflict is not in all the regenerate in like manner and meaſure.

As touching the ſecond point, we are to know, that the conflict betweene the ſpirit and the fleſh is not in all the regenerate after the ſame manner, nor in the ſame meaſure, but diuerſly as it pleaſeth the Lord to glorifie himſelfe in the manifeſtation of his wiſdome, goodneſſe, and omnipotencie, either by giuing vnto his ſeruants a great meaſure of ſtrength and ſpirituall grace by which they obtaine an eaſie victorie, wherein the bounty of his goodneſſe clearely ſhineth, or a leſſe and ſcanter proportion, by which notwithſtanding they are inabled as certainely, though not ſo ſpeedily to ouercome, hereby magnifying the all-ſufficiencie of his power, which more manifeſtly appeareth in our greater weakeneſſe. For according as the meaſure of our ſpirituall ſtrength and riches of Gods grace, as alſo of carnall corruption differ in reſpect of their diuers proportions, ſuch is the difference in this Chriſtian combate betweene one faithful man and another. For ſome receiue but a ſmall meaſure of ſpiritual illumination, the leaſt degrees of faith, confidence, loue and other ſpirituall graces; and theſe through their weakeneſſe, commonly make weake aſſaults againſt the fleſh and fleſhly luſts, and as weakely withſtand their encounters, whereof it commeth to paſſe that they ſtand in the battaile with much more faintneſſe & frailetie, and receiue many wounds, foyles and falls, before they obtaine the victory. Though the Lord performing euen to theſe his gracious promiſes, doth not ſuffer them to bee tempted aboue their power, but either aſſiſteth them by his owne might, or fitteth them with ſlight tentations, according to their weakeneſſe. Sometimes there is in the regenerate leſſe reformation of their corrupt natures by the reſtraining grace of God and the common gifts of the ſpirit, by reaſon whereof the fleſh is of greater ſtrength and the corruptions thereof are much more malignant, raging and violent in all the faculties of their ſoules, eſpecially in their wils, paſſions and affections. So that though they haue a great meaſure of ſtrength and ſpirituall grace, yet they cannot with any eaſe, or in ſhort time get the vpper hand, but there is much ſtrugling and wraſtling, ſharpe and fierce aſſaults on both ſides, as is betweene mighty enemies equally matched, and ſometimes the one, ſometimes the other preuaileth, and wound-

2. Cor. 12. 9.

eth and foyleth the aduerſe party; like thoſe warres of old betweene the Romanes and Carthaginians, and thoſe mighty enemies the Turkes and Perſians in theſe dayes. And becauſe both parties continue in their great ſtrength, hereof it commeth to paſſe, that theſe ſharpe and fierce encounters, doe alſo laſt euen to the end of their liues, vntill the Lord by death do put an end to the battaile, giuing vnto the ſpirituall man full and finall victory ouer all his enemies, and the crowne of victory euerlaſting happineſſe.

§. Sect. 4. That this conflict is often weake in ſtrong Chriſtians,

Finally the Lord to ſhew the riches of his bounty, doth ſometimes giue vnto his ſeruants ſuch a large meaſure of ſpirituall ſtrength, ſauing grace, knowledge, faith, loue, Chriſtian magnanimitie and the reſt, that like thoſe mighty worthies in the time of Dauid, none of their ſpiritual enemies are able to withſtand them, but in the firſt encounters after this ſtrength receiued, they foyle, wound, and vanquiſh them, either leading them captiue without any great reſiſtance, or elſe putting them to a ſhamefull flight. So as they neuer againe gather their ſcattered forces, nor once dare to enter the field; onely they may perhaps after a treacherous manner lye in ambuſhment, and make ſome attempt vpon ſome great aduantage. And in this caſe the ſpirituall ſouldiour gloriouſly tryumpheth ouer his ſpirituall enemies, and keeping them vnder with vnreſiſtable power, doth enioy his victory with much peace and heauenly comfort. But all this while wee are to remember that the Chriſtian Champion, and the Lords great Worthy, doth not thus preuaile by vertue of any naturall ſtrength which hee hath aboue others of his fellow ſouldiers, but (like Sampſon) through the gifts of the ſpirit, and the power of God communicated vnto him; which becauſe through their pride and ſelfe-loue they are apt to forget, and being ſwollen vp in their owne conceipts, to rob God of his glory, by arrogating ſome part of the prayſe of their ſpirituall ſtrength and victories vnto themſelues; the Lord leaueth them by ſpirituall deſertions vnto their owne abilities, and letteth looſe their enemies to aſſault and encounter them. In which caſe they are vtterly vnable to ſtand in the leaſt conflict, but are ſhamefully foyled, put to flight, and led captiue of ſin, as wee ſee in example of Noah, Lot, Iob, Dauid, Peter, and many others. And then being diſcouraged and diſcomfited they complaine with Iob, that God oppoſeth them as a mighty enemie, making them his markes, and ſhooting againſt them his enuenomed arrowes; With Dauid, that God hath forſaken them, will be no more intreated, but hath ſhut vp his kindneſſe in diſpleaſure, that his terrours doe fight againſt them, dry their bones, and drinke vp their ſpirits; And finally with the Church they cry out; O Lord, why haſt thou made vs to erre from thy wayes, and hardened our heart from thy feare? Be not wroth very ſore O Lord, neither remember iniquitie for euer. On the other ſide the fleſh all this while proudly ſwelleth in victorie, inſulting ouer the ſpirit, and ſaying, is this the man that tooke God for his hope? And carryeth away the ſpoiles, vaunting it ſelfe in a wicked tryumph. But though God hath withdrawne himſelfe a little, that the ſpirituall man might more earneſtly ſeeke him, yet hee doth not vtterly forſake his ſouldiers and ſeruants, and thoſe his graces in them; and though in reſpect of ſenſe, motion & outward operation, they ſeeme quite dead and vtterly extinguiſhed, yet in truth they are but in a ſwound, and (as it were) couered ouer with the aſhes of corruption; and therefore when the Lord reuiueth them, bloweth vpon them with his ſpirit, and cheriſheth their inward heate, by freſh fuell, and a new acceſſe of ſauing grace, then Sampſons haire growing out againe, hee recouereth his ſtrength, and the Chriſtian Champion being grieued and aſhamed for his former foyles, gathereth together his ſcattered forces, and with more than wonted valour and reſolution encountering his enemies, he putteth them to flight, obtaineth the victory, and for euer after holdeth them vnder in more baſe ſubjection.

Iob.6.4.

Pſal.22.1.& 77.78.

Eſa.63.17.& 64.9.

Chap. XI.

How wee may know whether this conflict bee fought in vs, that is; whether the ſpirit of God dwell in vs or no.

§. Sect. 1. That euery faithfull man may and ought to be aſſured that the Spirit of God dwelleth in him.

The third point propounded is how a Chriſtian may know, whether there bee in him this conflict betweene the ſpirit and the fleſh, or no; which is in effect as much as to know, whether we bee ſound Chriſtians, whether wee bee the children of God, whether wee belong to Gods election; and finally whether we haue in vs any ſauing grace yea or no; ſeeing in all theſe, and theſe onely, this conflict is or wilbe fought, as ſoone as they are regenerate and conuerted vnto God. The which waighty queſtion hath already in part beene reſolued, when as I ſhewed the differences betweene the combate of the fleſh and ſpirit, and the conflict of conſcience, and the will and affections; and now commeth to bee more fully and directly handled. For the clearing whereof we neede not to make any further ſearch, but onely to examine whether the Spirit of God accompanied with his ſauing graces which is one of the combatants doth reſide and dwell in vs or no. For if it doe, then there is no queſtion but this conflict is in vs, ſeeing it no ſooner entreth and taketh poſſeſſion of vs, but preſently it maketh warre againſt our fleſh with all the carnall luſts thereof, depoſeth them from their regency, giueth them deadly wounds, holdeth them in ſubiection, and laboureth all it may, vtterly to diſplace and roote them out. Now euery faithfull man ought to be aſſured of this, namely, that the Spirit of God dwelleth in him; or if he haue not this aſſurance as yet, hee is neuer to be at reſt, till it bee euident and cleare in his owne heart and conſcience, as being the greateſt queſtion, and the waightieſt and moſt important caſe of conſcience, that can bee propounded or knowne of vs. The which as it may bee knowne, ſo no Chriſtian ought to bee ignorant of it, as the Apoſtle implyeth by that interrogation: Know yee not that yee are the Temple of God, and that the ſpirit of God dwelleth in you? And againe, Know yee not that your bodies are the temples of the holy Ghoſt? And therefore wee muſt not content our ſelues with the doubtfull opinion of the Papiſts, nor with the vncertaine and vngrounded hope of carnall goſpellers, but labour after certaine aſſurance that we are the Temples of God, and that his holy Spirit dwelleth in vs. Which that wee may ſtudiouſly indeauour to attaine vnto, let vs conſider, firſt that God in his Word reuealeth this truth of the Spirit's dwelling in euery faithfull Chriſtian, by many infallible marks and ſignes, to this end and purpoſe, that we may take notice thereof, and labour to attaine to the knowledge and aſſurance of it, being a truth ſo important and comfortable. Secondly, if we doe not know that the Spirit dwelleth in vs, wee cannot know that wee haue any part in Chriſt; and conſequently, that wee are true Chriſtians, ſeeing the holy Spirt is the principall bond of the vnion betweene him and vs, by which he dwelleth in vs, and wee in him. Thirdly, if wee doe not know that the Spirit dwelleth in vs, wee cannot know that wee are juſtified; for wee haue nothing to doe with Chriſts righteouſneſſe by which wee ſtand righteous before God, till by our ſpirituall vnion he is made ours, whereby wee haue right and intereſt in all his benefits; we cannot know that we are adopted the children of God, vnleſſe we know that wee haue the ſpirit of Adoption, whereby we cry in our hearts, Abba Father. Nor that we are ſanctified, vnleſſe we haue the ſanctifying Spirit which is the beginner and perfecter of all our holineſſe; nor that our prayers are heard of God, ſeeing of our ſelues wee know not how to pray as we ought, but it is the Spirit of ſupplication, which helpeth our infirmities, and teacheth vs to pray with ſighes and grones which cannot bee expreſſed, Neither doth the Lord heare any Prayers but ſuch as the Spirit inſpireth, becauſe ſuch only are according to his will. And when without his helpe wee pray, Wee aske and receiue not, becauſe we aske amiſſe, as the Apoſtle ſpeaketh. Fourthly, vnleſſe wee know that wee haue the Spirit, wee cannot know whether we are in errour or truth, or whether our Religion which we profeſſe, bee true or falſe, becauſe he is the Spirit of illumination,, who onely inlighteneth vs, and teacheth and leadeth vs in all truth. Now how ſhall hee ſhew vs other things, ſo as wee may know that he ſheweth them, if hee doe not ſhew vs himſelfe, and make it knowne vnto vs, that he dwelleth in vs, and teacheth vs? Fiſtly, if wee be not aſſured that hee is in vs, wee can haue no ſound comfort, becauſe hee is the onely true Comforter, from whom all ſound comfort ſpringeth, and all other comforts of which hee is not the author, are falſe, vngrounded and meere deluſions. Laſtly, wee muſt labour after the knowledge of the fruits of the Spirit dwelling in vs, as that we haue faith, and that Chriſt dwelleth in vs, and therefore wee muſt alſo bee aſſured that wee haue the tree and roote; for the effect argueth his cauſe as well as the cauſe his effect, and not to know that wee haue the Spirit, is not to know that wee haue any grace.

1.Cor.3.16.& 6.19.

Deut.29.19.

Rom.8.15.

Rom 8,26.

Iam.4.3.

Ioh.2.20.27.
Ioh.14.26.

2.Cor.13.5.

§. Sect.2.
The firſt infallible ſigne is the miniſtry and meanes by which it hath beene wrought in vs.

Now wee may know whether the Spirit of God be in vs or no: Firſt by the Miniſtery and meanes which it vſeth to make entrance, and to take poſſeſſion of vs the which is the Miniſtery of the Word of God: For when the fleſh with the luſts thereof are ſomewhat amazed and affrighted with the Cannon ſhot of legall threatnings, making (as it were) a large breach into the heart and conſcience, and the trumpet of the Goſpell ſoundeth, offering remiſſion of ſinne and eternall ſaluation to all that beleeue and repent, then this victorious captaine maketh his entrance, aſſaulteth the fleſh and driueth it into corners, taking poſſeſſion of all for Gods vſe, the great Monarch of Heauen and Earth. And this the Apoſtle ſheweth, where he ſaith, that the Galathians receiued the ſpirit, not by the workes of the law, but by the hearing of faith; that is, the doctrine of faith contained in the Goſpel of Ieſus Chirſt. Whereof it is that the Miniſters of the New Teſtament are by him called the miniſters of the ſpirit; becauſe by their preaching they prepare the way for the ſpirit, as Iohn the Baptiſt for Ieſus Chriſt, and are (as it were) his harbingers, to take vp a lodging for him in our hearts and ſoules. So that wee may diſcerne the ſpirit by the meanes whereby it entreth, which is not, by dreames, and extraordinarie reuelations, for this is the fanaticall ſpirit of Anabaptiſts, and Familiſts; not by the preaching of the law only; For he commeth not in this great and ſtrong wind, that rents the Mountaines, & breakes in

Gal.3.2.

2.Cor.3.6.

1.King.19.11,12.

in pieces the Rockes; nor in this earthquake which ſhaketh the foundations of mans heart, not in this fire which conſumeth all ſinners that come in the way of it: But when theſe haue gone before (like a peale of Canons that giue warning of the comming of this mighty Prince) then the ſtill voyce of the Goſpell is vttered by the Ambaſſadours and Heralds of the great King, and with it he entreth and ſeateth himſelfe in our hearts (as it were) vpon his royall throne.

§. Sect.3.
The ſecond ſigne is the effects and fruits of the Spirit: and firſt by the nature of the gifts in vs wee may diſcerne the Spirit.

Secondly wee may know whether the ſpirit dwelleth in vs, and fighteth againſt the fleſh, by the effects and fruits of it. And firſt generally by the nature of the things wrought in vs, and then by their conſtancie and continuance. For if the gifts and endowments which wee haue be but meerely naturall, or ſuch as may be attained vnto by our owne art, induſtrie and indeauours, then are they no infallible notes of Gods ſanctifying Spirit or ſauing graces dwelling in vs, the which are ſupernaturall, diuine, and ſent downe (as it were) from Heauen into vs. Whereof it is that the Apoſtle oppoſeth this Spirit of God and that which is in worldly men, the one againſt the other. Wee haue receiued not the ſpirit of the world, but the ſpirit which is of God. And a little after, the naturall man perceiueth not the things of the Spirit of God. Againe, if they bee but the common gifts of the Spirit, as meerely Morall vertues, and reſtraining graces, which are common to ciuill worldlings, and haue been alſo in many Heathens and honeſt infidels, then cannot wee by them gather any aſſurance that the ſanctifying Spirit dwelleth and warreth in vs againſt the fleſh, onely there is a fight betweene conſcience and affections, vice is curbed and ouerruled by vice, and one corrupt facultie by another of the ſame kinde.

1.Cor.2.12.14.

§. Sect.4.
The graces of the Spirit may be knowne by their conſtant and continuall actions and operations.

Secondly the Spirit and the ſauing graces thereof are conſtant and continuall in their actions and operations, daily more and more mortifying and ſubduing the fleſh and carnall corruptions, and inciting vs vnto all Chriſtian and holy duties; like the Sunne which from the riſing ſhineth ſtill more glorioully vntill noone day, or a liuely fountaine which continually ſpringeth and ſendeth forth its cleare and ſweet ſtreames; but the common gifts of the reſtraining Spirit doe worke and ſhew themſelues onely by fits, like flaſhes of lightning which ſuddenly appeare and as ſuddenly vaniſh, leauing nothing behind them but groſſe and palpable darkneſſe; or like ſtanding waters and winter brookes, which ſwell and ouerflow vpon the fall of raine and deſcent of land waters, but ſoone after fall and are dryed vp in the time of drought. So the ſauing graces of the ſanctifying Spirit are laſting and permanent, euer continuing with increaſe euen to the very end of our liues; but all gifts meerely naturall indure but for a time, and (like the body) after they are growne to their full ſtrength and ripeneſſe, they decreaſe, till by a daily conſumption they come to nothing, as wee ſee in naturall knowledge and wiſedome, which decayeth with age, vntill at laſt it commeth to dotage and childiſh ignorance.

1.Ioh.2.17.

§. Sect.5.
Of the particular effects of the Spirit, the firſt whereof is ſpirituall illightning.

But let vs deſcend to ſome particular effects which the Spirit worketh, for theſe arguing their Cauſe will plainely ſhew the reſidence and abiding of this holy gueſt in vs. And firſt the Spirit of God is the Spirit of illumination, inlightning our blinde eyes, reuealing vnto vs the things of God, and leading vs into all truth, according to that of our Sauiour; But the Comforter which is the the holy Ghoſt whom the Father will ſend in my name, hee ſhall teach you all things. And that of the Apoſtle; But yee haue an vnction from the holy one, and yee know all things. And againe; But the annoynting which yee haue receiued of him abideth in you; and yee neede not that any man teach you; but [illegible] the ſame annoynting teacheth you of all things. And hence it is, that this holy Spirit is called the Spirit of wiſedome and reuelation in the knowledge of God. Yea but the wicked alſo may haue ſome illightning of the Spirit, as the Apoſtle ſheweth, and which is more, they may haue a taſt of the heauenly gift, be partakers of the holy Ghoſt, that is of the gifts and graces of the ſanctifying Spirit, and haue alſo a taſt of the good word of God, and of the powers of the world to come, yea and hereby they may attaine vnto a farre greater meaſure of knowledge than thoſe who are truely regenerate, and how then can this be a difference, whereby wee may diſcerne the one from the other? To which I anſwer, that though there be no difference betweene the knowledge of the regenerate and vnregenerate in the quantity, in which reſpect the knowledge of the wicked, yea of the Diuell himſelfe, doth oftentimes exceed the knowledge of the godly and faithfull, yet there are many other differences betweene them; for firſt the knowledge of the regenerate is much better grounded, euen vpon that infallible foundation of the holy Scriptures, the which they carefully and conſcionably heare, reade, ſtudy and meditate in them, that they may bee more and more edified and inlightned, grounded and built vpon this ſacred authoritie, as vpon the firme and vnmoueable corner ſtone; whereas the knowledge of the vnregenerate is chiefly founded vpon humane authorities, the doctrines and traditions of men, which as they are ſometimes true, ſo ſometimes falſe and erroneous, and neuer in themſelues certaine and infallible. So alſo their knowledge is confirmed by the experience which

Iohn 14.26.

1.Ioh.2.20,27.

Eph.1.17.

Heb.6.4.

they haue of the things they know in themſelues, by a liuely and powerfull ſenſe and feeling of the operation of it, in their owne hearts and conſciences, purging and purifying them from all ſinfull corruptions, and renewing them to all obedience, and inuiting and prouoking them to the performance of all Chriſtian duties of holineſſe and righteouſneſſe; which moueth the Lord to reueale vnto them his great ſecrets and the myſteries of his Kingdome; according to that; The ſecret of the Lord is with them that feare him, and he will ſhew them his couenant; and againe, his ſecrets are with the righteous. Whereby they not onely know the things themſelues barely vttered, but alſo Gods ſecret will and purpoſe in them. But the knowledge of the wicked is onely in theory and ſpeculation, whereby they are enabled onely to talke and diſcourſe of the things they conceiue, and haue no ſenſe, feeling or experience of that powerfull working of it for their inward ſanctification or outward reformation, but ſtill lye frozen in the dregs of their ſinnes, and neuer conſcionably practiſe any duties, though they can learnedly and eloquently diſcourſe of them. In which reſpect it is ſaid, that the ſeed of the word taketh no roote in them, becauſe their knowledge is not ſetled and grounded vpon theſe onely true foundations which neuer faile. Secondly the knowledge of the regenerate is more cleare, diſtinct, and particular, and therefore ſufficient to direct and guide them, not onely after ſome generall manner, but alſo in all particular duties and actions; but the knowledge of the vnregenerate is more generall, confuſed and darke, onely inabling them to ſet downe generall rules of duties, or if particular, yet rather to others than to themſelues, who are ſo blinded with their paſſions and carnall luſts, that their knowledge giueth them no ſufficient direction for their owne cariage in particular duties. Thirdly the knowledge of the regenerate ſtill applyeth the things knowne to particular vſe, bringing the word of God home to their owne hearts and conſciences; as the threatnings of the law for their humilation to driue them to Chriſt, to reſtraine them from ſinne, when they are ready to fall, and to raiſe them being fallen by vnfained repentance. So Iob kept his eyes vnder couenant, that they ſhould not glaunce wantonly vpon women, becauſe hee knew that deſtruction was to the wicked, and a ſtrange puniſhment to the workers of iniquitie. And hereby Ioſeph was reſtrained from harkning to his miſtreſſes wicked ſuite. How can I doe this great wickedneſſe and ſin againſt God? And ſo likewiſe hereby they are inticed & ſpurred forward vnto all good duties, when as they feele themſelues dull and ſlow. For ſo the Apoſtle hauing ſpoken of Gods fearefull judgement, he applyeth this knowledge to particular vſe; knowing therefore (ſaith he) the terrour of the Lord wee perſwade men, as though hee ſhould ſay, I dare not knowing this terrible judgement, but perſwade you to obedience and dehort you from ſinne, leſt neglecting my duty, I alſo bee lyable vnto it. And thus alſo knowing the promiſes of the Goſpell, they apply them for their owne conſolation; according to that of the Apoſtle; Whatſoeuer things were written aforetime, were written for our learning, that wee through patience and comfort of the Scriptures might haue hope. But the wicked by their knowledge apply not or miſapply, they either apply all vnto others, or apply falſely vnto themſelues, arrogating all the promiſes of life and ſaluation, though they doe not at all belong vnto them. Fourthly, the knowledge of the regenerate drawes them neerer vnto God, and vnites them more firmely vnto him in loue and true obedience. Firſt in loue of God and of that truth which he hath reuealed vnto them; for when hee hath made knowne vnto them not onely his infiniteneſſe in all perfection; but alſo his goodneſſe and mercy towards them, then this flame of Gods loue kindleth in their cold hearts the fire of loue towards God againe, which maketh them to thinke nothing too much or enough which they can doe or ſuffer for his ſake; whereby they are moued to make an holy vſe of all they know, both for the auoyding of all which God hateth, whom they ſo loue, and the embracing and practiſing of all which hee loueth and requireth. But the knowledge of the vnregenerate is a light onely without heate which driueth them further from God, and alienateth their hearts from him, becauſe they cannot apply to their owne vſe his ſauing attributes, but rather are terrified with his wiſdome, power and juſtice, whereby he is able and willing to puniſh and take vengeance on all ſinners. Neither doth it ſtirre them vp to any obedience, (vnleſſe it bee for ſeruile feare) but rather enableth them to rebell and diſobey more ſecurely, whileſt by their great learning, their ſubtill ſhifts and nice diſtinctions, they can more cunningly vntwiſt the cords of Gods Commandements which ſhould binde them to their dutie, and ſo winde themſelues and ſlip their neckes out of the yoke of Gods Law, that it cannot hold them, and whileſt thereby they are enabled to defend their ſinnes with their ſubtill ſophiſtry, and to preſerue themſelues from juſt cenſures, their names from deſerued ſhame, and to ſtop the cry of their conſciences, that they may not checke and accuſe them for their ſinnes. Finally the knowledge of the regenerate bringeth them to true humility, and the better and more clearely they conceiue

Pſal.25.14.
Pro.3.32.
Mat.13.6.7.
Iob.31.1.3.
Gen.39.9.
2.Cor.5.11.
Rom.15.4.

ceiue of Gods goodneſſe, power and glorious Maieſtie and of their owne miſery, ſins and imperfections, the more they abaſe themſelues and become vile in their owne ſight, as we ſee in the example of Abraham, who when he moſt neerely and familiarly conuerſed with God, had the meaneſt conceit of himſelfe, acknowledging that he was but duſt and aſhes; in Dauid who hauing attained vnto a greater meaſure of ſpirituall knowledge than his teachers, confeſſeth that he was but a worme and no man; in Iob who hauing come vnto a more cleare knowledge of God by ſeeing him with his eyes, abhorred himſelfe in duſt and aſhes; and in Agar, who being inlightened with a large meaſure of heauenly wiſedome, profeſſeth that he was more brutiſh than any man, and had not the vnderſtanding of a man. But contrariwiſe the knowledge of the vnregenerate puffeth them vp with pride, according to that of the Apoſtle, knowledge puffeth vp, but loue edifieth; and cauſeth them to vilifie and contemne others in compariſon of themſelues, as we ſee in the example of the Phariſies, who deſpiſed all them who confeſſed the truth concerning our Sauiour Chriſt as ignorant and ſimple ideots; But this people who know not the law are curſed. And the reaſon is becauſe their knowledge is onely ſpeculatiue, confuſed and generall, and doth not bring them to any ſenſe and feeling of their ſinne and miſery, or to a liuely and experimentall apprehenſion of Gods ſauing attributes.

*Gen.*18.27.
*Pſal.*22.6.
*Iob.*42.5.6.
*Pro.*30.2.
1.*Cor.*8.1.
*Ioh.*7.48.49.

CHAP. XII.

Of the ſecond effect of the Spirit whereby wee may know that it dwelleth in vs.

§. Sect. 1.
How the Spirit prepares our hearts for faith and then workes it in vs.

A Second effect of the Spirit whereby wee may bee aſſured that it dwelleth in vs, is the preparing of our hearts to receiue the grace of a liuely and juſtifying faith, and the effectuall working of it in vs being thus prepared. It prepareth them, firſt by enlightning our minds, and by ſhewing vnto vs our ſinne and miſery by the Law of God, and that in reſpect of our ſelues wee are brought into a damnable and deſperate condition, out of which wee cannot recouer by any means of our owne, nor by all the helpe of men and Angels. And when hereby it hath throughly humbled vs and made vs deſpaire of all our owne abilities, then it reuealeth vnto vs the infinite mercies of God, his free grace and eternall loue in his Sonne, and the al-ſufficient merits of Chriſt, together with the ſweete promiſes of the Goſpell made in him, offering grace and mercy, for the forgiueneſſe of ſinne, and the ſaluation of our ſoules, to all that will receiue them by the hand of faith, and will turne vnto God by vnfained repentance; vnto which truth of God reuealed in the Miniſtery of the Word, the holy Spirit by a ſecret operation worketh an aſſent as being moſt infallible, ſeeing it proceedeth from him who is truth it ſelfe and cannot lye; which aſſent being effectuall worketh in our vnderſtandings a perſwaſion that our ſinnes though many and haynous, are yet pardonable; and in our judgements a moſt precious eſteeme of Gods mercies and Chriſts merits, from and by which alone wee receiue remiſſion. In our hearts alſo this effectuall aſſent worketh an earneſt and conſtant deſire that they may bee pardoned, and to this end an hungring and thirſting after Chriſt and his righteouſneſſe; in our wils a firme reſolution to reſt vpon Chriſt imbracing him as our onely Lord and Sauiour and caſting our ſelues vpon him alone for juſtification and ſaluation; and in our actions a conſcionable endeauour in the vſe of all good meanes, whereby we may bee more and more aſſured, that wee ſhall haue our parts in the mercies of God and the merits of Chriſt. And theſe are the firſt degrees of juſtifying faith which who ſo want are deſtitute of it; the which being wrought in vs, the Lord bleſſeth the meanes of ſaluation, which the beleeuer conſcionably vſeth with a deſire to profit by them, as the Word, Sacraments, Prayer and the reſt for the increaſing of theſe firſt degrees in vs, vntill they grow from a graine of Muſtard ſeed to a great tree, from an aſſent to an apprehenſion and application of the promiſes, with ſome aſſurance that Gods mercy and Chriſts merits belong vnto vs. Vnto which degree the moſt Chriſtians who labour after it doe attaine, if death preuent them not and hinder them from comming from their ſpirituall infancy to their riper age in Chriſt. Now this faith being come to application of Chriſt and the promiſes, and ſome aſſurance that they belong to the Beleeuer, groweth daily in the carefull and diligent Chriſtian to more ſtrength, by his often feeling and experience of Gods loue, by his acquaintance with him in his holy Ordinances, by teſtifying and approouing of his loue towards God againe, in his continuall fruits of new obedience, the exerciſes of a Chriſtian life in good workes, and by his cheerfull readineſſe to ſuffer any thing which it pleaſeth God to call him vnto for his ſake, vntill at laſt it come to that plerophory and full perſwaſion of Gods vnchangeable loue, and our Election, Adoption and Saluation which was in the Apoſtle Paul, who was fully perſwaded that nothing in the World was able to ſeparate betweene Gods loue and him. And this is accompanied with ſuch peace of conſcience,

*Rom.*8.38.39.
1.*Ioh.*4.18.
1.*Pet.*1.8.
*Rom.*5.3.

ence, as paſſeth all vnderſtanding. For when we are aſſured that we haue the remiſſion of our ſins, and are quite freed from them both in reſpect of their guilt and puniſhment, then the terrours and feares which did accompany them are taken away, and both Sathan and our owne conſciences which did continually accuſe vs are put to ſilence, ſo as they can no longer affright vs nor diſturbe our peace. From whence ſpringeth ſpirituall joy vnſpeakable and glorious, whereby wee rejoyce not onely in the fruition of Gods benefits, but alſo in afflictions and tribulations, as the Apoſtle witneſſeth, when as wee ſee our ſelues freed out of the hands of all our ſpirituall enemies, the wrath of God, the curſe of the Law, Death, Hell, and Condemnation, and now brought into an happy and bleſſed eſtate of grace and ſaluation, in and by Ieſus Chriſt, and his benefits apprehended and applyed by faith. Which effects who ſo find thus wrought in them, they may be aſſured that they haue the ſpirit which is the cauſe and authour by which they are wrought, euen as the Light bringeth vs to the Sunne, the ſtreames to the fountaine, and the branches and fruit vnto the root from which they flow and ſpring.

§. Sect.2. The differences betweene a iuſtifying faith and the faith of preſumptuous ciuill worldlings.

Yea, but Hypocrites and vnregenerate men doe boaſt moſt of their faith and aſſurance of ſaluation, and therefore they alſo may haue the Spirit, or elſe this faith is no infallible ſigne of it. To which I anſwere that they haue no true faith, but (as it were) in a dreame and dotage, they delude themſelues by miſtaking their carnall and ſecure preſumption for a liuely and juſtifying faith. But how ſhall wee diſcerne the one from the other, ſeeing they ſeeme to haue oftentimes as ſtrong confidence and aſſurance of their ſaluation as the beſt Chriſtians? I anſwere that though there bee betweene them ſome ſeeming ſimilitude, yet there is as great difference as betweene pure Gold and a rotten poſt gilded ouer. For firſt true faith is grounded on the Scriptures and the Word of God; but preſumption hath no ground but an idle conceit ariſing out of pride and ſelfe-loue. True faith alwayes followeth vnfained humiliation in the ſight and ſenſe of our ſin & miſery; whereas the preſumptuous man was neuer humbled, but hath a proud conceit of his owne righteouſneſſe and worthineſſe. Faith followeth illumination and knowledge, and firſt wee muſt know God and his Chriſt, before we can truly beleeue in them; but preſumption riſeth commonly out of ignorance, and the more deſtitute the worldly man is of the knowledge of God and his wayes, the more bold and confident hee is in his perſwaſion. True faith is joyned with all other graces, as loue, zeale of Gods glory, humility, patience and obedience, manifeſting it ſelfe by the fruites that it bringeth forth in good workes: But preſumption is ſeuered from them all, & goeth alone without any ſuch company and Attendants. True faith is not diſcerned before ſound conuerſion, and then it beginneth in ſome ſmall and weake degrees; but preſumption is borne & bred with vs, and in an inſtant commeth to its full ſtrength; which maketh the ſecure Worldling to brag, that hee hath alwayes beleeued, and is ſo ſtrong in faith, that he neuer doubted of his ſaluation. True faith is not attained vnto without great difficulty, it being no leſſe a worke to beleeue the Goſpell than to fulfill the Law; but preſumption voluntarily creepeth into our hearts, and the leſſe paines wee take in the vſe of Gods holy Ordinances, the more eaſily it entreth, and the ſtronger it waxeth. Faith is alwayes aſſaulted with doubting, and the one being a fruit of the Spirit, the other of the Fleſh, there is a great and continuall conflict betweene them; but preſumption is bold and confident, and he who is poſſeſſed of it, profeſſeth that hee neuer doubted of his ſaluation, neither feeleth hee any conflict in him, becauſe he is wholy carnall, and corruption warreth not againſt corruption, but onely runneth out of one extreme into another; for when the ſecure Worldling being by ſome meanes awakened out of his Lethargy ceaſeth to preſume, then hee beginneth to deſpaire. Faith purifieth the heart and worketh by loue, and is neuer ſeuered from vnfained repentance; but preſumption nouriſheth and increaſeth all ſinfull corruptions, & they who moſt preſume are moſt deſtitute of all true loue towards God and their Neighbours. And howſoeuer they leaue ſome groſſe ſins for worldly reſpects, yet they repent of none, there being no change in their affections, but onely in their actions; yea, in this reſpect alſo they nouriſh many ſins in their boſomes which they thinke moſt ſweet and aduantageable, and will by no meanes be perſwaded to part with them. Faith vniteth and applyeth Chriſt vnto the Beleeuer for all vſes for which God gaue him, that is as well for his ſanctification as for his juſtification and ſaluation, and applyeth the vertue of his precious bloud, for the taking and purging away of the pollution and corruption of ſin, as well as the guilt and puniſhment; and as it taketh hold of Chriſt to make him ours, ſo it giueth and offereth our ſoules and bodies vnto Chriſt, that wee may become his, and be wholy deuoted and dedicated to his worſhip and ſeruice: but preſumption onely apprehendeth Chriſt for the remiſſion of ſin and the obtayning of euerlaſting Life, & not for the mortification of ſin by vertue of his death, nor ſpirituall quickening and renewing by power of his Reſurrection; and ſo alſo it is onely a receiuer but no giuer, it taketh all in ſhew which Chriſt offereth, but it will in liew of thankfulneſſe returne nothing vnto him againe. Faith finding its owne weakneſſe, and the ſharpe encounters of doubting and incredulity, laboureth earneſtly in the vſe of all good meanes whereby it may bee more and more increaſed and confirmed, as hearing the Word, receiuing the Sacrament, Reading, Prayer, Meditation and ſuch like; but preſumption finding no ſuch aſſaults, ſecurely neglecteth all theſe helpes, feeling it ſelfe then the ſtrongeſt when it is moſt deſtitute of them. Finally, true faith endureth in the day of fiery tryall & temptation, and euen when God ſeemeth to frowne, to withdraw outward teſtimonies of his loue, and in ſtead of them ſendeth afflictions and croſſes, then the Beleeuer with Abraham, hopeth aboue hope, and beleeueth againſt beliefe, it pierceth through all theſe clouds of diſcomfort with a liuely and ſpirituall eye, and beholdeth the face of a louing Father in Chriſt, euen when hee ſtill holdeth the rod in his hand; yea, though it haue no ſenſible comfort, nor preſent feeling of Gods fauour, yet being the ſubſiſtance of things hoped for, and the euidance of things not ſeene, it ſtill maketh the Beleeuer to flee vnto God, and to reſt vpon him alone for freedome from euil or fruition of good. But the preſumptuous man ſwelled with the wind of confidence like a bladder, letteth out all with the pricke of a pin, & after all his Thraſonicall brags of ſtrength and fortitude, hee fainteth and cowardly yeeldeth, when hee is firſt encountred with croſſes and afflictions. His courage is preſently cooled, his confidence turned into diſtruſt his proude preſumption into affrighting terrours and helliſh deſpaire; and as it was chiefly grounded on outward things & worldly proſperitie, ſo when theſe are taken away then it alſo quaileth, faileth, and commeth to nothing.

Rom.12.1.

Rom.4.18.
Iob 13.15.
& 19.25.

Heb.11.1.

Chap. XIII.

Of the differences betweene iuſtifying faith, and that which is temporary and hypocriticall.

§. Sect.1.
Of the firſt difference in preparation vnto them.

BVt though preſumptuous Worldlings haue no true faith, and conſequently haue not the ſpirit dwelling in them; yet perhaps Temporaries and Hypocrites may, ſeeing in the Scriptures they are ſaid to beleeue, and therefore they alſo may haue the Spirit. I anſwere, that though this temporary faith be a common gift of the Spirit, yet it differeth much from a true iuſtifying faith, and therefore is no ſigne that Gods ſanctifying Spirit doth dwel in them that haue it. For firſt they differ in the preparation whereby men are fitted to receiue them. For before true iuſtifying faith goeth ſound humiliation, a true ſight and ſenſe of ſin, as ſin, and not onely in regard of puniſhment, and an earneſt deſire to be vnburthened of it: But the temporary is neuer thus throughly humbled, for whileſt he ſeeth ſome ſins hee winketh at others, hee grieueth and groneth, rather vnder the puniſhment, than vnder the ſin; he is willing to part with ſome ſins which rather pinch his conſcience than pleaſe his affection, but eſteemeth others no burthen, yea, rather his chiefe delight; and though hee leaueth many, yet he truly repenteth of none, becauſe there is onely a ſurceaſing of the action, but no change of the heart and affection.

Luke 8.13.
John 2.24.

§. Sect. 2.
The ſecond difference in their nature and parts.

Secondly, they differ in their nature and parts. For true faith highly eſteemeth Chriſt, and preferreth him and his righteouſnes before all the World, counting all things in compariſon of him dung and loſſe; and therefore is ready to forſake all that it may injoy him: but temporary faith preferreth the World before Chriſt, and though it make ſome account of him in an inferiour place, yet it will rather leaue him than leaue the World, if the one of neceſſity muſt be parted with. Secondly, true faith effectually aſſenteth to the whole Word of God, as being his vndoubted Truth, and eſpecially to the promiſes of the Goſpell concerning the remiſſion of ſin, reconciliation with God, and eternall ſaluation of all that beleeue; Whence ariſe thoſe deſires in the heart, and reſolution in the will before ſpoken of, whereby the Beleeuer hungreth after Chriſt and his benefits, and caſteth himſelfe vpon him alone for iuſtification: But temporary faith either aſſenteth onely to the truth of ſome part of the Word and not to ſome other, as to that which will ſtand with humane reaſon and a mans owne experience, but not to that which is aboue or contrary vnto them; to the promiſes of the Goſpell, not to the threatnings of the Law, or to ſome of either, and not all of both; or if to all, yet this aſſent is not effectuall, as appeareth by the differences that are in the deſires and reſolutions of true Beleeuers from thoſe that are in Temporaries and Hypocrites. For the deſires of the true Beleeuers to be made partaker of Chriſt & his benefits are exceeding feruent and earneſt, like the deſires of [a] couetous men after riches, of [b] Rachel after children; of the [c] louing Bride after her beloued Bridegroome, of the [d] dry and chopped ground after pleaſant ſhowres, [e] of the hungry and thirſty, after meate and drinke; of the [f] woman with childe after deſired meates, who ſo longeth that ſhee is ready to miſcarry and periſh, if her longing deſire be not ſatisfied. But the deſires of temporary faith are faint and cold, and though they can be content to haue the things belonging

1.Cor.2.2.
Phil.3.9.
Gal.6.14.

[a] 2.Cor.14.1.
[b] Gen.30.1.
[c] Cant.2.5.
[d] Pſal.143.6.
[e] Math.5.6.
[f] Pſal.119.20. 40.

longing to ſaluation, if they will come with eaſe and ſmall coſt, they chooſe rather to be without them, than that they ſhould be ouer-chargeable, or take vp too much of their time and labour. Secondly, the deſires of true faith are alwayes joyned with a carefull indeuour in the vſe of all good meanes wherby they may be ſatisfied, and in auoiding all contrary meanes whereby they may be hindred: But the deſires of temporary faith are ſo idle and ſlothfull, that they neglect all meanes whereby they might atchieue their deſires as wee ſee in Balaam, who deſired to die the death of the righteous, but could not be content to imitate them in their liues. Thirdly, the deſires of juſtifying faith are conſtant and continuall like Dauids whoſe ſoule breaked, for the longing that it had to Gods iudgements at all times: but the deſires of temporary faith are but by fits & flaſhes, as when they are at a Sermon, & haue their conſciences conuinced with the powerfull Miniſtery of the Word, when they are in the houſe of mourning, and haue before their eyes ſpectacles of their mortality; when they ſee ſome notable example of the Worlds vanity and mutability, or of the happineſſe of thoſe who feare God, & make conſcience of their wayes; when they are caſt downe by ſome grieuous affliction, and find themſelues croſſed in all their earthly deſires. Secondly, there is great difference betweene the reſolutions of faith in true Beleeuers, and thoſe who are but Temporaries and Hypocrites. For true juſtifying faith reſolueth to cleaue vnto Chriſt alone, and to forſake all rather than to be ſeuered from him: But the faith of Temporaries cauſeth them to cleaue vnto Chriſt ſo far forth as the World will let them, and if they may ſhare with him in his benefits, and not be hindred of their worldly deſires, they are willing then to giue him entertainment; but if they be put to part with all, that they may haue him, this is an hard ſaying, and they cannot abide it, but though they came rejoycing to Chriſt, they will goe away (with the young man) ſorrowfull, and will not buy him and his benefits at ſo deare a price; Like herein vnto Merchants who like the beſt Wines when they taſte them, but leaue and let them goe, when as they heare how deare they are prized.

Pſal.119.21.

§. Sect.3.
The third difference betweene them is in their properties,
1.Tim.1.5.

Thirdly, juſtifying and temporary faith doe differ one from another in their properties and qualities. For true faith is hearty and vnfained, and therefore is called by the Apoſtle πίστις ἀνυπόκριτος, Faith that is not fained, and if there be any hypocriſie lurking in the heart, it is an enemy vnto it, and laboureth to purge and root it out: but the faith of Temporaries is hypocriticall and purpoſely affecteth and delighteth in diſguizing and diſſimulation. Againe, true faith is conſtant and couragious to indure the fiery tryall; It will come vnto God and catch hold on him for mercy, when hee frowneth and ſeemeth angry; It applyeth the promiſes, when they ſeeme void and hopeleſſe, and wayteth Gods leyſure, when he deferreth to performe them. For he that beleeueth (as the Prophet ſpeaketh) ſhall not make haſt. It cleaueth vnto the Lord when hee ſeemeth to reject and ſhake vs off, and will not leaue the profeſſion and practice of his Truth, when it is beaten from it by afflictions and perſecutions. But temporary faith though it make a glorious and golden ſhew in the time of proſperity, yet it becommeth droſſe in the fiery tryall; and though it commeth joyfully to God, when he inuiteth with benefits, yet it will cowardly run away, when he threatneth or correcteth. It ſpringeth and ſprouteth, when it is watered with the ſhowres of proſperity, but withereth and fadeth, when the hot Sunne of perſecution ariſeth; and though the temporary be ready to receiue all good from God, yet hee is not patient with Iob of receiuing euill alſo.

Eſay 28.16.
Habac.2.3.

§. Sect.4.
The fourth difference in reſpect of their concomitants.

Fourthly, juſtifying Faith differeth from the Faith of Temporaries in reſpect of the companions which doe accompany them. For true faith is joyned alwayes with a great conflict betweene it and doubting, which maketh the poore Chriſtian to cry out with the Father of the poſſeſſed child, I beleeue, Lord, helpe mine vnbeliefe; and with the Apoſtles, Saue vs, Lord, we periſh. Neither doth it obtaine the victory ouer vnbeliefe, & get quiet poſſeſſion of our hearts, without much ſtruggling, ſtriuing, and painfull labouring in the vſe of all good meanes, whereby it may ſtrengthen it ſelfe, and weaken its enemy. But the faith of Temporaries is eaſily attained without any great oppoſition or long labour, for no ſooner doth hee heare the Word, but preſently hee receiueth it with joy, and as ſoone as the ſeed is caſt into the ſtony ground, it forthwith ſpringeth and ſheweth it ſelfe in the greene blade of a glorious profeſſion. It rejoyceth before it grieueth, & comfort commeth before mourning; It is exalted before there was any humiliation, and triumpheth in victory without any conflict. And the reaſon is, becauſe the Temporary Beleeuer is not much croſſed in his preſumptuous conceit by Sathan or his owne fleſh, who are content to let him flatter himſelfe with a ſhadow and ſemblance of faith which is without vſe or fruit, that reſting in this, he may neuer labour after ſuch a faith as is ſound and ſubſtantiall; knowing well enough, that it will nothing profit him, ſeeing within a while his inlightning will turne to greater darkneſſe, his beleeuing to deſperate denying or deepe deſpairing, his waſhing and cleanſing, to greater pollution and defiling, and that hee may at pleaſure make his re-entrance with ſeuen ſpirits worſe

Marke 9.24.
Math.8.25.
Math.13.20.
Heb.6.4,5,6.
Math.12.44,45

2.Pet,2.20.

1.Tim.1.5. & 3.9.

Heb.10,22.

than himſelfe, and ſo make the laſt end of this man worſe than his beginning. Againe, true faith is joyned with all other ſanctifying & ſauing graces, for from this fire of Faith riſeth the flame of loue and zeale; from this holy root ſpringeth the fruit of all new and true obedience; From this fountaine floweth affiance in God, Feare, Hope, Humility and the reſt; all which as they are the effects of faith in reſpect of their birth and being, ſo are they companions, props and ſtayes of it after they are wrought in vs. But eſpecially the moſt knowne and apparant companion of a liuely Faith is a good Conſcience. For he that aſſuredly apprehendeth Gods loue in Chriſt maketh conſcience of all his workes and wayes, carefully doing thoſe things which may pleaſe him who hath ſo loued him, and whom he ſo loueth, and flying thoſe things which may offend him. Whereof it is that the Apoſtle joyneth them together; The end (ſaith he) of the Commandement is Charity, out of a pure heart, and good conſcience, and faith vnfained. And againe, Let vs draw neere with a true heart in full aſſurance of faith, hauing our hearts ſprinkled from an euill conſcience, and our bodies waſhed with pure water, But the Temporary, as he hath onely a ſeeming faith, ſo hath he alſo but counterfeit and ſeeming graces; he hath no true loue of God and his Brethren, but ſuch as ſpringeth from ſelfe-loue and loue of the World; no affiance in God longer than he vnderproppeth it with ſecondary meanes and ſenſible helpes; no hope, longer than the promiſes are joyned with preſent performance; no feare of God but ſeruile and ſlauiſh; no zeale, but (like that of Iehu) ſuch as will further his worldly ends; neither doth he make conſcience of imbracing and practiſing all duties commanded, but ſome onely, which beſt fit, or leaſt croſſe, his carnall affections; nor of mortifying and forſaking all manner of ſin, but of ſuch onely as bring leaſt pleaſure or profit; and that little which he doth, is not performed in loue and obedience towards God, but out of pride and vain-glory, ſelfe-loue, ſeruile feare, or worldly reſpects.

§. Sect.5. The fift difference in their effects. Firſt, True faith purifieth the heart.

Laſtly, juſtifying faith differeth from that which is temporary in their fruits and effects. For true Faith purifieth the heart from all manner of ſin, eſpecially thoſe inward and ſecret corruptions which are knowne onely to God and a mans owne conſcience, and not onely bindeth the hands to the good behauiour, but reneweth and changeth the affections of the heart, cauſing it to hate mortally thoſe vices which it formerly loued, & to reſiſt and ſubdue them in their birth and firſt beginnings. But the Faith of Temporaries doth not purifie the heart, but onely ſeemingly reformeth the outward actions; or if it purgeth it from any ſins, it is from ſuch as are contrery to naturall appetite, or from thoſe which are leaſt pleaſing and profitable, and not from thoſe whereunto nature chiefly inclineth, and wherein the corrupt heart doth eſpecially delight.

§. Sect.6. The ſecond effect, wherein they differ is in reſpect of their operation.

*Gal.*5.6. *Pſal.*1.3. Iohn 4.14. & 7.37,38.

Secondly, juſtifying Faith worketh by loue, and is fruitfull in the duties of holineſſe and righteouſneſſe, and not by fits & ſtarts, but as an holy root and tree of Gods planting, it beareth and bringeth forth ripe fruits continually in due time; and as a liuely fountaine of grace and goodneſſe, it ſendeth forth the pleaſant ſtreames of good workes, and vertuous actions: But the faith of Temporaries worketh ſeldome and but by fits, and onely when they haue ſome pange of deuotion wrought in them by the power of the Word conuincing their conſciences, or out of naturall paſſion moued with ſome pitifull object. Neither are theſe true fruits of holineſſe and righteouſneſſe, becauſe they ſpring not from a liuely faith, vnfained loue, and true obedience, but from ſelfe-loue, prayſe of men or other worldly reſpects; they are not ripe fruits fit to be reaped and carried into the Barne, but onely greene blades, ſemblances and ſhewes which wither before the time of harueſt.

§. Sect.7. The third effect reſpecteth peace and ioy, 1.Pe,1.8.

Eſay 57.21.

*Math.*13,20. 1.*Theſ.*2.13. Rom,1.17.

Thirdly, true Faith cauſeth peace of conſcience, and joy in the Holy Ghoſt, which is no ſlight nor flitting joy, but as the Apoſtle calleth it, vnſpeakable and glorious, the which in the nature of it is ſpirituall, like the authour which worketh it, and moſt ſheweth it ſelfe, when as we are exerciſed about ſpirituall objects and exerciſes, as hearing the Word, reading, meditation, praying, holy conferences, and ſuch like: But temporary faith bringeth no ſuch peace; For there is no peace, ſaith my God, to the wicked. And howſoeuer they haue ſome joy, yet there is great difference betweene it, and that which proceedeth from true faith. For the faithfull delight in the Word, as being the Word, not of man, but of God himſelfe, and becauſe they find it his ſtrong power (whatſoeuer the inſtruments be) to their ſanctification and ſaluation. But Temporaries rejoyce in it for nouelties ſake, and as it is the word of man, not ſo much in reſpect of the ſpirituall matter, as the manner how, and the perſon by whom it is deliuered, becauſe they loue him as a friend for worldly reſpects, or for his naturall gifts and parts, becauſe he is learned, witty and eloquent; the which joy ceaſeth and turneth oftentimes into anger and ſpleene, when as the word commeth home to the conſcience, and reproueth him ſharply for his darling ſins. Secondly, the faithfull man rejoyceth in ſpirituall things, the aſſurance of Gods loue, the remiſſion of his ſins and his owne ſaluation: and though hee taketh ſome joy and comfort in the things of this life, yet it is but ſmall in compariſon of the other. But the temporary Beleeuer contrariwiſe taketh ſome ſmall joy in ſpirituall things, as hauing ſome little taſte of them; but his chiefe rejoycing is in things worldly and earthly, which maketh him to neglect the other joy, when as they croſſe one another, and will not ſtand together. Thirdly, the joy of the faithfull, like the cauſe of it, which is our faith, is ſmall at the firſt, but increaſeth by degrees vntill it come to fulneſſe of joy, like that of Dauids; Thou haſt put gladneſſe in my heart, more than in the time, that their corne and their wine increaſed: but the joy of Temporaries is greateſt at the firſt entrance, and then decayeth by little and little, till at laſt it be vtterly conſumed and come to nothing. Finally, the joy of true Faith is ſtrong and conſtant, and not only continueth in the fruition of worldly proſperity, but alſo in affliction and perſecution, as wee ſee in the example of the holy Apoſtles, who rejoyced and ſung Pſalmes vnto God, when as they were perſecuted for preaching the Goſpel: But the joy of Temporaries, like that of the Graſhoppers, continueth onely whileſt the Summer of proſperity laſteth, but decayeth and dieth in the Winter of afflictions.

Pſal.4.7.

Rom.5.3.
Acts 5.41.& 16 25.

§. Sect.8.
The fourth effect reſpecteth confeſſion and Chriſtian Apologie.
Rom.10.10.
1.Pet.3.15.

Fourthly, true Faith, as it inwardly in the heart beleeueth vnto righteouſneſſe, ſo outwardly with the mouth it confeſſeth to ſaluation; and the true Chriſtian, as he beleeueth in Ieſus Chriſt, ſo hee is alwayes ready to render a reaſon of his faith and hope that is in him, when the glory of God or good of his Neighbours requireth it, although it be with the hazard & loſſe of his goods, lands, liberty and life. And being indued with the ſpirit of faith, hee is ready to ſay with the Pſalmiſt and Apoſtle, I beleeued, and therefore I haue ſpoken: But the Temporary Beleeuer confeſſeth his faith when as it will ſtand with his worldly credit or aduantage, but ſmothereth his profeſſion in time of danger, and vtterly denieth it, rather than hee will vndergoe any damage for it.

Pſal.116.10.
2.Cor.4.13.

§. Sect.9.
The fift effect reſpecteth contentment.
2.Cor.5.7.
Rom.1.17.
Heb.13.5.

Fiftly, true Faith giueth a Chriſtian comfort and contentment in all eſtates; for he liueth and walketh by faith and not by ſenſe, and therefore when hee wanteth Friends or Wealth, and ſuch like worldly helps, he reſteth contented, becauſe his chiefe treaſure & ſufficiency is in Gods neuer failing prouidence, vpon which he chiefly relyeth; according to that of the Apoſtle, I haue learned that in whatſoeuer eſtate I am, therewith to be content. And againe, Neuertheleſſe I liue, yet not I, but Chriſt liueth in me; and the life which I now liue in the fleſh, I liue by the faith of the Sonne of God, who hath loued mee and giuen himſelfe for me: But the Temporary Beleeuer liueth by ſenſe and not by Faith, and truſteth in God when as hee hath in his hands the pledges and pawnes of earthly benefits, but diſtruſteth in his promiſes and prouidence when as ſecondary helps and inferiour meanes faile, and therefore vſeth vnlawfull meanes to helpe himſelfe.

Phil.4.12.

Gal.2.20.

§. Sect.10
The ſixt effect is the ouercomming of the world.
1.John 5.4.5.

Sixtly, true Faith ouercommeth the World, according to that of the Apoſtle, Whoſoeuer is borne of God ouercommeth the world, and this is the victory that ouercommeth the world, euen our faith. Who is hee that ouercommeth the world, but hee that beleeueth that Ieſus is the Sonne of God? And it contemneth all earthly things as vaine and worthleſſe, in compariſon of ſpirituall grace and heauenly glory. But the temporary Beleeuer when hee is at the beſt, is but a meere Worldling and a deuoted ſlaue, to his worldly luſts and deſires after honours, riches and pleaſures: And therefore embraceth grace and glory ſo farre forth onely, as they will ſtand with the fruition of his earthly Idols, but rejecteth and renounceth his part and intereſt in them, when as they croſſe, and will not ſtand with his earthly deſires.

§. Sect.11.
The laſt effect reioycing to thinke of Chriſts comming to iudgement.

Laſtly, true juſtifying Faith maketh vs to rejoyce when as we thinke of the appearing of our Sauiour Chriſt vnto judgement, and euen to long for this time as being the day of our full redemption, when both in body and ſoule wee ſhall bee freed from all ſinne and miſery, and enjoy all glory and endleſſe happineſſe, according to that of our Sauiour; When theſe things begin to come to paſſe, then looke vp and lift vp your heads for your redemption draweth nigh. And ſo the Apoſtle ſaith, that wee which haue receiued the firſt-fruits of the Spirit, euen wee our ſelues groane within our ſelues, waiting for the adoption, to wit, the redemption of our body. The which joy in thinking on this day, and mourning becauſe it is deferred, commeth through our aſſurance of faith and confidence of hope. For therefore doe wee deſire to leaue this World and to be diſſolued, becauſe wee know, that if our earthly houſe of this Tabernacle were diſſolued, wee haue a building of God, a houſe not made with hands, but eternall in the Heauens: and becauſe through the Spirit, wee waite for the hope of righteouſneſſe by faith. But no ſuch joy or longing accompanieth the faith of Temporaries, becauſe they haue no ſuch aſſurance of this happineſſe, and are beſides ſo beſotted with the loue of worldly things, that they cannot without terrour and amazement thinke of that Day, which when it commeth will wholy depriue them of all their earthly joy.

Luke 21.28.

Rom.8.23.

2.Cor.5.1,2.

Gal.5.5.

Chap. XIV.

Of two other effects of the Spirit, whereby wee may know that it dwelleth in vs.

§. Sect. 1. The third effect is the ſpirit of adoption

A Third effect of the Spirit dwelling in vs is to perſwade and aſſure vs that wee are the children of God, and to entitle vs as heires to our heauenly inheritance; the which is a priuiledge and prerogatiue that belongeth to all the faithfull, and to them alone, according to that of the Euangeliſt: But as many as receiued him, to them gaue he power to become the ſonnes of God, euen to them that beleeue on his name. And this is an vndoubted fruit of the ſpirit, as the Apoſtle witneſſeth; For yee haue not (ſaith hee) receiued the ſpirit of bondage, againe to feare, but yee haue receiued the ſpirit of Adoption, whereby we cry, Abba, Father. The Spirit it ſelfe beareth witneſſe to our ſpirit, that we are the children of God; and if children then heires, heires of God, and ioynt heires with Chriſt. And againe; Becauſe yee are ſonnes, God hath ſent forth the Spirit of his Sonne into your hearts, crying, Abba, Father. In which regard the Spirit of God dwelling in vs is called the ſpirit of Adoption, which doth not giue vnto vs a doubtfull teſtimony of this ineſtimable priuiledge, but certainly aſſureth vs, that it doth belong vnto vs. In which regard it is called an earneſt, which God therefore giueth vs, to put vs out of all doubt, that hee will make good this heauenly bargaine which he hath promiſed vnto vs. Which is (ſaith the Apoſtle) the earneſt of our inheritance, vntill the redemption of the purchaſed poſſeſſion. And in the ſame reſpect it is called a Seale, which by the powerfull impreſſion, that it imprinteth in vs, aſſureth vs, that God will make good vnto vs the promiſe of grace and ſaluation in Ieſus Chriſt. So the Apoſtle ſaith; In whom alſo after yee beleeued, yee were ſealed with that holy Spirit of promiſe. And grieue not the holy Spirit of God, whereby yee are ſealed vnto the day of redemption. If therefore by this earneſt and ſeale wee haue attained vnto this aſſurance of our Adoption and right vnto our heauenly inheritance, we may be aſſured alſo that the Spirit of God dwelleth in vs, for the cauſe and the effect cannot bee ſeuered, and our aſſurance of our heauenly bargaine doth plainly argue, that wee haue receiued this earneſt and ſeale by which alone it is confirmed vnto vs. But that wee may not be deceiued with a falſe and counterfeit ſeale, let vs remember that this ſeale onely is annexed vnto the couenant of grace, which requireth on our part the condition of faith and repentance, and as it is Gods priuy Seale, according to that, the Lord knoweth them that are his, ſo there is a broad Seale ioyned with it, Let euery one that nameth the name of Christ depart from iniquitie; and therefore thoſe who liue in their infidelity and impenitency, haue not receiued this Seale, for what haue they to doe with the Seale, to whom the Couenant doth not appertaine?

Iohn 1.12.
Rom. 8.15,16.
Gal. 4.6.
2. Cor. 5.5.
Ephes. 1.14.
Ephes. 1.13. & 4.30.
2. Tim. 2.19.

§. Sect. 2. The fourth effect is the ſpirit of ſupplication.

A fourth effect of the Spirit is to enable vs vnto Prayer, and to powre forth our ſoules vnto God in ſuch an acceptable manner, as that our ſuites and petitions are heard and granted by him; whereof it is called by the Prophet Zacharie, the ſpirit of grace and ſupplication, which the Lord promiſeth to power vpon the houſe of Dauid, and vpon the inhabitants of Ieruſalem, that is, all the true members of the inuiſible Church militant here on earth. So the Apoſtle plainly telleth vs, that we know not for what to pray as we ought, but it is the ſpirit which helpeth our infirmities, and maketh interceſſion for vs with groanings which cannot bee vttered. And therfore the Apoſtle Iude knowing our inſufficiency in our ſelues to performe this duty, doth exhort vs to pray in the Holy Ghoſt. Whereby it appeareth, that the Spirit of God dwelleth in all thoſe, who in the ſight and ſenſe of their owne ſpirituall wants doe powre forth their hearts and ſoules vnto God in Prayer, with faith and feruency of ſpirit, which properties I require in that Prayer, which aſſureth vs that the Spirit dwelleth in vs, and not ability on the ſudden vpon euery occaſion to conceiue a Prayer, & to vtter it in eloquence of words, choice phraſes, or a continued and ready diſcourſe of ſpeech. For it is not ſaid, that the Spirit teacheth vs words & fluent phraſes, but to pray in the heart and Spirit, with ſighes and groanes which cannot be vttered, which language God that ſearcheth the heart vnderſtandeth and accepteth, as the Apoſtle ſpeaketh; yea, being a Spirit and requiring to bee worſhipped in Spirit and Truth, he eſteemeth not the moſt eloquent Prayers conceiued and vttered, without this ſight of our wants, zeale and feruency of Spirit; and contrariwiſe where theſe are, he heareth and granteth our ſuites and ſupplications, though with Ezechias, wee are not able to expreſſe them, but chatter like a Crane or Swallow; or with Hannah onely mooue our lips, yea, in truth though wee ſhould not ſo much as moue them, ſo that with her we ſpeake vnto him in our hearts. Neither hath the Lord promiſed, that he will hearken vnto them, who can ſpeake eloquently, but that he will ſatisfie the deſires of them that feare him, heare their cry and ſaue them, and that he will be nigh vnto them that call vpon him in truth. Of which wee haue an example in Moſes, who though he were

Zach. 12.10.
Rom. 8.26.
Iud. verſ. 20.
Rom. 8.27.
Iohn 4.24.
Eſay 38.14.
1. Sam. 1.13.
Pſal. 145.18,19
Exod. 4.10,16.

not eloquent, but ſo ſlow of ſpeach that hee needed to haue Aaron to be his ſpokeſman, and in ſtead of a mouth vnto him, for the deliuery of his ambaſſage to Pharaoh and the people, yet God gaue audience vnto his ſlow and vnready ſuites, rather than vnto Aaron, who exceeded him in eloquence, in ſo much that when Moſes muſt pray in the behalfe of the people, Aarons office was to ſtay vp his hands, that hee might more fitly continue and perſeuere in this holy exerciſe. Againe to conceiue a prayer vpon euery occaſion, and to vtter it in a continued and eloquent phrayſe of ſpeech, is no aſſured ſigne, that the Spirit of God dwelleth in vs, becauſe it is neither proper to the faithfull, nor commune to them all. For an hypocrite may attaine vnto this abilitie, yea euen excell in it by vertue of his naturall endowments, memory, eloquence and liberty of ſpeech, boldneſſe and ſuchlike, eſpecially when as he hath had vertuous education, and hath beene inſtructed in the doctrine of godlineſſe, and alſo trained vp in theſe Religious duties not onely by precepts, but by the examples of the godly, which hee is able to imitate by helpe of theſe naturall endowments in the exerciſe of Prayer, as well in the function of Preaching and Miniſtery of the Word. And ſo likewiſe it is not commune to all the faithfull to haue this ability, for there are many who haue a great meaſure of grace, ſight of ſinne, and ſenſe of wants, feruent deſires and ſtrong faith, who are ſo diſabled through naturall imperfections, want of memory, and boldneſſe, or ſlowneſſe, or vnreadineſſe of ſpeach, that they are not able to performe this duty, eſpecially when they are in the preſence of others. And this I write not to detract any thing from the excellency of their gifts, who are able vpon all occaſions to expreſſe the deſires and prayers of their heart in good words and conuenient diſcourſe of ſpeach; ſeeing this is a gift of God, which not onely ſtirreth vp our owne deuotion, but is profitable alſo for the edification of others, who can onely conceiue of holy deſires, as they are by vtterance made knowne of thoſe that haue them; but partly to giue vnto the prayer of the heart and ſoule a ſuperiour excellency, farre aboue the prayer of the lippes, euen then alſo when it is without it; partly that none ſhould pleaſe themſelues in it, though they could rauiſh others with the admiration of their gifts, if they be not as earneſt, deuoute, and feruent in the deſires of their hearts as they are able and eloquent in the prayers of their mouthes: for of theſe in their greateſt excellency, it may be truely ſaid, that they are in Gods eſtimate but meere lip-labour, which will for reward draw vpon vs that juſt cenſure, this people draweth neare vnto mee with their lips, when their hearts are farre from me. And partly, yea eſpecially, for the comfort of all thoſe, who hauing holy deſires, through want of naturall parts, haue no ability to vtter them, ſeeing if ſuch can but make their ſuites knowne vnto God by their ſighes and grones, it is an euidence vnto them, that the Spirit dwelleth in them who enableth them thus to pray, and whoſe ſuits and ſupplications are ſure to bee heard and granted. But yet wee are not truely capable of this comfort if wee doe not labour after perfection and ſtriue to attaine vnto the beſt gifts, much leſſe if wee are diſabled for the performance of theſe holy duties, not through want of naturall gifts but of ſpirituall grace, and through ſloth and negligence which hindreth vs from imploying and vſing them. Of which this is an euident ſigne, when as wee haue libertie of ſpeach and plenty of words, to diſcourſe readily and freely, vpon all occaſions of worldly and earthly things, but are then onely tongue-tied, when wee ſhould ſpeake vnto God, and can finde no fit words to expreſſe our minds in any ſenſibly manner, when as by prayer wee ſhould make our ſuites knowne vnto him.

Eſa.29.13.

1. Cor.14.1.

Chap. XV.

How wee may know that Gods Spirit dwelleth in vs by our ſanctification and the qualities and gifts of holines infuſed in vs.

§. Sect. 1. The fift effect of the Spirit is the worke of ſanctification.

A Fift effect of the Spirit, whereby he may bee knowne to dwell in vs, is the worke of ſanctification, and the qualities of holineſſe infuſed into vs, which is ſo proper and peculiar to the Spirit, that none beſides him can effect it. For as impoſſible it is for any man to giue vnto himſelfe this ſpiritual renewing, as it was at firſt to be the cauſe of his owne being; as vnable are we to be the cauſes of our regeneration, as we were, to be of our generation; and therefore as the Creature euidently proueth that it had a Creatour, and the Child that it had a Father, ſo alike certainly may we bee aſſured by our renewing and regeneration, that the Spirit of God dwelleth in vs who hath beene the ſole authour of this worke. And thus our Sauiour aſcribeth it to his holy Spirit, where he ſaith, that vnleſſe wee bee borne of Water and the Spirit wee cannot enter into the Kingdome of Heauen. So the Apoſtle hauing told the Corinthians that they had beene notorious ſinners, ſaith that they were waſhed and ſanctified by the Spirit of our God. And hereof it is that hee is called not onely the holy Spirit, but the Spirit of holineſſe, the Spirit of ſanctification or the ſanctifying Spirit, not onely becauſe hee is infinitely holy himſelfe, but alſo doth ſanctifie and make vs holy who were in our ſelues corrupt and ſinnefull. The which ſanctification hee worketh by begetting a liuely faith in vs which purifieth our hearts, and ſo applyeth vnto vs the vertue of Chriſts death and reſurrection, whereby wee are cleanſed from our ſinfull corruptions and quickened in the inner man to holineſſe of life; the which ſanctification, mortification, and ſpirituall quickening alwayes beginneth at the heart, minde, will and affections, and then afterwards ſheweth it ſelfe in our outward actions. And therefore whoſoeuer finde this worke of ſanctification thus begun in them, they may be aſſured, that the Spirit of God dwelleth in them.

Ioh.3.5. 1.Cor.6.11. Rom 1.4.

§. Sect. 2.
Of the ſixt effect of the Spirit, which is repentance and of the preparation thereunto.
Ioh. 16.8.

A ſixt effect of the Spirit dwelling in vs is like vnto the former, namely vnfained repentance and amendment of life; vnto which it maketh the ſame preparation, that it doth for faith. For firſt by the Miniſtery of the Law, the Spirit (as our Sauiour ſpeaketh) conuinceth vs of ſinne, ſhewing vnto vs both the hainouſneſſe of our ſinnes, together with their multitude, and alſo the grieuous and endleſſe puniſhments which they haue deſerued. And this it doth commonly at the firſt in a more generall and confuſed maner, amazing and aſtoniſhing vs with terrours and feares horrours of mind, and panges of conſcience, when as we ſee the huge maſſe or mountaine of our manifold and grieuous ſinnes (as it were) in the whole lumpe; and the wrath of God, the curſe of the Law, the plagues and puniſhments of this life and the life to come, which wee haue by them deſeruedly, and (in reſpect of our own meanes) ineuitably drawne vpon vs; and afterwards more particularly and diſtinctly it ſetteth our ſinnes in order before vs; and eſpecially preſenteth to our view thoſe ſinnes which wee are moſt guiltie of, and by which wee haue moſt diſhonoured God and wounded our owne conſciences. By all which it worketh in vs that which we call penitence, contrition, and humiliation, whereby wee are caſt downe vnder the heauie waight of our ſinnes and lye grieuing and groning vnder them; as it were vnder an intolerable burthen, finding no reſt or comfort in our ſelues, or in any worldly things beſides. And thus the ſpirit by the Law (as it were) with an yron hammer, battereth & bruiſeth our hard and ſtony hearts in pieces, that he may mixe with them, being made contrite, the oyle of his ſpirituall graces; and vſeth it like a plow to breake vp theſe clunge, ſtiffe, and fallow grounds, that being thus prepared hee may ſow in them theſe holy ſeedes. For when hee hath thus caſt vs downe and throughly humbled vs, then he raiſeth vs vp againe, by reuealing vnto vs the myſterie of ſaluation, the mercies of God, and merits of Chriſt, offered vnto all who will receiue them by faith. And then (as hath beene ſhewed) it worketh in vs an hungring deſire after Chriſt and his righteouſneſſe, and a carefull, earneſt and conſtant endeauour in the vſe of all good meanes, as the hearing of the Word, Prayer, and the reſt, whereby wee may bee made partakers of them. The which by his inward and ſecret operation, hee ſo bleſſeth and ſanctifieth vnto vs, that they become effectuall to worke in vs a liuely faith, whereby wee lay hold vpon Chriſt and his benefits, and ſo are aſſured of the mercie of God and the remiſſion and pardon of all our ſinnes, of Gods grace in this life, and eternall glory in the life to come.

Ier. 4.3.

§. Sect. 3
That faith is the cauſe and foundation of our repentance.

And thus being poſſeſſed by faith of all theſe ineſtimable benefits, our hearts are rauiſhed with the apprehenſion of the infinite loue of God, and our Sauiour Chriſt, and inflamed with vnfained loue towards them againe; which faith thus working by loue doth cauſe a change and alteration which is called repentance, beginning in the minde and heart, and ſo proceeding to the outward parts and actions; and worketh in vs a godly ſorrow becauſe by our ſinnes we haue ſo much offended and diſpleaſed ſo gracious a God and a good Father; a true hatred of thoſe ſinnes and corruptions which wee haue either formerly committed, or which yet adhere and cleaue vnto vs, and a ſetled reſolution and conſtant purpoſe to mortifie and ſubdue, leaue and forſake them for the time to come, and to ſerue the Lord in holineſſe and newneſſe of life. All which wee doe not out of ſeruile feare, but out of childe-like loue and affection, which maketh vs willing and deſirous by our new obedience to pleaſe and glorifie our heauenly Father, not for feare of condemnation, but becauſe through the mercies of God, and merits of Chriſt, wee are aſſured that wee ſhall neuer bee condemned. Where, by the way, we may note a notable difference betweene that ſorrow for ſinne which the ſpirit worketh in the regenerate, and that which is in carnall men: For though theſe may ſorrow and grieue after they haue ſinned, yet it is not for ſinne it ſelfe, the remembrance whereof is pleaſant vnto them, but for the puniſhments, which they either preſently feele, or feare and expect in time to come: where as the ſorrow of Gods children is a floud or ſtreame that ſpringeth from faith and loue, making vs to bewaile our ſinnes becauſe wee haue offended and diſhonoured ſo good a God, who hath freed vs from the guilt and puuiſhment of them by giuing his onely Sonne to death as the price of our redemption.

§. Sect. 4.
That the Spirit dwelling in

So that if the Spirit of God dwell in vs, then hath it wrought in vs, this worke of re-vs purgeth vs from our naturall corruptions.

repentance in all the parts thereof and hath made in vs an happy and bleſſed change, from euill to good, from ſinne to holineſſe, and from corruption to grace. For as in nature corruption goeth before generation, the aboliſhing of the old forme, before the bringing in of the new; ſo before we can be ſpiritually renewed, the old man muſt bee killed and crucified, and then the new man will bee quickned and reuiued; ſinne and corruption is purged away, and then holineſſe and righteouſneſſe is wrought in vs. Firſt then in effecting this worke of repentance, the Spirit of God dwelling in vs, purgeth and purifyeth vs from all our ſinfull corruptions in all the parts of our ſoules and bodies, by applying vnto vs the efficacie and power of Chriſt Ieſus his death, which mortifieth and crucifieth them in vs, ſo as they do no longer raigne in our mortall bodies as in time paſt. As for example it cauſeth the ſcales of ignorance to fall from the eyes of our minde, it freeth in ſome meaſure our judgements from errour, our imaginations from vanitie, our conſciences from dead workes, our hearts from hardneſſe, our wils from peruerſeneſſe and rebellion, our affections from corruption and diſorder, and all the members of our bodies from the ſeruitude of ſinne. All which are the proper and peculiar workes of the ſpirit, and the fruits of our regeneration, and new birth, according to that of the Apoſtle; Whoſoeuer is borne of God doth not commit ſinne: for his ſeed remaineth in him, and he cannot ſinne becauſe he is borne of God.

1.Ioh.3.9.

§.Sect.5. That the Spirit is knowne to be in vs by his quickning of vs in the inner man.

Yea but in the vnregenerate alſo there may ſeeme to bee ſome mortification, ſome mourning for ſinne, ſome leauing and forſaking of it: As we ſee in Herod who heard Iohn the Batiſt gladly, and did many things according to his inſtructions: In Simon Magus who for a time left his ſorcerie, beleeued and was baptized: In Ahab, who humbled himſelfe before God, wearing ſackecloth, and going mournfully: In Iudas, Demas, Ananias and Sapphira, with many ſuch like, and how then may we diſcerne the one from the other? I anſwere, that though there bee ſome ſeeming ſimilitude betweene them, yet there are many great and eſſentiall differences whereby wee may know the one from the other. For the regenerate man mortifieth and forſaketh his ſinnes out of loue and obedience to God, but the vnregenerate out of ſelfe-loue for the obtaining ſome temporall good, or the auoiding of ſome euill. Hee renounceth all ſinne, and laboureth moſt in the mortification of thoſe corruptions vnto which he is naturally moſt inclined, as wee may ſee in the example of Dauid, who ſhewed his vprightneſſe before God, by keeping himſelfe from all his iniquities, by hating euery falſe way, and eſteeming all Gods precepts. So that his repentance and mortification is without reſtraint or limitation, and extendeth to the ſubduing and rooting out of all ſinne without exception. But the other in his fained repentance renounceth onely ſome ſinnes which he can beſt ſpare, as being leaſt pleaſant or profitable; but as for thoſe which are moſt aduantageable and delightfull, hee keepeth them like ſugar vnder his tongue, and will rather part with any thing, euen the firſt borne of his body, as the Prophet ſpeaketh; yea looſe his owne ſoule, than leaue and forſake it; As wee ſee in Herod and many others. The man regenerate is conſtant in his repentance and caſteth away his ſinnes with deteſtation like filthy rags, with a purpoſe neuer againe to returne vnto them; but the Hypocrite onely leaueth them for a time, and then returneth vnto them againe, hee layeth them aſide like his apparell, with a purpoſe to reſume them when hee hath fit opportunitie, and there is not a through diuorce betweene him and them, but onely a temporarie ſeparation (as it were) by mutuall conſent. Hee leaueth his ſinnes willingly and chearefully, becauſe they ſo beſet him, and clinge about his necke, that he cannot in ſuch haſt flie from them as hee deſireth, therefore hee is content that the Lord ſhould pull him out of this ſinnefull Sodome with ſome violence, burne away his droſſe with the fire of tribulation, and cut the throate of thoſe which hee hath eſteemed his darling ſinnes, with the ſword or razor of afflictions; but the other vnwillingly forſaketh his darling ſinnes, and when he is dragged from them by the feare of Gods approaching judgements, he doth with Lots wife, looke backe vpon them, as being loath to part with them, vnleſſe hee were conſtrained by meere neceſſitie. From whence another maine difference plainely ariſeth betweene them. For the ſound Chriſtian by his repentance hath his minde and affections changed, and wheras in the dayes of his ignorance he allowed and approued, loued and liked his ſinnes; now hee condemneth, loatheth and diſliketh them; ſo that hee is freed, not onely from the outward act of ſinne, but alſo from the inward loue, yea more from the corrupt affection, than from the ſinnefull action, as wee ſee in the example of the Apoſtle Paul, who did the euill which he hated, and was delighted in the Law of God in the inner man, when by the Law of his members hee was led captiue of ſinne: But the vnregenerate doe onely leaue their ſinnes in reſpect of the outward act, when as in the meane while their hearts and affections doe cleaue vnto it. As wee ſee in the example of Balaam, who rendereth this as the reaſon why hee would not curſe the people of Iſrael, not becauſe he loued them, Pſal.119.6.128. Ioh.6.63.

Tit.3.5.

Eph.2.1.

Iob 20.12. Mic.6.6.

Eſa.58.5.

Heb.12.1.

Rom.7.15.23.

Num.23.20.26.

as being the Church of God and his peculiar and choſen people, but becauſe the Lord would not giue him leaue; whereby hee implyeth that he would very gladly haue done it, that by gratifying Balaac he might haue receiued the wages of iniquitie, but was reſtrained by the terrours of the Almightie, ſo as hee durſt not for his life preſume to doe it. In which reſpect it may bee truly ſaid, that Pauls ſinning through infirmitie, and in ſome ſort vnwillingly, was leſſe ſinfull, than Balaams not committing of that act of ſinne in curſing the people, yea than his bleſſing of them, ſeeing all hee did was through feare and conſtraint, which made him to bleſſe them whom hee curſed in his heart, as appeareth by that his curſed counſaile which he gaue vnto Balaac, namely that hee ſhould by alluring the people to commit firſt carnall, and then ſpirituall fornication, vtterly diſarme them of Gods protection, and leaue them naked to their enemies. And the Lord doth not ſo much regard the hand as the heart; nor the outward action, as the minde and inward affection.

*Num.*24.14.& 25.1.2.& 31.16.

§. *Sect.*6. That the Spirit is knowne to be in vs by his quickning of vs in the inner man.

Secondly as the Spirit mortifieth and crucifieth the old man with the luſts thereof, ſo it quickeneth vs in the inner man and reneweth in vs all ſanctifying and ſauing graces; as it maketh vs to flye all euill, ſo to imbrace that which is good; as it cauſeth vs to forſake our old ſinnefull workes, and corrupt conuerſation, ſo it inableth vs by our new obedience to ſerue the liuing God. Thus our Sauiour aſcribeth to the Spirit this ſpirituall life and quickening; It is (ſaith he) the Spirit that quickeneth; And the Apoſtle telleth vs, that God according to his mercie hath ſaued vs, by the waſhing of regeneration, and renewing of the holy Ghoſt. If therefore the Spirit of God dwelleth in vs, then are wee who were dead in treſpaſſes and ſinnes, quickened with ſauing grace, and raiſed and inabled vnto new obedience; our vnderſtandings which were darkened with ignorance are inlightened with the knowledge of Gods truth, the worke of redemption, and myſteries of godlineſſe. Our judgements are informed ſo as we can diſcerne betweene truth and falſehood, good and euill. Our minds which onely minded earthly vanities, are now ſet, not on things beneath, but vpon thoſe that are aboue; our conſciences which were loaded with dead workes, doe now ſerue the liuing God, performing that dutie for which they were created, in excuſing vs when we doe well, and accuſing vs when wee doe euill. Our wils which were ſtubborne and rebellious, are now obedient, plyable and ſubject to the will of God. Our hearts of ſtone, are made hearts of fleſh, and becomming broken and contrite are fit ſacrifices which God accepteth. Our corrupt affections are now ſanctified and brought in order; our loue of the world is changed into the loue of God, and of ſpirituall and heauenly things; our confidence in the creature into affiance and truſt in God; Our feare of men into a godly feare which reſtraineth vs from ſinne, and inciteth vs to all good duties; Our carnall joy into ſpirituall rejoycing, our corrupt anger into godly zeale, which ſetteth it ſelfe againſt all the impediments of Gods glory, eſpecially our owne ſinnes. And finally being freed from the ſeruice of ſinne, wee are now become the ſeruants of righteouſneſſe, ſetting before vs the whole Law of God, as the rule and ſquare of our liues, and all our actions, and conforming our ſelues in obedience vnto all and euery of the commandements, both in the hating and forſaking of whatſoeuer it forbiddeth and condemneth, and in the imbracing and practiſing of whatſoeuer it commendeth and injoyneth.

*Ioh.*6.63.
*Tit.*3.5.
*Eph.*2.1.
*Col.*3.2.
*Heb.*9.14.
*Pſal.*51.17.

§. *Sect.*7. The differences betweene the quickning of the Spirit in the regenerate, and that which ſeemeth to be in the vnregenerate.

But here let vs take heede that wee doe not deceiue our ſelues; for though thoſe onely in whom the Spirit dwelleth are thus truely quickened, yet there may be a ſhew of it in them that are vnregenerate, as we may ſee in the example of the Angell of the Church of Sardis, who had a name that hee liued, and yet was dead: and of the Church of Laodicea, who thought himſelfe quicke ſighted and rich in all ſpirituall grace, when as hee was wretched and miſerable, poore, blinde, and naked. And though all new and true obedience is the fruit of the Spirit, yet there is in the vnregenerate ſome reſemblance and ſhewes of it, though it bee not in them in truth; euen as there are many things done by beaſts, which a man would thinke did proceede from reaſon and vnderſtanding; where as in truth they are by inſtinct of nature; they propounding no ends vnto themſelues in all their actions, but are directed vnto them by him that made them; and by phantaſie and imagination, reaſons Ape, which inableth them to produce ſuch ſtrange effects, that diuers being hereby deceiued, haue thought them reaſonable. Now that we may not be thus deceiued, let vs remember, that he who is led by the Spirit, performeth ſimple obedience vnto the Law of God, becauſe hee requireth it, but the vnregenerate in diſſimulation for worldly and ſiniſter reſpects; hee yeeldeth totall obedience vnto the whole Law of God, and with all the powers and faculties of his ſoule and body; but the other onely in the outward man and that vnto ſome commandements alone, making no conſcience of the reſt. Hee is conſtant in his obedience, becauſe the cauſe thereof Gods loue towards him, and his loue towards God is conſtant and permanent; and hee walketh daily and continually in Gods

*Apoc.*3.1.17.

Law, as in his way; but the other is obedient by fits only, going forward and backward, as he is ſpurred on, or curbed and rayned in, by worldly reſpects, which being mutable and vnconſtant doe make his obedience like vnto them. In which reſpect the motion of the vnregenerate in the wayes of godlineſſe may be ſaid to be dead and accidentall, incited and ſtirred on by outward cauſes, as the horſe which would not goe vnleſſe he were compelled by the ſpurre, or like the wheeles in the clocke, which no longer moue than the waights and poyzes doe hang vpon it: But the motion of the regenerate is liuely and naturall, proceeding from an inward cauſe, euen the Spirit of God dwelling in vs, which quickneth vs (as it were) with a new ſoule of life and power, whereby wee are inabled to goe on in the wayes of godlineſſe, euen as a man naturally moueth and walketh by vertue of his ſoule; which quickeneth and ſtrengtheneth his body to the performance of thoſe actions. So that in a true Chriſtian there is the right perpetuall motion, whoſe cauſe is not outward, but in himſelfe, making him conſtantly and continually to goe on in his holy way as kindly and naturally, by vertue of that godly nature whereof he is made partaker by the holy Spirit, euen as the fountaine ſprings and the riuer runnes. And howſoeuer there may bee both in the regenerate and the vnregenerate an heate of loue and zeale which is the cauſe of all their motion and actions, yet there is great difference betweene them, for the one is like the heate in a bath, whoſe cauſe is naturall and in it ſelfe, and is therefore conſtant and continuall, and not abated and leſſened but rather intended and increaſed by the outward cold of croſſes and afflictions; but the other like the heate of ordinarie hot water, which being naturally cold, and onely hot by accident and heate of the fire, is not conſtant, but though for a time it may be much more hot than the other, yet the cauſe being not in it ſelfe, but outward and accidentall, when this is put out, the heate continueth not, bnt againe returneth to more than wonted coldneſſe. For ſo the heart in the vnregenerate being onely cauſed by outward proſperitie and temporall benefits, they ſeeme feruent in their loue towards God whileſt theſe continue, but if this fuell which nouriſheth it, be taken away, and they bee compaſſed about with afflictions and perſecutions, they become more cold in their loue and zeale towards God than euer they were before. Or elſe they may be reſembled to a liuing body, and a dead carkaſe, the one whereof is hot by an inward cauſe, euen the radicall and vitall heate which warmeth the bloud in all the veines; but the other howſoeuer it may bee made hotte by the heate of the fire and by much friction and rubbing, yet it continueth not any longer than theſe meanes are applyed, becauſe it hath no inward cauſe, but they being remoued, it becommeth againe as cold as a ſtone, or the earth and clay whereof it is made.

2.Pet.1.4.

CHAP. XVI.

The former operations of the ſanctifying ſpirit illuſtrated by diuers ſimilitudes.

§. Sect. 1.
The Spirit compared to Winde and Oyle.

ANd theſe are the effects reſpecting our repentance which the ſpirit worketh in vs, the which are alſo implyed by diuers metaphors or ſimilitudes, by which in the Scriptures it is repreſented vnto vs. For it is likened vnto winde, becauſe like it (yea much aboue it) it is mighty and powerfull to caſt downe all that ſtandeth in the way, as proud reaſon, ſtubborne will, and rebellious affections; and to make the ſtrong Oakes and lofty Cedars equall with the loweſt ſhrubs. Secondly in reſpect of its ſecret operation and the vnknowne liberty which it taketh in working where it liſteth. Thirdly, becauſe the more it bloweth vpon vs, the more it cauſeth vs to burne and flame out in the feruent zeale of Gods glory. And fourthly becauſe it hath a cleanſing and purifying vertue, whereby it purgeth vs from the contagion and corruption of our ſinnes, euen as the winde purgeth the wheate and driueth away the chaffe, cleanſeth the ayre, and purifieth it from all hurtfull and dangerous infection. Secondly it is likened to oyle, and the operation thereof to outward annointing, in reſpect of that ſuppling and ſoftning vertue which it hath, whereby it mollifyeth our hard and ſtony hearts, and makes them to become fleſh; tender and pliable to Gods will and word, and alſo becauſe our powers and parts being ſpiritually annoynted with this holy oyle, they are made ſtrong and vigorous, nimble & actiue to runne in the wayes of Gods Commandements; as our limbes annoyted with materiall oyle, are made more agill and fit for any bodily exerciſe or feates of actiuity. And finally it is likened to oyle becauſe like it, it maketh a cheareful countenance, whileſt it comforteth and cheareth the heart, bringeth peace of conſcience, which paſſeth all vnderſtanding, and repleniſheth our ſoules with ſuch inward joy as is vnſpeakable and ineſtimable.

Ioh.3.8.
1.Cor.10.5.
2.Cor.1.21.
1.Ioh.2.20.

§. Sect. 2.
The Spirit compared to water.
Eſa.44.3.

Thirdly, it is compared vnto water; For I will (ſaith the Lord) powre water vpon him that is thirſty, and floods vpon the dry ground; I will powre my Spirit vpon thy ſeede, and my bleſſing vpon thy off-ſpring; becauſe in many things it doth reſemble it, for it cleareth the eyes of the mind, (as materiall water doth the eyes of the body) and maketh vs much more perfectly to behold the wayes of God and myſteries of his Kingdome; to which end the Lord promiſeth his Church that hee will powre the water of his Spirit vpon all fleſh, the effect whereof ſhould be this, that they ſhould prophecy, their young men ſee viſions, and their olde men dreame dreames. Ioel.2.28. Eſa.61.2.3. Secondly like water it cooleth and refreſheth vs, when wee are ſcorched with the heate of Gods diſpleaſure, with afflictions and perſecutions, and are ready to faint with wearineſſe, as we are trauailing in our journey towards our heauenly countrey. Thirdly (like water) it quencheth our ſpirituall thirſt, by applying vnto vs that [illegible] ſpring and fountaine of liuing waters, Ieſus Chriſt his bloud, his righteouſneſſe and obedience; to which purpoſe is that ſpeech of our Sauiour to the woman of Samaria; Ioh.4.14. Whoſoeuer drinketh of the waters that I ſhall giue him, ſhall neuer thirſt; but the water that I ſhall giue him, ſhall be in him a well of water ſpringing vnto euerlaſting life. And that proclamation which hee made at the feaſt; and 7.37. If any man thirſt let him come vnto mee and drinke. Hee that beleeueth in mee, out of his belly ſhall flow riuers of liuing water: the which (as the Euangeliſt expoundeth it) hee ſpake of his ſpirit which they that beleeued on him ſhould receiue. Fourthly, he is compared to water, becauſe like it he hath a cleanſing vertue, to purge vs by the application of Chriſts merits and bloud-ſhead from the guilt, puniſhment and corruption of all our ſinnes. So the Apoſtle ſaith to the Corinthians, that they were waſhed and cleanſed from their ſinnes, in the name of the Lord Ieſus, by the Spirit of God. 1.Cor.6.11. Tit.3.5. Heb.10.22. Zach.13.1. Laſtly like water, it watereth our dry and barraine hearts, and maketh them fruitfull in holines and righteouſneſſe, for ſo the Lord hauing ſaid, that he would powre the water of his Spirit vpon his Iſrael, addeth in the next words, and they ſhall ſpring vp as among the graſſe, and as willowes by the water courſes. Eſa.44.45. And againe, Thou ſhalt bee like a watered garden, and like a ſpring of water, whoſe waters faile not.

§. Sect.3. The Spirit compared to to fire.

Finally it is compared to fire, according to the Baptiſts ſpeech of our Sauiour Chriſt, Hee ſhall baptiſe you with the holy Ghoſt and with fire; Ioh.3.11. and ſo when hee deſcended vpon the Apoſtles; it is ſaid that there appeared vnto them, clouen tongues like as fire, and it ſate vpon each of them. Act.2.3. The which ſimilitude is moſt liuely to ſignifie and repreſent the vertue and operation of the holy Ghoſt. For firſt like fire it giueth light, euen in the darkeſt places and diſpelleth and ſcattereth the blacke and thicke fogges of ignorance and errour, ſo that all things about it which were hidden and ſecret are ſpiritually diſcerned, in which reſpect hee is called the [a] Father of lights, which cauſeth the [b] light of grace bringing ſaluation to ſhine vnto vs, by which wee are [c] illightned who ſate in darkneſſe, and in the ſhadow of death, that wee might [d] know the things of God, which cannot otherwiſe bee diſcerned, and might haue our feete guided into the wayes of peace. Secondly as fire burneth all things that are combuſtible, as ſtraw, wood, chaffe and ſuch like; ſo the Spirit of God burneth and conſumeth in vs whatſoeuer may be conſumed, as ſinne, corruption, and all manner of fleſhly luſts, and ſo offereth vp our bodies as a liuing ſacrifice, holy, acceptable and without blame, Rom.12.1. Mark.9.39. which would not bee acceptable vnto God, vnleſſe like the whole burnt offring, it were thus ſalted, ſeaſoned, and purified with this holy fire, as our Sauiour ſpeaketh. Thirdly, as fire by conſuming the ruſt and droſſe doth refine and purifie the mettall, ſo that the more it is tryed the purer it waxeth. So this holy ſpirit conſuming the ruſt and droſſe of our ſins and corruptions, doth make vs pure and refined mettals, yea it alſo (like the fire) hath the vertue of ſeparation, parting aſunder our Tinne and Copper, from right Siluer and Gold, that ſo wee might bee a treaſure vnto God, and (as it were) fit veſſels for his owne Table. So the Lord promiſeth; Eſa.1.25. I will turne mine hand vpon thee, and purge away thy droſſe and take away all thy Tinne. And againe, Euery one that is written among the liuing in Ieruſalem, ſhall be called holy, when the Lord ſhall haue waſhed away the filth of the daughters of Zion, and ſhall haue purged the blood of Ieruſalem from the middiſt thereof, by the ſpirit of judgement, and by the ſpirit of burning. Eſa.1.25. Eſa.4.4. Fourthly, as it is the propertie of fire to turne things into its owne nature, and to make them like vnto it ſelfe: ſo the Spirit doth turne and transforme vs, making vs of earthy, naturall and carnall, to become heauenly, ſupernaturall and ſpirituall. More ſpecially as it is the propertie of fire, to take from yron its owne qualities when it is put into it, and to communicate vnto it ſuch qualities as it ſelfe hath; and whereas naturally it is blacke and hard, cold and heauy, it maketh it bright and ſhining, ſoft and liquid, hot and light, ſo that a man would thinke that the yron were transformed and changed into fire it ſelfe; So it is the property of the Spirit to communicate the like qualities to the naturall man, for whereas naturally he is darkned in his vnderſtanding through blacke and palpable ignorance, it inlightneth his mind with the bright beames of ſauing knowledge whereby he is enabled to ſee and vnderſtand the high and deepe myſteries of Gods Kingdome. 1.Cor.2.14.10. Eph.4.18. Eſa.42.16. Pſal.36.9. Whereas his heart is ſo hard and obdurate, that nothing will make it relent, but it will rather breake than [a] Iam.1.17.

[b] Tit.2.11.12.
[c] Luk.1.79.
[d] 1.Cor.2.12.14

1.King.22.19. Act.2.37.

than bow and incline to any good; the Spirit of God maketh it to melt like the heart of Ioſiah, and ſo ſuppleth and ſoftneth it, that it becommeth flexible to Gods will, and fit to receiue any impreſſion which hee is pleaſed to ſtampe vpon it, or any forme which hee will frame it vnto; as if it were no more Iron, but now become clay or waxe. So wheras he is naturally of a more than earthly coldneſſe and like Iron, which maketh other things cold with the very touch thereof; Gods Spirit ſo heateth and inflameth him with feruent loue and ardent zeale, that hee hath not onely liuely heate in himſelfe, but ſpirituall fire hee communicateth his heate and warmth of holineſſe and righteouſneſſe euen like to all that are neere vnto him; making them which were cold and dull, hot and zealouſly feruent in all Chriſtian and holy duties.

Epheſ.2.1.
Pſal.34.48.

Finally, whereas like Iron hee is naturally ſo lumpiſh and heauy, that he is wholy fixed and faſtened to the earth, minding onely worldly things, and can no more mount vp aloft in holy and heauenly meditations, than Iron of it ſelfe can aſcend into the ayre; or if by ſome outward force his thoughts be raiſed vp to minde thoſe things which are aboue, no ſooner is the ſtrength of the outward agent ſpent, but preſently like an Iron bullet it falleth downe againe, and euen preſſeth it into the earth with more than wonted waight & violence; contrariwiſe when as his earthy maſſineſſe is attenuated with the fire of Gods Spirit, he not onely becommeth more light, but being throughly heated in this holy forge, hee ſendeth vp the ſparkes of ſpirituall Meditations, and now forgetting his old earthy nature, hee doth no longer lie groueling on the ground, minding onely earthly things, but being riſen with Chriſt, hee ſeeketh not things beneath, but thoſe things that are aboue, and euen whileſt his body is on earth, his conuerſation is in Heauen, and though hee cannot corporally aſcend, yet he continually ſendeth vp thitherward the ſparkles of holy and heauenly thoughts, and euen taketh his chiefe comfort and delight to ſpend his ſpirits in diuine contemplation. Laſtly, as fire by the warmth and heate thereof refreſheth and cheareth thoſe creatures which are frozen and benummed with cold, and communicateth vnto them the operations of life, ſtrength and nimbleneſſe: So this holy fire of the Spirit giueth ſpirituall life and quickening vnto vs who are dead in treſpaſſes and ſins; and by the diuine heate of Gods loue, it warmeth, cheareth and refreſheth, our Icy and benummed hearts, and inflameth them with a feruent zeale of his glory, and an ardent loue towards him who hath ſo loued vs, and alſo to our Neighbours for his ſake; whereby it commeth to paſſe, that we who were frozen in the dregs of our ſinnes, and ſo weake and ſtiffe, that wee were not able to ſtirre a limbe for the doing of any good action; are now made by this vitall heat, ſtrong and actiue for all good duties. So our Sauiour ſaith, that it is the ſpirit that quickneth, the fleſh profith nothing; and the Apoſtle telleth vs, that the ſpirit giueth life. And therefore he calleth him, the law of the ſpirit of life; and ſaith, that this Spirit is life becauſe of righteouſneſſe.

Col.3.2.
Philip.3.20.

Iohn 6.63.

2.Cor.3.6.
Rom.8.2,10.

§. Sect.4.
That wee may know that the ſpirit dwelleth in vs by the operations ſignified by the former Metaphors.

If therefore we would know whether the ſpirit of God dwell in vs or no, we muſt examine our owne hearts, and try our ſelues, whether there be in vs theſe operations and effects of the Spirit which are reſembled by theſe Metaphors and ſimilitudes; as firſt if it haue like a mighty winde caſt downe the ſtrong holds of ſinne, and (as it were) laid flat on the ground our proud carnall reaſon and rebellious will ſubjecting them to the will of God and the rule of his Word; if it hath cauſed vs, not onely to burne in loue of Gods Majeſty, but euen to blaze out in the zeale of his glory, and if it hath cleanſed vs like pure wheate from the chaffe of our corruptions, and from the light corne of humane inuentions and vngrounded ſuperſtitions. Secondly, let vs conſider and try our ſelues, if like an Oyle it hath ſuppled and ſoftned our hard and ſtony hearts, ſo as they are plyable to Gods will; if by this ſpirituall anoynting we be made more ſtrong, actiue and nimble to performe holy and Chriſtian duties, than euer we haue beene in time paſt; and finally if it haue comforted and cheared our hearts in the aſſurance of our reconciliation with God, and remiſſion of our ſins, filling them with ſpirituall joy, and hath brought peace of conſcience which maketh vs to looke with a chearefull countenance, euen whileſt the World frowneth vpon vs. Thirdly, let vs examine, if like water it hath cleared the eyes of our minds, and hath giuen vnto vs a ſauing, feeling and experimentall knowledge of God, our ſelues, and his holy Truth; if it hath cooled and refreſhed vs who were ſcorched with the appreheñſion of Gods anger for our ſins, or with the heat of troubles and afflictions, and hath quenched our ſpirituall thirſt by applying vnto vs Chriſts righteouſneſſe and bloud-ſhed (as it were) a Fountaine of liuing waters; if it hath by applying vnto vs the vertue of Chriſts death, cleanſed and purged vs, not onely from the guilt and puniſhment, but alſo from the corruption of our ſinnes, ſo as though they dwell, yet they doe not raigne in our mortall bodies; and laſtly, if it haue watered our hearts, as it were, dry and barraine grounds, and hath made them like a fertile ſoyle; to bring forth plentifull fruits of holineſſe and righteouſneſſe. Finally, let vs examine and try our ſelues, if it haue been vnto vs a ſpirituall fire, to giue vnto vs light who ſate in darkneſſe and in the ſhadow of death; if like a fire it haue conſumed the droſſe and ruſt of our corruptions; and in ſome meaſure hath refined and made vs veſſels of grace, fit for Gods vſe; and finally, if it hath warmed our cold and frozen hearts with the zeale of Gods glory, and the loue of him and our Neighbours, ſo as we who were ſtiffe and benummed are become ſtrong, liuely and actiue in performing all holy and Chriſtian duties which we owe vnto them. And if wee find theſe effects and operations in vs, then may we be aſſured, that the Spirit of God which is the cauſe and authour of them dwelleth in vs, though they be not in vs in perfection, if they be in ſincerity and truth. But if vpon tryall we find that they are altogether wanting, then haue wee not the Spirit of God, which can no more be ſeuered from theſe effects and ſignes of it, than light from the Sunne, or thoſe effects before ſpoken of from the winde and Oyle, the water and the fire.

Chap. XVII.

Of the laſt effects and operations of the Spirit whereby wee may know that it dwelleth in vs.

§. Sect. 1.
That the ſpirit worketh in all thoſe in whom it is ſanctifying and ſauing graces.

THe laſt effects which are infallible ſignes of the Spirits dwelling in vs, are all the ſauing and ſanctifying gifts and graces which it worketh in vs; as firſt a liuely faith apprehending the promiſes, and applying vnto vs Chriſt Ieſus and all his benefits, of which I haue already ſpoken. The ſecond fruit of the Spirit is vnfained loue of God, not onely for his benefits receiued or expected, preſent proſperity, the confluence of worldly benefits, and euerlaſting ſaluation; but alſo in his owne nature and in reſpect of his goodneſſe, mercy, juſtice, holineſſe and all other his ſauing attributes. In which the faithfull in their loue reſemble children, who loue their Parents out of naturall affection, ſimply and ſincerely, when as they haue no other outward motiue, euen when they croſſe them in their deſires, and doe correct and chaſtiſe them for their amendment. For ſuch is the loue of Gods Children, free and generous, (although their loue may be increaſed, and made vnto them much more ſenſible by temporall benefits and heauenly hopes) in which reſpect they are ſaid to haue receiued a free ſpirit, and ſo ſerue God in the liberty of it. Whereas contrariwiſe if there be any loue towards God in the wicked, it is onely ſeruile and ſlauiſh, not for his owne ſake, or out of their owne diſpoſition and naturall affection, but onely for the hire of worldly proſperity, honours, riches, pleaſures, peace, health, eaſe and ſuch like temporary benefits; the which when hee doth at any time take from them, and inflict vpon them the contrary croſſes, then the cauſe of their loue ceaſing, their loue it ſelfe alſo ceaſeth; as wee ſee in the example of Saul, Iehu, Iudas, Demas, and many others. Thirdly, the Spirit bringeth with it peace of conſcience, which is a fruit of faith that the Spirit worketh in vs, aſſuring vs of the remiſſion of our ſinnes and our reconciliation with God; for ſo the Apoſtle ſaith, that being iuſtified by faith, we haue peace with God through our Lord Ieſus Chriſt; and therefore hee alſo reckoneth it among the fruites of the Spirit. Fourthly, by this aſſurance of faith and inward peace, it alſo worketh in vs inward comfort and conſolation, which maketh vs with patience to indure all afflictions, and to ſtand againſt all the temptations of our ſpirituall enemies, in which reſpect our Sauiour Chriſt calleth the holy Spirit, the Comforter, becauſe hee is the authour and fountaine of all conſolation. Fourthly, from this peace and comfort, hee raiſeth ſpirituall joy and rejoycing in God, our hearts being rauiſhed in the aſſurance of his mercy, and the ſenſe and feeling of his loue and fauour in Ieſus Chriſt, in the freedome out of the hands of all our ſpirituall enemies, and our aſſured hopes of heauenly happineſſe, the which alſo is a fruit of the Spirit, as the Apoſtle reckoneth it in the ſame place; and is ſo to bee ſeene in the faithfull, not onely when their wine and oyle aboundeth, in which the wicked alſo may rejoyce but alſo when in the abſence of theſe, the light of Gods countenance doth ſhine vpon them, which cauſeth vs to joy and rejoyce euen in the middeſt of croſſes and tribulations, as the Apoſtle telleth vs. Fiftly, from all theſe ariſeth thankfulneſſe vnto God, from whom we haue receiued all theſe benefits, the which is ſhewed not with our lips alone, but by our conſcionable care and zealous endeauour to glorifie God in all our thoughts, words and actions; and our earneſt deſire to approue our ſelues vnto God in all things, and to retaine his loue and auoid his diſpleaſure, in louing and practiſing whatſoeuer hee loueth and requireth, and in hating and forſaking all that hee abhorreth and forbiddeth.

2.Tim.1.7.
Rom.5.1.
Gal.5.17.
Iohn 15.26.
Gal.5.22.
Pſal.4.6,7.
Rom.5.3.

§. Sect. 2.
Of other ſpeciall fruits of the ſpirit reſpecting our Neighbours.

Vnto which duties immediately reſpecting God, the Apoſtle alſo joyneth as fruites of the Spirit, diuers others reſpecting our Neighbours and our owne perſons. As firſt, long-ſuffering, when as conſidering how the Lord hath borne with vs, when he might haue conſumed vs with his wrath, wee doe alſo beare with our brethren, and when they wrong & injure vs, indure it with patience, or elſe at leaſt deferre and put off our anger, Col.3.12.

Tit.3.2.

Gal.5,13.

Math.5.

or reſtaine and moderate the rage and heate of it; according to that of the Apoſtle; Put on as the Elect of God holy and beloued, bowels of mercies, kindneſſe, humbleneſſe of minde, meekneſſe, long-ſuffering, forbearing one another, and forgiuing one another, if any man haue a quarell againſt any: euen as Chriſt forgaue you, ſo alſo doe yee. The ſecond is gentleneſſe, whereby a man carryeth himſelfe courteouſly and affably in his words, and friendly and kindly in all his actions vnto all men, mildly to his inferiours, and reuerently and reſpectiuely to his Superiours. And this the Apoſtle requireth, that wee ſhould be no brawlers, but gentle, ſhewing all kindneſſe vnto all men. The third is goodnes, whereby we are ready by all meanes we can to doe good vnto our Neighbours, both in the duties of juſtice and mercy vnto their perſons and ſtates, ſoules, bodies, & name. And this we are bound vnto by Gods Commandement, namely, that we ſhould by loue ſerue one another; and alſo by that bond of the Spirit which vniteth vs together in one body vnder one Head Chriſt, which ſhould cauſe vs to demeane our ſelues towards one another, as it becommeth members of the ſame body. The fourth is faith or fidelitie, whereby in our words we keepe all our lawfull promiſes and couenants, though it be to our owne hinderance, and in our actions carry our ſelues truly & honeſtly without falſhood, lying and deceit. The fiſt is meekeneſſe, which conſiſteth in two things; the firſt patience, in forbearing to reuenge by our owne priuate meanes, wrongs and injuries, from which our Sauiour would haue vs ſo farre, that wee ſhould rather offer our ſelues to beare new injuries, than reuenge the old; and the other lowlineſſe, whereby laying aſide all proud conceit of our own worth and excellency, we thinke better of others than of our ſelues, and in giuing honour, ſtriue & labour to goe before them.

§. Sect.3.
Of ſome other ſpeciall fruits of the ſpirit reſpecting our owne perſons.

In reſpect of our owne perſons the fruits of the Spirit are principally two; the firſt whereof is temperance, whereby a man rightly ordereth, ruleth and moderateth his appetite in his meate, drinke and apparell, pleaſures and recreations, according to the rules of Gods Word, hating and forſaking gluttony and drunkenneſſe, exceſſiue brauery and ſtrange faſhions, ſinfull delights and vnlawfull and exceſſiue paſtimes. The other is ſobriety, which eſpecially teacheth vs the right vſe of all Gods bleſſings and benefits both temporall & ſpirituall. And for the firſt this ſoberneſſe of mind maketh vs contented with that meaſure of earthly bleſſings which we enjoy, as being that portion which God hath allotted vnto vs; and not ſo much as to deſire any more, but when the Lord offereth it vnto vs by honeſt and lawfull meanes. Contrary whereunto are the deſires and indeauours of worldly men, who when they haue little, murmure and repine againſt Gods prouidence, and are ready vpon all occaſions to vſe vnlawfull meanes for the bettering of their earthly eſtate, and when they haue much and more than enough, are not contented & ſatisfied with their abundance, but ſtill labour after more, carking and caring as though they were in want, and biting at euery bayt which promiſeth gaine, although the hooke of ſinne bee hid vnder it. Secondly, from contentation ſpringeth thankfulneſſe, whereby wee aſcribe all wee haue receiued vnto God, as being his gifts, and hauing nothing elſe to returne, doe render vnto him prayſe and thankſgiuing. Whereas contrariwiſe thoſe who are wicked and vnregenerate, howſoeuer they rejoyce in the fruition of his temporall benefits, yet not in him; for they doe not giue vnto him the glory of his owne gifts, but rather glory in themſelues, and ſacrifice (as the Prophet ſpeaketh) vnto their owne nets, and kiſſe their hands, as though by their own wiſdome and prouidence, induſtry and painfull indeuours, they had made themſelues owners of all theſe things; whereby they are mooued to an high and proud conceit of their excellency and ſufficiency, and in compariſon of themſelues to contemne all others. So in the ſecond place this ſobriety of minde appeareth in the right vſe of ſpirituall graces; For the ſpirituall man looking vpon them as the gifts of God, and beholding them as the firſt-fruits of the Spirit, which are not perfect but only begun, and ſeeing the many faylings, defects, wants, and weakneſſes which are in them, and the ſtrong corruptions which are mixed with them, hee reſteth contented and ſatisfied with the portion which he hath receiued, but like a new borne babe, hungreth and thirſteth after the ſincere milke of the Word, that he may grow vp thereby, and ſtill inlargeth his deſires, and ſtriueth and indeuoureth in the vſe of all good meanes, whereby hee may attaine vnto more and more perfection; in the meane time wayting vpon the Lord with faith and hope, meekeneſſe and patience for his bleſſing vpon theſe meanes, whereby they may become effectuall and profitable for the ends for which they vſe them. As we ſee in David who expected and waited for the Lord more than they who watch for the morning; and as the eyes of ſeruants looke to the hands of their Maſters, and of the Maiden vnto the hand of her Miſtris, ſo his eyes waited vpon the Lord his God, vntill hee had mercy vpon him. But yet the faithfull doe not ſo looke after more increaſe of ſpirituall graces, as that they forget to be thankfull vnto God for that meaſure which they haue already receiued, but conſidering that they are no naturall gifts and endowments, but Gods free and gra-

Hab.1.16.

1.Pet.2,1.2.

Pſal.130.6.

Pſal.123.2.

gracious gifts, which of meere loue he hath granted vnto them, without any their deſerts; denying them to many others which are by nature as good as they; this maketh them not onely for the preſent to enjoy the graces they haue receiued with contentation and much comfort and ſpirituall rejoycing, but alſo to laude and magnifie Gods mercy and goodneſſe towards them, and to render vnto him all thankes and prayſe for his gracious gifts.

Chap. XVIII.

Of the euent and ſucceſſe of the fight betweene the Fleſh and the Spirit.

§. *Sect.*1. Of the foyles which the ſpirit receiueth in this conflict,

THe laſt thing to bee conſidered in this conflict betweene the Spirit and the fleſh, is the euent and ſucceſſe of the fight betweene them, which is two-fold; the firſt whereof is the repulſes & foyles which the ſpirit receiueth and ſuffereth through the malice and fury of the fleſh; the ſecond is the victory & triumph of the ſpirit ouer it; the firſt being Temporary and laſting onely for a time; the other permanent and euerlaſting. Concerning the former, the Spirit is often foyled in this combat, when as by the ſubtilty or violence of the fleſh, it is hindred in the courſe of godlineſſe and allured or forcibly drawne to the committing of ſinne; Of which the Apoſtle complaineth: I ſee (ſaith he) another law in my members, warring againſt the law of my minde, and bringing me into captiuity to the law of ſinne which is in my members. And againe, I find then a law, that when I would doe good, euill is preſent with me. The which happeneth either through the weakneſſe of the ſpirit or want of watchfulneſſe, and ſpirituall care to keep the whole armour of God faſt buckled vnto vs. Of which foyles there follow two notable effects; the firſt is vnfained and bitter griefe and ſorrow for our ſlips and fals; the other an earneſt and feruent deſire to riſe againe, to be deliuered from the bondage of the fleſh, and hauing regained the victory to ſubdue and keepe it vnder for the time to come. Of the former we haue an example in the Church, which finding her failings and fals into ſin, pittifully complaineth and cryeth out vnto God for helpe; O Lord, why haſt thou made vs to erre from thy wayes? And hardened our heart from thy feare? Returne for thy ſeruants ſake, the tribes of thine inheritance. Wherein we may obſerue an apparant difference, betweene the fals of the faithfull and vnregenerate. For whereas theſe being falne willingly doe liue and lie in their ſinnes with pleaſure and delight. The godly being ſurprized at vnawares or being ouercome through their frailty, and weakneſſe, and the violence of tentation, doe mourne and grieue for their ſinne, and labour to riſe out of it by vnfained repentance; and whereas they yeeld vnto it voluntary and cheerefull obedience, as vnto their lawfull King and Soueraigne; the other being held vnder a forcible and tyrannicall ſubjection, doe bewayle their thraldome, and are neuer at reſt till they haue found out ſome meanes to be deliuered out of it.

*Rom.*7.21,22.

Eſay 63.17.

§. *Sect.*2. That from the foyles of the ſpirit ariſe earneſt deſires to bee freed from the ſlauery of ſinne.

*Rom.*7.24.

And from hence ariſe vehement and earneſt deſires to be freed from the ſlauery of ſinne, (like that of the holy Apoſtle;) O wretched man that I am, who ſhall deliuer me from the body of this death? And to ſerue the Lord in the duties of Holines and Righteouſneſſe: For as the Needle in the Dyall which is touched with a Loadſtone, may by a forcible motion turne and winde too and fro, but will neuer ſtand fixed and ſtedfaſt till it bend vnto its owne proper point; ſo the heart of the regenerate touched with Gods holy Spirit, howſoeuer through the violence of the fleſh, and ſtrength of Sathans tentations, it may be auerted from God, and turne this way & that way, after the vanities of the world, & the deceitful pleaſures of ſin, yet it neuer reſteth till it be againe returned and inclined towards him from whom it had firſt motion and being. It may be whilſt the ſtorme of tentation laſteth, the Spirit may be hid like the Sun vnder a thick cloud, or a ſhip couered ouer with the waues; but afterwards the beames and beauty of it will burſt through and diſpell theſe foggy miſts, and like a goodly ſhip it wil againe aduance it ſelfe and appeare vnder full ſayles, ſpeedily haſting towards the holy Land. And finally, though theſe carnall luſts (like thoſe curſed Amalekites) may on a ſudden make inroades, waſte, ſpoyle, ſacke, burne, lead captiue and carry away a great booty for ſome ſmall way, yet the ſpirit (like Dauid) being excited by Gods Oracle, will riſe vp, purſue theſe enemies, obtaine victory, and vindicate and recouer all out of their hands. Where againe wee haue a notable difference betweene the regenerate and vnregenerate. For whereas (they being ruled by a free and generous ſpirit, do after their foyles earneſtly deſire and labour to regaine their liberty, and repaire and increaſe their ſtrength, that giuing a new on-ſet, they may put their enemies to flight, and obtaine victory; the other being of a ſlauiſh diſpoſition after they are once ſubdued, doe contentedly liue in the bondage of ſin, neuer labouring or endeuouring to come out of it and better their eſtate. Or if there be in them any ſtrugling at all, it is onely out of ſeruile feare and terrours of conſcience, ariſing from expectation of deſerued puniſhments, which (as hath beene ſhewed) may make ſome aſſaults againſt the will and affections, and yet neither part be more ſanctified or leſſe corrupted than the other, but (like the good Witch which vndoeth that which the bad Witch hath done,) they remayne both euill and the limbes of Sathan, agreeing well enough in their common deſignes of wickedneſſe and impietie.

§. Sect. 3. Secondly, an indeuour in the vſe of all good meanes to be preſerued from ſuch foyles for the time to come.

But it is not thus with the man regenerate, who after his foyles receiued from the fleſh, not onely earneſtly deſireth and indeuoureth to recouer himſelfe from the captiuity of ſinne, but hauing obtained his deſire, vſeth all good meanes whereby hee may for the time to come be preſerued from being againe ſurpriſed by the like ſtratagems and aſſaults. To which purpoſe he doth firſt keepe a narrow watch ouer all his wayes, and eſpecially ouer his owne heart, wherein the fleſh hideth its chiefe ambuſhments, not eaſily and ſuddenly yeelding to the ſatisfying of euery deſire of profit and delight, but firſt trying and examining them by the rule of Gods Word, whether they are to be lawfully imbraced as Gods bleſſings, or to be rejected ſeeing they cannot be compaſſed without ſinne. Secondly, he will be moſt carefull to comfort and ſtrengthen the ſpirituall part, to keepe the Armour of God faſt buckled on him, to be alwayes well prouided and furniſhed with weapons and munition before the time of conflict, or rather becauſe this conflict with the fleſh is continuall, hee will take care, that hee may neuer bee found vnprouided. Finally, he will ſhew the like care in weakening and diſabling his enemy the fleſh, by withdrawing from it the chief weapons and munition whereby it hath formerly preuailed, and will ſtudiouſly indeuour to be ſo furniſhed at all points, that hee may be able to incounter it in the open field, or to defeate the politique ſtratagems and eſcape the ſecret ambuſhments which it layeth to intrap him. Thirdly, the regenerate man after his fals will more zealouſly hate his ſinne (and eſpecially that wherewith he hath beene ouer-taken) than euer hee did before, and in this deteſtation will auoide and flee from it; yea, the oftner he hath falne into it, the more his hatred increaſeth againſt it, as againſt his greateſt enemy from whom hee hath receiued moſt wrong and damage. Euen as a man moſt feareth & ſhunneth that ſickneſſe which hath moſt vexed him, abhorreth that meate whereon hee hath dangerouſly ſurfeited, and moſt hateth that Serpent the venome & poyſon of whoſe ſting hath moſt afflicted and tormented him. Laſtly, after his foyles and fals he will carefully performe all holy duties which are contrary to his former ſinnes, as if hee haue falne by couetouſneſſe, hee will being riſen exerciſe himſelfe in bounty and liberality; if by pride, he will abaſe himſelfe in all humbleneſſe and meekneſſe of ſpirit; if by ſurfeiting and exceſſe in meates and drinkes, he will practiſe moderation in diet, and oftentimes faſting and totall abſtinence. Yea, the regenerate man after his relapſes into the ague fits of ſin, will much increaſe and thriue in his ſpirituall ſtature, being much more feruent and zealous in all holy and Chriſtian duties than he was before, redeeming his loſt time by future diligence, and running after hee is riſen vp ſo much the more ſwiftly, by how much he findeth himſelfe hindered in his ſpirituall race by his ſlips and fals.

§. Sect. 4. How farre the fleſh may preuayle againſt the ſpirit, firſt, common graces may be loſt for a time,

But here a weighty queſtion may fitly and ſeaſonably be moued and determined; namely how farre the fleſh in this conflict may preuayle againſt the Spirit, and whether it may by the furious aſſaults thereof, be not onely foyled, but for a time quite ouercome, not onely cooled but vtterly quenched, loſt and extinguiſhed. For the reſoluing of which doubt, wee muſt firſt diſtinguiſh betweene the gifts of the Spirit, and the perſons in whom they are. The gifts may be conſidered both in their kind and in their qualitie. Concerning the former, the gifts and graces of the Spirit are either common to the regenerate and vnregenerate, or proper and peculiar to the Faithfull and Elect. The common graces are eſpecially thoſe Morall vertues of wiſdome, ciuill honeſty, Fortitude, Temperance, Patience and ſuch like, which may not only be loſt and extinguiſhed in worldly ciuill men, but alſo in the faithfull, becauſe they are not eſſentiall to a Chriſtian, but rather ornaments than parts of the ſpirituall man. And thus Dauid may be a foole in ſeeming ſo, and be ſpiritually mad whileſt he counterfeiteth naturall madneſſe; thus he was diſhoneſt in his dealing with Bathſheba and much more with Vriah his faithfull ſeruant; and both vnjuſt and vngratefull in that vnrighteous ſentence for Ziba againſt Mephiboſheth, the innocent and diſtreſſed ſonne of his deareſt Ionathan. Thus Noah made a temporary forfeiture of his Temperance, Lot of his Chaſtity, Ieremy and Ionah of their Patience, and many other of Gods beſt ſeruants of the like graces. But as for thoſe ſanctifying and ſauing graces, proper and peculiar to the faithfull which are ſo eſſentiall vnto a Chriſtian, that without them he ceaſeth to be the Childe of God, a member of Chriſt, and in the ſtate of grace and ſaluation, the like judgement is not to be giuen of them; for being once had, they can neuer be loſt, nor be vtterly extinguiſhed with all the power and malice of the Deuill and the Fleſh, ſeeing the gifts and calling of God are without repentance, and Chriſt who holdeth them is ſtronger than all, neither is there any power able to pull his ſheepe out of his hand.

Rom. 11.29.

Iohn 10.28.

§. Sect. 5. Secondly, the Secondly, the ſanctifying and ſauing gifts and graces of the Spirit may be conſidered ſhewes & ſemblances of ſauing graces in Temporaries may periſh vtterly.

in their quality; For they are either true, ſincere and ſubſtantiall, or falſe, hypocriticall, and but in ſhew and ſemblance onely, In which regard they haue their diuers ſubjects and perſons in whom they are; the former in the faithfull and regenerate alone; the latter in Hypocrites and Temporaries who continue but only for a time. Now theſe may loſe their illumination, faith, loue and zeale, whether wee conſider them as common gifts, or as they are ſhewes and ſemblances both to themſelues and others of ſauing graces, becauſe in this ſenſe they are not ſo in them in truth, ſimple and ſincere, but hypocriticall, counterfeit and onely but in ſhew. And thus our Sauiour hauing ſaid, that from him that hath not, ſhall be taken away, euen that which he hath, expoundeth his meaning by another Euangeliſt; Whoſoeuer hath not, from him ſhall be taken, euen that which hee ſeemeth to haue, or thinketh that he hath. As though he ſhould ſay, doe you aske how a man can haue that taken from him which hee hath not? Why know that there are many men that haue no gifts truly, that yet doe ſeeme to haue them, and from theſe ſhall be truly taken the gifts that they ſeeme to haue, or the ſhew and ſeeming of their gifts, that is, euen that Apiſh imitation which they haue of Gods ſauing graces ſhall be taken away, and ſo their Hypocriſie being diſcouered, it ſhall plainly appeare that what ſhow ſo euer they haue made, yet they neuer had them in ſinceritie and truth. For example, though the vnregenerate may haue ſome illightning in ſpeculation, which at the firſt appearance may reſemble that ſauing, feeling and experimentall knowledge, which is in the faithfull, yet indeed there is (as hath beene ſhewed) many and great differences betweene them, and therefore that ſhew and ſemblance wherby for a time they deceiue themſelues and others, wil in a while vaniſh, when as being ſeuered from al power of godlineſſe and fruits of obedience, it ſhall be diſcouered to haue beene in reſpect of the quality of it falſe and counterfeit. Though they may ſeeme to haue a true and juſtifying Faith, becauſe they giue aſſent to the whole Word, and eſpecially to the gracious promiſes of the Goſpell, which cauſeth in them ſome temporary joy; yet being vneffectuall, and neither working in their will any conſtant reſolution to imbrace Chriſt, and to be ready to forſake the World and earthly vanities, nor in their hearts any hungring and thirſting deſire after him and his righteouſneſſe for their juſtification, but onely as it may ſtand with their worldly deſignes and ends; it continueth not in the time of tentation, but either when they are allured with the baits of proſperity, or preſſed and pinched with croſſes and perſecution, they fall away and become Apoſtates from the Faith. So though their mortification may ſeeme to reſemble, yea, and ſometimes to goe before that which is ſincere and in truth, yet it is not generall and indefinite, but alwayes limited either to ſome few ſinnes, or all ſauing ſome few; and ſtill the Hypocrite and Temporary Beleeuer hath ſome darling and beloued ſinne which hee nouriſheth in his boſome, and holdeth (like ſweet meates) vnder his tongue, as wee ſee in Herod, Iudas, Demas, and many others; which as it preſently diſcouereth to thoſe that diſcern it, that their mortification is but counterfeit, (for if it proceeded from loue and obedience towards God and not from worldly reſpects, it would as effectually crucifie all their corruptions, as onely ſome of them) ſo it will like a fretting Canker eate out the heart of their mortification and put a quicke end vnto it; ſeeing thoſe ſinnes retained and nouriſhed, will make way for all the reſt, whilſt they harden their hart againſt Gods feare, & ſeare & dead the conſcience (as it were) with an hot Iron, whereby they will become ſecure and ſenſles in the committing of any wickedneſſe. In which reſpect the Apoſtle fitly compareth ſuch, as by this counterfeit mortification & fained repentance cleanſe themſelues from many ſinnes, to the Swine, which being waſhed doth ſoone after returne to wallow againe in the ſame myre becauſe he was onely cleanſed from the outward filth, but not inwardly freed and purged from his ſwiniſh nature; yea, becauſe not their quality but onely the outward act is changed, they not onely returne to their old courſe, but alſo become much worſe than they were before, as the Apoſtle ſheweth. That reſtraint maketh them more eager in the purſuite of the ſins they loue, and to run with more head-long violence, when as the bands that tyed them being vntwiſted or broken, they are now left to their licentious liberty. Finally, though there may ſeeme to be in the vnregenerate ſome renouation and new obedience, ſome heat of loue & zeale of Gods glory, yet being not in truth, but ſpringing out of ſelfe-loue and ayming onely at worldly ends; there is no conſtancy and continuance in theſe ſeeming graces and counterfeit fruits; but when the cauſe and foundation of them faileth and ſinketh, then preſently all vaniſheth, and all their goodly building commeth to vtter ruine. But all this proueth not, that the Spirit or the ſauing graces of it, may in the conflict of temptations receiue deadly wounds, die and periſh in thoſe who are truly regenerate; becauſe thoſe which are but ſemblances, ſhewes, and Apiſh imitations of them in the wicked and vnregenerate, may be loſt vtterly, and quite extinguiſhed.

*Math.*25.29.

Luke 8.18.

Iohn 8.20 21.

2.Pet.2.21.

§. *Sect.*6.
True ſauing

And thus wee haue ſhewed what graces of the Spirit, both in reſpect of their kinde and graces in the regenerate may be loſt ſeemingly.

Mat.25.29. Ioh.15.2.

and qualitie may bee loſt and quenched, namely common gifts in all men, & ſeeming ſauing graces in the vnregenerate. Now let vs conſider a little further of this queſtion, and examine whether in this ſpirituall conflict, true ſanctifying and ſauing graces in the elect and regenerate may bee vtterly killed, or for a time quenched, or no. For the anſwere whereof wee are to know, firſt that as ſeeming graces in the vnregenerate may bee truely loſt, ſo true graces in the faithfull may bee loſt ſeemingly, though not in deede, for our Sauiour hath promiſed, that to thoſe that haue ſhall bee giuen, and they ſhall haue abundance; and that euery branch that beareth fruite ſhall bee purged that it may bring forth more fruite. How be it, they may (as I haue ſaid) ſeemingly looſe thoſe graces which they keepe in truth. For example they may ſeemingly looſe their illumination and ſauing knowledge, when as through the reliques of ignorance remaining in them, they fall ſometimes into groſſe errours, & when through the ſubtile ſophiſtry of the World and the Fleſh, they are already fallen or ready to fall into Schiſmes or hereſies. They may alſo ſeemingly looſe their faith, when as being violently aſſaulted with the temptations of their ſpirituall enemies, it receiueth grieuous foyles, and lyeth hid and couered with doubting and incredulitie, like fire vnder the aſhes, or the Sun beames vnder a darke cloud. So they may ſeeme to haue loſt the grace of repentance, when as they are ouertaken afreſh with their old ſinnes; and when their corruptions after they haue receiued a deadly wound, doe ſeeme to reuiue againe, and to recouer ſome ſtrength, by exerciſing their vigour in their earthly members; eſpecially when as after they are cleanſed, they relapſe and fall into the ſame groſſe ſinnes, not onely ignorantly and through infirmitie, but alſo wittingly and willingly againſt their owne knowledge and conſcience. Finally, when as they are growne colde or luke-warme in their loue and zeale, and ſlacke and negligent in the performance of all Chriſtian duties, becauſe they doe not ſtirre vp Gods graces in them, or doe ouer whelme them with fleſhly cares, or the eager purſuite of worldly vanities. And yet all this while theſe ſauing graces are not loſt, but onely hid and couered; they are not outright killed, but onely brought into a deadly ſownd, the faculties themſelues are not quite periſhed, but the functions and operations of them onely for a time are hindred and interrupted.

§. Sect. 7.

Other graces ſpringing from thoſe which are fundamentall may for a time be loſt.

Hab.2.4.

Pſal.22.1.& 88. & 51.8.10,11. 12.

Secondly, though the prime and principal, the radicall and fundamentall graces which are eſſentiall to the life and being of a Chriſtian cannot be loſt, as faith, hope, charitie, affiance and the true feare of God, without which a Chriſtian ceaſeth to be a Chriſtian, and of the Child of God becommeth the Child of the Diuell. for the iuſt ſhall euer liue by their owne faith; yet other graces which are ſecondary fruits ſpringing from them, and neceſſary to the wel-being of a Chriſtian, as fulneſſe of perſwaſion peace of conſcence; zeale of Gods glory, the ſenſe and feeling of Gods loue and fauour, the comforts of the Spirit; familiar acquaintance with God, and joy in the holy Ghoſt, which are the life of our life, may for a time through the aſſaults of the fleſh and violence of temptations be much blunted and deaded, yea, in reſpect of preſent apprehenſion, quite loſt and extinguiſhed; as we ſee in the example of Iob, who ſometimes conceiued of God, as of his enemy, and in Dauid who complaineth that hee was rejected and forſaken, & that the terrours of God did fight againſt him, & prayeth that God would create in him a cleane heart, and renew a right ſpirit in him; that he would make him to heare ioy and gladneſſe, and reſtore him to the ioy of his ſaluation. Implying by theſe phraſes that theſe graces were ſo vtterly loſt in his ſenſe and feeling, that being quite aboliſhed and adnihilated, there needed not onely a renouation and repayring but a new making and creation. Euen as a man by ſickneſſe may looſe his beauty and complexion, his fleſh, ſtrength, and the kindly motion of his pulſe and vitall Spirits, his memory and diſcourſe of vnderſtanding, and with them all the pleaſure and comfort of his life, and yet remaine a man, becauſe theſe are not eſſentiall to his humane nature and being. And when theſe are gone for a time the chiefe principles of nature, the radicall heate and moyſture, the breath, life and reaſonable ſoule may ſtill continue, though much weakened in their functions and operations, and within a while recouer and reſtore him to all which was loſt in as great perfection as euer they were before. And ſo a Chriſtian may looſe the fruits of his chiefe graces, which are the delight and comfort of his life and being, yet thoſe eſſentiall, radicall and fundamentall vertues euer remaining, hee continueth ſtill a Chriſtian and the Childe of God; and theſe preſeruing his life and being, will recouer and reſtore the other to their former or greater perfection, ſo that when hee dyeth hee ſhall bee richer in all ſpirituall grace, than hee euer was in the whole courſe of his life. Neither can grace and vertue more decay in the faithfull and regenerate, than ſinne and corruption in the wicked and vnregenerate, in whom there may bee ſome intermiſſions or temporary ſurceaſing in reſpect of the acts of ſinne and practice of wickedneſſe, though they be habitually as corrupt as euer they were, and the more they are for carnall and worldly reſpects reſtrained from the committing of ſinne, the more in their longing deſires, hearts and affections they adhere and cleaue vnto it; for ſo alſo there may be ſome interruptions in the practice of godlineſſe, and ſome ſurceaſing of the acts and operations of Gods ſauing graces, and yet the graces themſelues doe not dye and periſh; and in theſe intermiſſions the ſound Chriſtian hath reſtleſſe longings after the ſenſe and feeling of renewed graces, and ſhewes as much feruency of affection and entireneſſe of loue towards them by his bitter mourning for their abſence, as hee formerly did by his ioy and rejoycing in their preſence, and his comfortable fruition of their ſweete ſocietie.

§. Sect. 8. That ſauing and fundamental graces may be loſt in ſome degrees at leſt in reſpect of their operations.

Laſtly thoſe fundamentall graces themſelues, howſoeuer they cannot by the aſſaults of the fleſh be wholly or finally loſt, yet may they, in ſome ſenſe bee weakened and impaired in reſpect of their degrees. As for example the ſtrong faith may be ſhaken with doubting, the moſt feruent loue may be cooled and looſe the firſt degrees of heate, the moſt aſſured hope and affiance may ſomewhat quaile and bee abated; and ſo in the reſt. The which wee ſee in the example of Iob, Dauid, Peter, the Galathians and the Angell of the Church of Epheſus, who is reproued for hauing loſt his firſt loue; and of Sardis who is exhorted, to ſtrengthen the things that remained and were ready to dye. Yea theſe graces may be not onely ſhrewdly ſhaken and ſore wounded, but alſo caſt into a dead ſwonde in which there will appeare, neither to others, nor thoſe that haue them, any motion, breathing or ſigne of life, ſo as there ſhall bee little difference betweene them, whileſt this trance laſteth, and thoſe carkaſes which are dead in ſinne. But yet as I take it (ſubmitting my judgement herein to the godly learned) all this is to be vnderſtood of the functions, acts, and operations of theſe graces, which may decay in their degrees, till they ſeeme periſhed and loſt; but as for the habits of theſe graces themſelues, they neuer decay in Gods Children, not ſo much as in their degrees, but are in a continuall growth vntill they come to their full ſtature and perfect age in Chriſt. In which regard they are ſaid to be trees of righteouſneſſe of Gods own planting, which are not one yeere larger and taller, and the next leſſe and lower, but in continuall growth, till they bee tranſplanted into the heauenly Paradiſe; and howſoeuer they may haue ſometimes leaues and fruite, and ſoone after beare neither, yet in reſpect of their eſſentiall parts as roote, body and boughes, they are ſtill in growing, the roote in the winter of affliction, the body, and branches, in the ſpring-time of proſperitie. So they are called Gods building, in which after the foundation is laid, the wiſe builder proceedeth to bring them to perfection, that they may be fit Temples for himſelfe to dwell in, and doth not one day ſet vp, and another pull downe, a courſe better befitting Penelopes webbe, than ſo excellent workemanſhip of ſuch a maſter builder. They are alſo the children of God, who grow till they come to their full ſtature and to a perfect age in Chriſt, as the Apoſtle ſpeaketh; And wee know it to be a monſtrous thing in nature, that the ſame perſon ſhould interchangeably bee this yeere of good ſtature, and the next yeere a little dwarfe. Finally theſe graces are fountaines of liuing waters, which are not like ſtanding pooles, ſometimes full and ſometimes empty, but are continually ſpringing and ſending forth their ſweete and pleaſant ſtreames. And in this reſpect the wiſe man compareth the path of the iuſt to the morning light, which ſhineth more and more vnto the perfect day. Againe the wicked which are the children of Sathan, doe ſtill grow in wickedneſſe, vntill their meaſure being full, God ſweepeth them away with his judgements, and howſoeuer their growth is ſometimes leſſe and ſometimes more, yet they ſinne, euen whileſt they ſeeme to leaue ſinning, and commit euill whileſt they appeare to doe good; and whatſoeuer their particular actions may be, yet ſtill they grow and goe on in their wicked courſes, ſo that it may be truly ſaid, that his laſt eſtate is his worſt eſtate, and the longer hee liueth the more he treaſureth vp wrath againſt the day of wrath, daily piling vp fuell to maintaine the fire of Hell, in which he ſhall euerlaſtingly bee burned. And ſo in like manner the children of God doe ſtill grow in ſpirituall grace, and when they doe actually euil, through Gods mercy it tendeth and turneth to the furthering of their growth in grace and goodnes. Finally if there might bee a ſurceaſing of their ſpirituall growth, and that their graces in part and in ſome degrees might bee loſt and periſh; then might they alſo be wholly aboliſhed ſeeing the ſame reaſon is of the whole which is of the parts, and if the finger bee corruptible, then alſo is the whole body, if one drop of water, or the leaſt mote of the Sunne, might be annihilated, then alſo might the maine Ocean and the whole World.

Apoc. 2.4.
Apoc. 3.2.
Pſal. 1.3.
Eſa. 61.3.
Pſal. 92.14.
Epheſ. 4.13.14.15.
Eſa. 58.11.
Pro. 4.18.
Math. 12.45.
2 Pet. 2.20.
Rom. 2.5.

§. Sect. 9. Whether Dauid loſt any degree of his fundamental graces when he committed adultery and murther.

Yea but did not Dauid looſe ſome degree of his graces when hee committed thoſe fearefull ſinnes of murther and adultery; and the Apoſtle Peter when hee denyed his Maſter? I anſwere that there might bee a decay, yea an vtter ſurceaſing of them for a time, euen till they were renewed by repentance; yet not in the habits, and (as it were) the eſſence of their graces, but onely in their actions and operations. So the Sunne ſhineth continually in his full brightneſſe, and yet it is often hid from our eyes by the darke clouds or opacous Earth. The fire ſtill retaineth his naturall heate, and may increaſe it ſelfe in combuſtible matter, when it is couered with aſhes, or is ſo pend in through the cloſeneſſe of the place, that it cannot for the preſent bee ſeene or felt. The faculties of the ſoule are not loſt or leſſened in the time of ſleepe or in a dead ſwond, although there bee a ſurceaſing of the actions. A Child which is growing doth not in the fit of an ague looſe his growth, and howſoeuer the fleſh may be abated and ſtrength impaired, yet the radicall moyſture and heate being inwardly preſerued, well may his growth bee a little while hindred, but when the ague is loſt and paſt, hee groweth faſter than euer before. So the ſtreames that come from the fountaine may bee for a time ſtopped in their courſe, but in the very time of the ſtopping they are multiplyed and encreaſed, vntill at laſt they grow ſo ſtrong, that they beare downe that which hindreth their courſe, or riſe ſo high, that they ouerflow and runne ouer it. And that I may fit the ſimilitude to our preſent purpoſe, a worthy Champion may be ſo tyred in the fight, that hee may haue no more ſtrength than a Childe to performe any valorous enterpriſe; and yet the act and operation of his ſtrength is onely hindered for a time; and as for the habite it ſelfe it is not impaired, but much increaſed by this martiall exerciſe, and will alſo appeare more able for like employments after a little reſt, and much more vigorous and ſtrong euen in reſpect of act and operation. And thus it is with the faithfull in this ſpirituall conflict; their outward foyles doe not impaire their inward valour, but rather excite them to vnite all their forces againſt their enemie, that they may recouer their loſt honour; and their falls in the Chriſtian race, doe not take away their habituall ſwiftneſſe, but make them more earneſt after their riſing to ſhew it more apparantly, whileſt they labour to recouer that diſaduantage by making better ſpeed than they did before. Gods graces in them increaſe in the fountaine when they are ſtopped from running in the ſtreame; and when this holy fire is kept by ſome outward obſtacle and (as it were) the Antiperiſtaſis of ſinnefull corruption, ſo at it cannot flame out, nor extend the heate farre off, then doth it increaſe inwardly; and when it burſteth out doth burne with greater heate than it did before, when it had full liberty, and was not curbed in with any outward violence.

§. Sect. 10. That our ſpirituall graces in the conflict doe not ſtand in their owne ſtrength.

By all which it appeareth, that the chiefe and fundamentall vertues by which a Chriſtian is a Chriſtian and the Child of God, are not in reſpect of their habits and eſſentiall being, ſo much as impaired in the leaſt degree in the ſpirituall conflict with the fleſh, but onely in regard of their actions and operations, which for a time through the ſtrength and violence of corruption may bee hindred, intermitted, yea in outward appearance wholy annihilated & aboliſhed. But wee muſt take heed that wee doe not aſcribe the permanency and growth of theſe ſauing graces to any propertie or excellency which they haue in themſelues, as though they were able in their owne vertue and ſtrength to withſtand all temptations and to continue and increaſe in their perfection. For if Adam in the ſtate of innocency could not thus ſtand in the ſtrength of his graces, which were farre more perfect and excellent, than any meere man euer ſince the fall attained vnto; then how much leſſe can wee, whoſe graces are mingled with imperfections and ſtained with corruptions, eſpecially the weakeſt of Gods Children, whoſe faith is like the ſmoking flax and bruſed reede, which in their owne nature are ſoone quenched and eaſily broken; or like the graine of muſtard-ſeede, which is (as our Sauiour ſpeaketh) the leaſt of all other. But yet euen of their firſt and ſmalleſt ſeeds of graces, it may be as truely ſaid as of the ſtrongeſt, that they are not, no not in reſpect of their degree abated and impaired, for then being already the leaſt degree, if they ſhould fall from that, they ſhould come to nothing, but that in the middeſt of the temptations of Sathan and their owne fleſh, they ſtill grow from one degree to another vnto a perfect age in Chriſt, euen as the little infant thriueth as certainly in the naturall growth, notwithſtanding his weakeneſſe and all outward lets and impediments, to childhood and youth, as the youth doth to ripe and perfect age. But this our ſtanding and thriuing in the ſtate of ſauing graces, is to bee aſcribed to the power and promiſes of God, to our vnion with Chriſt, from whom wee receiue liuely ſap and iuyce, by which wee are nouriſhed in all grace and goodneſſe, and to the continuall and gracious aſſiſtance of our good God, who ſtrengtheneth and ſupporteth vs againſt all the power of Hell.

*Mat.*12.20.& 17.20.

§. Sect. 11. An obiection againſt the former doctrin anſwered.

But ſome wil ſay, that this doctrine is lyable to much abuſe, ſeeing many wil take occaſion hereby to become preſumptuous and ſecure, becauſe being (as they ſuppoſe) indued with theſe graces which are eſſentiall to a Chriſtian, they ſhall neuer looſe them, no not ſo much as in ſome degrees, but euen when they ſinne their graces are in the ſpirituall growth vnto perfection. To which I anſwere, that ſo is the doctrine of iuſtification through Gods free grace by faith, yea Gods mercy, redemption by Chriſt, and all the promiſes of the Goſpell; For where as the Apoſtle taught, that where ſinne abounded, grace abounded much more, ſome were

*Rom.*3.7.8.& 6.1.

Rom.1.16.
2.Cor 2.16.
Eſa.27.5.
1.Cor.10.12.
Phil.2.13.
Pſal.119.49.

were ready to ſay, Let vs ſinne then, that grace may abound; and when with beſt caution wee deliuer the truth, wee ſhall finde that that which to ſome will bee the ſtrong power of God to ſaluation, will bee to others a ſtumbling blocke of offence, to others fooliſhneſſe, and that the ſame Word of God, wil bee as to the elect, the ſauour of life vnto life, ſo the wicked and reprobate the ſauour of death to their deeper condemnation. But it is not poſſible that any ſound Chriſtian who is indued with theſe graces in truth, ſhould thus abuſe that which hath beene ſaid to ſecuritie and preſumption; for though the Spirit of God fighting in them againſt the fleſh cannot be ouercome, yet may it bee ſhrewdly ſhaken and foyled in the conflict; though wee cannot looſe theſe fundamentall vertues, neither in whole nor in part, yet through our neglience, vnworthineſſe and corruption, they may bee ſuſpended by God from their functions and operations, and all their ſweet fruits and effects, the peace of conſcience, aſſurance of Gods loue, and joy in the holy Ghoſt, may be taken from them, which is their chiefe comfort and the very life of their life, without which it is but a continuall torment, and painefull agony of bitter death; they may looſe the ſenſe and feeling of all theſe graces themſelues, and be brought into ſuch an apolepticall fit, that no life of grace will appeare in them, either to themſelues or others. In which eſtate there can bee to them nothing but horrour and vexation of Spirit; out of which they cannot recouer but with great difficultie and appearance of danger. For before they can purchaſe their former peace, they muſt paſſe through the painefull purgatorie of bitter repentance, ſhed from their eyes many a ſalt and briniſh teare, if not from their hearts drops of bloud, they muſt ſend forth many a deepe ſigh and bitter grone, haue outwardly leane bodies, and pale viſages, and inwardly afflicted minds, and many a pinch & pange in their wounded conſcience; and the longer that they lye ſecurely ſnorting in their ſinnes without bringing forth the timely fruit of repentance, the liker it is to bee the Hedg-hogs birth, which the longer it is deferred, the more dangerous and painefull it alwayes proueth. For if wee bee preſumptuous Children, the Lord like a wiſe Father will make vs drinke ſo deepe of the cup of his wrath, and feele the waight of his heauy hand, that after we haue taſted of this bitter potion, wee will euer after be more carefull of preſeruing our health, that wee may not be forced againe to take ſuch phyſicke, and hauing felt his ſtrength wee will neuer willingly neglect any meanes of maintaining peace with him, as the Prophet ſpeaketh. Which who ſo well conſidereth, he will worke out his ſaluation with feare and trembling, and whileſt hee thinketh that hee ſtandeth, hee will take heed of falling. Hee will giue kind entertainment to the good Spirit of God, auoiding all things which might vexe and grieue it, hee will earneſtly vſe all meanes whereby the graces thereof may be increaſed, and diligently auoide the contrary meanes, whereby they might bee weakened and impaired; hee will keepe a narrow watch ouer all his wayes, and buckle cloſe vnto him the whole Chriſtian armour whereby hee may bee able to ſtand in the day of tentation; hee will labour and ſtriue with all diligence to make his calling and election ſure, and couragiouſly reſiſt all the encounters of his ſpirituall enemies; and knowing that hee ſtandeth more firmely in the power of Gods promiſes than in his own ſtrength, hee will oftentimes lay claime and challenge to them by feruent prayer, crying out with Dauid, O Lord remember the promiſe made to thy ſeruant, wherein thou haſt cauſed me to truſt.

§. *Sect.*12.
Of the aſſured victory which the ſpirit obtaineth ouer the fleſh in this conflict.

The ſecond thing to bee conſidered in the ſucceſſe of this conflict, is the aſſured victory which the Spirit alwayes obtaineth ouer the fleſh; for though it be often weakened and wearied, yet it can neuer bee vtterly vanquiſhed, but ſtill recouereth ſtrength and courage, whereby againe it preuaileth and putteth the fleſh to flight; though it receiue many wounds, foyls and fals in the combate, yet the wounds are recured by applying of the precious balſum of Chriſts bloud, by the hand of faith, and it recouereth of the foyles and fals through the power and promiſes of God apprehended by the ſame meanes, and through the gracious aſſiſtance of Gods Spirit which ſupporteth our weakeneſſe, and when wee are ready to faint and ſinke, ſendeth freſh ſupplies of renewed graces which re-enforcing our decayed bands, encourage vs to giue fierce aſſaults, againſt the fleſh and the luſts thereof, and enable vs to obtaine the victorie. Neither is it poſſible that the fleſh or the Diuell himſelfe ſhould finally preuaile againſt the man regenerate, not becauſe hee is mightier than they, or is ſuperiour in power or policie, (for herein euen the ſtouteſt Champion commeth far ſhort of our ſpirituall enemies) but becauſe God hath in many places of holy Scripture promiſed vnto them victorie, and that if they will reſiſt and fight, their enemies ſhall flee and be diſcomfited, and therefore the iſſue of the battell reſteth not vpon their ſtrength, but vpon the infallible truth of God which can neuer faile. Secondly, becauſe wee fight not with our owne weapons, but with the ſword of the Spirit which nothing can withſtand; we ſtand in the field not in our owne armour, but in the compleat armour of God, which being of his making, muſt needs bee high proofe, and will not by its weakeneſſe and inſufficiencie diſcredit the workeman; wee goe not on warfare in our owne priuate quarrell, but (like Dauid againſt Goliah) wee goe out againſt them in the name of the Lord of Hoſts, the God of the armies of Iſrael whom they defie, and his battailes we fight who is all-ſufficient by his ſole word to giue vs victorie, and therefore wee are ſure to preuaile in ſo good a quarrel, neither will our Grand-captaine, let his mightieſt enemies deſtroy the weakeſt of his ſouldiers, who beare his colours & fight vnder his ſtandard, ſeeing it is his owne cauſe, and he is able alone without other helpe euen with a word of his mouth to vanquiſh them all, and put them to a ſhamefull flight. Thirdly, becauſe it is the ſpirituall conflict wherein the Spirit of God with the royall armie of his graces, fighteth againſt the Diuell and his chiefetaine the fleſh with the luſts thereof; and therefore wee cannot doubt of victory, vnleſſe we ſhould imagine, that the holy Spirit ſhould want power to preuaile againſt the wicked Spirit, or hauing it, would in his wiſedome ſuffer himſelfe to bee ſo much diſhonoured as to bee vanquiſhed in the conflict. Finally, we are ſure of victory, and that the enemies of our ſaluation ſhall neuer be able to preuaile againſt vs, becauſe our victorious Eleazar Ieſus Chriſt hath already ouercome them all, and onely putteth vs to fight againſt conquered enemies; yea and that we may receiue no mortall hurt in this conflict, hee holdeth vs by the right hand and biddeth vs to fight without feare, yea himſelfe holdeth vs in his right hand, and as he is powerfull to keepe vs, ſo he hath bound himſelfe by his gracious promiſe, that none of our enemies ſhall pull vs from him. Yea which is moſt of all, he hath inſeparably vnited vs vnto himſelfe by his holy Spirit, and made vs liuely members of his body, and therefore being powerfull to defend vs, he will neuer ſuffer vs to periſh, for ſo ſhould his owne bleſſed body receiue a mayme.

Eph.6.10.11.

1.Sam.17.45.

Eſa 41.10.11. 12 & 42.6.

Ioh.10.28.

§. Sect. 13.
An obiection againſt the former truth anſwered.

Now whereas it may bee obiected that there are many Chriſtians, who by themſelues and others are reputed members of Chriſt, that yet quite fall away from him, and become limmes of Sathan; to this I anſwere that the members of Chriſt generally ſo called are of two ſorts: Firſt ſuch liuely members as are inſeparably vnited vnto him by his holy Spirit and a liuely faith, the which neither the Diuel, nor the fleſh, nor all the power of Hell can plucke away from him. Secondly, ſuch as are improperly called Chriſts members, being dead and fruitleſſe, and onely ſo in their outward profeſſion; the which they making onely for worldly reſpects, muſt neceſſarily fayle when they fayle, and bee quite ſeuered from Chriſt, when their outward profeſſion which is the onely bond of their vnion is taken away. Euen as a woodden legge which is tyed to a liuing body with ſtrings and points, muſt needs fall from it, when they are cut in ſunder; the which ſeparation doth not proue that the true members of Chriſt may periſh, but rather that theſe who haue thus periſhed, were neuer the true members of his body. As for the liuely members of Chriſts body, they can neuer bee parted from him in reſpect of their ſpirituall vnion, becauſe the Spirit of God which is the chiefe band of it can neuer faile. It is true that there may bee a temporary ſeparation betweene our bridgroome Chriſt, and the Chriſtian ſoule eſpouſed vnto him, but not in reſpect of their ſpirituall vnion, for hee betrotheth her vnto himſelfe for euer, in righteouſneſſe, iudgement, louing kindneſſe, mercie and faithfulneſſe, as the Prophet ſpeaketh; and not ſinne it ſelfe can ſeparate them, for it is one branch of the mariage couenant, that he will forgiue her ſinnes and remember them no more; nor death, for they are both immortall. Onely they may be parted for a time in reſpect of communion, and fellowſhip, and of that ſweet influence of his ſpirituall graces, at leaſt in her feeling and apprehenſion. Euen as the wiſe and louing husband may for the hainous faults of his wife, ceaſe for a time to communicate vnto her his perſon in reſpect of ſweet ſocietie, & delightful familiarity, & yet the vnion of marriage remaining firme, he may receiue her againe vpon her repentance into his wonted fauour, & communicate vnto her himſelfe with all teſtimonies of his loue. But this chaſt ſpouſe, the Chriſtian ſoule, can neuer ſleepe in ſecuritie nor reſt contented in this eſtate, but with the Church in the Canticles, ſhee lamenteth the abſence of her deareſt loue; ſhee neuer ceaſeth ſeeking of him in his holy ordinances, and in the exerciſes of faith and repentance, till ſhee haue found him, and haue the ſenſible fruition of his ſweet ſociety; whereby ſhee approueth her ſelfe to bee vnited vnto Chriſt in coniugall affection, ſeeing it is as vndoubted a ſigne of it, to mourne for the abſence of our bridegroome, as to rejoyce in his preſence, and fruition of his loue.

Hoſ.2.19.

Ier.31.34.

Cant.3.2.

§. Sect. 14.
That there are two degrees of the Spirits victory, firſt in this life.

Now being thus vnited vnto Chriſt, the faithfull are ſure to obtaine the victory; yet not all at once, for there are two principall degrees of it; the firſt in this life, in which this conqueſt ouer the fleſh is but inchoate and begunne, the carnall luſts thereof not being wholy aboliſhed, but onely in part and in ſome degrees mortified; to which purpoſe one ſaith, that theſe vnlawfull motions of the fleſh cannot bee taken from vs, as long as wee carry this body of fleſh about vs, the violence onely of mouing may bee abated.

Grego. in 1.Reg. lib.5.Cap.11.

Neither can wee wholy hinder it, but that the Law of the fleſh will moue the members, but yet we may take from the fleſh the violence of its motion. By reaſon whereof the conflict betweene theſe enemies continueth (becauſe theſe curſed Cananites are not quite rooted out but remaine ſtill in the land) not onely in our firſt conuerſion, when as wee are but babes in Chriſt, but euen throughout the whole courſe of our liues. But ſtill, for the moſt part, the end and iſſue of it, is the victory of the Spirit ouer the Fleſh, although it be obtained with many foyles in the fight. And howſoeuer the ſpirituall man may haue ſuch miſts of ignorance caſt before his eyes, that he ſometime erreth; though he may be ſometimes allured with the baytes of worldly vanities to turne aſide out of the right path, and ſometimes may be thruſt out of it through afflictions, and the violence of tentations, yet his generall courſe whereof he hath reſolued, and wherein he hath conſtantly ſet himſelfe, is the great Kings high way of holineſſe and righteouſneſſe, out of which if at any time hee hath erred he returneth into it againe, and trauelleth in it with more than wonted diligence; whereof it is that the Apoſtle maketh it a ſigne of thoſe who are in Chriſt Ieſus, that they walke not after the fleſh, but after the ſpirit, whereby is meant that whatſoeuer their particular ſlips or errors may be, yet it is an infallible marke of a ſound Chriſtian, that hee generally and for the moſt part conſtantly holdeth on in his Chriſtian courſe of holineſſe and righteouſneſſe, notwithſtanding all the encounters of his ſpirituall enemies, and the manifold blockes which they caſt in the way.

Rom.8.1.

§. Sect.15. Of the ſecond degree of victorie at the houre of death.

Rom.7.19.23.

But yet whileſt we continue in this life, the victory is neither gotten nor held without a conflict, wherein the Spirit is often foyled; and ſo thruſt on with a kind of violence into ſinfull courſes, and interrupted and hindered in its holy indeauonrs, that the ſpirituall man is forced to complaiue often with the Apoſtle, that he omitteth the good he would, and doth the euill which he would not; and that there is a Law in his members, warring againſt the Law of his minde, and bringing him into captiuitie to the Law of ſin. But in the end of this life we ſhall obtaine a full and perfect victory ouer the fleſh and the luſts thereof, which ſhall not onely bee mortified and kept from raigning, but alſo wholy aboliſhed and rooted out, ſo as it ſhall haue no reſidence or being in vs, for then we ſhall tryumph ouer all our enemies, and ſo trample them vnder feete, that they ſhall neuer be able to riſe againe, & diſturbe our peace; and then there ſhall bee no place or time for fighting, but for receiuing the Crowne of Victory, and the enioying of euerlaſting peace, and with it glory, immortalitie, and endleſſe happineſſe in Gods Kingdome. According to that of the Apoſtle, I haue fought a good fight, I haue finiſhed my courſe, I haue kept the faith; henceforth is laid vp for mee a crowne of righteouſneſſe, which the Lord the righteous iudge ſhall giue mee at that day: And the promiſe of our Sauiour; To him that ouercommeth, will I grant to ſit with me in my throne: euen as I alſo ouercame and am ſet downe with my Father in his Throne.

1.Tim.4.8.

Apoc.3.21.

CHAP. XIX.

Of the reaſons which may encourage vs to this conflict againſt the fleſh.

§. Sect.1. The firſt reaſon becauſe it is the will of God that we ſhould fight againſt it.

And thus haue we ſhewed, both the nature of this enemy the fleſh, and of the conflict betweene it and the ſpirit: now we are to ſpeake of the meanes whereby we may obtaine the victory in this combate; vnto which there are two things required. Firſt a due preparation to the fight; and ſecondly a wiſe and valourous cariage and behauiour in the conflict it ſelfe. Vnto the former alſo two things are required. Firſt a ſerious conſideration of thoſe reaſons and arguments which may put courage into vs, and make vs reſolute and valourous in aſſaulting this enemy. Secondly a right vſe of certaine meanes whereby wee may bee enabled to ouercome. The reaſons which may incourage vs to ſet vpon this enemy are many: firſt becauſe it is the will of our graund Captaine, the Lord of Hoſts, that we ſhould encounter this enemy, vnto which he doth no leſſe often and earneſtly preſſe vs to yeeld our obedience, by his expreſſe commandements, than that we ſhould make daily warre againſt the World and the Diuell. As firſt that we ſhould depoſe it from the throne of regency; let not ſinne raigne in your mortall body, that you ſhould obey it in the luſts thereof. That we ſhould giue it no ſatisfaction or content: walke in the ſpirit, and yee ſhall not fulfill the luſt of the fleſh. Yea rather that we ſhould vtterly renounce it; for the grace of God which bringeth ſaluation teacheth vs, that wee ſhould deny theſe worldly luſts, and that wee ſhould liue ſoberly, and righteouſly, and godly in this preſent world. So the Apoſtle from God requireth, that we ſhould put off concerning the former conuerſation the olde man; which is corrupt according to the deceitfull luſts; yea that we ſhould mortifie theſe earthly members, and doe our beſt, not onely to ſubdue them, but to put them to death, yea to a ſhamefull death, crucifying the fleſh with the affections and luſts, as the Apoſtle ſpeaketh. The which commandement hath a grieuous cōmination and

Rom.6.12.

Gal.5.16.

Tit.2.11,12.

Eph.4.22.

Col.3.5.

Gal.5.24.

Rom.8.13.

and gracious promiſe annexed, whereby wee are prouoked and encouraged to yeeld our obedience vnto them; namely, that if we liue after the fleſh, we ſhall die; but if through the ſpirit we doe mortifie the deeds of this body of ſinne, we ſhall liue. That is either die temporally and eternally, or liue the life of grace heere, and of glory in the life to come.

§. Sect. 2. The ſecond reaſon is the neceſſity of this conflict.

Prou.29.21.

Secondly, let the neceſſity of this fight animate & encourage vs to enter into it, ſeeing we can haue no peace or truce with our ſinful fleſh but vpon moſt wofull and miſerable conditions; if we doe not fight againſt it, it will fight againſt and ouercome vs; if we delicately bring vp this ſlaue from his youth, he will not onely be as a Sonne, but as a tyrannous Lord and Maſter at the length; if wee hold it not ſtrictly vnder in baſe ſubjection, it will lead vs captiue vnto ſinne, and inthrall both our ſoules and bodies in moſt wretched bondage; ſo that much better it were for vs to be miſerable Galley-ſlaues to the mercileſſe Turkes, than to be held in this cruell bondage, although a generous and noble death were much to be preferred to either of them. Better it were with the Prodigall ſonne to become Swine-heards and feed filthy Hogs, than to become ſeruants and ſlaues to theſe ſenſuall and more filthy luſts, which make vs to take delight in nothing but in wallowing in the myre and ſink of ſinne. Now how vnworthy is it our being and breeding, that wee who were by our creation the ſonnes and children of the glorious Creatour of Heauen and Earth, ſhould by yeelding our ſelues to our carnall and ſinfull luſts, become ſlaues to ſuch cruell Tyrants; who will make vs imploy our bodies and mindes which were created for the ſeruice of the great God, in the miſerable bondage of ſinne and Sathan? The Heathen man could ſay that he was more noble, and borne to more excellent ends than that hee ſhould become a ſlaue to his owne body; and ſhould not we who farre exceed him in ſpirituall Nobility, as hauing God for our Father, and Ieſus Chriſt for our elder brother, fight rather in this Warfare vnto bloud and death, than to become captiues and thrals to a farre worſe Maſter, euen the body of ſinne and death which dwelleth in our members?

Maior ſum & ad maiora genitus quam vt mancipium ſim mei corporis, Seneca.

Bernard. lib. de dilig. Deum.

But as the fleſh is hatefull for its baſe and cruell tyranny; ſo is it in reſpect of the pollution and filthineſſe thereof moſt odious & lothſome; for there is no filthy ſinke, no ſtinking carrion to bee compared vnto it. Now which of vs (as one ſaith) ennobled by birth, and liberally brought vp, that being clothed with loathſome rags, ſpawled on with filthy ſpittle, and in moſt beaſtly manner defiled with noyſome excrements and filth, that would not exceedingly loath and abhorre them, haſtily ſtrip them off, and with indignation caſt them away. And therefore hee who findeth not his garment, but himſelfe within, vnder his garment, to be ſuch an one, it becommeth him to grieue ſo much the more, and to be aſtoniſhed in his minde, becauſe he beareth, and is faine to carry about with him, that which being much more neere, is alſo much more loathſome and abhominable.

§. Sect. 3. The third reaſon taken from the mainfold euils which are done vnto vs by the fleſh.

Thirdly, let the manifold euils which are done vnto vs by the fleſh, make vs to vndertake this combate againſt this malicious and peſtilent enemy with all courage and reſolution. For it is more miſchieuous vnto vs than the Deuill himſelfe, who (as hath beene ſhewed) could neuer hurt vs, if we were not firſt betrayed by this inbred enemy. Yea, it is worſe than Hell and Damnation, as being the cauſe of them both, and without it Hell were no Hell, neither could condemnation faſten vpon vs, vnleſſe we walked after theſe carnall luſts. It is the root of all ſinne, and the wel-head and fountaine of all other wickedneſſe, from which Idolatry, Blaſphemy, Murther, Adultery, and all impiety and vnrighteouſneſſe grow and ſpring. Conſequently it is ſuch an enemy as maketh God himſelfe our enemy, expoſing vs to the hot flames of his fiery wrath; and would innumerable times caſt vs head-long into the euerlaſting torments of Hell fire, if the infinite mercies of God did not ſtay vs in the way. It is the prouoker and inticer to all wickedneſſe, and all the outrages and horrible crimes which are committed in the World, may challenge the fleſh as their chiefe cauſe and Authour. From it came Caines Murther, Lots Inceſt, Dauids Adultery, the malice of the Iewes and Prieſts which moued them to ſlander, apprehend, accuſe, condemne, whip, crowne with thornes, and crucifie the Lord of life. It was it that pierced our Sauiours hands and feet, that thruſt the Speare into his ſide, that made him to be in that agony and perplexity in the Garden and vpon the Croſſe, & which moueth men daily to crucifie him afreſh, and to trample his precious bloud vnder their filthy feet, as though it were an vnholy thing; and can wee find in our hearts to haue any peace or truce with ſuch a malicious enemy to our bleſſed Sauiour? And ſhall we not rather with implacable anger and conſtant reſolution aſſault, purſue, wound and kill it which offered al theſe indignities to our deareſt Lord? Moreouer, as it is the cauſe of all ſinne, ſo alſo of all puniſhment in this life, of all our miſeries, of ſickneſſe and diſeaſes of the body, trouble of conſcience, and terrours of minde, of pouerty and penury in eſtate, loſſe of our good names, ſhame and reproch, and all other deſerued puniſhments of ſinne, and for concluſion of all, of death in the end of our liues and of euerlaſting condemnation and deſtruction in the World to come. For if we liue after the fleſh wee ſhall die, the death of body and ſoule, and not onely be depriued of Gods fauour, of the eternall fruition of his heauenly Kingdome, and thoſe vnſpeakable joyes which ſhall neuer haue end, but for euer be plunged into the Lake of perdition, where is weeping and gnaſhing of teeth. Now what can juſtly more incenſe our anger to take ſharp reuenge vpon ſuch an enemy, than to conſider that it is vnto vs the authour of all miſchiefe, and plungeth vs into all euill both of ſinne and puniſhment?

§. Sect.4. The fourth reaſon is taken from the aſſurance of victory.

Laſtly, let this encourage vs to fight, in that if wee make warre againſt our fleſh and the luſts thereof, we ſhall be ſure to obtaine the victory, and not onely ouercome them, but with them the World, the Deuill and all other enemies of our ſaluation. To which purpoſe Auguſtine excellently ſpeaketh, There (ſaith hee) the inuiſible powers which are at enmity with vs are ouercome, where the inuiſible luſts are conquered and ſubdued. And therefore wee who ouercome the deſires of worldly things in our ſelues; it is neceſſary, that wee ſhould alſo ouercome him who by theſe deſires raigneth in man, &c. For within vs we ouercome thoſe who aſſault vs without, whileſt wee ouercome our luſts by which they raigne and rule in vs; as on the other ſide thoſe whom they find like vnto themſelues, them they draw with them into the like puniſhments. For as I haue ſaid theſe outward enemies haue no power to hurt vs, but when this ſecret Traytour betrayeth vs into their hands; they haue no weapons that can pierce and wound vs, vnleſſe our owne corruption both ſteele and point them, and alſo diſarme and leaue vs naked to their malice and fury; they cannot enter and ſacke our ſoules, robbing and ſpoyling them of all ſpirituall treaſures, and leading them captiue vnto all manner of ſinne, vnleſſe the fleſh did open the gates, diſarme vs of Gods protection, and breaking downe the wals of our defence, did expoſe and lay vs open to their mercileſſe cruelty.

Ibi ergo vincuntur inimicæ nobis inuiſibiles poteſtates, vbi vincuntur inuiſibiles cupiditates, &c. Aug. de Agon. Chriſt. lib. cap. 2. Tom. 3. col. 762.

CHAP. XX.

Of the meanes whereby we may be enabled to ouercome the Fleſh.

§. Sect.1. The firſt meanes, that we put on the whole armour of God.

ANd theſe are the reaſons which may encourage vs to this fight. Now of the meanes whereby we may be enabled to ouercome; the which are principally two; the firſt that we take vnto vs, and put on the whole ſpirituall armour of God; the ſecond that we carefully obſerue and put in practice diuers rules fit for this purpoſe. For the former, the battaile is to be mayntained againſt the fleſh, and therefore the weapons of our warfare muſt not be carnall, ſeeing they wil rather ſtrengthen and cheriſh, than wound and mortifie fleſhly corruptions, but they muſt be ſpirituall, euen that whole armour of God deſcribed by the Apoſtle in the ſixt Chapter to the Epheſians. For as the Apoſtle telleth vs, though wee walke in the fleſh, yet wee doe not warre after the fleſh; for the weapons of our warfare are not carnall, but mighty through God, to the pulling downe of ſtrong holds, caſting downe the imaginations, and euery high thing which exalteth it ſelfe againſt the knowledge of God, and bringing into captiuity euery thought to the obedience of Chriſt. But of this ſpirituall armour I ſhall not need to ſpeake in this Treatiſe, hauing already intreated of it in the firſt part of this Chriſtian Warfare. Onely let me perſwade euery Chriſtian that is willing and deſirous to get the victory in this Chriſtian Warfare, that they doe with all diligence put it on, not onely by piece-meale; for ſpirituall death, as well as corporall, can make entrance by one place vnarmed and defended, as if the whole armour were left off; but wee muſt be armed at all points, that all being couered none may be indangered. Otherwiſe wee ſhall neuer bee able to mayntaine this fight with any true valour or hope of victory. For howſoeuer a Souldier may be, euen vnarmed and without weapons, foole-hardy and deſperate, yet hee can neuer be truly valorous, and though hee may be raſh in making attempts and ruſhing into the fight, yet can he not being vnarmed and receiuing one wound after another, be couragiouſly conſtant in holding out vnto the end of the conflict, but is fitter by reaſon of his lightneſſe to run away, than to mayntaine ſuch a fight as yeeldeth vnto him no hope of victory. And in the ſecond place let vs perſwade euery one who fighteth in this Warfare, that they doe not truſt in their owne ſtrength, but in the power of Gods might, nor in the ſpirituall armour and weapons, which in themſelues are farre too weake to beare off the Canon-ſhot of our mighty enemies, but in the promiſes of God which aſſure vs of victory, and in his gracious aſſiſtance which wee are daily to craue by feruent Prayer, whereby, and by nothing elſe we ſhall be enabled to obtaine the victory.

2.Cor.10.3,4.

§. Sect.2. The ſecond meanes is to obſerue certaine rules for the weakning of the fleſh. And firſt that wee doe not nouriſh the enemy which we would ouercome.

The rules of direction which are to be obſerued and practiſed of thoſe who deſire to get the victory in this ſpirituall conflict are of two ſorts: For either they tend to the weakening and ſubduing of the fleſh, or to the nouriſhing and ſtrengthning of the ſpirit. The former alſo are of two kinds. The firſt is that we withdraw and withhold from the fleſh all meanes whereby it may gather ſtrength; the ſecond that we vſe the contrary meanes whereby it may be weakened and diſabled. Concerning the former: it is the care of all men that are to fight againſt mighty enemies, to deale with them as the Philiſtims with Sampſon; firſt curiouſly ſearching where their chiefe ſtrength lyeth and wherein it conſiſteth, and then in the next place vſing all meanes to diſable and depriue them of it; whereby the victory becommeth more eaſie and aſſured, and leſſe dangerous and diſaduantageable to the conquerours. The which courſe muſt be held alſo by vs in this combate with the fleſh, if we deſire to ouercome. To which purpoſe let vs obſerue theſe three rules. The firſt is, that we doe not nouriſh and ſtrengthen the enemy which we deſire to ouercome. As for example we muſt not feed our fleſh with ſinfull pleaſures and carnal delights, nor giue it eaſe and contentment by ſatisfying and glutting it with all worldly ſuperfluities; we muſt not cocker and pamper it with eaſe and delicacy, with gluttony and drunkenneſſe, with vnlawfull ſports or immoderate vſe of honeſt recreations, with chambering and wantonneſſe, merry meetings and the voluptuous delights of worldly men. For though this might goe for good policy betweene Nation and Nation, to helpe foward their enemy in their voluptuous delights, becauſe hereby they are weakened and made effeminate; yet it is not ſo in this conflict with the fleſh, ſeeing the more it is effeminated and pampered with carnall delights, the more it is ſtrengthened againſt the Spirit. Now what folly is it to victuall a mighty Enemy which warreth againſt vs, and to put weapons into their hands, whereby they may kill or put vs to flight? The which notwithſtanding is daily committed by innumerable Chriſtians, who profeſſe themſelues enemies to the fleſh, and yet in the meane time giue themſelues ouer to all voluptuous courſes, and take more care to ſatisfie the luſts of the fleſh, and to nouriſh and ſtrengthen it with worldly delicacies, than euer they did for the enabling of the ſpirit, that it might obtaine the victory againſt our ſpirituall enemies. And as wee are not to nouriſh the fleſh by miniſtring food vnto it, ſo are wee not to leaue it to its owne liberty, and to make free prouiſion for it ſelfe without reſtraint; which if we doe, it will need no other Purueigher to prouide victuals enough, for the ſatisfying of our carnall luſts. To which end let vs remember that it is far vnfit that the fleſh ſhould haue the liberty of a ſonne and friend, ſeeing it is a baſe ſlaue and bitter enemy: and therefore if wee doe not put it (as it were) vnder hatches, and keepe it like a Gally-ſlaue in fetters and chaines, no ſooner ſhall thoſe great Pirats Sathan and the World ſet vpon vs, but it will ioyne with them, and betray vs into their hands. There is no enemy that maketh warre againſt another, when as he hath beſieged their City, will ſend them in prouiſion of victuals, neither yet will they ſuffer them to vſe their liberty in going out and in at their pleaſure, to forrage in the fields, and to furniſh themſelues withall neceſſaries to mayntaine them in the time of ſiege; but they begirt the wals on al ſides with trenches and Bulwarkes, and keepe a narrow watch and ſtrong guard to reſtrain them from all liberty; and thus muſt we deale with our enemy the fleſh, if euer we meane to get the victory. For if we doe not keepe a diligent watch and ſtrong guard ouer it, but giue it liberty to roue and range at its owne pleaſure, it wil be to ſmall purpoſe that the ſpirituall man doth not puruaigh for it, ſeeing it will make enough prouiſion for the ſatisfying and nouriſhing of our carnall luſts, and for the ſtrengthening of it ſelfe againſt the ſpirit. If we lay the reines in the necke, and ſuffer it to go which way it will, it will quickly carry vs out of the narrow path into the broad way which leadeth to deſtruction. If wee ſuffer our deceitful hearts (Dinah-like) to wander about and gaze vpon worldly vanities, they quickly meete with wicked Copeſ-mates, who will diſhoneſt and allure them to commit ſpirituall whoredome. If we giue them leaue to enioy their liberties without reſtraint, to follow their pleaſures, and euen to ſeeke after the occaſions and meanes of euill; it will not be long ere the fleſh will preuaile, and lead vs captiue to the committing of ſin. When wee with care and diligence keepe vs in our wayes, we haue promiſes from God of his protection and aſſiſtance, and of our own ſafety and preſeruation; but if with Shemei we will for our worldly aduantage paſſe the appointed bounds, and go ſuch wayes as our owne hearts can tell vs, are full of danger; it is no great wonder if we be ſurprized, and pay a deare price for our preſumption, as we ſee in Dauids example, who giuing eaſe and liberty more than ordinary to his fleſh, and keeping no watch ouer his ſenſes, was eaſily ouertaken, and made a captiue and ſlaue to his filthy luſts. And therefore if we would auoid the like danger, let vs carefully keepe our ſelues within holy limits, & bridle and curbe in the fleſh by religious feare, not pleading for vnlawfull liberty, or eſteeming it too great ſtrictneſſe and preciſeneſſe to auoid, not onely all ſinne, but euen the occaſions and meanes which bring vnto it, for if we giue the leaſt liberty to the fleſh it will draw vs on from one degree to another, till at laſt it bring vs to all manner of licentiouſneſſe.

Pſal.91.11.

§. Sect. 3.
We muſt withdraw from the fleſh the prouiſion and munition whereby it is ſtrengthened.

The ſecond rule is, that wee doe not only not giue willingly liberty to the fleſh to make its owne prouiſion for the ſatisfying of its carnall luſts, but alſo when it would take it whether we will or no, that wee forcibly reſtraine it; and like thoſe who beſiege their enemies in a City, that we ſtop all paſſages by which it might be victualled; whereby being famiſhed and ſtarued, it will be forced to yeeld vnto the ſpirituall part. Whereas on the other ſide if we ſuffer it to be ſtored with prouiſion and to be fed vnto the full with all carnall dainties, it will waxe ſtronger than the ſpirit, deſpiſe its forces, and ſally out vpon it, committing many outrages, and doing much damage and miſchiefe vnto the Chriſtian ſoule. Yea, it will waxe proud and inſolent, foyle the regenerate part, and force it to liue in moſt miſerable bondage. To which purpoſe one ſaith, That it fareth with the fleſh and the ſpirit as with two mortall enemies in the field; for he that by any meanes aideth and ſtrengtheneth the one, doth thereby make way for the vanquiſhing of the other. He that ioyneth with the fleſh doth oppoſe the ſpirit, and he that ſtandeth on the ſpirits ſide, doth bring the fleſh into bondage and captiuitie. If then we would haue the fleſh kept vnder the rule of the ſpirit; We muſt vſe it (as Auguſtine ſpeaketh) as men are accuſtomed to vſe pampered and reſty iades, which becauſe when they are full fed, are ready to kicke againſt their Maſter, to wince and fling, and either to caſt the rider, or getting the bridle betweene their teeth, to carry him out of the road way, ouer hedge and ditch, and places of danger; therefore as they are trauailing they keepe backe the prouender, and giue him no more meate than neceſſity requireth; that ſo they may tame him with hunger whom they cannot rule with the bridle and ſpurre. For ſo muſt wee weaken and tame the vnruly fleſh with faſting and abſtinence, when it is growne ſo luſty and inſolent, that neither the bridle of comminations nor the ſpurre of Gods iudgements will keepe it in order. And hereby we ſhall adde ſtrength vnto the ſpirit. For as one ſaith; The weakneſſe of the fleſh increaſeth the ſtrength of the ſpirit; euen as contrariwiſe the ſtrength of the fleſh doth bring weakneſſe to the ſpirit; and indeed what great wonder is this, if a man be made ſtronger by the weakening of his enemy? But yet we are not to vnderſtand this of the naturall ſtrength of the body, as though the weakneſſe of it did giue ſtrength to the regenerate part, or did repreſſe and ſubdue the vnruly paſſions and ſinfull luſts of the fleſh, ſeeing theſe may remayne in their full ſtrength in a leane and weake body; but of the power and vigour of the body of ſinne and carnall corruption, which by the exerciſes of mortification, faſting and abſtinence, are weakened and held in ſubjection, becauſe the fleſh, by the body, as by an organ and inſtrument, doth enjoy its ſenſuall delights, and carnall pleaſures, wherby it is ſtrengthened to the committing of ſinne, by which the ſpirituall part is wounded and weakened. In which reſpect (as Cyrill well ſaith) We giue ſtings and weapons to the fleſh, arming and ſtrengthening it againſt the ſpirit, when as we pamper the body with delicacy, inflame it with wine, handle it daintily and effeminately, and nouriſh in it all enticements and prouocations to luſt. Which who ſo doth; what doth he elſe but ſtrengthen his enemy for his owne ruine and ouerthrow? What doth hee but cocker a ſlaue, and famiſh a ſonne? There are (ſaith one) two by God committed to thy cuſtody, a noble man and a ſlaue, on this condition, that thou ſhouldeſt feed the ſlaue like a captiue with bread and water, and entertaine the Noble man with all prouiſion befitting his dignity. But thou contrariwiſe conſumeſt and killeſt the Noble man with hunger, thirſt, & many injuries; but nouriſheſt the ſlaue with all dainties and delicacies; whereby making him inſolent, hee becometh a rebell againſt his Lord, and riſing againſt him in armes, hurteth, woundeth, and at laſt killeth him. What then wilt thou anſwere vnto him, who hath committed both vnto thee? Thou haſt ſhewed thy ſelfe cruell, who haſt not refreſhed the Noble man, the Spirit, with the dainties of vertue, with the fat and marrow of deuotion; but haſt nouriſhed the contumacious ſlaue delicately, and pampered the fleſh, with gluttony, drunkenneſſe, and the ſinfull pleaſures of this life. And ſo it rebelleth againſt the Spirit, wounding, killing and conſtraining it to become a ſeruant vnto ſinne.

Si carnem nutriatis, & ipſam frequenti mollitie, ac iugi deliciarum fluxu foueatis; inſoleſcet neceſſario aduerſus ſpiritum & fortior illo efficitur, Cyril. in Leuit. l. 9. Col. 129.

Perinde atque in acie hinc atque hinc instructa ad conflictum qui alteri parti fert ſuppetias facit vt alter vincatur, Baſil. de ieiunio

Aug. de Cantico nouo lib. cap. 3. Tom. 9. cap. 936

Carnis infirmitas robur ſpiritui auget & ſubminiſtrat vires; ita è contrario noueris carnis fortitudinem debilitatem ſpiritus operari, Bern. ſerm. 29. in Cant.

In Leuit. lib. 9. Col. 129.

§. Sect. 4. Wee muſt ſtop all the paſſages to keepe backe prouiſion from the fleſh.

But what is the prouiſion of the victuals which muſt be withheld from this our enemy? And from what places and parts is it to be kept backe that it may receiue no benefit by it? To the later I anſwere firſt, that the fleſh is reſident in all the parts and faculties of our bodies and ſoules, and therefore our care muſt bee generally and particularly to keepe it from all and euery of them. Now the prouiſion it ſelfe which wee are to withhold from it, are all the meanes whereby it may be nouriſhed and ſtrengthened, and ſo enabled to reſiſt the Spirit. As for example, we muſt vſe our beſt indeuour to keepe from our corrupt minds all ſinfull cogitations, and from our phantaſies all vaine imaginations, wee muſt not entertaine wicked deliberations, and vngodly counſailes, pernicious errours, and falſe doctrine, but cut them off, when they are approching, or caſt them out, as ſoone as they are entred. And contrariwiſe let vs furniſh our minds in the regenerate part, with holy thoughts, and diuine meditations, with religious counſailes, wholſome inſtructions, and pure doctrine, concerning God and his Will, according as in his Word hee hath reuealed it vnto vs; following herein the Apoſtles counſaile, Set your mind on things aboue, not on things on the earth. So let vs keep out of our conſciences all manner of ſinne, and purge them daily

Col. 3. 3

Hebr.9.14.

Col.3.18
Phil.3.20.

1.Pet.5.8,9.

from all dead workes, that wee may ſerue the liuing God; Let vs as much as in vs lyeth preſerue them from the hotte ſearing Iron of knowne, voluntary and preſumptuous ſins, from vaine excuſes of that which is euill, and falſe accuſations for doing good; from the deepe lethargie of carnall ſecurity, and from the tormenting corraſiues of terrours and feares, and let vs labour to keepe them pure, peaceable and tender. Let vs keepe or blot out of our memory the remembrance of ſinfull pleaſures, vnleſſe it be to repent of thoſe that are paſt, and to loath and flee from thoſe which are preſent and to come; of ribald ſpeeches, obſcene jeſts, injuries receiued with a purpoſe of reuenge, with all other leſſons of impiety imprinted in them by Sathan, the World, or our owne corruption, and let vs write and euen engraue in them all holy documents which out of the Word haue beene imparted vnto vs. Let vs preſerue our hearts from all vnlawfull luſts, wicked deſires, vnruly paſſions, and vngodly affections, eſpecially from couetouſneſſe, ambition, and carnall voluptuouſnes; and labour to haue them fixed and faſtened on ſpirituall and heauenly things, and to be wholy taken vp & conſtantly poſſeſſed with ſanctified affections and holy deſires. Let vs keepe out from our appetite intemperance, and all deſire of exceſſe, and nouriſh in it temperance, ſobriety, modeſty, and chaſtitie. Let vs preſerue our tongues from all corrupt communication, our eares from vngodly and diſhoneſt diſcourſes, our eyes from wanton and wicked objects, and finally, our bodies from ſloth and idleneſſe, effeminate delicacie, exceſſiue ſleepe, and all manner of carnall and ſinfull pleaſures; and contrariwiſe let vs entertain watchfulneſſe, ſobriety, man-like exerciſes, befitting our ſpirituall Warfare, and when being too full fed it beginneth to bee wanton, let vs keepe it vnder with faſting, watching, and painfull labours.

§. Sect. 3.
We muſt take heed eſpecially of ſome principall ſins which moſt ſtrengthen the fleſh.

More eſpecially we muſt take heed of ſuch principall ſinnes as are the chiefe prouiſion whereby the fleſh is nouriſhed and ſtrengthened againſt the ſpirit, as ignorance of God and his Will, whereby the eyes of our vnderſtanding being hood-winkt or quite blinded, we may eaſily be miſled into all the by-wayes of ſinne, infidelity and vnbeliefe, which nouriſheth the fleſh in all impiety, whileſt neither beleiuing Gods promiſes nor threatnings, wee neither care to pleaſe him, hauing no aſſurance of reward, nor to offend and diſpleaſe him, becauſe wee doe not feare his judgements; ſecurity, impenitency and hardneſſe of heart, than the which nothing more confirmeth the fleſh in all wickedneſſe, becauſe hereby it goeth quietly on in ſinne without checke or remorſe, and putteth the euill day farre out of ſight. But eſpecially we are to take heed of the loue of the world, and of ſetting our hearts and affections vpon earthly things. For this will eaſily weaken the ſpirit, and quench all the good motions which croſſe and hinder vs from the fruition of thoſe momentany and mutable vanities, honours, riches, and pleaſures; it will root out of our hearts the loue of God from which ſpringeth all true obedience; & thruſt vs headlong into noyſome tentations and all manner of ſinnes, which promiſe vnto vs the ſatisfying of our earthly deſires. And therefore he who will be a good Souldiour in this ſpirituall Warfare, muſt not intangle himſelfe with the affaires of this life, but labour chiefly to pleaſe and approue himſelfe to him who hath choſen him to be a Souldiour. Hee that will haue Heauen for his City and Country, muſt haue his conuerſation there, euen whilſt he liueth in the World, and if we be riſen with Chriſt, wee muſt ſeeke and ſet our affections on things aboue, and not on things on the earth. But chiefly let vs flee couetouſneſſe and voluptuouſneſſe; For they that will bee rich fall into tentations, and ſnares, and into many fooliſh and hurtfull luſts, which drowne men in deſtruction and perdition. For the loue of money is the root all euill. So alſo we muſt take heed of voluptuous pleaſures, as ſurfeiting and drunkenneſſe, chambring and wantonneſſe, luſt and vncleanneſſe, ſloth and idleneſſe. For the more we pamper the body, the more we pine and ſtarue the ſoule; and no more effectuall are theſe meanes for the fatning of the naturall fleſh, than for the ſtrengthening and increaſing of ſinfull corruption, and the weakening and waſting of the ſpirituall part. And this wee ſee in the example of Noah, who giuing liberty to his voluptuous appetite, was ouer-taken with drunkenneſſe; of righteous Lot, who by the ſame meanes became not onely drunken but inceſtuous; and of holy David who neglecting the duties of his Kingly calling, and giuing way to drowſie ſloth and idleneſſe, was further foyled by his fleſh, and drawne to the committing of thoſe ſhamefull ſinnes of adultery and murther. And this is the cauſe why the Lord ſo ſtrictly reſtraineth vs from the immoderate vſe of theſe fleſhly pleaſures, and ſo much and earneſtly vrgeth, Temperance and Sobriety, Faſting and Abſtinence, Modeſty, Sobriety and painfull labour in our honeſt callings, becauſe they are notable meanes to mortifie and ſubdue our carnall corruptions, and to ſtrengthen the ſpirit vnto all holy and Chriſtian duties. Euen as with like earneſtneſſe he forbiddeth the contrary, becauſe thereby the ſpirit is weakened and diſabled, and the fleſh nouriſhed & ſtrengthened vnto all manner of wickednes. To this purpoſe one ſaith, that (as the fleſh injoying quiet reſt) the ſpirit fainteth and faileth, ſo contrariwiſe the fleſh being ſicke, the ſpirit injoyeth health. As ſoft and deli-

Iames 5,5.
1.Iohn 2.15.

1.Tim.6.9,10.

2.Tim.2.4.

Phil.3.20.
Col.3.1,2.

1.Tim.6.9,10.

Sicut enim carne quieſcente ſpiritus deficit, ita ea laborante conualeſcit, &c. Greg. In 7. Pſal. Pœniten, expla. 32. Pſal.

cate things nouriſh the fleſh, ſo thoſe which are high and hard doe aduance the ſpirit. That is fed with delights, this ſtrengthened and made more vigorous with bitter diet. That is cheriſhed with ſuch things as are tender and effeminate, but this exerciſed and ſtrengthened with ſuch as are ſeuere and rough. And againe, as harſh vſage woundeth the fleſh, ſo ouer tender handling doth weaken the ſpirit; and as that is waſted and conſumed with laborious exerciſes, ſo this is pinched with voluptuous delicacy. And this is the reaſon why when God ſeeth our impotency in ruling our ſenſuall appetite, he tieth our hands and maketh temperance which is ſo profitable to become alſo neceſſary, by with-drawing from vs that worldly plenty, in which he ſuffereth wicked Worldlings to abound and to fat and pamper themſelues to their perdition. Finally, this is the cauſe why he teacheth vs temperance, not onely by his Word but alſo by his example; for being to feed his beloued Prophet, in ſtead of ſtrong-men to attend his Table, hee ſent him his meat by ſilly Rauens; and ſurely they were no great dainties that were of their dreſſing and prouiding. And when hee would more immediately feaſt him by his owne hand that hee might goe forward in his journey, with more ſtrength and cheerefulneſſe; hee that could haue prouided for him all manner of Delicacies, doth onely ſet before him a Cake baked on the coales and a pot of water, not regarding the pleaſing of his appetite, but hauing reſpect onely to the neceſſity of Nature. And thus when our Sauiour Chriſt would by miracle feaſt the multitude, hee prouided onely Bread and Fiſh for their cheere, the ground both for their ſtooles and table, and the graſſe for their cloth and carpet; whereas hee was as able (if hee had ſeene it as fit) to haue furniſhed this Feaſt with all manner of Dainties, which either Water or Land could haue yeelded vnto him: becauſe hee well knew that the ſatisfying of our fleſhly appetite, doth not for the preſent bring ſo much pleaſure and contentment to the body, as it doth afterwards griefe and vexation to the ſpirit.

1.Kings 17.6.

1.Kings 19.6.

*Math.*14.19.

§. *Sect.*6.
Wee muſt moderate our ſelues in the vſe of things lawfull and indifferent.

It is not then enough that we reſtraine the fleſh from things wicked and vnlawfull, whereby it is nouriſhed and ſtrengthened, but wee muſt alſo moderate and diet our ſelues in the vſe of thoſe things which in their owne nature are lawfull; yea, there muſt not onely be a ſober and moderate vſe of meates and drinkes, and worldly pleaſures, but ſometimes alſo, as occaſion ſerueth, totall abſtinence, for the better taming and ſubduing of the fleſh. So one ſaith, That he onely falleth not in things vnlawfull, who ſometimes wiſely and warily reſtraineth himſelfe from thoſe which are lawfull. And Auguſtine telleth vs, That the beſt way to reſtraine the fleſh from vnlawfull pleaſure, is to refraine ſometimes from thoſe which are lawfull delights; for he who abſtaineth from no delights that are lawfull, is in the next neighbourhood to thoſe that are vnlawfull. Marriage is lawfull, and adultery vnlawfull: and yet temperate men, that they may be farre off from vnlawfull adultery, doe moderate themſelues in the vſe of lawfull Marriage. Sufficiency in diet and drinking is lawfull, and drunkenneſſe vnlawfull; and yet modeſt men, that they may bee farre off from the beaſtly filthineſſe of drunkenneſſe, doe ſomewhat reſtraine themſelues of the liberty of ſociety. And this is needfull for vs to doe, becauſe (as another Father ſaith) Whileſt we giue free liberty for our refreſhing, we are often deceiued and carried beyond our bounds; and whileſt the mind flattereth it ſelfe with a conceit of neceſſity, it is allured and deceiued with the will and appetite, &c. And whileſt we doe vnwarily condeſcend to neceſſity, we become ſlaues to our luſts and appetite. And again, we are to know (ſaith he) that voluptuouſneſſe doth ſo cloake it ſelfe vnder neceſſity, that the moſt perfect man can ſcarcely diſcern it. For whilſt neceſſity calleth vpon vs to pay our debt to nature, voluptuouſneſſe doth ſatiſfie it luſt and appetite; and ſo much the more ſecurely doth gluttony carry vs away with headlong violence, by how much the more cunningly it couereth it ſelfe with the honeſt name of ſupplying neceſſity. And oftentimes in the way of eating, pleaſure ſtealingly followeth after, & ſometime impudently taketh the way and goeth before; now it is eaſie to ſee when pleaſure goeth before neceſſity; but very hard to diſcerne when in our eating it followeth after.

Solus in illicitis non cadit, qui ſe aliquandò & à licitis cautè reſtringit, Greg. in Moral.

Qui enim à nullis refrenat licitis vicinus eſt & illicitis, Auguſt. de vtilitate ieiunii, tract T.9. Col.1167.

Sed ſæpe dum incauti neceſſitati condeſcendimus, deſiderijs deſeruimus, Gregor. Moral. lib.30. cap.14.

In eodem capite.

§. *Sect.*7.
That we are to auoid the other extreame of hurting our bodies whileſt wee goe about to tame the fleſh.

Yet heere wee are alſo to take heede of the contrary extreame, namely that wee doe not deſtroy the body whileſt we indeauour to tame the fleſh, nor kill or hurt our friend, whileſt we intend warre againſt our enemy; as when by watching, faſting and ſuch ſtrict exerciſes, we ſo weaken our bodies that they are diſabled vnto all good duties. For as we are not ſo to pamper it, as that it ſhould become a fit ſlaue for the fleſh, ſo wee are not ſo to afflict and weaken it, as that it ſhould bee made vnfit for the ſeruice of God. So the ſame authour ſaith, that ſometimes whileſt wee doe immoderately withſtand our naturall deſires, wee thereby increaſe the miſeries of neceſſitie. And therefore there is a certaine kind of art of continency and temperance to be learned, ſo as wee may not kill the body, but the corruptions of the fleſh. For oftentimes whileſt it is reſtrained more than is fit, it is weakened and diſabled for the execiſe of good workes, and ſo a man is made vnfit for praying and preaching and ſuch like duties, whileſt with vndiſcreete haſt he would at once choake the inticements to vice. For wee haue our *Greg. Moral. lib.*30. *cap.*14.

bodies

Sæpe verò dum in illo hoſtem inſequimur, etiam ciuem quem diligimus trucidamus, & ſæpe dum quaſi concivi parcimus ad prælium hoſtem nutrimus. Gregor. moral, lib. 30. cap. 14.

bodies giuen vs as helpers of our ſpirituall intentions; and as in them dwell the prouocations to luſt and wantonneſſe, ſo they alſo are the inſtruments of well-doing. But oftentimes whileſt in them wee purſue an hated enemy, we doe vnawares kill a beloued friend, and whileſt we ſpare a friend, we nouriſh an enemy to fight againſt vs.

§. Sect. 8. That we muſt take from the fleſh the weapons and armour whereby it moſt preuaileth.

The laſt rule is, that we ſpoyle our enemy the fleſh of its armour, munition and weapons wherewith it fighteth againſt vs, imitating herein the pollicy of the Philiſtins, who would not ſuffer their enemies to haue any ſwords or ſpeares, nor yet any ſmethy to forge them in, or ſmith to make them; and ſo ſhall wee get an eaſie conqueſt, when as our enemy being diſarmed and left naked, hath neither meanes to defend himſelfe nor offend vs. Now theſe weapons are thoſe fiery luſts, and thoſe darts and ſpeares of temptations, wherewith the fleſh encountreth vs, and forceth vs as much as in it lyeth to commit ſin, either in our thoughts, words or actions, of which wee are to depriue the fleſh by taking away the matter whereof they are made, and all occaſions and means of them, as neere as we can. Or if we cannot preuent their making, yet if it be poſſible, we are to wring theſe weapons out of our enemies hands, and to turne the point and edge of them againſt himſelfe, by taking occaſion from theſe temptations to the committing of ſinne, of performing ſome holy duty contrary vnto it. As when it encountreth vs with wicked thoughts, to take occaſion thereby of exerciſing our ſelues in diuine and ſpirituall meditations; when it prouoketh vs to corrupt and ſinnefull ſpeaches, which either tend to Gods diſhonour, to the diſgrace of our neighbour, or wounding of our owne ſoules, that wee take occaſion by this temptation, to vtter ſome godly and wholeſome diſcourſe, tending to Gods glory & the edification of the hearers. And finally when it tempteth vs to any euill actions, to take occaſion therby of being more forward vnto all religious duties and more zealous of good workes. Or if we haue not power enough to pull theſe weapons out of our enemies hand, then muſt we vſe all diligence & good means, wherby we may break the point & blunt the edge of them, that they may not pearce and wound vs, or at leſt ſo to arme our ſelues with the Chriſtian armour, eſpecially the ſhield of Faith and ſword of the Spitit, that by the one we may beare off theſe fiery darts and cruell blowes of temptations, and by the other beate backe our enemies and put them to flight. And being alwayes thus well appointed, let vs continually ſtand vpon our fence, watching with a quicke and vigilant eye, on which ſide or part our enemy ſtriketh at vs; whether on the right ſide with temptations of proſperitie, or on the left ſide with temptations of aduerſitie and affliction; whether it aſſaulteth our head with errours and hereſies, or our hearts with vnlawfull luſts; our eyes with rotten and corrupt ſpeeches, or our eares with wanton and wicked objects, that as ſoone as we obſerue to what part the blow is intended, we may inſtantly caſt the ſhield of faith betweene it and vs, and (according to the example of our Sauiour fighting with the Diuell) make a contrary thruſt or blow againſt our enemy, and ſo not onely defend our ſelues, but alſo offend him by wounding, foyling, or putting him to flight. And all theſe are required by the Apoſtle in our conflict againſt our ſpirituall enemies. As firſt that we ſhould be ſober, pining and famiſhing them, by withdrawing all prouiſion of food whereby they ſhould bee nouriſhed; then that hauing on the whole Chriſtian armour, we ſhould keepe watch and ward, that we be not ſurpriſed on the ſudden, nor receiue any wounds for want of vigilancy; and laſtly that we ſhould reſiſt them ſtedfaſt in the faith, which if we do they wil not ſtand to it, but betake themſelues to a ſhamefull flight.

1. Pet. 5. 8. 9.

Iam. 4. 7.

Chap. XXI.

Of other meanes whereby the fleſh may be ſubdued and ouercome.

§. Sect. 1. We muſt keepe a narrow watch ouer our ſelues and ouer our enemies.

Now hauing thus farre proceeded in the withdrawing of all meanes whereby the fleſh is nouriſhed and ſtrengthened, wee muſt not reſt heere, but in the next place vſe all good meanes whereby it may bee ſubdued and ouercome. And firſt of all wee muſt keepe a narrow and diligent watch ouer our ſelues, and ouer our enemie, not onely to preuent all occaſions whereby it may circumuent and ſurpriſe vs at vnawares, but alſo that we may take the fitteſt opportunities, and beſt aduantages for killing and crucifying of all our fleſhly luſts. And this carefull watch is moſt neceſſary, for in this life we get not a full conqueſt ouer the fleſh, but after we haue gotten the better in many conflicts, haue put it to ſhamefull flight, wounded, weakened it, and brought it in ſubjection, as a captiue and bondſlaue, yet ſtill it is plotting and practiſing new treaſons. For the atchieuing whereof it hath great aduantages; for it not onely lyeth about our Citie walls, but euen in euery ſecreet corner of our ſtreetes, and no ſooner doe our forraigne enemies, the Diuell and the World, beſeige and aſſault vs, but preſently this lurkling traytour is ready to open the gates of our ſoules, and letting them in, to joyne with them to work our ouerthrow. In which regard who would not appoint a continuall centinell, and keepe a very narrow watch? who would giue any place to carnall ſecuritie, and careleſly ſleepe in the middeſt of theſe dangers? who can walke ſecurely among Serpents and Scorpions and reſt quietly in his bed when the enuious man watcheth about his houſe with a purpoſe to fire and burne it? Heere in this World is no place of ſaftie, and therefore let there be no time for ſecuritie. Wee ſhall bee onely ſafe in Heauen when as wee ſhall haue a full and finall victory ouer all our enemies, and therefore let vs not bee retchleſſe on Earth, but let circumſpection and watchfulneſſe accompany vs euen vnto Heauen gates, not onely beginning but working out our ſaluation with feare and trembling.

Phil.2.12.

§. Sect.2.
That we muſt keepe this watch all in things.

Now this watch as it muſt be kept at all times, ſo alſo in all things; for euen one gate of the Citie vnguarded, is ſufficient to let in an whole army of enemies, though all the reſt bee carefully watched; and therefore following the Apoſtles exhortation vnto Timothy, wee muſt watch in all things. For it is not enough that wee keepe this watch about things, ſimply and in their owne nature euill, that wee may auoide them, but euen in things indifferent, that we doe not abuſe our Chriſtian libertie vnto ſinne; yea in thoſe actions which are in their owne nature good, that wee may doe them in a good manner and to a right end, leaſt otherwiſe they be turned into ſinne. For example we muſt keepe this watch ouer our ſelues when we heare the word, according to that of our Sauiour; Take heed how you heare; leaſt through our ſecure retchleſneſſe wee heare without reuerence and attention, without care to treaſure it vp in our hearts or to practiſe it in our liues. So we muſt keepe this watch ouer our ſelues when we pray, leaſt our minds being caried away with wandring thoughts, we call vpon God with deceitfull lips, our bodies being preſent, but our hearts in the meane time farre from him. So likewiſe our Sauiour warneth vs to take heede when wee giue almes, becauſe we are in danger to be tainted with pride, and to ayme at the applauſe and prayſe of men. Now if there be ſuch neede of watchfulneſſe, when as we are exerciſed in the duties of Gods ſeruice, and in the beſt actions which we performe, then how much more in the vſe of things indifferent, which become ſinful if they be not vſed with much caution and moderation? how much more when we intermeddle with wordly affaires and earthly things, which like birdlime are apt to defile and intrap vs, and are commonly vſed by Sathan, the World and our owne corruption, as ſnares and nets to intangle and catch vs, and as baites to couer the hookes of ſin, which will mortally choake vs, if wee ſwallow them downe, vnleſſe wee caſt them vp againe by vnfained repentance.

2.Tim.8.18.
Luk.8.18.
Mat.6.4.

§. Sect.3.
That we muſt keepe the watch ouer all the faculties and parts of our ſoules and bodies.

And as we muſt keepe this watch in all things: ſo ouer all the parts and faculties of our bodies and ſoules, eſpecially ouer our ſenſes which being the gates of our ſoules, do either let in, or keepe out both our friends & enemies; and therefore theſe gates muſt be well watched and ſtrongly guarded, ſeeing wee haue ſo many forraigne enemies who beſieging vs, doe watch all opportunities of getting entrance, and ſo many ſecret traytors within vs, which are daily and hourely ready to open; theſe gates and to betray vs into their hands. Thus we muſt watch ouer our eyes, that they doe not wander after wanton and wicked objects, and with Iob keepe them vnder couenant, that they doe not by luſtfull glances betray vs into the hands of our enemies. And before we walke abroad and looke into the world we are to forecaſt the dangers which may come by giuing them their full liberty to wander after vanities, that wee may preuent them. And becauſe our owne prouidence is not ſufficient without Gods aſſiſtance, wee are to pray with Dauid, that hee will turne away our eyes from beholding vanities. Neither are we to take leſſe care in watching ouer our eares, becauſe they being the inſtruments of the moſt learned ſenſe, and the conduit pipes to conueigh vnto our minds all notions and inſtructions, either good or euill, therefore we muſt take heede how we heare, and what wee heare, whether the language of Canaan for our edification and inſtruction, or the voyce of the Serpent, Dragon, or bewitching Syren, tending to corrupt, poyſon and deſtroy vs; whether it be ſauoury communication powdred with the ſalt of ſpirituall wiſdome, which miniſtreth grace vnto the hearers, or wanton ieſts, ſcurrilous ſpeeches, wicked blaſphemies, backbiting and ſlandering with ſuch like euill words, which if wee giue them admittance, will, as the Apoſtle telleth vs, corrupt good manners. We muſt hauing gotten the victory ouer our enemies, like the Gilsadites take all the paſſages, and ſtrongly guard them againſt them, and if thoſe who goe by, giue vs the watch word, wee may giue them entrance, and if they ſpeake plainely the language of our ſpirituall & heauenly countrey, and pronounce Shibboleth let them paſſe as friends, but if they ſay Sibboleth and by their liſping language, appeare to be our enemies, let vs not onely ſtay them from entring, but wound and ſlay them. Thus alſo muſt wee ſet a ſtraight watch ouer our taſt and appetite, leaſt giuing liberty vnto it, our ſpirituall enemies preuaile againſt vs and draw vs to intemperance and exceſſe in dyet. And this counſell the wiſe man giueth vs; Put (ſaith hee) a knife to thy throate (ſitting to eate with a ruler) if thou be a man giuen to appetite; Bee not deſirous of his

Iob.31.1.
Pſal.119.37.
Col.4.6.
1.Cor.15.33.
Iudg.12.6.
Pro.23.2.

dainties, for they are deceitfull meate. Which temperance if we vſe, it willbee vnto vs a wall of defence to preſerue vs againſt the aſſaults of our ſpirituall enemies. Whereas contrariwiſe, if wee doe not rule our taſt, and bridle our appetite, wee ſhall bee like vnto a Citie, whoſe wals being broken downe is made an eaſie prey, and lyeth open to the ſpoyle; as the wiſe man ſpeaketh.

Pro.25.28.

§. Sect. 4.

That we muſt keep a ſpeciall watch ouer our tongues.

With no leſſe diligence are wee to ſet a carefull watch ouer our tongues, which the fleſh abuſeth as a notable inſtrument of all euill, and as a razour and ſharpe two edged ſword, not onely to wound our neighbours, but alſo our owne ſoules and conſciences. Whereof wee haue an example in Dauid, who reſolued with himſelfe, to take heede vnto his wayes, that hee might not ſinne with his tongue, & to keepe his mouth as with a bridle, that his tongue might not paſſe its bounds and take vnto it ſelfe licentious liberty.

Pſal.39.1.

Which if Dauid had neede to doe, whoſe tongue and heart were continually prepared to prayſe the Lord, how much more had wee, who are apt to vtter ſo much vanity and lyes? If he found it neceſſary, who cals his tongue his glory, becauſe it was ſuch a notable inſtrument of glorifying God, why ſhould not wee much more, who haue juſt cauſe to call our tongues our ſhame, becauſe they vtter ſo many vaine and euill ſpeeches, wherby his holy name is much diſhonoured?

Pſal.108.1.
Pſal.57.8.

But that this neceſſitie of keeping a ſtrict and narrow watch ouer our tongues may better appeare, let vs further conſider, firſt that God requireth it, and ſo bindeth vs to this duty vpon our allegeance vnto him; according to that of the Pſalmiſt, Keepe thy tongue from euill, and thy lips from ſpeaking guile, where is required not onely that wee doe not ſpeake euill, but that we keepe our tongues vnder a narrow watch, that wee doe not ſpeake it.

Pſal.34.13.

Secondly, conſider that this narrow watch is of great importance in reſpect of that power and potency which is in the tongue to draw vs to good or euill, life or death, according to that of the wiſe man: Death and life are in the power of the tongue, and they that loue it ſhall eate the fruit thereof. In regard whereof hee ſaith in another place, that he who keepeth his mouth keepeth his life: but he that openeth wide his lips ſhall haue deſtruction. And againe, Who ſo keepeth his mouth and his tongue, keepeth his ſoule from troubles.

Pro.18.21.
& 13.3.
& Chap.21.23.

Thirdly, the naturall maliciouſneſſe of this little member ſhould make vs to watch ouer it with great care, for as the Pſalmiſt, and the Apoſtle Paul, deſcribe the effects and fruits of it; It deuiſeth miſchiefe & like a ſharpe razour worketh deceitfully, it ſpeaketh deceit, and loueth to lye, rather than to ſpeake righteouſneſſe; it delighteth in deuouring words, it cutteth as a ſword, and the poyſon of Aſpes is vnder the lips.

Pſal.52.4.
Rom.3.13.

So the the Apoſtle Iames telleth vs that the tongue as much needeth reſtraint, as an vnruly horſe the bridle; and compareth it to the Helme of a ſhip which being little turneth about the whole body, and to a fire inflamed by Hell and ſetting on fire a whole world with wickedneſſe; affirming that it defileth the whole man, that it is hardly tamed being an vnruly euill full of deadly poyſon.

Iam.3.5.6.7.8.

Finally, let vs conſider that Chriſtian perfection conſiſteth in well ordering of the tongue; For if any man offend not in word, the ſame is a perfect man, and is able to bridle the whole body. Whereas on the other ſide though we ſeeme neuer ſo religious, yet if we doe not bridle our tongue, we deceiue our own hearts, and our religion is vaine; as the ſame Apoſtle pronounceth.

Iam.3.2.
Iam.1.26.

Now in this our watch we are to keepe our tongues from euil ſpeaking, whether it be ſuch impious words as are directly darted againſt Gods owne Majeſty, by blaſpheming his holy name, prophaning his word and ordinances, ſcorning and abuſing his workes and creatures; or ſuch diſhoneſt and vnjuſt words, as are vtterd to the preiudice and hurt of our neighbours, as by infecting and poyſoning them with ſcurrilous ieſts, ribaldry and ſuch corrupt and rotten communication, or taking away their goods or good name by lying and obtrectation, backbiting and ſlandering. The former whereof the Apoſtle forbiddeth: Let no corrupt communication (ſaith hee) proceede out of your mouth, but that which is good to the vſe of edifying, that it may miniſter grace vnto the hearers; the other in the ninth commandement, and in the nineteenth of Leuiticus; Thou ſhalt not goe vp and downe as a tale-bearer among the people; like vnto a pedlar which carryeth his packe from houſe to houſe, venting here a little and there a little, vntill at length he hath vttered all his wares.

Eph.4.29.
Leuit.19.16.

And the Apoſtle diſſwadeth it by a waighty argument: Speake not euill (ſaith he) one of another, brethren: he that ſpeaketh euill of his brother, and iudgeth his brother ſpeaketh euill of the Law and iudgeth the Law; namely, by doing that which it forbiddeth and condemneth.

Iam.4.11.

Secondly, wee muſt containe them from idle ſpeaking and conſequently from much ſpeaking; for if we ſpeake much, we can hardly keepe our ſelues from ſpeaking vainely and to little purpoſe, and by venting vanities, wee ſhall eaſily be brought to ſet our tongues on ſale to ſpeake alſo that which is wicked and euill. And therefore the wiſe man telleth vs, that in the multitude of words there wanteth not ſinne, and that in this reſpect, he that refraineth his lips is wiſe. And againe, that hee who hath knowledge ſpareth his words, where as with a foole is much babling. That euen a foole when hee holdeth his peace is counted wiſe, and hee that ſhutteth his lips is eſteemed a man of vn-

Pro.10.19.

Mat.12.36.

derſtanding. Now that we may thus refraine our tongues from much babling and idle ſpeaking, let vs remember that fearefull ſaying of our Sauiour, namely that euery idle word that men ſhall ſpeake, they ſhall giue account thereof at the day of iudgement, and this will make vs carefull to ſpeake then, when as our ſpeech is better than ſilence.

§. Sect.5. That aboue all other parts we muſt keepe this narrow watch ouer our hearts.

Pro.4.23. Ier.17.9.

But aboue all other parts wee are with greateſt care to guard our hearts, and to ſet a ſtrickt and ſtrait watch ouer them, according to the counſell of the Wiſe man: Keepe thy heart with all diligence, for out of it are the iſſues of life. And this is moſt neceſſary firſt becauſe aboue all other parts it is moſt cunning and crafty, according to that of the Prophet: The heart is deceitfull and wicked aboue all things: Who can know it? And therefore as wee are carefull to keepe a vigilant eye when as we haue to deale with a cunning couzener, or deceitfull thiefe, and keepe a narrow watch ouer ſubtile and politique traytors, who are ſtill ready to ſpy all opportunities to betray and deliuer vs into the hands of our malicious enemies that ſeeke our liues and indeauour to ſpoyle our goods: ſo muſt we deale with this couzener, thiefe and traytour which doth intend nothing more than our vtter ruine and deſtruction. Secondly, becauſe it is the chiefe Monarch and commander in this little world of man, which ruleth and commandeth all the other parts; It is their guide and captaine which leadeth and directeth them in all their courſes; It is like the primum mobile which moueth all the inferiour ſpheares, and the firſt and chiefe wheele in the clocke which ſetteth all the reſt on going. It is the ſpring and fountaine of all our thoughts, words and actions, which being defiled defileth them, and being purged doth communicate vnto them its purity & cleanneſſe. For according to the direction of the heart, the tongue ſpeaketh, the hand worketh, the eye ſeeth, the foote walketh.

Luk.6.45. Mat.15.18.19. Mat.19.18,18.

A good man out of the good treaſure of his heart (ſaith our Sauiour) bringeth forth that which is good, and an euill man out of the euill treaſure of his heart, bringeth forth that which is euill: For out of the abundance of his heart his mouth ſpeaketh. And againe: Thoſe things which proceede out of the mouth, come forth from the heart, and they defile the man. For out of the heart proceede euill thoughts, murders, adulteries, fornications, thefts, falſe witneſſe, blaſphemies. And therefore it neerely concerneth vs at all times, in all places, and vpon all occaſions, in our mirth and in our mourning, in our proſperity and in our affliction, when we are alone, and when we are in company, in our abſtinence and in our eating and drinking, in our painefull labours and in our honeſt recreations, in our dealings which we haue with God, as hearing, reading, meditating, praying, receiuing the Sacrament; and in our commerce and affayres with men, talking, walking, buying, ſelling, in thoſe actions which we performe abroad, and thoſe which are done by vs in ſecret in our own houſes and priuate chambers, that wee keepe a narrow watch ouer our hearts; that they be vpright with God, honeſt, iuſt & mercifull towards our neighbours, pure and holy, ſober and temperate towards our ſelues, leaſt they be ſurpriſed and ouertaken with the tentations of the Diuell, the World and our own Fleſh, and being corrupted and miſled doe defile and miſ-guide all other powers and parts. And ſeeing our owne watchfulneſſe is not ſufficient, becauſe they are ſo wilye and ſubtile that we cannot know them, and ſo ſtubborne and rebellious that wee cannot rule them; let vs continually pray vnto the Lord, who alone ſearcheth the heart and reines, and ruleth and turneth euen the hearts of Kings like the riuers of waters, that hee will keepe a ſtraite watch ouer them, and taking them into his hand will rule and guide them, ſo as they may bee alwayes ſubiect vnto his will, that ſo with themſelues they may bring all our other faculties into this ſauing ſubiection; that hee will cauſe them to loue that which he loueth, to loath that which hee hateth, and to flee that which hee forbiddeth, and to doe that which he commandeth.

Pſal.141.3. Pſal.119.36. Pſal.51.10. Pſal.86.11.

Let vs earneſtly deſire him with the Prophet Dauid, that hee will apply our hearts vnto his teſtimonies and not to couetouſneſſe; that our hearts may be found in ſtatutes, that ſo wee may not be aſhamed; that hee will create in vs cleane hearts, and renew a right ſpirit within vs: and becauſe they are naturally flitting and remouing, that he will knit them faſt vnto him that wee may alwayes feare his name.

§. Sect.6. That we muſt keepe this watch in our ſpirituall armour.

And thus you ſee what is the Chriſtian watch ouer our enemy the fleſh: Now we are further to conſider, that we are not to watch vnweaponed and diſarmed, but as wee are to haue our compleate armour on our heads and backes, ſo eſpecially the ſhield of faith and ſword of the Spirit in our hands, that we may be ready to aſſault the fleſh and the luſts thereof, as ſoone as euer they appeare and approach towards vs; ſometimes beating them downe, wounding, and killing them with the terrible threatnings of the Law, and ſometime piercing and thruſting them through, or beating them backe and putting them to flight with the ſweet promiſes of the Goſpel, encouraging vs to a godly life, and the remembrance of Gods loue in Chriſt, and what our ſweete Sauiour hath done and ſuffered, to free vs from our ſinnes. Yea we muſt not onely in ſome generall manner vſe this ſword of the Spirit againſt the fleſh and our ſinfull corruption (as it were) in the whole lumpe; but we muſt draw it out, and fight with it againſt euery particular luſt, when it ſetteth vpon vs. As when it withdraweth vs from the ſeruice of God, to the ſeruice of Sathan and the World; let vs withſtand the tentation, by remembring that wee are bound by Gods Law to worſhip and ſerue him and no other; and that wee are purpoſely redeemed by him, that vve ſhould worſhip and ſerue him in holineſſe and righteouſneſſe all the dayes of our liues. When it moueth vs to neglect good workes, let vs remember, that vve are Gods workemanſhip created vnto them; that he hath therefore purged vs, and made vs his peculiar people; that wee might be zealous of good workes. When it perſwadeth vs to deferre our repentance, let vs remember, that wee are commanded to remember our Creator in the dayes of our youth; & that euen to day we muſt hearken vnto Gods voyce and not harden our hearts. When as worldly luſts doe ſet vpon vs, let vs remember, that the amitie of the world is enmitie with God, and that whoſoeuer maketh himſelfe a friend to the world doth in the very act, make God his enemy; that wee muſt not loue the world nor the things of the world, for if any man loue the world, the loue of the Father is not in him. When the luſts of pride do aſſault vs, let vs call to minde, that God reſiſteth the proud, but giueth his grace to the humble; that a mans pride ſhall bring him low, but honour ſhall vphold the humble in Spirit; that the heart of a man is haughty before deſtruction, and before honour is humilitie. So when the luſts of couetouſneſſe doe fight againſt our ſoules, let vs beate them backe and foyle them by the ſword of the Spirit, calling to minde, that Godlineſſe with contentment is the greateſt gaine, and that the loue of money is the roote of all euill; That we haue an expreſſe charge from God, to haue our conuerſation without couetouſneſſe, and that wee ſhould be content with ſuch things as wee haue, hauing this gracious promiſe from him, that hee will neuer leaue vs nor forſake vs if we ſtill depend vpon him. And thus muſt we vvith the ſword of the Spirit, giue euery other ſpeciall luſt, ſpeciall blowes and vvounds, that they may be foyled and get no ſtrength to preuaile againſt vs. Yea not onely are wee thus our ſelues to draw out this ſpirituall ſword, but alſo in the publique miniſterie of the Goſpell, wee are to lay open and naked all our ſinnefull luſts to thoſe powerfull blowes and thruſts, which Gods Miniſters by the Word ſhall make againſt them, ſuffering meekely the Word of exhortation, admonition and reproofe, and by diligent application bringing it home to our owne hearts and conſciences, for the wounding and killing of all our ſinnefull corruptions.

Exod.20.3.
Deut 6.13.
Mat.4. 10.
Luk.1.74.
Eph.2.10.
Tit.2.14.
Eccle.12.1.
Pſal.95.7.8.
Iam.4.4.
Iob.2.15.
1.Pet.5.5.
Pro.29.23. & 18.12.
1.Tim.6.6. 10.
Heb.13.5.
Ezek.16.63.

CHAP. XXII.

Of two other rules to bee obſerued of thoſe who would ſubdue the fleſh.

§. Sect.1. The third rule is that wee withſtand the fleſh in all the occaſions and meanes of ſinfull luſts.

The third rule in reſiſting and aſſaulting of the fleſh is; that we withſtand it in all occaſions which it taketh, and meanes which it vſeth to preuaile againſt vs, and that wee doe with equall care auoide and ſhunne them, as we doe the ſinnefull luſts themſelues, or the wicked actions vnto which they doe incline and tempt vs. To which purpoſe one ſaith, that this ſhall bee vnto vs the occaſion of the greateſt ſecuritie, if wee will not onely carefully flee ſinnes, but alſo the meanes whereby they doe ſupplant vs &c. For as hee who goeth vpon the edge of a ſteepe and craggie Rocke, though hee falleth not, yet with feare trembleth, and ſo falleth through his trembling: ſo hee who leaueth not ſinne aloofe and farre off, but approcheth cloſe to the brinke of it, hath iuſt cauſe to liue in feare, ſeeing hee is apt often to ſlip into it. He that feareth death, if he be wiſe, hee will not drinke poyſon, nor thruſt himſelfe into needleſſe and dangerous quarrels, nor expoſe his perſon to any other perils, which threaten his deſtruction. Hee that would preſerue the riches which hee loueth, will not entertaine occaſions of needleſſe expences, much leſſe will he ſuffer his doores to ſtand wide open in the night, or inuite knowne theeues to lodge with him; and he who would not haue his houſe burned, will not be ſo fooliſh to bring and leaue fire careleſſely in the roome where is ſtore of flaxe, gunpowder, or ſuch like matter as is combuſtible: How much greater care therefore becommeth it vs to vſe, to withſtand all meanes and occaſions of ſin vnto vvhich our corrupt natures are ſo much inclined? For if vve bee ſo frayle and vveake through our corruption, that of our ſelues we are prone to fall, when as there is no outward meanes or occaſion to moue vs thereunto; how much more ſhall we be ouertaken and foiled with our fleſhly luſts, when as their objects doe preſent themſelues, and both time, place and company inuite vs to imbrace them, and offer all opportunitie of inioying our ſinfull pleaſures. Eſpecially conſidering, that by expoſing our ſelues to theſe needleſſe dangers we do tempt the Lord, & moue him to giue vs ouer to our owne weakenes and to the malice of our ſpirituall enemies, that ſo by our fals and lamentable experience of our foole-hardineſſe, we may for the time to come be more wiſe and wary. Hee therefore who would withſtand the fleſh tempting him to idolatry, muſt auoide the meanes and occaſions which bring vnto it, as wil-worſhip, ſuperſtition, making of images for religious vſes, company and alliance with idolaters; for though he were as wiſe as Salomon himſelfe, yet if he auoide not theſe meanes and occaſions hee will be ouertaken with this ſinne. Hee that wil reſiſt the fleſh tempting him to murther, muſt alſo auoide vnjuſt anger, reuiling ſpeeches, needleſſe quarrels and deſire of reuenge, wherewith the heart being enraged, will excite alſo the hand to the ſhedding of blood. Hee that will reſiſt the fleſh prouoking him to commit fornication, adultery or other vncleanneſſe, muſt turne away his eyes from beholding vanitie, and keepe them vnder couenant, that they looke not with wanton glaunces vpon a woman; and ſhut his eares againſt filthy communication and obſcæne jeſts, which wicked men as the bawdes of the Diuel and the Fleſh, doe vſe to defile our hearts and allure vs vnto ſinne. And this is the reaſon why the Apoſtle hauing forbidden fornication and vncleanneſſe, doth in the next place forbid the naming of them, together with filthy and fooliſh talking, and diſhoneſt and ſcurrilous ieſting, which are the meanes and occaſions of thoſe ſinnes. For if Dauid giuing himſelfe to eaſe and ſloth, and ſuffering his eyes to gaze on ſtrange beauty, was ouertaken and foyled by his ſinnefull fleſh, how ſhal vve ſtand and get the victory ouer our fleſhly luſts, if we giue them the aduantage of meanes and opportunitie? Thus hee who would not hearken vnto the fleſh ſolliciting him to theft and ſacriledge, muſt not with Achan caſt a luſting eye vpon the wedge of gold and Babiloniſh garment; nor looke vpon his neighbours vineyard with a greedy deſire to haue it from the owner, though it were vpon a juſt price; ſeeing if he cannot thus preuaile, he is ready in the next place with Ahab to wreſt and wring it from him with wrong and cruelty. In a word if we would reſiſt the fleſh tempting vs vnto any ſinne, let vs not entertaine the meanes and occaſions of them, when it offereth them vnto vs. But principally let vs auoide the ſocietie and company of wicked men, which are the Diuels brokers, and the Fleſhes bawdes to ſollicite vs vnto all euill. For though they doe not finde vs like vnto themſelues, yet if wee conſort with them, they will make vs ſuch, like vnto thoſe who being tainted with the plague or leproſie, which are ready with their contagion to infect thoſe who being ſound doe keepe them company. So the wiſe man telleth vs. Hee that walketh with wiſe men ſhall bee wiſe, but a companion of fooles ſhall be deſtroyed. And the Sonne of Syrach; He that toucheth pitch ſhal be defiled therewith: and he that hath fellowſhip with a proude man ſhall bee like vnto him. And therefore Dauid hauing reſolued to keepe Gods Law, doth firſt baniſh from him euill company; Away (ſaith he) from mee yee wicked, I will keepe the Commandements of my God. And thus the Apoſtle forbidding the workes of darkeneſſe, doth vſe this phraſe, that we ſhould haue no fellowſhip with them; implying that if we keepe company with the workers of iniquitie, we ſhould hardly reſtraine our ſelues from their workes and actions. Now if any ſhall pretend, that it is a thing of too great preciſeneſſe and ſtrickteneſſe, yea of difficultie and impoſſibilie to auoide theſe meanes and occaſions, or to bridle our appetite and carnall luſts from ſeeking after them; let ſuch know that if they cannot reſtraine themſelues from theſe occaſions and meanes, which oftentimes in and for their owne ſakes are not much deſireable, much leſſe ſhall they be able to reſtraine and curbe in their vnruly luſts when as they haue once gotten the aduantage of theſe opportunities, and when being mad and headſtrong in themſelues, they haue theſe goads and ſpurres in their ſides to pricke them forward.

Chryſoſt. ad pop. Antiot. Hom.15 T.5. Col.141.

*Iob.*31.1.
*Gen.*39.10.
*Eph.*5.4.
*Pro.*13.20.
*Eccl.*13.1.
*Pſal.*119.115.
*Eph.*5.11.

§. *Sect.*2.
The fourth rule that wee reſiſt the fleſh in the firſt beginnings of ſinne.

The fourth rule for the reſiſting of the fleſh is ſomewhat like the former, namely that we withſtand the firſt beginnings of ſinne, and labour to quench our fiery luſts when they are firſt kindled in vs. As ſoone as ſin appeareth to be ſin, and maketh vnto vs the leaſt ſhew of euill wee muſt preſently flee from it, according to that of the Apoſtle; Abſtaine from all appearance of euill. For being the ſpawne of the old wilie Serpent, it reſembleth the Father in ſubtiltie, preſſing firſt to get in the head, and then eaſily gliding in with the whole body. So Hierom. The Deuill (ſaith he) is a ſlippery Serpent, & if we doe not keepe out his head, that is, his firſt ſuggeſtions, it is not to be doubted, but that he will ſtealingly ſlide into the moſt ſecret corners of the heart. Hence it is that the Apoſtle Iude requireth, that we ſhould be ſo farre off from giuing entertainment to this enemy our ſinfull corruption, that wee ſhould not ſuffer his weedes to abide in our ſight, and ſo farre from louing the body of ſin, that wee ſhould hate the garments which are ſpotted with it. For if we giue ſinne an inch, it will take an ell; it knoweth better how not to begin, than hauing begunne to make an end; and with more eaſe may we keep it from entring into the outmoſt ſuburbs of our ſoules, than hauing come thus farre, to ſtay it from going on into the very heart of the City. At the firſt perhaps it will ſeeme maidenly and modeſt, and not come in before it haue knocked at the doore of our conſcience, but if we giue way to it, and doe not ſhut it out with bolt and bar, it will quickly grow familiar and ruſh ſuddenly vpon vs without giuing vs any warning. To this purpoſe, one ſaith, That a man though otherwiſe wicked, before hee hath committed ſin, commeth more ſlowly

1. *Theſ.*5.22.
*Hieron in Eccleſ.*9.
*Iude.*21.23.
Chriſoſt. in mat. 4. Hom.6. T.2. c.799.

ſlowly to the worke of wickedneſſe; but when he hath done it, hee is afterwards more ready for euery ſinfull worke. Herein like vnto a beaſt which though hee be naturally ſauage, yet if he be not prouoked will not eaſily ſet vpon any; but hauing once killed a man or beaſt, and thereby gotten a taſte of his bloud, he is now ſo fleſhed, that no ſooner doth he ſee a man, but without any delay hee preſently fleeth vpon him. Let vs therefore take heed leſt wee taſte of ſin, for though we haue now no great ſtomacke to it, yet as it fareth with vs in our corporall diet, ſo heere wee ſhall find, that one bit will draw on another, vntill at laſt we euen ſurfet of ſinne, and take more paines and griefe in getting it vp, than euer wee tooke pleaſure in ſwallowing it downe. It is of the nature of ſweet meats to our carnall appetite, which deluding and bewitching vs whileſt they pleaſe the pallet, doe make vs to eate too much before we euer thinke that we haue enough, and ſo become lothſomely bitter in the diſgeſtion, which were but too pleaſant in the eating. From which danger if we would be ſecure, our beſt way were not to taſte them, for much more eaſie is it to abſtaine altogether, than hauing eaten a little to reſtraine our carnall appetite from eating more; and a much ſurer courſe were it for our ſpirituall eſtate, to haue no dealing with ſinne, than to breake off the bargaine when as we haue receiued the leaſt earneſt. Exhort one another daily (ſaith the Apoſtle) while it is called to day, leſt any of you bee hardened through the deceitfulneſſe of ſinne. Implying that the fleſh is a wily enemy, which if it be not denied in the very firſt motions, will more and more grate vpon vs, vntill by often acts it bring vs to a cuſtome of ſinning, and allure vs to proceed from one degree to another, till at laſt wee grow to a habit of wickedneſſe, and haue our hearts ſo hardned, and our conſciences ſeared, that we are now fit inſtruments for all impiety.

Heb.3.13.

¶ Sect. 3. The longer we defer the fight the more difficult & doubtfull we make the victory.

If then we would get the victory ouer our ſinfull luſts let vs preuent them with our ſpeed, take them vnprouided, and ſet vpon them before they are aware; for ſo much the more difficult and doubtfull wee make the conqueſt, by how much we are more ſlacke & ſlow in ſetting vpon our enemies. If we take them as they lie ſcattered, and ſingle out our fleſhly luſts by one & one as they appeare vnto vs, we ſhall eaſily ouercome; but if we giue them time to muſter their forces, and to march againſt vs in huge multitudes, like a well ordred Army, we ſhall neuer be able to withſtand their power. It is our beſt courſe here to vſe Pharaoh his policie (not fearing in this kind the cenſure of tyranny and cruelty) deſigning our fleſhly luſts to be drowned in the waters of repentance, as ſoone as they are borne, if wee cannot hinder them from being conceiued; for otherwiſe they will increaſe vpon vs and grow too ſtrong for the natiue ſubjects of the ſpirituall Kingdome. If wee would imitate wiſe Warriours wee muſt labour to keepe theſe mighty enemies from ſetting foot in our Country, or from ſhooting an Arrow or Bullet into our Citie; But if at vnawares they haue approached, planted their Ordinance and made a breach in our wals, we muſt either countermure againſt them, or blow them vp when they make their aſſault, or ſtand in the breach and fight valiantly againſt them; for more eaſily ſhall we repel and keepe them from entrance, than expell and driue them out when as they are entered; with leſſe paines and danger ſhall we keepe them out of the gates or breach of the wall, than being entred from comming to the Market-place and making themſelues Maſters of the whole City. We muſt deſtroy ſinne in the firſt conception, and choake and ſmother corruption in the heart, and as it were, in the wombe, not ſuffering it to receiue birth and breath in our words and actions; that ſo that which bred it may alſo entombe it; for if we ſuffer it to liue, it will receiue growth and ſtrength to our perdition, ſeeing (as the Apoſtle telleth vs) When luſt hath conceiued, it bringeth forth ſinne, and ſinne when it is finiſhed, bringeth forth death. So that our ſinfull luſts are a viperous brood, which if we let liue after they are conceiued, will eat out the belly in which they are bred. They are of the Cockatrices kinde, which muſt bee cruſhed in the ſhell, ſeeing if wee ſpare them till they be hatched their very ſight will bee fatall vnto vs. At leaſt-wiſe if through our negligence they haue had their birth and being, yet let vs not ſuffer them to come to their growth and ſtrength, leſt prouing to hard for vs, we be forced to giue them lodging, becauſe wee want power to thruſt them out of doores. And therefore let vs daſh this Babyloniſh brood againſt the ſtones, whileſt yet being in their ſwath-clouts they are vnable to make reſiſtance. Let vs obſerue well (ſaith Auguſtine) the Serpents head, that we may giue it mortall wounds, or keepe it from entring and gliding into our hearts; and what is the head of the Serpent, but the firſt ſuggeſtion and temptation vnto ſinne? we muſt deale with the fleſh, as Cyprian would haue vs to deale with the Deuill, ſeeing it is his child and much reſembleth the wicked father. Withſtand (ſaith he) the Deuils firſt alluring ſugeſtions, neither let vs cheriſh the Snake, leaſt within a while it grow to a Serpent. The motion of ſinne is but too too naturall, and therefore it is our beſt courſe to ſtop it at the firſt, when as it is but ſlow and weake, for the longer it laſteth, the more it increaſeth in ſtrength and violence. It is an exorbitant and vnlimited euill which admitteth of no bounds, if wee let it haue full liberty to inlarge it ſelfe; and (like Elias

Pro.4.23.

Iames 1.15.

Caput Serpentis obſerua; quod eſt caput Serpentis? prima peccati ſuggeſtio, Aug. in Pſal.103.T.8.cap.1212.

Diaboli primis titillationibus obuiandum eſt, nec coluber foueri debet donec in Serpentem formetur, Cyprian, de ieiunio.

Cloud) though at firſt it ſeeme ſo ſmall, that it can ſcarſly be diſcerned, it will extend it ſelfe to ſuch a largeneſſe, that it will hide from vs all our heauenly hopes, & let vs haue no warmth nor comfort by the light of Gods countenance.

§. Sect.4. That if we doe not withſtand the firſt aſſaults of the fleſh wee are not ſo wiſe as worldlings in their generations.

O then that we were as wiſe for our ſoules, as we are wiſe in our generation about the things of the earth. For who hauing fire caſt into his boſome, will not as ſoone as hee diſcerneth it, preſently caſt it out? Who is not ready with all ſpeed to quench it, when as it firſt taketh hold of his houſe? And what folly and madneſſe would we thinke it, if any ſhould let it alone becauſe the fire is but new begun, ſuppoſing that it may more conueniently be quenched when it is increaſed to a great flame? Wee cauſe our garments to be mended when the rent is but ſmall, becauſe it will then bee both beſt and moſt eaſily done; whereas if wee let them alone, euery thing catcheth hold, and will by increaſing the rent ſpoyle the veſture. If the waters haue made a breach in the bankes, wee thinke it our wiſdome preſently to mend and make it vp, and if we ſpie a leake in our ſhip we preſently ſtop it, and doe not ſtay till it be ready to ſinke with water. And why ſhould wee then ſuffer our ſinfull luſts to burne in our breſts, and not rather caſt out this helliſh wild-fire as ſoone as we perceiue it hath inflamed vs? Why ſhould wee not be as carefull for our ſoules, as we are for our houſes, and with all ſpeed extinguiſh the flames of carnall concupiſcence, as ſoone as they are kindled, when as wee may doe it with more eaſe and farre greater ſafety and ſecurity. The leaſt ſparke (ſaith one) groweth in time to a great flame; and oftentimes the ſeed of the Viper hath deſtroyed a man. And therefore knowing this; let vs flee and ſhunne the leaſt fault, ſeeing though it be ſmall, yet it will become greater if we ſuffer it to goe on. A ſmall errour and digreſſion in the beginning of the way, becommeth great in the end of the journey; and whereas when wee begin to erre out of the right path into ſome by-way, we might recouer ſoone our errour by returning backe or croſſing ouer to the way whence wee ſo lately digreſſed; if wee hold on, the longer we trauel (like the lines in the Circumference drawne from the Centre) the further we ſhall be from the right end of our journey; and ſo our errour will not be amended without great trauell and labour. O why doe wee not then preſently mend the rents, which ſins newly committed haue made in our conſciences, becauſe being thus torne and tottred, new ſins will more eaſily catch hold, and make them farre worſe than they were at the firſt? Why ſhould not wee make vp the breach when it firſt appeareth, but ſuffer it ſtill to be more & more increaſed, vntil we be ouer-flowed and drowned with a floud of wickedneſſe? And why ſhould we not preſently ſtop the leakes which ſin hath made in the ſhip of our ſoules, but put it off to the time of ſickneſſe and death, when as being full of all impiety we are ready to ſinke into the gulfe of Hell? Excellently ſpeaketh Auguſtine to this purpoſe; As ſoone (ſaith hee) as any ſins haue ſtolne vpon and ſurprized vs, let vs preſently take care to cure the wounds of our ſoules by applying the medicine of vnfained repentance. The ſtitching Needle and Playſter are fruitfully applyed to wounds whileſt they are yet warme, and the ſore is ſoone healed which is not ſuffered to feſter and rancle with negligent handling. And therefore as oft as wee offend, let our ſinnes find vs Iudges and not Patrons, Accuſers and not Defenders. Doe thou acknowledge and God will forgiue; and how ſhall God vouchſafe to forgiue, if wee will not vouchſafe to acknowledge that wee haue offended him? For the good of our bodies wee are carefull to obſerue the rules of Phyſick, meeting and preuenting approching diſeaſes before they ſeize vpon vs, becauſe health is with more eaſe and ſafety preſerued whileſt we haue it, than recouered when it is loſt, or if we haue neglected this, yet wee are ready to withſtand the beginnings of our diſeaſes by the vſe of all good meanes, becauſe we know that the medicine is prepared too late, when as the ſickneſſe hath taken faſt hold, and is increaſed to its full ſtrength. Let vs then be as wiſe for our ſoules: for what is ſinne but a ſpirituall ſickneſſe which cauſeth and bringeth euerlaſting death? And therefore our beſt courſe is to preuent it; and the next, quickly to cure and remoue it. It is the Gangrene of the ſoule, which is cut off with little danger when it firſt tainteth, and but ſlightly toucheth a member; but if it be let alone, it will creepe and ſpread it ſelfe ouer one part after another, vntill at laſt it grow deſperate and incurable. It is a ſpirituall plague which firſt inſenſibly infecteth the ayre, and by it the ſpirits, and ſo ſpreadeth ouer the whole body till it come to the heart; and therefore here if euer the Phyſicians rule is good to be obſerued, Citò, longè, tardè, for wee cannot flee from it too ſpeedily, nor goe too farre from it, and it will be much too ſoone and exceeding dangerous, if wee doe at any time returne vnto it. Sinne is that euill ſeed which the wicked one ſoweth in our hearts, which if it be watered and cheriſhed, will inſenſibly grow firſt to a blade, and then to an eare, and ſo bring forth a plentifull harueſt of all manner of wickedneſſe; and therefore our beſt courſe is to preuent the caſting of it into the ground, or if it be ſowed, quickly to weed and pull it vp by the roots. It is a plant of the Deuils planting, which is eaſily plucked vp when it is new ſet, but if wee let it grow till it be deeply rooted, wee ſhall not ſtocke

Vel exigua ſcintilla flammam ingentem accendit, & hominem ſæpenumerò vipera ſemen perdidit, &c. Nazian. in ſent.

Aug. de tempore ſerm.88. Tom. 10. cap.785.

Malum naſcens facilimè curatur, Cicero de Offic.

Vitia corporis non ſunt ſinenda coaleſcere; ſed in exordijs ſtatim enecanda ſunt, &c. Hillarius enarrat. in Pſal. 36. pag. 594.

ſtocke it vp without great difficulty, nor cut it downe when it is growne to a great Tree, without many blowes and much labour. To which purpoſe one ſaith, That wee muſt not ſuffer theſe fleſhly vices to grow and ſpring, but wee muſt preſently kill them in their firſt beginnings. For theſe luſts prooue dangerous when they are growne to their ſtrength, and being come to ripeneſſe they are hardly killed. And it is much more eaſie to pull them vp when they firſt ſpring, to cut them downe when they are yong, and to writhe them which way we will when they are tender and flexible. Carnall corruption is beſt killed in the root, and whileſt yet it remayneth hidden in the heart, and hath not brought forth fruit in our words and actions; the which is beſt done when as we often, yea, continually lop this tree of vnrighteouſneſſe, and as much as in vs lieth, neuer ſuffer it to beare any fruit. For as the ſpirit is ſooneſt quenched when as we ſmother the flames thereof in the duties of holineſſe and righteouſneſſe by reſtraining them from hauing any vent; And as this tree of Gods planting is ſoone killed in the root, if we will not ſuffer it to bring forth fruit in its due time and ſeaſon; and contrariwiſe, if we let it haue a free paſſage, increaſeth to a great flame, and the more fruit it beareth, the more liuely and ſtrong it waxeth; the many acts of holineſſe and righteouſneſſe increaſing and ſtrengthening the habits of theſe graces in vs: ſo fareth it alſo with our carnall corruption, the more vent we giue theſe fiery luſts in our words & actions, the more hotly they rage and burne, and the onely way to extinguiſh and quench them, is by ſtopping the vent and returning vpon them their owne flame and ſmoke. The more fruit of wickedneſſe theſe trees of vnrighteouſnes beare, the more they may beare, and the meanes to ſtrengthen theſe luſts, is to fulfill them. For habits are ſtrengthened and intended when as they are exerciſed in their acts: and euery actuall ſinne addeth to our habituall corruption; leauing behind it a blot and ſtaine in our ſoules, whereby they are made more apt and actiue to the committing of more wickedneſſe.

§. Sect. 5. How dangerous it is to giue way to the firſt motions vnto ſinne ſhewed by examples.

And this will manifeſtly appeare by examples in the Scriptures. Becauſe Caine did not repent of his prophaneſſe and wicked enuy, towards his Brother hee proceedeth to horrible murther. Becauſe Salomon gaue way to the exceſſiue vſe of lawfull pleaſures, they brought him vnto thoſe that were vnlawfull, and not repenting of them, hee is drawne by carnall whoredome with ſtrange Women to ſpirituall Whoredome with ſtrange Gods. So Ionas not mortifying his priuy pride, which made him to reſpect his owne credit more than Gods glory, is moued thereby to flat diſobedience and open rebellion, and giuing way to his impatiency, hee falleth to direct chiding with God, and that after he had ſo largely taſted of his mercy & goodneſſe in his maruellous deliuerance. Thus Sampſon not quenching at the firſt his fiery luſts, is moued by them to marry with the enemy of God and the Church, contrary to his Commandement. And holy Dauid giuing place to ſloth, is drawne firſt to gaze on a ſtrange Woman, then to luſt, then to commit the act of adultery, and not ſeaſonably repenting of this ſin, to adde vnto it one more haynous, the murther of his faithfull ſeruant. Thus Herod not repenting of his inceſt, cutteth off Iohn the Baptiſt his head; and Iudas nouriſhing his couetouſnes, groweth diſcontented with Chriſts ſeruice, becauſe it yeelded no more profit, and then betrayeth and ſelleth his Lord and Maſter for thirty pieces of ſiluer, who could not bee valued with many Worlds. And therefore let vs by theſe mens harmes learne wiſdome, and labour to mortifie our corruptions and fleſhly luſts in their firſt and weakeſt degrees, ſeeing if out of our ſecurity we neglect this duty, they will gather more and more ſtrength, and (like carrion Crowes) hauing ſeized vpon vs, will call others to ioyne with them, vntill at laſt they grow ſo ſtrong and numerous, that we ſhall be vtterly vnable to withſtand or ouercome them.

CHAP. XXIIII.

Of thee other Rules to be obſerued for the ſubduing of the fleſh.

§. Sect. 1. We muſt think no ſin ſo ſmall as that we may willingly commit it, to which end conſider firſt that by the leaſt ſin Gods Law is tranſgreſſed.

THe fift Rule to be obſerued of thoſe who deſire to reſiſt and ſubdue the fleſh is, that we do not eſteeme any ſinne ſo ſmall and veniall, as that we may ſafely giue it entertainment, & continue in it without repentance. But contrariwiſe that wee judge our ſelues, euen for the leaſt ſinnes, and flee from them with ſo much the more diligence, by how much we are naturally more apt to neglect them as ſlight and of no great importance. For as one ſaith, It is not the leaſt thing in mans life to neglect ſuch things as ſeeme to be leaſt; and I know not concerning what faults wee may be ſecure, ſeeing we muſt be iudged euen for ſins of ignorance, and giue an account of our idle words and thoughts. And euen the Heathen Oratour could ſay, That we are with greater diligence to auoid thoſe vices which ſeeme ſo ſmall, that they are not knowne of the moſt to be faults. To this end let vs conſider, that euen by the leaſt ſins Gods Law is tranſgreſſed, his Iuſtice violated, and his wrath prouoked; and wee muſt not eſteeme that to be ſmall which doth offend his infinite Maieſty. To this purpoſe Hierome ſaith well; I do not know how we can eſteeme that a light Non eſt minimum in vita hominum negligere minima, &c. Euſeb. Emiſſen. ad Monach Hom. 5.

Cic. 1. de Offic.

Hieron. de ratione piè viuendi ad Celantiam

Ne conſideres quod parua ſint peccata, ſed quod magnus ſit Deus cui diſplicent.

Nullum enim peccatum adeò paruum, quod non creſcat neglectum. Non enim conſiderandum quid fecerit, ſed quem offenderit Aug. de Penitent. vera & falſa, cap.8, T.4. Col.1042.

Aug. de contrit. cordis, cap.4. T.9 Col.837.

ſin, which is committed in contempt of God. And hee is moſt wiſe who doth not ſo much conſider what is commanded, as who he is that hath commanded it, nor the extent and quantitie of the gouernment, as the dignitie of him that gouerneth. And againe; Doe not conſider the ſmalneſſe of thy ſins, but the greatnes of thy God who is diſpleaſed with them. So Auguſtine: There is no ſin ſo litle which being neglected doth not increaſe, and wee muſt not conſider what we haue done, but how great he is whom we haue offended. Let vs conſider further that the eternall Sonne of God ſuffered the bitter death of the Croſſe, as well for the leaſt, as the greateſt ſins; and can we thinke any ſin ſmall which could not otherwiſe be purged away, but by the precious bloud of our Sauiour Chriſt? Perhaps (ſaith Auſtine) Thou eſteemeſt ſome ſin to be but ſmall; but (alas) doth not euery ſin by preuarication diſhonour the perſon of our Lord: how dare then a ſinner call any ſin ſmall: when as the Sonne of God gaue his life for it, aboue which nothing in the World can be eſteemed?

§. Sect.2.
The great euils which come of the leaſt ſins.

Secondly, Let vs conſider the great euils which come of the leaſt ſins; for firſt euen our ſmalleſt ſins defile our perſons, and leaue ſuch blots and ſtains behind them, as make vs vgly and loathſome in the ſight of God, eſpecially when as we giue vnto them voluntary entertainment, and willingly liue in them againſt knowledge and conſcience. Now how ill doth it become vs, who are the Temples of the Holy Ghoſt to haue in vs ſuch ſluttiſh corners, and noiſome filth as is odious & abhominable to this bleſſed gueſt? How ill beſeemeth it vs who are eſpouſed vnto Chriſt, to come into his preſence ſpotted and blemiſhed with loathſome defilements? Wee will not (as neere as we can) ſuffer our faces to be ſprinkled with the leaſt ſpecks of ſtinking channell dirt, nor to haue our apparell beſpotted with noyſome excrements; and ſhall we make more eſteeme of our apparell than of our perſons, and take more care for our corruptible faces, than for our immortall ſoules, to preſent them to our Bridegroome without ſpot or wrinkle, holy and vnblameable, that he may preſent vs ſuch to his heauenly Father? Againe, the leaſt ſinnes doe wound, and being often committed doe ſeare the conſcience, euen as ſlight labours being continuall, doe brawne and bring an hard thicke skin vpon the hands, many little drops doe dint the hardeſt ſtone, and many ſmall blowes cut downe the ſtrongeſt Oake; and as they ſeare the conſcience, ſo they harden the forehead, make the countenance to become impudent, and take away all ſhamefaſtneſſe and bluſhing. According to that of Chryſoſtome; by often ſinning the ſoule is made impudent; for euery ſin when it is committed, and is come to its perfection, doth leaue behind it a poyſon in the ſoule. And ſo being fleſhed in wickedneſſe, wee are made more bold to venter vpon the committing of thoſe which are more haynous: For as one ſaith, When we bend from the right courſe by lighter faults, we afterwards feare not to commit thoſe which are greater, vſe and cuſtome ſmoothing the way that leadeth vnto it. And the Heathen Satyriſt could ſay; Who hath made an end of ſinning, when as they haue giuen ouer their bluſhing? Or whom haſt thou obſerued of theſe men to reſt contented with one crime? Furthermore, if we would know how much euen thoſe ſinnes which in the World, and according to the judgement of the fleſh are eſteemed ſmall, doe prouoke the Lords wrath againſt vs, wee may eaſily diſcerne it by thoſe ſeuere and grieuous puniſhments which hee hath inflicted on offenders in this kind. Nadab and Abihu, becauſe they did offer ſtrange fire, in ſtead of that which was continually to haue beene preſerued in the Temple, were preſently deſtroyed with fire ſent from God. Becauſe Vzzah put out his hand to ſtay the Arke in the Cart, which he with the reſt of his Brethren ſhold haue carried vpon his ſhoulders, was ſmitten with preſent death. Becauſe Achan tooke of the ſpoile of his enemies a Babyloniſh garment, a wedge of gold, and two hundred ſhekels of ſiluer, which in it ſelfe had beene lawfull enough, had not God forbidden it, diuers of the people were ſlaine with the Sword of their Enemies, and he with all his, were ſtoned to death and burnt with fire. Becauſe a man in contempt of Gods Commandement gathered ſticks on the Sabbath Day, hee likewiſe by expreſſe order from God was put to death. Becauſe Ananias and Saphira in the hypocriſie of their hearts, kept backe part of the price of their owne poſſeſſions, after it was dedicated to the common vſe of the Church, they both died for it in a fearefull manner. But aboue all, moſt dreadfull and terrible is the example of our firſt Parents, who by the eating of the forbidden fruit (a ſinne very light and ſmall in the eſtimate of worldly men, although in truth it were not ſo, all circumſtances being rightly conſidered) brought death, the curſe, depriuation of Gods Image and their owne happineſſe, all the miſeries and puniſhments of this life, and eternall condemnation in the World to come. So that no ſmall euils and miſchiefes doe come of thoſe which ſeeme to the World but ſmall ſins; but although our ſins when they are repented of become ſmall, veniall and nothing through Gods infinite mercy, yet they are made great vnto ſinners through their negligence and impenitencie. What lighter offence, and lightlier eſteemed, than to be vnaduiſedly angry with our Brother, and in our heate to call him Racha and Foole, and yet this alone as our Sauiour teacheth vs will indanger vs to judgement, and

our

Chryſoſt. in Act 19. Homil.42. T.3. col.716.

Cum per leuia delicta deflectimus, vſu cuncta leuigante, non timemus poſtea grauiora committere, Greg. in Moral. lib.10 cap.14.

Nam quis peccandi finem poſuit ſibi, quando recepit eiectum ſemel attrita de fronte ruborem? quiſnam hominũ eſt, quem tu contentum videris vno flagitio? Iuvenal Satyr. 13. in fine.

*Leuit.*10.1,2.

2.*Sam.*6,6.

*Ioſu.*7.

*Numb.*15.32.

Acts 5.

Hæc peccata etſi parua ſint per miſericordiam, fiunt magna peccatoribus negligentiâ, Aug. de pœnit. vera & falſa, cap.8.T.4. Col.1042.

*Math.*5.22.

our bodies and ſoules to be caſt into Hell? What ſeemeth to the judgement of fleſh and bloud more ſlight and veniall than to vtter now and then ſome idle words? and yet euen of theſe we ſhall giue an account at the Day of Iudgement; and thoſe that are Accountants are ſure to be caſt into the priſon of vtter darkneſſe, if our Sauiour Chriſt who hath fore-warned vs of it, doe not himſelfe diſcharge vs by paying our reckoning. If then (as Auguſtine ſaith well) it ſeeme a ſmall & little thing vnto thee to call thy brother foole; yet let the fire of Hell ſeeme great vnto thee. If thou contemneſt the leaſt ſinne, yet be affrighted from it by the greatneſſe of the puniſhment.

*Mat.*12.36.

Si paruum tibi videtur aut modicum fratri dicere, fatue, vel gehenna ignis videatur tibi magna, &c. Auguſt. in Pſal. 129. Tom. 8. Col. 1507.

§. Sect. 3. Small ſinnes willingly entertained are no leſſe dangerous than the greateſt.

Thirdly, That wee may not giue way to the leaſt ſinnes let vs conſider, that if we willingly entertaine them, they will prooue no leſſe dangerous than the greateſt, becauſe they are the continuall errours of our liues which are much more often committed than haynous offences, and therefore what they want in waight they haue in number. Now conſider, that of many ſmall graines of corne is made a great heape, that the greateſt floods which ouer-flow the Countrey come of the little drops of raine; that the richeſt treaſures are made by the multiplying and gathering together many little pieces of gold and ſiluer; and that the talleſt ſhip may be ſunke by the waight of the ſmalleſt ſands. Excellently ſpeaketh Auguſtine to this purpoſe. Thy treaſure ſhall be found (ſaith he) in the day of wrath; thou diddeſt lay it vp daily by little and little, but afterwards thou ſhalt find a maſſe; thou diddeſt put it into thy treaſury by ſmall pieces, but thou ſhalt finde an heape. Doe not looke vpon thy daily ſins as being ſmall: For great riuers are filled with ſmall drops. And againe: But thou wilt ſay, that thy ſinnes are ſo ſmall, that this life cannot be without ſuch. Why, doe but gather the leaſt things together, and they will make a great heape. For graines of Corne are but ſmall; and yet they make a maſſe; & drops are ſmall and yet they fill riuers, and carry downe the ſtreame things of great waight. And therefore deſpiſe not ſmall ſins, for though thou doeſt but lightly eſteeme them whileſt thou doeſt waigh them, yet at leaſt feare, when thou beginneſt to number them. It is true that hainous ſins are more terrible, becauſe they waſte and deſtroy the conſcience at once, and caſt men into Hell with headlong fury; but little ſinnes are no leſſe dangerous if they be not repented of, ſeeing they cauſe a conſumption of piety, and bring men by degrees to eternall condemnation. By them the Deuill (as it were) with cables and yron chaines draweth men to Hell: by theſe as with cartropes, which though they be not ſo ſtrong as the other, yet are they of ſtrength ſufficient, if they be not cut and broken off by vnfained repentauce. They (as Auguſtine compareth them) are like vnto ſauage beaſts which deuoure vs at one bit, or like Ionas his Whale which ſwallowed him vp at once; theſe are like thoſe little vermine which with their multitude plagued Pharaoh and his people, and by little and little deuoured proud Herod and Antiochus. But what ſpeake I of multitudes and heapes of theſe ſins, ſeeing the leaſt of them vnrepented of, is ſufficient to condemne vs, eſpecially when being neglected it is often committed. For as one little chinke in a ſhip if it be not ſtopped, will in time let in water enough to ſinke it, as well as a great leake, or that ſtrange ſpout ſpoken on by Trauellers, which from on high falleth downe into it like a great Riuer: ſo will theſe little ſins drown vs in perdition as well as the greateſt, if wee careleſly commit them, and ſecurely continue in them. A Ship (ſaith Auguſtine) cannot be ſo cloſe built and well pitched, but that betweene the ribs and ioynts it will let in ſome ſmall quantity of water; and if Mariners ſhould neglect it becauſe it comes in by little at once, and not labour euery day to empty it out by the pumpe, it would as well indanger it as the greateſt floods and waues which ouer-flow and daſh into it, and ſo if we doe not take notice of our leſſer ſinnes, which are daily committed, to caſt them out of our ſoules by vnfained repentance, they will make vs ſinke into a ſea of deſtruction.

Aug. in Pſal. 93. *T.*8. Col. 1047.

Aug. in Pſal. 129 Ne contemne peccata parua: etſi parui facias dum ea ponderas, time ſaltem quando annumeras.

Aug. de diuerſis, ſerm. 34. T. 10. Col. 1646.

Hoc facit ſentina neglecta quod facit fluctus irruens, paulatim per ſentinam intrat, ſed diu intrando, & non exhauriendo mergit nauem, &c. Aug. in Ioan. 5. tract 12. T. 9. c. 113.

§. Sect. 4. That auoiding ſmall ſins is a notable means to preſerue vs from greater.

Fourthly, Let vs conſider that if wee be carefull to flie the leaſt ſins, it will be a notable meanes to preſerue vs from falling into thoſe which are greater. For example, he that will giue no place to the firſt motions of couetouſneſſe, he is ſafe from vſury and bribery, extorſion and oppreſſion, theft and robberies. Hee that keepeth his tongue from ſpeaking any thing irreuerently of God, is hereby eaſily preſerued from curſing and blaſpheming; and hee that maketh conſcience of vain ſwearing, is in no danger of perjury and falſe ſwearing; hee that keepeth his eyes vnder couenant, that he doth not ſuffer them to looke wantonly on a Maide, is not ſubject to the perill of vnlawfull luſting, and much leſſe of committing actually whoredome and vncleanneſſe. It is a good caution (ſaith Hierome) in auoiding ſin, to take heed of the leaſt, as though they were the greateſt, for ſo much the more eaſily ſhall wee abſtaine from any offence, by how much the more wee are affraid of committing it. Neither doth a man eaſily proceed to the greater, who is affraid of doing the leſſe. Where as if wee ordinarily ſwallow ſmaller ſins, it makes our throates wider to let downe thoſe that are great, and if we once begin to go downe the Ladder of ſinne, one ſtep will bring vs to the next, vntill wee come to the bottome of wickedneſſe; according to that of the ſonne of Syrach; He that contemneth ſmall things, ſhall fall by little and little.

Satis prodeſſe ad cautionem dicimus etiam minima pro maximis cauere, &c. Hieron. ad Celantiam de inſtit. matriſſam.

Eccluſ.19.1.

§. Sect.5. That euen the leaſt ſinnes are the poyſon of the ſoule and the liuery of Sathan.

Fiftly, Let vs call to minde that ſin is that deadly poyſon which Sathan the great Red Dragon caſteth out of his mouth, and who would drinke that which he hath diſgorged out of his venemous ſtomacke? who would be allured to ſwallow downe theſe poyſons which are ſo mortall becauſe they are delightfull to our carnall appetite? Let vs conſider, that ſin is the liuery of Sathan, which who ſo willingly weare, they doe acknowledge his ſoueraignty and their owne ſeruitude; the which is not onely true of haynous crimes, but euen of the ſmalleſt ſinnes, which (like a Badge vpon the ſleeue) though they be ſmall in quantity, are ſufficient, if we liue in them without repentance, to put a plaine difference betweene the Seruants of God and the ſeruants of Sathan, although they goe in the like Liuery of an outward profeſſion. And although thoſe who are moſt perfectly ſanctified haue ſtill their imperfections and frailties, their ſlips and fals, yet to like and liue in the leaſt ſinnes againſt knowledge and conſcience, and to commit them freely with full conſent of will, is an euident ſigne that we are not come out of the Deuils bondage. For as if the Bird be but catched by one foot or toe in the ſnare, it is as euident a ſigne that ſhee is wholy in the power of the Fowler, as if her whole body were couered with his Net: ſo if the Deuill that ſubtle Fowler haue ſurely taken hold of vs in any part with the ſnares of ſinnes, hee keepeth vs as ſurely in his cruell bondage, as thoſe that are guilty of many crimes; and therefore the Apoſtle Iohn telleth vs, without any exception of few or ſmall ſins, or limitation vnto thoſe which are many in number or haynous in quality, that Hee who committeth ſinne is of the Deuill, and that Whoſoeuer is borne of God doth not commit ſinne (willingly yeelding vnto it as a ſlaue with full conſent of will, and liuing in it with pleaſure and delight) becauſe his ſeed remayneth in him, and he cannot ſin, becauſe he is borne of God.

1.Iohn 3.8.9.

§. Sect.6. That enemies prooue moſt dangerous when they are moſt deſpiſed.

Sixtly, Let vs not neglect the leaſt luſts of our ſinfull fleſh, nor willingly giue place vnto any ſinne, becauſe we eſteeme it ſmall, becauſe nothing more increaſeth the danger of our Conflict, nor maketh the iſſue more doubtfull and hazardous, than when wee deſpiſe theſe Enemies, becauſe of their ſuppoſed weakneſſe. For hereby we are brought to neglect our watch, to lay aſide our Armour and Weapons, and to fal into the dead ſlumber of carnall ſecurity; and what enemy is ſo weak and contemptible, that is not able to ouercome, and to cut the throat of the ſtrongeſt, when he findeth him in a deep ſleepe, diſarmed, vnguarded, and ſuſpecting no danger? And therefore (as Chryſoſtome exhorteth vs) When wee haue ſinned a little, or haue beene benummed with ſloth in the performance of ſome good duties, let vs not deſpiſe theſe ſinnes as being but ſmall, becauſe being neglected they will ſpeedily become great; like a garment that is a little rent, which if it be neglected will bee torne to the bottome; and the roofe vntyled, which if it bee not amended, cauſeth the whole building to rot and the houſe to fall. And therefore reuoluing this in our minds, let vs not countenance any ſinne as being ſmall, leſt it be vnto vs an occaſion of falling into greater.

Chryſoſt. in 1. Iohn 3. Hom.8. Tom.4.c.387.

Nullum peccatum tam paruum eſt quod contemptum non fiat magnum, Auguſt.

§. Sect.7. That if we doe not hate ſmall ſins as well as great, we hate none with Chriſtian hatred.

Finally, Let vs conſider that if wee doe not hate all ſins, ſmall and great, wee doe not hate any with Chriſtian hatred, for they that abhorre ſin truly and ſpiritually, doe it on theſe grounds. Firſt, becauſe it hath the Deuils ſtampe and ſuperſcription vpon it, who is Gods and our greateſt Enemy, and his image and title is on all his Coine, vpon his Peny as well as his Shilling, his ſmalleſt ſinnes as well as on thoſe which are of a larger ſize: and therefore with them that hate ſinne as ſinne, and the Deuils preſſe-money which hee giueth to his Seruants and Souldiers, his leaſt Coines are no more currant than the greateſt, but all are cried down and rejected as baſe and of no value, both for the mettall and alſo the Maſters ſake. Secondly, they who purſue ſinne with a Chriſtian hatred doe therefore hate it, becauſe they loue and feare God, and would not doe any thing which might diſpleaſe him; therefore they abhorre and deteſt it becauſe it is ſo odious and abhominable in his ſight, and ſo oppoſite to his Law and contrary to his nature. Now they who truely hate any ſin vpon theſe grounds, they will hate euery ſin, and in all degrees according to this meaſure and portion as it is more or leſſe odious in the ſight of God; and though they doe not equally hate all, becauſe there is an inequality amongſt them, yet are they not in loue with any, nor can find in their hearts to giue the leaſt ſinnes willing entertainment. And therefore thoſe who abſtaine from haynous crimes, and make no conſcience of liuing in ſuch ſins as they eſteeme but ſmall, they doe it not out of their loue and filiall feare of God, which would make ſinnes of all ſorts odious vnto them, but either for feare of worldly ſhame or puniſhment, or out of a ſeruile feare of Gods iudgements, hell and condemnation, or that they may more quietly ſleepe in their carnall ſecurity without any trouble of minde or torment of conſcience, which they could not doe, if they were awakened and terrified with the guilt of haynous ſinnes and outragious crimes.

§. Sect.8. The ſixt rule

The ſixth rule to be obſerued for the reſiſting and ſubduing of the fleſh, is that as we is that wee muſt neglect no ſinne, as though wee were in no danger of falling into it.

we are not ſecurely to neglect any ſinnes, though we ſeeme neuer ſo farre off from falling into them (becauſe wee haue in vs the ſeedes of all ſinne, and neede nothing to the committing of them, but that God ſhould giue vs ouer to our owne ſtrength and to be tryed with Sathans temptations; In which regard we are to worke out our ſaluation with feare and trembling, and when we thinke wee ſtand to take heede of falling) ſo that we bend onr chiefe ſtudy for the mortifying of thoſe fleſhly luſts which are ſtrongeſt in vs, and endeauour moſt earneſtly to withſtand and ouercome thoſe enemies which haue moſt preuailed againſt vs; and that wee keepe the narroweſt watch, and place the ſtrongeſt guard vpon that part of the Citie of our ſoules, where the wall hath beene moſt battred, and the enemy hath giuen the ſtrongeſt aſſaults. For when they haue preuailed, there they are moſt likely to attempt againe, and when theſe vnruly beaſts haue broken downe the hedge and made a gap, there they will againe ſeeke to enter and come ouer euen after the paſſage is ſtopped; and thoſe ſinnes which haue formerly ouercome vs, will be ready in confidence of their victory to make new aſſaults, and are likely againe to giue vs the foyle, vnleſſe we keepe a more diligent watch, ſtand ſtoutly vpon our guard, and be well armed and furniſhed with ſpiritual weapons and munition. Euen nature teacheth vs to be more wiſe and prouident in auoyding thoſe euils which in our owne feeling and experience haue beene moſt harmefull, and (as we ſay) the burnt child will euer after dread the fire. He that hath beene bitten with ſuertyſhip and hath had his goods attached and his perſon arreſted, and laide vp in priſon, will if he haue any wit afterwards take heed how he ſtriketh the hand and becommeth ſuertie for a ſtranger. He that hath beene notably couſened to his great loſſe and hindrance, will keepe a vigilant eye, vpon the couſener for the time to come, that he be not againe deceiued eſpecially by the ſame wiles; and he that hath gotten ſore fals by going in ſlippery places, will afterwards looke better to his footing, when he is to come backe in the ſame way. And therefore let grace teach vs the ſame vigilancy and wiſe prouidence in ſpirituall things, and cauſe vs to double our care in withſtanding thoſe ſinnes wherewith wee haue beene moſt often ſurprized, and bend our whole ſtrength and endeauour for the ſubduing and mortifying thoſe carnall corruptions and fleſhly luſts which are moſt ſtrong and raging in vs.

Phil.2.12.

1.Cor.10,12.

§. Sect.9. The ſeauenth rule is that we ſet no ſtint to our mortification,

The laſt rule is that we ſet vnto our ſelues no ſtint in mortifying & ſubduing our fleſhly luſts, but that wee labour from one degree to aſpire vnto another, vntill we attaine vnto perfection. Wee muſt not deale with theſe ſpirituall enemies as Ioaſh with the Aramites, contenting our ſelues with two or three victories ouer them, for then they will againe gather head and renewing their forces afreſh aſſault vs, but we muſt continually make warre againſt them, vntill we haue giuen them a finall ouerthrow. We muſt not deale with them, as the Iſraelites with the curſed Nations, ſuffering them quietly to dwell with vs, on condition that they will contribute ſomething to our pleaſure or profit, but wee muſt make warre againſt them according to Gods Commandement, and neuer make any peace or truce, vntill wee haue vtterly rooted them out; or at the beſt let vs deale with them as Ioſhuah with the Gibeonits, if they muſt needs dwell with vs, let vs hold them vnder as our ſlaues, and make them to become droyles and drudges ready to yeeld obedience to euery ſpirituall motion. Let vs not deale with our carnall luſts as Ahab and Saul with Benhadad and Agag, get the victory ouer them and ſuffer them to liue, leaſt in Gods juſt judgement our life be exchanged for theirs, and they kill vs, becauſe we killed not them. Neither let vs with Saul deſtroy the loweſt of the people, and the vileſt of theſe carnall cattell, reſeruing aliue the chiefe of our corruptions, and the fatteſt of our fleſhly luſts, whereby wee haue moſt gaine and aduantage, moſt pleaſure and delight. Let vs not bee like vnto Herod, who refrained from many ſinnes, but would not leaue his inceſtuous darling, or like vnto Iudas and Demas who hauing outwardly reformed themſelues of many ſinnes, did ſtill nouriſh their couetouſneſſe and loue of the World. For if when we caſt out Sathan and the Fleſh, wee ſuffer any of their ſpawne or ſinfull corruptions to remaine in vs, they will bee pledges and pawnes vnto vs of their returning, and when they come backe and bring many other wicked ſpirits and ſinfull corruptions with them, theſe retained and nouriſhed ſinnefull luſts, will like ſecret traytours open the doore of our hearts, and let them in, and then taking more ſtrong poſſeſſion of vs, our latter end will be worſe than our beginning.

2.King.13.18,

Mat.12.44.45,

§. Sect.10. Our mortification muſt extend it ſelfe to all ſinfull corruptions and to all times,

But our mortification muſt bee without ſtint or reſtraint, extending it ſelfe in reſpect of the object vnto all our luſts and not vnto ſome onely; in reſpect of the time alſo it muſt bee continuall euen to the very end of our liues, becauſe (as with Sampſon) our enemies will liue with vs euen vnto our death, and then with it wee ſhall deſtroy more of them than we haue done in the whole courſe of our liues; yea in truth then, and not before, ſhall wee deſtroy them all, ſo as for euer after they ſhall neuer bee able to aſſault vs or diſturbe our peace. And therefore in the meane time wee muſt neuer thinke that wee haue long enough fought againſt our fleſhly luſts, and that now wee may make a truce and take our eaſe, but we muſt continue fighting till we haue by death gotten a full and finall victory, and then ouercomming and continuing faithfull vnto death we ſhall receiue the crowne of life. Finally in reſpect of the degree wee muſt not content our ſelues to haue ouercome and mortified all our ſinnefull luſts in ſome ſmall meaſure, but wee muſt labour and ſtriue after perfection, driuing our enemies not onely out of the heart of our Citie but out of our ſuburbs alſo, and the vtmoſt borders and confines of our countrey. Wee muſt not ſuffer it to haue any footing either in the ſecret corners of our hearts by entertaining fleſhly luſts, or in our tongues, by vttering vaine, prophane and filthy ſpeaches, or in our hands by acting wicked, vnjuſt & diſhoneſt workes; but (as the Apoſtle exhorteth vs,) we muſt cleanſe our ſelues from all filthineſſe of the fleſh and Spirit, and perfect our holineſſe in the feare of God; and if we would approue our ſelues to be Gods children, wee muſt ſtriue after perfection, as our heauenly Father is perfect, and becauſe we cannot effect this great worke of our ſelues, we muſt deſire with the Apoſtle, that the God of peace will ſanctifie vs throughout, and that our whole Spirit, and ſoule, and body, may bee preſerued blameleſſe vnto the comming of our Lord Ieſus Chriſt. Yea wee are to deſire our Sauiour who hath giuen himſelfe for vs; That hee will ſanctifie and cleanſe vs with the waſhing of water by the word, that he may preſent vs vnto himſelfe a glorious people, not hauing ſpot or wrinkle or any ſuch thing, but that wee may bee holy and without blemiſh. In the meane time we muſt with Gods worke joyne our owne earneſt deſires and hartie endeauours to abound more and more, and to increaſe in the meaſure of our mortification, getting daily new victories ouer all our ſinnefull luſts. For hee that thinketh in this kind that he hath done enough, hath as yet done nothing at all as hee ought to doe, hee that is come to his ſtint, and meaneth there to take vp his ſtanding, is ready to turne backe and to relapſe into all his former wickedneſſe; and he that continueth not ſtill fighting, is neare vnto foyling, and being ouercome, to bee made a ſlaue to his ſinfull luſts. True grace is growing grace, and that which groweth not is falſe and counterfait; and they who euer made any progreſſe in the wayes of godlineſſe with vpright hearts and good conſciences, they will neuer ceaſe trauelling till they come to their journeyes end; neither, is it poſſible that wee ſhould in this way ſtand at a ſtay, but if wee goe not forward wee ſhall goe backward, if we doe not row continually againſt the tide of our corruptions, they will carry vs downe the ſtreame into the dead Sea and gulfe of perdition.

Apoc. 2.10.
2.Cor.7.1.
Mat. 5:48.
1.Theſ.5.23.
Eph.5.25.

CHAP. XXIIII.

Of the firſt meanes to ſtrengthen the Spirit, which is to auoide the meanes whereby it is weakned.

§. Sect. 1. That our ſins are the cheiſe meanes whereby the Spirit is weakened.

WEe haue ſhewed how neceſſary it is, if we would get the victory againſt our ſpirituall enemies and fleſhly luſts, that we ſhould firſt vſe our beſt endeauour to weaken them, and then ſet vpon them with all our forces: But this is not enough, but as we are to weaken and diſarme our enemy the fleſh; ſo on the other ſide we muſt with like earneſtneſſe and diligence, ſtrengthen and arme the Spirit, it being no leſſe neceſſary for the obtaining of victory, to nouriſh our friends, than to famiſh our enemies; and to furniſh them with all prouiſion, armour and munition, than to withdraw and keepe backe from the other all theſe warlike helpes. Although in truth in this ſpirituall warre both theſe concurre and meete in the ſame actions, for the famiſhing of the fleſh, is the nouriſhing of the Spirit, the weakning of the one, is the ſtrengthening of the other, and vvhileſt we diſarme and diſfurniſh our ſpirituall enemies of their prouiſion and munition, vvee furniſh our regenerate part with all neceſſaries. So Baſill ſaith: Looke how much thou detracteſt from the fleſh, and ſo much thou makeſt thy ſpirituall part to proſper and flouriſh in good health and liking. And therefore I ſhall bee the more briefe in this argument, howſoeuer I thinke it fit that ſomething ſhould bee added. And firſt we will conſider this point negatiuely, ſhewing that all meanes are to bee ſhunned whereby the Spirit is weakened and quenched; and then affirmatiuely, ſhewing that we are to vſe all the meanes whereby it may be cheared and ſtrengthened. Concerning the former. The cheiſe meanes whereby the Spirit is weakened and quenched are our ſinnes, which doe vexe and grieue the good Spirit of God dwelling in vs, and make him weary of his lodging and habitation. For no ſtinking filth can bee ſo noyſome vnto vs, as ſinne is vnto this holy gueſt, and therefore hee cannot indure to continue in our bodies and ſoules as his temples, if they be profaned and defiled with it. But aboue other ſinnes wee weaken the Spirit with ſinnes committed againſt knowledge and conſcience, wilfully, and preſumptuoſly: for ſuch ſinnes doe moſt oppoſitly croſſe and thwart the good motions of it, and doe as plainely contradict it, as if they ſhould ſay in plaine termes, though Quantum carni detrahes, tantum facies animam ſpirituali bona habitudine relucere. Baſil. de ieiunio. Con. 1.

Gen.6.3.
Amos 2.13.
Rom.1.
1.Theſ.5.19.
Eph.4.30.
Eſa.63.9.

we take notice of thy vvill, we will not doe it but the cleane contrary. With which kinde of obſtinate rebellion the Spirit is ſo wearied and tyred, that it will no longer contend with vs to bring vs vnto goodneſſe, but will leaue vs to our owne vile luſts, and a reprobate minde to goe on in ſinne with greedineſſe to our perdition. So the Lord profeſſeth that when the old World reſiſted the motions of his Spirit in the preaching of juſt Noah, it ſhould no longer contend with them, but ſeeing this pure Water of his Spirit, would not quench their fiery luſts, hee would quench them by other meanes, euen the vniuerſall flood which drowned the whole Earth. Thus hee complaineth, that hee was preſſed vnder their ſinnes as a cart is preſſed that is full of ſheaues; and therefore threatneth that he vvill preſſe them downe with his heauy judgements. And thus becauſe the Gentiles ſinned againſt the common gifts and illumination of the ſpirit, and ſo againſt knowledge and conſcience, therefore the Lord gaue them vp to their owne vile affections and to a reprobate mind, to commit with greedineſſe all manner of abhominable wickedneſſe. And therefore if we woud not haue the Spirit to be ſo weakened and wearied, that it will leaue, and forſake vs; wee muſt not (as the Apoſtle exhorteth vs) quench it, and the good motions thereof by continuing in thoſe ſinnes from which it diſſwadeth vs; nor by making his lodging loathſome with the noyſome filth of ſinne; grieue the good Spirit of God, whereby wee are ſealed vnto the day of redemption. To which end let vs conſider, that if we giue good entertainment to this holy gueſt, hee will ſup with vs and with his company make all our cheare comfortable, yea rather he will feaſt vs, and make vs a moſt pleaſant banquet of all ſpirituall delicacies; he will beare part with vs in all our griefes; and as the Prophet ſpeaketh, he will by ſympathy and compaſſion be afflicted in our afflictions. Yea hee will comfort vs in all our ſorrowes; and therefore let vs take heede of vexing him, for if grieuing our comforter we make him to leaue vs, who ſhall cheare and refreſh vs in all our miſeries?

§. Sect. 2.
Of ſome ſpeciall ſins wherby the ſpirit is moſt weakened.

But howſoeuer all ſins generally wound and weaken the Spirit, yet there are ſome ſpeciall ſinnes aboue the reſt which doe infeeble it, and quench all the good motions of it; the firſt whereof is ignorance and blindneſſe of minde, the which pulleth (at it were) out of the hand of the Spirit his chiefe weapon, the two edged ſword of Gods Word, whereby it defendeth it ſelfe, and and offendeth his ſpirituall enemies, and like a blacke foggie miſt dazeleth and blindeth the eyes of the vndeſtanding, ſo as it cannot diſcerne the ſleights and ſubtilties, the wiles and ſtrong deluſions of our ſpirituall enemies, nor on which ſide they ſtrike vs, nor how to ward off their blowes, nor withſtand the malice and fury of their tentations. The ſecond is infidelitie which diſableth the Spirit, whileſt it depriueth it of the chiefe comforts and encouragements whereby it is ſtrengthened againſt the aſſaults of the fleſh, namely Gods ſweet promiſes of grace in this life and glory in the life to come, to all thoſe who walke in the Spirit, and mortifie the fleſh with the luſts thereof. Yea it weakeneth and looſeneth the ſpirituall bond of our vnion with Chriſt, which is our faith, by which alone he is applyed, and ſo ſtoppeth and hindreth the influences of his graces, and the vertue and vigour, the iuice and ſap which from this roote of Ieſſe is deriued vnto vs, by which wee are ſtrengthened againſt the fleſh and enabled to withſtand all the aſſaults of our ſpirituall enemies. The third is impenitencie the which is moſt pernicious to the health and vigour of the Spirit, for beſides that it hindereth all the operations of our faith, the application of Chriſt and all the promiſes made in him, our communion and ſweet fellowſhip with God, hiding from our ſight his fatherly face and the bright beames of his fauourable countenance, in the apprehenſion wherof the life of our life conſiſteth, and depriueth vs of the peace of conſcience and joy in the holy Ghoſt, by which wee are in the ſpirituall man made ſtrong and couragious in the day of tentation; after that we haue receiued wounds of the fleſh in the ſpirituall fight, it hindreth their cure, and cauſeth them to feſter and ranckle, and to grow euery day more dangerous and incurable than other. And after wee haue beene allured to drinke the ſweet poyſons of the fleſhes bewitching cup, this impenitencie doth cauſe vs to retayne them in the ſtomacke, vntill working they doe make vs ſicke vnto death, where as they would not bee hurtfull and pernicious, if as ſoone as they were ſwallowed, they were caſt vp againe by vnfained repentance. The fourth ſinne that weakeneth the Spirit is carnall ſecurity and hardneſſe of heart, whereby wee bleſſe our ſelues when our eſtate is dangerous, and haue no ſenſe and feeling, neither of Gods mercy and loue, nor of his anger and diſpleaſure, by the one whereof the Spirit is ſtrengthened vnto Gods ſeruice, and by the other preſerued from ſinning againſt him. So alſo the ſtrength of the ſpirit is by this carnall ſecuritie much impayred, becauſe it maketh vs to put the euill day farre from vs, and vtterly to neglect our ſpirituall enemies as though we had a ſecure peace and all cauſe of danger were farre remoued; it cauſeth vs to neglect our Chriſtian watch, and ſo to lye open to the malicious and ſecret aſſaults of our ſpiritual enemies, and to neglect the meanes of our ſafety and defence, our ſpirituall food and prouiſion, our weapons and munition, our fortifications and all other preparations which ſhould be any meanes of defence in the day of battell; whereby the ſpirituall part is betrayed and ſuddenly ſurprized before it expecteth any danger. The laſt ſpeciall ſinne whereby the ſpirit is weakened and all the good motions thereof quenched, is the loue of the World, which like birdlime ſo beſmeareth the ſpirituall part and the wings of the ſoule, that it cannot flee aloft, but is intangled and catched, fixed and faſtened to the Earth and worldly vanities. More eſpecially the loue of honours and the glory of the world, doth make the ſpirituall man ſlacke and ſluggiſh in the purſuite of eternal glory and heauenly happineſſe. The loue of riches hindreth him from ſeeking with all earneſtneſſe, ſpirituall graces, and thoſe incomparable treaſures which are laide vp for vs in Gods Kingdome; it choaketh the ſeed of the Word, ſo as it cannot take roote and beare fruit, and fruſtrateth all the good motions of the Spirit, ſo as they cannot take effect; it expoſeth vs to many tentations and ſnares, and cauſeth vs to fall into many fooliſh and hurtfull luſts, which drowne men in deſtruction and perdition. And ſo alſo the loue of earthly pleaſures doth much enfeeble the ſpirituall part in the purſuit of thoſe eternall pleaſures, and fulneſſe of ioy which are at Gods right hand for euermore; and as they weaken the body and effeminate the minde, ſo as they are made vnfit, euen for any warlike imployments in the World, ſo much more doe they diſable the ſoule and Spirit for this warfare againſt the enemies of our ſaluation. For when the fleſh is pampered with theſe carnall delights, the ſoule is ſtarued and pined: when it is diſtended and growne fat and groſſe with gluttony and belly-cheare, the Spirit is made leane and infeebled; when it reuelleth in fleſhly ioy, the regenerate part droopeth and mourneth, being ſpoyled and robbed of the ioyes of the holy Ghoſt: When it is filled and euen glutted with exceſſe, the ſpirit is ſtraitened of roome, and hath no place where it may reſide: and therefore the Apoſtle requireth firſt emptineſſe of wine, and then that wee ſhould be filled with the Spirit, to note vnto vs, that fulneſſe of both will not ſtand together.

1.Tim.6.9.10.

Eph.5.18.

§. Sect. 3.

We muſt not prouide for the Spirit poyſon inſtead of wholeſome food nor carnall weapons inſtead of ſpirituall.

A ſecond meanes of weakening and diſabling the Spirit, which is to be auoided, reſpecteth our prouiſion which we are to make for the armie of Gods graces, as firſt that we doe not prouide for their nouriſhment poyſon in ſtead of wholeſome food: as for example in ſtead of the pure Word of God, the ſpirituall Manna, the ſincere milke of the Goſpell and Sacraments inſtituted by our Sauiour Chriſt; humane traditions and inuentions, will-worſhip and our owne ſuperſtitions deuotions, which haue no ground or warrant out of the Scriptures, nor ſcarce any reſemblance of that holy and wholeſome food which is by God appointed for our nouriſhment. Of which meate the more liberally wee feede, the more leane and lanke wee waxe in our ſpirituall ſtrength and ſtature, the more feeble and faint wee grow in all ſauing graces: becauſe howſoeuer it bee ſweet to our naturall and carnall appetite, yet it is of a quite contrarie qualitie to the Spirit and the graces and gifts thereof, and it is no better than the Diuels moſt artificiall poyſons, which cauſe them that taſt and feed on them to waſt and weare away in a continuall conſumption of all pietie and true godlineſſe. Secondly, we muſt beware that we doe not prouide for this ſpiritual Warfare carnall weapons and munition: For as the Apoſtle ſaith, the weapons of our warfare are not carnall, but ſutable vnto the Spirit it ſelfe, and mighty through God to the pulling downe of ſtrong holds. As for example wee muſt not fight againſt the fleſh with fleſhly anger and carnall reuenge; for here eſpecially the ſaying of the Apoſtle is verified, The wrath of man worketh not the righteouſneſſe of God; wee muſt not fight againſt and indeauour to ſubdue it with ſpiritual watchings as reſting in the deed done, and not deſtinating it to a ſuperiour end, namely in the imploying of our time in prayer with it; Watch and pray; and the watching ouer our hearts, that wee doe not ſinne, rather than ouer our eyes, that wee doe not ſleepe. Wee muſt not ſeeke to ſubdue it by popiſh faſting which is nothing elſe (but like all other their deuotions) a bodily exerciſe, conſiſting in their ſuperſtitious abſtinence from certaine meanes, (contrary to the Word of God, which calleth it a doctrine of Diuels, and teacheth vs that all the creatures of God are cleane if they be ſanctified by the Word and Prayer;) and allowing the vſe of all the daintieſt fiſh, and delicateſt wines and fruits which pamper the fleſh more than the moderate vſe of ordinarie dyet. But as occaſion ſerueth, wee muſt vſe totall abſtinence, when we would tame the fleſh and humble our ſelues before God, yet not like them reſting in the deed done, much leſſe eſteeming it ſatisfactorie and meritorious, but onely vſing it as an exerciſe of mortification, and as an helpe for the increaſing of our repentance, and for our better fitting and inabling to call vpon God more earneſtly by feruent prayers, whereof it is that theſe are vſually ioyned together in the Scriptures, Faſt and pray, the one being the end, the other the meanes inabling vs thereunto. Much leſſe muſt wee vſe thoſe carnall weapons of whippes, to torment our bodies, which

2.Cor.10.4.

Iam.1.20.

1. Tim.4.1.3.1.

which onely offend in yeelding themſelues as inſtruments to our ſinnefull ſoules; or of popiſh pennances and pilgrimages which are the meere inuentions of men and haue no warrant out of the Word of God, and being carnall weapons, doe as ill fit the Spirit as the armour of Saul did fit Dauid, and therefore doe but cumber and hinder it in the ſpiritual warfare: Yea (like Achilles launce) doe cure the fleſh in ſtead of killing it, and make it more ſtrong and full of courage, by filling it with ſpirituall pride, and a glorious opinion of our own merits and well deſeruing.

§. Sect. 4. We muſt not remit any thing of our firſt zeale in holy duties.

The third meanes of weakening the ſpirit which wee are to auoid is, to remit any thing of our former zeale in the duties of Gods ſeruice, and to giue way vnto any declination in grace and Chriſtian duties. For wee may much more firmely ſtand in the higheſt pitch of our ſinceritie (as it were) on the top of the mountaine, than in our declinations and diſcent, from that meaſure of perfection vnto which wee had attained (as it were) on the ſide of the hill; we may more eaſily preſerue the health and ſtrength of the Spirit, whileſt it is in the beſt plight, than recouer it when it is impeached and in ſome degrees of declination. Wee may liue much more comfortably and plentifully when our ſtocke is whole and daily increaſing, than when it decayeth, and is in ſome part ſpent and waſted; wee may better defend our ſelues againſt our ſpiritual enemies, when as wee are in our compleate armour, than when we haue put off ſome pieces of it. And wee ſhall much more eaſily diſcourage them and weaken their fury, by taking away all hope of victory, when wee haue remitted nothing of our Chriſtian valour and fortitude, but ſtand couragiouſly vpon hoſtile termes, and at open defiance with them, and when we keepe them out from entring into our borders, than when we grow to a parley, and yeeld a little to their conditions; or when wee haue ſuffered them to inuade ſome part of our country, and haue receiued ſome foyles in the ſpiritual conflict. Againe the more reſolutely we ſtand in the ſtrength of grace receiued, the more willing the Lord is to aſſiſt vs in fighting his battailes; the more carefull we are to increaſe his ſpiritual talents, the more ready hee is to re-double them, whereas it is juſt with our great Commander to leaue vs to our ſelues, and to deliuer vs into the hands of our enemies, when we begin cowardly to leaue his ſtandard, and ſomewhat to incline to the enemies part by our remiſneſſe in fighting or faintneſſe in yeelding; it is a righteous thing with our Lord and Maſter, when we waſt his rich talents and ſpend ryotouſly ſome part of the ſtocke, to take that which remaineth from vs, and giue it to another, who will bee more carefull and faithfull in imploying of it. Finally, that wee may not decline, no not in the leaſt degrees, let vs conſider that it is moſt dangerous; for who can bee aſſured, if he begin once to ſlip that hee can preſerue himſelfe from catching a fall, or that hauing begun to runne downe the hill, he can ſtay himſelfe before he come to the bottome? And therefore if we would ſtand ſurely, let vs ſtand in our ſinceritie; if wee would not weaken the Spirit, nor haue the gifts thereof to periſh in vs, let vs preſerue them, euen in reſpect of their leaſt degrees, from waſting and conſuming.

§. Sect. 5. That we muſt auoid fleſhly ſloth and negligence.

The laſt meanes of weakening the Spirit which we are to take heed of, is fleſhly ſloth and negligence, when as hauing Gods graces and gifts of the Spirit, wee doe not imploy and exerciſe them in holy and Chriſtian duties to the glory of him that gaue them, and the edification of our neighbours, for whoſe ſake alſo wee haue receiued them. For as the ſtrength of the body is much weakened and impayred, when as we liue in ſloth and idleneſſe, and neuer imploy it in any good exerciſe; ſo is it alſo with our ſpiritual ſtrength. Our knowledge muſt be then exerciſed in the holy practice of that we know, our faith in good workes, our loue towards God and our neighbours, in performing all duties which wee owe vnto them; our zeale in aduancing all meanes of Gods glory, and in remouing all impediments whereby it is hindred and impeached. And if wee thus imploy Gods ſpirituall graces, which are his talents committed vnto vs, then will our Lord and Maſter increaſe and multiply them, and wee ſhall haue abundance; but if with the ſlothful and vnprofitable ſeruant, we hide them in a napkin, neuer imploying our graces receiued to the glory of our Maſter, nor the good of our fellowes in the ſame family, he wil take theſe talents from vs, and caſt vs into outer darkneſſe. Finally though it were poſſible, that we could abound in the graces of the Spirit, yet if we did not vſe them for our owne defence, and diſcomforting and indamaging of our enemies; we ſhould be neuer the neerer the obtaining victory. If wee haue the ſword of the Spirit and neuer ſmite with it, nor draw it out, but ſuffer it to ruſt in the ſcabberd; if we haue all the ſeuerall parts of the Chriſtian Armour, and neuer put it on, nor girt it to vs, but ſuffer it (as it were) to hang ruſting vpon the wals without vſe; if wee haue powder and good peeces of Ordnance, but neuer charge nor diſcharge them againſt the enemy; wee ſhall neuer ouercome and put them to flight, but notwithſtanding our furniture and munition wee ſhall bee vanquiſhed in the firſt aſſault, and become an eaſie prey vnto them; but if hauing theſe warlike preparations, we doe imploy them in the ſpirituall Warfare with all care and diligence, wee ſhall bee ſure to obtaine the victory.

Chap. XXV.

Of the meanes for the comforting, chearing and ſtrengthening of the ſpirit vnto the Conflict.

§. Sect. 1. Earneſt and longing deſires after ſpirituall ſtrength.

THe ſecond thing required is, that we vſe all meanes for the comforting & cheering, the ſtrengthening and inabling of the Spirit vnto this ſpirituall Conflict. And firſt we muſt earneſtly deſire to haue the Spirit more ſtrengthened, and the gifts and graces thereof inlarged and multiplyed in vs: For as wee haue Gods promiſe, that if wanting the Spirit, we doe deſire and pray for it, he will giue him vnto vs; ſo alſo when hauing it, we deſire to haue it and the graces thereof increaſed in vs, the Lord will ſatisfie our deſires, and bring this worke of grace begun to accompliſhment and perfection. For therefore doth the Lord inlarge our hearts with theſe longing deſires, that he may ſatisfie them, therefore doth he make vs to hunger after grace, and to find and feele our own emptineſſe, that he may fill and repleniſh vs with them. Wee muſt not therefore reſt contented and ſatisfied with that meaſure of grace which wee haue receiued, or that portion of the Spirit wherewith we are already indued, but we muſt hunger after more perfection, and grow from grace to grace, from ſtrength to ſtrength, and from one degree of ſpirituall ſtature vnto another, vntill we come vnto a perfect age in Chriſt. And this is an inſeparable and infallible ſigne and property of the faithfull and regenerate, who are ſaid to bee trees of righteouſneſſe of Gods owne planting, which bring forth more plenty of fruit in their old age, and are not doted and rotten with yeeres; but when they are at the eldeſt, they are moſt fat and flouriſhing. They are like vnto the morning light, which ſhineth more and more vnto the perfect day. They are Gods building, which is ſtill in framing and ſetting vp vntill it be fully finiſhed. They are Gods children who grow from ſtrength to ſtrength, vntill they come to perfect ſtature, neither haue they any time of old age, but are in a continuall ſpring of youth. They are branches ingrafted into the true Vine Ieſus Chriſt, which bearing fruit in him, he purgeth and pruneth them, that they may bring forth more fruit. That therefore wee may approue our ſelues to bee in this number, let vs not content our ſelues that wee haue receiued ſome meaſure of the Spirit, but (as the Apoſtle exhorteth vs) let vs deſire to grow in grace, and in the knowledge of our Lord Ieſus Chriſt: For they who haue once taſted of theſe ſpirituall excellencies, are not ſatisfied with a ſmall pittance, but rather thereby their deſire is inlarged, their appetite ſharpened, and their hunger increaſed after a more full and perfect allowance.

*Luk.*11.13.
*Pſal.*145.19.
*Phil.*1,6.
*Pſal.*92.14.
*Pro.*4.18.
*Eph.*2.20.
*Eph.*4.12.13.
*Iob.*15.2.
2.*Pet.*3.18.

§. Sect. 2. The ſecond meanes, a carefull indeauour in the vſe of al good means for the ſtrengthening of it,

Now as wee are thus to deſire more and more an acceſſe of all ſpirituall grace vnto perfection; ſo in the ſecond place, wee are to endeauour in the vſe of all good meanes appointed by God for the ſtrengthening and increaſing of them. And firſt we muſt bee carefull and diligent in hearing, reading and meditating in the word of God, which is the miniſtery of grace and ſaluation, and not onely the ſeed whereby wee are regenerate and made new borne babes in Chriſt, but alſo the food whereby we are nouriſhed and increaſed in grace and ſpirituall ſtrength, vntill we come vnto a full age in Chriſt; Milke for our tender infancy, and more ſtrong and perfect nouriſhment for our riper age. Now becauſe there may come a deare yeare, when as this ſpirituall food will be very ſcarce, ſo as we may wander from Sea to Sea, and run to and fro, from the North euen vnto the Eaſt, to ſeeke the word of the Lord, and ſhall not find it, as hee threatneth by the Prophet; therefore we muſt with Ioſeph foreſeeing this danger in our yeeres of plenty lay vp ſtore againſt the time of ſcarcity and penury, that our Spirit doe not looſe its ſtrength, nor our ſoules be famiſhed with this ſpirituall famine; and not like the fooliſh Egyptians, for want of prouidence, be driuen to ſeeke our food with much inconueniency, when as we ſhould feed vpon it. Yea we are not onely to lay vp ſufficient ſtore for our owne prouiſion, but as Ioſeph did, for the reliefe and comfort of all that ſue and ſeeke vnto vs, that their ſoules may bleſſe vs when as they finde themſelues refreſhed and comforted with this ſpirituall nouriſhment. And this meanes of comforting and ſtrengthening the Spirit, Cyrill commendeth vnto vs. If (ſaith hee) comming often vnto the Church thou giueſt eare to the holy Scriptures, and conceiueſt the meaning of theſe diuine precepts; then as the fleſh is pampered with exceſſe of meates and daintie diſhes, ſo the Spirit will grow ſtrong, by feeding on this heauenly Manna, and becomming more powerfull than our ſenſuall deſires and carnall luſts, it will bring the fleſh into ſubiection, and make it to ſubmit it ſelfe to be ruled by its lawes. Whereas contrariwiſe if wee withdraw this food from the Spirit, it will grow ſo faint and languiſh in ſtrength, that it will not bee able to ſtand againſt the aſſaults of the fleſh in the day of battell. And vnto the Miniſtery of the Word we muſt adjoyne the frequent vſe of the Lords Supper, which is a ſpirituall feaſt, purpoſely ordained by our

*Gal.*3.2.
1.*Pet.*2.1.2.
*Amos.*8.12.
*Cyril.in Leuit. lib.*9.*Col.*129.

Sauiour Chriſt, for the confirming and ſtrengthening of our communion with him by his Spirit; and for the filling and repleniſhing of all thoſe with his ſanctifying and ſauing graces who come with a good ſtomacke and an hungring appetite to this holy Table; for the ſtrengthening of thoſe that are weake and faint, the reſtoring of them who are entred into a ſpirituall conſumption, and for the confirming of ſuch in their vigour and ſtrength, who already enjoy deſired health. Finally, we muſt vſe the helpe of holy conferences, inſtructing, exhorting, admoniſhing, counſelling and comforting one another, that we may be further edified in our holy faith. For as ſticks ſcattered aſunder will hardly keepe fire, but if they be laid together will quickly grow to a great flame; ſo if we ſingle our ſelues from one another, and admit no communion by religious conferences, wee ſhall quickly coole and quench the fire of the ſpirit: but if we meete together and exerciſe our ſelues in holy conferences, wee ſhall hereby ſtirre vp Gods graces in vs; we ſhall like vnto Kniues whetted one vpon another, ſharpen our gifts, and ſet an edge on our deſires to the performance of all good duties; wee ſhall pile vp our graces one on another, and with theſe bellowes of conference, blow vpon them vntill they grow to a great flame.

Iud. verſe 20.

§. Sect. 3.
The third meanes is to nouriſh the good motions of the ſpirit.

The third meanes of cheriſhing & ſtrengthening the ſpirit is to nouriſh the good motions thereof, neither vtterly quenching them, nor delaying to put them in practice, but preſently harkening vnto them and labouring after the firſt and beſt opportunity of performing thoſe duties which it requireth. For it is a great comfort and encouragement to this ſpirituall Vice-roy, whom God hath ſet vp in his ſtead to raigne and rule in vs, when as we yeeld obedience vnto him, and ſuffer our ſelues willingly to be gouerned by his direction. It much cheareth and delighteth this heauenly Counſellour, when as we hearken to his counſels, and be aduiſed by him in all our courſes: whereas there can be no comfort to any Prince in his gouernment, when as his ſubjects vpon euery occaſion ſtand out in open rebellion, and continually reſiſt him in all his lawful Commandements; and who would not refuſe it, as an irkſome office to be ſtil aduiſing a man of ſuch a refractory ſpirit, as will either neuer follow his counſaile, or make it vnſeaſonable and vnprofitable by vnneceſſary delayes? If therefore we would comfort and cheriſh the ſpirit, let vs willingly entertaine the good motions which it putteth into our minds, and ſpeedily put them in practice and execution. As for example, when as fit opportunity being offered, it moueth vs to call vpon God by Prayer, either to begge the graces which wee want, or to giue him thankes for benefits receiued, wee are not to tread this motion vnder foot by vtter neglect, nor yet to coole or quench it by caſting vpon it the cold water of delayes, but wee muſt preſently nouriſh the motion and not deferre to put it in execution. When it moueth vs to attend vnto the hearing of the Word, either on the Lords Day, when as wee are bound to meet in the holy Aſſemblies; or on the weeke day, when as our neceſſary imployments in the workes of our callings will giue vs reaſonable opportunity, wee are to take hold of the occaſion offered, and not deferre it by cauſleſſe delayes. And when God preſenteth vs with an object of miſery, and his Spirit moueth vs to take the preſent occaſion of doing a worke of mercy; as by giuing an almes to the needy, viſiting the ſicke and ſuch as are in priſon, helping the impotent, and comforting the comfortleſſe and afflicted, we muſt not neglect theſe works of Charity, nor put them off to another time, but as willingly and chearefully apprehend the preſent opportunity, as the Husbandman doth the Seaſon of Sowing, the Merchant of Trading, and the Mariner of hoyſing vp ſayles, when as he hath gotten a good gale of wind; ſeeing otherwiſe God may juſtly puniſh our negligence by neuer granting vs againe ſuch ſeaſonable occaſions.

§. Sect. 4.
The fourth meanes is ſerious care to maintaine our peace with God and the peace of conſcience.

The fourth meanes of cheriſhing and ſtrengthening of the ſpirit is to be carefull of mayntayning our peace with God, and our aſſurance of his loue and fauour; the which is beſt done by preſeruing peace in our owne conſciences, and by keeping them cleare of knowne and voluntary ſinnes, whereby the anger of our heauenly Father is prouoked againſt vs, and wee expoſed to his heauy judgements. For if God be offended how ſhall his Spirit be well pleaſed with vs? How ſhall he be willing to renew our ſtrength, and to ſend vnto vs freſh ſupplyes of his graces, to aide and aſſiſt vs againſt our ſpirituall Enemies? Or how ſhall the created Spirit dwelling in vs with courage and comfort fight againſt the Deuill, the World, and the Fleſh, when as it is depriued of the Light of Gods countenance, and hath its peace interrupted with him; yea, when it apprehendeth his wrathfull diſpleaſure, and (as it was with Iob and Dauid) conceiueth that God hath not onely forſaken him, but is alſo become his Enemy? How ſhall the ſtreames of Gods graces continue running, when as they are ſtopped and cut off from the ſpring and fountaine? Or how ſhould our ſtrength hold out, when the God of our ſtrength doth with-draw himſelfe from vs? If therefore we would haue the Spirit in vs ſtrong and vigorous, let vs preſerue, as much as in vs lyeth, our intercourſe with God, and vſe all good meanes to ſtrengthen our faith in the aſſurance of his loue, and our reconciliation and peace with him; for if God be with it, the Spirit will be ſo couragious and magnanimous, that it will not care who oppoſeth againſt it. Yea, our care muſt be not onely to ſtrengthen our faith in this aſſurance, that God who hath choſen vs will neuer leaue vs, and that hauing begun the good worke of regeneration, hee will neuer giue it ouer, till he hath fully finiſhed it, becauſe he is vnchangeable in his loue, and his gifts and calling are without repentance; but if we would haue the Spirit ſtrong and vigorous, wee muſt not neglect the feelings of faith, nor the ſenſible comforts of Gods loue, warming and comforting our hearts, but wee muſt labour to find the vertue and efficacie of his grace working in vs, and haue the experimentall apprehenſion of the comforts of his Spirit. Wee muſt endeuour to haue not onely Gods graces habitually, but to feele their ſeuerall actions and operations working our hearts to all good duties. For though the Sun-ſhine of Gods fauour once ſhining vpon vs, can neuer vtterly faile, yet the beames thereof may by the interpoſition of our ſinnes be eclypſed from vs for a time; though the Fountaine of his grace towards vs can neuer bee dried vp, yet the ſtreames thereof may be ſo ſtopped that wee can by preſent apprehenſion feele little comfort by it. And though our faith which is the life of our ſpirit, cannot be loſt of thoſe who euer had it, yet when the life of our life, the comfortable feelings of faith, our communion with God, peace of conſcience and joy in the Holy Ghoſt, are taken away, or for a time ſuſpended and hid from vs, wee are exceedingly weakened in the ſpirituall part, and haue little comfort or courage in mayntayning the fight againſt our ſpirituall Enemies. Now theſe feelings of faith and comforts of the ſpirit are beſt obtained and kept, when as wee preſerue our communion, fellowſhip & familiar acquaintance with God in the conſcionable and frequent vſe of his holy Ordinances, the hearing of his Word, Prayer, the vſe of the Sacraments, keeping company with him in his holy Aſſemblies, where hee is preſent by his Spirit; when as with the Spouſe in the Canticles we rejoyce in his company, & with Dauid be rauiſhed with joy and delight, when as we meet him in his holy Temple; and when as with them we mourne and grieue for his abſence, and when hee with-draweth himſelfe doe ſeeke his face and fauour, and aboue all things deſire and long after his comfortable preſence. When as we labour daily in the mortification of our ſins, which doe make a ſeparation betweene our God and vs, and doe exerciſe our ſelues in all holy duties of his ſeruice, thereby glorifying his holy Name, and edifying our neighbours by our good example. Which if we do, then ſhal the beams of Gods fauour, and the ſtreames of his graces, haue a cleare paſſage vnto vs, with which our ſpirituall part ſhall be ſo cheared, cheriſhed and increaſed in ſtrength, that wee ſhall eaſily withſtand all the malice and fury of our ſpirituall enemies, and obtaine an happy victory in our Chriſtian Warfare.

Pſal.84.1.
Pſal.42.1,2.

§. Sect.5. The fift means is to preſerue ourſelues pure and cleane from all pollution.

The fifth meanes to nouriſh and cheriſh the Spirit in vs, is to preſerue our bodies and ſoules, which are his temples, in their cleanneſſe and puritie from all pollution of ſinne and wickedneſſe; for as a good ayre and ſweete habitation doth much refreſh and ſtrengthen our naturall and vitall Spirits, and preſerue our bodies in health; ſo no leſſe doth it comfort our Comforter, and cheare and cheriſh the Spirit of God in vs, if wee prouide for him a wholeſome and pleaſant lodging, cleanſed and purged from all noyſome filth of ſinfull impuritie, and ſweetned and adorned with the incenſe and odours of our prayers, and the flowers and fruits of our good workes and holy obedience.

§. Sect.6. The ſixt means is to keepe the ſpirit and the graces thereof in continuall exerciſe.

The ſixth meanes to preſerue and ſtrengthen the Spirit, and to increaſe in vs the graces and gifts thereof, is to keepe them in continuall exerciſe; and to cauſe theſe habits to ſhew themſelues in their functions and operations. For no more neceſſary is breathing and mouing for the preſeruing the life of our bodies, than fruitfull working and holy walking in all Chriſtian duties, is for the preſeruing and cheriſhing the life of the ſpirit; according to that of the Apoſtle; If we liue in the ſpirit, let vs alſo walke in the ſpirit. And as in naturall things, the cauſes are preſerued by producing their effects, and habits and qualities confirmed and ſtrengthened by their functions and operations; ſo is it alſo in the ſpirit and ſpirituall graces. We find by experience that the ſight is bettred by ſeeing, and much weakened when it is depriued of fit objects. The habituall memory is much ſtrengthened by the practical; and made feeble and vnfaithfull, when as it hath no exerciſe or imployment; the vnderſtanding becommeth more intelligent by minding and conceiuing, and is much impaired when it is not vſed; the ſtrength of the Arme, Hand, Legge, and the whole Body is much ſtrengthened and increaſed by action and exerciſe, and decayeth and is greatly enfeebled by ſloth and idleneſſe. And thus it is alſo with the ſpirit and ſpirituall graces; let vs vſe them and we ſhal haue them; let theſe rootes of holineſſe bring forth their boughes and branches, their leaues of profeſſion and their fruits of practice, and they will liue and proſper, ſpread inwardly and ſpring and ſprout outwardly, but if we hinder them from bearing their leaues and rootes, and be ſtill cutting and lopping of their boughes and branches, they will in a while dye and periſh. Let this fire of the Spirit haue fit vent to ſend out its flames of holy and righteous actions, & it will ſtill liue, burne & blaze, but if once we beginne to ſtop this vent, it will preſently dye and turne to cold embers. Let faith exerciſe it ſelfe in apprehending the promiſes, in waiting for the performance, in fighting againſt doubting, and in bearing the fruits of good workes, and from a graine of muſtard ſeed it will grow to a great tree, from ſmoking flaxe to a burning flame, and from a feeble aſſent to a firme and full perſwaſion. So let loue bee exerciſed in doing and ſuffering for Gods ſake, in performing vnto him all holy ſeruice and Chriſtian duties; and in the works of mercy and charitie towards our neighbours, and of a little ſparke it will increaſe to a great fire. Let the ſhoulders of patience bee inured to bearing of the Croſſe, and ſuffering afflictions, in putting vp wrongs and ouercomming euill with good, though they bee weake and tender at the firſt, they will in a little while become hard and ſtrong, and ſo it is in all other graces; by exerciſe they are increaſed, by ſloth and eaſe they are weakned and waſted. And therefore Dauid no ſooner thinketh of receiuing grace and ſtrength from God, than hee reſolueth to exerciſe them to the vttermoſt; I will runne (ſaith hee) the way of thy Commandements when thou ſhalt inlarge my heart. And againe; teach me O Lord the way of thy ſtatutes and I will keepe them vnto the end. Giue me vnderſtanding and I ſhall keepe thy law, yea I ſhall obſerue it with my whole heart.

Gal.5.25.

Pſal.119.32.33.34.

§. Sect. 7. The laſt meanes is frequent and feruent prayer.

The laſt and principall meanes of ſtrengthening and cheriſhing the ſpirit, is earneſt and effectuall prayer vnto God, that he will ſtrengthen our weakneſſe, and quicken our dulneſſe, and ſupport our faintneſſe, by continuall renewing his ſpirit in vs and ſending freſh ſupplies of his ſauing graces, to re-enforce and refreſh our decayed bands, that by theſe new aides wee may be enabled to ſtand in the day of battell, and to get the victory ouer all our ſpirituall enemies; for it is this holy fire deſcended from Heauen, which kindleth this ſpirituall fire in vs, whereby we offer incenſe, ſacrifices and oblations acceptable vnto God, the ſmoake whereof driueth away the enemies of our ſaluation. His eternall ſpirit is the liuing fountaine of theſe cleare and Criſtaline waters, whereby our thirſty ſoules are refreſhed in the ſpirituall conflict, and our hands, and eyes, and all other parts when they are wearied and tyred doe recieue renewed ſtrength. It is he that teacheth our hands to warre, and our fingers to fight, and giueth vnto vs full and finall victory ouer all our enemies, and the crowne of victory euerlaſting glory. And therefore when we ſee the battell hot againſt vs, and our ſelues weary and weake to make reſiſtance, let vs imitate the good King Iehoſaphat, and cry aloud vnto the Lord to ſuccour and ſtrengthen vs; when we ſee our graces ſpent and our ſpirituall ſtrength waſted and weakened in making reſiſtance, let vs call vnto him for freſh aides and renewed ſtrength, whereby wee may be enabled to hold out and ouercome.

Pſal.144.1.

1.Kings 22.

§. Sect. 8. The concluſion of the Booke.

And thus haue I, through Gods mighty and moſt mercifull aſſiſtance, finiſhed alſo this laſt part of the Chriſtian Warfare, a worke ſo much the more difficult, becauſe the fleſh which is the enemy againſt whom I intend it, holdeth a ſtrong party in my ſelfe, darkening my vnderſtanding, that I might not diſcouer its ſlights and ſubtilties, malice and might, nor diſcerne the beſt meanes for the defeating of its pollicies & ſubduing of its power. The Lord make me euer truely thankefull vnto his holy Majeſty for this mercie, and giue me grace alwayes to eſteeme it as one of his chiefeſt benefits in this life, that he hath vſed mee the weakeſt and vnworthieſt of many hundreds of my brethren, as his poore inſtrument in ſo good an imployment, and ſtirre vp in his good time ſome other of his choyſeſt and chiefeſt Worthies, for the further perfecting of that which I in my mediocrity haue begun, hitting the marke at which I haue but aymed, and training exactly the Chriſtian Souldiour in the feates of ſpirituall armes whom I (as I was able) haue but in ſome little meaſure acquainted with the knowledge of the Chriſtian Warfare. And the Lord giue his grace vnto vs all, both ſtrongeſt and weakeſt, that we may not onely inſtruct others in this ſpirituall Art of fighting againſt the enemies of our ſaluation, but that wee our ſelues may put on the ſpirituall armour, and fight continually with courage and reſolution vnder the ſtandard of the Lord of Hoaſts; and becauſe wee are vnskilfull and know not how to fight, and exceeding weake and feeble in our ſtrength, and vnable to ſtand in the incounter and beare the brunt of the battell, that he will teach our hands, or rather our hearts, to warre, and our fingers, or rather our affections, to fight; and that he will continually renew our ſtrength, and ſend vs daily freſh ſupplies of his ſpirituall and ſauing graces, whereby wee may be enabled with conſtancy & perſeuerance to maintaine the fight, vntil hauing gotten a full and finall victory, we be like conquerours crowned with glory and immortality; the which hee vouchſafe vnto vs euen for his Chriſts ſake, the Son of his loue, and the author, continuer, and finiſher of our ſaluation, to whom with the bleſſed Father, and holy Spirit, be aſcribed of vs, and his whole Church, all prayſe and glory, power and dominion, from this time forth and for euermore. Amen.

FINIS.

The Printer to the Reader.

CHriſtian Reader, it hath beene the Authors ſcope and deſire, to fit and furniſh thee in all eſtates and conditions. For whereas wee are in this life a Church Militant, that is, not onely a people called, and called out of the World, that being gathered into one body or ſocietie, wee ſhould call vpon God and doe him ſeruice; and like fellow-citizens of the new Hieruſalem ſhould liue vnder the ſame gouernment; and as loyall Subjects ſubmit our ſelues to be ruled by the Lawes of our Soueraigne: But alſo Souldiers, fighting the Lords battailes againſt our ſpirituall enemies who labour to diſhonour him, by hindring vs in the courſe of our obedience, and in the enioying of our ſpirituall priuiledges: Hee hath endeuoured to accommodate and helpe, both all other his fellow-citizens and Souldiers, and himſelfe alſo, in both theſe reſpects.

And as in this worke of the Chriſtian Warfare, he hath endeuoured to inſtruct thee in military Diſcipline for thy better enabling to ſtand in the day of battaile as a valiant Souldier:

So in another worke of his called A Guide to Godlineſſe, or a Treatiſe of a Chriſtian Life, he hath giuen vnto thee Inſtructions and Directions, how to carry thy ſelfe as a good Citizen and Subject to our great Lord and Soueraigne: Which Worke the Authour hath diuided into ſix Bookes, the generall contents whereof are theſe following.

The firſt Booke ſheweth the excellencie, profit and neceſſitie of a holy Life, with the definition thereof, and wherein it doth conſiſt. Where alſo is ſhewed how Chriſtian duties ought to be performed, together with the maine grounds of a godly Life, viz. Sauing Knowledge, a Liuely and Iuſtifying Faith, a pure Heart, and a good Conſcience; and all handled reſpectiuely in ſeuenteene Chapters.

The ſecond Booke containeth the maine parts and principall duties of a godly Life, which we ought to performe at all times; and vpon all good occaſions, containing thirteene Chapters.

The third Booke containeth thoſe duties which are required in our daily exerciſe, both generally at all times of the day, and vpon all occaſions, and ſpecially in the ſeuerall parts of it, containing forty two Chapters.

The fourth Booke containeth the properties of a godly Life, and all the duties required vnto it, in ten Chapters.

The fifth Booke containeth the helpes and meanes which inable vs vnto a godly Life, in forty fiue Chapters.

The ſixt and laſt Booke intreateth of the impediments which vſually hinder and diſcourage men from entring into, and proceeding in the Chriſtian duties, which are required vnto a godly Life; and of the helps and meanes whereby they may be remoued, in twentie Chapters.

Whereunto is alſo added a Treatiſe of Securitie in two Bookes, the former intreating of Carnall Securitie and Hardneſſe of Heart, the latter of Spirituall and Chriſtian Security, and are publiſhed as an Antidote againſt the dangerous Securitie of theſe laſt times.

Vſe them, both in the time of warre and peace, as thy occaſions ſhall require, but chiefly reſt vpon the power of Gods might, and the good guidance of his holy Spirit, giuing him the whole glorie both of the Authours labours and thine owne endeuours, without whom of our ſelues we can doe nothing.

A PARTICVLAR ACCOVNT OF ALL those Texts of Scripture, whether in the Old or New Teſtament, that are in this elaborate Worke, either wholy expounded, or in part explained, as followeth.

Geneſis.

*GEn.*4.7.Part.1. Lib.2.Cap.31.p. 191.Col.2.Num.40.

Exodus.

*EXod.*19.10.part.1.lib.2. cap.28. p.181.§ 2.

*Exod.*32.32.lib.3.c.16.p.323. col. 2.num.20. & p.324.col.1.§ 3.

1. Samuel.

1. *SAm.*2.2.part.2. lib.3.c.9.p.727 col. 1. ad finem.

1.*Sam.*7.6 part.3.lib.1.c.23.p.939. col.1.num.30.

1.*Sam.*9.2.part.1.lib.3.c.20.p.338 col.1.num.30. & inde.

1.*Sam.*10.24. idem, ibidem.col.1. ad finem.

1.*Sam.*12.21.part.2.lib.2.c.21.pag. 561.col.1.num. 20. & inde.

1.*Sam.*16.14.part.1.lib.1.c.5.p.12 col.1.num.50.

1.*Sam.*24.1.part.3.lib.1.c.1.col.1. ad initium.

1. Chronicles.

1. *CHron.*21.1. part.3. li.1. c.1.p. 756.col.1. ad initium.

The Booke of Iob.

IOb 9.21. part.1. lib.2. c.13. p.130 col.2.§ 6.

Iob 14.17.part.3 lib.2.cap.9.p.855 col.2.num.50.

Iob 19.27.part.2. lib.3.c.10.p.730. col.1.num.10.

Iob 20.11.part.1.lib.2.c.30.p.188 col.1.num.30.

The Booke of Pſalmes.

*PSal.*19.13.part.1.li.3.c.10.p.305 col.1.num.20.

*Pſal.*41.1. part.1. lib.1.c.9.p.20. col.1.ad initium.

*Pſal.*49.12. part.2. lib.2.c.29.p. 624.col.1.num.10.

*Pſal.51.10. part.1. lib.2.c.41. p. 229.num.50.col.2.& inde &* lib.3 c.16.p.324.col.1 § 5.

*Pſal.*62.10.part.2. lib.2.c.4. p.45 col.1. ad initium.

*Pſal.*69.28. part.1.li.3.c.16.p.323 num.30. & inde.

*Pſal.*82.1,6.part.2.li.2.c.2.p.438 col.1. ad finem, & inde.

*Pſal.*91.11,12. part.3. lib.2.c.28. p.969.col.1.num.10. & inde.

The Booke of Prouerbs.

*PRou.*1.32.part.2.lib.1.c.5.p.370 col.1.num.40.

*Prou.*1.30.part.2.li.2.c.33.p.664 col.1.num.20. & inde.

*Prou.*15.6.part.2.lib.2.c.25.p.586 col.2.num.50.

*Prou.*28.14. part.1. c.13.p.128. col.2.num.60. & inde.

The Booke of Eccleſiaſtes.

*ECcleſ.*2.24.& *Eccle.*3.12,13.part 2.l.2.c.20.p.554. c.2.ad initiũ.

*Eccleſ.*3.19.part.1.lib.2.c.5.p.97 col.1.num.10.

*Eccleſ.*5.1.part.1.lib.2.c.28.p.181 col.1.§ 2.

*Eccleſ.*7.3.part.2.lib.2.c.2.p.435 col.1.num.40.

*Eccleſ.*9.1. part.1. lib.2.c.5.p.96 § 10. & 11.

*Eccleſ.*11.3.part.1.lib.2.c.31. p. 191.col.2.num.50.

The Prophecie of Iſaiah.

ISaiah 1.21.part.1.lib.3.cap.16.p. 225.col.1.num.50.

*Iſa.*28.19.part.3.lib.2.c.20.p.921 col.1.num.40.

*Iſa.*30.21.p.4. lib.2.c.4. p.1091. col.1. ad finem.

*Iſa.*40.2. part.3. lib.2.c.9. p.854 col.1. ad finem, & inde.

*Iſa.*54.13.part.1.lib.2.c.16.p.145 col.1. ad initium.

*Iſa.*64.12.part.3.lib.2.c.10.p.863 col.2.num.10.

*Iſa.*66.3. part.2. lib.1.c.7. p.380 col.1.num.40.

The Prophecie of Ieremiah.

*IEr.*10.24.part.3.lib.2.c.11.p.867 col.2.num.30.

*Ier.*17.1. part.3. lib.2.c.9. p.855 col.2.num.50.

*Ier.*17.7.part.3.lib.2.c.35.p.1007 col.1.num.50. & inde.

*Ier.*30.11.part.3.lib.2. cap.11. p. 867.col.2.num.30.

*Ier.*31.34.part.1.lib.2.c.16.p.145 col.1. ad initium.

The Lamentations of Ieremiah.

*LAment.*2.18,19. part.3. lib.2.c. 5.p.820.col.2.ad finem, & inde

The Prophecie of Ezechiel.

*EZech.*17.19. part.4. lib.1.c.3.p. 1022.col.1.num.40.

Ezech. 18.26. part.1. lib.3.c.16. p.325.col.2.§ 7.

Ezech. 33.11. part.1. lib. 2. c.32. p.195.col.2.num.50.

*Ezech.*36.26.& c.37.verſ.14.part. 4.lib.1.c.3.p.1022.col.1.num.40.

The Prophecie of Daniel.

Daniel 12.3.part 2.lib.3.cap 7.p.719.num.20.

The Prophecie of Hoſea.

Hoſea 6.6. part.4. lib.1.c.12.pag.1056.col 1.num.10.
Hoſea 13.12. part.3. lib.2. c.9.p.855.num.50.

The Prophecie of Ioel.

Ioel 2.14. part.1. lib.2.c.13.p.131 col.2.§ 8.
Ioel 2.28. part.1. lib.2.c.16.p.145 col.1. ad initium.

The Prophecie of Amos.

Amos 5.15. part.1.l.2.c.13.p.131 col.2. § 8.

The Prophecie of Ionah.

Ionah 3.9. part.1. lib.2.c.13.p.131 col.2.§ 8.

The Prophecie of Haggai.

Haggai 2.13,14.part.2.lib.1.c.17 p.421.col.1.num.50.

The Booke of Eccleſiaſticus.

Ecclus 5.5.part.1.li.2 c.13.p.132 col.2.§ 10.

The Goſpell by Saint Matthew.

Math.3.17.part.1.lib.2.c 35.p.208.col.1. ad finem.
Math.5.6.part.1.lib.2.c.33.p.200 col.2.num.40. & p.245.col.2.§ 3.
Math.7.14. part.2.lib.2. c.26. p.604.col.1.num.30.& inde.
Math.7.22,23.part.1.lib.3.c.17.p.326. § 1.
Math.9.13.part.1.li.2.c.32.p.195 col.2.num.50.& c.33. p 197. col.2 num.20.
Math.10.9,10.part.2.lib 2.cap.20 p.556.col.2.num.20. & inde.
Math.10.16.part.2.lib.1.c.8.p.385 col.2. ad initium.
Math.11.28.part.1.lib.2.c.32.pag.195.col.2.num.50.& c.33.p.197.col 2.num.20.
Math.11.29,30.part.3. lib.2.c.28 p.969.col.2.ad finem.& inde,p.970
Math.16.23.part.2.lib.2.c.3.pag.445.col.1.num.50.
Math.13.22.part.4.lib.2.c.5.pag.1093.col.2.num.20.
Math.19.27.part.2.c.9 p.727.lib.3.col.1. ad finem.
Math.19.21.part.2.li.2.c.3.p.446 col.2.§ 10.
Math.19.24. idem ibid. num. 30
Math.19.27.part.2.lib.2.c.3.pag.445.col.2.ad finem, & inde.
Math.20.9.part.2.lib.3. c.7. pag.220.col.2.num.40.& inde.
Math.22.30.part.2.lib.3.c.5.pag.709.col.2.num.50.
Math.24.12. part.1.lib.3. c.17. p.326. § 2.
Math.25.29. part.4. lib.2. c.18.p.1134.col.1.num.20. & inde.
Math.25.21.part.2.li.3.c.7.p.718 col.2. ad finem, & inde.
Math.26.41.part.4.lib.1.c.2.pag.1017.col.2.num.60.
Math.26.42.part.4.lib.2.c.8.pag.1101.col.2.ad initium.
Math.27.26.part.1. lib.2.c.5.p.93 col.1 num.50.

The Goſpell by Saint Marke.

Marke 9.2. part.2. lib.2.c.35.p.682.col.1.num.40.
Marke 15.28. part.1. lib.2.c.52.p.276.col.2.num.30.

The Goſpell by Saint Luke.

Luke 2.34.part.1.lib.2.c.16.pag.142. ad initium.
Luke 6.26.part.2.lib.2.c.10. pag.481.col.2.num.40.
Luke 8.13. part.1.li.3.c.17.p.340 col.1. num.40. & inde.
Luke 12.29. part.1. lib.2.c.9.pag.107.col.2.num.30.
Luke 12.29,30.part.2.lib.3.c.5.p.708.col.1.num.40. & inde.
Luke 16.9.part.2.lib.2.c.3.p.445 col.1.num,50.
Luke 16.25.part.2. c.6.p.377. col.1.num.50.
Luke 18.1.part.1. lib.1.c.16.p.27 § 3.
Luke 18.28.part.2 lib.2.c.3.col.2 ad finem, & inde.
Luke 22.32 part.1.lib.3.c.20.pag.340.col.1.num.40. & inde.

The Goſpell by Saint Iohn.

Iohn 3.3. part.4. lib.1.c.3.p.1020. col.2.num.30.
Iohn 3.6.part.4. lib.1.c.2. p.1017 col.2.num.30.
Iohn 3.32.part.1.lib.2.c.16.p.145 col.1.num.10.
Iohn 3.16. part.2. lib.1. c.1.p.358 col.2.num.10.
Iohn 4.14.part.1.lib.3.c.14.p.320 col.2.num.10.
Iohn 6.27.part.1.lib.2.c.10.p.115 col.1.num.50.
Iohn 6.54.part.1. lib.3.c.14.pag.320. col.2.num.30.
Iohn 10.14.part.1.lib.2.c.11.pag.118.col.1.num.60.
Iohn 11.52. part.1. lib.2.c.16.pag.142.col.1.num.20.
Iohn 12.31.part.2.lib.1.c.2.p.359 ad finem & p.360.ad initium.
Iohn 12.32.part.1.lib.2.c.16.pag.144.col.2.num.60.
Iohn 15.2.part.1.lib.3.c.17.p.327 col.2. § 5.& p.328. § 6,7.
Iohn 17.3. part.3. lib.2.c.20.pag.922.col.2.num.50.
Iohn 17.12.part.1.lib.3.c.20.pag.341.col.1.
Iohn 16.11. part.2. lib.1.c.2.pag.359.ad finem & p.360. ad initium.
Iohn 21.18.part.3.lib.2.c.1.p.795 col.2.num.10.& inde.

The Acts of the Apoſtles.

Acts 6.3.part.1. lib.3.c.20. pag.343.col.2. ad initium.
Acts 8.22..part.1.lib.2.c.13.p.131 col.2. ad finem, & inde.
Acts 16.14.part.1.lib.2.c.19.pag.155.col.2.num.20.
Acts 20.28.part.1.lib.2.c.18.pag.150.col.2. ad initium.
Acts 22.16.part.1.lib.3.c.1.p.283 num.20.col.1.

The Epiſtle to the Romans.

R*om*.4.20.part.1. lib.2.c.9.pag. 107.col.2. ad initium.

Rom.5.2. idem ibidem, pag.108 col.2.num.10.

Rom.5.12. part.2. lib.1.c.1.pag. 358.col.1.num.60.

Rom.6.6. part.4.lib.1.c.2.p.1018 col. 2.num.40.

Rom.6.12.part.4.lib.2.cap.7.pag. 1038. & inde, col.2. § 5.

Rom.7,8,11.23. part.4. lib.1.c.2 p.1019.col.1. ad finem capitis.

Rom.7.22. part.4. lib.2.c.3.pag. 1020.col.1.num.40.

Rom.7.23. part.4. lib.1.c.3. pag. 1020.col.1.num.50. & inde.

Rom.7.24.part.1.li.1.c.2.p.1019 col.1.num.10.

Rom.7.18.part.1.lib.2.c.14.pag. 135.col.1.num.50.& part.4.li.1.c.5 p.1030. § 6.

Rom.8.1.part.1.lib.2.c.11.p.119 col.1.num.20.25.

Rom.8.1,2.part.1.lib.3.c.7.p.296 col.1. num.20. & c.9.p.301. col.2 § 4. & part.4.lib.1.c.3.p.1020.col.1 num.50. & inde.

Rom.8.5.part.4.lib.2.c.5.p.1093 col.2. ad initium.

Rom.8.8.part.4. lib.1.c.5.p.1028 col.1.num.30.& inde.

Rom.8.10. part.4. lib.1.c.2.pag. 1019.col.1. ad initium.

Rom.8.38. part.1. lib.2.c.8.pag. 104.col.1.

Rom.8.6. part.2. lib.1.c.9.p.394 col.1.num.60.

Rom.9.3,20.part.1. lib.3.c.18.p. 328. § 1. & 2. a place excellently opened.

Rom.11.29. part.1. lib.3.c.13.p. 318.col.1. § 8.

Rom.11.20. part. 1. lib.2.c.13.p. 129.col.1.num. 20.

Rom.11.32. part.1. lib.2.c.34.p. 205.col.1.num.40.

Rom.14.13.part.1.lib.1.c.18.p.34 col.1.num.40. & inde.

Rom.14.15. part.1. lib.2.c.16.p. 145.§ 6.col.1.& lib.3.c.18.pag.329 col.2. § 3.

The firſt Epiſtle to the Corinthians.

1 C*or*.2.12.part.1.lib.2.c.44.p. 247.col.1.num.40.

1 Cor.2.14.part.4.l.1.c.2.p.1018 col.2.num.40. & inde.

1 Cor.2.16.part.1.lib.2.c.14.pag. 136.col.2.§ 7.

1 Cor.4.3,4. part.1.lib.2.c.13.p. 131.col.2. § 7.

1 Cor.5.5.part.4.lib.1.c.2.p.1018 col.2.num.10.

1 Cor.7.31.part.2. lib.1.c.3.pag. 364. col.2.num.50. & lib.2 cap.35 p.682.col.2. ad finem, & inde.

1 Cor.9.17.part.4. lib.1.c.2.pag. 1019.col.1.ad initium.

1 Cor.9.27,part,1.lib.3.c.18.pag. 330.col.1. & 2. § 4.

1 Cor.10.2,3,4.part, 1.lib,3.c.20 p.341.col.2. ad finem, & inde.

1 Cor.10.11, part,1. lib,2.c.13.p. 128,col:2.num.40.

1 Cor.10.13. part,3. lib,2.c.33.p. 995.col.2.num.30. & inde.

1 Cor.10.31.part,2.lib,2.c.2.pag. 439.col.2.num.50.

1 Cor.11.25, part,1. lib.2.c.36.p. 209.col.2. ad initium.

1 Cor.8.11.part,1.lib,3.c.18.pag. 229.col.2. § 3.

1 Cor.13.3, part,1.lib,2.c.2.p.75 num.10.

1 Cor.13.11, part,2.lib,3.c.10.p. 729.col: 1.num:40.& inde.

1 Cor.15.22. part,1.lib,2.c.16.p. 145,col:1. & inde, § 7.

1 Cor.2.14,part,4,lib,2.c.5.pag: 1093,num:10,col:2.

1 Cor.3.16, & 1 Cor.6.19,p.1021 col:1,num:40.

1 Cor.9.27, p.1024, col:1, ad finem & inde, & p.1038, col:2, § 4

The ſecond Epiſtle to the Corinthians.

2 C*or*:1.8, part,3. lib:2. cap.11 pag.875. col:2, § 9,& p.876

2 Cor:1.12, part,2,li:1.c.9.p.389 col:2,num:30.

2 Cor:3.6, part,4, lib:2.c.11.pag. 1113,col:2.num:40.

2 Cor:4.4, part:1, lib:1.c.5.p.11 col:1.num:50. & part:2. lib:2.c.34 p.668.col:2.num:20. & inde.

2 Cor:5.15,part:2.lib:3.c.8.pag. 724.col:1. ad initium.

2 Cor:5.17. part:4.lib:1.c.3.pag. 1020.col:1.num:40, & inde.

2 Cor:5.19,part:2.lib:1.c.1.p.358 ad initium.

2 Cor:5.21,part:1.lib:2,c.52.pag. 276.col:2.num:30.

2 Cor:6.9, part:3.lib:2.c.10.pag. 865.col:1.num:30.& inde.

2 Cor:13.5,part:1.lib:2.c.8.p.105 col:1. ad finem.

The Epiſtle to the Galathians.

G*Al*:3.3.part:1, lib:3.c.18. pag. 330, & p.331, § 5.

Gal.4.6, part:4,lib:1.c.3.p.1021 col:2, ad finem.

Gal:5.4,part:1, lib:3,c.18,p.331 § 6, col:2.

Gal:6.14. part:2,lib:1.c.1.p.359 col:1.num:20.

Gal:6.15,part:4.lib:1.c.3.p.1020 col:1.num:40, & inde.

The Epiſtle to the Epheſians.

E*pheſ*.2.2.part.2.lib.1.cap.2.pag 359. col.2.ad finem, & pag.360 ad initium.

Epheſ.3.16. part.4. lib.1.ca.3.p. 1020.col.1.num.40.

Epheſ.4.22. part.4. lib.1. ca.2.p. 1018.col.2.num.40.

Epheſ.4.23. part.4. lib. 1. ca.5.p. 1028.col.2.num.40.

Epheſ.5.5.part.2.lib.2.c.6.p.469 col.2.num.20,

Epheſ.5.18. part.4. lib.2. c.24.p. 1162.col.2.num.20.

Epheſ.5.26.part.1.lib.2. ca.18.p. 151.col.1.§ 4. & lib.3.c.1. pag.283 col.1.num.20.

Epheſ.6.11.part.1.lib.1.c,9.pag. 19.col.2.num.30.

Epheſ.6.13.idem, ibidem. num. 60. & inde.

Epheſ.6.14.part.1.lib.1.c.9.pag. 20.col.1.ad finem, & col.2. & pag. 21.c.20.col.1.per totum.

Epheſ.6.15.part.1.lib.1.c.12.p.23 col.pri.& 2.

Epheſ.6.16. part.1. lib.1.c.13.p. 23.& 24.

Epheſ.6.17.part.1.lib.1.cap.14 & 15.p.24,25.per totum.

Epheſ.6.18. part.1.lib.1.c.16.p. 26,27,28. & inde.

Epheſ.6. 12. part.2. lib.1. c.2.p. 359.ad finem,& p.360.ad initium.

The Epiſtle to the Philippians.

P*Hilip*.2.12. part.1.lib.2.c.13.p. 129.col.1. § 4.

Philip.2.21. part.1.lib.2.c.16.p. 145.col.1.ad initium.

The Epiſtle to the Coloſſians.

C*oloſ*.1.24.part.3.lib.2. c.14.p. 890.col.2.num.30.& inde.

Coloſ.3.5. part.1. lib.3.c.3. p.286 col.2.num.10.& part.2.lib.2.c.6.p. 460.col.2.num.20.

Coloſ.3.9. part.4. lib.1.c.2. pag. 1018.col.2.num.40.

The former Epiſtle to the Theſſalonians.

1. T*Heſ*.4.13. part.3. lib.2. c.1. p.796.col.1.ad initium.

1.Theſ.5.17. part.1.lib 1.c.16.p. 27.§ 3.

1.Theſſ.5.23. part.1.lib.3.cap.2. col.2.p.284.num.10. & inde.

The former Epiſtle to Timothy.

1. T*Im*.1.17. part.2.lib.3.c.9 p. 727.col.1.ad finem.

1.Tim.2.4. part.1. lib.2.c.32 pag. 196. col 1.ad initium.

1.Tim.2.6. part.1. lib.2. c.16. p. 143.col.2.§ 4.

1.Tim.29.part.2.lib.2.c.15.p 511 col.1. num.20. & inde.

1.Tim.3.7.part.2.lib.2.c.2.p.437 col.1.num.20.& inde.

1.Tim.3.15. part.1.lib.1.c.10.p. 21.col.2.num.20.

1.Tim. 4.4. part. 2. lib.2. c.1.p. 434.col.1.num.60.

1.Tim.4.8.part.2. lib.2. c.21.p. 565.col.2.num.40.

1.Tim.6.6. part.2. lib.2. c.21.p. 565.col.2.num.40.

1.Tim.6.9.part.2.lib.2.c.3.p.445 col.1.num.60.

1.Tim.6.10.part.2. lib.2.c.30.p. 630.col.1. ad finem.

1.Tim.1.19.

1.Tim.4.1.

1.Tim.6.10.part.1. lib.3.c.18.p. 332.col.1.§ 7.

The Epiſtle to the Hebrewes.

H*Eb*.2.9.part.1. lib.2.c.16.p. 143.§ 4.col.2.

Heb.3.13.part.4.lib.2.c.22.p.1153 col.1.num.30.

Heb. 6.4,5,6. part.1. lib.3.c.10 p.303.§ 2.& c.18.pa.332.col.2.§ 8 &p.333.

Heb.10.26,27,29.part.1.lib.3.c. 18.p.334.col.pri.§ 11,12,13,14.

Heb.10.26. part.1.lib.3. c.10. p. 304.col.2.num.40.& inde.

Heb. 10.29. part.1. lib.2. c.16.p. 145.§ 6.col.1.

Heb. 11.1. part.1.lib.2.c.9. p.108 col.1.num.40. & inde.

Heb.11.6.part.1 lib.1.c.[illegible].p.34 col.1.num.40. & inde,& part.2.lib. 1.c.7.p.381.col.1.num.50.

Heb.12.1.part.4.lib.1.c.2.p.1019 col.1.num.30.

Heb.6.17,18.part.1. lib.2. c.8.p. 103.col.2.num.30.& inde.

The Epiſtle of Saint Iames.

I*Am*.1.5.part.3.li.2.c.1.p.801.col. 2.num.10.

Iam.1.12. part. 1.lib.1. c.3.p.6. col.2.num.40.

Iam.1.13,14. part.4. lib.1.c.2.p. 1019.col.1.num.20.

Iam.3.15.part.2.lib.1.c.9.p.388 col.1.num.20.& inde.

Iam.4.4. part.2. lib.2.c.6.p.460 col.2.num.20.

The firſt Epiſtle of Saint Peter.

1. P*Et*.1.17.part.1.lib.2.cap.13. p.130.col.2.ad initium.

1.Pet.1.23.part.4. lib. 1.cap.3. p.1020.col.1.num.30.

1.Pet.3.3,4.part.2. lib.2.c.15.p. 511.col.1.num.20. & inde.

1.Pet.3.4. part.4. lib.1.c.3. num. 1020.col.1.num.40.

1.Pet.3.18.part.4. lib.1.cap.2.p. 1017.col.1.num.50.

The ſecond Epiſtle of S. Peter.

2. P*Eter* 1.9. part.1.lib.2.c.16.p. 145.§ 6. col.1. & part.1. lib. 3.c.19 p.335.§ 1.

2.Pet.2.1.part.1.lib.2.c.16.p.145 § 6.col.1.

2.Pet.2.20. part.1.lib.3. c.19. p. 335,§ 2.

The firſt Epiſtle of Saint Iohn.

1. I*Oh*.2.1.part.1.lib.2 c.36.p.211 col 1.num.20.

1.Iohn 2.2. part.1. lib.2. c.16. p. 143. col.2. § 4. & pag. 144. col. 1. num.60. & inde.

1.Iohn 2.16.part 2. lib.2. c.1. p. 429.col 1.num.40.

1.Iohn 2.2.part.2.lib.1.c.1.p.358 col.2.ad initium.

1.Iohn 3.2.part.2.lib.3.c.10.p.729 col.1.num.20. & inde.

1.Iohn 3.6,8,9.part.1.lib.1. c.11 p.22.col.1.ad finem & col.2.

1.Iohn 3.8.part.1.lib.2.c.16.col.1 ad finem, p.142.

1.Ioh.3.8,9. part.4. lib.2.c.23. p. 1156.col.1.num.40.

1.Ioh.4.18. part.1. c.13. lib.2. p. 130.col.1.§ 5.

1.Ioh.4.19. part.1. lib.2.c.11. p. 118.col.2.num.20.

1.Ioh.5.19 part.2.lib.1.c.1.p.358. col.1.num.40.

The Reuelation.

R*Euel*. 2.4. part.1.lib. 3.c.19.p. 336.§ 3.

Reuel.3.5. idem,ibid,col.2.§ 4.

Reuel. 12.4. part.1. lib. pri. c.5. col.2.p.10.num.30.

Reuel.12.7.ibid.p.11.col.2.nu.40

Reuel.21.10,11. part.2. lib 3.c.8 p.722.col.2.num.30.& inde.

Reuel. 22.11. part.1. lib 3. c.7.p. 295.col.2.num.30.

Reuel.2.2,3. part.1.lib.2.c.46.p. 255.col.2.num.10.

FINIS.

BRITISH MUSEUM

A TABLE OF ALL SVCH PRINCIPALL Points and paſſages, as are handled or occaſioned, in theſe foure Parts of the Christian Warfare: For the more eaſie vſe whereof, let the Reader vnderſtand the ſhorter Directions ſet downe after this manner: Part ſignifieth the Part, L. the Booke; C. the Chapter, P. the Page: Col. the Columne: §. the Section: num. the number, printed in the middle Margent.

A

THe Deuill is mans continuall Accuſer, Part.1.Lib. 1 Cap.4.Pag.9. Col.2.paulo ante initium.

Aduerſitie is a ſore tempter, part. 1.lib.1. ca.6.pag.15.col.1.§ 3 How to arme our ſelues againſt it, idem ibidem § 5.

Aduerſitie is nothing ſo dangerous, as proſperitie, part.2.lib.1.c. 5.p.370.col.2.§ 2.

Sathan in his temptations worketh vpon our affections, part.1.l.1 c.17.§ 1.

Afflictions are markes of Gods loue, part.1. lib.2. c.5. p.90.col.1 § 1. Though they be euill in their owne nature, yet they turne to the good of Gods childrẽ, idem ibid.§ 2

How afflictions are good as trials, how good as chaſtiſements, idem ibidem, & p.91.

Spirituall afflictions are more fearefull than corporall, yet they are no ſignes of Gods hatred where they are inflicted, § 3. They tend to mortification, p.92.§ 4. Gods deareſt children are ſubiect to afflictions, § 5. Chriſt did vndergo them, § 6. Of not profiting by afflictions, p.94.§ 7

Afflictions make Gods children bewray their corruptions, p.94.§ 8 And why, p.95.§ 9.

Tentations ariſing from afflictions, are leſſe dangerous than thoſe that ariſe from proſperitie, part.3. lib.1 c.1.p.752.col.2. & inde § 2.

Diuers deſcriptions of afflictions being diuerſly conſidered, p.753.§ 3. & inde.

Afflictions are either puniſhments, or ſinnes, p.754. § 4.& inde. The Lord is the efficient cauſe of all afflictions, if they be not ſinnes, c.2 p.756.§ 1. whereby hee manifeſteth his iuſtice, and declareth his mercy. The inſtrumentall cauſes of afflictions are the whole army of all Gods creatures. Of the ends, effects, ſubiect, and adiuncts of afflictions, p. 757.§ 2.

Afflictions are euill in their owne nature, p.758. § 3. They incline to good, thorough Gods power, and wiſdome, p.759.§ 4. Out of affliction ariſeth a dangerous temptation, c.3.p.759.§ 1. How the Deuill preſſeth the ſame, p.760.§ 2. How the world, p.761.§ 3. And how the fleſh, p.762 § 4.

Afflictions may not diſcourage vs from fighting againſt our common enemies, c.4.p.762.§ 1. Wee ought to prepare our ſelues to fight againſt afflictions, and to that end prouide our ſelues with all ſpirituall armour, § 3.

Rules to be obſerued by thoſe that prepare to conflict with afflictions. Firſt, ſtudy Gods Word, p.773.c.5 § 1. Secondly, be frequent and feruent in prayer, p.774.§ 2. Thirdly, in proſperity moderate and mortifie thine affections, p.775.§ 3. Fourthly, fain not afflictions in thine imagination, p.776.§ 4. Fiftly, by feare doe not anticipate thine afflictions, p.777,778 § 5. Yet with Chriſtian prouidence we ought to foreſee them before they fall, p.780.§ 7.

They that will be able to grapple with afflictions, may not fixe their hearts on worldly things, nor enioy them as perpetuities, but moueables, p.781.§ 8.

Looke for afflictions if thou wilt be able to vndergoe them, pag. 782 num.20. & inde.

In proſperity fore-caſt what afflictions may befall thee, § 9.

Wee may neither ſecurely contemne afflictions, nor faintly yeeld vnder them, p.783.§ 10.

Wee ought not wilfully to runne into afflictions, p.784.§ 11.

Wee are to vſe all good meanes for auoiding of, or being deliuered from afflictions, pag. 789. & inde, § 12.

Three Rules to be vſed by thoſe that deſire to vſe the meanes that they may be freed from afflictions, idem ibidem, p.790.

Affliction is the obiect of patience, p.793.§ 3.

How to auoid ſtupiditie in affliction, p.795.§ 6.

Moderate griefe in affliction was foretold by our Sauiour, and practiſed by the Saints, p.796.§ 7.

In all afflictions flie to God by prayer, part.1. lib.2. p.809,8[illegible].§ 3,4,5,6. For affliction is the moſt ſeaſonable time for prayer, idem ibidem.

Gods

Gods Saints in their afflictions, haue alwayes prayed, pag. 811, 812 § 7, 8.

How Prayers againſt afflictions ought to be qualified, c.5.p.817. & inde.

After what manner it is lawfull to pray for deliuerance from afflictions, p.818. § 2.

God is the principall cauſe of all our afflictions, as hee doth preordaine vs to ſuffer them, c.6.p.824 § 1. As he executeth his Decree, p. 825. § 2. As he is good, p.826.num. 30.col.1. The conſideration whereof is very comfortable in trouble, p. 827. § 3.

No affliction happeneth to man without Gods ſpeciall appointment, c.7.p.829. § 1.

In all afflictions God ruleth the afflicters, whether creatures reaſonable, or vnreaſonable: Good and euill Angels, p.831. § 3. Intentions of wicked and vngodly men, p.832 § 4.

Why God afflicteth his people rather by wicked inſtruments, than with his owne hand, p.833. § 5 & 6

How it ſtands with Gods iuſtice to puniſh the wicked, that are afflicters of his people, p.834. § 7.

We are not vtterly to neglect inferiour cauſes of our afflictions, § 8

The inferiour cauſes of our afflictions, haue all their ends ſo ordered, as may beſt make for Gods glory, and moſt for the ſaluation of his Elect, p.835. § 9.

Gods prouidence diſpoſeth af all our afflictions, for their manner, meaſure, and continuance, p.836 § 10.

Sin is the deſeruing cauſe of all afflictions, c.8.p.837. § 1.

If God doe not alwayes afflict for ſin, yet the beſt vſe wee can make of afflictions, is to aſcribe them to our ſinnes, p.838. § 2.

All our afflictions muſt bring vs to a ſight of ſin, and repentance for it in particular, p.839. § 3.

If wee impute our afflictions to our ſinnes we will not murmure againſt them, p.840. § 4.

Thoſe confuted that ſay they ſuffer afflictions vndeſerued, pag.841 § 5.

The ſmalneſſe of our afflictions compared with the greatneſſe of our ſinnes, may be a great comfort in trouble, p.846. § 12. So to conſider that others leſſe offending than we, are more puniſhed than we, pag.847 § 13.

They are weake, that think themſelues more puniſhed, than others that haue more offended, pag 848 § 14.

Wee ought to be aſſured that all our afflictions doe ſpring out of the Fountaine of Gods loue, c.9.p.849 § 1.

It is a worldly practice, and a very dangerous temptation to iudge of Gods loue or hatred to men, by their outward eſtate, pag 850. § 2, 3

Afflictions are no ſignes of Gods hatred, p.851. § 4.

The afflictions of the faithfull are no puniſhments properly, but paternall chaſtiſements: and why, p. 852, 853, 854, 855. & inde, § 6, 7, 8 9, 10, 11.

Their obiection anſwered, that affirme, Dauids afflictions were puniſhments of his ſinnes, p.856. § 12

The death of the faithfull no puniſhment of their ſinnes, pag. 857 858. § 13, 14.

Of the differences betweene the afflictions of the faithfull, and the puniſhments of the wicked, p.858 859. § 15.

There could be no comfort in afflictions, if they were puniſhments, p.860. § 15.

God in afflicting his children, loueth them like a good Father to profit them, not like a fond Mother to pleaſe them, c 10.p.861. § 1.

The Lord ſheweth his fatherly loue in afflicting his children, p.862 § 2.

God in his loue appointeth his a certaine meaſure of affliction which cannot be exceeded, p.863. § 3.

The afflictions of Gods children are ſmall and light, pag. 864, 865 § 4.

They are momentany and ſhort, § 5.

Thoſe that ſay they are long, anſwered, p.866. § 6.

Our afflictions exceed not our ſtrength, p.867, 868. § 1.c.11.

Chriſt tempereth that cup, that it exceed not our ſtrength, p.869. § 2

The Holy Ghoſt aſſiſteth the godly in all their afflictions, p.870. § 3

He giueth ſtrength to beare them p.871. § 4.

Hee mingleth comforts and benefits with our afflictions, p.872. § 2

Thoſe anſwered, that affirme, their afflictions exceed their ioyes, p.873. § 6.

The afflicted may comfort themſelues by the conſideration of thoſe commodities they yet enioy, p.874 § 7.

In affliction God giueth ſpirituall comforts, p.875. § 8.

Paul not afflicted aboue his ſtrength, p.876. § 9.

The complaints of the faithfull, doe not argue their afflictions inſupportable, § 10.

They that fall away in affliction doe not thereby proue afflictions to be inſupportable, pag.877. § 11. All which yeeldeth much comfort, § 12

Our ſtate of corruption neceſſarily requireth affliction, c.12.p.878 § 1.

God taketh no delight in our ſmart, but vſeth all meanes to preuent our puniſhment, p.879. § 2

The meaſure of our afflictions goeth not beyond our neceſſitie, pag. 880. § 3.

By the greatneſſe of our afflictions we ſhould learne to gueſſe at the grieuouſneſſe of our ſinnes, p.881 § 4.

Great afflictions vſually doe argue grieuous ſinnes, § 5.

God is glorified in his afflicted children, they fight therein as Souldiers, they are corrected thereby as children, c 13. p.882. § 1.

God manifeſteth his goodnes and power, in ſupporting his children, when they are afflicted, pag.883. § 2

Afflictions are trials of our ſpirituall graces, p.884. § 3.

It is a great comfort to conſider that God is glorified, when wee are af-afflicted, pag. 885. § 4.

Our Neighbours receiue benefits by the afflictions of the faithfull: Learning to feare God in his judgments, p.886.§ 1.c.14.

They reſtraine from like ſinnes which they ſee puniſhed in the faithfull, § 2.

As they manifeſt Gods graces in his people, making them examples of pietie vnto others, p.887. § 3

As they are patternes of humane frailtie, p.888. § 4.

They are brought to ſee Gods perfections in the imperfections of his people, p.889. § 5.

By afflictions Gods people are made compaſſionate, more ready and able to comfort others, § 6.

The good of our brethren that comes to them by our afflictions, ſhould much comfort vs in induring of them, p.890. § 7.

The nature of afflictions which is euill, is changed to the faithfull, p.891.c.15. § 1.

Afflictions cannot hurt the faithfull, § 2.

They depriue not of bleſſings which are of the greateſt worth, but rather increaſe them, p.892 § 3.

They bring not vpon vs the chiefeſt euils that are to be feared and auoided, but rather the contrarie good, § 4.

It is a great euill to be wholy exempted from afflictions, p.893 col.1. § 5.

God in afflicting his aymeth at their good, c.16 p.893. § 1.

Sometimes they are trials of his graces, p.894. § 2.

God afflicting his trieth them not that he may know them better, but that they may be the better known vnto themſelues and others, p.895. § 3,4.

By afflictions the Lord trieth whether wee be true Chriſtians or no, p.896. § 5.

By afflictions hee trieth to what meaſure of grace we haue attained, p.897.§ 6.

Hee thereby trieth the meaſure of our loue, patience, humility and obedience, p.898. § 7.

Hee principally afflicteth vs for his own glorie, & for the aduancement of our eſteeme, pag. 899. § 8

By afflictions he diſcouereth our corruptions and infirmities, for our humiliation, p.900.§ 9.

We ought to reioice in our afflictions, for in them God is glorified, and we aſſured of our adoption, vbi ſupra, c.17.p.900. § 1.

How wee may know whether afflictions be trials of grace, or chaſtiſements for ſins, p.901. § 2.

When afflictions haue a good iſſue and tend to our profit, then wee may be comforted in them, § 3.

Thoſe anſwered, that object the greatneſſe of their afflictions, and the ſmalneſſe of their ſtrength, § 4.

Greateſt afflictions ſhould bring greateſt comforts: becauſe they are greateſt ſignes of Gods grace beſtowed vpon vs, p 903. § 5.

God much honoureth his children in their fiery afflictions, p.904 § 6.

Our afflictions further our conuerſion, c.18. § 1,2. p.905.

They prepare to heare the Word, p.906. § 3.

They worke in vs contrition and humiliation, p.907. § 4.

Afflictions are the laſt meanes that God ordinarily vſeth to conuert obſtinate ſinners, pag.907. § 5

The afflictions that further conuerſion bring much comfort, p.908 § 6.

One maine end of afflictions is, to keepe thoſe that are afflicted from falling into thoſe ſins, whereunto they are naturally inclined, c.19.p.908,909. § 1.

Which may moue vs to beare them patiently, p.910. § 2

Afflictions moue effectually to forſake ſin, p.911. § 4.

Afflictions cauſe vs to vſe all good meanes for the mortifying of our ſins, p.912. § 5.

God by afflictions mortifieth pride, carnall concupiſcence, and ſelfe-loue, § 6.

If wee were not weaned from it, by afflictions wee ſhould immoderately loue the world, pag.913. § 7

It is a great mercy thereby to be weaned from it, pag. 914. & inde, § 8,9,10.

God vſeth afflictions to mortifie our ſins, p.616,917, § 11.

Our grieuous afflictions argue our great ſins, p.918, § 12.

If wee can indure, to be eaſed of temporall afflictions; much more ought we to beare, to be freed from thoſe that are eternall, p.919, § 13

Afflictions exerciſe, and thereby preſerue Gods ſauing graces in vs, c.20, § 1, pag. vbi ſupra.

Afflictions do not onely preſerue and confirme, but alſo increaſe Gods ſauing graces in vs, pag.920, § 2.

God by afflictions increaſeth in vs ſauing knowledge, and ſpirituall wiſdome, p. 921, § 3.

The hurt of our afflictions is exceeded by the ſpirituall wiſdome that we gaine thereby, pag.922, § 4

Afflictions are notable meanes, to put vs in remembrance of God, p.923, § 5.

Afflictions ſtrengthen our faith, by making vs more carefull in the vſe of good meanes, and by exerciſing it with theſe trials, c.21.p.924 § 1.

Hereby wee gaine experience of the truth of Gods threatnings, and promiſes, p.925, § 2.

Afflictions cauſe vs to renew our repentance, and aſſure that ſins repented, ſhall not come into condemnation, § 3.

Afflictions ſtrengthen our faith as they are ſignes of our Election, § 4. And of our effectuall calling, p.926. § 5. And of our Adoption, p. 927. § 6.

By afflictions our affiance in God is confirmed and increaſed, c.22.p. 428, § 1.

So is our hope, p.929, § 2. And our loue towards him, § 3. Our feare of him, pag. 930, § 4. col:2 And our humilitie, pag. 931,932 § 5.

By afflictions wee come to examine our wayes, ſee our ſins, and to bewaile them with bitter griefe, c. 23, p.932,933, § 1.

Wee are by afflictions mooued to hate ſinne, to confeſſe and forſake it, to ſerue the Lord in holines and righteouſnes, § 2.

By afflictions God worketh in vs obedience to his will, pag.934,935 § 3,&4. All which conſiderations may mooue vs to beare them with patience, § 5.

By afflictions Gods people are made more deuout and zealous in the duties of his ſeruice, p.936, § 6 They are made able to performe the duty of prayer, p.937, § 7.

For in affliction we can ſtirre vp our ſelues to call vpon God with many waighty Reaſons, p.938, § 8

We are made more frequent and feruent in prayer, p.939 § 9.

By afflictions we are made more ſincere in confeſſion of ſin, and more earneſt in our petitions, pag. 940 § 10.

By them we are moued to heartie thanksgiuing, § 11, col:2. Which may [illegible]e vs to comfort in our afflictions, p.941, § 12.

God by afflictions worketh and increaſeth patience in vs, pag.942 § 13.

By afflictions we are moued to do iuſtice to all men, c.24 p.942,943 § 1.

By afflictions wee are made more mercifull to thoſe that are in miſery, § 2.

Afflictions make vs more meeke, humble and courteous towards others our Neighbours, § 3, col:2.

By afflictions wee attaine the knowledge of our ſelues, pag.944 945, § 4.

The exerciſe of afflictions increaſeth our ſtrength to bear them, p.946, § 5.

Afflictions increaſe our courage, p.947, § 6.

By afflictions men may profit much in ciuill wiſdome and policy, c.25, p.948, § 1.

By afflictions wee may learne to diſtinguiſh betweene our Friends and Flatterers, p.949, § 2.

When afflictions diſcouer our ſpirituall graces, they crowne vs with a good Name, § 3, col:2.

By afflictions we come to haue a reliſh of Gods bleſſings, pag.950 § 4.

Afflictions preſerue vs from condemnation, cap,26, p.951, col: 2, § 1.

God by afflictions furthereth our euerlaſting glory and ſaluation, p. 952, col:2, § 2.

Afflictions fit and prepare vs for the Kingdome of heauen, p.953, § 3

By afflictions wee are aſſured of euerlaſting happines. Firſt, through Gods gsacious promiſes made to thoſe that are afflicted, p.954, § 4 Secondly, by Gods workes, pag.655 § 5. Thirdly, they keepe vs in the way of righteouſnes, that leadeth to euerlaſting happines, p.656, § 6

Afflictions are the way whereby we muſt enter into Gods Kingdom, p.957, § 7.

They further vs in attaining vnto happineſſe, p.958, § 8.

By our afflictions our heauenly glory ſhall be much increaſed, § 9

How we may come to rejoyce in afflictions, p.959,960, § 10.

God altereth their nature, and maketh them by his power to become profitable, c.27, p.961, § 1.

Afflictions make the wicked worſe, and why, p.962,963, § 2,3,4

The afflictions of wicked men now, doe not free them from puniſhmenents hereafter, but increaſe them rather, § 5.

Afflictions out of their right vſe bring no preſent benefit to the faithfull, p.964. § 6.

God hath appointed his to ſuffer afflictions, in this world, that in the other they may inherit happineſſe, c.28. p.965, § 1.

This world is the place of affliction, p.966, § 2,3.

Our afflictions are profitable, ſhort and light, 968, § 3.

God appoints his Angels to aſſiſt his when they are afflicted, § 6.

In all our afflictions, Chriſt is our co-partner and aſſiſtant, p.969 § 7.

Our Father Adam indured great afflictions, c.29. p.970. So did other Saints, p.971, § 1.

Of the afflictions of Abraham, p.972. § 2.

Of Iſaacs, and Iacobs, p.973, § 3,4

Of the afflictions of Moſes, Iob, and Dauid, p.974, § 5,6.

Of the Apoſtles afflictions, eſpecially thoſe of S. Paul, pag.975. § 7.

It is the lot of the whole Church Militant to ſuffer afflictions, pag. 976, § 8.

The Scriptures foretell the afflictions of the faithfull, p.976, § 9

It is a comfort to communicate with the Saints in affliction, p.977 § 10.

They that complaine they are afflicted for their ſins, may be comforted, p.978, § 11.

Of the manifold afflictions Chriſt ſuffered for vs, both in his life, and death, c.30. p.978,979, § 1.

He ſuffered all afflictions being innocent and iuſt, p.980. § 2.

Hee was afflicted for vs that are ſinners, § 3.

They that cannot ſuffer afflictions with Chriſt are not worthy to raigne with him, p.981, § 4.

God hath pre-ordained thoſe to be like Chriſt in ſuffering afflictions with him, that ſhall be like him in glory, p.981, § 5.

Many are content to raigne with Chriſt in glory, few to ſuffer with him in affliction, p.983, § 6.

Of the manifold afflictions, worldlings ſuffer for the attaining of earthly vanities, c.31. pag.984 985, § 1, 2.

Of the afflictions they vndergoe to attaine earthly trifles, pag.985, 986, § 3.

Our light afflictions compared with the helliſh torments of the damned, are very comfortable, p. 987, § 4.

Compare earthly afflictions with heauenly ioyes, and they will be comfortable, col. 2. § 5.

Wee ought to neglect no lawfull meanes, for attaining comfort in, or freedome from afflictions, cap.32 p.988, § 1.

Wee ought to make our afflictions knowne to faithfull and able friends, § 2. & p.984, § 3.

The Table.

We muſt mingle lawfull recreations with our heauy afflictions, p. 990. § 4.col.2.

God deliuereth his from their afflictions in fit time, c.33. § 1.

God taketh notice of all our afflictions, to free vs from them, pag. 991. § 2.

God is preſent with the faithfull in their afflictions, to helpe and relieue vs in them, p.992. § 3. Which conſiderations are exceeding comfortable, p.993. § 4.col.2.

His power is al-ſufficient, col.2 § 5.

His loue ſheweth hee is willing and ready to helpe vs, p.994. § 6.

He eſpecially ſheweth his loue to the faithfull, in the time of their afflictions, § 7.col.2.

Gods promiſes to helpe in afflictions, yeeld much comfort, pag. 996. § 8.

Therefore he is called the God of comfort, p.996. § 9.

Examples of ſome in affliction, that haue beene deliuered, § 10.

The deliuerance of others may worke great comfort to the hearts of thoſe that are afflicted, pag.997 § 11.

Our owne deliuerances may be a comfort in preſent afflictions, col. 2. § 12.

How the promiſes of God concerning deliuerance out of troubles, are to be conceiued, c.34.pag. 998. § 1.

After deliuerance out of afflictions, giue God his glory, p.1007 1008. § 7.

For patience in afflictions, and meanes how to attaine vnto it. See Patience.

Affinitie with the wicked is dangerous, part.2. lib.1.c.17.p.422 col.2. § 13.

All not to be ſaued, part.1. lib.2 cap.7.p.99. § 1.

How the word All is vſed in holy Scripture, lib.2.c.16.p.144.col. 2. § 5.

An incouragement and exhortation to Almes. A direction how to doe that duty, part.2.lib.3.c.25.p. 591,592. § 14,15.

How the Deuill tempteth an ambitious perſon, part.1. lib.1.cap.1 § 1.

How the Deuill transformeth himſelfe into an Angell of Light, part.1.lib.1.c.21.p.44. § 6.

God is not angry with the faithfull, when hee ſeemeth to frowne vpon them, part.1.lib.2.c.18.pag. 152.col.1. § 6.

How God may be ſaid to be angry with his people, and what we ſhould doe, when the effects of this anger are vpon vs, c.34.p.203,204

How God is ſaid to be angry with his children, lib.3.c.13.p.318 col.1. ad initium.

In what ſenſe God is ſaid to be angry with his children, and to puniſh them, p.852. § 5.

Sathan preſſeth with aſſaults where allurements will not preuaile, part.1.lib.1.c.5.p.8,9.num. 60. & inde.

Coſtly apparell is lawfull for thoſe that are in high place, part.2 lib.2.c.15.p.510.col.2. § 1.

Thoſe of ranke and qualitie may not weare apparell that is ſordid and baſe, p.511.col.1. § 2.

Of the great abuſe of apparell through exceſſiue brauery, col.2 § 3.

Apparell extreamely abuſed in reſpect of coſtlineſſe, pag.512.col. 1. § 4.

Of the abuſe of apparell in reſpect of faſhions, col.2. § 5.

Of the abuſe of apparell in regard of the ends of it. Thoſe are honeſty, and profit, pag.513. col.1 § 6.

How coſtly apparell may be abuſed in the vſe of it, col.2. § 7.

Reaſons to diſſwade from all abuſe in apparell: Firſt, God forbiddeth it, p.514.col.1. § 8.

Secondly, the originall inſtitution of apparell ſhould make vs beware of pride in it, § 9. col.2.

Thirdly, exceſſiue brauery in apparell, doth not become Chriſtians, p.515.col. § 10.

Fourthly, brauery therein hath no worth or excellency, col.2. § 11

They that weare it, haue no preheminence aboue thoſe that are of baſe condition, pag.516.col.1. § 12.

Fiftly, it doth not better the wearers of it, col.2. § 13.

It makes them not the more commendable, § 14.

It neither graceth the beautifull, nor the deformed: the vertuous, nor the vicious, p.517. § 15.

Coſtly apparell makes not thoſe that weare it to be more reſpected, p.518. § 16.

The euils which accompany exceſſiue brauery in apparell, are diuers. Firſt, it is a ſin againſt God, col.2. § 17.

Secondly, it argueth the neglect of the ſoule, p.519. § 18.

Thirdly, they giue, that weare it, offence vnto their brethren, col.2 § 9.

Diuers elegant reſemblances of thoſe that are proud in their apparell, p.517.col.2.num.4. & p.519 col.1. ad initium, & inde.

The weakneſſe of their excuſe that plead internall humility, notwithſtanding their outward brauery. p.520.col.1. § 20.

It is ill for a woman to pleaſe her husband by brauery in apparell, § 21.

Exceſſe in apparell is the cauſe of many ſins, in reſpect of thoſe that weare it. It cauſeth many euils, both to priuate perſons, and to Common-wealths, pag.521,522. § 22,23.

Coſtly and vaine apparell is the fruit of ſelfe-loue, col.2. § 24.

Of the puniſhments that God inflicteth vpon pride in apparell, p. 523.col.1. § 25.

The ſpirituall ornaments of the ſoule, to be preferred before any coſtly apparell of the body, col.2 § 26.

By temptations God directeth his to betake themſelues to their ſpirituall armour, part.1.lib.1.cap.2 p.4.col.2.num.50.

The neceſſitie of this Chriſtian armour. The armour of a Chriſtian muſt be ſpirituall, lib.1.c.9.p.19 § 1,2,3.

The defenſiue armour of a Chriſtian is ſet downe in all the parts of it, ibid, c.10,11,12,13,14.

The offenſiue, lib.1.c:15,16.

Arts Mechanicall and Liberall are in themſelues good, and the gifts of God, part.2.lib.1.c.11.pag. 398.col.2. § 1.

How they are abuſed, p.399.col. 1. § 2.

In which abuſes, they are to be contemned, idem ibidem, § 3.

Aſſaults of ſpirituall enemies are not to be auoided, by thoſe that begin to be faithfull, part.1.lib.1.c. 1.p.1. & 2.

All are aſſaulted, ſome are foiled, idem, ibidem, pag.2.col.2 ad finem.

The Councell of Trent holds aſſurance to be hereticall, part.1.lib. 2.c.8.p.102. § 2.

Wee may be aſſured of our particular election, p.103.col.1.num. 30.& inde.

The indefinitenes of Gods promiſes hinders not the aſſurance of his ſeruants, p.104.col.2. § 5.

They may bee aſſured they are faithfull, to whom the promiſes of the Goſpell are made, ibidem, § 6.

A weake Chriſtian is not aſſured at all times, and why, pag.106 § 7.

By what Arguments good Chriſtians may be aſſured of their Election, c.9.p.106.& inde.

Wee muſt be aſſured of our Redemption, p.107. § 2.

Our aſſurance is not to be mixed with doubting, § 3.

To further a Chriſtians aſſurance, the Sacraments be great helps, pag.110. So is prayer, pag. 111. § 8. And the profeſſion of our faith, § 9.

There is aſſurance ariſing from the teſtimony of Gods Spirit, cap. 10. p.114. & inde.

Of thoſe meanes whereby aſſurance of Election may bee gained, part.1.lib.2.cap.11.p.118.& inde.

Teſtimonies againſt aſſurance anſwered, cap.13.p.127. § 1.

It is no Arrogancie for a Chriſtian to be aſſured of his ſaluation, c.14.p.133. & inde.

Saint Auguſtines three things whereby he gained aſſurance, p.134 col.1.num.40.

Arguments againſt particular aſſurance anſwered, cap.14.per totum caput 11.

God particularly aſſureth our Election, § 8.p.137.

It dependeth not vpon the aſſurance of our faith and repentance, col.2. § 9.

The faithfull may be aſſured that Gods Spirit dwelleth in them, and how, part.4.lib.2.c.11.p.1112 § 1 & inde.

The Deuill is very audacious againſt Mankind, part.1. lib.1.c.5 p.11.col.2.

The Conſideration whereof ſhould make vs the more valiant and couragious, idem, ibidem, lege totum caput.

How worldly Authoritie may bee iudged either good, or bad, part. 2. lib. 2. cap. 11. pag. 484. § 1.

There is no great excellencie in earthly Authoritie, pag. 485 § 2.

It profits not to attaine grace, col.2. § 3.

Hee that hath moſt Authoritie in ruling others, hath many times leaſt power to rule himſelfe, pag.486. col.1. § 4.

Worldly Authoritie freeth not from the greateſt euils, col.2 § 5.

It is vſually accompanied with Pride and Tyranny, pag. 487. § 6.

With Iniuſtice and oppreſſion, p.488. § 7.

It expoſeth men to enuy, and many dangers, p.489. § 8.

Abuſed Authoritie ſubiecteth men to Gods vengeance, § 9.

Spirituall Authoritie to bee preferred before worldly, col.2. § 10.

B

There is no armour ſet out for the ſafegard of a Chriſtians backe. And why, part.1. lib.1. cap.16. pag. 30. § 12. col. 1.& inde.

Many are baptized, that neuer ſhall bee ſaued, part. 1. lib. 3. cap.21. pag.344. col.1.num.40.

What benefit wee haue by Baptiſme, part.1. lib.2. cap.36.col.1 num. 30.& inde.

Euery one ſhall be a Conquerour that will combat in the Lords battailes, part.1. lib.1.c.3.p.7.col.2. ad finem capitis.

Chriſtians muſt perſeuere in fighting the battailes of the Lord, cap.22.lib.1.part.1.pag.44 § 6.

How they that liue after the fleſh, are bound to beleeue, part. 1.lib.2. cap.9. pag.111. col. 2. & inde.

They that truly beleeue need not doubt, becauſe Hereticks and Carnaliſts boaſt of Faith, part. 1. lib.2.cap.14. pag.138. col.2. § 11.

Beauty is good as being the gift of God, part.2.lib.1.cap.13.p.403 § 1.

The things that are required to make it good, p.404.col.2.

Beautie of the body without that of the mind, is of no worth, § 3.

Beautie ill becommeth, when we are proud of, and ſet our hearts vpon it, p.405. § 4.

Beauty is a gift common with Mankind, to the brute creatures, col.2. § 5.

The vanitie of beauty prooued, both by teſtimonias, and reaſons, p. 406. § 6.7,8,9.

Where is ſhewed, that God eſteemes it not. It is good rather to thoſe that ſee, than thoſe that haue it. It is momentany and mutable.

Wee muſt neglect the beauty of the body, and labour after that of the mind, pag.408, § 10.

Beauty too much affected, maketh keth the body tender, ſoft, and ſickly; it hindereth vertue, and furthereth vice, § 11,12.

Beautie and Chaſtitie ſeldome meete together, pag. 408. col.2, § 13.

It maketh proud, and neglectfull of all holy duties, pag. 409 § 14.

It deceiueth, and allureth to ſin, col.2. § 15.

One in Saint Auguſtine cenſured for deforming himſelfe, p.410. col.1.num.20.

Beautie is oftentimes hurtfull to the friends of thoſe that enioy it, § 16.

Wee ought to fixe our loue vpon diuine beauty, § 17.

The beauty of the ſoule, is much more excellent, than that of the body, p.411. § 18.

The beginnings of ſinne are carefully to be reſiſted, part.4. lib.2.ca. 22.1152. & inde, § 2,3,4,5.

Bellarmines Workes not vſually read among the Papiſts without licence, part.4.lib.1.cap.6.p.1036 col.2.ad initium.

Of the blind woman mentioned in Seneca, dull for want of ſight, and not of light, part.1. lib.2.c.23 p.170.col.1.num.20.

Of blaſphemous ſuggeſtions which ſeeme to haue ſome ground, whence they riſe, part.1.lib.3.c.11.p.308. col.1. § 2.

How they may be reſiſted, § 3.

Of blaſphemous thoughts void of reaſon, and of the Deuils ſcope in ſuggeſting them, p.309. § 4,5.

What comforts there are, to ſtrengthen vs againſt theſe wicked blaſphemies, p.310.311. §.6,7,8,9 10.

In thoſe Sections it is prooued, that they are not our owne ſinnes, that they are common to afflicted Chriſtians, that it is not a ſinne to be tempted with them, ſo be it we reſiſt them. How to know when we reſiſt them. That they are not ſins but croſſes to the faithfull.

Though our corrupt fleſh be tainted with blaſphemous thoughts yet we haue no cauſe to deſpaire, pag. 312. § 11.

The meanes whereby men may be freed from helliſh blaſphemies; Firſt, Prayer; Secondly, an appeale to God; Thirdly, make ſmall account of them. Fourthly, trouble not the mind too much with them; Fiftly, auoide idleneſſe, and ſolitarineſſe. Sixtly, ſtriue not too earneſtly againſt them, pa. 212, 213. § 12, 13, 14, 15,16,17, 18.

The body of man compared to Earth, to Tabernacles, and Glaſſes, part. 2.lib.2.c.29. p.620.col.1 num.10. & inde.

The body is but the ſeruant of the Soule in committing ſinne, part.4. lib. 1. cap. 6. pag. 1034. § 6.

Of the Booke of Life, what it is to be written in it, and what to be blotted out of it, part.1.lib.3.c. 16. p.323. § 1,2,3,4.

What is meant by the breſt-plate of righteouſneſſe, part.1.lib.1.c.11 p.22.col.1. § 1.

The neceſſitie of the breſt-plate of righteouſneſſe is great, the lack of it is very lamentable, idem ibidem. § 2.

C

E*Very good perſon hath a Calling both particular and generall, wherein he ought to be and abide*, part.1. lib.1. cap.9. pag.20. col.2.

Our Calling is not grounded vpon our worthineſſe, part.1.lib.2. c.4.p.87. § 4.

No mans particular ſhould withdraw him from the duties of his generall calling, part.4.lib.1.c.15.p. 1067. § 5.

Certaintie may ſtand with weakneſſe of faith, part.1. lib.2.c.14.p. 134.col.1.& inde. § 3.

It is no certaintie, that is neuer ſhaken, idem ibidem, col.2. ad initium.

A ciuill life is no ſure ſigne of being in the eſtate of grace, part. 4. lib.1. cap.12. pag.1054. col.1. § 5.

The fleſh will perſwade men to reſt in externall Ceremonies, pag. 1055. § 7.

Chriſt is an excellent Shield againſt all temptations, part.1.lib.1. c.22.p.54.55. § 15.16.

Chriſts Death and Merits belong to euery Beleeuer, lib.2.cap.18 pag.150.col.2. § 3.

Chriſt is giuen to Beleeuers, and they to him, and how, cap.19.pag. 156.col.2. § 4.

Let thoſe that deſire to be reconciled to God, come onely to Chriſt, c.33.p.201. § 8.

What it is to come to Chriſt, § 9.

The publique Church to be frequented of all, except Kings. Why they are exempted, part.2.lib.2.cap. 31.p.645. ad initium. & inde.

The Deuill takes aduantage of mens complexions, part.1.lib.1.cap. 17.pag.31. § 6.

Sathans combats with vs are moſt cruell and cowardly, c.21.pag. 42.col.1. § 1.

All ſpirituall comforts come vnto vs in Chriſt, part.1. lib.2. cap.4 pag.89.col.2. § 10.

Comminations are profitable for Gods children, lib.2.c.13.p.128.col. 1. § 2.

The World allureth men to ſin, by wicked company, part.2.lib.1.c. 17.p.418. § 1.

All company with wicked men is not vnlawfull, § 2.

In what caſes wicked company may be indured, § 3. & 4.

When it ought not to be admitted, p.419. § 5.

Wicked company is forbidden, § 6. col.2.

Gods Saints haue euer ſhunned it, p.420. § 7.

Wicked company a notable inducement to draw one to commit ſin, p.421. § 8, 9.

It is hard to keepe company with the wicked, and not to be acceſſary to their wickedneſſe, pag. 421 § 10.

Wicked company brandeth their names with infamy that keepe it, § 11.

It maketh men lyable to Gods iudgements, p.422. § 12.

The Common-wealth of Jſrael was beyond all others, exceeding ancient, part.2.lib.2.cap.12.p.495 § 11. col.1.num.10.

Why the Lord is called the God of comfort, part.3. lib.cap.33.pag. 995.996. § 6.

How it is to be conceiued, when wee ſay the Church cannot erre, pag. 1094. c.5. col.2. num. 20.& inde.

Which ſhould moue vs to conforme our iudgement to the Analogie of Faith, idem ibidem.

Our communion with Chriſt, aſſures the forgiueneſſe of our ſins, part.1.lib.2. cap.37.pag.217.col.2. § 10.

Of that communion which the holy ſhall haue with God in Heauen. See in this Table, the joyes of Heauen.

The comfort that commeth by ſpirituall conflict, to the righteous, part.1.lib.1.cap.1.p.3.col.2.

The profit that comes by ſpirituall conflicts, c.3.p.5.col.2.

The conditions of Gods couenant with man, are ſometimes vnderſtood, ſometimes expreſſed, but neuer excluded, cap.16.p.144. col.1.num.20.

Chriſtian conference is a great helpe to hearing, cap. 28.pag.184 col.1.num.10.

There is a great conflict in euery regenerate perſon, part.4. lib.2.c. 1. per totum. p.1079.

There was no ſuch conflict while man was innocent. What that conflict is, cap.2,3.

How afterwards this conflict began, § 1,2. p.1085.

There is no conflict betweene the fleſh and the Spirit in the eſtate of corruption, p.1086. § 3.

Gods infinite loue in ſending his Sonne to redeeme vs, made way for this conflict, p.1087. § 5.

Sanctification begun, and not perfect, is the formall cauſe of this conflict. Firſt, becauſe of the contrariety betweene grace and corruption. Secondly, becauſe theſe enemies dwell together, § 6,7.

When, and how we are called of God to the ſpirituall conflict, c.4. p.1089. § 1,2.

The manner of this conflict, it is not corporall, but ſpirituall, pag. 1090. § 3,4.

The effects of the conflict between the fleſh and the Spirit, c.7.p.1099. § 1. & inde.

There can be no conflict in them that are perfectly ſanctified, cap.8. p.1101. § 1.

This conflict is not in the vnregenerate, p.1102. § 2.

The conflict that is in the Regenerate and vnregenerate differeth much.

Firſt, in the cauſes whence it ariſeth, § 3.

Secondly, in the mooning cauſes of it, § 4.

Thirdly, that of the vnregenerate is betweene diuers faculties, that of the Regenerate in the very ſame, 1104,1105. § 5,6.

Fourthly, they differ in their contrary effects, col.2. § 7. & pag. 1106.

Fifily, they differ in their ſubiect matter, or occaſion. Sixtly in reſpect of time, pag.1107. § 8,9.

No comfort ariſeth out of the conflict of conſcience, c.9.p.1108 § 1.

This conflict may be in the Regenerate, § 2.

It is not in them that are extreamely ignorant, col.2. § 3.

It is ſeldome in ſimple people, p.1109. § 4.

Nor in ſubtle perſons, proud Iuſticiaries, or ciuill Worldlings, § 5.

This conflict is ſeldome in thoſe that are tranſported with violent paſſions, p 1110. § 6.

The ſpirituall conflict is in all the Regenerate that are come to yeares of diſcretion, cap.10. § 1. & inde.

How wee may know whether this conflict be in vs, or no, cap. 11. pag 1112. § 1. & inde.

What the euent of the ſpirituall conflict in the faithfull is, cap.18. pag.1132.

Of the foiles the Spirit receiueth in it, § 1.

Whence ariſe earneſt deſires to be freed from the ſlauerie of ſinne, col. 2. § 2.

And an indeauour in the vſe of all good meanes to bee preſerued from ſuch foule inconueniencies in the time to come, p.1133.col.1. § 3

In this conflict the ſpirit ſhall haue aſſured victory ouer the fleſh, p.1138,1139. § 12,13.

The reaſons that may incourage a Chriſtian to this conflict. Firſt, it is the will of God we ſhould vndertake it, c.19.pag.1140. § 1. Secondly it is neceſſary. Thirdly, the fleſh againſt which wee are to conflict doth vs much iniury, pag.1141 § 2,3. Laſtly wee ſhall attaine aſſured victorie, pag.1142. § 4.

And then, the longer we deferre the fight, the more difficult and doubtfull we make the victorie, p. 1153. § 3. c.22. See more of this conflict in the word fleſh, in this Alphabeticall direction.

The aduantage of a good conſcience, part.3. l.1.c.4.p.771,772 § 13.

The conſcience compared to the Eye, part.1.lib.2.c.40.p.229.col.2 num.10.

What kind of contentions there are betweene the Ieſuites, and the Prieſts, p.1086.col.1. num.50.& inde.

How contraries may dwell together in one man, p.1088.col.2 § 8.

Contentment is to be ſought, not in the world, but in Gods ſpirituall graces, part.2. lib.2.c.19.p. 542. § 1.

Contentment is not to be had in earthly riches, p.532.col.2. § 11

Spirituall contentment much exceedeth all content that can be taken in worldly things, pag.543 col.1. § 2.

Contentment is a medicinall cure for all maladies, col.2. § 3.

Contentment is not to be ſought in outward things, but is to be got into the heart and mind, p.544 § 4.

The way to ſeeke contentment, is not to multiply worldly vanities, but to moderate our deſires and affections, p.544, & 545. § 5.

The way to gaine contentment in riches, is to abandon couetouſneſſe, § 6.

Contentment in pleaſures is to be gained, not by giuing way to our deſires, but by reſtraining our appetites, p.546. col.1. § 7.

The firſt and chiefe means to contentment is, wholy to reſigne our ſelues vnto the will of God, p.547 & vbi ſupra. col.2. § 8.

Chriſtians may ſafely reſt with content vpon Gods promiſes, § 9 col.2. p.547.

A godly life is the ready way to contentment, p.550. col.1. § 12.

To thinke of Gods benefits aswell as of our wants will breed and bring contentment, § 13. col.2.

Full contentment is onely in heauenly happineſſe, p.551. § 14 col.1.

The eſtate of a man before his conuerſion is exceeding dangerous, part.1. lib.2. c.31 p.191. col.2. § 2

Many are the aduantages that will acompany ſpeedy conuerſion, p.192. § 3.

Gods couenant aſſureth of the remiſſion of our ſinnes, part.1. lib.2 c.36. p.209. col.1. § 3.

How the Deuill vſeth to tempt the couetous, part.1. lib.1. c.17. p.31. § 4.

Remedies againſt the ſinne of couetouſneſſe, p.32. col.2. num.50. & inde.

Why the Grecians call couetouſneſſe, πλεονεξία. How it comes to paſſe that rich men are ſtill couetous, part.2. lib.2. c.17. p.531. col.1 num.30. & inde.

The couetous compared to Cormorants and Dogs, idem, ibidem. And to a Riuer, col.2. num.30.

The couetous the more they abound, the more ſtill they want, § 9. col.2.

Couetous people are like Ants, they gather, but vſe not their gold, p.533. col.1. num.40.

None can wiſh an heauier curſe to a couetous man, than to pray that he may liue long, c.25 p.581 col.2. num.10.

Couetouſneſſe is a blinding ſin, cap.34. pag.670, 671. num. 40. & inde.

None are crowned but ſuch as contend, part.1. lib.1. c.3. p.6. col. 2. num.30. & inde.

Cuſtome is no good plea for continuance in ſin, part.4. lib.1. c.15 p.1065, 1066. § 3.

Cowardiſe ill becomes a Chriſtian, part.1. lib.1. c.9. pag.20. col.1 num.30. & inde.

D

WHether Dauid loſt any degree of his fundamentall graces, when hee committed Adultery and Murther, part.4. li.2 c.18. p.1136, 1137. § 9.

The Saints of God in old time, would by no meanes be guilty of their owne death, part.1. lib.2. c.2 p.74. § 5.

Obiections to the contrary, anſwered, § 6.

Though the Saints die, yet they are redeemed from death, part.1. li. 2. c.18. p.153. col.2. § 8.

The houre of death a moſt vnfit time for repentance, cap.30. p.190 col.1. & inde. § 9.

The death of the faithfull is no puniſhment for their ſins, part.3 lib.2 c.9. p.857, 858. § 13, 14.

Why God delayeth ſometimes to grant the prayers of his people, part.1. lib.1. c.16. p.29. col.1. num 50. & inde.

How wee ought to behaue our ſelues, when our Prayers are delayed, § 10.

The longer we delay our turning to God, the more wee are diſabled to make that returne, part.1. lib.2 c.30. p.189. col.1. § 6.

By delayes the meanes of grace grow ineffectuall, idem, ibidem, col.2. § 7.

Our ſins are called debts, part.1 lib.2. c.35. p.207. col.2. § 2.

The Deuill draweth men to commit ſin by degrees, part.1. lib.1 c.19. p.36. § 1.

How our deſires to grace may be made acceptable inſtead of grace it ſelfe, part.1. lib.1. c.23. p.57, 58 § 3.

How acceptable to God good deſires are, part.1. lib.2. c.44. p.246 col.1. num.30. & inde.

We are not to deſpaire when we doubt of Gods loue, part.1. lib.2 c.5. p.95. ad finem & inde, § 10.

How Sathan vſeth to vrge thoſe that are called, to deſpaire, c.34. p.202. & inde per totum caput.

How thoſe his temptations may be reſiſted, idem ibidem.

An earneſt deſire to the meanes of ſaluation, is a pregnant ſigne of that parties election, part.1. lib.2 c.12. p.122. col.1. § 1.

Diuers names giuen to the Deuill, and the ſeuerall reaſons of his being ſo called, part.1. lib.1. c.4. p.8 col.1. ad finem & inde.

Hee is called a great red Dragon. The diſpoſition of that creature to mankind, idem ibidem, col 2. num.30.

Why the Deuill is called δαίμων and δαιμόνιον, cap.8. pag.17. col.2. num.30.

How men may defeat the Deuils policies, c.8. p.18. col.1. § 2.

Why the Deuill is called the wicked one, c.13. p.24. col.2. § 4.

The Deuill is a great deceiuer of men, part.2. lib.2. cap.26. pag.596 § 2.

Yet wicked people truſt him and the world, more than they doe God himſelfe, p.597. § 3.

How wee are deliuered from ſin by Chriſt, part.1. lib.2. c.18. p.150 col.1. ad finem, & inde.

The ſubtilty of the Popiſh Doctors in drawing men to doubt of their ſpirituall eſtates, part.1. lib.2. c.8 p.102. § 1. col.1.

The Papiſts make doubting a vertue, and yet it is a fruit of vnbeliefe, c.9. p.107. § 2.

In the matter of the ſaluation of Gods children. the Scripture indureth not doubting, c.13. § 128 & inde § 3,4,5,6,7,8,9,10.

Doubting proceedeth from pride cap.14.pag.133.col.2.ad finem & inde.

The meanes whereby men may be preſerued from doubting and deſpaire. Remember the promiſes are indefinite, the command is that we ſhould beleeue, the mercies of God God are infinite, the merits of Chriſt inualuable, doubt and deſpaire are horrible ſinnes, the afflicted conſcience eaſily inclineth that way, to mankind theſe two inconueniencies are moſt pernicious, part.1.lib. 2.cap.47.pag.260,261,262. § 3,4, 5,6,7.

Sathan will vrge people to doe religious duties, becauſe he calleth vnto them, part.1. lib.1.c.20.pag. 39. § 2.

Neglect of duty doth not alwayes argue incredulity, part.1 lib.2.c.25.p.173. col.2.num.30. & inde.

They that diſlike their own dulneſſe to good duties, are accepted with God, lib.3 part.1.p.299.col. 2. § 2.

Difficulties in diſcharging diuine duties, ſhould not diſcourage deuout people, in, or from them, part.4. lib.1. cap.16.p.1069,1070 § 2.

The doing of holy duties, ought not to be deferred, p.1071. § 3.

The more excellent duties ought not to be deferred, or neglected, for the doing of thoſe that are inferiour. Good duties are not to be done vnſeaſonably. Neglect not preſent good duties, vpon pretence of doing ſome greater good afterwards, p.1072. § 5,6,7.

Good duties done by vs are much hindered by the interpoſition of the fleſh, for it poyſoneth them, c.17. § 1,2. And perſwadeth to intermit them, or to reſt in thoſe that are already diſcharged, pag. 1074. § 3,4.

In what ſenſe Chriſt might be truly ſaid to haue died for all, part. 1.lib.2.c.16.p.144. col.1.num.40 & inde.

How Chriſt died for thoſe that are damned, p.145. § 6. & 7.

To die is no diſaduantage to Gods inheritance, to whom death is as the Brazen, part.1.lib.2.c.18 p.154.col.1.num.30.

E

If you deſire to read concerning earthly things. See the word, worldly, in this Table.

Gods Election is not grounded vpon mans workes or worthineſſe, part.1.lib.2.c.4.p.86. § 2.

Of the authour and chiefe efficient of our Election, c.6.p.97. § 1.

What Election is, idem, ibidem.

There is no cauſe of Election, but Gods good will, and free grace, § 2.

Foreſight of our good workes, or any worthineſſe in vs, reſpect of our faith, all excluded. The merit of Chriſt herein not to be admitted, p.98. ad initium.

The materiall cauſe of Election, is the purpoſe and counſell of God.

The formall is, a ſetting apart of ſuch as are to be ſaued. The finall, Gods glory, and the ſaluation of the Elect, § 3.

What the effects of Election are, idem, ibidem.

Of the ſubiect, obiect, and properties of Election, § 4.

Sathan would make Wordlings beleeue, that there is no Election at all, cap.7.p.99. § 1,2.

Of the two ends of Election, § 3 & inde.

How the Deuill tempteth weake Chriſtians to doubt of their Election, c.8.p.101. § 1. & inde.

We may be aſſured of our particular Election, pag. 103,104. & inde.

Our Election is manifeſted by the Goſpell, c.9.p.106. col.2.num.40 & inde.

The meanes to aſſure our Election, c.11.p.118.col.1. & inde.

Of the ſeuerall ſignes of Election, c.12.p.122.col.1. & inde.

The certainty of Election, neither breedeth ſecurity, nor preſumption, cap.14.p.138. & inde, § 12.

Why the Holy Ghoſt is called the earneſt of our inheritance. Diuers ſignifications of the word arrhabo, cap.10.p.115.col.1,2.num.60.

The Deuill tempteth men to propound bad ends to good actions, part.1. lib.1.c.20.p.39.col.2.§ 3.

Generall meanes whereby wee may withſtand our ſpirituall enemies. Firſt, Gods command, Secondly, hope of victory, Thirdly, alwayes to be in readineſſe, Fourthly, to be doing good when we are tempted to euill, Fiftly, to withſtand temptations when they are ſuggeſted, Sixtly, to prepare for another temptation, when one is paſt, part.1.lib. 1.c.22. p.47. & inde, § 2,3,4,5.

Not to beleeue Sathans ſuggeſtions, neither to deſpiſe, nor too deeply apprehend them. To examine temptations before wee beleeue them, not ouer-much to trouble our ſelues, with conceits about the iſſue of them. To labour for humilitie, to mortifie pride, to obiect Chriſt againſt all temptations, idem, ibidem, p.50. & inde, § 7,8 9,10,11,12,13,14,15, & inde.

The Epicure preſcribeth homely cates, to ſuch as would be of his Sect: becauſe dainties are ſo hard to be procured, and ſo ſoone lothed, part.2.lib.1.c.25.p.583.col.2.

It is not lawfull to doe euill, for the auoiding of euill, part.1.lib.2.c. 2.p.73.col.1.num.40.

How Sathan ſuteth his temptations to mens eſtates, whether corporall, or ſpirituall, part.1.lib.1.c. 18.

How to reſiſt him in both theſe, § 1,2,3,4.

They that would heare Gods Word as behoueth, muſt examine their ſins, and wants, part.1.lib.2 c.28.p.181.col.2. § 5.

Euill examples of Superiours are moſt pernicious, part.2.lib.1.c. 18.p.423. § 3.

Wicked examples allure and perſwade ſwade vnto ſinne, p.422.col.2 § 1.

Euill examples nouriſh pride, & hinder repentance, § 4.

Euill examples vexe and grieue the ſeruants of God, p.424. § 5.

They that will not follow euill examples are hated of the wicked, § 6.

Example is a poore incouragement to draw on to ſin, part.4.lib. 1.c.14.p.1064. col.2. § 8.

Sathan is an Executioner of all Gods iudgements vpon men, part.1 lib.1.c.4.p.10.col.1. ad initium.

We muſt not liue by example, but by precept, part.1.lib.1.cap.21.p.45 col.2. ad initium.

Holy exerciſes are excellent meanes to auoid Sathans temptations, part.1.lib.1.p.55. § 17.

Our vnfitneſſe to holy exerciſes, muſt not diſcourage vs from the conſtant vſe of them, part.1.lib.3. c.11.p.213.col.1. § 15.

Exerciſe of piety is a good meanes to increaſe in godlineſſe, part.4.lib.2.cap.25.pag.1166.col. 2. § 6.

Sathan endeauoureth to draw people from one extreame vnto another, lib.1. part.1.cap.19.pag 37 § 3.

F

THe teſtimony of Gods Spirit will prooue whether wee haue faith, or no, part.1.lib.2.cap.44.p. 247. col.1. § 10.

The ſhield of faith is neceſſary, part.1. lib.1.cap.13. pag.23. ad finem.

The markes and ſignes of true faith, cap.22. pag.51. col.1. num. 30.

Though faith in nature goe before repentance, yet the fruit and act of it, commeth after, c.23.p.56 num.40.

True faith purifieth the heart, and is alwayes operatiue, lib.2.c.3 p.83.col.2.num.50.

The nature and the worke of faith, c.4.p.89.col.1.num.10,20.

Many contented with carnall ſecurity inſtead of faith, cap.8.p. 105. § 6.

Faith certainly aſſureth, and euidently perſwadeth, idem, ibidem, § 6. num.40.& inde.

Faith a certaine particular perſwaſion, not a doubtfull opinion, or a generall notion, c.9.p.108. § 4,5

It perſwadeth the faithfull of their election, p.109. § 6.

Weakneſſe of faith and certainty may well ſtand together, c.14.p. 134.col.1. § 3.

A weake faith doth aſſure election, aſwell as a ſtrong, col.2. § 4.

How faith that is aſſauled with doubting may be certaine, pag.135 § 5.

Faith aſſaulted with doubting retaineth his owne nature and properties, § 6.

We may know whether wee haue faith by examining the degrees of it. And they are, illumination, a perſwaſion that our ſins are pardonable, and hungring and thirſting after grace, an approaching to the throne of grace, lib.2.part.1.c.44 p.245,246.col.2.num.20.& inde. And an eſpeciall application of the promiſes, § 6,7,8,9.

The fight betweene the fleſh and the ſpirit will prooue whether wee haue faith, or no, idem, ibidem, § 11,12.

Our ſanctification and fruites from thence will proue whether wee haue faith, § 13,14.& inde.p.248

Wee muſt beleeue before wee can diſcerne the fruits of faith, p.249. col.1.& inde, § 15.

The habit and the acts of faith are to be diſtinguiſhed. The firſt alwayes continueth in the children of God, not the ſecond, c.45.p.250, 251. col.1.num.50.& inde.

They may not conclude they haue no faith, that cannot at all times ſenſibly diſcerne it, pag.251 col.2. § 3.

Hee that euer felt faith in himſelfe, when it failes muſt comfort himſelfe, in his former feeling, cap.46.pag.252.col.1. num.10. & inde.

Such as cannot feele their faith, muſt labour to diſcerne it in the fruits of it, pag.253.col.2. § 2.

Faith, and all other the graces of God haue a proportion betweene them, § 3.

They that apprehend Gods wrath, may yet haue true faith, pag.256. § 4.

All that are indued with true faith vſe the means whereby it may be increaſed, cap.47. p.258.col.2 § 1.

The meanes of faith are, diligent hearing Gods Word, meditation in it, holy conference, vſe of the Sacraments, feruent prayer, pag.259 col.1. § 2.& inde.

There is no faith ſo perfect, but it is aſſauled with doubting, cap. 48.p.263.col.1. § 1.

There are diuers degrees of Faith in Gods Children idem. ibedem.

A weake faith may bee true, col.2. § 2.

All the power of Hell cannot preuaile againſt the leaſt meaſure of true faith, pag. 264. col. 1. §. 3.

We muſt not content our ſelues, with a ſmall meaſure of faith, idem ibidem num.50.& inde.

The leaſt faith is acceptable to God, col.2. §.4.

Faith doth not iuſtifie as a faculty, but as an inſtrument, col.2.& inde § 5.

Faith and doubting may bee in the ſame ſubiect, in regard of diuers parts, cap.49. pag. 265. col. 2. num. 20.& inde.

The faith of the fathers was as fraile as our is, pag. 266. col. 1. ad initium.& inde.

The Scriptures ſet forth vnto vs diuers degrees of faith in the ſame beleeuer, col.2. num. 50. & inde. And why.

Sathan cannot preuaile againſt the weakeſt faith that is true, p.267 col. 1.& inde. §. 3.

God both can and will vphold the weakeſt true faith, p.267,268 col.2. § 4,5.

Why faith is ſaid to bee our righteouſneſſe, cap.50.p.270.col.1 num.20.

Faith alone iuſtifieth, cap.52.p.275.§ 1,2,3.

There are diuers kinds of faith, lib.3. cap.17. pag.327. num.10. & inde.

The word faith is diuerſly taken in Scripture, c.18.p.332.col.1 num.40.

Of iuſtifying faith, read part.3. lib.1.c.4.p.764.§ 5.

Faith muſt be ſhewed by repentance, lib.2.cap.4. pag.814,815. § 3.

Faith is ſtrengthened by afflictions, c.21.p.924,925. § 1,2,3,4. & inde.

How we may diſcerne true iuſtifying faith from that which is temporary part.4. lib.1.c.13.pag.1057 § 3.

How iuſtifying faith and preſumption differ from one another, lib.2.c.12.p.1117.§ 2.

How iuſtifying faith differeth from that which is temporary, c.13 p.1118.

Firſt, in preparation, Secondly, in parts, § 1,2.

Thirdly, in their properties, p. p.1119.§ 3.

Fourthly, in their concomitants, § 4.

Fiftly, in their effects, which are, Firſt, purification of the heart, p. 1120.§ 5. Secondly, they differ in their operations, Thirdly, in their ioy and peace, § 6,7. Fourthly, in their confeſſion, p.1121.§ 8. Fiftly, in their contentment, § 9 Sixtly, they ouercome the world, § 10. Laſtly, reioyce to heare of Chriſts comming, § 11.

Faith is the cauſe and foundation of repentance, cap.15.p.1124 col.2. § 3.

Familiarity with Princes is like the playing with a Lion, part.2.lib. 2.c.10.p.1184.col.1.num.30.

The fauour of Princes mutable and vnprofitable, idem ibidem, p. 483.§ 12,13.

Fauourites compared to Counters in caſting vp of reckonings, Princes fauours like a tender eye, p.484. 3bi ſupra.

If feare follow our fallings, it argueth diffidence in God, and ſelf-confidence, part.1.lib.1.c.23.p.63 col.2.§ 12.

Why the Lord ſuffereth the faithfull to be afflicted with feares lib.2.part.1. cap.1.p.65,66.§ 1.& inde.

There are confuſed feares which haue no ground but melancholy, idem ibidem, § 2.

How a Chriſtian may be eaſed of them, § 3. Firſt, by conſidering his ſinne the cauſe of all calamities. Secondly, by labouring for faith and repentance, p.68.§ 4. Thirdly, this repentance muſt chiefly be for our moſt hainous ſins, § 5.

Of thoſe feares that haue ground, as Sathans malice, or violence, p. 69,70.§ 6.

Thoſe feares are friuolous that ariſe vpon being alone, or in the darke, idem ibidem.

Of the ſeruile and filiall feare of God, part.1.lib.2.cap.13.pag.130 § 5.

Chriſt his true members can neuer fall away totally, or finally, part. 4.lib.2.c.18. § 13.

Wee are rather to beleeue Gods Word than our owne feeling, part.1 lib.2.cap.46.p.257.§ 10.

Concluſions grounded vpon feeling are often falſe, § 11.

Gods deareſt children doe not alwayes feele the graces of the Spirit in them, § 12.

The Spirit of God is compared to fire for fiue Reaſons, part. 4. lib.2. cap. 16. pag. 1128. 1129. §. 3.

When Sathan flattereth, then is he moſt to be feared, part.1.lib.1 c. 21.p.44.§ 7.

What is to bee vnderſtood by fleſh, part.1.lib.1.cap.7.col.1.num. 40.p.16.

It is a great enemy to mans felicity, idem, ibidem.

The ſundry names giuen to the fleſh in Scripture, col.2.

The dangerouſneſſe of the fleſh, § 3.

How men may weaken the fleſh, § 4.

Our owne fleſh and fleſhly luſts, are moſt dangerous enemies, part.4 lib.1.c.1.p.1016.§ 3,4.

There is in euery good Chriſtian a fight betweene the fleſh and the Spirit, c.2.§. 1.

The diuers ſignifications of the word fleſh, as it is taken for things materially ſubſiſting, pag. 1017. § 2.

Diuers ſignifications of the word fleſh, as it is taken for accidents and quailities, col.2.§ 3.

The word fleſh is taken for the corruption of nature, pag.1018. § 4.

It is taken for the vnregenerate part in a Chriſtian, or the reliques of corruption remayning after ſanctification, col.2.§ 5.

The combate betweene the fleſh and the Spirit, is not performed by bare qualities, p.1020. § 3.& pag. 1021.§ 4.

The principall Doctours among the Papiſts by fleſh vnderſtand the body of man, c.4.p.1023.§ 1,2.

Thoſe that are pureſt of them, take it for the bodie, and ſenſitiue faculties onely, pag.1024.& inde § 3,4.

The contrary to this aſſertion is proued by Scripture, c.5.p.1027, 1028.§ 1,2. And then by reaſons, p.1029.§ 3. Firſt, from the names giuen it. Secondly, from the actions of it. Thirdly, from the ſinnes aſcribed vnto it, vbi ſupra. Fourthly, original corruption hath ouerſpread the whole man, col.2.§ 4. Fiftly, the body and ſpirit are louing friends, p.1030.§ 5. Sixtly, there is no good in the fleſh, § 6. Seuenthly, the body is not abſolutely euil. Eightly, the faithfull are tempted to much ſinne, properly belonging to the vnderſtanding, and the will, p.1031. § 8.

Teſtimonies of the Fathers prouing that the body is not our ſinfull fleſh, c.6.§ 1.& pag.1032.

That the body is not our ſinfull fleſh is prooued by the teſtimonies of our aduerſaries, p.1035.§ 8,9.

Obiections made againſt this truth anſwered, c.7.p.1036.

Wherein is firſt ſhewed, why our ſpirituall enemy is vſually called fleſh, § 1. & pag. 1037. § 2,3. & p. 1038.

Why the enemy of our ſoules is called fleſh, § 4,5. p. 1039. § 6,7.

Through the fleſh alone wee are expoſed to all danger, c.8.p.1040. § 1. col.1.

In the fleſh dwelleth nothing that is good, col.2. § 2.

The fleſh called caro a carendo, quia caret omni bono, col.2. num. 40.

All manner of euill is in the fleſh, p.1041. § 3.

The fleſh is the authour of all wickedneſſe, col.2. § 4.

The fleſh is more malicious to vs, then either the Deuil or the World, p.1042. § 5.

For it is the authour of all ſin, § 6.

The cauſe of deprauing our nature, and defacing Gods Image in vs, col.2. § 7.

The fleſh bringeth vs into a baſe condition, p.1043. § 8.

Whilſt we liue in the fleſh we cannot pleaſe God, col.2. § 9.

It ſetteth men at enmitie againſt God, § 10.

The fleſh is the cauſe of all our puniſhments, p.1044. § 11.

Its malice is more dangerous being maſked vnder the colour of friendſhip, § 12.

How to defeate the malicious treaſons of the fleſh, p.1045. col. 2. § 13.

The fleſh is to the vnregenerate a mightie King, to thoſe that are renued a miſerable Tyrant, p.1046 § 1.

Of the ſtrength of the fleſh conſidered in it ſelfe, § 2. & pag. 1047.

Of the ſtrength of the fleſh compared with the ſpirit, § 3.

The luſts of the fleſh are many, § 4.

Which ſhould moue vs to ſhake off ſecurity, § 5.

And make vs the more couragious, § 6.

The policie of the fleſh is in its nature exceeding pernicious, c. 10 p.1048. § 1.

Of the ſtrength of the fleſh conſidered in it ſelfe, § 2.

The policie of the fleſh ſhould moue vs to be the more vigilant, p.1049. col.2. § 3.

Concerning our perſons the firſt deceit of the fleſh, is to make vs beleeue we are not ſo euill as indeed we be, c.11.p.1050. § 1.

How to defeate this policie, § 2

Then ſecondly, it perſwades, that the good things in vs, are much better than they are, pag. 1051. § 3.

How to diſappoint this euill, p.1052. § 4.

The policies of the fleſh reſpecting our eſtate are, firſt, to perſwade thoſe that are afflicted, they be hated of God, c.12. § 1.

Secondly, that we are in a happy condition, when wee be in truth moſt miſerable, § 2.

And this is indeauoured vpon two falſe grounds, Firſt, that outward priuiledges are ſure teſtimonies of Gods loue. Secondly, that worldly proſperitie is ſo to, p.1053 § 3,4.

Ciuilitie or outward profeſſion is not ſufficient to ſaluation, pag 1054. § 5,6.

The deceit of the fleſh in perſwading men to reſt in externall ceremonies. How to defeat this policie, p.1055. § 7,8.

The fleſh deceiueth temporarie Profeſſors moſt ſubtilly, c.13.pag. 1056. § 1.

The deceit of the fleſh in mouing men to leaue off doing good duties that they may auoid Hypocriſie, p. 1058. § 6.

The policies of the fleſh in perſwading men to ſinne are, firſt, that ſinne is no ſinne, c.14.p.1059. § 1.

Secondly, that the ſinne to be committed is ſmall, p.1060. § 2.

Thirdly, that the committing of the leſſer will preſerue from falling into the greater ſinnes, pag.1061 § 3.

Fourthly, That wee are in no danger of falling into ſome ſinnes, pag.1062. § 4.

Fiftly, that wee may ſafely vſe the means and occaſions of ſin, § 5

Sixtly, to draw vs by degrees to commit dangerous ſins, pag.1063 § 6.

Seuenthly, to draw vs from things indifferent to commit ſin, § 7.

Eightly, to perſwade vs to ſinne, from the example of the Saints, p. 1064. § 8.

The policies that the fleſh vſeth to hinder our repentance. Firſt, it reports common ſins to be no ſins; and mortall ſins to be but veniall, c.15.p.1065. § 1.

Secondly, it teacheth to extenuate and couer our ſinnes with vaine excuſes. As firſt; corruption of nature. Secondly, to pretend cuſtome, § 3. col.2. Thirdly, to vrge pouerty, pag.1066. § 4.

Fourthly, a neceſſity of liuing in ſinne, by reaſon of our calling, § 5.

Fifthly, becauſe the times are corrupt, p.1066.1067. § 6.

Sixtly, becauſe God is mercifull p.1068. § 7.

Seuenthly, to deferre our repentance, § 8.

The policies the fleſh vſeth to hinder vs from performing holy duties. Firſt, it blindes our mindes that wee be not able to diſcerne betweene good and euill, c.16.p.1069 § 1.

Secondly, tels vs, Chriſtian duties are difficult to doe, § 2.

Thirdly, deſireth to deferre the doing of good duties, § 3. & pag. 1071.

Fourthly, to reſt in faire promiſes, and faint performances, § 4.

Fiftly, to withdraw vs from more excellent diſcharges, by occaſion of doing ſome leſſer good, p. 1072. § 5.

Sixtly, to doe good duties vnſeaſonably, § 6.

Seuenthly, to neglect ſome preſent good duty, vpon pretence of doing ſome greater matter afterwards, § 7.

How the fleſh interpoſeth in doing good duties, and corrupteth our hearts in the diſcharge of them c.17.p.1073. § 1, 2.

Perſwadeth to intermit them, or reſt in thoſe, that are diſpatched already, p.1074. § 2,4.

Our enemy the fleſh hath great aduantages ouer vs, becauſe it dwelleth in vs, c.18.pag.1075. col.2. § 1.

Cohabitation of it makes it exceeding dangerous, pag.1076. § 2. col.2.

How to preuent theſe dangers, p.1077. § 3.

The fleſh is indefatigable, col.2. § 4.

How to fruſtrate theſe diſpoſitions, p.1078. § 5.

There is a conflict betweene the fleſh and the ſpirit in euery regenerate man, lib.2.c.1.p.1079.& inde § 1,2.

What this conflict is, c.2 p.1081 § 1.

The cauſe of it, p.1082 § 2.

What the ſpirit and fleſh is, that is in vs, c.3.1087.col.2.num.20.& inde.

What the ends of the fleſh are in luſting againſt the ſpirit, c.4.pag. 1091. § 5,6.

What the ſpirit aymeth at in luſting againſt the fleſh, § 7.

The conflict betweene the fleſh & the ſpirit in the mind, c.5.p.1092 § 1.

Of that in the vnderſtanding, col.2. § 2.

The conflict betweene ſpirituall and carnall wiſdome, p.1093. § 3.

The conflict betweene the judgement of the fleſh and the ſpirit, col. 2. § 4.

How the faculties of the minde preuaile one againſt another, pag. 1094. § 5.

The conflict between our thoughts and imaginations, p.1095. § 8.

The conflict betweene ſpirituall and carnall memory, § 9.

The conflict betweene the fleſh and the ſpirit in the conſcience, § 10.

Of the conflict betweene the carnall and renewed will, c.6.p.1096 § 1.

The conflict betweene faith, infidelitie, and preſumption, p.1097 § 2.

The conflict betweene the fleſh and the ſpirit, is moſt turbulent in the affections and ſenſuall appetite, p.1098. § 3.

Of the conflict betweene the affections and paſſions, § 4. & pag. 1099.

See more of this conflict, in the head conflict.

Though the fleſh cannot hinder the ſpirit in good actions, yet it ſorely interrupteth it, c.7.p.1100 § 4.

How farre the fleſh may preuaile againſt the ſpirit. Firſt, common graces may be loſt for a time, ca.18 p.1133. § 4.col.2.

Secondly, Semblances of ſauing graces in temporary beleeuers may periſh vtterly, p.1134. § 5.

Thirdly, True ſauing grace in the Regenerate may be ſeemingly loſt, pag.1135. § 6.

Other graces ſpringing from thoſe that are fundamentall may for a time be loſt, § 7.

Sauing and fundamentall graces may be loſt in ſome degrees, at leaſt in their operations, pag.1136, 1137. § 8,9,10,11.

Meanes whereby wee may be enabled to ouercome the fleſh, cap.20 p.1142.

Firſt, Put on the whole armour of God, § 1.

Secondly, obſerue certaine rules to weaken it. Firſt, doe not nouriſh it, § 2.

Secondly, withdraw from it that prouiſion whereby it is ſtrengthened, pag.1144. § 4. pag.1145. § 5. Which is to ſtop all the paſſages wherby it commeth. To take heed of ſome ſpeciall ſins whereby the fleſh is ſtrengthened. To moderate our ſelues in the vſe of things lawfull and indifferent, p.1146. § 6.

Wee muſt take heed of hurting our bodies, when wee goe about to tame the fleſh, § 7.

Wee muſt take from the fleſh the weapons and armour whereby it moſt preuaileth, p.1145. § 1.

Meanes whereby the fleſh may be ſubdued and ouercome, c.21.pag. 1145. § 1.

Wee muſt keepe a narrow watch ouer our ſelues, and ouer our enemies at all times, p.1148,1149. § 2.4.5.

Wee muſt keepe it in all things, pag.1150. § 6. And keepe it in our ſpirituall armour.

Thoſe that would ſubdue the fleſh, muſt withſtand it in all the occaſions of it, and the meanes of ſinfull luſts, c.23.p.1151. § 1.

They muſt reſiſt the fleſh in the beginnings of ſinne, p.1152. § 2,3 4,5. & inde.

Other meanes to be obſerued for the ſubduing of ſin, or of the fleſh, c.23.p.1155. per totum caput.

Comforts for thoſe that are foiled in fight againſt Satan, part.1.l. 1.c.23.p.61.num.40.

Why God ſuffereth his children to be foiled, p.61.col.2.

Chriſt forgiues ſinnes authoritatiuely, his Apoſtles and their ſucceſſors miniſterially, part.1. lib.2. cap.9.p.109.col.2.num.30.

To forgiue thoſe that offend vs, is a ſigne of true loue, c.12.pag.125 col.2.num.40.& inde.

How a man may be aſſured of the forgiueneſſe of his ſins, c.34.p.203 col.2. num.20.& inde, & cap.35, 36,37,38.

Fooles are called Naturals, becauſe the wiſeſt naturall man is a very foole, part.2.lib.1.ca.9.p.392 col.2.num.20.

True friendſhip is much to be eſteemed, part.2.lib.1.cap.19.p.425 col.2. § 1.

In what reſpects friendſhip with the wicked is to be auoided, p.526 § 2.

We cannot hold friendſhip with worldlings, and be at peace with God, p.426. § 3.

Their friendſhip is falſe and counterfeit, col.2. § 4.

Wordly friends forſake when wee haue moſt need of their helpe, p.427 § 5.

In time of aduerſitiy worldly friends doe often become our enemies, col.2.§ 6.

Worldly friendſhip is pernicious to the ſoule, § 7.

Thoſe confuted that hold there comes no harme by friendſhip with the wicked, p.428.§ 8.

A friend is hardly diſcouered in the time of proſperitie, lib.2.c.34.pag.674.col.1.num.20.& inde.

Reade of frugalitie, what it is, and that it is required, lib.2.c.4.p.453.col.1.num.4.

Chriſts true members can neuer be ſo foiled, as to fall away finally and totally, p1159.§ 13.

G

THe Holy Ghoſt may be gained of the Saints, and how, part.1 lib.2.cap.11.pag.119. col.1.ad finem.

The Holy Ghoſt aſſureth the forgiueneſſe of our ſins, c.37.pag.218 col.2.§ 11.

What the ſinne againſt the Holy Ghoſt is, lib.3.cap.12.p.314.col.2 num.20.

How to diſtinguiſh this, from other ſins, § 2.

More concerning the Holy Ghoſt. See this head, the Spirit of God.

Giuing to thoſe that want, is a ſigne of true loue, part.1.lib.2.cap.12.p.125.num.20.& inde, col.2.

What is meant by the Girdle of Veritie, part.1.lib.1.c.10.p.21.col.1.§ 1.

The Grecians call Gluttony, the Throat, or Belly frenzie, part.2.lib.2.c.21.p.563.col.1.num.50.

Many more haue died of ſurfet, than by the Sword, col.2.num.10.

It is worſe to die with gluttony, than of hunger, num.30.

A Glutton is like the Sea-aſſe, that hath his heart in his belly, not in his breſt, part.2. lib. 2.c.30.p.634. col.2. ad initium.

Gods glory is manifeſted in the temptations of the godly, and their good is effected by them, part.1.lib.1.c.2.p.4.col.1.num.40.& inde.

The temptations of the godly increaſeth in them ſpirituall grace, pag.5.col.1.§ 6.

The wofull eſtate of them that haue onely a ſhew of Godlineſſe, lib 2.c.11.p.121.col.2.§ 13.

Godlineſſe is the ready way to content, part.2.lib.2.c.19.col.1.& 2.§ 12.p.550.

The glory of God ought to be the end of all good actions, part.2.lib.1.c.7.p.382.§ 10.

What the Goſpell of peace is, what it is to be prepared with it, part.1.lib.1.cap.12.pag.23.col.1, & 2.

The differences betweene the Goſpell and the Law, part.1.lib.2.c.9.p.106.col.2.num.30.

The Goſpell manifeſteth to Gods children their Election, idem, ibidem, col.2, num.40,50.

A deſire of Gods graces, is accepted for the graces that wee deſire, part.1.lib.1.cap.23.pag.57.col.1.num.20.& inde.

It is no fit time to iudge of our ſpirituall graces, in the conflict of temptation, part.1.lib.2.c.5.p.94 col.1,2.

There is a proportion betweene faith and all other ſauing Graces. And between thoſe graces one with another, cap.46. pag.253. col.2.§ 3.

How this truth is to be maintained, § 4.

Obiections againſt it anſwered, p.254.& 255.col.2.§ 5,6,7.

The conſolations which ariſe, from the equall proportion of Gods ſauing Graces in vs, p.256. col.1.§ 8.

What, and how farre the Graces of God may be loſt, part.4. lib.2.c.18.p.1133.§ 4,5. pag.1134, 1135 1136.& inde, § 4,5,6,7,8, & inde.

Wee may be ſure to obtaine Gods ſpirituall Graces, and his Glory; if we ſeeke them, part.2.lib.2.c.26.p.602,603.§ 10,11.

Though our ſpirituall growth be ſlow, yet it is certaine, part.1.lib.1 cap.23.pag.59.& inde § 5.

Growth in grace is required of Gods children, part.4.lib.2.c.25.p.1164.col.1.num.40.

Gods Word is our beſt guide, part.1.lib.1.c.19.p.37.§ 4.

H

NAturall Habits may be loſt, ſpirituall cannot, part.1. lib.3. cap.21.pag.343.ad finem col.2.& inde.

God ſoftens mans heart, part.1. lib.2.c.39.p.223.§ 3.

There is a two-fold hardneſſe of heart fit to be obſerued, of both the ſenſible and inſenſible. See cap.40. pag.228.col.1.§ 2,3 & cap.41. p.229.& inde.

The hight of health is the firſt degree to ſome dangerous ſicknes, part.2. lib.1.c.5. pag.370. col.1. num.30.

Health of body in it ſelfe is a great bleſſing, but much abuſed through our corruption, c.16.pag.415.& inde.

Health is a common mercy granted to the wicked, pag.416.§ 2.

Health is momentany and vncertaine, § 3.

It is imperfect and full of infirmitie, § 4.

Of the manifold euils that vſually accompany bodily health, pag.417.§ 5.

The heart is heedfully to be watched ouer, part.4.lib.2.c.21.p.1050.§ 5.

Motiues to perſwade to the diligent hearing of Gods Word, part.1.lib.2 cap.20. pag.158.col.2.§ 3.& inde.

Why thoſe that haue knowledge ſhould yet heare often, p.161.col.1 § 9.

Our vnworthineſſe and vnfitnes to heare, ſhould not yet hinder our hearing, cap.27.pag.177. col.2.& inde.

Wee ought to heare, though wee ſin in hearing, p.179.col.1.§ 4.& inde.

Sathan tempteth to negligence in in hearing, cap.28. pag.180. § 1. col.2.

Wee ſhould prepare our ſelues before we heare, p.181.col.1. Wherein this preparation conſiſteth, § 2,3,4,5,6.

Duties that are to be performed in hearing, p.182.col.2 § 7,8,9,10,11.

How wee ought to behaue our ſelues after hearing, p.183.col.2. § 12.

The benefits of hearing Gods Word, c.39.p.223.col.1. ad finem & inde.

Comforts for ſuch as complaine of their imperfections in hearing Gods Word, cap.41.pag.231.col.1 § 3.

Comforts for thoſe that bewaile their want of feeling the fruit of their hearing, idem ibidem, § 4.

Heauen is to be preferred before earth, becauſe it is our owne Country part.2.lib.3. ca.3.pag.700.col. 2. § 1.

It is impoſſible to deſcribe the ioyes of Heauen, p.701,702. § 2.

What the ioyes of heauen are, and what titles are giuen vnto them in holy Scripture, p.702,703, § 3.

All the defects in mans ſoule ſhall be ſupplyed in Heauen, cap.4. p.704. § 1.

The vnderſtanding ſhall be there freed from ignorance and curioſity, p.705. § 2.

Our wils from peruerſeneſſe, § 3 & p.706.

Our memories and conſciences from imperfection and corruption, § 4.p.707.

The excellent parts and qualities wherewith our ſoules ſhall be adorned in Heauen, § 5.

In Heauen we ſhall be freed from all bodily wants and grieuances, c.5.p.708,709. § 1.2.

Of the many euils from which we ſhall be deliuered in body, of the many good things wherewith wee ſhall be inriched, when we come to Heauen, p.709. § 3,4.

They ſhall be indued with immortality and agility p.710. § 5.

Our bodies ſhalbe ſtrong, free from ſuffering hurt, beautifull, and of a comely ſtature, p.711. § 6.7.

They ſhall ſhine and be glorious, p.712. § 8.

In heauen we ſhall not be moleſted with turbulent affections, cap.6.§ 1.p.713.

Wee ſhall be free from impotencie and impietie, p.714. § 2.

Wee ſhall be exempt from all externall euils, p.715. § 3.

The ioyes of heauen muſt needs be excellent and bleſſed, p.715.716 § 4.

In heauen the Image of God ſhall perfectly be reſtored vnto vs, repaired in vs, c.7.p.717. § 1.

The ioyes of heauen will fill without glutting, and ſatiate without loathing, § 2.& p.718.

The ioyes of heauen are excellent, in regard of thoſe things that are about the glorified, § 3.

There are diuers degrees of glory and happineſſe in Heauen, p.719 720. § 4,5.

The heauen of heauen ſhall be the place of the Saints happines, which is beautifull and glorious, c.8.pag. 721,722. § 1.

The great felicity that ſhall come to the godly in heauen, by the ſocietie of the Saints and Angels, § 2 & p.723.

Whether the Saints glorified in heauen ſhall know one another, § 3

A great part of the happineſſe in heauen, is to enioy the company of our Sauiour Chriſt, p.724. § 4.

The Lord is the chiefe matter of all heauenly ioyes, cap.9.p.725. § 1.

All ioy accompanieth the fruition of God, hee being the perfection and accompliſhment of all, § 2.

The fruition of God, muſt be the perfection of heauenly ioy, pag.726 727. § 3.

All heauenly ioyes without the fruition of God, could not make perfectly happy, pag.728. col. 1. § 4.

The viſion of God, is one of the principall ioyes of heauen And that is, a cleere knowledge of him, cap. 10.p.728. § 1.

Our viſion of God in heauen is ſpirituall. How farre wee ſhall ſee him, with our bodily eyes. In him we ſhall haue knowledge of all diuine myſteries, p.729.731. § 2.

Of the communion we ſhall haue with God in heauen, pag.732. § 3

Our communion with God ſhall be much more excellent in the life to come, than it is now, pag.732 § 4.

In this communion, God will be all in all vnto vs, p.732.733. § 5.

In heauen we ſhall perfectly loue God, and be happy in that loue, cap. 11.p.733. § 1.

In heauen all our delight ſhall be to ſing prayſes vnto God, p.734 § 2.

In heauen the Saints ſhall keepe an eternall Sabbath, p.735. § 3.

In the heauenly happineſſe, wee ſhall haue all ioy, comfort, peace, and reioycing in God, p.736. § 4.

The ioyes of heauen ſhall be eternall, and euerlaſting, pag. 737. § 5.

We ſhould rather ſpend our care to come to the ioyes of heauen, than curiouſly inquire what they are, c. 12.p.738. § 1.

The difficulty to obtaine the ioyes of heauen, ſhould not diſcourage vs, p.739. § 2.

How we may be aſſured, we ſhall attaine vnto, and poſſeſſe the ioyes of heauen, § 3. & p.740.

Of the helmet of ſaluation. Hope is that helmet, read part.1.lib.1.c. 14.p.24.col.2. & inde.

What a dangerous temptation may ariſe, vpon a pretence of being carefull to auoid hypocriſie, part.4. lib.1.c.13.p.1058.col.2. § 6.

How the Deuill tempteth ciuill honeſt men, part.1.lib.1.c.18.p.33 § 3. num.60. & inde.

Ciuill honeſtie ſeuered from true pietie, is nothing elſe but glorious iniquitie, p.34.col.1. § 4.

Honeſtty and pietie are inſeparable, cap.[illegible]. pag.34.col.2. § 5. & inde.

How to diſtinguiſh between true and falſe holineſſe, lib.2.p.120.c. 11.col.2. ad ſinem & inde.

There are diuers kinds of honours, nours, part.2.lib.2.c.2.p.434.col. 2. § 1.

Honour in it ſelfe is good and lawfull, § 2.

It ſerueth for diuers good vſes, p.435. c.2. § 3.

Many of the children of God haue beene very honorable, col.2. § 4.

Wee muſt principally ſeeke honour from God, pag.436.col.1. § 5.

We ought to ſtriue to be honoured of the good and vertuous,col.2 § 6.

Whether it be lawfull to deſire honour of wicked people, pag.437. col.1. § 7.

Honour is onely to be deſired for well doing, § 8. col.2.

Wee ought to affect ſuch honours as are moderate, and proportionable to our deſerts, p.438.col. § 9

Greater titles then are fit for men are blamed, idem, ibidem.

Honours ought not immoderately to be deſired, col.2. § 10.

Good meanes onely muſt be vſed for the attaining of honour, p.439 § 11.

We may not let honour reſt with vs, but returne it wholy vnto God, col.2. § 12.

Wee may not propound our owne honour, as our chiefe and mayne end, § 13.

Wee muſt imploy our honour to good vſes, p.440. col.1. § 14.

Lawfull honours are to be deſired for Gods glory, col.2. § 15. And for our neighbours good. For firſt hereby he doth his dutie, § 16.

Secondly, that he may doe his duty, p.441. § 17.

Thirdly, to auoid ſcandall, col. 2. § 18.

Wee ought to deſire honour for our owne ſakes, that it may reuiue and refreſh vs, § 19.

Wee are bound by Gods commandement to preſerue our honour, and good name, p.442. § 20.

Honours plunge men into many dangerous temptations, lib.2.cap. 6.p.459.col.1. § 4.

Honours are of high eſteeme through opinion, c.9.pag.472.col. 1. § 2. And of competition, p.473 § 6. And in regard that they are difficult to be obtained, pag. 475. col.2. § 8.

The branches of vaine honour are, vain-glory, popularity, priority, fauour of Princes: all poore ſnares to inſnare a Christian, cap. 10. pag.477. § 1. & inde per totum caput.

Honours bring no contentment to thoſe that haue them, c.17.pag. 529. § 6. Where it is compared to thr breath of a Kitchen

Worldly honours are vnprofitable, p.552.col.1 § 2.

Of the vncertainty in obtayning worldly honours, p.599. § 5.

When men ſeeke after them, too earneſtly they looſe them, § 6. & pag.600.

Honour is called the ſhadow of vertue, p.599.num.30.& inde.

What the right way is, to ſeeke and find true honour, p.600. § 7.

Of the miſeries that are incident to the getting, enioying, and loſing of worldly honours. See Miſery in this Index.

Worldly honours are momentany and vncertaine, p.608. § 6.

Of the mutabilitie of worldly honours, c.28. § 3.

The cauſes why they are ſo variable, p.615. § 4.

The honourable are as ſhort liued as others, cap.29.pag.623. & 624. § 11.

Worldly honours bring much hurt to thoſe that dote vpon them, c.30.p.629. & inde, § 2.

Honours withdraw mens hearts from God, p.633. & inde, § 6.

Worldly honours affected, bring men into ſlauery, cap.33.p.656.657 § 7.

Honours are accompanied with many dangers, cap.33. pag.665. § 14.

Honour can hardly diſcerne friends from Flatterers, cap.34.p. 672. § 7.

Honours expoſe men to temptations, p.678.col.1. § 13.

Earthly honours hinder thoſe that ſet their hearts on them, for attaining the Kingdome of heauen, c 35. p.684. § 4.

Earthly honours increaſe a mans account at the laſt day, p.687,688 § 8.

Earthly honours worth little in regard of heauenly, part.2.lib.3.c. 2.p.698. § 4.

Wee ought to hope againſt hope, part.1. lib.2. cap.47.p.262.col.2. § 7.

How men delude themſelues with falſe hopes, part.2.lib.2.c.26 pag.597. col.1.num.50.& inde.

The whole time from Chriſts Incarnation till his comming to iudgement, is called an houre, c.27 p.605.col.1.num.20. & c.29. pag. 618.col.1.num.20.

Labour for humility, part.1.lib.1 c.22.p.53.col.1. § 11.

The worth of humilitie is great, for it makes all other vertues commendable, part.2.lib.1.c.7. p.381 col 2. § 9.

Humilitie will much helpe the people of God to beare afflictions, part.3.lib.1.c.4.p.767,768. § 9.

I

Worldly things immoderately loued are cauſes of Idolatry, part.2.lib.2.ca.30.p.635 § 8.

Ambitious, couetous and voluptuous men, are Idolaters, p.636. § 9.

How things indifferent may be grieuouſly abuſed, part.4. lib.1.c. 14.p.1063.1064. § 7.

What to thinke of the eſtate of Ideots and Infants, lib.2.c.10.pag. 1111. § 2.

Imputation is taken two wayes in Scripture, part.1.lib.2.cap.52. p.276.

Infirmities are diſcouered in the faithfull by their temptations, part.1.lib.1.c.2.col.4.num.40.

Sight of imperfections is no cauſe to moue a man to doubt of his election. lib. 2. c. 14. pag.137. col.2 § 10.

Infidelity is more damnable then any other ſinne. cap. 38. p.219.c.1. num.20.

Why ſome and not all the infirmities of the Saints are regiſtred in the booke of God. cap. 49. pag. 266.c.1. num. 10.

Where innocency is, there is alwayes ſecurity, part. 1. lib.2.c.1. pag.68.ad initium.

How Sathan abuſed the children of God in things indifferent. lib.1.part.1.c.20.§ 1.p. 38.

Sathan aſſaults ſometimes by himſelfe, ſometimes by his inſtruments. cap. 21. pag. 43. §. 5. And how hee doth it by thoſe inſtruments. p.45.§ 8.9.

The interceſſion of Chriſt aſſureth the forgiueneſſe of our ſinnes, lib.2. part.1. c.37. pag.216.col.1. §.7.

Ionahs reſolution to dye, is maintained, part.1.lib.2.p.74.c.2. ad finem.

Iudas was alwayes an Hypocrite and deſtitute of ſauing graces, part. 1. lib. 3. cap.2. p. 340, 341. § 8.

An earneſt deſire of Chriſt comming to iudgement, is an infallible ſigne of the election of thoſe that are ſo affected, part. 1. lib. 2. cap.12.pag.127.§ 11.

Our iuſtification is not grounded vpon our workes, or worthineſſe, lib.2.part.1.cap. 4.pag.87.col.1. num.50.

It is not repugnant to Gods iuſtice to puniſh Chriſt for vs, cap.18.p.149.col.2.§. 1.

What iuſtification is, cap. 50. Pag 269.col.1. num. 10.

The efficient cauſe of iuſtification, is God alone, the impulſiue cauſe, his mercy. The inſtrumentall on Gods part, the word and ſacraments on our faith. The materiall cauſe is the actiue and paſſiue obedience of Chriſt. The formall areciprocall imputation of the ſinnes of a beleeuer to Chriſt, and of Chriſis righteouſneſſe to a beleeuer, pag.270. the finall, Gods glory and mans ſaluation. The parts of iuſtification are, the remiſſion of our ſins & imputation of Chriſts righteouſneſſe, col.2.§ 4. & pag.271.

The faithfull are iuſtified, when true faith is begotten in them, col.2 §.5.

Sins conuerting, are not iuſtified by their workes, cap.51.p.272. § 3. Although they bee the workes of the morrall law, pag.273.§ 4.5.

Why God will not haue men iuſtified by their workes, p.274.§.6.

Faith alone iuſtifieth, cap. 52. pag.275.

Though workes doe not iuſtifie, yet they are neceſſarily required to iuſtification, § 1.2.3.

Not our own, but Chriſts righteouſneſſe is imputed vnto vs for iuſtification, pag. 276. col. 2. § 5.6.7.

Perfect righteouſneſſe is required to iuſtification, pag. 277. col.1.§.8.

Iuſtification by imputation, is a reall truth, pag.278.§.3.

Our iuſtification is plainely reuealed vnto vs, pag. 278.& inde.

We are made iuſt not by infuſion, but imputation of another righteouſneſſe, cap.53.pag.279.§ 2.

Good workes are no cauſes, but effects of our iuſtification. pag. 280.

K

Chriſt being a King, aſſureth the remiſſion of our ſins, part. 1.lib.2.c. 37.p. 216. col. 2. §.8.

Kingly authority is good in it ſelfe, much to bee reuerenced and reſpected. part.2.lib.2.ca. 13. pag. 497.§ 1.

It is the gift and bleſſing of God. pag. 498.§.2.

The troubles that a Kingdome bring with it are manifold, col.2. § 3.

Of the cares that accompany a Kingdome in reſpects of the King that raigneth, pag. 499.§ 4.

The care that a King taketh in reſpect of his ſubiects. The great burthen and labour of a King, pag. 500. § 6.

Kings are much troubled with the violence of their vnruly affections, § 7.

What dangers are incident to Kings, pag. 501.col. 1. §. 8.

The ingratitude of the people is a great griefe to Kings, col. 2.§ 9.

Of the great account that Kings haue to make at the iudgement day, pag. 582.col.1. §.20.

Worldly Kingdomes abuſed, are the cauſe of many ſins, col.2.§.11.

Of the puniſhment which God inflicteth vpon euill Kings, pag. 503.col.1.§.12.

God bringeth haſty deſtruction vpon euill Kings, col.2.§ 13.

Euery one ſhould labour after a ſpirituall Kingdome, and the Kingdome of Heauen, pag. 504. col. 1.§. 14.15.

Knowledge is the eye of the ſoule, lib. 1. part.1.cap.18.p.36.col.1. num.10.

Hee that hath the ſpirit of God may know it, and how, part.1. lib. 2.c.10.p.115.§ 5.& inde.

Chriſt knoweth not the workes of inquity, lib. 2. c. 16.p.142. col. 2. num. 20.

Knowledge of God and his truth, is in it ſelfe an excellent gift, yet liable to the abuſe of worldlings, part. 2.lib. 1. c. 12. p. 399. col.2. § 1.

Our knowledge is maymed and vnperfect, p 400 col.1.§ 2.

Vnfruitfull knowledge is vaine and to no purpoſe, col.2.§. 3.

It is vnprofitable, p. 401. § 4.

It doth much hurt, firſt in regard of our bodyes, col. 2.§ 5.

Secondly in reſpect of our ſoules, for firſt it puffeth vp with pride, p.402. § 6. It aggrauateth our other ſins, §. 7. And increaſeth the account at the day of iudgement, col.2. § 8.

Of ſauing knowledg, par. 3.lib. 1 c.4.p.763.col.2.§. 9.

Sauing knowledge is gained by ſanctified afflictions, cap. 20. pag. 921.922. per totum.

How the knowledge of the righteous doth differ from that of the vnregenerate, lib. 2. c. 11. p. 1114. col. 2. & p. 1115.

L

THe difference betweene the commandements of the Law, and thoſe in the Goſpell, part. 1. lib. 2. cap. 9. p. 106. col. 2. num. 30.

How farre forth a Chriſtian is free from the law. cap. 18. pag. 151. col. 2. §.

The workes of the morall Law, doe not iuſtifie, cap. 51. pag. 273. §. 4. 5.

Read of the Iulian Law, part. 2. lib. 2. cap. 2. p. 439. col. 1. num. 30.

Learning indueth not with grace, part. 1 lib. 2. cap. 25. p. 173. col. 1. num. 20. & inde.

Learning in its owne nature, is very good and commendable, part. 2. lib. 1. cap. 10. p. 395. § 1.

It becommeth euill when it is abuſed. § 2. Worldly learning is to be contemned, firſt becauſe it doth not profit vs, p. 396. § 3. Secondly it is vaine, and of no excellency, § 4 Thirdly it helpeth not to the attaining of Gods ſpirituall graces, pag. 397. § 5. Fourthly it furthereth not to the attainment of life eternall, pag. 398. §. 6. Fifthly it much hurteth thoſe that ſet their hearts vpon it, § 7. Sixthly it is to bee contemned in compariſion of diuine learning, Why the Godly learned doe differ in iudgement from one another, part. 4. lib. 2. c. 5. p. 1094. § 6.

Mans life is ſhort, therefore euery one ſhould repent ſpeedily, part. 1. lib. 2. cap. 29. pag. 185. §. 3.

They that liue well cannot dye ill, c. 30. p. 192. col. 2. ad finem.

The things of this life are onely commended by neceſſitie, part. 2. lib. 2. cap. 22. pag. 570. col. 1. § 4.

Mans life is a continuall diſeaſe, and worldly things are medicines to cuſe it, col. 2. §. 5.

Of the adherent euils incident to mans life, pag. 571. § 7.

Mans life is very ſhort, though ſome dreame of immortality, c. 28. pag. 617. § 1, 2.

Which is proued by Scripture, pag. 618. And illuſtrated by ſimitudes, § 3.

Mans life is fraile, vncertaine, and aſſaulted euery way by death, pag. 619. § 4.

Mans life is daily ſubiect to innumerable dangers, col. 2. § 5.

From birth till death our liues are in a continuall conſumption, cap. 29. pag. 621, 622. § 7.

Through the ſhortnes of this life, all things here are to vs, momentany, & vncertaine, p. 622. § 9.

The honourable and rich mans life is as ſhort and vncertaine, as the life of any other, pag. 623, 624. § 11, 12.

So is the life of the voluptuous man, pag. 626. & inde §. 14.

The ſhortneſſe of mans life ſhould moue him to vnderualue the world pag. 627. & inde § 15.

Sathan tempteth men to looſeneſſe from the conſideration of the loue of God, part. 1. lib. 2. c. 3. p. 82. & inde § 1.

How to withſtand this temptation, §. 1. Temporall aduantages no infallible ſignes of Gods loue, § 2. col. 2. num. 20. & inde.

How the Deuil vſeth to perſwade Chriſtians that God loues them not pag. 83. § 3.

How to euade the danger of this ſnare, § 4.

Euery particular Chriſtian may aſſure himſelfe of Gods loue, pag. 84. § 6.

To doubt of Gods loue, is to doe him iniury, col. 2 § 7. It is pernitious to the doubter, § 8. Wee cannot loue God, vnleſſe we be aſſured, that hee loueth vs, pag. 85. num. 20. col. 1. & inde.

Loue is the whet-ſtone of loue, idem, ibidem,

Doubt not of Gods loue, § 9.

Our vnworthines need not make vs diſtruſt Gods loue, lib. 2. cap. 4. p. 85. & inde § 1.

Gods loue is the ground of our election, p. 86. § 2. And of our redemption, § 3. And of our calling, § 4. Afflictions are ſignes of Gods loue, c. 5. p. 90. col. 1. § 1.

Wee may neither diſpaire nor doubt of Gods loue, p. 96. § 10.

How Gods loue may be knowne, p. 97. § 12.

Gods loue is the cauſe of our loue, cap. 11. pag. 118. num. 20. & inde col. 2.

Loue of the brethren becauſe God commandeth it, is an infallible ſigne of our election, c. 12. p. 123. §.

What the ſignes of this loue are, col. 2. num. 20. & inde.

The reaſons why we cannot both loue earthly and heauenly things together, part. 2. lib. 2. p. 682. c. 35 col. 2. § 2.

The Deuill in regard of mankind is called a Lyon, hee is ſo, and much worſe than that creature, part. 1. lib. 1. c. 4. col. 2. num. 10.

The Deuill either alwayes lyeth, or elſe ſpeaketh the truth to deceaue, part. 1. lib. 2. c. 38. p. 220. col. 1. num. 20.

The Libard hateth man ſo much, that it flyeth vpon his picture, part. 2. lib. 1. c. 2. pag. 361. col. 1. num. 50.

M

THe Deuils malice againſt mankind is very mighty, and implacable, and why part. 1. lib. 1. c. 4. p. 8. col. 1. num. 10. 20, 30.

It is very violent, num. 40. & inde. col. 2.

And attended with treaſonable falſhood, ibid. & p. 9. col. 1. num. 10, 20, 30.

Sathan is malitiouſneſſe it ſelfe, pag. 10. col. 1. § 5.

A great difference betweene the ſufferings of Martyrs, and thoſe of hereticks, part. 1. lib. 2. cap. 21. p. 164. § 8.

Simon Magus neuer had iuſtifying faith, lib. 3. cap. 20. p. 340. col. 2. § 7.

Why the Grecians call a man ἀνθρωπος, and wherefore his head is fartheſt from the earth, part. 2. lib. 3. c. 2. p. 697. ad initium col. 2.

The Marchant in Plutarch dranke his worſt wine himſelfe, and kept his beſt for others, part. 3. lib. 2. cap. 11. pag. 874. col. 1. ad finem.

The golden meane to bee kept, part. 1. lib. 1. cap. 19. pag. 37. col. 2. § 4. & inde.

Sathan tempteth to vſe euill means, for the effecting of good ends, p. 40. col. 1. § 4.

Meanes of grace in no ſort to be neglected cap. 20. pag. 158. col. 1. § 2. & inde.

They that delight not in the meanes of grace for the preſent, may do well to examine themſelues what they haue done in times paſt, cap. 42. p. 235. col. 2. § 6.

Generall meanes whereby to repell Sathans temptations, vrging that we haue no faith, c. 44. p. 244 col. 2. & inde. § 5.

A meane eſtate is to be preferred before a mighty, part. 2. lib. 1. c. 6. p. 375. col. 2. § 2.

Meanes to be carefully vſed, for the attainment of grace, part. 4. lib. 2. cap. 15. p. 1164. col. 2. § 2.

Meditate not vpon Sathans temptations, but vpon the contrary preſeruatiues, part. 1. lib. 1. cap. 22. pag. 55. 56. § 18.

Meditation, when we haue heard, is an excellent helpe of hearing, part. 1. lib. 2. c. 28. p. 183. col. 2. ad finem & inde.

Miſapplying of Gods mercy keeps many in impenitency. How this miſery may be remedied, c. 31. pag. 194. col. 1. & inde. § 1, 2.

God is delighted in exerciſing of mercy, c. 34. p. 204. co'. 2. § 4.

Mans ſinne cannot hinder the working of Gods mercy, pag. 205. col. 2. § 5.

Gods mercy is ouer all his works, p. 206. § 6.

God is infinite in mercy, § 7.

It is pride to doubt of Gods mercy in regard of our vnworthineſſe, § 8.

The greateſt part of Gods royall Title conſiſteth in mercy, cap. 36. p. 208. col. 2. § 2.

Gods mercy no fit motiue to incourage men to continue in their ſins, p. 1068. § 7. part. 4. lib. 1. c. 15.

To make diſpatch in inflicting paine vpon thoſe that are puniſhed is a kind of mercy, part. 1. lib. 2. c. 5. p. 95. num. 50.

The dangerous effects of melancholy, p. 212. col. 1. ad finem. & col. 2. num. 50.

To loue Gods Miniſters is an vndoubted ſigne of election, part. 1. lib. 2. c. 12. p. 126. col. 1. § 10.

The liues of Miniſters many times a great ſcandall to their Miniſtery. How this offence may be made leſſe offenſiue, c. 25. p. 172. col. 2. § 1. & inde.

How miniſters haue authority to forgiue ſinnes, c. 38. p. 219. col. 1. § 2. num. 50. & inde.

The miracles mentioned in ſcripture, need not to bee doubted of, c. 21. p. 164. col. 1. num. 10. & inde.

The miſery of worldly things is proued by teſtimonies, lib. 2. part. 2. cap. 22. p. 568. § 2.

The miſeries of mans life in reſpect of ſin, pag. 569. § 3.

The miſeries of this life are much like Iobs meſſengers. p. 571. col. 1. ad finem.

Why miſeries make vs more ſenſible than comforts, p. 572. col. 1. ad initium.

Of the miſeries incident to a mans eſtate, § 8. Of thoſe to his perſon, in regard of his body, § 9. And of his ſoule, p. 573. § 10.

Of the miſeries of man through the contrariety of his own paſſions, p. 574. col. 1. § 11.

Of the miſeries of mans life in reſpect of his friends, col. 2. § 12.

Of mans miſery whereunto he is ſubiect in his mothers wombe, cap. 23. pag. 575. § 1.

Of his miſery in his birth, § 2.

Of the miſeries of infancy, childhood and youth, p. 576. § 3.

Of the miſeries incident to man, in his perfect age, p. 577. § 4.

Of the miſeries incident to old age, pag. 578. col 1. § 5.

Of the miſeries incident to ſingle life, and wedlocke, cap. 24. p. 578. & inde. § 1.

Of thoſe miſeries that are accidental to diuers eſtates, p. 579. § 2

Of ſome ſeciall miſeries belonging to Chriſtians peculiarly, § 3. & pag. 580.

Of the miſeries that accompany honours, riches and pleaſures, cap. 25. p. 581. § 1, 2.

Of thoſe miſeries that hang about the purchaſing of theſe partilars, pag. 583. § 5.

Of the miſeries that accompany the poſſeſſion of worldly things, p. 586. § 9. p. 587. § 10. p. 588. 589. § 11

Of the miſeries, that accompany worldly things when they are loſt, § 16. 17.

Of the miſeries incident to men for the loſſe of honours, riches, and pleaſures, p. 594. § 18.

The Athenians vſed their money onely to tell, part. 2. lib. 1. cap. 10. pag. 395. col. 2. num. 10.

Money is ſtamped round, becauſe it is rolling, and remouing, pag. 616. col. 1. num. 20.

What mortification is, and how it is wrought, part. 1. lib. 3. pag. 285. 286. col. 2. § 2.

Popiſh mortification is onely a bodily exerciſe, part. 4. lib. 1. cap. 4, p. 1025. § 4.

The Papiſts iuſtly taxed for this p. 1026. col. 2. § 5.

Our oppoſition of this popiſh doctrine is neceſſary, p. 1027. § 6.

Meanes to bee vſed in the exerciſe of mortification, lib. 2 cap. 20. pag. 1142. per totum. caput.

We muſt ſet no ſtint to our mortification, c. 23. p. 1159. § 9.

Our mortification ought to extend it ſelfe, to all our corruptions, and to all times, § 10. p. 1160.

The multitude of our ſpirituall enemies may not diſmay vs, c. 5. part. 1. lib. 1. p. 13. col. 1. § 9.

Multitudes ſhould not makes vs ſin, or to be vnwilling in the ſeruice of God, part.4. lib.1.cap. 15. pag. 1067. §6.

We communicate with all creatures in their mutability, beſides the changes whereunto wee our ſelues are ſubiect, cap. 28.lib. 2. part. 1.p. 613.§.2.

Sathan is a murtherer of mankind.p.8.col.1. ad finem, & inde.

For temptations to ſelfe-murther, ſee lib. 2. part.1.c.2.p.70.§ 1.

The ſubtilty of the Deuill in vrging men to this ſin,p.71. §.2.

The world, the fleſh, and inward cauſes moue thereunto, §.3. & pag. 72.

There is extreame cowardiſe in ſelfe-murther idem,ibid.num.40.

It is a thing in no caſe lawful,§ 4.

No Saint euer committed this ſinne,pag. 74. § 5.

Obiections made againſt this truth, anſwered, §7.& pag.75.

Selfe-murther is a moſt haynous ſin againſt God, § 7. & pag. 76. Againſt his law and image, and as he is the Lord of hoaſts, haynous. Selfe-murtherers ſinne againſt Chriſt, as redeemer, col. 2. §6. And againſt the holy Ghoſt, pag. 77. § 9. They ſinne againſt God in his gifts, and common graces.

They ſin againſt their Neighbours, § 10. and againſt themſelues pag. 78.§ 12.

It is dangerous to determine abſolutely the damnation of all thoſe that murther themſelues. They draw vpon themſelues intolerable puniſhments, p.79. § 12.13.

How this ſin of ſelfe-murther may bee auoyded, p. 80.§ 14,15.

N

A*Ctions of nature are not troubleſome*, part.1.lib.2.c.34. p.204.col.2.num.30.& inde.

The fight ſpirituall of a Chriſtian is neceſſary, and not to be auoyded, cap.3.p.6.col.1. ad finem, & inde.

Negligence in ſpirituall duties is very dangerous, part. 4. lib.2. cap.24.pag.1163.col.2.§ 5.

Nicholas the Deacon cannot be proued to bee the founder of the doctrine of the Nicholaitains,par. 1.lib.3.c.21.p.343.col. 1.num.40.

There is no great matter affirmed of him in holy writing, idem, ibidem,per totum, § 12.

What nobility is, and of the ſignes thereof, part. 2. lib. 2. cap. 12.pag.490.col.1.§.1.

Nobility in it ſelfe, is good, and lawfull,§ 2.

True Nobility, is much to bee honoured, and reſpected p.491.col. 1. § 3.

Worldly Nobility is of ſmall worth or excellency, col.2.§ 4.

There is no cauſe why any ſhould glory in worldly Nobillity,pag.492 col. 1. §. 5. For God reſpecteth it not, § 6. Chriſt neglected it, pag. 493.§ 7.It is momentany and mutable § 8.

Vpſtart Nobility ioyned with vertue, is to bee preferred before that which is ancient, if it bee deſtitute of goodneſſe,§. 9.col.2.

Why the Nobillity of Rome did were Moones vpon their ſhoes, col. 2.num.10.

Worldly Nobility is vnprofitable, pag.494.§.10.

Which is ſhewed by diuers examples, col. 2.§.11.

It maketh men proud, and negligent in the duties of religion, pag.495. col.2.§. 12.

Nobility ſeuered from vertue, diſgraceth thoſe that haue it,pag. 496.col.1. §.13.

Spirituall Nobility is farre to bee preferred before that which is worldly, col. 2. § 14.

For the priuiledges of it, are farre greater, pag.497.§ 17.

The number that is to be ſaued, in it ſelfe is very great, though in compariſon of the reprobate it bee very ſmall, part. 1. lib.2.c.6.p.98. col.2.num.10.

O

O*Bedience is an infalible ſigne of election*, part. 1.lib. 2.cap. 12.p.124. §7.

The properties of true obedience are, it muſt bee totall, perpetuall; grounded on Gods word, referred to his glory, ibem,ibid.§ 8.&.p. 125.

The Lord in the Goſpel requireth not of vs perfect obedience to the Law,lib.3.c.7.p.296.§ 6.

Wherein the obedience of the faithfull and the hypocrite, doe differ,part.4.lib.1.c.13.col.1 § 5.

Many purpoſing to repent when they were old, haue beene cut off before that time, part. 1. lib. 2. cap. 29.p.186.col.1.§ 4.

Old age is more vnfit for repentance then youth, c.3. p. 190.col. 1.§ 8.

Repentance when people come to be old is not ſo acceptable, p.193.c. 31.col. 1.§ 1.

Why the Deuill is called one, part. 1.lib.1.c.5.p.10.ad finem.& p.11. ad initium.

Opinion is that which ſets a price vpon earthly things, part. 2.lib. 2. cap.9.pag. 471. per totum caput.

The Oſtrich wings helpe them not to fly, part. 2. lib. 1.391.cap.9. num 50.

The Oſtrich eateth and makes good nouriſhment of Iron, part. 3. lib.2.c.1. p.800. col.2. num.30.

Ouercome, looke victory.

We owe our ſelues to Chriſt, by a double right, part.1.lib.1. c.3.p.6. col.2.num.10.

The Spirit of God is compared to Oyle, for two reaſons, part.4.lib. 2. c.16.p.1127.col.2.num.40.& inde.

P

T*He Children of God in the time of trouble want patience*, part. 1.lib. 2.cap.5.pag.94.& inde § 8.9.

A deſcription of patience, part. 3.lib.2.cap.1. p.791.§ 1.

There was neuer any true patience among the Heathen pag.792. §2.

Of the Obiect and properties of true patience, pag.193.§ 3,4.

Stoicall ſtupidity is no patience, p.794. § 5.

There can bee no true patience, where there is no paſſion, pag. 797. § 9.

Patience muſt bee ioyned with willingneſſe and cheerefulneſſe, to beare the croſſe, p. 798. § 10,11.

Patience muſt be aſſociated with conſtancy, idem, ibidem. § 9.

It muſt be aſſiſted with ioy, and ſpirituall reioycing, p.800. § 12.

None can bee perfectly patient, yet euery one muſt labour after patience, p.801. § 13.

Patience is a grace of great excellency, and much vtility, cap.2. pag. 802,803. § 1, 2. & inde. pag. 804,805.

Patience is a neceſſary vertue, § 3. p.805,806,807.

Of ſeuerall meanes to worke patience in vs, c.3. per totum. pag. 807. & inde.

Patience is not naturall, it is the free gift of God vnto vs, p. 808, col.2. § 2.

Patience in afflictions may bee procured, by looking vp to God the ſupreme cauſe of them, and not too much or onely vpon their inferiour cauſes, c.6. p.827. § 4. & p.828.

How to get patience in trouble, firſt meditate vpon Gods command requiring vs to waite, c.34. p. 999. § 2. Secondly meditate on Gods gracious promiſes, c. 2. § 3. Thirdly conſider Gods promiſes are infallible. Fourthly God vſually deferreth to helpe thoſe that are moſt ſtrong in grace, and moſt deare vnto him, p. 1000. § 4,5. Fiftly God neuer failed thoſe that waite for him, p. 1001. § 6. Sixtly the Lord deferreth to deliuer vs, for the furthering of our ſpirituall good, p.1002. § 7. Seauenthly the Lord many times deliuereth the faithfull out of affliction, when their ſtate is moſt deſperate, p. 1003. § 8. Laſtly, the Lord waiteth on vs, to deliuer vs in the fitteſt time, p. 1004. § 9.

Duties to be done by thoſe that would gaine patience, firſt let them often renew their repentance, for thoſe that are negligent herein, can haue no aſſurance of deliuerance, c.35. p.1004, 1005. § 1,2. Secondly renew their faith in Gods promiſes, p. 1006. § 3. Thirdly ſubmit themſelues to Gods good pleaſure, col. 2. § 4. Fourthly truſt in God at all times, whether inferiour meanes be at hand, or farre away, p. 1007. § 5. Fifthly be frequent and feruent in prayer, § 6.

Parſimony is not to be indured, part.2 lib.2. cap. 4. pag. 453. col. 1. ad finem & inde.

The Diuell was the inuenter of the art of painting of the body, lib. 1. cap. 14. pag. 411. col. 2. § 1.

It is both the effect and cauſe of ſin, p.412. § 2.

Such as paint their faces abuſe and deceaue others, § 3. And moſt of all offend againſt themſelues § 4.

They deſtroy their naturall beauty, and diſgrace their names, col.2 § 5.

They ſlander their profeſſion of Religion, p. 413. § 6.

It is a friuolous excuſe in thoſe that ſay they doe it to pleaſe their husbands, § 7.

Wee are not to expect peace in this world, part. 4. lib. 1. c. 1. p. 1. 1015. § 1,2.

The peace of vnregenerate perſons is more dangerous, than the moſt pernitious warre, lib. 2. c. 2. p.1086. col. 2. § 4.

The peace of the wicked ariſeth not from faith but ſecurity, part. 1. lib. 1. c. 1. p. 2 & 3.

The perfection of a Chriſtian, conſiſteth in a deſire of, and a labour after perfection, part. 1. lib. 1. c.23. p.58. & inde, § 4, 5.

The Lord will pardon, and perfect the wants of them that deſire perfection, p. 60. § 6, 7.

Our weakeneſſe in performing holy duties, argueth our perfection in deſiring to diſcharge them, lib. 2. c. 27. col. 1. § 6.

How to withſtand the Deuils temptation, concerning perſeuerance. The generall way, is not to relie vpon our owne ſtrength, but to fly to God for it, part. 1. lib. 3. c. 13. pag. 316. col. 1. § 2.

The ſtate of the controuerſie concerning perſeuerance, col. 2. § 3.

Arguments to aſſure our perſeuerance.

The firſt grounded vpon the will of God, conſidering in the decree of election, p. 317. § 4. The ſecond vpon his reuealed will, c. 2. § 5. The third vpon the immutability of his loue, § 6. And vpon the vnchangeableneſſe of his gifts p. 318. § 8. The fourth vpon Gods omnipotency, cap. 14. p. 319. § 1. The fifth vpon Gods truth in his couenant, § 2. Where wee ſee our faultineſſe is no impediment, becauſe God hath made a new couenant with vs, and we haue particular promiſes of our perſeuerance. The ſixth is taken from Chriſts interceſſion, cap. 15. pag. 321. § 1. The ſeauenth from our vnion with Chriſt, § 2. The eight from the Spirit of God dwelling in vs. pag. 322. § 3. The ninth from the effects of the Spirit, § 4. The tenth from Gods continuall aide, col. 2. § 5. The eleauenth from the nature of faith § 6. The twelfe from examples. The thirteene from the inability of the oppoſits which goe about to hinder the perſeuerance of the Saints, p.323. col. 1. § 8.

Obiections againſt perſeuerance anſwered, cap. 16. p. 323, 324, 325.

Thoſe are taken out of the old teſtament. Reade of thoſe that are in the new, cap. 17, 18, 19. pag. 326. & inde.

The obiections anſwered that are grounded vpon examples, cap. 20. p. 337. & inde.

Where yee may read of the fallen Angels, Adam, Saul, Dauid, Solomon, Peter, Simon Magus, Iudas, the Iſraelits in the Wilderneſſe, the Corinthians, the Galathians, of Nicholas the Deacon.

Reaſons alledged againſt the Doctrine of perſeuerance anſwered, c. 21. p. 343, 344, 345.

God

God hath pardoned many others, to incourage his ſeruants to make ſute for the like fauour, part.1.lib. c.38.p.220. col.2: § 4. & inde.

Peters ſinne was vpon infirmity, not malice, lib.3.c.20.pag.340 § 6.

We are Pilgrimes in this World, and ſhall doe well to looke for ſuch entertainment to that kind of people part.3.lib.2. cap.26.p.966. § 2.

Of diuine pleaſures, part.2.lib.2 c.5.p.454. § 1.

They are much to be deſired, col.2. § 2.

Naturall & ciuill pleaſures are in their own nature good. In reſpect of vs and as they may be vſed, they are indifferent, § 3.

Honeſt pleaſures are warranted by Scriptures, p.455. § 4.

Naturall and ciuill pleaſures, ſerue to good ends and purpoſes, col.2. § 5.

Democritus his compariſon of a man depriued of all pleaſure, num.40.

Pleaſures are good when they are well vſed, and enioyed by them that are iuſtified, pap.456. col.1. § 6.

We may neither ouer-ualue, nor immoderately affect them, col.2. § 7.

Pleaſures muſt be moderated, and referred to their lawfull ends; as firſt to Gods glory, § 8. And ſecondly, to the good both of our bodies and ſoules, § 9.

Take heed Sathan intangle not in the vſe of pleaſures, pag.457 § 10.

Temptations grounded vpon pleaſures are very pernicious, c.6 p.456.col.2. § 6.

Pleaſures are made precious by opinion, cap.9. pag.473. col.1. § 4. And by competition, pag.474 § 6.

Pleaſures are the more ſet by, becauſe they are difficult to obtaine, p.476.col.1. § 9.

Worldly pleaſures are of no worth in compariſon of heauenly ioyes, c.16.p.524.col.1. § 1.

Pleaſures are gifts of an inferiour nature, plentifully beſtowed vpon the wicked, § 2.

The brute creatures haue the largeſt ſhare in earthly pleaſures, p.525.col.1. § 3.

They are eaſie to be abuſed, § 4. col.2. & p.526.

The vanity of worldly pleaſures ſhould moue vs to ſeeke heauenly ioyes, p.526. § 5.

They doe not ſatisfie, or giue contentment, c.17.p.535,536.col.2. § 17.

Worldly pleaſures are vnprofitable, c.20.p.555.col.1. § 5.

They are void of ſound delight, c.21.p.560. § 4.

Pleaſures doe not cure diſeaſes, p.562,563. § 8.

How vncertaine it is to purchaſe earthly pleaſures, pag. 602 § 9.

Of the miſeries that attend the getting, the enioying, and parting with worldly pleaſures. See the word Miſery.

They are ſhort and momentany, c.27.p.611. § 10.

They are vnconſtant, and ſubiect to change, cap.21. pag. 616. § 6.

The liues of people wallowing in pleaſures, are ſhort, and full of frailty, cap.29.pag.626,627 § 14.

Pleaſures hurt thoſe that affect them, being occaſions vnto ſin, and in themſelues ſinfull, pag.631. § 4 c.30.

Worldly pleaſures with-draw mens hearts from God, p.634.col.1 num.40.

Pleaſures make men become ſlaues, p.660 c.33. § 10.

Pleaſures are the cauſe of great dangers, p.666. § 16.

Pleaſures blind thoſe that are ingaged vnto them, p.671. col.1. num.30. & inde.

Pleaſures immoderately loued become the Deuils ſnares pag.679 § 15.

Earthly pleaſures hinder from attaining euerlaſting ioyes, c.35.p.686.col.2. § 6.

Pleaſures increaſe the account of ſuch as enioy them at the laſt day, p.688. § 8.

Pleaſures in this World, are of no account, in reſpect of thoſe in Heauen, attainable in the World to come, part.2.lib 3.cap.2.p.698 § 4.

Philoſophy yeelds no ſound comfort in the times of affliction, part.3.lib.2.c.3.p.808,807. § 1.

The poore are to be releeued by the rich, part.2.lib.2.cap.4.p.434 § 14.

The beſt vſe of Riches is to giue them to the poore, pag.591.cap.25 § 14.

The Popiſh is not the true Religion part.1.lib.2.c.26.p.176.col.2.num.10. & inde.

The way of Popery is little pleaſing vnto God, part.4. lib.2.cap.24 p.1162. § 3.

Popularitie ought not to be affected, becauſe it is impoſſible to content the multitude, and pleaſe God, part.2 .lib.2. cap.10.p.480, 481. § 7,8.

It is a vaile of much wickednes, § 8. p.482.

The Deuill is exceeding full of power, in reſpect of himſelfe, part.1 lib 1 c.5.p.20.col.2.num.10.& inde, & p.11.col.1.

Yet the faithfull need not feare this power, for God ſtill both curbeth it, and him, p.12.

He is powerfull in regard of his aides, c.6.p.14. & inde.

The admirable vſe of Prayer in the Chriſtian Combate, part.1.lib.1.c.16.p.26. § 1,2.

The properties required in prayer, § 3,4,5.

What is called for of thoſe that pray in the ſpirit, § 5.

Perſeuerance in prayer, is required of vs, § 9. p.29.

How to behaue our ſelues when God delayeth to heare our prayers, § 10.

Prayer is to be made for all Saints, § 11.p.30.

Ignorance in prayer, the heart on one thing, the tongue in another, & impure prayer, all odious, p.28. § 5

Prayer helpeth much in the point of aſſurance, lib.2. cap.9. pag.111 § 8.

The ſpirit of Prayer is a ſigne of our Election, cap.12.p.122.col. 2. § 2.

Comforts for ſuch as ſay, they cannot pray at all, cap.42.p.232. col.2. § 1. & pag.233.

The gift of Prayer is not in our power, idem, ibidem, num.30.& inde.

Comfort for thoſe that complaine they cannot pray in any good forme, col.2. § 2.

Comfort for thoſe that bewaile their coldneſſe and dulneſſe in Prayer, p.234. § 3.

Comfort for thoſe that bewayle their wandring thoughts in prayer col.2 § 4.

Our infirmities in Prayer, ſhould not make vs neglect that holy exerciſe, p.235.col 1. § 5.

Prayer is to be vſed in the times of trouble. Firſt, becauſe God requireth it. Secondly, to mooue vs to it, is the maine end why we are afflicted. Thirdly, God hath promiſed to heare his. Fourthly, hee is our ſole Sauiour and Deliuerer, part.3. lib.2.c.3.p.809,810. § 3,4 5,6.

Fiftly, trouble is a ſeaſon for Prayer. Sixtly, Gods people haue alwayes prayed at ſuch times, pag. 811,812. § 7,8.

They that make acceptable Prayers to God, muſt firſt be regenerate, c.4.p. 812,813. § 1.

How Prayers againſt afflictions ought to be qualified, c.5.p.817. & inde per totum caput.

In Prayer we muſt come to God, with all feare and reuerence, pag. 819. § 3.

Wee ought to pray in truth, § 4 p.820.

In faith, § 5.

With earneſtneſſe and feruency of ſpirit, § 6. & p. 821.

In humility, ſubmitting our wils to the will of God, p.822,823 § 7.

Wee muſt perſeuere in Prayer, § 8.

That is onely true Prayer that is made in the Holy Ghoſt, part.4. lib.2.c.14.p.1122.1123, § 2.

Why more periſh through preſuming, than by deſpaire, part.1. lib.1.c.1.p.4.col.1.

Sathans preuayling with the Saints is of Gods permiſſion, not of his owne power, c.23.p.62. § 10.

It is fooliſh to play with Religion, in the point of Predeſtinaton, lib.2.c.7.p.99 100,101.

How to diſcerne betweene preſumption, and the teſtimony of Gods Spirit, c.10.p.116. § 5,6,7,8 & cap.11.pag.118 col.1. ad finem & inde.

It is not preſumption to labour for the aſſurance of our Election, c.14.p.136.col.2.& inde, § 7.

Preaching, the onely ordinary way of mans ſaluation, c.20.p.158. col.2. § 3. & inde.

Preachers are Gods Embaſſadors, idem ibidem, § 4.

Preparation to hearing is required. Wherein this duty conſiſteth, cap.28. pag.181. col.1.num.10.& inde.

Preiudice a great hurt to the profitable hearing of Gods Word, part.1. lib.2.cap.28.p.181.col.2. ad finem, & inde.

Precedency, and the fauour of Princes are vaine things, part.2. lib.2.p.482,483. § 10,11.

How preſumption differeth from iuſtifying faith, part.4.lib.2.c.12. p.1117. § 2.

The doctrine of ſauing grace not to be loſt. Is no boulſter for preſumption, cap.18. pag.1137,1138 § 11.

Pride is to be mortified, part.1. lib.1.cap.22.p.53.col.1. § 11.

It is the chiefe cauſe of trouble of mind, § 12.

Of Diſcontent, and Melancholy § 13.

Spirituall Pride is the cauſe of Doubting and Deſpaire, pag.54 § 14.

Pride goeth before deſtruction, part.2.lib.2. cap.31.p.641. § 5.

The price paid for our Redemption, doth farre exceed all our ſinnes, part.1. lib.2.c.37.pag.214. § 3. col.1.

Princes fauours are inconſtant, part.2. lib.2.cap.10.pag.483. § 12.

They are alſo vnprofitable p.484 § 13.

Outward Priuiledges, no infallible teſtimonies of Gods loue, or our happineſſe, part.4.lib.1.cap.12 p.1053. § 3 4.

For Pride in Apparell ſee Apparell.

How we are to carry our ſelues in the time of Proſperitie, part.1. lib.1.c.6.p.14. § 2.

Wee muſt haue affiance in Gods promiſes, p.29. § 8.

How the Deuill deales with Profeſſors of Religion in his temptations, c.18.p.34. col.2. § 5. If they be not ſonnd.

How he deales with them that be ſincere, if they be weake, § 6,7.

How the Deuil deales with thoſe that are ſtrong, p.36. § 8.

The indefiniteneſſe of Gods promiſes, hinders no Chriſtians aſſurance, lib.2.c.8.p.104. § 5.

They may be aſſured they are faithfull, to whom the promiſes of the Goſpell are made, § 6.

Generall Promiſes that aſſure the forgiueneſſe of ſinnes, c.36.pag. 209.col.2. § 4.

Theſe Promiſes are made indefinitely to all that beleeue, pag.210. col.2. § 5. num.20. & inde.

Chriſt being our Prophet aſſureth vs the forgiueneſſe of our ſins, p.215.col.2. § 5.

So doth his being our Prieſt, § 6. & p. 216.

Proſperity is good, in its owne nature, part.2.lib.1.c.4.p.368.col. 2. § 3.

In reſpect of our vſe of it, it is of an indifferent nature, p.369.col.1 § 4.

We are apt to abuſe our Proſperity to ſin, col.2. § 5.

The dangerouſneſſe of worldly proſperity, cap.5.pag.370.col.1. § 1.

The ſtate of Proſperitie is much more dangerous than that of aduerſity, col.2. § 2.

Proſperity yeelds not ſo good fruit as affliction, 371. col.2. § 4.

The great danger of proſperity ſhewed by the example of former ages, p.372. col.2. § 5. And by experience of the preſent times, pag. 373. col.2. § 8.

The great difference betweene men in Proſperity and Aduerſity, § 6.

Proſperity hath corrupted whole Nations, § 7.

Reaſons why Proſperity is ſo dangerous, p.374. § 9.

A great meaſure of grace is required to the managing of Proſperity, col.2. § 10.

In proſperity wee muſt keepe a narrow watch ouer our ſelues, § 11.

How wee are ſaid to reſiſt the temptations of proſperity, p 375. col.1. § 12.

Reaſons whereby wee may be moued to contemne worldly proſperity, c.6.p.375,376,377,378.

Firſt, it ſeldome bettereth our eſtate, § 1.

Secondly, the meane eſtate is to be preferred before the mighty, § 2

Thirdly, Proſperity is one of Gods ordinary gifts, § 3.

Fourthly, worldly proſperity and heauenly happines are ſtill beſtowed vpon one man, § 4.

Fiftly, proſperity abuſed, increaſeth the condemnation of the abuſers, § 5.

Proſperity is the cauſe of pride, p.639,640

It maketh men to be ſlacke in the ſeruice of God, p.645,646.

It is a great furtherer of pride, p.650.col,1,num.50. & inde.

Many inconueniencies comming by proſperity. See worldly things.

It is an heauy iudgement for proſperity to follow ſinne, pag.674. col.2. ad finem, & pag.675.

Proſperity makes the impieties of men the more conſpicuous, p.676 col.2. num.30. & inde.

Continuall proſperity is diſtaſtfull and dangerous, part.3.lib.2.c.11.p.872.col.2.num.30. & inde.

Nothing but proſperity can make vs to much to dote vpon the world, c.19.p.915. § 9.

Proſperity is no infallible teſtimony of Gods loue, or our happines, part.4. lib.1. cap.12. p.1015. § 3,4 Chriſtians may ſafely reſt vpon Gods prouidence, pag.547. col.2 § 9.

Bare profeſſion of Religion is not ſufficient to ſaluation, pag.1054 § 6.

Pouerty is a great prouocation to ſinne, which ought not to be ſo, p.1066. § 4.

Faire promiſes, and faint purpoſes, will not preuaile to procure our peace with God, pag.1071 § 4.

The faithfull cannot properly be puniſhed for their ſinnes, p.852 § 5

Q

A Good Quarrell will make a good Combatant, part.1.lib.1. cap.3.col.1.num.40. & inde.

What is meant by quenching the fiery Darts of the Deuill, lib.1.c.13 c.24. § 2.

Why the ſhield of faith rather repels than quencheth the Deuils fiery Darts, idem, ibidem, § 3.

R

RAzis his vntimely death cenſured, part.1.lib.2.cap.2.p.75 col.1.

Our Redemption is not grounded vpon our worthineſſe, lib.2.c.4 p.86. § 3.

God giueth Chriſt to be a Redeemer to thoſe that are elected. What this Redemption is, c.15.p. 139. & inde.

Chriſt onely in proper ſpeech is our Redeemer, and why, pag.140. col.1. num. 10,

He redeemed vs by paying a price for vs, and by force freing vs out of the hands of our Enemies, § 2.

The end of our Redemption, what p.141. § 4.

Vniuerſall Redemption is a ſoare temptation, to preſſe worldly men to preſumption.

How to refell that Reaſon. The Scripture is againſt it, c.16.p.141 § 1,2,3.

Diuers Reaſons alſo doe ouerthrow it, p.142,143. § 4. col.2.& inde.

How Chriſt is ſaid to haue died for all, p.143. § 4. col.2.

All thoſe that are Redeemed are in like ſort ſanctified, lib.2.cap.17 p.146. per totum caput.

The ends of mans Redemption are Gods glory, and mans happines, p.147. § 3.

In the worke of our Redemption there be three degrees, idem, ibid. § 4.

Chriſt Redeemed the whole man, p.148.col.2. § 5.

Hee offered a ſufficient price for our Redemption, c.18.p.150 § 2.

The falling of the Saints into ſin, is no reaſon to prooue that they are not Redeemed, p.151.col.1.ad finem.

Thoſe that are once Redeemed cannot be brought againe into bondage, p.154. § 9.

Why the Lord doth not perfectly regenerate his children in this life, part.1.lib.3,c.7. p.297. § 9,10,11, 12. & inde.

There is no Regenerate perſon free from the combat betweene the fleſh and the ſpirit, part.4.lib.2.c. 1. p.1079. § 1,2.

They haue a feeling and experience of this conflict, p.1080.col.2 § 3.1081. § 5.

What this conflict in the Regenerate is, c.2. § 1.

The cauſe of this conflict in them, p.1082. § 2.

Why God Regenerateth his children in part onely, col.1.num.30 & inde. p.1083,1084.

The Regenerate cannot with full conſent of will, chuſe or refuſe either good or euill, c.7.p.1099. § 1.

He

Hee cannot at all times doe the will which the fleſh chuſeth, p.1100 § 2.

He cannot doe the good he would, § 3.

All the Regenerate that are of able age, haue a ſpirituall conflict in them, c.10.p.1100. § 1.

It is not in them all alike, nor in the like meaſure, p.1111. § 3.

It is often weake in ſtrong Chriſtians, p.1112. § 4.

Diuers differences there are betweene the Regenerate, and the vnregenerate, whereby the one may be known from the other, c.15.p.1125 col.1. num.50. & inde.

The differences betweene the quickning of the ſpirit in the Regenerate, and vnregenerate, p.1126 § 7 & p.1127.

We may ioyne lawfull Recreations, with honeſt labours, part.3.lib. 2.c.32.p.989. § 4.

Our Religion muſt be grounded vpon Gods Truth, part.1.lib.1.cap. 10.p.21.col.1. § 2.

How thoſe that are vnlearned may diſcerne the true Religion, from the falſe, pag.176. col.1. § 3.

Why the reliques of ſinne doe ſtill remaine in the Saints, p.298. § 13 14,15,16.

Relapſe into the ſame ſin is too frequent with ſame that feare God. The difference betweene the Relapſes of the godly, and vngodly, pag. 306,307.

The Deuill tempteth people to delay their Repentance. Yet thoſe that be wiſe ſhould haſten it, part. 1.lib.2.cap.29.p.184. And why, § 1 2,3,4,5.

It is the more hard to repent the longer we deferre our Repentance. And why, cap.30.p.187.col.2. § 1 & inde.

Motiues to haſten our Repentance, cap.31.pag.191.col 1.§ 1.& inde, per totum caput.

Two lets doe hinder worldlings from Repentance. They are remoued, c.32.p.195.col.1. § 1.per totum caput.

How Sathan may be defeated when he tempteth men to counterfeit their Repentance, cap.33.pag. 197.col.1. & inde per totum caput.

We muſt repent ſeriouſly, § 1.

What things are required of thoſe that truly repent, § 2,3.

The promiſes of the Goſpell are onely made to repenting Sinners, p.199.col.1.§ 4.

What the vndoubted ſignes of true Repentance are, c.43.p.236 col.1. ad finem & inde.

What the parts of it are, idem, ibidem. What the degres, pag.239 col.1. § 2.

Repentance muſt be preſently performed, § 3.col 2. It muſt be conſtant, p.240. § 4. It ought to proceed from faith, § 5.

There are teares often where there is no Repentance, and true Repentance when there is no teares, col.2 § 6,7.

Wherein true Repentance conſiſteth, c.43.p.241.col.1.

Aſſurance of the forgiuenes of our ſins, depends not vpon the worth of our Repentance, p.242. § 8.

Gods children ought not to be diſcouraged, becauſe Reprobates can ſhew more outward ſignes of Repentance than thēſelues, col.2.§ 9

Vnfained Repentance is euer accompanied with ſeuen fruits, lib.3. c.2.p.284.col.1.num.50.

We muſt renue our Repentance as we reiterate our ſins c.9.p.301.§ 2

Repentance is a meanes to preſerue vs from afflictions, part.3.lib. 1.c.4.p.769,770. § 9,11.

Repentance bringeth ſingular ioy and comfort, to them that remayne vnder the croſſe, p.771. § 12.

Repentance muſt ſhew it ſelfe by the fruits therof, li.2.c.4.p.815.§ 3

Such as repent muſt make humble confeſſion of their ſins, p.815,816

Why true Repentance is called μετάνοια, part.4.lib.1.cap.6.p. 1033.col.1.num.30.

The differences between true & falſe Repentance, c.13.p.1057.col. 2. § 4.

It is dangerous to defer our Repentance, c.15.p.1068. § 8.

The Spirit of God worketh Repentance, of which Repentance Faith is the foundation, and the cauſe, p:1124. § 2,3.

How the Deuill is ſaid to reſiſt God, part.1.lib,1. cap.5.p.12.col.2 § 6.

Saint Paul grounded not the aſſurance of his Election vpon any reuelation, lib.2.c.8.p.104.col.1.

Concerning the Romane Religion. See the word Popery, & read a touch of it, part.2.lib.1. cap.2.p. 363..col.2.num.20.

Riches are good in their owne nature, part.2.lib.2.c.3.p.442.col. 2. § 1.

They are mutably good, and of no great excellency, § 2.

Riches are of an indifferent nature in reſpect of their vſe, p.443. col.1. § 3.

Riches are truly good to the Regenerate, that haue the right vſe of them, § 4.

They are inſtruments and means of well-doing, § 5.

Diuers Enemies to Riches, pag. 444. col.2. § 6.

Riches are not to be reiected; becauſe they are the bleſſings of God, p.445.col.1.§ 7.

Why Riches are called the Mammon of iniquity, § 8.

In what ſenſe the Apoſtles are ſaid to haue forſaken all § 9.

We may not ouer-value riches in our iudgements aboue their worth, p.446.c.4.col.2 § 1.

Riches ought not to be immoderately affected and deſired, p.447 col.1. § 2.

Man may deſire ſo much Riches as are neceſſary, p.448. col.2. § 3. And that either for his perſon, or his eſtate.

It is lawfull to deſire a ſufficient plenty of riches, p.449 col.1. § 4.

How farre forth it is lawfull to deſire abundance of riches, col.2. § 5.

It vnlawfull to deſire ſuperfluous riches, p.450.col.2.§.6. For this deſire is a ſigne of diffidence and diſtruſt in God, § 7.

We may not pray for abundance of of riches, pag.451. col.1. § 8.

Of the right vſe of riches in regard of their poſſeſſion. Firſt, wee muſt praiſe God for them, p.451. col.2. § 9. Secondly, wee ſhould ſanctifie them to our vſe, by the Word of God and Prayer. Thirdly, wee may not ſet our hearts vpon them, § 10.

Wee muſt be contented with the riches we haue lawfully gotten, and willing to leaue them, when God calleth them away, p.452. § 11.

Take heed thy riches become not Satans ſnares, § 12.

Of the lawfull vſe of riches, in regard of diſperſing and diſpoſing them, p.453. § 13.

It is good to relieue the poore with our riches, p.454. col.1. § 14

Riches are the occaſion of many dangerous temptations, c.6. lib.2. p.459. § 5.

Riches are eſteemed excellent, through opinion, p.472. c.9. col.1. § 3.

Riches are highly rated by reaſon of competition, pag. 474. § 6. And becauſe of the difficulty in obtayning them, p.475. col.2. § 8.

Worldly riches are to be contemned as vain, and worthles, p.504. c.14. col.2. § 1.

Of the vanity of great Lands & Lordſhips, p.505. col.1. § 2. Of the vanity of gold and ſiluer, col.2.

The vanity of rich Iewels and coſtly furniture, p.506. col.2. § 4

Of the vanity of ſumptuous buildings, p.507, 508. col.2. § 5. & inde

Of the vanity of a numerous Family, p.509. § 6.

Riches are lawfull to them that are of high calling, c.15. p.510. col.2. § 1.

There is no ſatietie, or content in riches, c.17. p.530. col.2. § 7.

Worldly riches promiſe contentment, but they performe it not. And why, p.531. col.1. § 8.

Why the Prince of Hell and a rich man haue one and the ſame name, col.2. num.20.

Rich men through their abundance become more couetous. They want more than the poore, § 9. & pag.532. col.1. § 10.

What it is to be truly rich, pag. 532 col.1 num.20.

It is vaine to ſeeke for contentment in riches, col.2. § 11.

Riches doe not ſatisfie, becauſe they are not vſed, 533. col.1. § 12.

The bare poſſeſſion of riches maketh not rich, col.2. § 13.

Rich miſers are of all others the moſt poore, § 14. & p. 534.

The miſerable condition of rich miſers, § 15. col.1. & inde.

Rich miſers are neither good for themſelues, nor others, p.535 § 16.

Riches defined, c.19 p.545. col.2. num.50. & inde.

Why God maketh not all his children to be rich, p.546. § 11.

There is no profit in worldly riches c.20. p.552. § 3.

Riches are moſt vnprofitable to baſe miſers, p.553. col.2. § 4.

The dangerouſneſſe of riches in diuers reſpects, c.25. p.585. col.1. num.40. & inde.

Riches depriue their bodies of reſt, and their minds of peace, that too much loue them, pag.589, 590. § 12.

How a man that poſſeſſeth riches, may be freed from worldly miſeries, § 13.

Why riches are called goods, col.2. num.50. & inde.

Riches compared to Ban-dogs, Riuers, ſpringing Fountaines, to moth-eaten garments, to corne and meale kept too long. And why, p.591 col.1. ad initium, & inde.

Riches are moſt ſurely preſerued when they are giuen to the poore, § 14.

Rich men are no moſe willing to looſe of their eſtates, than the poore, p.594. col.2. num.40. & inde.

The great vncertainty of gayning worldly riches, p.601. § 8.

Of the miſeries in getting, keeping, and foregoing worldly riches. See Miſery.

All worldly riches are tranſitory, p.609. § 7.

Riches are daily in danger to be loſt, and the greater the loſſe, the heauier the griefe, pag.610. § 8.

Which is the beſt way to preſerue riches from loſing, p.611. § 9.

Of the mutability and inconſtancy of worldly riches, c.28. p.615 § 5.

The rich mans life is ſhort, and vncertaine, cap.29 p.624. § 12.

Riches hurt thoſe that immoderately deſire them, by drawing them to ſinne, c.30. p.630. § 3.

Why Riches are compared to thornes, p.630. col.2. num.50.

Riches withdraw mans heart from God, p.633. & inde, § 6.

Riches bring their Owners into miſerable bondage, p.657, 658, § 8. c 33.

The ſeruitude of rich men to their riches, is moſt grieuous, pag.658, 659. § 9.

Riches bring with them many dangers, p.665. § 15.

Riches make way for the temptations of the Deuill, c.34. p.678. § 14.

Earthly riches hinder men from attaining euerlaſting treaſures, c.35. p.685, 686. § 5.

Riches augment a mans account at the Day of Iudgement, p.688. § 5

Earthly riches are to be vnderprized in regard of heauenly, part.2. lib.3 c.2. p.698. § 4.

The righteous that fall labour to riſe againe, part.1. lib.1. cap.23. p.56. col.2. num.50.

Hungring and thirſting after righteouſneſſe is a ſigne of Election, c.12. p.123. col.2. § 5.

Reſt not vpon thine owne righteouſneſſe, lib.2. cap.34. pag.203. § 2.

Imputatiue righteouſneſſe is not putatiue, cap.52. pag.270. col.1. § 4.

God accepteth our imperfect righteouſneſſe, and why, lib.3. c.7. pag.296. col.2. § 7, 8, 9.

S

THe Sacraments are great helps, to further our aſſurance of Gods ſauour, part.1.lib.2.cap.9 p.110.

What benefit wee enioy in vſing the Sacrament of the Lords Supper, c.36. p.209.col.1.num.50. & inde.

Our ſaluation is not of any worthineſſe in vs, p.88. § 7. It is wholy wrought by God alone, § 8.

Saul was neuer elected to ſaluation, lib.3.c.20.p.338.col.1, § 3.

Sathan ſignifieth an Aduerſary,

Why the Deuill is ſo called, pag.8 col.1.num.50.

Of the ſtratagems of Sathan, read part.1.lib.1.c.17,18,19,20.

How to diſcerne betweene the ſuggeſtions of Sathan, and the motions of Gods Spirit, cap.20.p.39 col.1.

Sathan aſſaults when men are moſt ſecure, c.21.p.42.col.2. § 2.

How Sathan draweth men to commit ſin, c.4.pag.288. § 2.col.1

Sampſons death is defended, part.1.lib.2. pag.74. col.2. § 6.

Our ſanctification is the free gift of God, c.4.p.87.col.2. § 5.

Wherein our Sanctification conſiſteth, p.101.c.7.col.1.num.10.

Sanctification is no cauſe of, but a principall meanes to aſſure our Election, p.120.col.1.ad initium.

Wherein this Sanctification is comprized, § 9.

How to diſcerne betweene true and counterfeit Sanctification, § 11.col.2. & inde,

They that are ſanctified cannot but be in the number of them that are redeemed, p.146. § 1. Read more of Sanctification, what it is, lib.3.c.1.p 281.col.1.num.50.

The efficient cauſe of it is God himſelfe, idem, ibidem.

Why we are exhorted to ſanctifie our ſelues, p.282.col.1.num.30.

The worke of Sanctification wrought in vs, is common to the three perſons in Trinitie, § 2.

The mouing cauſe of it is Gods onely mercy, and Chriſts merits, § 3.

The inſtrumentall cauſes of it, are externall and internall, § 4.& p.283.

How Sanctification is wrought, § 5.

The finall cauſes are Gods glory, and mans ſaluation, col.2. § 6.

Of the effects of Sanctification, c.2.p.285. § 1.

All Gods Elect are the ſubiect of it, col.2. § 2.

Wee muſt be ſanctified throughout, idem ibidem.

Sanctification is preſently begun vpon conuerſion, § 3.

How mortification and viuification are reckoned as parts of Sanctification, vbi ſupra, § 1.

The worke of Sanctification is not finiſhed in an inſtant, pag.287 col.2. § 6.

Our Sanctification is imperfect, and mingled with corruption, c.7. p.294. col.2. § 2.

Wee may not imagine perfection ſhould be in our Sanctification, p. 295.col. 1. § 3.

Which ought not to diſcourage, but ſhould cauſe that wee redouble our diligence, becauſe the reliques of ſin, ſhall not be imputed vnto vs, § 4,5.

And the Lord now requireth not of vs perfect obedience, p.296. § 6

Why the Lord accepteth our imperfect righteouſneſſe, § 7,8.

Why he inabled vs not vnto perfection, p 297. & inde, § 9,10,11, 12, & inde.

The ſanctified in their combate againſt ſin, may be foiled, yet in the end they ſhall haue the victory, pag. 299. § 17.

God hath as certainly decreed our Sanctification, as our ſaluation: and will make it perfect, p.300 § 3,4.

To be ſanctified is taken two wayes, p.342. col.2. num.40.

The Deuils diſabling of the Scriptures, is refuted, part.1.lib.2 c.21.p.161.& inde.

The Scriptures beyond all other Books are of greateſt antiquity, § 2

They are pure and perfect, p.162 col.1. § 3.

The writers of them are ſincere, § 4.

The Scriptures are admirable, for their conſent, p.163.col.1.5.

They haue been miraculouſly preſerued, § 6.

Diuers miracles haue confirmed them, § 7. p.163,164. So hath the teſtimony of Martyrs, p. 164. § 8.

The argument handled in them, doth euidence the authority of them, c.22.p.164.col.2. § 1.

Their ſtile ſhewes their authority, p.165, § 2.

Why the Scriptures are penned in a plaine ſtile, p.166. § 3.

The contents of Scripture, are aboue the reach of humane reaſon, p.167.col.1. § 4.

The Prophecies in the Scriptures, do proue the authority of the Scriptures, col.2. § 5.

The writers of the Scripture are not forged, p.168. § 6.

The Bookes of Scripture did not periſh in the tyrannous time of Antiochus, p.169.col.1. § 7.

Gods Spirit can onely perſwade, that the Scriptures are the word of God, c.23.p.169.col.2. § 1.

Other arguments may conuince, yet they perſwade not, p.170. § 2.

The ſpirit fully aſſureth and perſwadeth it, col.2. § 3. And that by our owne feeling and experience § 4.

The Scriptures are truly tranſlated, c.24.p.171.col.2.

Differences of Tranſlations are no hinderance to the holy, pag.172 col.1. § 2.

How to vnderſtand darke and hard places of the Scripture, p.176 col.2. ad initium, & inde.

Varietie of Sects is a great ſnare of Sathan to preiudice Religion.

How it may be auoided, part.1. lib.2.c.26.p.175.col.1.& inde.

Security is cauſed by earthly abundance, part.2. lib.2.c.34. § 8. p.673.

Carnall ſecurity is the ground of worldly peoples peace, part.1.lib.1. c.1.p.2.

Sin is oftentimes preuented by temptation, part.1. lib.1. c.2.p.4 col.2.num 20.

Sathan is the father, and our fleſh is the mother of ſinne, cap.7. pag.

pag. 16. col. 2. num. 20.

Thoſe ſinnes are moſt dangerous whereof wee haue the leaſt ſence, cap.21.pag.44.col.1. ad finem, & inde.

God ſpared not ſinne in his owne Sonne, lib.2. cap.5.pag.93.col.2. num.30.

The ſight of, and ſorrow for ſin, is a ſigne of a mans Election, pag.123. col.1. § 4.

Sin will quickly grow into a cuſtome, cap.30. pag. 187. col.2. § 4.

The ſtrength of ſin increaſeth by continuance, p.188.col.2. § 4.

So much ioy doth not accompany, as ſorrow followeth ſin, c.31.p. 191.col.1. § 1.

Repentance of ſin in the time of ſickneſſe is often vnſound, p. 193. 194.col.2. § 5.

How to obtaine a true ſight of ſin, cap.33. pag. 199,200. col.2. § 5.

Sinne muſt be grieuous to the Saints that would repent, pag.200 col.1. ad finem & inde.

They muſt deſire to be freed from it, § 7.

The grieuouſnes of ſinne cannot debarre Penitents from Gods mercy, cap.34.p 205.col.2. § 5.

God hath puniſhed the ſins of the Saints, cap.35.pag.207. col.2. ad initium, & inde.

The vſe of the Brazen Serpent, c.36.p.210.col.2.num.50. & cap. 48.p.265.col.1.num.30.

Sin cannot debarre them of Gods mercy, that repent and beleeue, p. 211.col.1. § 6.

How the ſinne againſt the Holy Ghoſt becomes vnpardonable, col.2 num.10.

Chriſts merits and Gods mercy are manifeſted, by the forgiueneſſe of grieuous Sinners, c.37.pag.214 § 4.

Chriſt promiſeth to receiue all Sinners, and he neuer refuſed any that came vnto him, p.217. § 9.

We are to beleeue the forgiuenes of ſins, it being an Article of our Creed, cap. 38. pag. 219. col. 1. § 1.

Impenitent Sinners haue nothing to doe with the comfort of the godly, p.222.col.2. § 8.

How wee may be preſerued from ſinne.

Firſt, by conſideration of Gods loue towards vs.

Secondly, of Gods benefits to vs.

Thirdly, of the ſufferings of our Sauiour for vs.

Fourthly, by remembring the vnion betweene vs and Chriſt.

Fiftly, thinking on the Spirit of God that dwelleth in vs, p.288 289,290. § 4,5,6,7.

Other preſeruatiues againſt ſin, ſight of Gods all-ſeeing Wiſdome, of his exact Iuſtice, of his fierce Anger, of the Day of Iudgement, of the manifold euils that come by ſinne, cap.5. pag.291. & inde. § 1,2,3,4,5.

Speciall meanes whereby men may be enabled to auoid ſin.

Firſt, flie the occaſion of it.

Secondly, make conſcience of the leaſt ſin.

Thirdly, ſtand ſtill vpon thy guard.

Fourthly, reſt not on thine owne power, but on Gods aſſiſtance.

Fiftly, pray feruently, c.6.p.293 294. § 1,2,3,4,5.

The differences betweene the ſins of the righteous, and vnregenerate, c.9. p.302. § 5.

Sinnes committed after repentance by the faithfull may be dolefull, but they are not deadly. And why, cap.10. pag.303. col.1.num. 30. & inde.

All ſins committed againſt knowledge and conſcience, are not preſumptuous, § 3.

What it is to ſinne preſumptuouſly, p.304. col.1. ad initium.

Sins of knowledge are pardonable, § 4.

A Chriſtian may fall into preſumptuous ſins, and yet be receiued vnto mercy, § 15.

It is a fearefull thing to fall often into the ſame ſinne willingly, p.305. § 6.

Yet it may be the caſe of many a deare childe of God, who for all that ſhall be receiued vnto mercy, p.306. & inde.

Of the ſin againſt the Holy Ghoſt, c.12.p.314.

Sin in Scripture is vſually called by the name of folly, and Sinners are tearmed Fooles, part. 2. lib.1.cap 9.pag.388.col.2.num. 40.

God needeth not to infuſe ſin into Sinners, it is enough to the committing of it, that wee are left to our ſelues, part.3. lib.1. cap. 1. pag. 755. col. 1. ad initium.

God is not the authour of ſin, idem ibidem.

How God puniſheth one ſinne with another, col.2.num.50.

Sinners are made righteous by faith in Chriſt, and purged by repentance, lib 2. cap.4.p.814. § 2.

God inflicteth lighter puniſhments vpon Sinners than their ſins deſerue, cap.8.pag.842.col.1 § 6.

The hainouſneſſe of ſinne may appeare, firſt, from the perſon, who is with it offended, § 7.

Secondly, from the puniſhments that Gods Iuſtice allotteth vnto it, pag.842,843 § 8.

Sin is moſt odious to God, which appeareth firſt from the perſons that are puniſhed for it, pag.844 § 9.

Secondly, from the contrariety betweene it and Gods nature, pag. 845. § 10.

We are all guilty of all manner of ſin, § 11.

God vſeth meanes, firſt, to preuent ſin, and ſecondly, to mortifie and ſubdue it, c.19.p.110. § 3.

No ſin ought to bee eſteemed ſo ſmall, as that wee ſhould willingly commit it, part.4. lib.2. cap.23. p 1155.

For firſt by the leaſt ſinne, Gods Law is tranſgreſſed, § 1.

Secondly, great euils come by the leaſt ſins, p.1156. § 2.

Thirdly, ſmall ſins willingly entertained, are no leſſe dangerous than the greateſt, p.1157. § 3.

Fourthly, to auoid ſmall ſins, is a notable meanes to preſerue from the greater, § 4.

Fiftly, the leaſt ſins are the poyſon of the ſoule, and the liuery of Sathan, p.1158. § 5.

Sixthly, Enemies prooue moſt dangerous when they are moſt deſpiſed, § 6.

Seuenthly, If wee doe not hate the ſmall aſwell as the great, wee hate none with a Chriſtian hatred, p.1158. col.2. § 7.

We muſt neglect no ſin, as though we were in no danger of falling into it, p.1159. § 8.

Sin much weakens the Spirit of God, cap.24. pag.1160.col.2. § 1. See more of ſin in the word fleſh, and the luſts thereof.

Of ſome ſpeciall ſins whereby the Spirit of God in man is much weakned. Ignorance, Infidelity, Impenitencie, carnall ſecurity, the loue of the world, p.1161. § 2.

Wee may not prouide for the ſpirit poyſon, in ſtead of wholſome food, nor carnall weapons in ſtead of ſpirituall, p.1162. § 3.

We may not remit of our zeale in holy duties, p.1163. § 4.

We muſt auoid fleſhly ſloth, and negligence, col.2. § 5.

The Deuill is a ſlanderer, and thereupon hath his name διάβολος, part.1. lib.1. cap.4. pag.9. col.2. ad finem.

Though the Enemies of our ſoules be ſpirituall, wee ſhould not be diſmayed to fight againſt them, c.5.p.13.col.2. § 10.

Salomon was vndoubtedly ſaued, part.1.lib.3.cap.20 pag.339 col.1. § 5.

Wee are Souldiers in this life, and therefore haue reaſon to looke for hard vſage, part.3. lib.2.c.28. pag.967. § 4.

The ſoule of man is aſſaulted by Sathan aſwell as his body. No part of man is more corrupted than his ſoule, part.4. lib.1.cap.6.pag.1032 § 2,3.

The ſoule chiefly ſinneth, and therein the mind, and vnderſtanding, p.1033. § 4,5,6.

The ſoule onely properly ſinneth, p.1034. § 7.

Wee ought to labour to haue all our ſpirituall graces in ſinceritie, c.13.p.1056. § 2.

To the ſpirituall, the actions of the fleſh cannot properly be aſcribed, part.1. lib.1 c.23. p.59.col.1. num.10.

The teſtimony of Gods Spirit is vndoubted, and eaſie to be diſcerned. How we may judge between it and preſumption, lib.2.cap.10. p.114,115,116,117. & inde.

How to diſcerne the fight that is betweene the fleſh and the ſpirit, c.44.p.247. & inde, § 12.

The word Spirit is diuerſly taken, part.4. lib.1. cap.3. pag. 1019 § 1.

It ſignifieth the regenerate part in man. And why it is ſo called, § 2.

The ſpirit of God dwelleth not in the Saints eſſentially, more than in other creatures, p.1021. § 5.

The faithfull haue a ſpeciall right to the eſſence of the ſpirit, and bee dwelleth in them in reſpect of efficacy, p.1022. § 6.

Euery faithfull perſon may be aſſured the ſpirit of God dwelleth in him, lib.2. cap.11.pag.1112. § 1.

Firſt, from the meanes whereby it is wrought in him, p.1113.col.2 § 2.

Secondly, by the fruits of the ſpirit, by the nature of the gifts in vs, p.1114. § 3.

Which may be knowne by their continuall operations, § 4.

Particularly, the ſpirit inlighteneth, § 5.

How the ſpirit prepares our hearts for faith, and then workes it in vs, c.12.p.1116. § 1.

We may know the ſpirit dwelling in vs, firſt, if it be a ſpirit of adoption. Secondly, of ſupplication, c.14.p.1122,1123. § 1,2.

The worke of the ſpirit is to procure ſanctification from, and repentance in, thoſe that are ſpirituall, c.15.p.1123. § 1. & inde.

The ſpirit dwelling in any, purgeth them from their naturall corruptions, pag. 1125. § 5.

It quickeneth in the inner man, § 6. And thereby is knowne to be in vs, p.1126.

The ſpirit of God is compared to Wine and Oile, cap.16.p.1127. § 1. To water, § 2. To fire, pag.1128. § 3.

By all which compariſons we may judge whether the ſpirit dwelleth in vs, p.1129. § 4.

The ſpirit worketh in all them in whom it is, ſanctifying, and ſauing graces, cap.17. pag.1130,1131. § 1,2,3.

Meanes to ſtrengthen the ſpirit of God in man is to auoid all things that may weaken it, whereof ſin is the chiefe, c.24.p.1160. & inde, § 1,2,3,4,5.

Meanes whereby to comfort the ſpirit in the Chriſtian conflict, firſt, haue earneſt and longing deſires after ſpirituall ſtrength, cap.25.p. 1164. § 1.

Secondly, endeuour carefully in the vſe of all good meanes for the ſtrengthening of it, § 2.

Thirdly, Nouriſh the good motions of it, p.1165. § 3.

Fourthly, take ſerious care to maintaine peace with God, and our owne conſciences, § 4. col.2. & p. 1166.

Fiftly, preſerue your ſelues pure from all pollution, § 5.

Sixtly, keepe the ſpirit and the graces thereof in continuall exerciſe, § 6.

Seuenthly, be frequent and feruent in prayer, p.1167. § 7.

Euill ſpeeches of vngodly men are very corrupting, with-draw from God, and are exceeding dangerous, part.2. lib.1.cap.18.p.424, 425. § 7,8,9.

Strength without wit, is like a Gyant without eyes, part.1.lib.1.c. 8.p.17.col.2.num.20.

The ſtrength of the body is in it ſelfe good, but it is often abuſed through our corruption, part.2.lib. 1.c.15.p.414.col.1. § 1.

It is great vanity to glory in it, for God eſteemeth it not, & beaſts excell in it, § 2.

It is momentany, and of a ſhort continuance, § 3.

It cannot deliuer from dangers and euils, pag. 415. § 4.

Why the ſufferings of the faithfull are called the ſufferings of Chriſt, part. 3. lib. 2. cap. 28. pag. 969. col. 2. num. 30. & inde.

Of the ſword of the ſpirit. Reade part. 1. lib. 1. c. 15. p. 25. per totum caput.

There you ſhall find. Firſt what it is. Secondly how fit it is for the vſe of the faithfull. Thirdly how we are to vſe it. Fourthly that it behoueth all good Chriſtians to haue skill in the vſe it. And laſtly the folly of all ſuch as neglect it.

The heathen man reproued thoſe that rather ſought pleaſures in tauernes than in their owne houſes, part. 2. lib. 2. cap. 16. p. 526. col. 1. num. 20.

Why teares are not numbred among the ſignes of vnfained repentance, part. 1. lib. 2. cap. 43. pag. 240. 241. § 6, 7.

Teares porceed from diuers cauſes, pag. 240. col. 2. num. 10. & inde.

Temporaries are terribly deceaued, part. 4. lib. 1. cap. 13. pag. 1056. § 1.

How to diſcerne true faith, from that which is temporary, pag. 1057. col. 1. § 3.

Why God ſuffereth his ſeruants to be tempted, part. 1. lib. 1. cap. 2. pag. 4. per totum & pag. 5. col. 1. ad initium.

The end of Sathans temptations is to diſhonour God, and deſtroy vs, part. 1. lib. 1. cap. 3. pag. 6.

Why Sathan is called the Tempter, cap. 4. pag. 9. col. 1. num. 40. § 4.

The manner of Sathans tempting men, cap. 17.

How to defeate his temptations, § 7. pag. 32.

The Deuill will often change his temptations for his owne aduantage. Which is a good ſigne that he cannot preuaile with the tempted, cap. 21. pag. 43. § 4.

Sathans temptations are like our owne carnall thoughts. His aduantage thereby, how to auoid this danger, and diſcerne betweene the one and the other, pag. 46. § 10, 11, 12.

How they that are fallen into temptation, are to behaue themſelues, cap. 23. pag. 56. col. 2. § 1.

Of temptations that come vpon Sathans bare command, and how they may be reſiſted, lib. 2. cap. 2. § 1. & inde.

The Deuils temptations no impediment to hinder the Saints from being aſſured of their redemption, cap. 18. pag. 151. col. 1. ad finem § 7.

Why God ſuffereth his children to be tempted, idem, ibidem, col. 2. num. 50. & inde.

How to diſcerne Sathans temptations from the teſtimony of the Spirit of God, cap. 44. pag. 243, 244. § 3, 4.

Worldly thoughts hinder the profitable hearing of Gods word, cap. 28. pag. 181. col. 2. § 4.

Many preſume of mercy, vpon the example of the conuerted Thiefe. That inſtance examined, cap. 32. pag. 196. § 3.

Worldly things expoſe men to many temptations, part. 2. lib. 2. cap. 34. pag. 677. § 12, 13, 14, 15.

Thankes is to be giuen to God for our deliuerance out of afflictions. What kind of thankes it is, that is required, part. 3. lib. 2. cap. 35. p. 1007, 1008, 1009. § 7, 8.

What thriftineſſe is, wee are exhorted to it, part. 2 lib. 2. cap. 4. pag. 453. col. 1. num. 30.

We ought to keepe an eſpeciall watch ouer our tongues, part. 4. lib. 2. cap. 21. pag. 1149. § 4.

The venemous nature of the Torpedo, part. 2. lib. 2. cap. 33. pag. 660. col. 2. num. 30.

We muſt profeſſe the truth, in truth, part. 1. lib. 1. cap. 10. pag. 21. col. 2. § 3.

The Deuill neuer ſpeaketh truth but for aduantage, part. 1. lib. 1. cap. 21. pag. 50. col. 1. § 7.

God is true in all his promiſes, lib. 2. cap. 36. pag. 208 col. 2. § 1.

Reaſons may be drawne from the Trinity and each perſon therein to aſſure a truely penitent ſinner, of the forgiueneſſe of his ſinnes, cap. 37. pag. 213. col. 1. § 1. & inde.

V

Motiues to make Gods children full of valour, to vndergoe the ſpirituall combate, part. 1. lib. 1. cap. 3. per totum.

How the Deuill aſſaulteth the vaine glorious, cap. 17. pag. 31. § 5.

Vaine glory is no true honour, but falſe and counterfeit, part. 2. lib. 2. cap. 10. pag. 477. col. 2. § 1.

It is vnprofitable, pag. 478. col. 1. § 2.

Wee are enioyned in Scripture to contemne vaine-glory, pag. 479 col. § 3.

It is folly to affect it, § 4.

The beſt glory is in Gods approbation, and the teſtimony of our owne conſciences, § 5. col. 2. & p. 480.

It is vnſeaſonable now to ſeeke glory, col. 2. § 6.

It becommeth Chriſtians to contemne earthly vanities, and affect heauenly excellencies, lib. 2. cap. 6. pag. 461. col. 2. § 9.

Sathan tempteth vs to be proud of our vertues, part. 1. lib. 1. cap. 20. pag. 41. col. 2. § 5.

Vertue deferred groweth more vnpleaſant, lib. 2. cap. 30. pag. 189. col. 1. § 5.

Ciuill vertues do not benefit but hurt thoſe that reſt in them, part. 2. lib. 1. cap. 7. pag. 378. § 1.

What is required to a vertuous action to make it truely good, pag. 379. § 2.

Our vertues muſt ariſe from the true worſhip of God, pag. 380. col. 1. § 3.

They muſt bee grounded vpon godlineſſe, § 4.

They muſt ariſe from true charity, § 5.

They muſt bee grounded vpon true knowledge, pag. 381. § 6.

Our morall vertues muſt bee ioyned with true faith, § 7.

They ought to bee diſcharged in obedience to God and true humility, § 8, 9.

Gods glory muſt be the end of all our vertuous actions, pag. 382. § 10.

Worldly men in their morall vertues regard none of the former conditions, § 11.

The Romans propounded to themſelues honour as the end of all their vertues, p. 383. num. 20.

Wee are to contemne morall vertues, and to hunger and thirſt after Chriſts righteouſneſſe, § 12.

Great honour attends them that get victory in the combate of godlineſſe, part. 1. lib. 1. cap. 3. pag. 6. col. 1. num. 40.

We are, or may bee aſſured of victory, cap. 5. pag. 12. col. 2. § 7.

How to gaine it, pag. 13. § 8.

Whilſt the Deuill is vanquiſhed, he obtaineth victory, cap. 22. pag. 50. ad initium.

None are crowned but thoſe that get the victory, part. 2. lib. 1. c. 1. p. 357. § 7.

There bee two degrees of the Spirits victory, in behalfe of the children of God, part. 4. lib. 2. c. 18. pag. 1139. & inde. § 14, 15.

The caſe of Virgins that murthered themſelues diſcuſſed, part. 1. lib. 2. c. 2. p. 73. col. 1.

Of the viſion of God. See the ioyes of Heauen.

Viuification what it is, and the cauſe thereof, part. 1. lib. 3. cap. 286 287. col. 2. § 4.

How this viuification is wrought in vs, § 5.

Of our vnion with Chriſt, which is not naturall, nor perſonall, but ſpirituall lib. 2. cap. 19. pag. 157. § 5. col. 1.

How many wayes our vnion with Chriſt is expreſſed, cap. 37. pag. 217, 218. § 10.

They may bee vnited to Chriſt, that yet bring forth no fruits, or thoſe very ſmall, of holineſſe, p. 226. col. 2. § 10.

Of the vnregenerate. See in the head regenerate, of this table.

Vnworthineſſe is cauſe, why we ſhould doubt of our election, cap. 14. pag. 134. col. 2. § 2.

Of the meanes of our vocation, lib. 2. cap. 19. pag. 157. § 6. col. 2.

The benefit of vocation, cap. 7. pag. 100. ad finem, col. 2. & inde.

Of our vocation what it is, it is generall, and effectuall what theſe are, pag. 155. cap. 19. § 1. 2, 3. & inde.

The ſenerall parts of effectuall vocation, idem, ibidem, & pag. 156. § 3, 4. 5.

How Sathan ſtudieth, in his temptations to make the vocation of Gods Children ineffectuall, pag. 157. cap. 20 per totum, caput.

Holineſſe is no cauſe of our vocation, but vocation is a cauſe of holineſſe, p. 156. col. 1. num. 30. & inde.

How a man may know his vocation, whether he be effectually called, yea or no, cap. 39. pag. 223. per totum caput.

What the meanes of effectuall vocation are § 2, 3.

What the parts of vocation are, pag. 224, 225, 226. § 5, 8, 9.

How the Deuill tempteth the voluptuous, lib. 1. part. 1. cap. 17. p. 31. § 3.

W

Gods wages to them that fight for him, and Sathans for them that doe the contrary, part. 1. lib. 1. cap. 3. p. 6. col. 1. num. 10 & inde.

The cauſe of warre is a matter of of great waight. cap. 3. pag. 5. col. 1. ad finem & 2.

Peace is the daughter of warre, col. 2. ad finem.

Watchfulneſſe required of Chriſtians. Of the bodily and ſpirituall watchfulneſſe, cap. 16. p. 28. § 6. 7.

How the way to heauen is ſaid to be ſtrait, part. 2. lib. 2. cap. 26. pag. 604. col. 1. num. 30 & inde.

The Spirit of God is compared to water, for fiue reaſons, part. 4. lib. 2. cap. 16. p. 1127. § 2.

Wherein the chiefe wiſdome of man conſiſteth, part. 1. lib. 1. cap. 8. p. 18. § 4.

How the Deuill tempteth the notoriouſly wicked, c. 18. p. 33. col. 2. § 3.

All the properties required in a true witneſſe, concurre in the holy Ghoſt. part. 1. lib. 2. cap. 10. p. 114. num. 40.

A diſtinction of wiſdome into diuine und morall, What either of theſe is, part. 2. lib. 1. cap. 8 pag. 384. § 1.

Wherein this ſpirituall wiſdome conſiſteth § 2.

It is alwayes ioyned with practice and obedience, § 3.

It is onely to be learned, out of Gods Word, p. 385. § 4.

What the properties of it are, § 5

It is highly to be eſteemed, §. 6.

Of worldly wiſdome, c. 9. p. 386.

The cautions that are required to make it lawfull, § 1.

The worldly wiſdome is vnlawfull, firſt, when it is ioyned with prid, § 2.

Secondly when it is ſenered from ſincerity and ſimplicity, pag. 387. § 3.

VVorldly wiſedome is to be contemned, First becauſe God regardeth it not, §.

The deuill is the authour of it, pag.388. § 5.

It reſembleth Sathan in his malitious oppoſing againſt God, § 6.

It is fooliſhneſſe with God, § 7.

It is ioyned with lying and vntruth, pag.389. § 8.

Vpon diſſimulation and deceit, § 9.

Vpon trechery and treaſon, § 10

It propoundeth wicked ends, pag.390. § 11.

Worldly wiſdome hath alwayes beene much imbraced and eſteemed in the world, § 12.

It vnderſtandeth not the ſpirituall things of God, p.391.col.1.§.13

The reaſon why it doth not ſo, § 14.

Worldly wiſdome doth not aſſure men of the vaine things of this life, pag. 302. § 15.

God turneth it into fooliſhneſſe, § 16.

Worldly wiſdome hindreth the fruition of ſpirituall benefits, § 17.

It doth not priuiledge men, from Gods fearefull iudgement, pag.393. § 18.

It bringeth with it much hurt, § 19.

Other euils whereinto it plungeth men, pag. 394. § 20.

Wee are to contemne it, and labour after that which is ſpirituall, § 21.

There is in man a reaſonable, and a ſenſuall will. Neither of them being ſinfull, or vnlawfull, part.4. lib. 2. cap. 8. pag. 1101. col. 2. num. 40.

The Spirit of God is compared to wind, for foure reaſons, cap. 16. pag. 1127. col. 2. num. 20. & inde.

Strength without wit is like a Gyant without eyes, part. 1. lib.1. cap. 8. pag. 17. col 2. num.20.

The Deuill is neuer weary of aſſaulting mankind, cap.21. pag. 42. 43. § 3.

To be weaned from the loue of the world, is a good ſigne of election, lib.2. cap. 12. pag. 122. § 3.

The titles that are giuen to the word of be admirable, cap. 20. pag. 159. col. 1. § 5.

By the word of God many benefits are deriued vnto men, col.2. § 6.

The word of God is to be diligently heard, pag.160. § 7.

It is the food of our ſoules, § 8.

How thoſe that are giuen to Chriſt keepe his word, pag. 226. num. 10 & inde.

The benefits we haue by the word of God, part. 3. lib.1. cap. 5. pag. 773. § 1.

How mens workes may become acceptable to God, part. 1. lib. 1. cap. 18. pag. 33. col. 1. num. 50. & inde.

Good works are neceſſarily required, as fruits of our iuſtification, lib. 2. part. 1. cap. 52. pag. 275. col. 1. num. 20. & inde.

They are no cauſes but effects of iuſtification, pag. 280. cap. 53. § 3.

What is meant by the world. It is a great enemy to the faithfull, part. 1. lib. 1. cap. 6. § 1. pag. 14.

The world is leſſe dangerous when it frownes, than when it fawnes, ibidem. § 4.

Worldly wiſdome cannot free from the danger of the Deuill, pag. 18. col.2. § 3.

Why Sathan ſeldome tempteth meere worldlings, lib. 2. cap. 36. pag. 212. col. 2. ad initium.

How a good Chriſtian may loue the world, and yet be blameleſſe, c.39. p. 224. col.2. num.30. & inde.

The world loueth them not whom Sathan hateth, p.225. col.2. num.20

The world is ſometimes taken in good part, and ſo to be loued as a freind, part. 2. lib. 1. cap. 1. pag. 359. § 2.

In what ſenſe the world is to be reputed our enemy, col. 2. & pag. 359. § 3.

How wicked worldlings may be hated, pag. 359. § 4.

The world is wicked in it ſelfe, yeelding obedience to Sathan as the prince thereof, cap. 2. col. 2. § 1.

Why the wicked in the world, are called the world, pag. 360. col. 1. num. 10.

The world fighteth vnder Sathan againſt God, § 2.

The world is a moſt dangerous enemy, § 3. And malicious, pag. 361. § 4. And ſubtle, § 5. And powerfull, § 6.

The worlds ſtrength againſt vs is increaſed by our owne corruption, pag. 362. col. 1. § 7.

You may perceiue the power of the world, by the experience of former times, col. 2. § 8.

Why it ouercame the Heathen, pag. 363. col. 1. num. 10.

It hath preuailed with many profeſſors of religion, num. 20. & inde.

The power of the world ſhewed by experience of the preſent times, col. 2. § 9.

The world often preuaileth with Gods ſeruants. pag. 364. § 10.

Reaſons to moue vs to fight againſt the world.

Firſt God commands it. Secondly, Chriſt ſufferings require it. Thirdly, the friends of the world are enemies of God. Fourthly, if we renounce it not, we ſhall not appeare faithfull. Fiftly, Chriſtian religion cals for it. Sixtly, the way of the world is the way of ſinne. Seauenthly, if we doe it not, wee are not Chriſts diſciples. Eightly, we ſhall ſhew our ſelues apoſtates. Ninthly, we ſhall be ſure of victory. Tenthly, at that time we ſhall atcheiue a great reward, cap. 3. pag. 364, 365, 366, 367. § 1. 2, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10.

The worlds weapons wherewith it aſſaults the ſeruants of God, are proſperity and aduerſity. How it fighteth with theſe weapons, cap. 4. pag. 367. 368, 369.

Beware of the world when it fawneth, c. 5. p. 371. col. 1. § 3.

Worldly things are Sathans chiefe baites, to draw our hearts from God, part. 2. lib. 2. c. 1. p. 429. § 1.

Worldly honours, riches, and pleaſures are in their own nature good, and the gifts of God, col. 2. § 2.

They

They are but mutably good, and therefore ſubiect to abuſe and corruption, pag. 430. col. 1. § 3.

VVe ought not to reiect worldly things, but to beware the abuſe of them, § 4. col. 2.

To the right vſe of worldly things is required, Firſt that our perſons be regenerate, pag. 431. § 5.

We muſt not preferre them before Gods ſpirituall graces, col. 2. § 6.

We ought not to ſet our hearts vpon them. p. 432. § 7. col. 1.

We muſt ſeeke them in the laſt place, pag. 433. § 8.

We muſt not ſeeke worldly things for their owne ſakes, col. 2. § 9.

We ought onely to vſe lawfull means for the getting of them, § 10

How theſe worldly things may be poſſeſſed, and diſpoſed, pag. 434 col. 1.

Through our corruption we abuſe Gods worldly bleſsings cap. 6. lib. 2. pag. 457. col. 2. § 1.

Hereby they come to be matter of grieuous temptation, pag. 458. col. 1. § 2.

Sathan vſeth them as baits to allure to ſin, § 3.

In what reſpects worldly things are to be contemned. And in what regards they ought to be deſired, pag. 460. col. 1 § 7.

They are chiefly abuſed when we make idols of them, col. 2. § 8.

The ſignes wherby we may iudge, whether we be infected with the loue of the world.

Firſt, ſuch thinke vpon things in it, with greateſt pleaſure, with vnwearied delight, cap. 7. pag. 462. col. 2. § 1.

Secondly, they ſpeake of them with greateſt affection of comfort, pag. 463. col. 1. § 2.

In what ſenſe theſe ſignes are to bee conceiued, pag. 464. col. 1. § 3.

Thirdly, they moſt deſire them, take moſt care for, and vſe no leſſe meanes for the gaining of them, § 4.

Fourthly they take moſt ioy in keeping, and haue the greateſt grieſe for the looſing of them, pag. 465. § 5.

How this particular is to be vnderſtood, pag. 466. col. 1. § 6.

The beſt are too much tainted with the loue of the world, cap. 8. col. 2. § 1.

Remedies to cure the diſeaſe of the loue of the world, pag. 467. col. 1. § 2.

The beſt things the world can boaſt of, are but meere vanities, col. 2. § 3.

This is proued by teſtimonies, pag. 468, 469. § 4, 5.

Worldly things are but Gods common gifts, pag. 469, col. 2. § 6. Beſtowed vpon the wicked, aſwell as the godly, pag. 470. § 7. Reprobates abound with them, aſwell as Gods ſeruants, for they haue riches. § 8. Pleaſures, col. § 9.

The Lord in worldly things dealeth with his people, as a Phiſitian with his patient, pag. 471. col. 1. num. 20.

The commonneſſe in beſtowing worldly things ſheweth their baſeneſſe, idem, ibidem. § 10.

Worldly things come to be highly valued onely by reaſon of opinion, cap. 9. pag. 471. & inde.

Competition, maketh worldly things to bee high rated, 473. § 5, 6.

Worldly things are extolled becauſe they are difficult to be obtained, pag. 475. § 7, 8.

Worldly things are more eſteemed for their rareneſſe, than their goodneſſe, pag. 476. § 10.

Worldly things doe not bring that contentment with they promiſe, cap. 17. pag. 526. & inde.

Worldly things poſſeſſed doe but inflame the deſire, pag. 527. § 2.

Why the mind of man cannot be ſatisfied with worldly things, § 3.

It is great folly to ſeeke for content in worldly things when they abound, pag. 528, 529.

See examples ſhewing that worldly things will not giue content, § 5.

Why worldlings are full of diſcontent, cap. 18. pag. 538. col. 2. § 4.

Worldly things in ſtead of ſatiſfaction, bring ſatiety, pag. 539. col. 2. § 5.

From the inſufficiency of worldly things to ſatiſfie, proceedeth an endleſſe deſire of change, pag. 540. 541. § 6, 7.

Why the Lord giueth worldly things to ſome, and not to others, p. 548. col. 2. § 10.

There is no profitableneſſe in worldly things, to thoſe that ſet their hearts vpon them, cap. 20. pag. 551. § 1.

Worldly things doe not make vs truely better, pag. 555. 556.

Neither riches, honours, nor worldly pleaſures, § 6, 7.

Worldly things helpe not to inrich our minds with vertue, and Gods ſauing graces, cap. 21. pag. 557. § 1.

They doe not make more fruitfull in good workes, p. 558. § 2.

They doe not make more merry or chearefull, p. 559. § 3.

They neither aſſure vs of the loue of God or men, pag. 560. col. 2. § 5.

They doe not deliuer vs from dangers, p. 561. § 6.

They doe not cure the body of diſeaſes, § 7. & pag. 561. 562.

Worldly things profit not in the day of Gods fearefull viſitation, p. 563, 564.

Nor at the houre of death, pag. 564. § 10.

Worldly things are like Ice, or the brookes of Arabia; faile at neede, idem, ibidem.

At the day of death, they bring much grieſe and bitterneſſe, pag. 565. § 11.

They profit not after death, pag. 566. § 12.

Nor at the day of iudgement, § 13.

All worldly benefits art imbittered with manifold miſeries, cap. 22. p. 568. per totum caput.

Of the loathſame ſatiety that many men find in worldly things, p. 571. § 6.

Worldly things are not gotten without great labour, cap. 25. pag. 582. § 3.

Worldly men take their chiefe paines for ſuperfluities, § 4.

Mens labour in getting worldly things is vſually accompanied with ſinne, § 6 & pag. 584.

Of the wicked courſes which worldlings vſe in getting honours and riches, pag. 584. § 7. & pag. 585.

Worldly pleaſures are ſeldome procured without ſinne, pag. 586. § 8.

Worldlings often faile in their deſires, and looſe all their labour, cap. 26. pag. 595. § 1. col. 2.

The world and the prince thereof, abuſeth its fauourits with falſe promiſes, p. 596. § 2.

Worldlings by their immoderate labour doe often looſe the aduantage of all their labour, pag. 598 § 4.

The World is corruptible, and ſhall haue an end cap. 27. pag. 604. § 1.

The corruptibleneſſe of the world and nereneſſe of its end, ſhould moue vs not to loue it, pag. 605. § 2.

All worldly things are momentany and cannot be inioyed without feare of looſing them, pag. 606. § 3, 4.

The corruptibility of worldly things, ſhould weane our hearts from fond loue of them, pag. 607. § 5.

Worldly things are mutable and vnconſtant, cap. 28. pag. 612. § 1.

Worldly men are compared to ſhell-fiſh, pag. 614. col. 1. num. 40.

Worldly things enioyed are not theirs that poſſeſſe them, cap. 29. pag. 623.

The hope of worldlings, that thinke they leaue all to their heires, is vaine and vncertaine, pag. 625. § 13.

Worldly things are immoderatly hurtfull to thoſe that loue them, cap. 30. pag. 629. per totum caput.

They withdraw our hearts from God, pag. 632. & inde. § 5.

Preſeruatiues againſt the loue of the world pag. 634. & inde.

Worldly things immoderately loued are occaſions of idolatry, pag. 635. § 8.

Worldly things make men forgetfull of God, cap. 31. pag. 637. § 1. And vnthankefull vnto him, § 2. & pag. 638.

They bring with them contempt of God, pag. 641. 642. § 6.

And of ſpirituall grace, and heauenly glory, pag. 642. 643. § 7.

Worldly things abounded in, make men ſloathfull in the duties of Gods ſeruice, pag. 643, 644. § 8, 9.

Worldly things immoderately loued, are the cauſe of all kind of iniuſtice, cap. 32. pag. 646. § 1.

They thruſt men on, to the committing of outragious ſinnes, and wrongs, p. 648. § 2.

Worldly increaſes procure enuy and malice, p. 644. § 3.

They make men proud and inſolent towards their Neighbours, § 4. & p. 640. § 5.

Worldly things inioyed doe effeminate a mans mind, cap. 33. p. 651. 652. § 1.

The fruition of them, makes a man ſtand in need of many things, p. 652, 653, 654.

They bring men into greeuous ſeruitude, pag. 654, 655. § 4.

Worldlings are ſlaues, in diuers reſpects, § 5.

Worldly things make their owners ſlaues to themſelues, pag. 656. § 6.

Fulneſſe of worldly things, brings enuy and hatred to the owners, pag. 661. § 11.

They are the cauſes of all emnity and diſcord, pag. 663. 663. § 12.

They expoſe their owners to innumerable dangers, pag. 664. § 13.

Worldly things choake the ſeed of Gods word, cap. 34. pag. 667. § 1.

They impoueriſh vs in Gods ſpirituall graces, § 2.

They doe infatuate the vnderſtanding, pag. 668, 669. § 3.

They make men blind in finding the way to Heauen, pag. 670. § 4.

Worldly wealth makes men ſo ignorant, that they cannot know themſelues, pag. 671. § 5. Nor their friends, pag. 672. § 6. Worldly wealth cauſeth ſecurity, pag. 673. § 8. It bringeth impenitencie and hardneſſe of heart pag. 674. § 9. The immoderate loue of the world, taketh away all true loue of our ſelues, pag. 675, 676. § 10. Aboundance of worldly things, aggrauates the ſinnes of them that inioy them, § 11. Worldly ſtore expoſeth men to many temptations. p. 677. § 12.

They expoſe rich people to Gods wrath, p. 680, 681. § 16.

They hinder vs from attaining the ioyes of Gods Kingdome, cap. 35. p. 681. § 1.

The witcherie of the world, pag. 683. col. 1. ad initium & inde.

The Lord will not giue heauenly ioyes, to thoſe that ouerpriſe worldly trifles, p. 683. col. 2. § 3.

The more that any abound in the things of this world, the greater ſhall be their rekoning at the laſt day, cap. 35. p. 687. § 7.

They increaſe our condemnation if wee abuſe them, pag. 688 § 9. & p. 689.

A diſwaſion from the loue of the world and worldly things, p. 690 § 10.

All the faithfull haue euer acknowledged themſelues to bee ſtrangers in the world, lib. 3. part. 2. p. 691. c. 1. § 1.

It ſhould weane vs from the world to conſider that we liue as ſtrangers in it, p. 692. § 2.

The world is to bee vſed as a paſſage to another place not as a place of our habitation, p. 693. § 3.

We

We ſhould not ſet our hearts on the world, becauſe it is the place of our warfare, p.694. § 4.

We ſhould contemne the world, becauſe we are Citizens of Heauen, and heires of better hopes, than any that are here, c.2.p.695. § 1.

The loue of the world ill beſeemes a Chriſtian, who hath aſſurance of after-happineſſe, p.696. § 2.

It is childiſh baſenes for an heir of Heauen, to ſet his heart on worldly things, p.696,697. § 3.

They that loue the world make forfeiture of their heauenly hopes, p.698,699. § 5.

All the faithfull haue from time to time contemned the world, § 6.

The loue of the world if it were not mortified in vs, would betray vs to the temptations of the Deuill, part.3.lib.2.c.19.p.916.§ 10 col.1.

Gods power is apparent in the weakneſſe of the Saints, part.1. lib.1.c.21 p.42,43. § 3.

Writing in the heart how vſually taken in the Scripture, lib.3.ca. 14.p.319.col.2.num.50.

Y

God requires of thoſe that are his their youth, part.1.lib.2. c.29.p.184.col.2. § 2.& inde.

Grace begun in youth will not eaſily be gone from them that ſo haue it, cap.31.pag 192.col.1. ad initium.

The exerciſes of Religion ſet vpon in youth, will be pleaſant and eaſie, num.10.

They bring joy and peace, num. 40. & inde.

And cauſe a ſecurity in the expectation of death, col.2.num.30 & inde.

The inconueniencies of youth are many. A youth is compared to a Bird got out of a Cage, or a Colt broke out of a ſtable, part.2.lib.2.c. 23.p.577.col.2. num.20. & inde.

Z

It is dangerous to remit any thing of the firſt zeale wee haue had in holy duties, part.4. lib.2.c. 24.col.1.p.1163. § 4.

FINIS.

FOR THOV SHALT LABOR PEAC PLENTIE

LONDON,
Printed by William Stansby. 1634.